Festival time is here

You've come a long way baby! From its humble beginnings 32 years ago as a chicken barbeque dinner to raise money for playground equipment, the Fall Festival has grown into an annual four-day blowout expected to draw more than 100,000 people.

Plymouth's version of the fall classic starts tomorrow and runs through Sunday. It's not a good idea to stick around if you hate crowds. This town will be busting at the seams.

That's if Mother Nature is in the Fall Fest mood.

"We don't anticipate any problems," said Paul Sincock, assistant to the city manager. "If Mother Nature cooperates, we'll be in pretty good shape. Rainouts are a real problem."

Parking, as usual, will be at a premium, so get there early. Sincock said the best-kept parking secret is the Central Parking Deck's upper lot. For some reason, he said, people avoid the top deck.

There will also be parking available at the Weidman lot next to the Mayflower Hotel and at the East Central lot in back of the Penn Theatre.

Street closings for Sept. 9-13 are: Main, between Church and Ann Arbor Trail; Penniman, between Main and Harvey (for the kiddie rides) and Union Street between Roe and Ann Arbor Trail.

If you're a first-time Fest goer, Sincock has this advice:

"See the sites early in the weekend -- Thursday, Friday, even Saturday -- then just drive by on Sunday for takeout Rotary chicken at Ann Arbor Road and Sheldon."

Who will run in 1988 for Canton Bd.?

BY DAN NESS

Fourteen months to go. That's how long Canton residents have to decide who to vote for on the Canton Board of Trustees, with all seven spots up for grabs in November 1988. Although any speculation about campaigns is uniformly termed "premature" by current board members, the recent vote to implement a part-time supervisor, clerk and treasurer has changed the circumstances under which candidates will be running next year.

Talk of incumbents running or not running has already begun.

The three administrative board members will be most directly affected by the new part-time status. Of the three -- Supervisor James Poole, Clerk Linda Chuhran and Treasurer Gerald Brown -- only Chuhran has committed to running for another term. "I have always said that I am going to run again," Chuhran said. "I don't feel that I'm done with my work here."

Chuhran, who voted against the part-time administrative positions, said the new system would be used as a campaign issue for her. She also hinted that she may run for an office other than clerk. "I may change my mind and run for something else," she said.

Poole, who also voted against the part-time administrative system, said he had "no idea" if he was going to run for supervisor in 1988. Poole said the board's decision to implement a superintendent system would cost more money to operate.

"The costs in that office are going to triple, I guarantee it," he said.

Brown was also undecided as to running in 1988 for the treasurer's spot. "I have no idea at this point in time if I'd run again," he said. Brown questioned whether the part-time setup would attract qualified treasurer's candidates in 1988.

"I really wonder what type of person would be treasurer of the township" with the new system, he said. Brown speculated that only people without current jobs would run for the position, such as retirees. "I may run," he added. "I may retire into this job instead of out of it."

The "job descriptions" of the trustees' positions, on the other hand, won't have any changes from previous elections. The current slate of trustees are guarded in their conversations regarding 1988.

School enrollment climbs

BY KEN VOYLES

Enrollment is up in the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools this fall.

Ginnie Murdoch, the district's coordinator of pupil accounting, said the system's K-12 population has increased by 50 students. That count is based on Aug. 28 numbers.

"That's quite a jump from the same time last year," said Murdoch. "On our first count we showed a loss of 83. Now it's plus 50. New students are coming out of the walls."

There were 15,566 students in the district as of Aug. 28, said Murdoch, including 7,112 at the elementaries, 4,067 at the middle schools and another 4,387 at Centennial

Educational Park (CEP).

The elementary schools headcount is up by 141, said Murdoch, but counts at the middle schools and high schools are down by 91 (84 at the middle schools and seven at Canton and Salem Highs).

"I don't think it's any surprise really," Murdoch said. "We've been expecting it with the increase in building and housing going on."

"Most of the growth seems to be at the elementary level," she continued. "We hope it keeps going up."

The district is still without an accurate count of adult education students, however. Adding those students to the tally will probably push the district over 16,000 students this year, said Murdoch.

Last year there were 15,516 K-12 students in the district and another 417 adult education students, for a total of 15,933.

The district is expecting the adult education count to come in around 500, said Murdoch, which would put the total student population at just over 16,000.

The district has been keeping track of the student population on a weekly basis, said Murdoch.

The official fourth Friday count won't be tallied until Oct. 2. That's when the district will make its final totals, which are used for the state aid formula.

Hometown talent 'master dance'

BY PAUL GARGARO

"I really don't know where to begin," said Mary Helen Stewart, part owner and choreographer at Canton's Masters of Dance Arts Inc.. "Something just happened this summer -- people started to recognize us. It's wonderful. It's just sweet."

Vicki Esser and Stewart are managing partners of Masters of Dance Arts. Husbands Don Stewart and David Esser act as business managers for the studio. After 12 years in the business, operations seem to flow like a well-choreographed routine.

Esser and Stewart have been involved with dance since childhood. They met as youngsters at a dance studio in Dearborn and they've been partners ever since. "As kids," said Stewart, "we used to dance at USO shows and benefits. We even did some things on television."

"Unfortunately, we never got to do the kind of work that our students are doing now," noted Esser. "As dancers, we would have loved to compete more. As teachers, we really believe in competition. It gets in your blood."

In addition to expert instruction from Stewart and Esser, there are 10 certified instructors who are qualified to teach ballet, pointe, tap, jazz, preschool, gymnastics, baton and cheer, and aerobics.

Even though they're partners, Esser and Stewart have divided responsibilities regarding dance instruction. Esser works primarily with the 6-14-year-olds, while the older, company-level dancers study under the tutelage of Stewart.

"With little kids, we want to foster a love of dance," remarked Esser. "As they get older, we try and develop their technique, and hopefully, as their love of dance grows, they'll be willing to put in more time and effort."

Obviously, this philosophy had a lot to do with Stewart's self-proclaimed "sweet summer."

An experienced choreographer, Stewart created a Masters of Dance Arts' routine called "Control." The average age of the dancers in "Control" was 17 but their experience and talent make them seem much older.

"Control" is a jazz program set to the song of the same name by Janet Jackson," explained Stewart. "What I wanted to do was to have my dancers display the word control -- to show the audience how a dancer can move so swiftly and at the next moment maintain a controlled and sustained movement."

This summer, Esser and Stewart took "Control" on the road and met with success. The company took first place honors in the "Spotlight" regional and national competition in Columbus, Ohio.

From Ohio, "Control" and an additional 26 dancers traveled to New York City to compete in the Dance Educators of America National Competition.

"New York is sort of a home away from home for us. That's why we have a poster of it up in the studio," said Stewart. Regardless, neither Stewart nor Esser could ever have imagined the homecoming that awaited them at the Waldorf Astoria, home of the competition.

When all was said and done, the Masters of Dance company took a second overall in the tap category with their performance of "15-Story Halo." The "Control" program also captured a second in the jazz category. Finally, out of 300 performances Stewart was awarded Best Choreography.

Another bright spot on the road trip was the presence of the television show "Star Search." After taping several performances of "Control," Star Searchers expressed interest in Mr. Dance of Michigan winner Jeff Hancock, as well as Lynne Taylor.

"New York is a great place for dancers to see how they stack up," said Esser. "You might be the best at home and mediocre some place else."

Masters of Dance Arts, though, seems to stack up pretty well no matter where they go.

Anyone want a fire engine?

The Canton Historical Society is looking for a home for Canton's first fire engine -- a 1950 Ford -- which was donated to the society by the township.

"We want somebody to give it a loving home as well as loving care," said Tillie Shultz, president of the Canton Historical Society. "It was donated to the society, but we don't have a place to cover it."

The engine now sits in the Canton DPW yard.

Anyone interested in housing the fire engine can contact Schultz at 453-6084. Schultz is looking for "a barn, a shed or a garage where somebody will take good care of it."

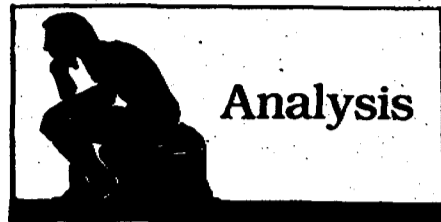

The engine is in operating condition, Shultz said, with one exception. "The only problem is that it doesn't have any brakes."

On or off duty, a cop is still a cop

BY DAVID PIERINI

The law doesn't work in shifts, it's on duty 24 hours a day.

The role of the police officer parallels that of the law. Police officers work in shifts, but the oath they took to become peace keepers influences them to see that the law is upheld 24 hours a day.

"When you take your uniform off at the end of the day," Plymouth Police Chief Richard Myers said, "you don't stop feeling like a cop."

The day's work is forgotten, until that off-duty officer encounters a crime in progress. It is especially then that public obligation is not forgotten.

But at what point and how much an off-duty officer gets involved are questions of policy and liability being constantly reviewed.

Myers along with Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry and John Santomauro, Canton's director of public safety, do not expect their officers to put their lives in undue peril on their own time. All three departments make carrying an off-duty weapon optional. Differences in the three policies are subtle ones.

"Requiring someone to carry a weapon off-duty opens the community to increased liability," Myers said. "In a sense you're ordering them to be armed at all times."

If an officer chooses to do so, Plymouth police policy states that officers have to qualify with their off-duty weapons. If their weapon is discharged, on or off duty, a report is filed and a thorough investigation is conducted. That is also standard procedure for Plymouth Township and Canton.

Santomauro also requires his officers to qualify with their off-duty weapons, but at the same time, limits the kind of weapon a Canton officer can carry. Santomauro has a strict policy against non-lethal weapons such as "sap gloves, black jacks" and martial arts weapons.

In a recent special order in the Plymouth Township Police Department, Berry "requested" that all off-duty officers carry no weapons. This was just a recommendation, he said, not an order.

The special order also states that off-duty officers are not required to "and should not become involved in crime prevention to any greater extent than any other citizen."

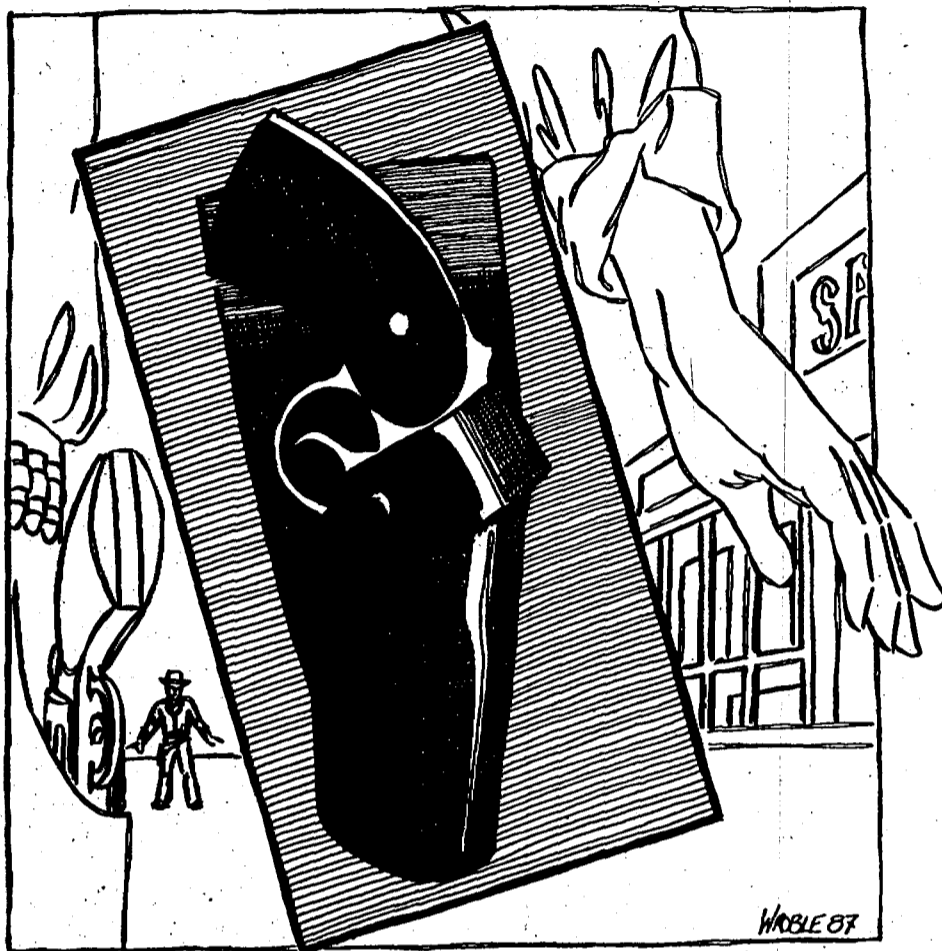

Berry would not comment on the special order, but did say the order was not prompted by any one incident.

"There were three holdups in the township last year," said Berry, who believes policies should be gauged by the size and nature of a community. "What are the chances of an off-duty police officer walking in on one of those?"

Little, all three police chiefs agree, but it can happen. What does an officer do? The conditions have to be assessed by that officer.

"Let's say there's four guys with Uzis. One officer with a snub-nosed, five-shot .38 isn't going to go barging in," Myers said. "That would be suicidal."

It's not just a subdivision

Lakepointe enjoys its own identity

BY PAUL GARGARO

You might be inclined to think of Lakepointe as an extended subdivision -- a nice residential area, but hardly a place to be considered a "community".

Perhaps you had better take a closer look at Lakepointe.

One of the original post-World War II subdivisions, Lakepointe was conceived with the intention of creating a self-sustaining development. Set between Wilcox and Phoenix Lakes, (hence, the name) Lakepointe is bordered by Schoolcraft Road to the south, Five Mile Road to the north, Haggerty Road to its east and Bradner Road to its west.

Geographic boundaries, though, do not qualify Lakepointe as a "community within the community."

Rather, Lakepointe's identity comes from within. Manicured lawns, trimmed hedges and well maintained homes give credence to this.

"What drew me to Lakepointe," said Gary DeBouver, a four year resident of Lakepointe and president of the Lakepointe Homeowners Association, "was the fact that people were so concerned with the maintenance of their property. It keeps property values up and, in return, reflects itself in the attitudes of people in the neighborhood."

DeBouver also credited the apparent welfare of Lakepointe to the concern and enthusiasm of the homeowners association. "The association's primary concern," stressed DeBouver, "is to preserve Lakepointe as desirable, a safe place for families to live. It's a pretty simple goal."

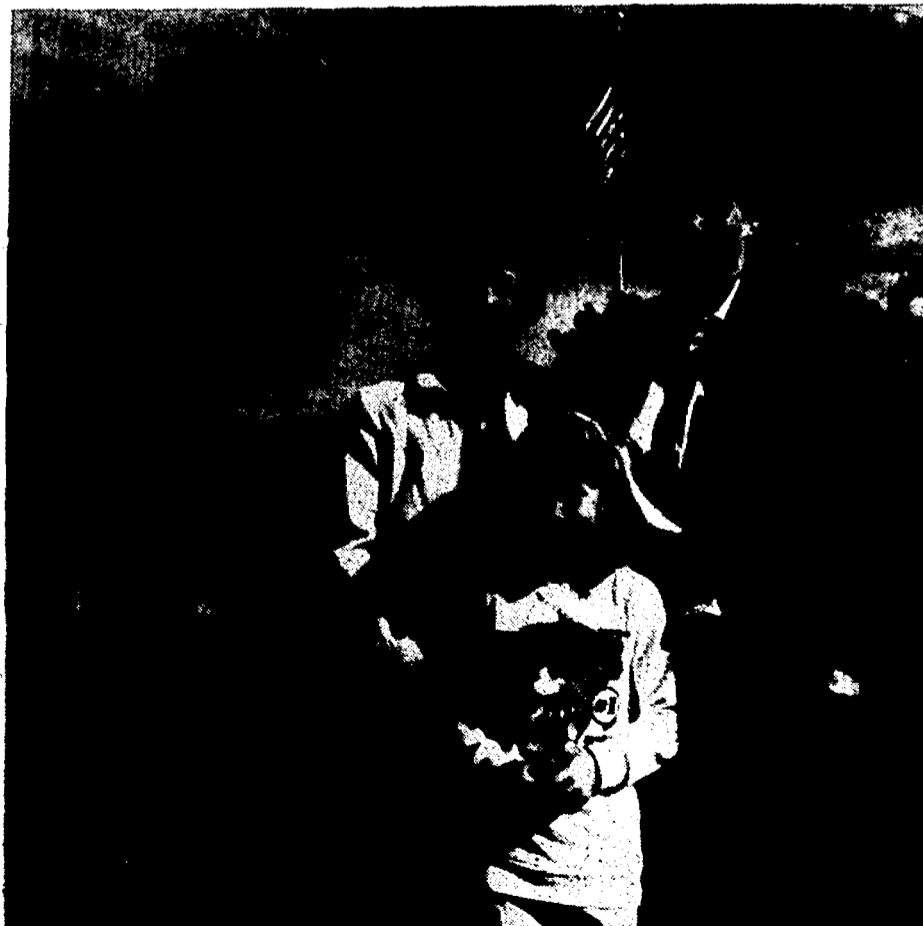

Initially, there were plans to commercially develop the area around the juncture of Schoolcraft and Wilcox Roads and make the subdivision self-reliant.

Those plans never really came to fruition, however, and Lakepointe residents still remain dependant on downtown Plymouth.

While shopping needs draw Lakepointers out of Lakepointe, Farrand Elementary School acts as another source of community spirit.

In central Lakepointe, Farrand School is the elementary alma mater to many adults who still reside in the community. Loraine Potochik, a married mother of two Farrand students and board member of the homeowners association, remembers the days when she was a Farrand student.

Run-down, unsafe governmental properties endanger our community. At left is a partially-burned barn at the old Detroit House of

Clean up, board up these public eyesores

Forgetting governmental wastefulness for a moment, there's another problem with so much Wayne County, State of Michigan and City of Detroit abandoned property in Plymouth-Canton-Northville:

Shoddy housekeeping, lax security and out-of-control weeds.

Here, the governments prove that they are not good neighbors.

The condition of their abandoned buildings are not only an eyesore, but a threat to public safety as well.

Run-down barns at the old Detroit House of Correction have already been a fire hazzard. Plymouth Township firemen must risk their lives and equipment to protect these eyesores.

In Northville Township, the former recreation site for the Center for Human Development, once a proud park fueled by volunteers' (such as

with Malice Toward None

Jaycees) efforts, is now a weed-choked party house for vandals.

Certain parts of Wayne County's parks in Canton and Plymouth Township look like settings for hay fever and mosquito experiments. (Many parts are improved from a few years ago, but not all.)

If these properties were privately-owned, the townships would condemn them or at least require upkeep.

These government-owned properties deserve to be utilized or sold. Pending that, they need attention.

Governments should be good neighbors too.

Keep school board site downtown

Housing the administrative team of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools remains the one project under the 1986 Bond which is still up in the air.

There has already been talk (not a lot of it, though) of building a new administration office, of buying an existing building, or of expanding the current structure on Harvey Street.

Members of the Board of Education have expressed a definite interest in a new facility, while the administration seems to be leaning toward buying an already existing office center. The Versatil Building on Plymouth Road is one of the more closely considered facilities by the district.

The least talked about idea is renovating and expanding the current site. It's also probably the most desirable from several aspects.

The centralized location makes it ideal for an administration which must deal with a vast and expanding district, a district encompassing six local governmental territories.

And local residents have come to recognize the two-story structure on Harvey Street.

Expansion would upgrade that corner of Ann Arbor Trail, possibly even turning it into a smart looking center, one big enough to house an overcrowded administration and at the same time help retain centralized control.

The current site also has a personal feel about it, being as it touches a residential section of Plymouth on the outer fringes of the downtown area. It is a recognized "monument" in this town and one that has served the district well since the offices moved from Lilley Road.

The proper way to handle it is to purchase the four houses (one is now a real estate office) along Ann Arbor Trail and provide a revitalized office with sufficient parking. At the same time, a well-landscaped office facility there would be a proper buffer to the residential area along Ann Arbor Trail.

Liabilities may hamper local police

You're not a good cop, so the old joke goes, until you've been sued.

They use to tell this one way back in the days when it was standard practice for many policemen to bust into houses without a search warrant.

Those were the days before the Miranda ruling. You had no right to remain silent. Anything you didn't say was held against you.

Of course cops fired warning shots, and for that matter, they fired their guns. You weren't a good cop until you fired your gun.

But in the 1960s, back when Gloria Steinem and Martin Luther King pushed for equal rights for their respective groups, Americans became privy to the entire spectrum of rights and liberties guaranteed to them.

A more legal-conscious America began to say, "Hey, you can't do that, I have my rights."

That all caught up to law enforcement. Police chiefs reviewed their policies on deadly force, apprehension of suspects and use of firearms. Policies were redesigned with liability issues in mind, and today they are constantly reviewed. Actions are scrutinized, and investigations are made.

This is good. Police acquire the proper warrants for search and seizure before making a raid or an arrest. They also read suspects their rights and they use great restraint before firing their weapon.

Police uphold the law — the same law they are governed by — and if they try to go above it, proper actions against those officers are taken.

But liability issues not only keep an officer honest, they can keep an officer from defending him or herself.

"With the liability issue, there is a reluctance to unholster a weapon, to display and fire it, because of fear of the repercussions," said John Santomauro, Canton's director of public safety. "It has literally created paranoia."

Santomauro said that when Canton police became involved in a shootout during a domestic incident in May, "they had every right to open fire" on the man shooting at them. The officers fired two shots before physically restraining the man, who had shot his wife.

What of the officer who responds to an open alarm at 3 a.m.? The officer walks into a dark building, turns the corner, and at the end of a hallway is a man with a sawed-off shot gun.

Santomauro is afraid that the split-second judgement needed to draw a weapon in defense might be delayed by the question of liability — a delay officers can't afford.

Don Walters, of the Michigan Municipal Risk Management Authority, said that while officers fear liability, the fear of being shot would be greater in a given situation.

Lets hope so. Santomauro is not saying that officers should be able to walk around with their guns drawn, ready to shoot first and ask questions later. He is saying that an officer shouldn't have to worry about drawing his weapon if he or she is being shot at.

Fischer, former schools prez

BY DAVID PIERINI and KEN VOYLES

Gerald Fischer, a former president of the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, died on Wednesday, Sept. 2 at Fairfax Hospital near his home in Fairfax, VI.

Fischer, 71, was school board president from 1962-1967. He lost the battle with cancer, friends said.

"He was one of the most outstanding, upright persons I've ever known," said Esther Hulsing, Plymouth Township clerk. "He had a great deal of personal integrity that spilled over into his business and public life."

Along with five terms as school board president, Fischer was president of the Plymouth Symphony board for five years. He was vice president of finance for Ford Motor Company's Dearborn plant until 1968, when he was hired by Pepsi Cola in New York

He was a vice president of Pepsi for 15 years. Fischer spent the last six years as a representative for the Population Committee in Washington, D.C., a group that studies population problems of third world countries.

"He was a scholar and a gentleman," said David Wood, of Plymouth, Fischer's best friend. "He made so many contributions to people along the way."

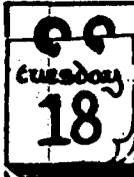

Music was his first love, and he took great pride in teaching it to others, especially his four children, who are all involved in music today. Fischer played the organ, and served on the Interlochen Music Academy Board of Directors.

He graduated from Rutgers University in New Jersey and received an economics fellowship from Princeton University through Arthur Burns, former finance advisor to the Richard Nixon administration.

Fischer is survived by: wife Beth, sons Gerald of Minneapolis, MN, Kenneth of Ann Arbor and Norman of Oberlin, Ohio and daughter Martha Lutes of Washington D.C.

Memorial contributions can be made to the Interlochen Music Academy or a CEP music scholarship which was set up in his name a couple of years ago.

Tell it to Phyllis

By Phyllis Redfern

If it's time for the Fall Festival, it must mean that autumn is really here. What happened to all those lazy, hazy days of summer? You know those days I mean — when everyone sat back and talked about plans for fall and what committees they were going to be on.

It seems like only a couple of weeks ago when the kids got out of school and now they're back in full swing of the following year.

Well, now that fall is here, what committees are you on? How much time have you committed to the annual Fall Festival? Many people in the community have spent hours planning with one organization or another. Whether it's deciding who is going to be in charge or a booth at certain times, who is going to help cook a dinner or working on a craft, thousands of hours are contributed to the Fall Festival each year.

To all of you, who helped with the festival, we owe you a big thanks. It's the special people like you who make our community the great place that it is.

To all of you who are visitors to our community, welcome! We hope you enjoy your visit and come back again real soon. By the way, if you have any questions or need directions, don't hesitate to ask.

To everyone who complains about the festival, relax. It really isn't any big deal that a couple of streets are closed for four days. Come on, put that smile back on your face. The Fall Festival is a great time to get out and greet your friends and neighbors. Have Fun!

Police policies never off duty

"Certainly he would be expected to be as observant as possible and gather as much evidence as he could from his recollections. He should then take some means to notify police of that jurisdiction."

Officers outside of their jurisdiction, on and off duty, have the statutory limits of an average citizen, unless asked by an officer of that area to assist.

Last year, two off-duty Canton officers helped Dearborn Heights police apprehend a suspect in a restaurant holdup.

Armed or not armed, Santomauro said he hopes his officers would take some kind of action, depending on the circumstances. He said citizens should do the same.

Don Walters, of the Michigan Municipal Risk Management Authority, a law enforcement insurance group, said few police units require its officers to carry a weapon off-duty.

"The liability issue is the bottom line," Walters said. "Let's say an off-duty officer goes to a bar, has too much to drink and he shoots someone.

"That increases liability. In a sense, he was made to carry that gun into the bar."

Bennetts lose appeal

John and Sandra Bennett, convicted on charges of failing to send their four children to public school last January in 35th District Court, recently lost in appellate court.

Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Richard Hathaway upheld Judge John MacDonald's decision. MacDonald's ruling said the Canton family failed to supply a qualified teacher and comparable curriculum to that in public schools in teaching their children at home.

The Bennetts had pulled their children from the public school system and taught them at home. They were sued by the Plymouth-Canton Schools and were told to return their children to public school.

The Bennetts joined a counter suit filed by the Clonlara School of Ann Arbor, which provided learning materials to the family.

The family was fined $50 and forced to return their children to public school.

Who will run for Canton Bd.?

"I currently have no plans to seek office in 1988, however, that's always subject to change," said Trustee Robert Padget. Padget said that as it gets closer to the election "when it's more appropriate to consider," he may decide to run.

Padget said he had no interest in running for either of the three administrative positions, a position echoed by Trustee Stephen Larson. "I absolutely would not run for any of the administrative jobs," Larson said.

"Whether I would even run for trustee is premature," Larson said.

Trustee Loren Bennett did not rule out running for a position other than trustee in 1988. "I have no idea for what position I will be running for," he said. Bennett added that he will most likely run for one of the seats, however. "I enjoy this position. I think I have contributed significantly to the community and I have absolutely no intentions of retiring at this time."

Bennett, who also serves as the Board of Trustees' representative on the planning commission, may not ask to be appointed by the board this time around, he said. "I would certainly be anxious to have John (Preniczky) take it over or have a new trustee take it over."

Fest finances

Underneath all of the hoopla of Fall Festival activities lies an almost unnoticed facet of the annual celebration -- the dollars and cents that go in, and come out, of Fall Festival.

While participating organizations only have to worry about paying the 25 per cent of earnings to the Fall Fest board and the four per cent sales tax, the Fall Festival board must deal with a much more complex set of numbers.

For the period ending January 1987, the Fall Festival reflected cash receipts of $34,317.85, according to the board's treasurer, Ed Schulz. Those monies came from several sources, including entry fees, display, sales tax, concession commissions and interest income.

For the same period, the Festival showed a total of $32,432.47 for cash disbursements, Schulz said. Included in those costs were: publicity, capital improvements, entertainment, decorations, utilities, rentals, contracted services, supplies, sales tax, and The Gathering installment payment.

The excess receipt money over disbursements was $1,885.38, Schulz said. Because of increased bill payments for this year's Festival, that surplus may not appear on next year's financial statement, Schulz said.

Bennett ended any speculation that he might apply for the superintendent's position, saying "I will not be applying for that."

Trustee John Preniczky, who along with the three other trustees, voted in favor of the part-time administrators, said he was leaning towards running for re-election. "Right now, I'm interested in running again," he said. "So far, I've enjoyed what I'm doing and I remain interested."

Petition drive is on

Lakepointers push for rec park

BY PAUL GARGARO

If Lakepointe residents want to keep a proposed Meijer store from being erected at the intersection of Schoolcraft and Haggerty Roads, they had better come up with some alternatives quickly.

Plymouth Township stands the risk of a legal battle with Raymond Iafrate, owner of the 32-acre parcel. Iafrate has already been denied the option of industrially developing the tract. A denial of his proposal for commercial development would give Iafrate ample reason to sue the township.

Therefore, the township planning commission told a number of Lakepointe residents that if they could successfully petition the township board for a special election, the property could be purchased and set aside for recreational purposes.

Lakepointers jumped at the suggestion and already a petition drive is under way.

A committee of 30 concerned residents has been organized to look into options for the development of the parcel. "We would really like to see a township park or a YMCA recreation center go in there," explained Loraine Potochik, chairperson of the committee. "As it stands there aren't any community pools in the township.

"I've heard about Jane McCourt's effort to get interest stirred up for a swimming pool over at McClumpha park, Potochik said. "I think that's great. I'd love to get together with her and talk."

While the committee is optimistic and excited, Potochik stressed the fact that if a recreation facility was constructed it would be for the benefit of the whole township and not just the Lakepointe area.

Residents remember

Living in Lakepointe

"When I was little the vast majority of students at Ferrund were from Lakepointe," said Potochik. "It was great. Almost everyone walked to school.

"This has changed somewhat recently," continued Potochik. "Mainly it's because there just aren't as many kids in the neighborhood. As it stands, kids are coming in from all over Plymouth and Canton and this makes it hard for families outside of Lakepointe to involve themselves with Farrand.

"It's my hope that the young couples who have been settling in the area, will rekindle a community interest in Ferrund School," said Potochik.

When M-14 pushed westward, it cut right through the heart of Lakepointe,

"If things work out, I really want this to be for the whole community," said Potochik. "I don't like to think of Lakepointe as being exclusive. We're part of the township like any place else. Our strength is that people here are so willing to work together."

but rather than splitting up the community, it added another dimension.

Old Lakepointers now refer to the partitioned community as "Original Lakepointe" and "New Lakepointe".

If you've been away from Lakepointe for over 10 years, you might notice something different about the water tower and the fire station. They're not where used to be.

The structures were moved a short distance backwards from Schoolcraft Road to Wilcox Road.

"They put the tower on railroad tracks and just brought it back," recalls Elaine Roman, Potochik's mother and a 30 year resident of Lakepointe. "My husband took a whole bunch of pictures."

Despite changes like these and fluctuations in the population, Lakepointe has shown resiliency and endured.

Rocks beat Chiefs in season hoop opener

BY MARTY TUNGATE

After Detroit Martin Luther Ling decided it did not want to face the Salem girls basketball squad Thursday, Rocks' coach Fred Thomann looked for an alternative game.

That's when Rob Neu, Canton's young coach and a former Salem star for Thomann, invited the cross campus rivals to Phase III for a game. It was an even better contest to open the new campaign with.

It was Salem versus neighbor rival Canton, in a classic non-league showdown.

The Rocks beat the Chiefs in the unusual Thursday contest, 60-50, but a never say die Chief squad made strong effort to come back and challenge the highly ranked Rocks in game one of the 1987 season.

The first half ended with Salem on top 37-25.

"We didn't change our defense to stop Dena, the girls just started playing the way they we practiced," Canton coach Rob Neu said.

The second half was a real battle, as Jennifer Russel, and Fortier were all of over the Rocks, as Canton picked away at the Salem lead.

The Chiefs got as close as five points, but that's as close as they would get against the Rocks. Salem was able to effectively get back in its game and plow forth.

"It was a good game for us," Thomann said. "At times I thought we were really rolling, but then at others we couldn't roll at all."

Head led all scorers with 24, while Barb Krug tossed 12 points for the Rocks, and Jill Estey, and Kerry McBride each pumped in 10 points on the night.

The Chiefs were led by Susan Ferko, who had 11 points, Amanda Bell with 10 points, and Michelle Fortier came up with nine points in the contest.

"This was great opening game," Neu said. "You got play good teams early."

The Chiefs and the Rocks will meet again in 12 days, and it may turn out that the Rocks and the Chiefs will see each other four times this season.

Won't that be nice?

Large Chief tank squad getting ready

BY MARTY TUNGATE

The loss of eight good seniors to the Canton varsity girls swim team has taken its toll, as coach Hooker Wellman is preparing for a rebuilding year.

"We lost some real good swimmers and three divers. That's really going to hurt us," Wellman said.

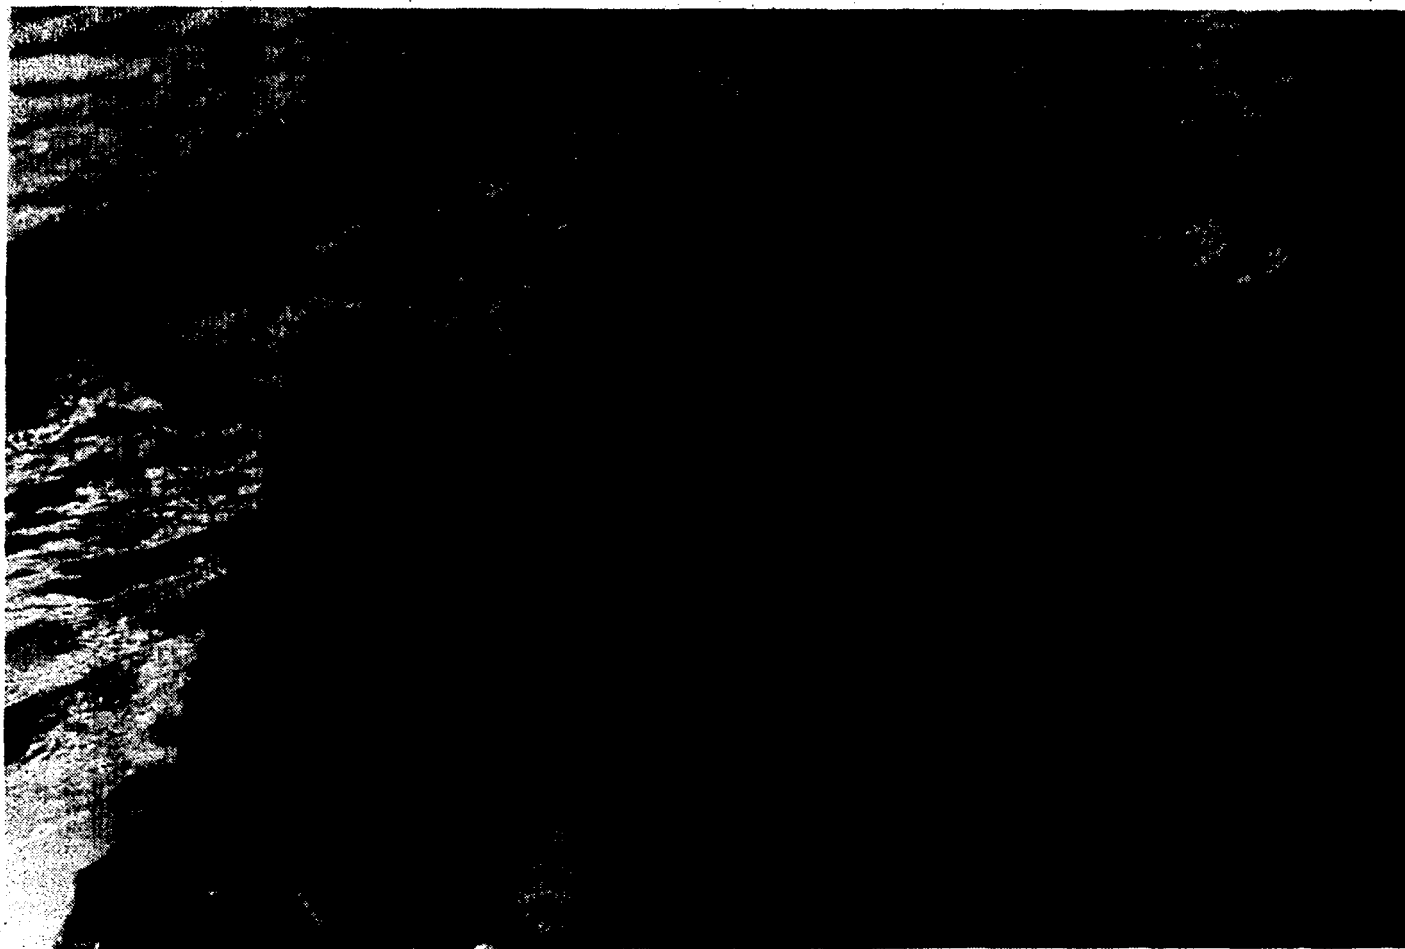

Although the Chiefs loss a chunk of their lineup they have the largest team in the history of Canton girls swimming.

The Chiefs will carry a team of 35 swimmers, and the numbers will help, according to Wellman.

"Such a large group of swimmers has brought out some real good swimmers," Wellman said.

With the loss of key swimmers, the younger swimmers are going to have to take on the leadership role. Nicole Drake, only a sophomore, placed sixth at last year's state meet. She and Cassie Cummings, who also placed in last year's state meet, will be back to aid the Chiefs.

The Chiefs will also be led by captains Daniell Dickenson, and Jackie Wojcik.

Rock tankers 'have good numbers'

BY MARTY TUNGATE

This could be an exciting year for the 1987 Salem girls swim team.

Veteran coach Chuck Olson is very optimistic about this year's group of swimmers.

year's team." Olson said. "Now we have to take that athletic talent and turn it into swimming talent."

The Rocks lost seven key seniors to graduation, and this year's team is about 50 per cent new to competitive swimming.

The Rocks will be carry a team of 40 girls, which, according to Olson, is a good size team.

"We have good numbers. This is a good sized group," Olson added.

One of the goals for the 1987 team, is to win the league title, as it is for all of the team in the Lakes division of the Western Lakes Activities Association (WLAA).

"We hope to contend with every team we come across, but the team to beat this year will be Stevenson," Olson said.

Livonia Stevenson has been a power in the WLAA for years. In fact the girls have never lost a dual or relay meet.

The Rock tankers hope to change all of that this year, and they also hope to send even more swimmers to the state meet.

Last year the Rocks sent three of their relay teams and their medley relay team to the state meet. This year the Rocks hope to repeat with their relay and medley teams, and also send some individuals to the state meet.

Olson is looking for big things from this year's squad, and especially from his tri-captains Tracy Meszaros, Jennifer Barr and Heather Bunch.

"This should be a good year for us if we were able to develop the girls athletic ability into their swimming," Olson concluded.

The Rocks tankers will close their swim year at Ypsilanti on Thursday, Sept. 10 at 7 p.m.

The Chiefs did not lose one varsity runner to graduation last year, and, according to head coach George Przygodski, it should be a banner year for the lady harriers.

"We have a real good team. The girls are really starting to develop as fine runners," Przygodski said.

According to Przygodski his top three runners are going to be underclass athletes.

Sophomore Lori Penland, junior Cindy Spessard, and first time runner junior Lynda Schendel are all running real well, he said.

"Lori, Lynda, and Cindy are running real well right now, and they should do a great job for us this year," Przygodski said.

One of the goals for the Chiefs this year, will be to repeat as Western Lakes Activities Association (WLAA) Western division champions.

"I think the team can repeat, but it's going to take a lot of hard work on the girls part," Przygodski added.

The leadership for the 1987 squad

will come from senior captains Sherry Figurski and Angie Miller.

"Sherry and Angie are super runners, and they're going to do a super job for us this year," Przygodski said.

Also aiding the Chiefs cause will be sophomore Cathy McCabe. "Cathy is doing a super job, she is going to fit into out plains nicely," Przygodski added.

According to the second year coach, his team should have a successful dual meet season.

"We have the talent, we just have to put it together," Przygodski concluded.

Rocks head coach Ken Johnson, who also coached the girls squad, feels he has his best boys team ever.

"This is the best group of kids I've ever had. They play all the aspects of the game well. This is going to be my best boys team ever," Johnson said.

The Rocks have a very experienced bunch of guys, and this should pay off for Johnson and his team, as his starting lineup will see eight seniors, two juniors, and one sophomore.

A large number of the team took part in the European Soviet Cup Tournament, and according to Johnson that is going to give his team a large edge this season.

"The boys brought back a lot of new drills that they learned while they were in Europe, and it has greatly improved their game as a whole," Johnson said.

Leading the team for the 1987 campaign will be captains, seinors David O'Malley and Randy Balconi.

"O'Malley, Balconi are great. They are tremendous soccer players, and they will really help the team out this year," Johnson said.

O'Malley and Balconi will also have a host of players to help back them up this season, as senior Denny Reynolds, sophomore Geoff Gold, senior Tim Stahl, who is returning from a year away from soccer, junior Marc Lipke, and back up senior goalie Don Koontz.

"This is the best passing team, the best ball control team, this is just the very best team that I've coached this season," Johnson said.

Another strong point for the Rocks this season will be their defense, according to the veteran coach.

"If for some reason the opposing team gets the ball down near our goal, our defense will be their to stop them. They are a very talented group," Johnson added.

The Rocks who have already started their season on a winning note -- they knocked off a highly ranked Brighton team 4-1 -- could have the best season in Johnson's history as coach at Salem.

Registration will be 7-9 p.m. on Wednesday and 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Referees are also needed. Stop by the registration center for information.

Canton netters experienced

BY JANET ARMSTRONG

It's a coach's dream -- getting back the entire squad from the past season. A coaches reality -- losing at least some of experienced team members. A coaches hope -- keeping the majority of varsity players on the team.

Also returning are Michelle Khurana, Sandy Bajer, Sherri Bajer, Alyssa Huth, Andrea Piggot, Leann Gurche, Melissa Sparkman, and Michelle Sparkman.

The Chiefs are going to have their hands full trying to improve upon last season's accomplishments, however.

Canton ended the season with a 10-3 dual match record, placing second in the Class A state regionals, and gaining a bid to the Class A state tennis finals, where it finished with seven points. That was good for somewhere around 17th place.

"We will at least be comparable with last year's team," said Michaels.

One of Canton's strong points -- other than the senior leadership -- is the number of players working out with the team, according to Michaels.

"We have a senior team," Michaels said. She added: "Our depth is a strong point for us."

It looks like even though the Chiefs are in a the tough Western Lakes Activities Association, they may just be one of this year's teams to beat.

Canton opens against cross-campus rival Salem High on Wednesday, Sept. 9 beginning at 4 p.m.

Veteran Canton girls tennis coach Carol Michaels doesn't have all her players back from last year, but she does have the majority of her team returning.

And that alone could make this a good season for the Chiefs.

The squad lost four varsity players to graduation -- Tina Heath, Jennifer Croll, Jenny Jessina, and Cindy Reska.

But returning this year are last year's number one singles player, Lynn Horvath, as well as Pam Penland, who will take over for Croll in the number two singles spot.

Saturday morning is for kids

"Dad!
"Wake up!"

Second only to Christmas morn's early eagerness, Fall Fest Saturday is big for my daughter.

Her young friends -- with their Dad in tow -- pop over early and then it's off to Kiwanis pancakes and sausage. It never fails... someone spills syrup on someone else and brave bees zero in on Sara's pancakes.

Jon usually finishes first and leads the charge over to watch the Optimists' Pet Contest. Jessica memorizes dog jokes all year long and can't wait for that part of the action between the "best-dressed pet" and the "most unusual pet" where the kids get to play stand-up comic.

The last dog-cat fight over, kids drag dads through the kiddie games, rides and the booths, nickle-diming us to death. A Civitan photo button is a must for each kid to prove they survived another Fall Festival. How can kids stomach all the cotton candy, pizza, pop, Grange donuts and other goodies.

Every year, they see friends or neighbors and the gaggle grows. Kristen and Beth joined in at the Growthworks games last year.

Suddenly, sirens signal the start of the antique fire engine parade and the kids race over for a prime vantage point to see the bright red machines. Once, they were even lucky enough to get a last-minute invite to ride one antique engine.

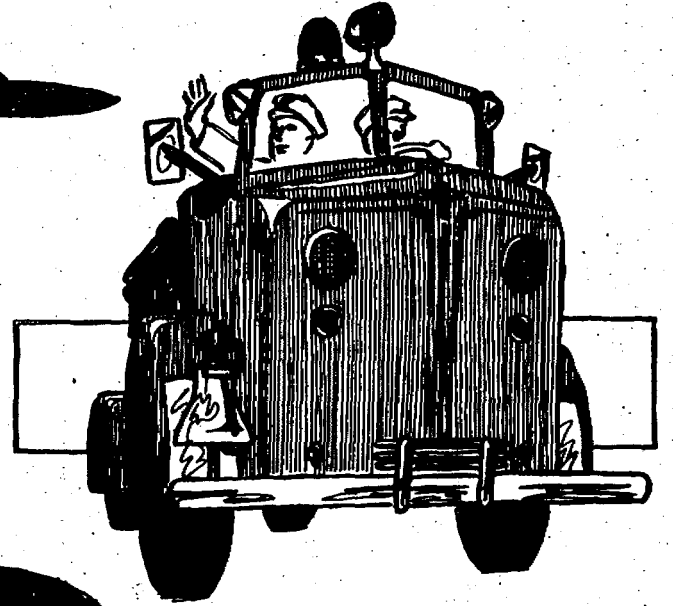

Drenching fun is next as the waterball and water pumping contests provide Festival crowds with a way to beat the heat.

Fall Festival Saturday is for kids.

It's a tradition that our community has offered our family.

See you there.
