Mettetal debate presages votes

BY JIM WHITE

The debate over the future of Mettetal airport moved north of Joy Road Monday night.

A public information meeting, moderated by Plymouth City Manager Gordon Jaeger and held at the Plymouth Cultural Center, drew all seven Plymouth Township trustees, two Canton trustees, and six of the seven Plymouth City Commissioners among an estimated 275-300 people on hand.

"I thought it was very interesting that I got to hear a variety of people," said Jerry Vorva, city commissioner.

The Plymouth Township Board of Trustees was expected to vote on forming an authority with the city last night. The Plymouth City Commission will discuss the plan at its Monday (Dec. 17) commission meeting.

Airport supporters were allowed to make a 15 minute presentation to begin the meeting.

John Vergona, of Canton, and a major backer of public ownership, said that Mettetal is a reliever airport. It can handle small aircraft, leaving the skies over Detroit Metropolitan Airport less congested.

Vergona also said that Mettetal makes a net profit of $228,039 a year in hangar and tie down fees.

Carol Herrick, of Canton, said that a petition drive made in Canton had collected 2,820 signatures of people in favor of Mettetal. "95 per cent of those we talked to had no objection to the airport," she said.

Herrick added that residents said they would like to see Mettetal used more in community events, such as the Canton Challenge Fest or the Plymouth Fall Festival.

"The Osh Kosh Air Show (held each August in Osh Kosh, WI) draws more people than any other national event," she said.

3 Soviet carvers coming for fest

BY PHILIP TARDANI

Three ice carvers from the Soviet Union will be among those sculpting in Kellogg Park this January during the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

Pam Kosteva, executive director of the event, said Monday that the news comes after months of asking Soviet and American embassies for Russian participation.

"Out of the blue I got this telex from the cultural minister in Moscow," she said. "We had been trying for several months."

The three will be in town Jan. 11-21,

Kosteva said, and may stay with a Livonia family if no hotel space is available.

The Soviet Cultural Ministry asked that a "cultural exchange" take place as a condition for sending the carvers.

Enough portables for another school

P-C Schools move to ease crowding problems

BY KEN VOYLES

The Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education Monday took the first in a series of steps to improve student crowding conditions at various elementary schools.

The following housing moves were unanimously approved by the board.

- Effective yesterday (Dec. 11), all "new" students residing in Sunflower VIII normally assigned to Hulsing Elementary will be instead be assigned to Gallimore Elementary.

- Effective for the 1991-92 school year, present Sunflower VIII students at Hulsing will be given the option of remaining at Hulsing or continuing at Gallimore.

- Effective for the 1992-93 school year the entire elementary student population residing in Sunflower VIII will be assigned to Gallimore.

"This only deals with one element of the housing at this point," district Superintendent John M. Hoben told the board Monday. "There are others we are still looking at."

Hoben added, "I don't want this to be seen as a singular item -- it's not going to cure all of our problems."

Currently Hulsing houses 39 students from Sunflower VIII, and it is estimated that another 29 students will be enrolling. Hulsing, with a current population of 604 students, cannot house the new students, Hoben said.

The board moves come three weeks after school district administrators said five of the district's 12 elementary schools were, or would be, nearing a student population crisis.

At the time the administration offered a series of recommendations to try and ease the housing dilemma. Other housing moves to address the issue are expected soon.

Plymouth-Canton elementary schools with potential "space problems" next year besides Hulsing, according to the district, include Bird, Farrand, Fiegel, and Hoben.

Dean Swartzwelder, president of the school board, said Hoben Elementary was expected to see the largest growth in student population next year.

The school is estimated to increase by some 50 students, according to statistics released by the district. As for the other schools, Fiegel may gain 48 students, Isbister, 44, and Bird, 43. Isbister is not currently listed as a school facing housing problems.

Field Elementary, with a population of 703 students, is the largest in the district.

The board also approved the purchase of two renovated classroom portables Monday to help meet space needs at Hoben Elementary. The portables cost $49,470.

Ray Hoedel, the district's associate superintendent for business, said the district will now have 14 portable classrooms at its elementary schools.

Combined the portables add up to about two-thirds the size of one entire elementary school facility, said Hoben.

County sets dates to fill Mack post

Tentative dates for primary and general elections needed to fill Milt Mack's 11th District Wayne County Commission seat have been set, said county officials this week.

According to Ed Carey, director of elections for the county, Feb. 19 and April 16 were recently recommended to the commission by the Wayne County Clerk's office, "but the commission has the final say." Please see pg. 28

Temporary move

Schools may relocate

BY KEN VOYLES

Plans are being considered by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools administration for temporarily moving its operations out of the Harvey Street office to speed up the renovation and construction of an addition to the current facility.

During Monday's regular meeting of the Plymouth-Canton Schools Board of Education, district Superintendent John M. Hoben said the administration was looking at various alternatives to move staff out of the current facility while the construction work continues.

"If we can vacate the total building the builders said they can move up the completion date two months (to May, 1991)," Hoben told the board.

Hoben added that district officials are looking at Central Middle School, the old Tanger elementary, and even the possible use of portables to shift administrative functions out of the current building for "three or four months."

Work on the addition to the administration building -- also site of board meetings -- should be completed by April, said Ray Hoedel, the district's associate superintendent for business.

He added that full renovation of the current facility will begin in February.

City tries coordinating business waste pickup

BY PHILIP TARDANI

By Jan. 7, about 214 businesses in the City of Plymouth will no longer be able to rely on the city for solid waste pickup.

Administration officials, however, are hoping to ease their transition to the private sector.

The city commission voted 6-1 on Nov. 19 to discontinue pickup of the 229 commercial dumpsters in the city.

"It just isn't working," said Finance Director William Graham, noting that the city takes in about $10,000 a month for commercial refuse disposal and spends about $26,000 in the same period.

City Manager Gordon Jaeger said he thinks private waste contractors can do the job more cheaply than the city.

"I believe the private sector is best suited to taking care of this problem," he said. "I think the competition is what's going to lessen the cost."

Merchants, however, have been vocal from the beginning that the city can best coordinate solid waste pickup.

"I am concerned that we try to handle this in the most efficient, best way," said Fran Toney, executive director of the Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce. "I think it's really important the city help us find and coordinate (pickup)."

To that end, on Friday the city unsealed five bids from waste haulers on two proposals. One proposal was for a compactor to be located on Fleet Street, the other for an alternative to replace the soon to be discontinued city service.

Officials hope they can negotiate a contract and price with a "primary vendor" to offer to commercial units in the city. It will be the businesses' decision to decide if they wish to contract with the firm or try to get a better price from someone else.

"One company can come in and provide almost all the same services that we have provided," said Assistant City Manager Paul Sincok.

One advantage the private sector has over the city is an established billing apparatus. Graham said if the city wanted to be competitive in the commercial solid waste pickup, it would have to make a "substantial" investment in equipment and people.

"We don't know how much each business generates in trash, we don't know what to bill them," he said, noting that many of the dumpsters in the city have more than one user. "It is a nightmare."

Private waste haulers, Graham said, are better equipped to handle the

Encouraged recycling is past due

The scene at the City of Plymouth's recycling center Saturday reminded me of an area shopping mall three days before Christmas.

Like those crazy last minute shoppers we all see every year, city residents converged on the center to turn in their recycling materials before the kick-off of the city's new bag-tag program for solid waste collection.

Everybody had big loads of newspapers, glass jars, tin cans, household batteries and various plastics containers. They were all in a hurry to get rid of the stuff before Monday's start of the new program.

While the program has caused consternation among some residents concerned about what it will cost them in the long run, it looks like those bags/tags are here to stay.

Some residents have spoken out against the program as a hidden tax increase, others say the program just isn't fair. The more garbage put at the curb the more it will cost the homeowner who, say, has three young children and two pets.

It's about time this community made some kind of concerted effort to reduce its garbage output. The recycling center has worked smoothly, but it alone will not help the city forge a new outlook on our solid waste troubles.

That's why it's time for this program -- which demands that residents buy special city waste bags or tags -- and time for residents to put up or shut up when it comes to the environment.

In the margin

By Ken Voyles

Shortly after moving to the city earlier this year my wife and I began using the new recycling center. Besides the ever-present stack of newspapers from around the state and world, we found it was easy to reduce our garbage load by also recycling every tin can, plastic bottle, glass jar, we purchased.

Our days of putting two, maybe three, bags of garbage out by the curb for pick-up are no more. Since early this summer our weekly trash output has been reduced to one 45-pound garbage bag.

Now understand that I am not saying a family of six will be able to use just one bag a week, but instead of crying about the new program, give it a try.

If you're not now recycling, start doing so immediately. That alone will reduce your rubbish load. It does work.

Also, start being a careful consumer. Look at each product you buy in the grocery store. They call it precycling. Ask yourself is this product over-packaged? Can any of it be recycled? And buy in bulk or large quantities.

At the same time save and reuse the paper or plastic bags they give out at the stores.

Eventually the city hopes to implement a curbside recycling effort to make it easier for those folks who cannot trudge up to the recycling center. Talk currently is of starting it in the summer next year, but residents of the city should not wait for that day to begin recycling.

If paying for garbage bags means the city can reduce some of its landfill costs, then so be it. If paying for bags (or tags) changes the attitude of those stubbornly clinging to outmoded ideas about trash dumping, then so be it.

If the new bag-tag program means long lines at the recycling center, so be it. At least those long lines mean one thing: lots of recycled stuff.

Of further note...

Apparently the new program is hitting home.

City officials said that by Monday, when the program officially kicked off, nearly 90 per cent of the residents were compiling through purchases of both bags and tags.

To think about...

If the city really wants to expand its recycling program with a curbside effort, it might also want to consider moving its recycling center.

Not only is it too small -- even now -- but the location is almost unsafe. There's too much traffic along Church Street where it runs by the fire station and not enough room for people unloading their recyclables.

Papers should be community-tuned

Don't argue with someone who buys ink by the barrel, some folks have said when I suggested they write a letter to the editor.

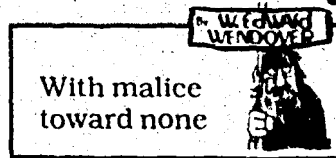

If I haven't believed that for others -- and I don't -- then I shouldn't be scared off either.

The newspapers in The Plymouth-Canton Community act politely towards each other as they scramble to scoop the news, opinions and ads from the competition. And that normally means refraining from throwing ink at each other as well as sharing lunch at the Plymouth Press Club's weekly meeting.

But such normal polite competition couldn't control my computer screen after I saw a "reporter responds" item in another local edition of a regional newspaper.

A Canton woman, Kathy Kenney, had written a letter to that newspaper complaining about its story on developmental approach to education as discussed at a recent Plymouth-Canton School Board meeting. Particularly stinging was the letter's revelation that the reporter had not been at the meeting but covered it by phoning selected sources.

"I almost didn't write that (letter)," Kenney said. "I'm just a mom."

We're all just moms, dads, daughters, sons, sisters, brothers and neighbors on this planet.

Every newspaper reporter worth a salt has been berated in a letter to the editor -- often with good cause. (This is why I encourage complainers to write in. I've seen many times where a reader's perspective licks that of the writer who "buys ink by the barrel.") The Crier's policy is to let such letters have a good ride -- without adding rebuttals.

But the reporter, Mary Beth Dillon, felt the need to respond and her editor, Jeff Counts, didn't have the sense to dissuade the response which only made things worse for three reasons:

1. Kenney is a newspaper reader and concerned citizen who deserves a fair shot at her opinion. Pure and simple.

2. The letter writer's major premise -- that the newspaper down the street has believed for some months that they need not attend meetings to cover what's going on -- has surfaced before (with the same reporter, by happenstance).

3. One comment in Dillon's response deflated all the claims made by all the editorial staffers and advertising sales representatives of that newspaper chain. "The Observer doesn't... have any stake in things turning out in a particular way," she wrote. A true newspaper -- from the New York Times to The Community Crier -- has a vary large stake indeed in how issues are resolved in the respective communities they serve. (That's why we aggressively cover the news and passionately express our opinions. We like our community and hope, in some small way, that we can contribute a bit of light on issues to help improve things here.)

The last time the coverage-in-abstentia philosophy of the other newspaper surfaced, that paper opined that the Plymouth-Canton Schools weren't cooperating with "the media."

But, according to the schools, the only newspaper to file under the Michigan Freedom of Information Act against the schools during the past six months was The Community Crier (on the hazardous materials spill at CEP). Yet, this newspaper has not felt a lack of cooperation.

Of course, our reporters attend the meetings.

On the beat

By Phillip Tardani

Depending on who you talk to, it will bleed the taxpayer or offer a great educational opportunity to the community's students. It's either a "dinosaur" that should be allowed to die or a "community asset" to be preserved.

The argument of whether or not it should be preserved has been called the "War of Joy Road," after the boundary between Plymouth Township and Canton.

Mettetal Airport.

There are strong views on both sides. And Monday night people got a chance to say what they thought of efforts to preserve it as an airport.

It was a good meeting. The entire Plymouth Township Board of Trustees was there, six Plymouth city commissioners, two Canton board members and about 250 private citizens, many of whom came to speak.

There were also chamber of commerce representatives, planning commission members, and FAA and state aeronautics officials.

On the eve of Plymouth Township's vote on whether or not to form an authority with the city and run the airport, there was a "town meeting" to discuss it.

John Vergona, a long-time supporter of Mettetal, got a chance to say that the airport has a $3.5 million impact on the local community.

Dan Calabrese, assistant to Canton Supervisor Tom Yack, disagreed, saying public money should not be used to support an airport not tied to economic development.

Residents noted how helpful an aviation school -- which has been proposed at Mettetal -- would be for their children. Others said they were tired of hearing the buzz of aircraft engines drown out music and conversation in their backyard.

Business owners from as far away as Charlevoix explained how Mettetal had a positive economic impact in the area. Another resident lamented how close a couple planes had gone down near his home.

There was a good balance to all comments, with applause and sometimes laughter. To the credit of the audience, speakers and moderator Gordon Jaeger, there was order in the proceedings.

However one feels about Mettetal Airport -- and there are strong feelings on both sides -- a public forum on the issue was a good idea and helpful to the elected officials who must vote on an authority.

Mettetal is our kids' asset

EDITOR:

In 1943 I joined the Indian Air Force and served at the Burma Front in World War II. In the Air Force I gained maintenance experience on all types of aircraft -- fighters, bombers, transports and trainers. I served for nine years in their largest training school as a Grade "A" instructor, teaching aeroengine subjects (piston and gas turbine engines), course supervisor and examiner. I had the unique opportunity to organize training from scratch.

After 24 years of service with the Air Force, I served with Air India, for 16 years in the jet engine overhaul division, as the quality control and NDT inspector.

Now I am 65 -- a retiree with over 40 years of aviation experience with a special liking for teaching and training. My only ambition is to see that my knowledge and experience is made available to the coming generation of boys and girls, men and women, of this society.

I am not asking for money. I am ready to dedicate my time and soul for this noble cause of teaching and training.

What I am asking you is only a place to start the school for aviation mechanics -- a public facility -- at the Mettetal Airport. You are well aware many of our people cannot afford to have training in a private school because the cost is prohibitive.

With your blessing, if this school is started, you will not only make history in The Plymouth-Canton Community but you will also be placing our communities on the map of Michigan as having one of the best aviation schools turning out quality aviation mechanics in airframe, powerplant and avionics. We would be putting in more value in our people.

Imagine how lucky we are! The Northwest Airline Machinist Union (I.A.M.) is behind this great venture and Schoolcraft College is giving the proposal serious consideration. With the expansion of the Metro Airport, the need for quality aviation mechanics is tremendous. Grab the opportunity! Further I understand that NWA is considering building an overhaul facility for the Airbus. Imagine the top dollar job opportunities for our mechanics.

Thanks to those who are contributing to this idea of a vocational school.

Now it is time to reflect and ask ourselves these questions -- What asset have we kept for our children and grandchildren? What have we done for our children that can help them as men and women, earn top dollars and live with dignity? Now, think -- should we let this great job opportunity slip by?

Public again speaks its mind on Mettetal

Then Dan Calabrese, administrative assistant to Canton Supervisor Tom Yaek, took time to explain why the Canton board decided not to buy the 50-year-old airport, which lies on the south side of Joy, in Canton.

Though an airport study committee had voted 6-4 to recommend that Canton buy Mettetal, the trustees voted 5-2 against an airport purchase last August. "Plain and simple, Canton Township is opposed to public ownership of the airport," Calabrese said.

"If public money is going to be used, then it ought to be used for airports clearly tied to economic development," he said. "We surveyed 37 businesses in Canton, and none of them said that they used the airport."

Calabrese also told the audience that Canton did not want any authority formed by other municipalities to run an airport within its boundaries.

"It is not appropriate for one or more governments to come into another community and try to determine what is done with the land. We respect that, and expect that same respect in return," he said.

Following the initial presentations, citizens were allowed five minutes to speak their own views, and about 35 did so.

Many of the same points that had been raised at Canton board meetings were reiterated.

Tom Kennedy, chairperson of a committee investigating the educational opportunities of Mettetal, said that the tuition at the public aviation college he has proposed would be about $5,000. Tuition at the Detroit Institute of Aeronautics, a private school at Willow Run Airport that is currently under expansion, is closer to $14,000, he said.

Several people who live close to the airport voiced concerns about safety and noise.

Bob Ziatta, a Plymouth Township resident, said that he lives about a quarter mile from the airport. "In 18 years, two planes have gone down near my home. Expansion scares me," he said.

Kay Wood, another Plymouth Township resident, said she lives in the approach at the north end of the runway, and the noise is very bothersome. "You can't talk in your own backyard!"

Officials from the Federal Aviation Authority and the Michigan Aeronautics Commission were also present.

John Wagner, a state inspector, clarified the length of the actual runway, which ends about 15 feet from Joy Road.

"However, there is a displaced threshold that extends 455 feet south of Joy," he said. Planes landing from the north may not touch down until they cross the threshold. Wagner said this insures that planes keep the proper clearance over Joy.

However, this threshold is irrelevant to planes taking off, he said. "Our regulations state that planes must clear a highway by 17 feet."

Residents near the airport have said that at least two planes have failed to make that clearance upon takeoff in the past year.

Wagner also spoke to fears that any authority using money from the FAA's Aviation Trust Fund to buy the airport would be locked into a "forever" deal with the federal government. An airport purchased with the FAA grant must remain an airport.

"The intent behind that is to insure that an unscrupulous politician does not rob the aviation fund, by buying an airport and then turning around and selling it," Wagner said.

The airport could be sold, he added, but the money would have to be paid back to the FAA.

Several local business owners were present in favor of preserving Mettetal.

Gary Roberts, vice president of development with the R.A. DeMattia Company, said, "We use the airport on a regular basis, both for fixed wing and helicopter traffic. We encourage Plymouth to keep Mettetal."

DeMattia himself added, "I've been marketing our community all over the world. I always mention our fine business airport."

"Businesses flying between small towns in the Great Lakes region do not use Lear jets, we use small twin engine aircraft. Plymouth would do well to keep this fine business asset."

Jerry Leonard, of CPI Engineering, located just south of the airport, said that his company chose their site because of the proximity to Mettetal. "If Mettetal closes, we have no reason to stay where we are," he said.

In other airport developments, Klochko Contractors, who own Mettetal, removed three underground jet fuel tanks from the helicopter pad Thursday. The Canton Fire Marshall and EPA officials were on hand, according to Tom Klochko.

The removal went smoothly, said Klochko, though there was some worry of fuel residue leaking.

"A minimal amount of dirt around the edges of the hole was sent to Industrial Assessment Treatment Technologies in Toledo for testing," Klochko said.

Results of the soil contamination tests were expected this week.

And park configuration

Canton mulls site for community center

BY JIM WHITE

The Canton Board of Trustees cleared the way for the development of a park behind the Canton Administration Building by agreeing at a recent study session on a site for a proposed community center.

The final configuration of the park, Phases III and IV of the Canton Recreation Complex, was dependent upon where a community center might be built in the future, Mike Gouin, superintendent of the township's parks and recreation, told the board during the Nov. 20 workshop session.

Although no formal action was taken at the meeting, the board agreed that the best site for the proposed center would be in the southwest corner of the township-owned land behind the administration building and the Canton Public Library along Canton Center Road.

Pollack Design Associates will develop Phases III and IV of the park with that site in mind.

Other sites considered included west of the library, and southwest of the library. But alternate site C, in the southwest corner of the township's property, was considered best for both aesthetic and functional reasons.

"C develops more of a campus atmosphere, rather than clustering all the buildings together," Gouin said.

In a letter to the parks and recreation department, Community Planner David Nicholson wrote that site A, just behind the library, leaves the park too congested.

It would be like "urban development in a suburban setting," he wrote.

Peter Pollack said plan C was the best choice for the rest of the park. "We want to be able to put as much green space together as we can," he said. "The park itself is the central theme or focus" of the project.

Treasurer Gerald Brown also said it was better to have any community center separated from the administration building, to eliminate possible interference in the workings of the township government.

"I don't want a rec center to jeopardize the fact that we are in business here from 8:30 to 5," he said.

Trustee Elaine Kirchgatter asked whether there would be any available parking closer than the administration building in the event of overflow parking at the center.

"With C, overflow parking would be able to use the lot near the outdoor amphitheater," which would be located next to the proposed center.

Proctor Road could disappear with development

BY JIM WHITE

Any change in the status of Proctor Road between Canton Center and Beck is dependent on whether Canton can follow through on plans to build a combined golf course and residential development.

According to Canton Supervisor Tom Yack, the closing of the road, which came up during a discussion on expansion plans for the park complex behind township hall, would not take place until after much further preparation work is completed.

But that's only if a two-year-old proposal to build a golf course/residential complex behind township hall is approved and completed.

Wayne County would also have to approve any change in the road's status.

"I'd say in a best case scenario, we'd be looking at the spring of 1992 for a start on construction," said Yack, about the proposed development. "But there is a lot of acreage that is not within the township's control. If someone decided not to sell, it could be a dead issue."

The Canton Board of Trustees will discuss the project in February, said Yack.

A legal description of the layout of the holes must be drawn up so that property owners considering selling land to the township for the project may see exactly what they are involved in.

And, plans for the utilities have to be worked out, Yack said.

Community center

said Gouin.

As part of the park, said Gouin, a roadway will be laid that will go south from the library parking lot, then west along the southern edge of the township land.

For now, it will end in the amphitheater parking lot, though it may eventually go around the western side of the community center and north until it joins an existing entrance to the park from Proctor Road.

This route ensures an unbroken green space, as well as affording an opportunity to add a second entrance off Canton Center Road south of the library, he said.

Supervisor Tom Yack said this would not make the community center dependent on the existence of Proctor Road, which may be in doubt, pending future developments.

Trustee John Prenciczky asked what would happen if the center was never built.

"In lots of ways, you have a lot of options," said Pollack. "Soccer fields, a picnic area. If you choose A and don't build, it's a smaller piece of land and you have fewer options."

Gouin said that the board hoped to award bids for construction on the park by March, 1991.

County district now RESA

Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency, or Wayne County RESA, is the new name for what was formerly called the Wayne County Intermediate School District.

The county district changed its name after receiving approval from the Michigan State Board of Education recently.

"We believe our new name more clearly reflects our mission," said Dr. Williams Simmons, the agency's superintendent.

As a link between the Wayne County local school districts and the Michigan Department of Education, RESA offers leadership, consulting, technical assistance, and training for some 34,000 professional school personnel.

Helps start out-reach effort

Pastor comes home to community

BY JIM WHITE

Becoming pastor at Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church (OLGC) in the City of Plymouth is a sort of homecoming for Father Jim Wysocki.

"We would visit Plymouth when we were students at the seminary," said Wysocki, who studied at the now-closed St. John Provincial Seminary in Plymouth Township.

"I spent four years there. It's particularly painful for those of us who studied there that it's closed. We grew up there, really. I hope they put the grounds to good use for the community."

Wysocki, who came to Our Lady of Good Counsel in August, returns to Plymouth after years of work in parishes around the Detroit metropolitan area.

He began as a deacon at Queen of Hope in Southfield. After being ordained he moved to St. Michael's, in Pontiac. He then became pastor at St. Mary's in New Baltimore, and worked there for 14 years before coming to Plymouth.

"The communities are different," Wysocki said, comparing Plymouth and New Baltimore. "New Baltimore is more ex-urban, I guess you would say, and Plymouth is suburban. Both have strong city governments.

"People here are very cooperative. Those in our executive positions are very talented. There are more professionals here, more automotive executives. They are very interested in their church."

Wysocki remembers his time in New Baltimore fondly.

"I got very attached to my former parish," he said. "My farewell from there was a very moving experience. The mayor and the board gave me a declaration, and there was a musical celebration."

Still, he is excited about his new opportunity as well.

"The school (for grades K-8 on the church grounds) is kind of a new experience. Pontiac had a much smaller school, but it was closed soon after I started there. I love working with the kids, so it's not hard, it's just a new challenge."

Another challenge faces the new pastor. He comes to Plymouth just as Our Lady of Good Counsel has formed an evangelization committee in an attempt to reunite the parish family.

A new sign in front of the church that says "Come Home for Christmas" is part of this attempt, said Wysocki.

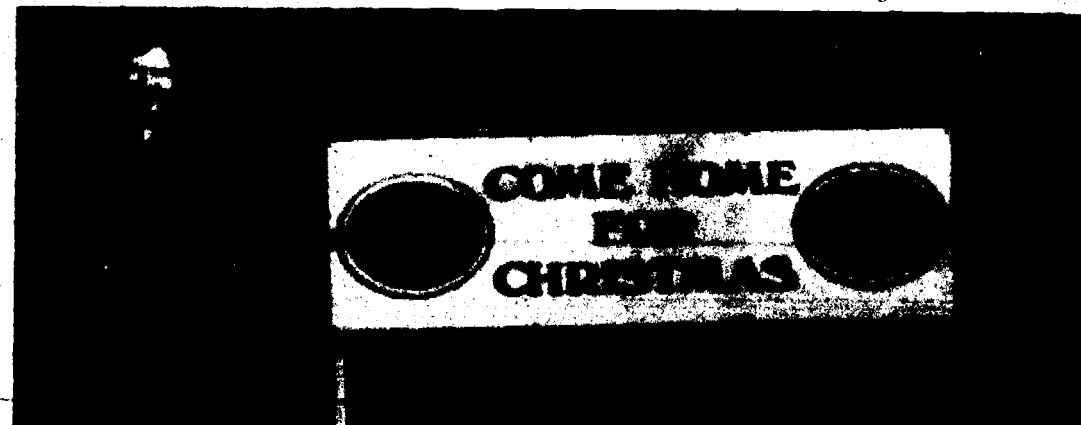

"It's part of our general effort to reach out to families who should be a part of us, baptised Catholics who do not practice their faith," he said. "They might feel that we would not be receptive, or that we might be critical of them. We want to put that to rest. We will welcome them with open arms."

The sign is the church's invitation to come back home. Personal invitations will also be given to parishioners, that they might send them to friends or relatives who might need that push to come back, Wysocki said.

"Evangelism is the Christian mandate to spread the good news," Wysocki said. "It gets bad press. I think, because people think it means ideas are forced upon them. But I don't think Christ intended it that way. And often, the church concentrates on saving the saved. But we need to go outside that group, not to turn others to our way of thinking, but to the truth."

Wysocki added that the sign is a goodwill gesture to everyone, Catholic or not.

"We just hope it gets people thinking, not just about our faith, but about any faith," he said.

Christmas" campaign to reunite local families and friends. (Crier photo by Mark Coffon)

Tell it to Phyllis

By Phyllis Redfern

What do you like best about the holidays? Think about it, that question is a lot harder than you would imagine.

I guess I have lots of "best things" when it comes to the holidays. However, I'm smart enough not to say I like everything about Christmas. I do NOT like pine needles in the carpet when they connect with my bare feet.

I love the bright light and all the beautiful decorations. I love the smell of the Christmas tree and the smell of cookies baking in the oven. The taste of all the wonderful goodies this time of the year is great (a whole month without thinking too hard about the diet).

I love to listen to Christmas music (just ask anyone at the office).

Getting together with friends and family during the holidays is always special. Everyone is in the festive mood and it's the one time of the year when friends are comfortable greeting each other with hugs.

As all of our senses come to life this time of year so do our emotions. We can share tears of joy as well as tears of sadness with friends. This season is especially hard for friends who have lost a special member of their family during the past year. It is also hard for friends and neighbors who have sons and daughters serving in the armed forces.

Although we're all busy shopping and baking, this is the season to take time to share with friends. Somehow we manage to pick up the phone and call someone, plan a lunch with a friend, write a note in a Christmas card (I'm thinking about it), or share some of our baked goodies with a friend. We all have lots of friends and we need to take the time to let them know we're thinking about them.

As I look at the tree with all its decorations, I can't help thinking of other Christmas trees in years past. Every year we've always had a beautiful tree (even the one that was crooked and had to be tied to the wall). Maybe the tree is beautiful for many reasons. Each ornament was made or given with love, and many of them have a special memory behind them.

I guess some of the best things about the holidays are the meaning, the thoughts that go into the planning and the sharing of hugs and memories with friends and family.

Mel's Golden Razor, located in the City of Plymouth, is again playing host to an important effort to help needy children.

The toy drive will run through Dec. 15.

School bus accident lands youths in hospital

BY JIM WHITE

A Plymouth-Canton Community Schools bus, loaded with 54 students on their way to school in Canton Thursday morning, struck another vehicle, but school officials said none of the children involved were injured.

At 8:33 a.m. Thursday, according to Canton Police reports, the bus was travelling east on Warren Road headed toward Hulsing Elementary School when a car northbound on Canton Center Road ran a red light. The bus broadsided the car, police said.

School district officials said that none of the students involved appeared to be injured following the accident.

But seven children on board the bus were taken to Oakwood Canton Health Center for "examination and observation."

All seven were released by 11 a.m., said Richard Egli, director of the district's community relations.

The driver of the car, Colleen Carter, of Canton, and her 18-year-old son Christopher were taken to St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital, where they were treated and released, police said.

Police cited Colleen Carter for failing to obey a red light.

The bus sustained minor damage, said Egli.

SC study notes habits

A Schoolcraft College research study of 2,269 first year students in fall 1990 by the college's Learning Assistance Center (LAC) showed a relationship between ASSET scores and student habits.

The study, conducted by the LAC under Director Sirkka Gudun, showed a "definite relationship" between scores received on ASSET placement tests and the amount of television students watch, the number of books they read and the amount of homework done in high school.

The scores, according to the LAC, showed that the more time students spent watching television every day, the lower the placement tests scores. Those who watched five or more hours daily had scores six per cent lower than students who watched one hour or less.

The study also revealed that the more books students read per year, the higher the scores. Frequent readers outscored light readers from four to eight per cent.

Also, students who were assigned six-eight hours of homework per week in high school showed scores of six to 10 per cent higher than those with less homework.

The winners...

P-C youths show off artistic talent

Once again there was some fierce competition in the holiday coloring contest -- it's the 11th annual -- sponsored by The Community Crier and drawing young artists from all over The Plymouth-Canton Community.

The grand prize winner this year -- you can see her creation on page one of this newspaper -- is Emily Stachura.

Emily, an 11-year-old from Canton, has entered the contest for the past four years. A sixth grade student at East Middle School, Emily's winning entry was done in color pencils.

The grand prize winner features a fireplace and Santa Claus peeping out from behind the tree. "I thought it would look cozy that way," said Emily, who has had an interest in art for a long time. "I like all kinds of crafts and art," she added.

And what was Emily's message to Santa?

"If it is possible please give all the home less a Merry Christmas," she wrote. For herself, Emily is hoping to get some more art supplies and possibly a new "jam, box."

Other winners this year included:

Michelle Russell, 12, in the fifth-eighth grade category. Russell, of Plymouth, is a seventh grade student at Pioneer Middle School. Her work featured a roaring fire along with the tree. Her Christmas wish -- "I want the soldiers to come home from Saudia Arabia."

Gary Sharland, 10, in the third-fourth grade category. Sharland, of Plymouth, is a fourth grade student at Allen Elementary School. His work also featured a fireplace with stockings hanging for goodies in the background. His Christmas wish, "is for poor people to be fed well."

Peter Neuroth, 7, in the first-second grade category. Neuroth, of Canton, is a second grade student at Isbister Elementary School. His work featured a well decorated tree, a fireplace, stairs and drawings of his sister and himself decorating the tree. His Christmas wish included a GI Joe, walkie-talkie, and... "I would also like to take my family to Disney World."

Debra Lee Hollins in the pre-school-kindergarten category. Hollins, of Belleville, also added a fireplace with stockings hung out awaiting Christmas goodies. Her Christmas wish -- "Please bring me sparkles and a tape player."

The contest honorable mentions this year included: Claire Walton, Rob Wesner, Betsey Lynch, Sean Baltazar, Katy Prew and Jessica Geiser.

There were some 250 entries in this year's contest.

The winners will receive gift certificates.

Why does such an important community institution like its newspaper run such a tiny listing in the "yellow pages"?

Newspapers

COMMUNITY CRIB THE 821 Pavilion
Plymouth Canton Northville 453-6900

When any of the many "yellow page" books become more than just booster chairs for Tiny Tim at the Holiday Dinner table, we'll consider running more than just a listing in the phone books.

Consider the utility of the annual GUIDE TO PLYMOUTH-CANTON-NORTHVILLE versus the phone books. All the completely updated community information -- from schools and governments to commerce and clubs, from cultural activities and events to history and help agencies -- is published each year only in the GUIDE.

The GUIDE'S convenient size makes it handier to use all year long than the phone book. And we think it's more important for the GUIDE to help Tiny Tim reach the Junior sports clubs than to reach the table.

Smart advertisers' smart money is on the GUIDE -- where a full page is priced within reason. They don't throw their ad budget away on the "yellow pages."

We're already planning the 12th annual GUIDE to this community for March 2, 1991. And we're saving space for your representation.

Mack sworn in, says farewell to commission

Carey added that the county will foot the entire bill for the election.

Mack, a Democrat re-elected in the 11th District -- that includes Canton -- on Nov. 6 was recently appointed to the Wayne County Probate bench by Governor Jim Blanchard. He was sworn in as judge on Monday.

The commission may appoint someone to fill the vacant seat until an election is held, said 10th District Commissioner Susan Heintz (R-Plymouth), but it is not mandatory.

"I have no idea what will happen," she said Monday.

Anyone appointed as an interim commissioner must also be from the Democratic party. Frontrunners as of now, said Heintz, appear to be Bryan Amman, Wayne County noise czar, and Shirley Poling, of Canton, a community action program coordinator for the UAW.

Others who have expressed interest include: Robert Beeny, a Wayne city council member, and Cynthia Burgess, of Canton, co-founder of the Canton Community Foundation.

In her cover letter to the commission, Burgess said she would accept the interim appointment but would not run for election. "The benefit to accepting this plan is that the candidates running for the position would be free to discuss the issues facing Wayne County without backroom partisan politics clouding the issues," she said.

Heintz said that it is possible that Mack's administrative assistant, Jerry Higgs, may be appointed to the seat. "He knows the issues, and he is well liked," she said. Higgs would not run in the election, she added.

Heintz said that she would probably be asked to abstain from any appointment, as she is a Republican who supported Vic Gustafson, Mack's 11th District opponent in the Nov. 6 general election.

In Mack's farewell comments to the commission, made Thursday, he said his conscience was clear. "I feel I have kept faith with the people of Wayne County, to work for county reform, to keep the spirit of the new charter alive," he said.

Mack left a proposal with the commission for changing the system in which committee chairs are awarded. He advocated a system in which chair appointments are permanent, instead of lasting only two years, as happens now.

Rock hoopsters quickly roll to 2-0

Salem guard Mike Mulder (22) looks for an open man in the Rocks basketball victory over Southfield on Friday night. (Crier photo by Barb Chelman)

BY RITA DERBIN

Jake Baker is on a roll and so is his team.

The Salem basketball squad is 2-0 following decisive non-conference victories last week.

Last Friday, Baker, a highly-touted senior swingman, led the attack with 21 points in three quarters as Salem trounced Southfield, 69-55.

The Rocks came out and quickly took a 20-12 lead in the first quarter, then outscored Southfield 24-12 to take a 20-point halftime lead.

Forward John Hoffmeyer contributed 14 points for the Rocks in the game and guard Mike Mulder also got hot, finishing with 13 points including four baskets from three-point range.

"We jumped out to a nice lead and forced Southfield to take shots they don't usually take," said coach Bob Brodie. "The defense also did a nice job shutting them down and holding them to one shot.

"There are still a few rough edges but overall we played better than the first game and are improving," Brodie added.

In their first game, the Rocks defeated Trenton, 56-45. Baker led the way with 17 points. He was followed by senior Cliff Lee and freshman James Head, who contributed 10 points apiece.

"At times we were ragged," Brodie said. "But hopefully the win set the tempo for the season."

The Rocks will host Ann Arbor Huron Friday night. Next week Salem will travel to Waterford Kettering on Tuesday, then host Farmington Harrison Thursday night before taking a two week holiday break. All games begin at 7:30 p.m.

Chiefs fine tune after hoops loss to Huron

BY RITA DERBIN

They may have lost, but the Canton basketball team is still learning from its early mistakes, according to coach Dave VanWagoner.

The Chiefs are 1-1 following a 56-43 loss to powerhouse Ann Arbor Huron Friday night.

"They are a very good team," said coach Dave VanWagoner. "But I think if we played up to our potential we could have won that game.

"I'm disappointed with the way we handled their full court pressure -- we didn't do well at all against it but we'll get better."

Mike Stafford and Kevin Holmes led the Chiefs with 11 points each in the game.

Last Tuesday the Chiefs opened their season with an 85-62 victory over Monroe.

In the game, senior Karl Wukie and junior Tony Koshatt had 15 points each to lead Canton. Mike Stafford added 13 points in the victory and Derrick McDonald chipped in 12. Also putting in good games on defense were seniors Rob Wilson (seven points) and Holmes (eight points).

"It was a good opening game," said VanWagoner. "We played well in spots and not so well in spots but we played well defensively and we won so I'm pleased."

The Chiefs will play at Dearborn next Tuesday and at Farmington on Thursday next week before taking a two-week break from action during the holidays. Both games begin at 7:30 p.m.

Rock swimmers look to defend conference title

BY RITA DERBIN

Repeating won't be easy, but the Rock swimmers are ready to defend their conference title.

"I think that, until proven otherwise, we'll be known for doing well in the Western Lakes conference," Salem coach Chuck Olson said. "Winning takes hard work and dedication and I've got that on this team."

With senior tri-captains Gary Bergman, Joe Pawluszka and Curt Witthoff leading the way, the Salem swim team is looking forward to a good season out of a good bunch of kids, according to Chuck Olson.

"(All three) will help us in a lot of different events," said Olson. "Last year's captains chose them -- they felt they could lead this team, and the team respects their decisions. They're a great bunch of seniors."

The road to another conference championship won't be easy, however, because every team in the conference is getting better.

"Winning the conference again is a

Seniors lead Chiefs in pool

BY RITA DERBIN

The Chiefs are looking for depth to carry them through the swim the season.

Led by senior tri-captains Wes Shasko, Shawn MacInnis and Jeff Brandenburg, coach Hooker Wellman is hoping the Canton team can win the Western division this season after finishing second last year.

"They are three good leaders," Wellman said of his captains. "They are all around swimmers that we are depending on to help us in a lot of ways and they do well in the classroom, too."

"I'm proud that the whole team is made up of fine academic athletes," Wellman added.

Returning swimmers with all around talent are Dave and Doug Nevi, Matt Terrel, Craig Steshetz, Mark Ealovega, Ryan Henkel, Pat Lancaster and Ron Torsin.

Returning divers are Nick Atwell, goal for the boys," Olson said. "But we'll have plenty of competition from the rest of the league -- Stevenson, Canton, North Farmington and Northville are all strong."

CEP Preview 1990

Helping the tri-captains will be a host of seniors -- Alan Hunt (freestyle); number one diver Pat McManaman, who may also swim some events this season; Brett Meik (freestyle, butterfly and individual medley); Todd Piwowar (freestyle and breaststroke); Matt Ponte (freestyle and butterfly); all-rounder Albert Sneath, Jon Stridiron (breaststroke and individual medley); and Tom Wilder (freestyle).

"I have great seniors who will help the captains -- they all have leadership qualities," Olson said.

Returning juniors expected to help the Rocks include Tom Beauchene

John Stirling and John Bonk.

Wellman is also looking forward to coaching Mike Orris, a talented freshman who is the younger brother of former Salem swim standout Ron Orris. Ron set two state records enroute to winning two state titles last season and Mike, according to Wellman, will make his mark for the Chiefs before he's through.

"Mike will help the team immediately and is an outstanding swimmer," Wellman said. "He will be swimming at state level before long."

With a big supporting cast of younger swimmers that will provide help in all areas, Wellman is excited about the upcoming season.

"We'll get better as the season goes on," he said. "We'll depend on depth to get us through the conference meet -- this team has a lot of swimmers who can do a lot of things."

(breastroke and freestyle); all-rounder Brett Petroskey; Noel Ranka (freestyle); and number two diver Steve Salhaney.

Sophomores include Matt Erickson (butterfly); Scott Helmstader (backstroke and freestyle); Phil Hoffmeyer (freestyle and breaststroke); Chris Lynn (individual medley); diver Justin Richardson; Rex Umney (freestyle); and Scott Wiklund (butterfly and individual medley).

Olson also has several freshmen who may help out this season. "Twelve freshmen came out for the team," he said. "And I'm pleased with their attitude -- they work hard."

The Rocks opened their season yesterday at Dearborn. They will host the ninth annual Western Lakes Relays Saturday (Dec. 15) at 1 p.m.

Team 'on upswing' Chief grapplers young, able

BY RITA DERBIN

The Chief wrestling squad is getting its act together.

"This team is on the upswing," said Canton coach Ray Givens. "This is a growing year for us -- we have mostly freshman and sophomores -- and it's only going to get better for us."

The young team finished eighth out of 12 teams at the Belleville Invitational last Saturday, but three of veterans on the team put in good performances for the Chiefs.

Senior Liam Rentz (145 lbs.) and junior co-captain George Young (171 lbs.) won their weight divisions with strong performances and Mark Meszaros placed fourth at 189 lbs.

Rentz is the team standout and Givens feels he has the experience and potential to be a force in the state.

"Liam is the best wrestler we have and is a real team leader," said Givens. "He's coming on strong and, barring injuries, it wouldn't surprise me if he won a state title -- he's that caliber of a wrestler."

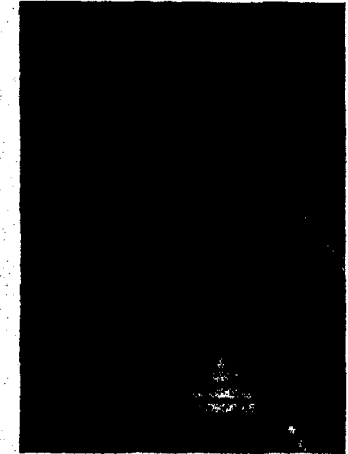

"It's nice having a kid like him on the team, he works hard and the younger kids look at him and work harder," Givens added. "He, and all the older kids, are helping them out the younger kids and helping them out -- it's not varsity and junior varsity over here -- we're the Canton wrestling team."

Young and fellow co-captain senior James Carnes, who wrestles at 130 lbs., will also be expected to lead the young team with their experience.

Overall, the team's performance at Belleville gave Givens optimism.

"We did well for such a young team," he said. "We put the most experienced kids on the mat and a lot of kids won matches that we didn't expect -- and everyone gained experience, too."

There may be rocky times throughout the season as different wrestlers will be given the opportunity to compete, but Givens is looking forward to seeing the team grow into a competitive force within the league. There is a lot of competition among the lighter weight classes so a lot of wrestlers will be gaining experience as the team molds.

"This year we're not emphasizing wins so much as we're emphasizing improvement," Givens added. "We don't have a feeder program here so the first couple weeks of practice were spent on teaching technique and the fundamentals and the kids are responding."

CEP Preview 1990

The Chiefs will host Farmington tonight with junior varsity wrestling at 6:30 and varsity beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Canton will then host the 16-team Civitan tournament (formerly the John Glenn Big Red Tournament) this Saturday (Dec. 15) with matches beginning at 10:30 a.m. and the finals at around 6:30 p.m.

"We're excited about the tournament," Givens said. "The Civitans have been doing well and we're going to give it up," Givens said.

For City merchants Garbage a big issue

billing procedure.

"Why should we go out and buy something the private sector already has, and has had for some time?" he said.

Now, businesses or landlords are billed a flat rate to lease a dumpster or contract with a private hauler. A six-yard dumpster costs $20 a month; an eight-yard dumpster $21.67. If a dumpster is shared, the cost is divided, usually without regard to who uses it more.

Russ Webster, owner of the Peniman Deli, now pays about $6 a month to lease a dumpster, sharing a dumpster with two other businesses. Webster said he knows he's getting a bargain from the city.

"Absolutely it's been a deal," he said. "I have no problem with paying more."

When the price goes up, however, he said, businesses who share a dumpster are going to want to make sure they are not paying for someone else's garbage. "That's going to be the issue," Webster said. "Who pays how much?"

Along those lines, Rex Tubbs, owner of the Engraving Connection, told the city commission he is worried about residents throwing their refuse into commercial dumpsters, costing businesses more.

"The security of the dumpsters is my primary concern," he said.

Sincock admitted that there will be some confusion in the early part of the transition to private pickup. But he said the private sector will do the service more cheaply than if the city were to continue it and pass all of the cost onto businesses.

"As the market is showing, there are people out there who can do this for less than we do it," Sincock said.

Sincock, who is reviewing the bid proposals, said he will have a recommendation at Monday's commission meeting.

Canton board looks at curbside recycling

BY JIM WHITE

Canton's Board of Trustees was expected to okay funding for two additional months of a pilot program in curbside recyclables collection last night.

The pilot program will begin in mid-January, 1991, according to Loren Bennett, township clerk and a member of Canton's Solid Waste Committee. Recycled materials will be collected in Franklin-Palmer, Greenbrook, and Holiday Park subdivisions.

Originally, it the program was planned to last for one month, but the board was expected to authorize $2,086 for two extra months of pilot pick-up.

Once the pilot program is complete, residents of the three subdivisions will be asked to complete a survey on the service, Bennett said. Input from residents will be considered and improvements made before the program is implemented township-wide in April.

The board was also expected to authorize a $10 fee for replacement recycling bins. Reports of lost or stolen bins would be handled by the township's Public Safety Department.

Ice Spectacular

carvers to the Moscow International Snow Festival," she said. "The (Ice Spectacular) board will select them."

The board is also hoping for state or federal help in paying for the exchange, Kosteva said. The Moscow event takes place Feb. 4 through Feb. 11.

The Soviet carvers join four Japanese ice sculptures in Plymouth for the 1991 Ice Spectacular, to be held Jan. 16-21.

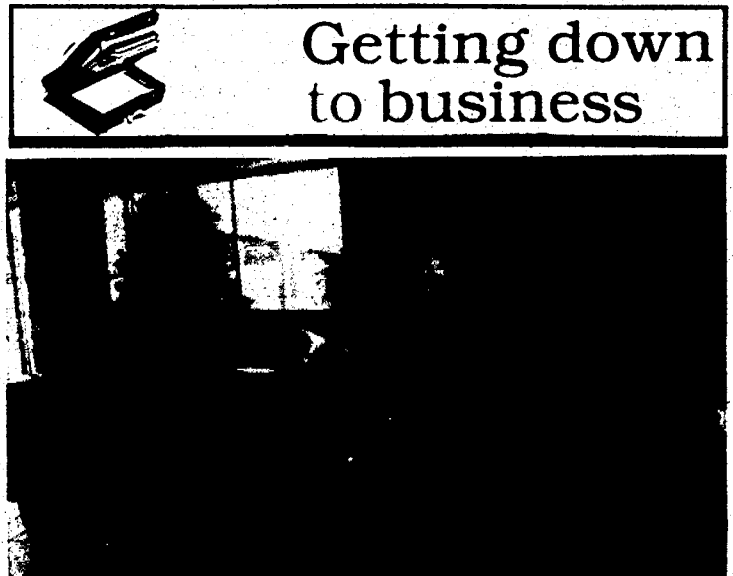

Other scheduled events include a celebrity charity carving, an ice skating show, a Detroit Red Wings old timers game, and nine laser shows beamed onto the Penn Theatre off Kellogg Park.

The Ice Spectacular draws attracts an average of 400,000 people to downtown Plymouth annually and includes over 200 individual ice sculptures.

This is the ninth annual "spectacular," which Kosteva said is "more exciting" than a festival.

Karen Tibus, president of the Saturn dealership in Plymouth Township, behind a product in her new showroom.

New dealership busy Saturn in demand

PHILIP TARDANI

With her new dealership all but completed, Karen Tibus is ready to keep selling Saturn cars.

Demand is outstripping supply at this point, however, said Tibus, president of The Plymouth-Canton Community's only Saturn dealership.

"We've sold everything we've received so far," said Tibus, who has been in the new dealership on Massey Drive in Plymouth Township for about two weeks. "The showroom has customers in all day long."

Rigid quality control at Saturn's Spring Hill, TN, plant, however, have left dealers nationwide waiting for more cars.

Tibus said when she first opened her showroom the only car in it was a loaner -- and not for sale. Now, she says, people are test driving cars off the truck, before they have been prepped.

The Plymouth Saturn dealership has sold 14 cars so far, she said, and has orders for 45 more.

"We're getting them to the people as fast as we can," Tibus said. "Customers have been very understanding."

People have come in from as far away as Brighton and Romeo to pick up a Saturn, she said. Her dealership is one of four in the state, with a fifth scheduled to open the first of the year.

Tibus is also one of two women nationwide operating a Saturn dealership, though she said she is somewhat surprised there aren't more.

"I think women do very well in the business," she said.

The long hours of the job may deter women with families, Tibus said, adding that it doesn't interfere with her married life.

"We just make sure our free time is each other's," she said of her husband. "It's working out real well."

Final construction on the dealership should be completed this week with some last minute work in the service department, Tibus said. Ground was broken on the site about three and a half months ago.

The site on Ann Arbor Road was a second choice for a Saturn dealership. Tibus and her partner Donald Massey had originally hoped to build on Ann Arbor, next to Bill Knapp's.

The Plymouth Township Board of Trustees voted the necessary rezoning down, however, saying it went against the nature of the township's future land use plan.

But Tibus said the Massey Drive site has so far been a good second choice, noting the full showroom without the benefit of advertising.

Meanwhile, Tibus is waiting for the supply of Saturns to pick up so she can get a dealership car for her own use.

"I'll happily turn in my Cadillac," she said.

Schools grant

The Plymouth-Canton Community Business-Education Partnership has received a $4,800 grant from the Michigan State Board of Education, according to Betty Bloch, program coordinator for the partnership.

One of 16 programs of its kind to receive state money, the business-education partnership will use the money to expand cooperation between businesses and the schools at all educational levels.

The Adopt-a-School program will receive funds to provide elementary teachers with a list of businesses available to enhance curriculum through presentations.

A career awareness program is being developed by Unisys Corp. and West Middle School that will allow eighth graders at all five middle schools to participate in careers classes.

The Plymouth and Canton Chambers of Commerce are actively involved in developing partnership programs. Unisys, Ford Motor Co., Mcler, Michigan National Bank, Target, and Kroger are some of the businesses involved.

S'craft Board plans for trustee appointment

BY KEN VOYLES

With the resignation of Jack Kirksey effective April, 1991, the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees has begun the process of finding a replacement board member.

During last week's regular board meeting, a schedule was approved for finding Kirksey's replacement. The board also agreed to begin seeking applications from area residents interested in sitting on the board.

According to Mary Breen, chairperson of the college board, the applications will be reviewed early next year with interviews set for sometime in March.

Kirksey will remain on the board through the March, 1991 meeting, said Breen, who added that the new appointment will be made by April. An election will then be held sometime in June next year, she said, and the appointee will then have to seek election to the board.

"It's a crucial time of year for us what with the budget and everything," said Breen.

Kirksey is leaving the board after a dispute with other members over the selection of a law firm to represent the college, said Breen.

The Plymouth firm of Law, Essad, Hemming and Polaczyk was retained by the board in October after a lengthy search, replacing the college's Detroit firm of 15 years, Miller, Canfield Paddock and Stone.

Breen said Kirksey wanted to retain

Miller, Canfield, but the board felt that Schoolcraft College was just a "little fish in the Miller Canfield pond."

"We so started pushing for a local firm," Breen said. "Jack apparently did not like the procedure."

Culinary team honored

Schoolcraft College's Culinary Arts Salon Team received the best of show award for culinary schools at the recent Expo Gast '90 competition in Luxembourg and won gold medals in several individual competitions.

Among team members are team captain Mary Brady, certified executive chef, a Northville resident; coach Jeffrey Gabriel, certified master chef, of Plymouth; and Pam Ford, of Plymouth.

More than 1,000 international chefs competed in the World Cup event, which is ranked the second most important team competition on the international chefs' circuit and prepares chefs for the Culinary Olympics in 1992.

The Schoolcraft College team was the only Michigan college team in the competition.

The instruction the team receive is largely responsible for their success, according to Brady. While students develop their talents throughout the two-year program, they are receiving training from "one of the best people in the world at what he's doing," she said.

The team's culinary creations were judged outstanding in the following categories: appearance, perfection, creativity, design, practicality, and nutritional quality.

Car smacks store front

BY JIM WHITE

The Winkelman's store in Canton got an unexpected visit Sunday when a car slammed through its store front in a shopping center at Ford and Sheldon roads.

According to Pat Nemecek, Canton Police's public information officer, at about 1:35 p.m. Sunday, Irene Renas, 65, of Canton, was driving towards the store in the parking lot and Marsha Dowdy, 42, of Ypsilanti, was driving west in the thoroughfare in front of the store.

Renas hit Dowdy, then veered up the curb, and apparently hit the gas instead of the brake, Nemecek said. Her car crashed through the front window of the clothing store and came to rest 30 feet inside the store, according to the police report.

Renas was taken to Oakwood for treatment of minor injuries, Nemecek said. No one else was injured in the incident.

"We are certainly thankful for that," said Carolyn Smith, Winkelman's store manager.

Nemecek said that Renas was found at fault, but no ticket would be written since the accident occurred on private property.

The Train Chronicles Contest 5 Where's Frosty???

It wasn't obvious right away.

It always takes the City a while to put up the completed holiday display in Kellogg Park. It takes a long while when you can't get to the park because the gates are down and that train is starting to slow down -- you JUST KNOW ITS GOING TO START BACKING UP!!!!

Anyway, coming out of the watering hole across from the park it suddenly became clear that something was missing.

Something big!

FROSTY WAS GONE!!!!

WHAT! WHERE! WHY!

All these years, there he would be, sitting in the middle of the fountain in all his tacky splendor. Protecting the Plymouth Yuletide display from the wrath of the A.C.L.U.'s vigilant stand against anything that might be faintly religious on municipally-owned property.

BUT THIS YEAR FROSTY ISN'T THERE!! HE'S GONE!

And this, Chronicle Fans, leads us to our contest destination -- your chance to figure where Frosty has disappeared to and, maybe even, why?

Did Ken Vogras take him home when he retired?

Are those rumors true that he was spotted on the porch of the Grand Hotel (there was a mysterious visitor from the far north spotted in town recently handing out Unicorn Hunting Licenses). There also were rumors of him returning to his original owner in Sault Ste. Marie. (If that's it, maybe he went back one half at a time, like he arrived.)

Anyway, it's your chance now. Where is Frosty?

Can we get him back before the A.C.L.U. strikes, and rids Kellogg Park of those camel riders forever?

Send your entries to the "Where's Frosty?" contest care of: The Train Chronicles, The Crier, 821 Penniman Ave., Plymouth, 48170.
