

BB genius, civic activist, Hough dead at 85

BY W. EDWARD WENDOVER
Once upon a time, he "owned" this town.

In retrospect, Cass S. Hough — who died Monday at 85 — handled that ownership well, even when he surprisingly gave it up to move his Daisy Manufacturing Company to Rogers, AR in 1958.

But Hough's major decisions often materialized only in retrospect.

His major accomplishments were usually more immediate. Like becoming the man to break the sound barrier or holding Michigan pilot's license number one.

"He always had maintained an interest in Plymouth, even after moving to Rogers and then Naples,

Under right-to-know laws

Schools cited, finish training

BY KEN VOYLES
© PCCC Inc. 1990

In the wake of two recent dumping incidents and three years after being cited for violating state law, the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools completed right-to-know training last week for custodial/maintenance employees at Salem High School.

School district administrators have said that the training, as required by the Michigan Occupational Safety and Health Act 154 (PA 1974), had already been given to all district staff, but that employees at Salem had not "signed off" after the sessions.

Salem staff members who attended last week's training session dispute that contention, however, and claim that last week was the first time they were given a chance to sign off on the right-to-know information.

"It was not the employees fault at all," said one Salem staff member who requested anonymity. "That was the school district's fault."

"It's really something fairly new, but the school system has taken it lightly," he added.

The training, according to staff members, consisted of reviewing a seven-minute film and a variety of paperwork on the use and disposal of hazardous chemicals present in the workplace.

Ray Hoedel, the district's associate superintendent for business, said Tuesday that "all" district employees had been previously trained on the state law.

"We had a session before," said Hoedel, who added that the district brought in a consultant to provide the training after the law went into effect. The district also put together a hand-

City's Vogras retiring

BY PHILIP TARDANI

Kenneth Vogras started working for the City of Plymouth in 1956 on a garbage truck and went on to become director of public works in 1966.

Now he's headed for early retirement.

"There will never be anybody as dedicated as I was," Vogras said Tuesday, shortly after City Manager Gordon Jaeger announced Vogras's retirement. "This is the end of an era."

"This town will never be the same," Jaeger said Vogras will not be going back to work.

"The details haven't been worked out, but it (the retirement) will be immediately," Jaeger said.

Vogras, 53, said he is taking the rest of his vacation time -- about five weeks -- before the retirement goes into effect.

Vogras confirmed that he will no longer be reporting for work at the Kenneth F. Vogras Department of Public Works building, which was dedicated to him in the spring of 1989.

City approves bag-tag rates

BY PHILIP TARDANI

It's a buck a bag, a buck a tag. The Plymouth City Commission set $1 rates for the upcoming bag-tag program during Monday's regular commission meeting.

The commission also awarded a bid to the Bland Bag Company to manufacture the bags.

City manager Gordon Jaeger said it will likely be another month before residents will have to follow the new guidelines.

"It appears that this program will go into effect Nov. 1," he said.

Paul Sincock, assistant city manager said it will be that long before the bags are ready. They will be printed with the seal of the city.

When the bag-tag program does take effect, city residents will have to put their rubbish in the bags or mark their trash container with a tag.

"No bag or no tag and we will not collect your trash," Sincock said.

The intention is for residents to cut down on the amount of waste they put out to the curb by taking appropriate materials to the city recycling center, where they are disposed of free, said city officials.

Rising landfill disposal costs and increasing environmental awareness have prompted many municipalities to look at ways of cutting down on the amount of waste going to the landfill.

The bag-tag program is one example; mandatory curbside recycling — a program Plymouth Township has implemented — is another.

Jaeger quits PCAC

BY PHILIP TARDANI

Three months after hiring a new leader the Plymouth Community Arts Council (PCAC) is without an executive director.

Kay Jaeger, who was given the job in June, resigned from the post last week because of a misunderstanding in vacation time.

"I came on board with the understanding that I would have time to travel with (my husband) Gordon," she said. "I think there was a difference of opinion in my contract and I felt it wasn't going to be resolved."

Jaeger said she wanted more flexibility in vacation time, balancing it against long work weeks. She conceded that it would have come out to more than the two weeks allotted in her contract.

"I think I'm going to pursue other avenues of the arts," Jaeger said.

Council President Carolyn Simons said the PCAC will likely look for an interim director for the moment.

"We're not quite ready to seek a full-time director," she said.

Church additions on hold

BY PHILIP TARDANI

Additions to a City of Plymouth church are on hold pending Plymouth Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) action.

Architects representing Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, located at 1160 Penniman, will go to the ZBA early next month to request joint use approval, according to planning commissioner Doug Miller.

Joint use classification would allow the church to provide fewer parking spaces than the city administration deems necessary, Miller said.

Church officials went before the planning commission last Wednesday for site plan approval of a two-story addition containing offices, six classrooms and two assembly halls.

The application was tabled when the church requested joint use classification, which only the ZBA can grant, Miller said.

The city building department has recommended denying the church site plan approval because of inadequate parking.

City building inspector James Penn calculated that Our Lady would need to provide 732 parking spaces to accommodate those attending church, classrooms and offices. Only 295 are provided in plans, he said.

Miller said the church is arguing that people will not be attending the church, classrooms and offices at the same time and that therefore the number of necessary parking requirements is much less than 732.

A joint use classification would confirm that, he said.

Driver drunk in accident

BY SCOTT DANIEL

A driver involved in the Aug. 25 death of a Redford Township man in Canton was legally drunk at the time of the accident, according to Canton Police.

Steven K. Barnes, 21, of Redford Township died Aug. 25 as a result of injuries after being struck by two automobiles while attempting to cross Haggerty Road, north of Cherry Hill Road in Canton.

Barnes was first hit near the left-hand turn lane of southbound Haggerty Road. The impact knocked him into the northbound lane of Haggerty Road where he was run over by a second vehicle, said police.

According to witnesses, the driver of the first vehicle stopped to aid Barnes, but the second vehicle kept on going. The identification of the second driver remains unknown, police said.

A blood test of the first driver was sent to Lansing for alcohol analysis after the incident.

Canton Police Officer Pat Nemecek said the analysis revealed a blood alcohol level of .18.

He added that a level of .10 and above is considered to be legally intoxicated in Michigan.

Nemecek said any charges against the driver will not be determined until an autopsy of Barnes is completed. He said the autopsy should be completed by the end of the week.

Pending school board approval

New principal named for Canton

BY KEN VOYLES

Pending formal approval by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education, Canton High School has a new principal.

District officials said Monday that Tom MacKenzie, who is currently a high school principal in Ft. Collins, CO, has been tapped for the post at Canton.

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education is expected to formally name MacKenzie to the position

Monday (Sept. 24).

"We're really excited," said Errol Goldman, the district's director of personnel. "We see a lot of good things for the district and Canton High School with Mr. MacKenzie's appointment."

MacKenzie, 52, has been a principal in the Ft. Collins Public Schools for five years.

Prior to that MacKenzie spent 14 years with the Ann Arbor Public Schools as a teacher, counselor and administrator. He has also worked in the Grand Haven schools system as a teacher and spent time as an instructor in four other school districts, including the Portage Public Schools.

MacKenzie was chosen from among nine candidates recently interviewed for the post. He replaces former Canton principal, Tom Tattan, who became the district's director of secondary education earlier this year.

Ken Jacobs, an area coordinator at Centennial Educational Park (CEP) has been the interim principal at Canton since the start of the new school year two weeks ago.

For United Way

Fund drive starts fast

BY KEN VOYLES

The 1990 Plymouth Community United Way fund campaign, which officially kicked off Sept. 4, is well on its way to reaching this year's goal of $500,000.

According to Marie Morrow, executive director of the Plymouth Community United Way, the campaign effort has already netted $35,000, or 15 per cent of the goal, through a "Pacesetter" drive in August and other recent contributions.

"We're off to a great start," Morrow said. "We're ahead of where we were last year at this time."

The campaign, chaired this year by Chris Boyle, president of Adistra, runs through November.

Funds from the campaign go to support a variety of local agencies, among them, the American Red Cross, the Boy Scouts, First Step, Growth Works, the Girl Scouts, the Michigan Cancer Foundation, the Plymouth Community Council on Aging, the Plymouth Community Family YMCA, Plymouth Family Service, Plymouth Opportunity House, and the Plymouth Salvation Army.

Other local individuals leading the campaign this year include: John Wisniewski, vice chairperson; Al Stevans, industrial chair; Trudie Noble, business chair; Esther Hulsing, residential chair; Dave Breeder, clubs and organizations chair; Pat Thomas, government chair; Chuck Portelli, education chair; and Dave Williamson, professional chair.

In Canton

Historic barns to be saved

BY SCOTT DANIEL

Part of Canton's farming history will live on.

The Canton Board of Trustees voted 5-1 last Tuesday to allocate $46,100 for relocating barns from the Palmer and Hasselbach farms to the Cherry Hill Historic District.

Tom Yack, Robert Shefferly, John Preniczky, Elaine Kirchgatter and Philip LaJoy voted in favor of relocating the barn while Canton Treasurer Gerald Brown dissented. Canton Clerk Loren Bennett was absent from the meeting.

"The barns represent the heritage of the township," said Canton Historic District Commission Chairperson David Artley. "It's a once in a lifetime opportunity."

The Palmer barn, located on Warren Road between Beck and Ridge roads, is about 75-80 years old, said Artley. It will be relocated to the 22-acre district "sometime after Thanksgiving and before the middle of January," he said.

The Palmer structure will be renovated to provide a barn theatre and events site for the township, Artley said.

"I think this is our opportunity to take a stand as a community," said Shefferly. "I want to see it go through (passed by the board)."

Brown disagreed with Shefferly, saying, "I have a problem with spending $46,000 of taxpayer money on it."

The cost of relocating and making the Palmer Barn functional falls under three main categories, Artley said. He said the cost of moving the barn, consultant fees and utility hookups for the barn will make up the bulk of the costs.

In addition, Artley said constructing a foundation and basement for the barn, which measures 60 feet by 35 feet and is 35 feet tall, will be a priority. He said it will also have to be brought up to code and have a new coat of paint.

"It has to be cleaned up," Artley said. "It has been used as a farming barn for all these years."

Three smaller barns from Hasselbach Farm, located at Van Born and Hannan roads, will also be moved to the site, Artley said. The major difference, he said, will be that commission volunteers will tear the barns down piece by piece.

"We are going to knock them down, number the parts and reassemble them," Artley said, "just like the old Canton barn raisers use to do."

The three barns range in height from 13 to about 28 feet and measure from 22 by 20 feet each, Artley said. He said the barns will be stored and reassembled next spring at the district.

The three barns were donated to the township by Waste Management Inc., of Canton. Artley said the township has to have the barns disassembled in the next two weeks because of the firm's landfill expansion plans.

The relocation of the Palmer and Hasselbach barns will provide a "snapshot" of history, he said.

"The history of Canton is farming," Artley said. "The barns are part of the heritage of the township."

At Fall Festival

Scrap balloon launch

EDITOR:

Given the great effort The Plymouth-Canton Community has made in raising public awareness concerning environmental issues and in promoting pro-environment practices, such as recycling, it seems totally out of character that a community event, such as the Fall Festival, would be kicked off by a 500 count balloon launch.

Apparently, the Fall Festival Board does not see the potential environmental hazards, or simply the "garbage" that those balloons become once they fall to the ground.

Sure the rising balloons were a crowd pleaser and the kids had a great time, but I wonder if anyone thought of the problems that could have been caused by the balloons getting tangled in power lines and antennas, birds and other wildlife getting caught in the balloons (or trying to eat them), and the trash those balloons become once they fall to the ground or get tangled in trees.

It is very romantic to envision those Plymouth-Canton balloons floating forever, but in reality, those lovely balloons do come down.

I hope the Fall Festival Board can come up with a better way to "spice up" the opening day next year.

Buses empty; children walk

EDITOR:

We used a pedometer; they used an odometer. We measured the distance the children would walk; they measured the distance a car would drive. Consequently, our children must walk over a mile and one half to school while the bus they are not allowed to ride is three-quarters empty.

They can compromise guidelines and violate regulations. They are the Plymouth-Canton Schools Board of Education. We are only the parents worried about children walking on dark, foggy mornings as the school bus passes them by.

I would like to comment on the new "stripe design" recently applied to the police department vehicles. In short, ugly!

I've seen similar designs on other police cars throughout the country and they were always in "hick towns"!!

At $300 a car, it's another example of how our taxes are squandered.

With malice toward none

Dear Ed:

Edward H. McNamara, county executive
Wayne County

DEAR ED:

I had hoped to ask you this question in person when you spoke to the Canton Economic Club at 8 a.m. tomorrow at Geneva Presbyterian Church. (Tickets are $5 and are still available by calling 454-5427.)

But since you're sending your deputy, Mike Duggan, instead, I'll ask the question here:

Where does Mike Duggan get off making derogatory public comments about the citizens' who have banded together to fight the proposed Metropolitan Airport Expansion?

Sure, it's frustrating for Duggan to face opposition to this project, but the citizens are his employer and the process of placing the county's bond issue up to a vote is the public's democratic right. (A similar move killed a proposed senior citizen high-rise for the Wilcox site in the City of Plymouth 15 years ago.)

But a public official -- especially one who's rumored to be next in line for your job after you become governor -- ought to be smart enough and sensitive enough to promote the issue without attacking the opponents.

Personally, I support the Metro Airport expansion (the I-275 entrance will help Plymouth-Canton-Northville). However, it's hard to support cheap shots at the opponents.

SINCERELY,
ED

P.S. So why are you sending Duggan out when you were originally on tap tomorrow? It would seem best to keep Duggan's personality under a rock on the airport issue at least. Sorry -- but under the circumstances, I'm not getting out of bed for Duggan on this. Let me know next time YOU'RE in The Plymouth-Canton Community.

Don't be rude

Merchants: Fest is great

EDITOR:

Last weekend I visited my second Fall Festival. I would like to congratulate all the people responsible for such a fine festivity in such a unique town.

I know such a function would not be possible without a tremendous amount of voluntary help and cooperation from many. And I would like to thank each and every one of them, whomever they may be.

The only complaint I would have to deliver, an encounter I had with a merchant. My 10-year-old son collected miscellaneous beverage cans left in the street and such during his visit to the Festival, and on our way home he asked if he could stop at (a downtown store) and redeem his cans for money. When we took his cans into the store, there were at least 20 customers standing in line waiting to be served. Most of which had a cold beverage to purchase in their hand.

When my son asked where they would check in his empty containers, he was told in a very rude manner, "We will not accept your cans, we do not have the space." When I pointed out to the owner that they sold returnable cans and collected our deposit money on the cans, therefore they should take the containers back, I was told they cannot and will not accept any of the containers, maybe if I came back tomorrow they might take them, but the owner doubted it.

I would like to have written this letter just to thank those responsible for a wonderful contribution to our fine community. But there has to be one in every crowd to foul everything up.

I certainly hope the Fall Festival continues in its usual fine manner, but I hope the selfish, lazy merchant would understand that if the Fall Festival was not in town during the time it is, they would not have the extra business created by the Festival, and they also would not get the exposure they receive. Which they should consider a positive gain and not a hindrance.

"Oh, I wish it would rain down, down on me. Yes, I wish it would rain, rain on me now."
Phil Collins

Old Phil never lived in Canton. Every time the township is hit with a major rain storm several hundred of its residents are flooded. The recent storm, which dumped about four inches of rain in 90 minutes, was no exception.

At least 150 residents recently complained to Canton officials about the flooding from the Sept. 7 storm. Windsor Park, Carriage Hills, Brookside and Mayfair subdivisions were most affected by the flooding.

As much as 18 inches of water were reported in some basements, according to Municipal Services Director Aaron Machnik. He said the average was four to five inches.

As a result of the flooding, Machnik addressed and fielded questions from angry residents at the Canton Board of Trustees meeting last Tuesday.

The reason for the flooded basements, he explained, is that footing drains, in the older homes of those subdivisions, are connected to the sanitary sewer system. Machnik said the footing drains should be hooked up to the storm sewer system.

"Water fills the sanitary sewer system and it backs up," he recently said. "That system isn't designed to handle that much water."

To solve the problem, the township, in association with the Western Townships Utilities Authority (WTUA), is constructing a "super sewer," Machnik said.

He said the super sewer, with a price tag of $80 million, will run along Haggerty Road and have retention basins. The basins will be near Carriage Hills and the intersection of Michigan Avenue and I-275, Machnik said.

"We believe it will solve the problem," he said.

The super sewer isn't the immediate answer, Machnik added. He said because of the scale of the project, completion won't be for another two years.

The explanation didn't go over well with residents.

"Your promise of wait two years isn't very helpful to us right now," one man said. "We have lost thousands of dollars."

"In two years, I won't be here," said a woman.

Other residents had different complaints.

"You haven't maintained the drains," another man shouted at the board. "Nobody has done anything."

"I live in a cesspool."

"Do you know what it's like to clean raw sewage out of your basement?" asked another man. "I do it every year."

Until the super sewer project is complete, Canton will institute a sump pump program to target frequently flooded homes. The pumps will take water out of the sanitary system and stop the flooding. Hopefully.

Watch that speed

Be forewarned: If you're traveling on Beck Road between North Territorial and Ann Arbor Road the speed limit is 25 mph.

That's what the local law enforcement agency says, anyway.

Plymouth Township Police Chief Carl Berry says residential complaints on that stretch of the road -- which is gravel -- have prompted the men and women in blue to enforce a 25 mph speed limit there.

"We've had complaints that there's speeding out there and we're doing selective enforcement," he said.

This apparently caught some people by surprise, who claim that the speed limit on Beck Road is 45 mph. To further confuse things, while Beck is posted at 45 on the concrete stretch that crosses Five Mile Drive, there are no signs on the gravel part.

So what is the speed limit? Well, that depends.

According to Robert Mahoney of the Wayne County Division of Roads, the county does not post a limit on gravel roads because it is impossible to guarantee a safe minimum speed limit.

One day, he says, the gravel road may be smooth enough for 55 mph traffic. After a good rain, however, driving at a speed of 20 mph may be dangerous.

On the beat

By Phillip Tardani

By posting a specific limit (even one as low as 20 mph), Mahoney said, the county would imply that it is always safe to travel at such a speed, when in fact this is not the case.

"On a given road, you cannot assure anyone that they can drive at a particular speed at a particular time," he said.

State law provides a way out of this predicament: don't post anything and make the limit depend on what shape the road is in, up to 55 mph.

"State law says if there's no speed limit, you drive at a speed consistent with the conditions of the road up to 55 mph," Mahoney said.

This is where the police come in. They're the ones who decide what a reasonable speed is.

And according to 35th District Court Chief Judge John MacDonald, Carl Berry's officers are right.

"I think that's basically a residential area," he said.

So the township police are saying: "Slow down, this is a neighborhood you're tearing through at 50 mph."

And as long as the local judge agrees with them, motorists are a lot better off keeping their speed down to 25 on that stretch of road.

Our future may be riding on "vision 2010"

The school district is embarking on a journey, a journey into the future. It is a trip fraught with possible reward and dangers.

To get an idea of what that future will look like the board of education and members of the newly formed blue ribbon study committee looking toward a "vision 2010" huddled Monday with Dr. William Banach, director of the Institute for Future Studies at Macomb Community College.

Banach, who is well known for his skills in assimilating current trends and connecting them with what will happen down the road, painted a somber but enlightening picture of the path ahead for education in this country.

"You can't develop a strategic plan and put it on a shelf," Banach told the gathering Monday.

Any strategic plan like the one the district wants to develop through its blue ribbon group is heavily impacted by external events and trends, he said.

Institutions, like the school district, all too often look inward when planning for the future, but Banach

In the margin

By Ken Voyles

said the "periscope" must look outside to the environment and society in which we live.

The top 10 educational issues in 1990, said Banach, are: children in low esteem; shaping the century ahead; cutting corners; ethnic beachheads; leadership by poll; competitions and contests; rubber yardsticks; money; preoccupied parents; and getting through the book.

He added that the characteristics of the "new age" included: external forces triggering change; synthesis replacing analysis; quality replacing quantity; employees attitudes becoming a critical factor; and the profound impact of public opinion.

He also asked those present to ponder whether the goals set at a recent national educational summit were goals simply for educators or society as a whole.

The goals as outlined include:

Every child starting school ready to learn; the per cent of high school graduates increasing to 90 per cent (currently it's about 75 per cent); assessing student performance so diplomas mean something; getting U.S. students back on top in science and math; transforming every adult into a literate worker and citizen; and providing a disciplined, drug-free environment for all students.

That's an awful lot to swallow during a one-hour lecture, and it seems a bit esoteric for the layperson, but the information presented has important ramifications for what the Plymouth-Canton schools want to do with its new blue ribbon group.

Yes, that group is concerned with looking ahead to potential bond issues for new facilities and equipment, but the district is also asking the residents who have volunteered for the task force to look at a "vision 2010" and prepare the district for the 21st Century.

To get at that vision the study group will be divided into three sub-committees (involving more than 40 residents) looking at existing facilities, new facilities and a third group looking specifically at the idea of a "vision 2010."

What started originally as just a bond proposal discussion has clearly gone way beyond even the expectations of those involved.

Will it be possible to achieve this vision 2010? We may not know for another two years. That's when the committees are expected to finalize their work and make some specific recommendations to the board.

It will be a long, arduous journey, but the nature of education in Plymouth-Canton may be at stake.

On the surface that makes the project well worth the effort.

See you in 1992.

Cass Hough maintained close ties to community

FL" said his son, Cass Hough Jr.

Hough was known to call cub reporters at The Crier and correct an historic date or reference. Several months ago, when a Crier columnist wrote about the theft of an antique BB gun from The Plymouth Landing, Hough called The Crier to volunteer searching for a replacement air rifle donation.

The Daisy Manufacturing Co. genius's finest hour may well have been in 1984 when, at age 79, he led a small group of Daisy managers to buy back the company which had been sold to a conglomerate in 1975. He was still serving as the company's board of directors chairman at his death and frequently visited Rogers for company meetings.

"He always maintained a very active interest in Daisy and shooting safety," said his son.

Hough's friends recall him as a gentleman and a good businessman.

"Daisy will miss the steering wheel," said Margaret Dunning. "He was a good businessman -- being born with the business in him." (Dunning's and her parents' names share philanthropic roles with Hough's family at both the Dunning-Hough Library and the Dunning Historical Museum's Daisy Exhibit.)

Ralph Lorenz, of the Mayflower

Hotel, said of Hough, "He was real gentleman."

"When I'd heard he was the first man to fly faster than sound -- a guy from our town -- I was quite elated," Lorenz recalled.

Edwin "Bud" Schrader, of the funeral home family, said Hough "meant a lot to our community."

"He was a civic-minded man," he recalled. "When they wanted to raise our water rates a lot, he was quite articulate."

But on Nov. 5, 1957, Hough startled town by announcing that Daisy -- by far the biggest employer -- would leave the "Air Rifle Capital of the World" and move to Rogers. "Dismay and resentment followed the announcement, especially on the part of older employes and merchants in the community whose businesses were affected," wrote the late historian, Sam Hudson.

Bill Sliger, former general manager of The Plymouth Mail and later publisher of The Northville Record, recalls Hough's announcement.

"I'd heard rumors of Daisy leaving town. Cass kept denying it," Sliger said. "But he promised me he'd let me know if that changed."

In 1956 Sliger left The Mail to buy The Record. "One night he called me. He said, 'Bill, this is Cass. I called to

LINDA LANGMESSER

City clerk named new

BY PHILIP TARDANI

A familiar face at city hall in Plymouth is now city clerk.

Linda Langmesser, who has been deputy clerk for more than six years, was promoted to the clerk's post by the Plymouth City Commission on Sept. 4. One of Langmesser's primary duties is organizing elections in the city. The clerk oversees the process and makes sure everything is aboveboard, a sometimes nerve-wracking job, she said.

"The whole election process is very detailed," she said. "There's a lot of pressure with an election; you don't want to mess it up."

Langmesser and city building inspector James Penn are also checking the 1990 census figures that many in the city believe are low.

Group copies life

Middle Ages alive in today's society

BY SCOTT DANIEL

Picture a time when knights were clad in shining armor, when a king ruled with the help of his lords and battles were fought for honor.

The Middle Ages ended nearly 500 years ago. Or did they?

The Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA) is an international association that re-enacts the Middle Ages for fun and learning.

"We try to copy life as it was and should have been," said Ken Reddington, a City of Plymouth resident. "We focus on the nicer things of life in the Middle Ages."

The group recreates the costumes,

culture, manners and the skills of arts and crafts of the Middle Ages. A major portion of SCA's re-enactments is the staging of battles between "kingdoms" or members of a "house."

"I make chain mail armor for the battles," said Reddington, 29, a SCA member for four years. "I always wanted to have an armor suit, so I decided to make one."

Combatants are required by the group to wear protective armor in all battles. Reddington said that full head gear (A steel helmet), neck, spine, elbows, wrists and hands must be protected in battles.

He added that weapons such as broadswords, axes, maces and shields are used in the battles. Most of the weapons are made of rattan, a bamboo product, and are wrapped in duck tape to avoid injuring combatants, Reddington said.

In SCA battles weapons are imagined to be real. Fighters "loose" limbs in the battle if they are struck by a sword or axe.

Honor plays a big role in the battles, Reddington said. He added that each fighter judges whether he has been wounded or killed.

"We put a stop to anyone who gets a little too overzealous in the fighting," said another SCA member, Mark Schaufele, 25, of Plymouth Township.

The biggest battle of the year for the "Middle Kingdom," which includes Michigan, is the Pensic War. The war pits the Middle Kingdom and its allies against the Eastern Kingdom, Schaufele said.

"The winner gets the 'war horn,'" he said. "The loser gets Pittsburgh. It's kind of a standing joke in the SCA."

The war and re-enactment is held every year in Pennsylvania for two weeks in August. Schaufele said 6,500 people attended the event this year and as many as 1,100 of them participated in the war.

"I wouldn't miss it," he said. Fighting is competitive in the battle, but winning the war is the main purpose of the event, Schaufele said.

"I play to play," he said, "not necessarily to win."

The atmosphere of SCA events is a big reason for participation, Schaufele said.

"Friendship is the biggest draw for me," he said. "I have made some good friends and met people from all over the U.S., Europe and Australia."

Reddington agreed with Schaufele that the atmosphere is an attractive part of the group.

"It's one big family," he said. "I good to go away for a weekend and be with people that are friendly, helpful and polite."

"It's a family atmosphere," Reddington continued, "It's my social life."

Besides the atmosphere, Reddington and Schaufele said that studying the Middle Ages makes participation in the group a learning experience.

Each SCA member chooses a time and place in pre-1650 history to study. Members create a persona from their studies and participate in group events as that character.

Canton resident Charles Stockton, 40, said he has been involved with the group for about 10 years. In that time, he said he has developed a persona named "Charles the Good Bow."

The medieval character is a cross bow maker, Stockton said. He added that during the re-enactments each participant is responsible for acting as a real person would have in the Middle Ages to promote authenticity.

Stockton said he constructed a cross bow to accurately portray "Charles the Good Bow." The bow, made from a pattern, took about a month to complete, he said.

All the materials used by SCA members are authentic, said Schaufele, who's period name is "Jerrad Thabin." Everything from feasts to "garb" in the re-enactment is hand made.

"Members do anything that would have been done in the Middle Ages," Schaufele said. He added that he is learning needlepoint to add decoration to his costume for the events.

To make the re-enactments authentic, Reddington said that members often specialize in crafts such as armor and stalinglass making, woodworking and illumination (book illustrations).

"Some of our members become 'Laurels' (or masters) in their art or craft," Reddington said. "These people are so good they could have made a living back then at it."

Mark Schaufele, of Plymouth Township, said friendship is a big part of the Society for Creative Anachronism. The group has members in North America, Europe, Australia and Japan. (Crier photo by Eric Lukasik)

Tell it to Phyllis

By Phyllis Redfern

It must be fall. Everyday life is starting to get back to some kind of routine. (I would say normal, but I'm not sure what that means.)

The beginning of another school year means getting up early every morning, having dinner on time, making sure everyone has clean clothes and something to take for lunch -- I know. I'm starting to sound like a mom. After doing it for years, it just comes natural.

There are many mixed feelings that go along with sending a kid off to college. If the check book balance doesn't go in the red paying tuition, it will pay for all the "supplies" they need at school. Although we know we are going to miss them, it is definitely time for them to go back to school before we are accused of child abuse (which is highly unlikely since not only are most of the kids bigger than their parents, they are in much better shape).

As I said goodbye to the kid across the street as he left for MSU and his first time away from home, memories of taking my kids up to school for that first year came to mind. Other than putting them on the bus the first day of kindergarten, that was one of the hardest things I ever did.

Suddenly I'm faced with the fact that this is the last year I will have to deal with a kid going back to school. Thank heavens! Do you know how much energy a mom has to use worrying about a kid going back to school? When they are little you worry about them getting on the right bus, remembering their lunch and dumb things like how they will get along with the other kids (like they've never played with these kids before). When they go off to college you worry about them getting lost on campus, if they will eat any decent meals and how they will get along with their roommates (sometimes a friend they've gone to school with for years).

I think in both cases it means we worry about -- how can they possibly get along without us. It's amazing what they can do for themselves when they have to. It's also amazing how quickly we forget what they are capable of doing.

For his last and final year of putting me through this fun stuff, my son not only waited until the last minute to find housing, he decided to start packing the morning of the day he was planning to leave. By late afternoon when he loaded everything in the car, kissed me goodbye and drove off, I was relieved that he was gone and concerned that he didn't need my input in deciding what to take.

When he arrived back home after only being gone a half hour, he was upset because of car problems.

That's when the worry started again. He found a place that would work on his car the following morning and he could drive up to school from there. All I asked was that he let me know when his car was fixed and he left town, and since I didn't know which apartment he was living in at school and there was no phone, I thought it would be nice if he let me know when he got moved in.

All morning I waited for his phone call before I called the mechanic and learned the car was fine and he had left for school hours ago. When I got home that night there was a note informing me that the car was fixed and what time it was as he was leaving for school.

Two days later I finally heard from the kid -- he got to school okay; the apartment was overcrowded so he moved to another one where he was sleeping on a mattress on the floor; and his classes were messed up but he was getting it taken care of.

Thank God for not blessing me with eight more kids.

The Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce's annual dinner meeting, slated for Nov. 8, will take on a new look with an evening auction.

Heading the steering committee for this year's event is Chamber President Harold Bergquist and Board Member Wayne Daniels.

The evening will include bidding and silent auctions as well as the social and official chamber agendas.

Volunteers are being recruited to assist with this year's event. Anyone interested in helping should call 453-1540.

CULTURE & ARTS

The Crier
PLUS

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra will begin its 45th anniversary season this October. The orchestra will perform everything from Beethoven to the "Phantom of the Opera."

PSO opens with Beethoven

BY KEN VOYLES

The 45th anniversary season of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra (PSO) kicks off with an opening gala concert featuring the music of Ludwig Van Beethoven and continues with shows through April, 1991.

The season opener -- a "Beethoven Festival" -- is set for Oct. 12 at 8 p.m. in the Salem High School Auditorium.

Featured soloists will be the St. Clair Trio, performing Beethoven's "Triple Concerto." The trio includes Emmanuelle Boisvert, concertmaster of the DSO, Marcy Chanteaux, assistant principal cello of the DSO, and pianist Pauline Martin.

Other works on the program that night include "Overture to Coriolan," and Beethoven's No. 5 symphony.

Tickets are $10 for adults, $9 senior citizens and $5 students. They are available (as for all concerts) at Beitner Jewelry in Plymouth; Evola Music Center, Plymouth; Orin Jewelers, Northville; Bookstall on the Main, Northville; and Hammell Music, Livonia.

Also, for further ticket information call the PSO office at 451-2112. Tickets can be purchased at the box office at the auditorium 30 minutes prior to each performance.

A Gala Afterglow is planned after the opening concert from 10 p.m. to midnight at the Embassy Suites in Livonia and features champagne, piano entertainment, hors d'oeuvres, desserts and a cash bar. Afterglow tickets are $10.

The PSO's second show, "Jazz It Up," will be held on Nov. 9 and features jazz flutist Alexander Zonjic. Among the performances will be "Living It Up," by Ruzzynski and Dvorak's Symphony No. 8. Also planned are various jazz ensemble selections.

Tickets for that show -- it also starts at 8 p.m. -- are $10 adults, $9 seniors and $5 students.

A blockbuster season for PSO

Then it's time to ring in the holidays with "Messiah Selections," an 8 p.m. PSO concert on Dec. 14 featuring the Plymouth Community Chorus in a joyous sing-a-long.

Besides selections from Handel's "Messiah" the PSO and chorus will perform Hermann's "Christmas Fantasy," and Chase's "Christmas Favorites."

Tickets, which must be purchased in advance to ensure seating, are $12 adults and seniors and $8 for students.

Next year's schedule begins with a "Solid Gold Pops Benefit" on March 15-16 at the Fox Hills Country Club-Golden Fox and features guest artist Luis Maldonado, euphonium.

Among the selections planned are Webber's "Phantom of the Opera," Lowden's arrangement of "Les Miserables," Strauss' "Emperor Waltzes," Bizet's "L'arlesienne Suite No. 2," and Sousa's "Stars and Stripes."

Tickets for the benefit are $25 for adults and $12.50 for students.

The PSO's finale -- "Cello Primo" -- is slated for April 12 (also at 8 p.m. at Salem) and features guest performer Norman Fischer, cello.

Among the selections will be Bach's "Suite No. 3," Elgar's "Cello Concerto," and Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra." Tickets for that show are $10 adults, $9 seniors and $5 students.

The PSO is led by Russell Reed, long time music director and conductor.

Reed said the "variety" and "polished performances" expected during the group's 45th year will make it a true "blockbuster" season.

Help the orchestra

Residents of The Plymouth-Canton Community can help the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra (PSO) through the Plymouth Symphony Society, a group dedicated to supporting the PSO each and every year.

The society seeks donations ranging from under $25 to $1,000. Residents can become an Encore Donor, for example, for $25, or join the Maestro's Circle for a $1,000 donation.

For further details on how to help the PSO by joining the Plymouth Symphony Society call 451-2112.

Russell Reed will direct the orchestra again this year. He said this season should be a "blockbuster."

This year the festival is set for Sept. 29-30 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on both days.

The festival will feature street performers, booths offering arts, crafts, antiques and collectibles, food and other refreshments, entertainment and sidewalk sales throughout Old Village.

Applications are currently being accepted to travel overseas in some 22 different countries. The overseas program will run August, 1991 to July, 1992.

The student application deadline is Sept. 30.

For further information and application forms call Marie Morrow, this year's chairperson of the youth exchange, at 453-6879 or 455-2771.

The sale, held at 12217 Glenview Dr. in Plymouth Township, features "art treasures," clothing, furniture and bicycles, among other items.

For Church World Service Take a charity walk

Half a world away from The Plymouth-Canton Community, in the parched desert of the Sudan a young mother's six mile walk through the summer heat is nothing special.

It's a walk she makes daily to obtain food and water for her children.

At 2 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 7 in the City of Plymouth's Kellogg Park residents of the community will have a chance to join symbolically in that walk. At the same time they will raise money for overseas development.

The organizers of this year's CROP Walk, the first such walk to be held in Plymouth since 1983, are trying to raise $10,000.

The money will go to support Church World Service, a disaster relief, development and refugee resettlement division of the National Council of Churches of Christ.

"We hear so much about natural disaster and famine that sometimes it's hard to know how we can begin to help," said the Rev. Leland Seese Jr., associate pastor of First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth and coordinator of this year's walk. "The CROP Walk is a simple, one afternoon way that people can really make a difference."

Residents who cannot walk on Oct. 7 can sponsor family members or friends, Seese said. And although organized by local churches, Seese said that all residents are welcome to participate.

Walkers can register and pick up sponsor sheets at the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth. For more information call Rev. Seese at 453-6464.

Employees dispute training claim

book on the law as called for under the Michigan Hazard Communication Standard.

But part of the implementation of the program was left up to building principals and administrators, said Hoedel.

As for the two state violations in June, 1987, Hoedel said, Salem was "somehow not handled at that time.

"It still leads to no excuses," he said. "You don't dump any kind of waste down an open sewer. It's an unfortunate incident, but somebody should have known better."

Sources said that a school district administrator was recently disciplined over failing to provide the training to Salem staff, but Hoedel said he had no knowledge of the any disciplinary action against an administrator.

He added, though, "I have a feeling the answer is, 'yes.'"

School Superintendent John M. Hoben said last week that employees at the high school had received the training but "failed" to sign-off on it once the training was completed.

Hoben said that the district was rectifying the situation and reviewing the entire program with all district employees.

Staff members at Canton High School said Friday that they had received the training and signed off on the information, but Salem staffers said that last week was the first time they had any knowledge of the required training.

Michigan's "Right-to-Know Law," took effect in February, 1987, and is designed to provide information to employes and employers exposed to hazardous chemicals. It calls for the training of all employes about hazardous materials, preparing material data sheets on those chemicals, and the labeling of all containers of hazardous materials.

A state violation, dated June 30, 1987, cited the district for failing "to provide employes with information and training on hazardous chemicals present in their workplace." A second citation was issued for failure to "post signs" in the workplace advising employes of the required information on hazardous chemicals.

The citations were issued by the Michigan Department of Public Health, Bureau of Environmental and Occupational Health.

Almost one year later, on July 10, 1988, the bureau notified district officials that the state had not yet received a response to the citations.

Gerald Ostoin, principal at Salem, responded to the state in a letter dated July 27, 1988. Ostoin wrote, "We have been in compliance for some time now with the two items cited. All employes have been provided information and training on hazardous chemicals..."

Flint Watt, chief of the environmental bureau at the state, said the schools response in 1988 was late but "satisfactory." He added that today the letter would not be acceptable to the state.

Watt said no further citations had been issued against the schools since the two issued in 1987.

Watt said the bureau visited Salem High School in 1987 following employe complaints about indoor air quality. The school district was not cited for air quality problems at the time, however.

"We always look at the hazardous communications standard when we are called in," said Watt. "It's one of the requirements."

Watt added that the schools could be cited for a "repeat" violation if his department were called in to investigate and discovered that the district had just now complied with the law. He said a penalty, including some form of fine, would likely result.

"These kind of things are the most cited problems we have with the law," Watt said. "There's nothing unusual about it."

Maryann Ligato-Fredyl, an administrator with the Michigan Education Association (MEA), which represents bargaining units in the school district, said Monday that the union has responded to the training question.

"When this situation (the Aug. 22 dumping incident at Salem) arose, I called Hoedel and explained that I thought the training needed to be done forewith and reviewed with all employes," Ligato-Fredyl said. "He said he thought that was a good idea."

Ligato-Fredyl said the training question arose after the dumping incident when Salem employes released three barrels of chemicals into a storm sewer leading to the Willow Creek. Two Salem employes were disciplined - one suspended and one warned - following the Aug. 22 incident.

Last week it also came to light that the school district allegedly dumped oil into a City of Plymouth sanitary sewer near the district's bus yard and bus maintenance building in April.

The "black, oily sludge" was later removed by city DPW workers who buried it in a site at Riverside Cemetery before county and state officials intervened and told the city to remove the materials. The school district has agreed to pay half of the clean up costs.

Contest winners

The results are in!

And Adrienne McMonagle of Plymouth is the winner.

Her entry into the Architectural Contest in the Fall Festival Edition was drawn at random by City Attorney Ronald Lowe (who devised the competition) from among the 18 entries which correctly identified eight pieces of downtown Plymouth architecture.

McMonagle, a financial counselor with St. Joseph Hospital, wins dinner for two at the Plymouth Landing.

Also guessing correctly in the contest were: John Levitte, Jim Shinn, R.G. Myers, Jamie Solberg, Kenneth Ryan, Joseph Phillips, Stanley Cole, Kara Hogan, Stephanie Whitehill, Carol Merritt, Bill Neuf, Ray Adamski, Penny Ryan, Brian Schumacher, Mildred Ritchey, Judylynn Lee, and Rosie Lee.

Langmesser finds niche as City's clerk

"Jim and I are trying to find the discrepancies in the total population that they've given at this time," she said.

City Finance Director William Graham, who was also city clerk, said that Langmesser will do well in the job.

"I recommended her and I think she's very well qualified," Graham said. "She has a good working relationship with the other clerks and the school election people."

Langmesser, 40, has municipal experience in both Canton and Westland.

Besides elections, the clerk licenses video games, cabs, peddlers and ice cream trucks in the city. Langmesser also sits in on bid openings and is responsible for posting and publishing legal notices.

She said she finds the people aspects of the job an added bonus.

"I really enjoy my co-workers immensely and I've met a lot of really nice people in town," she said.

Getting down to business

This is a rendering of Michigan Bell's new training facility that will be located in Plymouth Township. The new facility will open next summer.

For new training center

Bell breaks ground on site

Michigan Bell broke ground Monday on a $5.5 million Plymouth Township training facility officials said will help equip Bell workers to deliver advanced telecommunications services to area customers.

Slated to open in the summer of 1991, the new training center will offer technical training to as many as 6,000 employees each year.

Twenty-six full time instructors will teach a curriculum that ranges from sophisticated fiber-optics technology to such basics as pole climbing and driver safety.

Michael J. Friduss, Michigan Bell vice president for customer service and sales, said, "This center is a tremendous but necessary investment in our most valuable resource -- our employees.

"The payoff will be delivery of the best, most advanced telecommunications products and services to our customers," he added.

The new facility will replace four training sites in Troy, Oak Park, and Livonia. Some training will continue at the company's center in Livonia.

The center will train new hires and employees transferring to new jobs, as well as those seeking to upgrade their skills.

"As we approach the 21st Century what will separate the most successful businesses from the rest will be cost, quality and service," said Mike Handley, assistant vice president of district 4, Communications Workers of America. "This training center will be a resource that goes a long way towards establishing leadership in those critical areas."

Maurice Breen, Plymouth Township supervisor, said Bell's presence in the community contributes to the development of a high-tech corridor between Detroit and Ann Arbor.

"The company and the township have had a solid working relationship for many years and I'm happy to see Michigan Bell's commitment to the area," Breen said.

In the planning stages since February, the 44,000-square foot training facility is expected to be finished in July, 1991. The building is being designed and constructed by R.A. DeMattia Co., of Plymouth Township.

The building will occupy a site in the Metro West Technology Park at M-14 and Beck Road in Plymouth Township.

Crier wins 2 advertising 1st places

The Community Crier has won two top advertising awards from the Michigan Press Association in competition open to all daily, twice-weekly and weekly newspapers.

First place went to The Crier for use of spot color for a Patrician Group advertisement in the 1989 Fall Festival edition.

First place for a promotional advertisement was awarded to The Crier for a "black-and-white versus full-color" promotion ad in the 1990 "Red, White and Blue" edition for July 4th. It is the third straight year that The Crier took first place in this category.

In 14 years of eligibility, The Crier has now captured 20 first place awards in advertising from the state's press group. Eleven of those 20, are awards for use of color in advertising.

The Patrician Group ad was handled by Jack Armstrong, of The Crier's ad staff. The "juke box" promotional ad was designed by Dale Mickelson, the production director of COMMA, -- The Crier's publishing affiliate.

In addition, The Crier was awarded a second-place for Best Advertising Idea for the Fred Hill "121 reasons..." ad in the 1989 Fall Festival edition, and a third place in the Special Section category for "Downtown Sounds." All awards were received by Crier Ad Director Larry McElroy at the annual Michigan Press Association Display Advertising Conference in Battle Creek last week.

Competition in The Crier's class included all Michigan newspapers -- dailies, twice-weeklies and weeklies -- with circulation between 8,500 and 25,000. Judging was completed by representatives of independent advertising agencies.

"This continues to show that businesses in The Plymouth-Canton Community are state-of-the-art promoters," said Crier-COMMA, General Manager Phyllis Redfern. "We're also proud that our staff plays such an important role in helping our community's businesses market themselves."

Chief hoopsters begin league games

BY RITA DERBIN

Now come the important games.

With their pre-conference schedule behind them, the Canton girls basketball team is looking forward to the Western Lakes Activities Association competition.

The Chiefs, who were 2-3 before playing Farmington last night, will host Walled Lake Central in a crossover game tomorrow night in their home conference opener. The varsity game begins at approximately 7:30 p.m.

"They're a good team and should be favored to challenge for the Lakes Division title," said coach Bob Blohm. "They've got good team quickness and pressure all over the court."

Canton participated in the Mercy Hoops Tournament last weekend and split two games.

In the consolation game on Saturday, the Chiefs defeated Trenton, 54-30.

In the game, Canton played consistently, according to coach Bob Blohm.

"We played outstanding on defense and our rebounding was the key -- they only got one shot," said Blohm. "Offensively we got going and had a consistent game."

On Thursday the Chiefs lost to Farmington Mercy, 41-32.

In the game, Amy Westerhold had 10 points to lead Canton. Julie Nicastrì chipped in eight and Stephanie Gray added seven points in the loss.

Nicastrì, who had eight rebounds in the game, had an exceptional game off the glass, according to coach Bob Blohm.

"Julie and Stephanie had good games early on when we were in it," he said. "Our rebounding, both offensively and defensively, was good. We really picked up our game."

The deciding factor in the game was the Mercy zone defense that was applied to Canton, according to Blohm.

"We had a little trouble with the zone," he said. "We were tied at the half were pleased with the position we were in but only scored 11 points in the second half."

The Chiefs, who are a relatively inexperienced team, weren't getting the good shots and were only getting one shot a possession during the game.

"We played a good, solid, veteran team," Blohm said. "Their experience had a lot to do with our loss."

Looking down the road to the playoffs in November, Blohm added that testing the kids early with quality teams such as Mercy can only help.

"We've gained experience," said Blohm. "I'm waiting to see where our pre-conference games will take us."

"I'm hoping it will lead to a good start in the conference," he added.

Chief gridders fall to 2-1

BY RITA DERBIN

The Chiefs stumbled on Saturday, losing to the Farmington Harrison Hawks, in a key Western Division football matchup.

With the loss, the Chiefs dropped to 2-1 and 0-1 in the Western Division.

In the game, Canton led at halftime, 15-13, but a late Harrison touchdown before the half turned the game around, according to Canton coach Bob Khoenle.

"They scored a touchdown just before the half that really helped them gain momentum," he said. "It really hurt us -- it's a lot different going in at halftime up 15-6 than 15-13."

Harrison came out of halftime and scored another touchdown in the third quarter to put them up for good. Canton had its chances but couldn't get the ball in the end zone.

"We had a chance to win with the ball on the 15-yard line with 30 seconds to go but just missed our receivers," Khoenle said.

The Steelers Freshmen group took a 6-0 victory. Ian Searcy scored the lone touchdown of the game on a 60-yard romp.

Garden City won the Junior Varsity outing 12-0. Standouts for the Steelers included Mike Grannan, Shaun Dyer and Nick Kanaan.

The Varsity Steelers also won Sunday, 6-0. Larry Gardner scored on a five-yard run following an extended drive.

The Steelers are on the road against the Novi-Northville Colts this weekend.

Canton Lions Varsity team put out the Westland Comets' heat Sunday.

Kevin Kovachevich led the Varsity Lions to a 18-6 victory with two touchdowns and a touchdown pass to Jeremy Eaton.

The Junior Varsity Lions fell to the Comets 19-0, however.

The Lions Freshmen also fell to the Comets, 19-0 Sunday.

This Saturday is homecoming for the Lions as they face the Belleville Cougars. Games start at 5 p.m. at Central Middle School's football field.

In campus rivalry

Rock kickers nip Chiefs

BY RITA DERBIN

The cross campus rivalry between Salem and Canton continued on Monday night when boys soccer teams faced off. Rocks prevailed with a hard fought 1-0 victory over the fiery Chiefs.

The game's only goal came with five minutes left in the first half when senior co-captain Ryan Fitzpatrick put the ball in, with an assist going to Eric Stemmer. The Rock defense then held up to preserve the victory.

"They let us hang around," said Canton coach Don Smith after the Chiefs' second straight tough loss. "And we almost got a couple in -- all the kids played a good game, we just couldn't pull it out."

"The boys gave a one hundred per cent effort tonight," said Salem coach Ken Johnson of his team. "They're coming together as a team after being taken down a peg on Saturday.

"We have a big team that is intimidating with Matt Lee and Jake Baker out there ... I thought we dominated," Johnson added. "I would have liked to have gotten a couple more goals because anything can happen with Canton -- they played real well."

The Rocks only loss of the season came on Saturday afternoon when they lost to Kalamazoo Central, 1-0.

"We had opportunities in the game," said Salem coach Ken Johnson. "We didn't play very well and they scored with a minute left in the game -- we had good chances in the first half but nothing went in."

Last Wednesday the Rocks (7-1) defeated Livonia Franklin, 8-1. In the game, senior co-captain Andy Cosenza scored twice and added two assists. Also scoring in the game were Joe Nunez, two goals, one assist; Brad Fisch, Eric Stemmer, Jake Baker and Jim Ramsey. Assists went to Fitzpatrick, Matt Cook, Chris LaJoy and John Truskowski.

Canton (4-4) also played on Wednesday, losing to top ranked Livonia Churchill, 2-1. Chris Hayes scored the lone Chief goal on a penalty kick.

"We had opportunities," said Don Smith. "If we were lucky we could have at least tied."

"We played a much better second half in the game," he added. "We started attacking their goal and getting good chances."

Chiefs 3rd at harrier invitational

BY RITA DERBIN

The Canton harriers had a successful weekend.

The Chiefs' boys cross country team finished third in the 18-team Schoolcraft Invitational on Saturday morning with 81 points. Walled Lake Western won the meet and Novi came in second.

On the all invitational team for the Chiefs were Mike Ream and Jason Crain. Ream was fourth overall and the first Canton runner to cross the finish line. Crain was eighth overall.

Other finishers for the Chiefs were Jim Carnes, 22nd; Chris Nelson, 24th; Jason Napolitano, 26th; David Yack, 27th and Shawn McNamara, 32nd.

"We put in a good effort," said coach Jim Hayes. "But the boys themselves tell me there's room for improvement."

"We were very competitive out there with the top two schools," Hayes added. "If our sixth and seventh runners would have made up 15 seconds we would have won."

The Canton junior varsity also finished third at the Schoolcraft Invitational.

Kirk Stewart was eighth and Ryan McClain was ninth in the meet. Also participating for the Chiefs were Dave Washenko, Tim Cziniawski, Justin McClain, Mike Boland and Dave Stroschiem.

Last Tuesday, Canton defeated cross campus rival Salem, 18-34. The top five runners on the Chiefs squad were Ream, Crain, Nelson, Carnes and Napolitano.

The Canton girls cross country team also competed in the invitation, finishing fifth behind Redford Union, Livonia-Stevenson, Farmington and Trenton. Amy Smith was all invitational runner. She finished with a sixth place overall to lead the Chiefs.

Salem gridgers lose

BY RITA DERBIN

Westland John Glenn rocketed past the Salem football team Friday night.

After a shutting out the Rocks in the first half, the Rockets held on to hand Salem (1-2) their second straight loss by the score of 20-14.

In the game, Leon Hister ran for 116 yards on 18 carries to lead the Salem offense. The speedy junior back scored both Rock touchdowns with runs of 57 and eight yards, both coming in the second half.

The first half of the game belonged to the Rockets, who had a 14-0 lead at halftime while holding Salem to only 23 yards of offense in the first half.

The Rocks came out to play in the half, however.

"We were much better in the second half," said coach Tom Moshimer. "We just executed in the second half -- we came together as a team."

"We played like an entirely different team in the second half," Moshimer added. "The defense held up the second half and we ended up with 215 yards of total offense."

Despite loss, Chiefs still good

feels the team played well.

"Harrison is a good team and so are we," he said. "It was a real good high school football game on both sides -- both teams played well."

In the game, Canton struck first, when quarterback Karl Wukie scored from two yards out in the first quarter. The second Chief touchdown came in the second quarter when Wukie connected with Brett Howell for a 20-yard touchdown pass. The Chiefs then scored a two-point conversion to make the score 15-6.

For the game, Wukie led all rushers with Jason Riggs also having a good ground game. Brett Howell had a very good day receiving, according to Khoenle, making some key receptions along with Mike Wogaman.

Wukie had another good game leading the offense, according to Khoenle, but the senior quarterback was intercepted four times during the game, which saw him passing more than usual.

"He really is a pretty good quarterback but threw the ball quite a bit," Khoenle said. "We'll have to work on the four interceptions."

On the defensive side of the football, Josh Walaskay and Gordon Gibbons had good games, according to Khoenle. Dave Cessante will miss at least two games after breaking a bone in his arm, according to Khoenle.

Hough service planned at Riverside

(tell you I'm leaving to go to Rogers, AR." Sliger recalled though that his newspaper was already put to bed, but Paul Chandler, owner of The Mail, had held the pages open and thus got the scoop of the biggest Plymouth news story of the past 40 years.

Even though he'd been scooped on that Hough announcement, Sliger recalls Hough warmly. "He was immensely popular with his employees. They'd always talk about 'Cass.'"

With Daisy's leaving, "Town was hurt. It was sort of a depressing thing to have happen," Sliger recalled. "The loss of business (from Daisy's moving) was considerable." He said, for example, that The Plymouth Mail filled its press time by printing thousands of targets that came each Daisy BB gun.

As it turned out, Hough's fear of the growing threats to manufacturing from Michigan's economic climate justified the Daisy move to Arkansas in the end. Daisy prospered there and Hough became active in politics in Arkansas just as he had in Michigan.

Hough started with Daisy in 1926 as a "sales missionary" and succeeded his father, Edward Cass Hough, as president in 1959. His father had refused to move to Arkansas and died in Plymouth a year after the move.

In 1975, Hough became president of Victor Recreation Products Group when Daisy was sold to that company. A year later, Hough retired when Victor was itself acquired by Kidde, Inc. of New Jersey.

Then, in 1984, Hough led the group to buy Daisy back from the conglomerate and stayed active in the operations even though he'd moved to Florida.

Hough also stayed active in life in general.

— He was an active boater — his boat was named BB. And through his boating, he was active with the Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Hough's air rifle background kept him interested in gun safety and he was a strong advocate on that topic worldwide.

Surviving Hough are: his wife, Jean; his children, Cass Hough, Jr.,

Christopher B. Hough, Emily Louise Hough; five grandchildren; and two great grandchildren.

A service is planned for Riverside Cemetery on Friday morning, under the direction of Schrader Funeral home.

The family has suggested that memorial contributions be made to the Humane Society of Collier County, 370 Airport-Pulling Rd., Naples, FL 33942.

get direction on maintaining our programs. We wanted to let the community know what we need to do."

Bell called the "stopgap" millage request "a critical vote."

The district has also — along with the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools — joined a lawsuit filed by a number of school districts against the state over the new aid plan.

Bell said cutbacks and possible layoffs would commence on Oct. 15 if the millage vote fails.
