Fest Bd. wrangles with cash problems

BY DAN NESS

The Plymouth Fall Festival Board of Directors will be trying to work out some cash flow problems as it kicks off this year's planning period for Plymouth's annual celebration in the streets, to be held Sept. 2-6.

The board met in special session last week to organize booth applications, but much of the discussion centered on some confusing information -- or lack of information -- on last year's financial reports.

The confusion has led to problems for this year's board to deal with. "Essentially, we overspent," said Board President Joe Henshaw. "Without knowing it," added Mike Pollard, board member.

In effect, there were unrecorded liabilities that caught the present board by surprise. Some payments had been stopped on board checks paying for entertainment and some equipment for the 1986 Fall Fest, board members said. The short term debt for the board is estimated to be about $2,000.

Board members were confident that the problems would be taken care of within the next few months, when payments for applications start to arrive.

One of the main causes of the cash flow problem, Pollard pointed out, was the board paying the City of Plymouth ahead of schedule. The City is the board's largest payment to take care of, and also "its most forgiving creditor," Pollard said. By paying off the City sooner than usual, other payments had to be delayed.

Last year's board treasurer, Plymouth Township Treasurer Mary Brooks, resigned that post. Ed Shulz has taken over as Fall Fest Board treasurer for this year.

Soccer balls reign over Canton

BY DAN NESS

In case you heard a low rumbling as you drove past the Canton Township Administration Building over the weekend, rest assured, it was not the sound of great issues being deliberated.

That was the sound of 4,000 young soccer players competing in one of the nation's largest youth soccer tournaments -- the Canton Memorial Day Junior Soccer Tournament.

"This was probably the best tournament we've had so far," said Phil LaJoy, tournament coordinator. "It went very smoothly."

LaJoy said 203 teams participated in the weekend event, coming from all over Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Canada to the Canton Recreation Complex. Teams competed in age groups from nine and under to 19 and under.

"We're pretty happy with the whole thing," LaJoy said.

Canton service businesses were also happy, for the most part. With the arrival of the young soccer players came their parents and other family members. "We definitely had an increase in business due to the soccer tournament," said Kris Kronbach, second assistant manager of Bob Evans restaurant on Ford Road.

"Yes, I'm sure (the soccer teams) helped sell us this weekend," said Belinda Wehrheim, assistant manager of the Red Roof Inn hotel in Plymouth Township. Wehrheim said that a roller skating tournament at Skatin' Station in Canton brought in even more out-of-towners for the weekend.

Other business owners said they noticed an increase in business activity also. But one motel manager said the increase in business was not worth the problems he faced with soccer teams staying at his motel.

"I've never seen a bigger bunch of animals in my life," said Ron Groh, innkeeper for Knight's Inn on Ford Road. "They've caused a ton of damage. No, I'm not happy in the least with the soccer group. I will have a much different plan of attack next

Cops nab slippery suspect twice

BY T.M. SMITH

On television police dramas, there are always a multitude of car chases, flying tackles and cops chasing bad guys through the woods.

In real life, however, there are many more times where local police can only come to the scene of a crime hours after it happens to take a report.

For that reason, it is unusual when local police are able to catch a crime in progress and capture the criminal.

When that happens twice in less than a week, it borders on script material for Hollywood. But that is exactly what happened last week when the Plymouth Township police thwarted two breaking and entering crimes in progress, and captured the people involved.

The most recent incident involved two melodramatic foot chases which resulted in the arrest of the subject. The first foot chase took place at the scene of the crime, and the second foot chase happened just after the suspect was arraigned in Detroit.

Township police report they received a citizen call on Friday concerning a breaking and entering in progress on Sheldon Road.

Upon arriving at the scene the officers spotted a man fitting the description fleeing the scene. Township officers Jim Jarvis and Jim Hirschfeld attempted to stop the suspect, but he began to run through some nearby woods.

Hirschfeld began a foot chase through the woods, that lasted approximately 10 minutes, before he flushed the suspect out on the other side where officers Jarvis and Bob Smith were waiting. Jarvis and Smith were able to corner the man and catch him.

The officers would find out later, however, that was only half of the chase.

The next day, following the arraignment hearing in Detroit, the man who gave his name as William C. Davis, escaped custody outside of the

Celebrate in moderation

It's that time of year again when young people in large numbers take the final, and probably most pleasant, walk of their high school careers -- the commencement shuffle.

It's a time for reflection, both of the past and the future. It is also a time of great turmoil for many young adults graduating from high school.

And often there is the temptation to ease trepidations about the future as an excuse, an excuse to drink and drink and drink.

Graduation should be a joyous celebration for the students, their families and our community. We celebrate the successes of a new generation.

And we worry.

We worry that the celebration will turn to tragedy; we worry that students, family and friends will suffer; and we worry that someone might even die.

And all on account of the need to tie our celebrations with excessive drinking.

This editorial may sound as if its directed only for the graduating students at CEP, but in reality we should all be concerned with the effects of too much celebrating.

The words -- "everything, but in moderation" -- says a lot about our culture.

We are a people who experiment with everything, even our lives. Although most of us know how to be moderate in our excesses, we are still a society of excesses.

And that means we celebrate, and celebrate hard.

Let's just see that no one dies hard.

Canton: Recreation capital?

Canton is where the young come to play.

Between the Michigan State Roller Skating Championships held at Skatin' Station and the Canton Memorial Day Junior Soccer Tournament at the Recreation Complex, Canton played host to two of the biggest youth competitions in the state last weekend.

In the case of the soccer tournament, Canton featured one of the largest youth soccer tourneys in the nation.

Phil LaJoy, who coordinated the event, the Canton Soccer Club people and the Canton Parks and Recreation Department all deserve a pat on the back for their work in making the tournament a success each year. This year was no different.

Walking around the soccer fields on Sunday, I had the distinct impression that this event brings more out-of-towners to The Plymouth-Canton Community to stay for an entire weekend than any other event year-round.

The green license plates of the state to the south seemed to dominate the parking lots, although there were also cars from Indiana, Illinois and Arizona (grandparents?)

There was also a substantial group of those people that pronounce their "outs and abouts" like Peter Jennings.

The fact that soccer players, with friends and families, come from all over the region and Canada to play soccer in Canton shows just how big this tournament is. Canton Township is on the map for these 12,000 or so people now.

And if the roller skaters and soccer players were not enough, there's always the Canton Softball Center, one of the largest softball complexes in the area (this is beginning to sound redundant) which hosts several big-time softball tourneys each summer.

Canton is quietly becoming the recreation center for the area. The more the community works to impress that image upon visitors, the more visitors Canton will attract.

The problems associated with young people hanging out in downtown Plymouth on weekends are well documented.

Businesses suffer through acts of vandalism on the part of a few, and homeowners near downtown suffer through the same acts of vandalism plus the noise that goes with any large crowd.

Not all young people in downtown Plymouth on weekends are causing problems. As a parent in this community, you can help, however, by knowing what your child is doing on the weekends.

The Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce is asking parents in The Community to fill out this pledge form. Parents can make a big difference in the search for solutions to the problems of downtown crowds on weekends.

Freakish news from CEP

A lot of news coming out of Centennial Educational Park (CEP) lately is either disturbing or just downright weird.

But then it's that time of year -- graduation is just a couple of weeks away for hundreds of CEP students and everyone (not just seniors) is dying to start summer vacation.

It's time for wild stories and even wilder rumors.

For example, two weeks ago it was reported by some students that there may have been a bomb scare at Canton High.

However, on further checking we were unable to turn up a police report or even obtain confirmation of the incident from teachers and administrators at Canton.

Little more than a month ago we got a call that "dynamite" had been brought onto the CEP campus and sold to students before police put a stop to it.

The teacher who called us said she was very concerned for the safety of the students and herself. The explosives turned out to be M-200s, or "quarter-sticks" as students dubbed them. Some powerful stuff, but a far cry from the real thing.

And lately when someone resigns at CEP there have been the inevitable rumors, names get dragged through the mud, and wild talk bubbles around the district for a while.

It even happened when the head of CEP security resigned not too long ago.

Even worse -- shades of what happens in Detroit schools -- handguns have been confiscated on the CEP grounds this school year. Other weapons have been known to turn up unexpectedly as well.

It's enough to make one wonder what is going on at the high schools. Are the students just extra rowdy this year or is this a growing phenomenon that may have taken years to develop?

One staffer has even dubbed the CEP complex another "Sodom and Gomorrah."

Thanks from VFW

In the margin

By Ken Voyles

And there are signs that the troubles at CEP are spilling over to other district schools.

There was a knifing at a middle school, another student died of a heart condition following a scuffle, a car crashed into a school wall, and vandals wrecked some rooms in another school. The list just goes on.

At least heavy drug use seems to be a fading problem in the district. Or so it would seem.

Until now come revelations that some kids in the district may be sniffing paint and other chemicals behind school buildings.

All of these stories -- true and not true -- have to make one think. What exactly is happening at CEP, throughout the district?

Maybe we're witnessing the end-of-the-school-year blues, but these wild tales began before Easter and spring break.

It's likely this stuff happens all the time, and will continue to happen all the time. After all, our schools are just a reflection of what goes on in our society as a whole.

Schools are highly visible places, and CEP is even more highly visible due to the large numbers of students concentrated in one spot.

You might even say CEP is like a dense urban area where people live on top of each other. Troubles arise from overcrowding as much as the type of community or people who live in it.

For some reason I keep picturing the 1967 summer riots in Detroit. Although I was only nine at the time, I remember them vividly. That brief summer season of hell happened 20 years ago.

I envision students revolting and destroying the very buildings from which they gain knowledge; students on a rampage attacking other students who have collaborated with the local law enforcement; the CEP security team overwhelmed and massacred; and the Michigan National Guard being called out to prevent further violence.

Thank goodness CEP shuts down over the summer.

Again thanks!!!! We couldn't have done it without you.

Campaign literature accurate

EDITOR:

Dean Swartzwelter and Roland Thomas made their choice to vote in favor of keeping R-rated, pornographic and obscene movies in our classrooms as part of the school curriculum. This is a matter of public record as stated in the school board minutes.

Anyone can rent the movies "Excalibur" and "The Breakfast Club" for verification. "The Breakfast Club" is so full of obscene words and expressions that many of us are distressed that any adult, especially men on our school board, can be a party to presenting this to young girls and boys. When I was of school age, there was not an adult in my family nor neighbor that would have stood for any teacher or elected official showing me such filth. We do not have to accept it for our children today.

John M. Hoben's statement that he has attorneys looking over campaign literature for libel and slander is a reckless remark at best. I consulted my attorneys and have been advised, since all material is factual, I should counter with a malicious intent if any suit is drawn against me.

I welcome the opportunity to share my files and give a presentation to any individual or group seeking the extent of witchcraft, the occult, satan worshipping and the use of obscene materials used in our Plymouth-Canton schools today.

Since we have petitioned our present school board to put a stop to such materials, to no avail, we feel there is no choice but to inform the residents so they will not vote for them again in this upcoming election.

We are very pleased to have Robert Anderson, Jr. as a candidate for school board this June 8 who is dedicated to developing a moral code teachers will adhere to in selecting teaching materials.

With malice toward none

By W. Edward WENDOVER

Abe Lincoln came out of a log cabin and made it into the White House.

His example has always captivated the American spirit that anybody can run for public office.

The Plymouth-Canton Community has its own example.

Nancy Quinn.

Remember the name -- then forget it.

She was elected to the Plymouth-Canton School Board in June, 1984 despite this newspaper's warning to voters that she didn't measure up. She quit the board "for personal reasons" less than a year after her election, having meanwhile posted a sorry contribution to the district. At least it was brief.

But, this spring, apparently feeling she'd solved her "personal reasons," she filed to run again for the school board. Her name will appear as one of nine school board candidates on the June 8 ballot.

Now, she says, she's not campaigning and would have formally withdrawn if she had the opportunity. Has something come up once again in her personal life?

Quinn had the chance to withdraw up to three days after the filing of petitions. Had she done so then, her name wouldn't appear on the ballot to confuse those members of the Plymouth-Canton teachers' union who endorsed her last time she ran (the union's political arm passed her by this time).

Nor would voters -- who may recognize her name from her past tenure or confuse her name with a qualified current member of the board not up for election this year -- be tempted to vote for her June 8 had she legally withdrawn.

While the great American tradition exemplified by Honest Abe is a cherished freedom, Nancy Quinn's political career makes a strong argument for subjecting candidates to some minimum testing before certification for the ballot.

New book

Current school district Superintendent John M. Hoben (left) and local historian Sam Hudson hold a copy of the newly released book about The Plymouth-Canton Community Schools titled, "Michigan's Tenth Largest." The book will be available in the near future, said Hoben. (Crier photo by Kelly Sauter)

New book elaborates on district history

A new book by noted Plymouth historian Sam Hudson was delivered to the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools last week.

Titled, "Michigan's Tenth Largest, Plymouth-Canton Community School District, 1830-1986," the 312-page hardcover book details the 156 years of school in the community, from the first log cabin school in 1830 to the school district as it is today.

Three thousand copies were printed, said Hudson, who has written several other noteworthy books about The Plymouth-Canton Community.

The book will be sold at various locations throughout the community once the district has set a price and made arrangements for its distribution, said Superintendent John M. Hoben.

It includes 116 photographs, past and present, as well as a bibliography and a complete index. It is being published by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, said Hudson.

Proceeds from its sale will probably go the new Education Excellence Foundation, said Hoben.

"I did most of the writing in 1985 and 1986 but there is a chapter on current social problems," Hudson said.

It also contains lists of school board presidents, superintendents of schools, high school principals, and a chronology of the highlights in the growth of the district.

Possible location sites for the sale of the book include at local bookstore outlets, the district administration building, school libraries and community libraries.

Many of the people who have played a prominent role in the development of the school system are portrayed both in the text and in the photographs.

Cruising ordinance considered

BY T.M. SMITH

Plymouth's City Commission has directed Plymouth City Attorney Ron Lowe to draft a "Cruising Ordinance" which could be put into place at the next city commission meeting scheduled for June 1.

Paul Sincock, assistant to the city manager, said Lowe was in the process of developing an ordinance that would limit the traffic on Main Street during peak periods.

The possibility of an ordinance is the latest effort made by the city to find a solution to a problem of cruising within the city limits. During last summer, and on weekends this spring, downtown Plymouth has been the site of heavy traffic on Main Street.

The proposed ordinance is a surprise, because the Main Street Committee recommended following several winter meetings that a cruising ordinance would not be advisable.

Sincock said that the city's decision to hire more police officers made the possibility of an ordinance feasible.

"At the time we made that recommendation, we were concerned about the staffing levels of the police department," Sincock said. "The ordinance is an highly labor intensive type of thing, which requires a lot of man power. With the new officers we think we can handle it now."

Sincock said he was unsure exactly what the ordinance would say, but that it would be based on similar ordinances being used in Michigan and elsewhere.

"The basic idea is to take a stretch of roadway and then limit the number of times a car can pass by in a certain amount of time," Sincock said.

He said it was his understanding that the ordinance would be ready for review at the next city commission meeting and that it would qualify as an emergency ordinance and go into effect immediately.

Sincock also said that traffic and cruising related problems were "significantly lower" during the Memorial Day weekend.

Oakwood plans expansion

BY DANNESS

Oakwood -- Canton Health Center is planning to add a two-story, 24,200-square-foot medical office building next to its present medical facility, at Canton Center and Warren roads.

The site plan for the proposed office building must be approved by the Canton Planning Commission, and then the full Board of Trustees.

"We are looking at a medical office building," said Joan Petroske, of Oakwood -- Canton Health Center.

The site plans were designed by the engineering/architecture firm of Garnet R. Cousins and Associates, of Birmingham. The site plans show the office building to be constructed to the north of the existing health facility, connected by a walkway, according to Canton planning staffers.

Canton poll to be held in Sept?

BY DANNESS

The citizen advisory vote regarding changing to a superintendent form of government administration in Canton will most likely be held in early September.

Trustee Robert Padgett, who proposed the change in administration earlier this month, said several options on ballot language would be discussed at Tuesday's board meeting.

"I have ballot language drafted," Padgett said. "We'll probably select an option to hold (the vote) in early September."

The four trustees proposed going to a superintendent form of administration in August, 1985. A committee then studied how to best implement that system, and submitted its report in September, 1986.

The superintendent system would reduce the supervisor's position to part-time, while the full-time superintendent would handle the day-to-day operations of the township government. The superintendent would not have a vote on the Board of Trustees.

The advisory vote will also include questions on whether or not to reduce the clerk and treasurer's positions to part-time salaries. Changes in the merit ordinance will also be up for a citizen advisory vote at that time.

At least 34 cars struck by vandals

Canton police have no suspects in a wave of car vandalism that hit the community late Sunday night.

There were 34 reported incidents of car windows being shattered between 9:30 p.m. - midnight on Sunday, starting in the southern part of the township and moving north, according to Canton Police Information Officer David Boljesic.

"Obviously, we believe it's the same people involved" in all of the cases, Boljesic said.

Police think a pellet gun was used in the vandalism.

If caught, the vandal(s) would be charged with a felony, since the damage caused was well over $100, Boljesic said. Boljesic said the police would be charging anyone caught in connection with the incidents "to the fullest extent of the law."

"We've got a lot of angry people out there," he said.

Anyone with information regarding the incidents can call the Canton Police Department at 397-1000.

Cutting illiteracy at the roots

The Plymouth-Canton Community Literacy Council and Lehmann's College of Beauty in Plymouth are joining forces during the summer months to fight the battle against illiteracy.

The Council and Lehmann's have announced that they will offer "Love Cuts for Literacy" throughout the summer months, with proceeds being donated to the council, which helps adults learn to read for free, and trains volunteers.

Elizabeth Barker, Job Placement Coordinator for Plymouth-Canton Community Education, and one of the organizers of the event said that the money collected will go towards tutorial books and to enlarge the collection of books for adult readers.

Tickets for the Love Cuts are available at Plymouth Canton Community Education Center on Starkweather and at Lehmann's on Main Street. The donation is $5 for haircuts, $5 for shampoo and set and $3 for manicures.

Barker said the event is an ongoing one, and could help the community find another John Young.

Young is the Literacy Council's star pupil, who was recently nominated for a national literacy award. He is one of four nominees from Michigan who might sit on the 1st National Literacy Congress.

If selected he will travel to Philadelphia next September to participate in the Literacy - Making Worlds Assessible. This is a start-up national group which is forming to help improve literacy skills nationwide.

Six medical assistant students from Canton High won the State Competition for Parliamentary Procedure for HOSA (Health Occupation Students of America) recently.

The group will next compete in the national competition on June 24-27 in Dallas, TX.

The six students are Mark Salvador, Andrea Lenaghan, Tonya Peterson, Katherine Henry, Michelle Kohn and Michael Schwartz.

Students will run car washes, bake sales, and seek contributions from local residents, to earn the money to attend the performance. Nearly $1,200 is needed.

HOSA is an organization for students in secondary and post-secondary education who enroll in medical related courses.

The state competition was held in Kalamazoo.

School election race heats up

BY KEN VOYLES

The election race for two seats on the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education heated up last week as seven of the nine candidates shifted their efforts into high gear.

What had been a very low-key campaign, without a lot of typical election spark, turned controversial following the disclosure by the school district that it was seeking legal counsel to stop some of the campaign literature.

That literature came from the Citizens for Better Education group, which supported two candidates in the election race, Mary Dahn and Robert Earl Anderson, Jr.

School district officials said the material took "great liberty with interpreting what is being taught in our schools."

Shortly afterwards, the Citizens for Better Education (CBE) suddenly withdrew its support of Dahn.

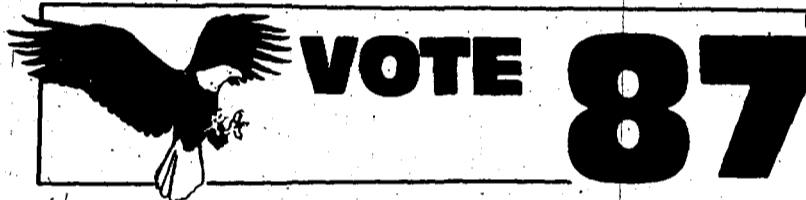

Dahn acknowledges that she is a firebrand, but it is her approach to the issue of controversial teaching materials which may have helped cause the split.

In repeated interviews, Dahn has vocalized some of the obscenities used in certain controversial teaching materials to explain her position about what she describes as the teaching of Satanism and witchcraft in the district.

Diane Daskalakis, the founder of the CBE, cited campaign differences for the breakup.

"We're just not backing her anymore," said Daskalakis. She would not go into details. The CBE will continue to support the more middle-of-the-road Anderson.

Daskalakis also responded to the charges from the administration over campaign literature, saying her group

Ballot proposal preview

BY KEN VOYLES

Voters in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools will decide the fate of some programs on Monday, June 8 when they cast their ballots on a proposal to waive the Headlee Amendment and allow the district to levy its full authorized millage.

This is the second time the proposal has gone before voters. In February of this year, community residents turned down the district's proposal to waive the tax limitation amendment.

The district is seeking a yes vote on the proposal, which would allow it to collect a full 37 mills for operating expenses. The district has collected its full authorized operating millage (37 mills) for the past three years.

would have to consider a countersuit if the district went to court.

"I hope they don't do anything about it," she said. "The material we published is true. The district won't face it, so they put the blame on us."

Another candidate, Barbara Graham, said at the League of Women Voters candidate's night last week that she would be glad to accept the support of the CBE if it was offered.

"Not only will the rollback impact on the current budget, but it will have a future impact as well," said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business. "If we are forced to rollback the district will lose .98 of a mill, or about $1.1 million."

The Headlee Amendment says that if the total amount of the property in the district increases greater than the rate of inflation, the district cannot collect more than a 1.9 per cent increase in dollars over the previous tax year.

But the amendment also allows a school district to seek its full voter-authorized millage in the form of an election vote.

Inflation this year is up only 1.9

Please see page 24

"Certainly I'd like to see their support," she said. Graham is also campaigning to clean-up the controversial teaching materials (R-rated movies, books) currently used at the high school and middle school level.

She, along with four other candidates, attended the League of Women Voters forum last week at West Middle School. Also on hand were incumbents Roland Thomas and Dean Swartzwelter along with Anderson and William Brown.

Absent from the meeting were Dahn and Brenda Anderson. Dahn told League representatives she would be at the meeting.

"As of 4:30 p.m. she was still coming," said Jackie Westbay, of the LWV. "I'm not sure what happened."

Brenda Anderson (no relation to Robert Anderson) notified the LWV on May 1 that she would be in Minnesota on a business trip and could not attend the meeting.

The forum, with candidates questioned by three local newspaper reporters and community residents, was taped by Omnicom Cablevision and will be aired on Friday, May 29 at 7 p.m. and on Saturday, May 30 at 3 p.m. Tune to public access Channel 15.

The two incumbents -- Thomas and Swartzwelter -- have focused their campaigns on getting the tax limitation amendment (Headlee) waived. They have also stressed previous accomplishments and their future plans if re-elected.

At the LWV forum, Robert Anderson said he did not want to be considered a "one issue" candidate, while Brown has emphasized getting away from what he calls a "greedy board."

Brown, along with Graham, has also campaigned around a theme of returning to the basics in district classrooms.

The election is set for Monday, June 8. Polls open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. Voters will also be asked to choose two new Schoolcraft College trustees and vote on a ballot proposal which seeks to waive the Headlee Amendment and allow the district to levy its full authorized millage.

Other Qualifications

Priorities; Other Issues

"I support the ballot proposal. In effect, it will allow the district to collect funds we've already approved in previous millage proposals."

"I was prompted to run because of the teaching materials question. I feel it's very important we go beyond just teaching kids the facts. We have to also teach them how to think. In order to do so they need a variety of materials to compare. The problem is blind faith. The kind of words used in 'The Breakfast Club' are not new to 17 and 18 year olds. Just because we talk about these things in our schools doesn't mean we condone them. To get a message across to the students we have to speak in their language."

"I feel I can bring varied perspectives to the board. I have been a teacher and worked in special education. And I'm a parent. I want to provide the community with the opportunity to elect someone who'll continue to support a variety of teaching materials."

"I would try and foster more parental involvement in the children's classroom and try to develop a system of accountability to ensure each child learns what's needed to progress to the next grade."

"At this point I'm in favor of waiving the Headlee Amendment because I understand we're already losing money from the state and this would be additional money lost. The school district is still growing and it still has a low cost per student."

"One of the main reasons I'm running is that I do not think controversial materials belong in the schools. We're talking about R-rated movies, Satanism, witchcraft and the occult. That is sort of a subjective decision but I think it's also a common sense one. The other thing that's important is its an abuse of my religious freedom. Much of the community is not represented by the current school board. It's disheartening to see people in a position of authority without discernment."

"I'm sure there is a lot of experience on the board now, but what I could bring is some discernment and representation to some in the community not already represented. I also have a real interest in finances. I'm a born-again Christian. One thing I don't want is to be labelled as a fanatic who wants to bring my religion into the district. I just want to come to an agreement on what is appropriate."

"One thing is trying to get parents more involved in their children's education. More emphasis on a strong basic-skill curriculum beginning in the elementary schools and continuing through the high schools."

"I am against the request. I am disappointed that the present board set the current budget, counting on the increased SEV. It's as if they want every drop they can squeeze out. I'm going to vote against it. I don't like the way the administration is betting on the future."

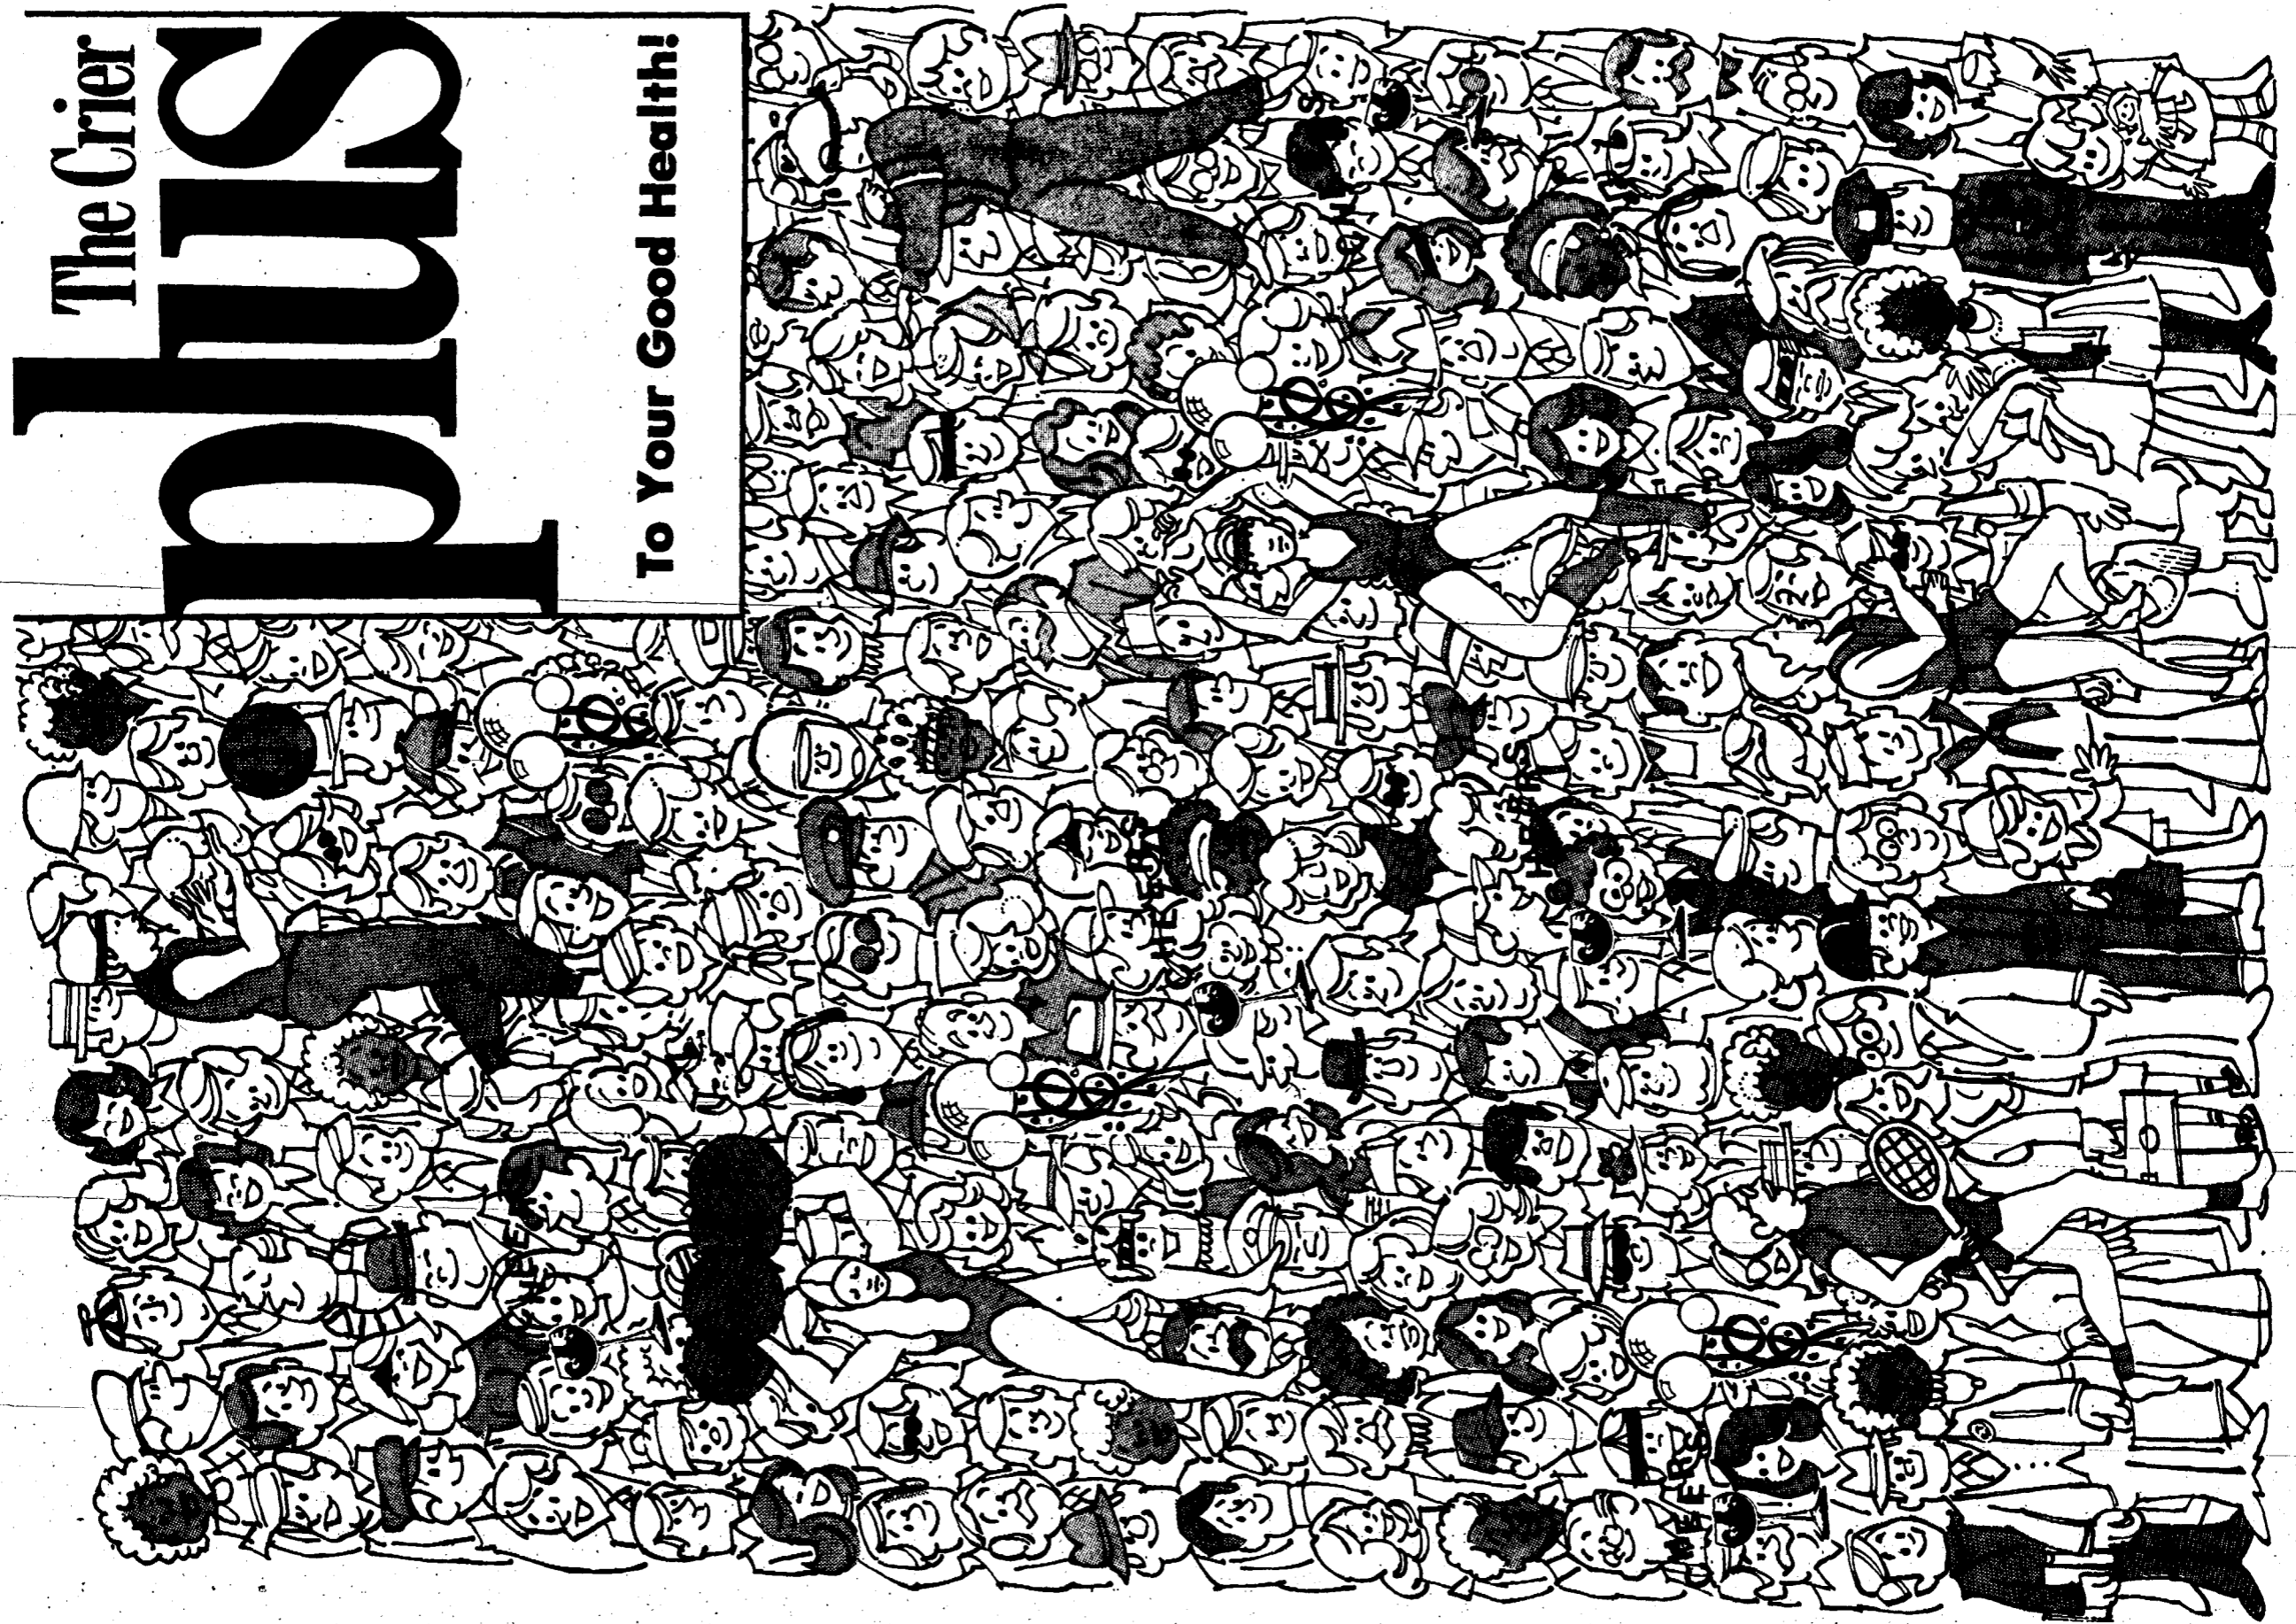

"I for one don't want the board to finish the business they started. I don't trust them anymore. I don't want religion in our schools, but on the other hand the school district is guilty of teaching a religion in all but name. I want the schools to stop teaching moral issues. I will never vote for an R-rated film to be shown in our schools. We should be teaching useful things to our students and not entertaining them."

"I believe our board needs to become more responsible to the community. At times during my 14 years in the community the board has been unresponsive to the wishes of the local people. I feel the present board is in this category."

"Finances are a big problem right now, but that can be handled. What's crucial is that we start teaching the three R's again and get out of the business of teaching morals. It seems spending increases but quality declines. Our system acts like a black hole. I stand for fiscal restraint and improved quality."

In-line skating

Frozen pond not included, or necessary

BY DAN NESS

It was only a matter of time.

Those who are truly in love with the form of propulsion we call skating were bound to find ways to do it outside of the boundaries of ice arenas and frozen ponds. Not satisfied with year-round skating in the many indoor rinks across the countryside, skaters strived for a new way to do an old act.

This is where in-line skating comes in.

In-line skates look like ice skates minus the blade, with a set of four wheels in single file where the blade should be. With in-line skates, you go where the bikes, and cars, and skateboarders and rollerskaters go. Leave the ice at home in the freezer with these things, it's as simple as that.

If you haven't already seen in-line skaters racing down the bike paths in your neighborhood, you will soon, according to an in-line skate manufacturer.

"This is definitely the hot thing to do," said Mary Horwath, of the North American Sports Training Corp. "The New York Daily News said this was the hottest thing to hit Central Park this summer."

Closer to home, Bill Keefer, of The Trading Post in Plymouth, says in-line skates are selling "like hotcakes. They're also faster than regular roller skates," Keefer says. "There's a lot of potential there for developing into something popular."

The Trading Post is the only local store that stocks Rollerblade skates, the most popular brand name for in-line skates. Ed's Sports Equipment Sales in Plymouth can order them for customers.

Although all the elements of a fad seem to be present, in-line skating in neither new nor without practical benefits, Horwath points out. "The in-line skating concept is over 100 years old," she says. The Dutch created the land skate even before the traditional two-by-two style of ice skate, Horwath says. (Why Hans Brinker felt compelled to skate only during the cold months on frozen canals remains a mystery.)

In more recent years, the concept was introduced on a large-scale basis by North American Sports Training Corp. which makes Rollerblade skates. Rollerblade, the name of the most popular brand, runs the risk of becoming a generic term, not unlike the word association of Frisbee with flying discs.

When Rollerblades appeared, they were used almost exclusively by hockey players and skiers to maintain their form in the off-season. But then the Rollerblade people witnessed a strange phenomenon among the off-season winter athletes.

"They were having a good time," Horwath says. So, a Rollerblade model with less resistance than the training model soon emerged, and the sport has taken off. Runners with knee and ankle problems find the in-line skates just as challenging aerobically, with less jarring of the joints, Horwath says. And with the move toward low-impact aerobics, the in-line skates are fitting in well.

"The in-line skating concept has been strong" in the Detroit metro area, Horwath says, mainly because of the "strong hockey influence" of the region. Rollerblade skates are used by both the U.S. Olympic Nordic and Alpine ski teams for off-season training, too.

Lest the skating purist be put off by the land skate, Horwath assures that the in-line skater can turn, do cross-overs and even skate backwards, like its winter counterpart.

Although the in-line skater won't get rosy cheeks from skating along sidewalks in July, he/she also won't get frostbitten toes. That's the dilemma all skating purists will have to deal with on their own.

Stress!

*A healthy body
with a healthy mind*

BY RICHARD WILLIAMS

The relationship between mental stress and physical health is a difficult correlation to make. There are so many daily stresses in our lives. Some big, some small. But they all take a toll on our mental and physical health.

People are often able to dismiss many peripheral events that may never affect their lives. But in their immediate environment, there are a bountiful list of factors that we would like to modify for convenience. This kind of constant instability leads to our modern perception of "stress."

What we are further forced to deal with are our daily stress situations. Our functioning pace continues to increase and we become the beneficiaries of more tasks to be completed.

"Specific stresses have more of an impact than broader ones," Oscar Barbarin, psychologist and associate professor at University of Michigan said. "For example if you live in San Francisco or the West Coast, we know, scientifically, that a major earthquake will occur. We just don't know when. It's a vague threat like nuclear war. Every once in a while people may think about it, but they find ways to dismiss it."

Even those who are able to ignore outside turmoil have plenty of stressful situations in their everyday life that could cause chronic frustration.

It's easy to get caught up in routine. People often find themselves saying, "I can't take another day of this."

There are times this happens, and it could mean a warning sign of "burnout" due to excessive stress. When this happens it is important that people take an evaluation of their personal situation.

"Be aware of yourself and your body," Barbarin said. "When stress is an issue, it's often because people don't give leisure time and fun the attention that it deserves. Try to find time for relaxation."

"Part of the trouble is that people don't think it's important to schedule leisure time."

The basic idea of self-awareness may seem like an obvious step, but it's surprising how easy it is to let "burnout" creep up on everyone.

Even home life is a potential area of stress. The home can be a fierce battlefield, where conflict creates the most stressful circumstances.

"Though conflict is an inevitable part of life, it is important to avoid conflict," Barbarin said. "Sometimes people tend not to deal with it head on. It's especially true in families where there are reoccurring sources of difficulty that people become hopeless about."

Barbarin advises that these are the times that family members should sit down and talk together about the problem, rather than doing it in passing or indirectly.

"When stress is an issue, it's often because people don't give leisure time and fun the attention it deserves."

Avoid stress with self-management

The next step in thwarting some stressful conditions is to institute some self-management. Learning to manage time will help set priorities. Delegating work and knowing how to ask for help when needed, are all important for people to learn.

In addition to that, it is also important to identify and sort out the many facets of stress.

"Several scholars have talked about stress in terms of distinguishing between those which are typical, or expected, and those atypical," Barbarin said.

"The typical events are ones that move through your lifespan: graduation, getting married, and the birth of a child," Barbarin said.

He pointed to serious accidents, fires in homes or the loss of a loved one as all "unavoidable."

Once people can approach stress with a calm demeanor, they can look forward to a new attitude through self-renewal.

"In time people learn to deal with these issues. They don't have as catastrophic an effect or impact," said Barbarin.

"Some people haven't acquired those skills, they don't have the resources. The resources can be personal in terms of psychological development, insight and character. Or they can be tangible things such as being financially secure, having a job, having an important role in life, and having close relationships. Those are resources that can protect one against some of these factors."

 Election Record: Voted in 15 elections since registering in 1978.

"This community has voted in a valid election not to waive the tax limitation amendment. The decision is a voter decision, not a Board decision. Is it fair to keep putting it on the ballot?"

"I will not support the ballot proposal to waive implementation of the tax limitation amendment because the Plymouth-Canton taxpayers feel they are already overburdened. Past experience indicates that more money does not improve the quality of student education. Taxpayers could use more information about this issue."

"I will vote to waive its (Headlee) application here. The bottom line is there will be program cuts if this doesn't make it and detrimental effects across the board. We'll have tough decisions to make. The district must maintain present scholastic programs and academic standards if (MEAP) test scores are to improve. By maintaining the present 37 mills for operating expense, I believe continuing test score improvement can be achieved."

"Yes I'll vote to support the ballot proposal to authorize full millage levy. If the proposal doesn't pass the district's flexibility is limited in dealing with contract obligations. The most important issue of this election is allowing the district to authorize full millage. I urge all voters to vote positively. If waiving Headlee does not pass we will have to carefully review the entire budget."

"One of the reasons I was motivated to run for school board was the graphic scenes in the movie 'Excalibur.' The school board voted to keep pornographic scenes from 'Excalibur' in the classroom. The medium is the message. Some values are caught, not taught, and this just doesn't belong in our school system. F--k you, f--k you is said 28 times in 'The Breakfast Club.' This is school board approved. I'm concerned with the mortal souls of our kids."

"I was asked to run by friends and neighbors. Yes I am opposed to controversial materials. I don't see them as necessary. Specifically, the material is not what I would consider a part of an education. Too many students can't read or write."

"The whole issue can be resolved on the basis of parental consent. Its best decided by the parents. That means getting them involved and improving the parental consent procedure as it stands. If the material is used meaningfully in the classroom, and if it meets the curriculum goals then I'd say it's okay."

"What's important in these cases is the material's appropriateness to the curriculum. The main point is that kids have to think for themselves. We want them to be able to make free, informed decisions by teaching them about issues they may have to confront. We live in a global society today, dealing with a global culture. We need to teach kids to be adaptable and one way is to confront them with controversial issues."

"I could bring spiritual discernment to the board. The current board lacks spiritual discernment. They are calling good, evil, and evil, good. I also feel I could bring all of my educational experience to the board as a member."

"I feel the present members do not seem to reflect the feelings of the community. The specific reason I am running for this seat has to do with the recent publication of pupil test scores. I would encourage much greater emphasis on scholastic skills. I do bring some experience which I can call on while on the board. Part of the problem with the current board is that it isn't listening to what people are saying."

"I bring to you experience. I just ask you to look at my record and based on that performance I'll let you decide. Take this down -- 459-1437. That's my home phone number. It's also the bottom line on how I keep a finger on what's going on in the district."

"I believe that my educational and professional experience, including being a former board president, can be of significant value in coping with the future challenges the district will face."

"I'd like to teach patriotism again in school and improve the reading programs. I also would like to see the student-teacher ratio lowered. My other priorities are: oppose school based clinics which usurp parental rights; eliminate drugs from schools; promote Judeo-Christian values and academic excellence; eliminate pornographic/occult material."

"My priorities as a school board member would encompass comprehensive testing in the elementary schools to determine a child's progress. No child should be promoted to the next level of learning until basic skills have been mastered. This school district is too large to be effective; it needs to be condensed. I'd like to reinforce some of the programs we have in place and perhaps delete some other programs."

"To complete the implementation of approved Bond Project and resolution of controversial resource materials issue. Also, the bottom line for the district is to improve student test scores. Continuing the movement toward lower class sizes at the elementary level to improve classroom effectiveness. Also, to better involve parents in the educational process for their children."

"Reduce class size where dollars and space permit; continue to work on improving communications; successfully implement the rest of the bond program; seek educational improvement through School Improvement Plans; improve arts program; achieve fair and just agreements with bargaining units; and get parents more involved."

Quinn quits campaign, Robison still in it

BY KEN VOYLES

Two of the nine candidates running for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education seats have stopped, or are not currently campaigning.

Nancy Quinn said she is no longer actively campaigning and that she would have withdrawn from the race if it was still possible.

Chris Robison said he is still in the race, but the Canton resident has run a very low-key campaign, neglecting to participate in League of Women Voters' events relating to the campaign. The food services representative said he has been busy with work and just hasn't had the time to put any effort behind a bid for one of the two board seats.

"It's a personal decision on my part," Quinn said of her decision not to campaign for a seat any longer. "Some events arose in my life and if I had foreseen them earlier I would have withdrawn.

"It's an unfortunate situation, but that's the way it is," she added.

Quinn was elected to the school board in June of 1984, but then resigned her seat during what she has called a "personal crisis" in April of 1985.

Robison said he would still like to be considered in the race, even though he failed to reply to the local League of Women Voters (LWV) candidates questionnaire and did not attend the league's forum last week.

"I haven't stopped running," Robison said, "but I just finished a hellacious month of work. I still consider myself in the race."

Robison added that late spring is a very busy time in the food services business and that he was away when the LWV candidates questionnaire arrived.

"It was in the mail at home," he said. Robison also said he was unable to attend the league night due to business commitments.

The election is set for Monday, June 8.

Schools face aid loss, Headlee rollback per cent, the lowest it has been in 22 years, according to district Superintendent John M. Hoben. Hoben said the main reason for the lower inflation rate is simple -- lower petroleum prices.

The district's State Equalized Valuation (SEV) is up 9.7 per cent this year, said Hoedel, showing an increase of $102,415,513.

But a new factor is reshaping the future of the district budget. And that's a loss of state membership aid of $1.5 million, or 16.9 per cent, this year.

"Our revenues are up only 4.7 per cent compared with expenditures increasing six per cent," said Hoedel. "If it weren't for the loss in state aid we might not need to have this on the ballot again.

"This is one of the largest state aid losses we've faced," Hoedel continued. "It makes it more logical to ask for waiving the rollback."

The rollback would also result in a further loss of state membership aid of $47,000. Even more devastating, said Hoedel, is the loss of $1.1 million in local tax revenues which then would bring the district's revenue increase to only 2.3 per cent over 1986-87.

With the loss of the funds, the district would begin to make cut-backs in programs and services throughout the entire budget, said Hoedel.

"Our expenses are up $3.1 million," said Hoedel, "which isn't bad for the district."

Increased expenses come from negotiated wage contracts, the new classrooms at Gallimore, and an increase in utility costs, said Hoedel.

Hoedel said the district might have to consider asking for more millage money if the rollback goes through. "With the state aid loss it is doubly devastating to us," he said. "We'd be fiscally irresponsible if we did not ask voters to waive the rollback."

The reason the district is losing so much state aid, said Hoedel, is that the SEV climbed 9.7 per cent and the projected student population is expected to increase next year to 16,100.

State aid is calculated by dividing the student count into the SEV, said Hoedel.

"The bottom line is that expenditures are going up about six per cent and revenues, without a rollback, are only up 4.7 per cent," Hoedel said. "The district is already facing an operating deficit with that in mind. And now we have a big loss in state aid."

Hoedel emphasized that if voters approve waiving the amendment the same operating millage of 37 mills will be levied and no more.

New Morning offers camp

New Morning School, a pre K-8 state-certified parent-cooperative school in Plymouth, will host a one-week "Air and Space Day Camp" through Living Science Foundation in Novi.

The week long event, for students ages five to 11, will be held Aug. 10-14. Registration deadline for the class is on Monday, June 1.

The future of aerospace exploration will be viewed through science-guided activities at the camp. Campers will enter a simulated space shuttle, navigate with computer simulators, observe constellations and planets and train with robots.

New Morning School, a school which offers hands-on experiences during its regular September to June school, chose to host the special day camp because it complemented its own philosophy, said a school spokesperson.

The school is also offering Discovery Days classes in three-week periods, with classes meeting two mornings each week. Students ages three to 14 can participate. Those classes begin on June 15.

Call 420-3331 for further details. Registrations will be taken until a class is full.

NEPAL

Kathmandu, capital of Nepal, in the lap of the overpowering Himalay Mountains, is bounded on the north by mysterious Tibet. Although this region is on the roof of the world, more and more travelers are visiting this fascinating place.

In Durbar Square, one admires the Royal Palace and the superb artistry of the 2,000 temples, shrines and pagodas of the Buddhist culture. Ancient Bhatgaon is the home of medieval architecture, art, weaving and pottery. This 9th century city is known for its mask making. Prowl the bazaars for Tibetan prayer wheels, religious paintings, carpets and bronzes. You might even be lucky and catch a glimpse of Nepal's Living Goddess, in Kumari Temple. Notice too, the very fine woodcarvings that frame the windows of old homes.

Virtually closed to the world for centuries, Nepal is now linked to India and Pakistan by roads and air, and Tibet by roads. Fulfill a dream and make your personal pilgrimage to a land rich in antiques and meet the smiling friendly people of Nepal.

CEP Bands to perform final show this Friday

The Centennial Educational Park final band concert of the year will feature the Symphony and Concert Bands at 8 p.m. on Friday, May 29 in the Salem Auditorium.

Special guest artist for the show is Sergeant First Class Don Burleson, an euphonium player with the United States Army Field Band in Washington D.C. He will perform three solos with the symphony band.

Burleson graduated from Plymouth High School in 1967 where he played the euphonium in the high school band. Burleson now lives in Lakeland, FL, but his sister Dora still lives in Canton.

Burleson is also a 1971 graduate of the University of Michigan. He received a Masters Degree from Harvard in 1977 and joined the United States Army Field Band in 1980.

In addition to performing with the symphony band, Burleson will visit five of the school district's middle schools on Thursday and Friday for "mini-concerts."

During the concert, this year's seniors will be recognized, said James R. Griffith, CEP director of bands.

The musical program will include a salute to Walt Disney World's 15th Anniversary performed by the Concert Band.

The concert is open to the public at no charge. There will also be a reception following the concert in the Salem Auditorium.

Red tag sale

The Chief Connection, Canton High's school store, will have an end-of-the-year red tag clearance sale through Friday, May 29.

All items in the store will be reduced from 20 to 60 per cent, including Canton quilted jackets, Canton sweatshirts, tote bags, school supplies and stuffed animals.

Store hours are 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. daily. The store is located off the main hall, across from the library.

Historical Society continues drive

A new fund campaign is underway by the Plymouth Historical Society with the primary goal of increasing an existing trust fund to permit expansion of the services and activities at the Plymouth Historical Museum on Main Street.

The earnings from the current trust, which is administered by NBD, are available to the Historical Society, but the principal is protected. Up to 15 per cent of the proceeds from the fund drive may be used for current operating expenses, and a minimum of 85 per cent will go directly into the trust fund.

The drive got off to a good start recently with a $6,000 grant from the Plymouth Rotary Foundation. A pledge matching the $6,000 has also been received from the Daisy Manufacturing Company of Rogers, AR. Daisy made air rifles in Plymouth from 1887 to 1958.

The campaign goal is $300,000 to be reached over a three-year period. Individuals and businesses throughout the community can contribute to the fund.

The Plymouth Historical Society receives no financial support from any governmental agency. Funds for operating the museum come from admissions fees, membership dues, donations, proceeds from a gift shop, and investment income.

To contribute to the trust send a check payable to: Plymouth Historical Society Trust, 155 S. Main, Plymouth, 48170. All gifts are tax deductible and pledges can be fulfilled over a three-year timespan.

Further information may be obtained by stopping at the museum Wednesday through Sunday, or by calling 455-8940.

Mishap takes boy's life

A two-year-old Canton boy was killed Friday afternoon when a station wagon tailgate closed on his neck, according to Canton police.

Kevin Brian would have been three years old on June 8.

The boy had walked to the back of his family's station wagon at their house on Yorktown and opened the tailgate, police said. "Apparently, the door was either blown shut by the wind, or it closed on its own," said Canton Police Information Officer David Boljesic.

Medical workers at Oakwood - Canton Center tried to revive the boy for an hour to no avail.

courthouse and while in handcuffs and eluded police for nearly six hours until the Detroit Police tracked him down with dogs.

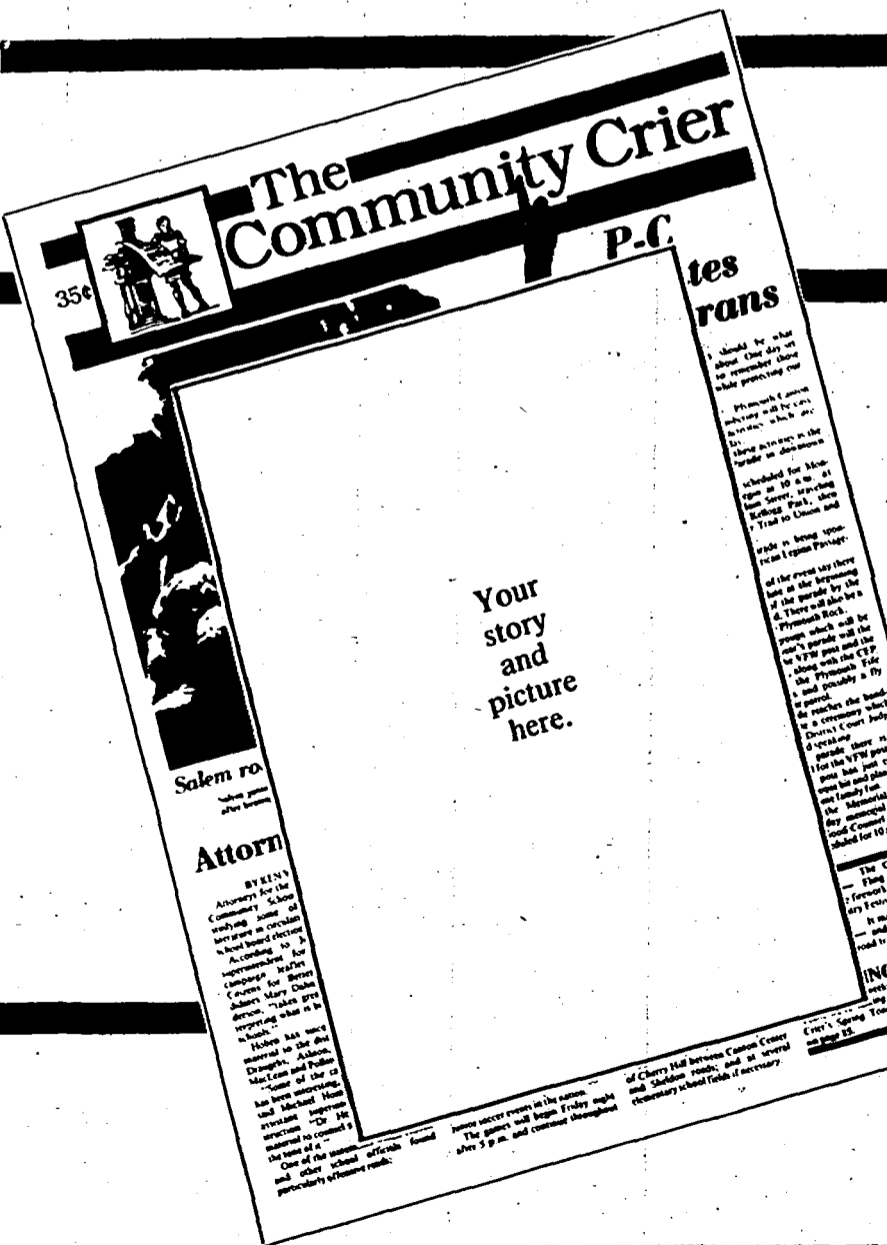

Officer Erik Mayernik, who was escorting the man from the courthouse when he escaped, said that a preliminary hearing has been set for June 1 on charges from the breaking and entering and that new charges of escaping from custody would be sought.

Maynerik did say that "he will be in leg chains the next time we take him to court."

The first incident in the week was also a successful arrest of two suspects in a breaking and entering, as two young men from Canton were arrested outside of a home on Lynn Street last Wednesday. Those men have not yet been arraigned.

Police credit quick reaction from township residents to the success of both arrests.

On to state semis

Rock kickers win regional

BY MARTY TUNGATE

It was rough, it was physical, and it was close.

But the Salem girls soccer team prevailed Saturday and sent the Kalamazoo Central Maroon Giants home feeling blue.

Royal blue.

In what some called the most physical game the Rocks have been involved in this year, Salem came from behind to win, 2-1, and capture the Class A Regional title.

The game went into double sudden-death overtime, and then to a shoot-out before the Rocks could claim victory over Kalamazoo Central.

The win puts the Rocks in the Class A State Semi-finals, which will be played at Brighton Middle School today (May 27) at 4 p.m. Salem, currently 14-2-2, will play Midland High in a bid to reach the state finals at Northville this Saturday.

The Rocks started out the clash as expected -- they dominated the game.

Just under 12 minutes into the action the Rocks scored.

Michelle Minton got the goal for the Rocks, after the ball had bounded off the goal post (and off three other players). There were five other attempts at the goal before the shot went in.

Salem sophomore Jill Estey was credited with the assist, giving her 30 so far this year.

"We were doing great in the first half," Salem head coach Ken Johnson said. "We dominated, but then the girls went flat."

Salem did go flat, as they had numerous opportunities to put the Maroon Giants away, but they just could not come up with that big play.

Part of that was due to the outstanding goaltending by Sarah Pratt, who stopped shot after shot by the Rocks.

Salem was hanging onto their lead, but late in the first half Alicia Webster of Kalamazoo Central went flying past the Rock defense and went in one-on-one against Rock goalie Ellen Schnackel and slipped it past the recovering goalie. Schnackel was playing with a badly hurt right foot.

In the second half, the Rocks appeared to have recovered from the late goal, but they could not push another one into the net.

The game continued to be physical, as tempers were flaring and the words were flying.

"They were pushing, shoving, cussing, and pulling hair," Rock defender Jennifer Marshall said.

As regulation time ran out Central applied most of the pressure, but good defense by Nicole Stojeba, Tracy Krajewski, and Marshall kept the Rocks in the game.

The game then went into a 10-minute overtime, and appeared Salem was going to go up by one goal in the first overtime, as Estey had a golden opportunity to ice the Giants on a penalty kick, but sent it wide to the right.

Emotions show after soccer win

BY MARTY TUNGATE

The Salem girls soccer team struggled but came out with a victory against an inspired Kalamazoo Central team Saturday.

If you had never been to a soccer game before, and wanted to see everything that happens in a soccer game, this was the game to see.

Talking with some members of the team after the game, they showed their emotions after the grueling event.

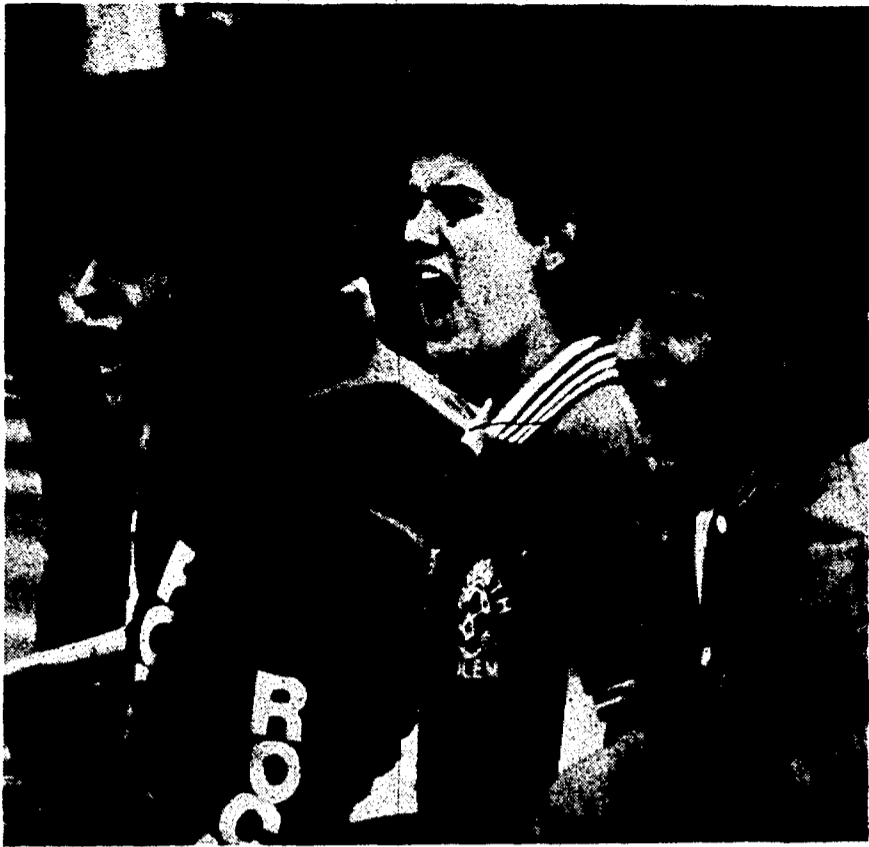

"This was one of the most emotional mental games we've played in all year," senior defender Nicole Stojeba said.

"We weren't expecting such a tough game from them," added midfielder, senior, Jennifer Belhart.

The Rocks, who have had quite a bit of pressure put on them from the opening kick-off of the season after coach Ken Johnson predicted a state championship, have come through when the chips were down.

"We wanted this game, and from here it's on to the states," a confident

Kickers advance to semis

Another overtime also ended scoreless, but the Rocks were starting to dominate the game again.

Next, the game went into two five-minute sudden-death overtimes, but again neither of the teams could do anything with the ball.

The game then went into a shoot-out.

In the shoot-out each team gets five attempts at the goalie one-on-one.

Kalamazoo's first two kickers sent their shots above the net, but the Rocks made good on their first two, as freshmen Sara Hayes and senior co-captain Lisa Hysko buried shots into the net.

"When it comes down to a shoot-out it's all a mind game," Hysko said.

The next two Central kicks made their shots, and Salem's Terri King misfired.

But Krajewski nailed her shot to give the Rocks a 3-2 advantage going to the final shots.

Liz Smith of Central had to make her shot to tie the Rocks, but her shot fell short, giving the Rocks the regional crown, 2-1.

"I don't think we expected such a physical game from them, but our girls hung tough," Johnson said.

The game almost got out of hand as the pushing and shoving nearly came to fists. Kirsten Grace of the Giants was given a red card and tossed out of the game after she was already given a warning.

"She (Grace) was on me all game, and after she tripped me up I had a few words with her and the referee warned us both," Marshall said.

But Grace continued her rough play and head judge Harry Andrews tossed her out of the game.

"This is the most physical game we ever played," Stojeba said after the contest.

Players

Rachel Thiet said. Thiet is a junior midfielder.

"Everyone gave 110 per cent. We were fantastic, Ellen (Salem's goalie) did a great job," senior co-captain Lisa Hysko said.

The physical nature of the game took its toll. Hysko came away from the game with a cut under her eye, and a Kalamazoo Central player was ejected from the game.

"I thought it would be a cleaner game," freshmen Jennifer Marshall said. "We won't take a team lightly again."

When the game ended in a shoot-out, the five members from Salem, who were to take their shots at the goal went into deep concentration, trying to only think of putting the ball into the net.

"We worked on penalty kicks in practice this week, and it really helped," Hysko added. "I was very nervous, everyone is counting on you, but I tried to concentrate on the goal."

Hysko did concentrate on the goal, and drilled it, as she helped the Rocks' cause.

Salem now will play Midland High School in Brighton for the right to go to the state finals.

Midland not well known in this part, but the Salem players and coach Johnson vowed never to take a team lightly again.

"We're going after the state title," Thiet concluded.
