PLYMOUTH IS A GREAT CITY

Since 1825 people moving into the area have called Plymouth home...the many personalities shaping our community have helped to create our vibrant town with a strong identity.

Around the city, Plymouth Township developed, drawing on our strengths and heritage, continuing to add to our character and reputation.

To the south of Plymouth, developed the community of Canton, full of tradition, desiring to establish its own sense of purpose and direction.

TOGETHER A STRONG COMMUNITY
PLYMOUTH PLYMOUTH TOWNSHIP CANTON

To those political leaders seeking to divide our community we say:
STOP...GO NO FURTHER

1. Why should 100% of the taxpayers pay for a recreational airport when it will service less than 1% of the people?
2. Isn't it likely that obligation and/or revenue bonds will be needed to pay for the operation, maintenance and expansion of the facilities at Mettetal Airport?
3. Can we afford to permanently remove the 66 acres of Mettetal Airport (prime commercial or light industrial property) from the tax rolls with no replacement?
4. Is it in the best interest of Plymouth-Canton citizens to face the closing of Joy Road and endure the increase in air traffic, noise and the risk of another plane crash?
5. Why should the people assume the cost of a massive environmental clean-up because underground fuel tanks have been in the ground for 75-90 years at Mettetal?
6. Is it ethical for 2 governmental units to form an Authority and purchase land in a third governmental unit over the objections of the citizens in the third governmental unit (Canton Township)?
7. Why won't the City of Plymouth Commissioners allow the citizens to vote on a referendum whether or not we should purchase Mettetal Airport?
8. The recent published MICHIGAN AVIATION SYSTEM PLAN states that the future use for Mettetal Airport is to be classified as a T-5 airport, which is defined as having "the highest developed general aviation facilities with crosswind runways able to accommodate significant jet aircraft activity". (The Detroit City Airport is also classified as a T-5 airport)

METTETAL AIRPORT IS NOT AN ISSUE TO UNITE...BUT RATHER HAS BECOME AN ISSUE DIVIDING.

We are residents of the City of Plymouth that oppose the Plymouth City Commission joining the effort to purchase Mettetal Airport. On Monday January 21, 1991 we ask the Commissioners to vote NO.

Canton Township has a right to determine its own future without interference and control being forced on it by another community.

CANTON TOWNSHIP VOTED 5-2 NOT TO PURCHASE METTETAL WE RESPECT THAT DECISION.

The issues in the City of Plymouth are many. We say to our Commissioners let us deal with delivery of services, balancing our budget, restoring faith in our city leaders, the downtown merchants, etc.
SOLVE OUR OWN PROBLEMS AT HOME FIRST!!

Petitions are available to circulate/sign asking to place this issue of the Mettetal Airport Authority on the ballot. To help in this effort call Dwight Eckler, 1127 Ross, Plymouth, 453-8373.

Voice your opposition to the proposed creation of an airport authority by the City of Plymouth. Call the City of Plymouth Commissioners before their vote on Monday, January 21, 1991.

WE APOLOGIZE TO OUR 60,000 FRIENDS IN CANTON for the actions of our political leaders. Come and visit our beautiful city and experience the Plymouth hospitality.

Schools' smokeless plan about ready

BY KEN VOYLES

The "skeleton" of a possible smoke-free policy for the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools district will be presented to the board of education Monday (Jan. 21).

Plymouth-Canton Superintendent John M. Hoben told the board during a regular meeting Monday that the administration was ready to present a proposed policy which would call for the complete elimination of smoking in all district facilities.

One of the board's 1991 objectives, as outlined in a four-page objectives and goals document, is to have a policy in place "on a smoke and tobacco free K-12 school environment and establish an ending date for full implementation."

The administration has been grappling with a smoke free policy since the start of the 1990-91 school year.

A recent smoking survey among district personnel showed a majority of non-smokers among the staff who responded. Of 717 surveys returned, 631 said they were non-smokers.

Of the smokers, 55 said they would be interested in a program to help them quit smoking, but only 17 said they would be willing to pay for the program in part or full.

The survey, sent to all district personnel, was completed in November last year.

Some students at Centennial Educational Park (CEP) have openly complained since last fall about student smoking areas set aside at Canton and Salem high schools.

The students have said the current high school handbook restricts the use of smoking products at CEP, but that the administration allows students to still smoke on campus in designated areas.

The students said that the administration does not enforce the handbook ban, but administrators have said that enforcing the ban currently is nearly impossible, partially because there is no "smoke free" policy in the district.

Will weather play fair? Ice creations just spectacular!

BY PHILIP TARDANI

With the huge blocks of ice already taking shape, the Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular is off the ground.

The free event starts today (Jan. 16) and runs through Monday, Jan. 21. The various ice carvings will remain on display throughout the day and night.

Extended weather forecasts call for highs in the low to mid-30s and mostly cloudy to partly sunny skies for this week. That should be cold enough to keep the more than 200 ice sculptures in Kellogg Park and on city streets in good shape for the six-day event.

But Tuesday's warm weather has already caused the cancellation of a planned ice skating rink on Main Street.

Assistant Plymouth City Manager Paul Sincoc said he expects a big crowd for this year's event.

"I think you could see upwards of 300,000 to 400,000 people," he said. "It depends on the weather."

Pam Kosteva, executive director of the ice festival group, said she expects crowds to be on par with last year's ice event even though the spectacular is only lasting six days this year compared with two weeks in 1990.

Sincoc also added that the expected temperatures are "ideal" for ice carving.

Carvers from the Soviet Union and Japan arrived late Friday night and began sculpting Sunday.

Laser shows are scheduled tonight at 6:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. in Kellogg Park. The two shows on Thursday will be at 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. Times for Friday through Monday are 6:30 p.m. and 9 p.m.

There will also be professional carving competitions, a Red Wing Old Timers game, and an Old Man Winter Look Alike Contest.

Main Street will remain closed during the six-day spectacular.

Ice festival goers can park behind city hall or in the Central Parking Deck. There will also be plenty of parking along city streets (except in residential areas).

Northwest backs out of school City group wants charter referendum

BY JIM WHITE

New developments in the Mettetal Airport saga may fuel further debate at the Jan. 21 Plymouth City Commission meeting when the airport's future will be discussed.

The commission is expected to vote Monday on forming an airport joint operating board with Plymouth Township.

A group of city residents called Concerned Citizens is trying to collect enough signatures before the commission meeting to have an amendment of the City Charter put on the ballot for all Plymouth city residents to decide.

The charter amendment would prohibit the city from acquiring, operating, constructing, or owning an airport, or from joining an "intergovernmental agreement" that would seek to do so, without the approval of a majority of the electorate.

In a related development, Northwest Airlines has said it will not contribute money to a proposed aviation college at Mettetal.

Dwight Eckler, a city resident and head of Concerned Citizens, said his group needs to collect 511 signatures — or 15 per cent of the city voter turnout in the last election — to have the proposed amendment regarding airports placed on the ballot.

"Why not?" he said. "Why shouldn't the residents vote? There are more people in Plymouth that don't want that airport."

Eckler added that he submitted 575 signatures at the commission's Dec. 17 meeting of residents who did not want the commission to join an airport authority.

At that meeting the commission voted to table the issue until Jan. 21.

In a letter to commissioners, Eckler cited several reasons why he felt the airport should not be operated by a public authority involving the city.

"Can we afford to remove 62 acres of Mettetal Airport (prime commercial or light industrial property) from the tax rolls with no replacement?" Eckler wrote.

New member plan complete

City seeks DDA director

BY PHILIP TARDANI

If you're experienced in downtown marketing and promotion and looking for work, the City of Plymouth might be able to help you out.

The city's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) last Thursday authorized City Manager Gordon Jaeger to look for a full-time DDA director.

DDA Chairperson Greg Goodman said the implementation of new downtown streetscapes -- expected to begin this summer and cost about $5 million -- will necessitate having a director whose sole responsibility is the downtown.

"We're talking about a substantial amount of money here," he said. "I think the best way to protect that investment is to make sure we have a full-time person looking after our interests."

Jaeger said an approximate salary for the director would be about $40,000.

He said qualifications for the job should include some of the following:

- Knowledge of downtown marketing and promotion.
- Public relations skill.
- Ability to work with a citizens' board, elected and appointed city officials, community organizations and the public.
- Three years experience in a similar position as director or assistant.
- At least a bachelor's degree in public or business administration, marketing or a related field.

The DDA received a copy of the new downtown development master plan from the architectural firm Schervish, Vogel, Merz.

It includes four phases of streetscape development, including a planter in the median of Main Street between Penniman Avenue and Ann Arbor Trail, new brick sidewalks, curb cuts, crosswalks, and increased landscaping.

Architect Kent Anderson, who has been working with the DDA on the streetscape plans, said the DDA needs a coordinator for the project.

"You need somebody that can interface with the designer and the merchants and the city," he said.

Goodman said he would like to see the director spend a lot of time on the streetscape sight, "making sure the dollars line up with what was allocated.

"When it's all said and done, there are a lot of things that have to be monitored," he said.

There are "a number of sources," both state and national to help find a director, Jaeger said.

"I think we'll have a good choice from the candidates we get," he added.

Care facilities must alert Twp.

BY PHILIP TARDANI

Adult Foster Care facilities opening in Plymouth Township must notify township hall 45 days prior to the opening, a Wayne County Circuit Court judge has ruled.

Judge Charles Kaufman ordered the Michigan Department of Social Services (DSS) to comply with state laws requiring notification in a permanent injunction issued on Dec. 14.

Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen called the ruling a victory.

"Basically what we asked them (the foster care facilities) to do is follow state law and that's what the judge ordered," Breen said.

The township filed a lawsuit against the DSS last April charging that officials were not notified when a foster care facility opened at 9236 Rocker St.

Student bill of rights reviewed by Schools

BY KEN VOYLES

A student bill of rights recently written by Close Up students at Centennial Educational Park (CEP) is being reviewed by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools administration to see if the document can be used in a student handbook.

The 13-section document, written as an exercise by classes of Close Up students at CEP, was presented informally to the Plymouth-Canton Schools Board of Education before the holiday break.

Dean Swartzwelter, president of the board, has since requested that it be reviewed by the district's legal counsel to see if it conflicts with current district policies, local, and state laws.

In a memo to Tom MacKenzie, Canton High principal, Errol Goldman, the district's director of employee relations and personnel, said the document needs to be "compared" to current board policies.

Goldman said differences should be identified and reviewed before having legal counsel study it. "I believe this exercise will also be beneficial to the students," Goldman said in the Jan. 2 memo.

Swartzwelter said the board also wants to hear from the student government at CEP before possibly acting formally on the bill of rights.

"There are a lot of interesting points in it (the document)," he said. "But we also want input from the student government."

Thomas Tattan, director of secondary education for the schools, said, "I don't know where it's going to go.

"I think it was a good exercise," he continued. "And it's an interesting idea."

MacKenzie said, "I feel very positive about what the students have done. It's very exciting."

"We have to look at it carefully to make sure it doesn't violate school policy," he continued. "I'm supportive of what they're doing. Let's sit down and make sure it follows policies we all have to live by."

MacKenzie said he has already met with some of the authors as part of the process of looking at the document for possible inclusion in the student handbook at CEP.

Welcome Ice Friends

For the ninth year, enjoy the Ice Festival!

Over the past decade, The Plymouth-Canton Community has increased its notoriety with what is now called the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

As the winter event has evolved, it has also grown as a popular family-visiting destination some 300,000 "festies" are expected.

If you're a visitor to the community, take time to enjoy the "art for the moment" before it melts, but don't forget to take in the other highlights of Plymouth-Canton as well. Most of the shops in town will be open too. And come back for all the many other events this festive community has to offer.

If you're a "townie," say "Hello!" to the visitors.

And be sure to welcome the visiting Japanese and Russians. (They provided the welcome to you all shown above.)

The ice show looks to be truly international and spectacular this year.

Join Mettetal preservation

As the Mettetal Airport "non authority" agreement heads to an important vote Monday at City Hall, only one thing is clear:

The issue has been clouded by many side issues and smokescreens -- most of which are designed only to link delays with defeat. In an "all's fair in love, war and politics" display, some proponents but far more opponents, have tainted an objective look Mettetal preservation.

Surprisingly, the only smokescreen not added yet to Monday's vote is the inappropriateness of scheduling a city commission meeting on the official state holiday for Martin Luther King's birthday.

With malice toward none

This is not to knock those seeking answers to questions on both sides of the issue -- the brief tabling by the city, in fact, provided an opportunity to explore the joint operating agreement ramifications more thoroughly. But legitimate questioning must be accompanied by intellectual pursuit of the answers. To simply throw out questions without any real effort to pursue resolution is intellectual cowardice.

The lies, distortions, namecalling and so forth has only hindered public policy resolution.

In that climate, it's clear the city commissioners have a difficult chore Monday night. But, to a small degree, some of them have added to the emotional levels by not daring to step up to a decision.

Digging through the intentional obfuscations and addressing the legitimate questions about Mettetal will leave only one choice for the commissioners Monday: join Plymouth Township (and, hopefully, Canton and the Northvilles eventually) in a Mettetal preservation. It is the only course for 20 years from now as well as for today.

Voyles' column good for Mettetal vote

EDITOR:
Hooray! You are finally with us on the idea of letting the people of Plymouth decide whether or not they want their city to acquire an airport (Ken Voyles' Jan. 2 column).

I don't agree with you, however, that many residents are confused. We aren't confused at all; we are frustrated. We are frustrated because the many important questions we have been asking have still not been clearly and specifically answered.

We are also frustrated because it has become apparent to many of us that whatever the citizens think or want is irrelevant to some of the commissioners. Some commissioners have clearly indicated they made up their minds weeks ago and any attempt to get them to listen to our concerns or opinions is just an effort in futility.

A group of citizens has been working for a referendum to put the question to the voters of the city, but city hall shot down their petition on a technicality. However, there surely must be a way in which we can still exercise our constitutional right to the democratic process.

Those who are interested in protecting their right to determine their own destiny and that of the city in which they live, should write the mayor and the commissioners -- a postcard will do -- or call city hall and let them know we want to vote on this issue.

Let's not allow ourselves to be disenfranchised.

Hearts out after tragedy

EDITOR:
Our Jan. 2 issue of The Crier arrived today (at our place in Florida) and we were saddened and shocked to learn of the heart-breaking tragedy in the Dell'Orco family of Canton.

It is heartening to read about the overwhelming response of compassion and support on the part of neighbors, friends, business owners, churches and even strangers in this tragic situation.

Our hearts and prayers go out to all of them and to the Dell'Orco family.

We are fortunate to live in a community where there is such an outpouring of love and concern and people who are eager to help at a time like this.

Thanks for the support

EDITOR:
Thank you for the literacy article in the Jan. 2 issue of The Crier. You presented a lot of information that is important to the community. Awareness of the program is an ongoing challenge. Hopefully, more adult non-readers will be reached through your article.

Thank you for your interest in our efforts. I will keep you informed of future activities.

Comments erroneous Yes, there is a Santa

EDITOR:
In response to Paul Nastoff's letter to the editor which appeared in The Crier on Jan. 9, Nastoff sounds like the "Grinch" that stole Christmas.

Please be assured that I carefully review every letter Nastoff sends to me and, in the past, have appreciated many of his constructive comments as well as some compliments. I have also listened intently on the occasion of his presentations during the "citizen comment" portion of the city commission meetings. Some of Nastoff's suggestions are good and have been followed up with the administration.

However, Nastoff's comments evidently directed at me in his epistle to the newspaper were totally off base and erroneous. He seemed to intimate that I was attempting to "stifle" public comment during my comments on the preservation of Mettetal Airport agenda item.

On the contrary, my comments were exactly the opposite. My intent was to support the opportunity for all to speak on the issue without being threatened or intimidated by "others" in the audience. My comments were directed at those individuals -- from both within and outside our community -- who were interrupting, making snide remarks, being unruly, being totally disruptive, and in other ways being rude to the speaker.

I was protecting the rights of those to speak both for or against the issue being discussed.

A review of the record and the minutes of the meeting support the fact that my comments were in support of those who wanted to speak -- without threats or intimidation -- and against those who were being rude.

The same thing had occurred a few weeks ago on the Roc Street apartments issue (I supported your position regarding that controversy) and I almost said something about the unfulness at that time. Remember, these are commission meetings and not an open house or town meeting and audience participants should conduct themselves accordingly.

Another "commission watcher" who has been sitting in on the monthly commission meetings a lot longer than Nastoff (20 years as a matter of fact) was kind enough to send me a letter before Nastoff's hit the paper. He was in the row right behind Nastoff. Here is what he said:

"I am proud of you. I thought your remarks Monday night were appropriate and well delivered... It is my observation that sometimes an audience needs to be 'lectured' -- especially when some of its members are overly emotional and unfair."

You see, Nastoff, someone else heard my remarks and clearly understood what I was saying.

Nastoff can be assured that I will not be a "weeping violet" and stand idly by while someone swears in front of a lady, smokes in a non-smokers area, or is rude to someone else who is trying to speak. Yes, Nastoff, there is a Santa Claus.

JOHN F. VOS III
PLYMOUTH COMMISSIONER

Canton planners voted independently on airport

EDITOR:
The residents of Canton and Plymouth owe a word of thanks to the Canton Planning Commission for the defeat of Tom Yack's recent attempts to frustrate the "Plymouth Mettetal Educational Airpark."

Not all members voted the same way, but all voted their own way; none of them were under Yack's thumb, as he appeared to believe they were.

With Canton's roads, schools, and businesses' relations in a shamble, Yack's reign is clearly going to be short-lived. His closed-minded opposition to the preservation of Mettetal Airport and the building there of a vocational school flies in the face of his community's wishes, and has only increased the velocity of his downhill slide.

Mettetal's potential for service to her community is simply incredible; citizens love her as an interesting feature of their colorful community; business leaders have repeatedly stood up at community meetings in her defense and have pledged, in writing, several hundred thousand dollars in donations to buy and improve her; local school officials are wildly excited at using an aviation-based curriculum to attract students to valuable vocational training which will place them in high-paid jobs in aviation and manufacturing industries.

What a pity it would have been if one transient administrator had succeeded in squandering this prize!

The local papers have told us that local tax money will not be used in the purchase and preservation of the airport. A little money will come from private donations, but the lion's share will come from federal and state aviation trust funds. These are funds paid only by users of the National Airspace System, available only for use in airport and airway improvements. You have paid nothing into these funds unless you have used the National Airspace System.

The law says that trust fund monies must serve the National Airspace System; but it doesn't say that it must not share anything else! The trust fund must serve an airport; the airport may serve the local community in as many ways as it wants. That includes education, the noblest use of all, as well as her existing business and recreational uses.

What an example we can set for every city in America to see -- business, education, recreation, and that most American industry of all -- aviation, working together to educate, employ, inspire and entertain the surrounding community.

Press on, Plymouth! We have seen the future, and it is us.

Local band aims to share God's love

BY JIM WHITE

"Our whole purpose is to encourage, uplift, and refresh Christians of all denominations in their continued walk with the Lord," said Gail Carson, a Plymouth Township resident and driving force behind Gail Carson & The Key of G, a new three-member band.

"We're trying to share His love in a non-threatening way," Carson said. "We don't want people turned off."

The band has just completed its first album, "Take a Little Step," and is excited about its potential in the Christian music market.

Carson, 28, writes all the lyrics for the group. She sings and plays acoustic guitar and keyboards. Jeff Lightfoot, 30, of Livonia, is the bassist, and Rick Zerndt, 34, of Garden City, plays classical and electric guitar.

The result is a sound described by Carson as "a fresh folk feel brought to light rock. Our melodies are very singable."

Carson, who has been writing songs since she was 13, got together with Lightfoot in January, 1990, to create some songs for her church, Calvary Baptist, in Canton.

"I am best friends with Daryl (Carson's husband)," said Lightfoot.

"I had known she was a musician for some time but she didn't play my style."

"He was Rush and I was Peter, Paul, and Mary," Carson said.

"But I helped her with the music for her songs and we decided to form a band," Lightfoot added.

Zerndt joined the band in April, answering an ad in Trading Times.

"We were looking for an electric guitarist to pick up our sound for the high-school kids," said Lightfoot.

"Rick is the best guitar player I've ever played with and I've played with a lot."

Zerndt played "a lot of rock when I was a kid." But he recently received his bachelor's in music from Madonna College.

"It's interesting, because Gail and Rick are both classically trained, and I am a seat of the pants player," said Lightfoot.

The band works very well as a group. Whenever Carson comes up with lyrics — "she has called me at 2 a.m. with ideas," said Lightfoot — Zerndt and Lightfoot are ready to put the words to music.

"Working with these guys is great," said Carson. "Writing songs is a part of my life. When I reach obstacles, I try to figure out how I dealt with them, and a song just comes out."

"There is something in our songs for everyone," she said. "We have a mission. There are too many bad influences in music these days. Our songs have good, clean lyrics about the love of God."

The group wants to avoid the stereotype of evangelists, something people sometimes connect with having ideas forced upon them.

"When people hear 'Christian music,' they think you are setting yourself up to be better than them," Carson said. "We're not better. We are all in the family of God, we all need to uplift each other."

The band wants to concentrate on playing for junior high and high school youth groups in local churches, playing in some outdoor festivals this summer, and continuing their work with the Sonlight Ministry in Ypsilanti.

They will perform Feb. 10 at the Northville Masonic Temple with Dicky Lee's duo, The Reason. Lee produced "Take a Little Step" at his Unity Productions studio in City of Plymouth.

Gary Cooper, who played flute on the album, will also join The Key of G live in Northville.

Tapes of "Take a Little Step" will be on sale by the end of January at Eden's Books in Canton and at Giordano Gallery in the City of Northville.

Community meeting features editor

Joe H. Stroud, editor of the Detroit Free Press, will speak at a community meeting sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Colonial Plymouth and the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting, open to the public, will be held Jan. 24 from noon to 1:30 p.m. at the Mayflower Meeting House, 455

S. Main in the City of Plymouth.

Stroud will speak on the topic, "Beyond the Cold War: U.S. Policy in a Brave New World."

Lunch will be served. The cost is $8 per person.

For reservations call the Plymouth chamber at 453-1540.

Tell it to Phyllis

By Phyllis Redfern

Ice on the roads, ice on the sidewalks, ice in the park -- there is ice everywhere. Thank heavens some of the ice is in the form of beautiful ice sculptures.

Today is the official beginning of Plymouth's International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

Unlike the past few years, the weather is going to cooperate this year, so be sure to bundle up. The odds have to be in our favor for cold weather after last year's meltdown.

There are many new and interesting features to make this the best ice show ever. The laser show is a must to see. It will be presented twice every evening in Kellogg Park. An ice skating demonstration will also take place on a special rink on Main Street.

A Celebrity Charity Carving Competition will kick-off the event today at 2 p.m. Throughout the week, professional ice carvers will be busy carving in the park, and the competitions will be held on the weekend.

One of the most interesting aspects to this year's show is the international flavor. Four professional ice carvers with world titles from Japan and three professionals from the Soviet Union are on hand demonstrating their talents.

Since none of the Japanese and only one of the Soviets speak any English, communications have been interesting. Translators have been on hand to help out with some of the events.

Viktor, the Russian who speaks and understands a little English is fun to talk to. He is the general manager of the ice festival in Moscow. He said he understands more English than what he is able to speak.

After watching and listening to me try to carry on a conversation with Viktor, a friend informed me that not only did I use my hands a lot but my voice went up an octave whenever he couldn't understand me. I guess I thought if I spoke up he could understand better.

Playing charades is a form of communication. The only difference is when you play charades with friends you eventually know if you communicated what you thought you communicated.

Put your boots on, dress warm and come join in the fun of the Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

Oratorio group plans 'Requiem'

The Plymouth Oratorio Society is planning for the start of its fifth season with a performance of Brahms' "Requiem" on April 21, 1991 in conjunction with the Michigan Sinfonietta.

Before that, though, an organizational meeting for the group and first rehearsal is set for Jan. 14 at 7:30 p.m. in the First United Methodist Church on North Territorial Road.

The society is open to all adult singers (and experienced high school singers) without audition. Those participating in the "Requiem" performance can pick up vocal scores at the first rehearsal. The "Requiem" will be performed in English.

Robert Pratt, musical director and conductor of the oratorio group, is the former chairperson of the music department at Ann Arbor Pioneer High School. He also conducts at the First United Methodist Church of Ann Arbor.

For more information about the group call 455-6512 or 761-2991.

Some Schools staff will be moved

BY KEN VOYLES

Residents can expect some disruption at the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools Board of Education office on Harvey Street in the City of Plymouth over the next few months.

The office, which is undergoing work on an addition as well as renovation of the original facility, will remain open during construction, but some of the staff personnel currently located in the building will be moved.

Originally, the district administration had considered moving the entire building staff to another site in the community, but Superintendent John M. Hoben said Monday that it became "apparent to us the cost of renting in the community is rather prohibitive."

Hoben said the cost of renting a new space would run at least $50-60,000 for four months.

Instead of moving the entire administrative staff, only members of the instruction and personnel departments will be shifted to Tanger Center on Five Mile Road in mid-February.

Other personnel will be shifted around in the current building, and into the addition, during the remainder of the work.

Hoben said the Plymouth-Canton Schools Board of Education would also need a place for board meetings after Feb. 11. The board agreed Monday to hold its meetings at various school sites in the district.

"This will cause some disruption, but we're looking at ways to limit that through communication efforts," Hoben told the board.

He added that residents of the community need to have "some patience" during the work at the board building.

It is expected, said Hoben, said that the staff will return to the building after construction is completed in July.

Further information on how residents will be able to get through to various district departments will be forthcoming, said Hoben.

Corrections consider change

Scott could become women's prison

BY PHILIP TARDANI

Scott Regional Correctional Facility in Northville Township may see an inmate gender change this year, according to the Michigan Corrections Department.

A department spokesperson Gail Light said the state would like to replace the male inmates at Scott with women.

"It is our intent to convert Scott to a women's prison," she said. "We'd like to get it done this fiscal year."

More than 500 male prisoners there now would be double-bunked at other prisons to save money, Light said, though that proposal must first be approved by the legislature.

The women inmates would come from the Huron Valley women's facility in Ypsilanti and Florence Crane women's prison in Coldwater, she said.

Scott, opened in 1986, is a multi-level security prison, accommodating minimum, medium and close security inmates, according to administrative assistant Lance Schuhmacher.

The prison has a capacity for 528 inmates, he said, and employs about 174 corrections officers.

Converting Scott to a women's facility would not affect the corrections staff, Light said.

"We treat men and women corrections officers the same in terms of placement," she said.

Our Lady of Good Counsel

Church wins planning approval; suit may follow

BY PHILIP TARDANI

The City of Plymouth Planning Commission narrowly approved a site plan addition to Our Lady of Good Counsel church last week, and a local attorney says she will ask for a court injunction to prevent it.

The commission approved a school addition to the church at 1160 Pennington by a 5-4 vote before a standing-room only crowd in the city commission chambers.

Our Lady will now complete drawings and submit them to the state superintendent of schools for final approval, according to Bill Leonard, business manager at the church.

"We are perhaps a month away from having working drawings and going out for bids," he said.

Attorney Carol Levitte will file suit against the city and state of Michigan, however, she said.

Levitte, who says she represents about 50 city residents opposed to the addition, says a 1990 state law giving the state superintendent of schools final say on site plan approval for educational facilities does not apply to parochial schools.

"The city did not apply and evaluate its zoning ordinances to the site plan based upon the belief that they didn't have jurisdiction," she said. "This is the first time a parochial school is applying for site plan approval and the first time the law is being tested."

City building inspector James Penn, who reviewed the site plan, said that as an addition to a school, the church is in accordance with all zoning laws.

"They applied to us as a school addition," he said. "It meets the zoning ordinances and the administration recommended approval."

Leonard said the church put its plans — to include a cafeteria, music facility and gathering rooms — before the planning commission as a courtesy.

"The vast majority of our members live in the city and we elected to go before the city," he said.

John Osborne, who is in charge of site plan approval at the state superintendent's office, said the state

Fire Marshall, Labor and Health Departments will review Our Lady's site plans.

The state superintendent will approve the plans only after okays from all three departments, he said.

David Oppe, chairperson of the planning commission, said last Wednesday's vote was the most difficult one he made in four years on the commission.

Oppe, who voted against the addition, said he weighed the rights of neighbors — who he said are concerned about increased traffic — against the needs of the church.

Canton chamber

BY JIM WHITE

"There is no reason to question the outcome of the election," said Mary Domeier, the new Canton Chamber of Commerce president, after concerns arose following a special chamber board meeting last Wednesday.

The meeting was attended by new board members whose term began Jan. 1, as well as former board members whose term had just expired.

It was called to determine whether an election of the five executive officers of the board had been handled correctly in December, said Domeier, who added that a question arose regarding a section of the chamber bylaws.

"The only contention was that the new board members did not vote," for the executive officers, she said. An election for new board members was held in November.

"That section of the bylaws (concerning whether or not newly-elected board members who have yet to take office can vote), could be misinterpreted," Domeier said. "But we held this election the same way we always have, everything followed according to Hoyle.

"The election will stand as is," Domeier added. "This has been brought to our attention, and we will work to correct it, to clarify the bylaws."

Attorney Bruce Patterson, a Canton resident who works out of offices in Plymouth and Southfield, first noticed the section of the bylaws.

"I raised a point of order with a small section, but it has now been cleared to everyone's satisfaction," Patterson said.

Ice Sculpture Spectacular

January 16-21

The Ice Spectacular presents Carvers from Russia

BY PHILIP TARDANI

Viktor Chernychoff, a resident of Moscow, helped revive the old Russian tradition of ice carving in 1986.

Chernychoff, a photographer with the Soviet Cultural Ministry, saw a photograph of a snow castle built during an ice festival in St. Paul, and got the idea to revive a festival in Moscow.

Ice carving in Russia dates back to the time of Tsar Peter the Great, he said.

"I decided I wanted to do something nice for people," he says. "I was responsible for making the ice and getting all the tools to make it possible." Out of his efforts came the Moscow Snow Festival.

This week Chernychoff, Vladimir Vinnichenko and Vladimir Kozin bring a Russian flavor to the Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

They spoke briefly at a reception held in their honor (and a Japanese carving team) Saturday night with a little help from interpreters Alla and Alex Segal.

Vinnichenko, 44, said he and Kozin, 37, met while attending the Leningrad Arts College. Both are sculptors working on a freelance basis, he said, and have carved at the Moscow Snow Festival.

"Viktor knew us and asked us to come," he explains simply of how he and his partner got to America.

Perhaps the main difference between ice carving in America and the Soviet Union is the tools used. Most carvers here use chainsaws, while Vinnichenko said he uses a hacksaw, ax and knife.

Sculpting ice in America

"I would appreciate it if someone would let us use a chainsaw," he said.

The carvers reportedly arrived here with little winter clothing, no gloves, and not much else. They were helped with equipment before the festival started.

The Russian team, which arrived Sunday, is staying at the Radisson Hotel in Plymouth Township. They've been treated to such classic Plymouth lunches as a Box Bar burger, Domino's Pizza and chow from the Sidestreet Pub.

Vinnichenko, who also sculpts in stone, wood, metal and bronze, said he is working on an ice statue of the Zodiac sign Aquarius.

Kozin, working separately, was a little more vague on what he was sculpting. He did say, however, that he would like to reflect his philosophy in ice.

"Sometimes when you build something from ice, you don't like it and it will disappear," he said. "This piece of ice between capitalism and socialism will melt and leave nothing in between."

Laser light in Kellogg

If you see lasers being fired around Kellogg Park in downtown Plymouth this week, don't be alarmed — it's all a part of the Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular (Jan. 16-21).

Twelve 10-minute laser shows are planned for the six-day Spectacular, according to Bill Bennett, from Bennett-Ross Inc., who specialize in laser entertainment.

A 20-foot by 30-foot screen at the south end of Kellogg Park along Ann Arbor Trail will glow with vibrant red, blue, green and magenta colors. The lasers will be projected from the Wade Trim building on Ann Arbor Trail toward the park.

"That's the beautiful part about laser light, it's very vibrant, bright, pure light," Bennett said.

About a dozen 10-inch mirrors will also be hung around the park to reflect beams of light over the heads of spectators, Bennett said.

The lasers will be accompanied by winter-themed music such as "Carol of the Bells" and "Winter Wonderland," Bennett said.

The free laser shows are planned for 6:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. today (Jan. 16) and Thursday (Jan. 17). Other laser shows will be held at 9 p.m. and 10 p.m. Friday (Jan. 18); 6:30 p.m. and 9 p.m., Saturday (Jan. 19) and Sunday (Jan. 20); and 6:30 p.m. and 8 p.m., Monday (Jan. 21).

Radio society to operate at Spectacular this weekend

Members of the Stu Rockafellow Amateur Radio Society, based in the City of Plymouth, will be operating a station this weekend as a part of the Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

The station will be set up in the Little Professor on the Park bookstore along Main Street across from Kellogg Park.

Some of the 80 or so members of the amateur radio group (members come from all over the metro area) will run the station and answer questions from the public.

The station will be operated from 6-10 p.m. on Friday (Jan. 16), 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Sunday.

Dick Hill, city liaison for the group, said the station will be making connections with other ham radio operators from around the world.

"This year is our 30th anniversary as a group," said Hill. "We will also have information on our group and on amateur radio in general."

Hill said ice festival goers are welcome to stop by the station and talk with members.

Japanese carvers compete

The carver who chipped Mt. Fuji out of ice in Kellogg Park ought to know what it looks like. He's Japanese.

And Kazuhiko Kato knows a bit about ice carving, too. He and his partner Junichi Nakamura won the Third World Ice Carving Competition last year in Japan, competing against teams from Norway, Sweden, the U.S., Germany and China.

Kato and Nakamura join fellow Japanese carvers Saturo Mahoe and Akio Furukawa for the Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

The team has a total of 60 year experience in ice carving.

Kato, Mahoe, and Furukawa are chefs in Japan, while Nakamura is a farmer who took a fancy to ice carving.

The Japanese will carve five big sculptures (with 30 400 pound blocks of ice) and will also participate in the celebrity carve-off on Wednesday, according to Pam Kosteva, director of the Spectacular.

The Ice Board has also come up with a busy itinerary for the Japanese and Russian carvers while they're not busy chipping away.

They'll get tours of the Ford Wixom plant, Henry Ford Museum and the Fairlane Shopping Center in addition to attending a number of banquets and eating at local restaurants.

Ice competition will be hot

BY JIM WHITE

So long as the weather stays cold, the competition in the Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular will be very hot.

"We are going to have 18 teams this year," said Pam Kosteva, executive director for the spectacular. "That's double what we've had in the past."

The two-person teams will carve from 6-9 p.m. Friday (Jan. 18), with judging at 9 p.m.

Kosteva said 49 ice carvers are entered in Saturday's individual professional competition, to begin at 9 a.m. Judging will be held at noon.

In addition, 40 students from various schools will be competing Sunday morning at 9 a.m., Kosteva said. Judging will be at noon.

Students are coming from Schoolcraft College, Oakland Community College, Macomb Community College, the Centennial Educational Park (CEP) Art Club, and the Culinary Institute of America (CIA).

Jaime Johnson, a chef and instructor at the CIA in Hyde Park, NY, said seven or eight members of the CIA Ice Sculpting Club, all students at the institute, will be arriving in Kellogg Park early Saturday morning.

"I've been fighting to get to Plymouth for three years," said Johnson Monday. He added that the club members will be paying their own way.

"Plymouth is one festival we can drive to," Johnson said. "It is very highly spoken of around here. This will be one of the larger competitions in the school's history."

As a group (not for competition), the entourage from the CIA plans to carve an immense sculpture, said Johnson.

This year's spectacular is the first event to ever be sanctioned by both the American Culinary Federation and the National Ice Carvers Association, Kosteva said.

Five members of those bodies will judge the competitions.

Will weather cooperate?

BY KEN VOYLES

So what is the weather going to be like during this year's Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular? Will it cooperate and stay cold or turn warm and create a slushy mess?

Warm weather Tuesday has already put a damper on the festival, causing the cancellation of the figure skating demonstrations by the Plymouth Figure Skating Club.

It looks like a fairly typical January for Michigan and the metro area, according to Walt Zaleski, a meteorologist with the Detroit National Weather Service (NWS) office at Metro Airport.

"It looks like we will have near normal temperatures and the possibility of snow," said Zaleski, who added that predicting weather any farther than 10 days in advance is almost impossible.

Weather forecasts for today (Jan. 16) through Friday (Jan. 18) call for a chance of rain and snow with high temperatures in the mid-20s to low 30s (and lows in the teens to mid-20s).

There is also a chance of snow or rain on Saturday and Sunday, but further information on weather patterns through Monday (Jan. 21) was unavailable at press time.

Average temperatures in January hover around 30-35 degrees for highs and 15-19 degrees for lows, Zaleski said. The monthly precipitation total usually averages 1.86 inches this month, he added.

Unseasonably warm weather in January has hurt the festival in the past. During three of the past four festival weather has had a dampening effect on the ice carvings in Kellogg Park and along downtown Plymouth streets.

In 1987, the festival was dubbed the "slush fest" because of the warm weather.

A warm up threatened the show in 1989 as Michigan's unpredictable weather brought forth thunderstorms and temperatures in the low 50s. Last year's show also faced warmer weather and melted sculptures.

Warm temperatures Monday and Tuesday were not a good omen, however, for the six-day spectacular.

Former Red Wings take the ice Old Timers skate for charity

BY JIM WHITE

Old-time hockey is back in town.

As part of the Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular, the Detroit Red Wing Old Timers will take on a team comprised of players from the Plymouth Masters Hockey League Sunday (Jan. 20) at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

Face-off for the game is set for sometime after noon, said Masters League coordinator John Wilson. The game will start after a short performance by the Plymouth Figure Skating Club.

Fans will be treated to the still-formidable skills of former Detroit Red Wings such as Dennis Hextall, Eddie Mio, Nick Libett, Gary Bergman, and Jerry Abel, son of Hall of Famer Sid Abel.

Alex Delvecchio may be in Plymouth, said team captain Hextall, but he is also playing Saturday night in the old timers' game preceding the National Hockey League (NHL) all-star game in Chicago.

In addition this season, the senior Wings have picked up other former NHLers who live in the Detroit area, said Wilson.

Dave Debol and Kris Manery, former University of Michigan stars who played for Hartford and Minnesota, respectively, will be on hand for the contest.

So will ex-Toronto Maple Leaf Joe Klukay, Ken Houston, former Calgary Flame, and Bob Johnson, who played for St. Louis. Art Skov, a retired NHL referee, will put on the stripes again for Sunday's showdown.

A pep band from the Centennial Educational Park (CEP) marching band will be in the crowd, said Wilson.

Tickets are now on sale at the Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department. They will also be sold at the door Sunday. The cost is $3.

"We are hoping to have 1,300 spectators," said Wilson.

Additional money is being raised by selling advertising for the game program, he said.

The Red Wing Old Timers will get a $1,500 fee for appearing, Wilson said, and a $2,000 donation is being made to the ice spectacular committee.

Whatever money is made above that will be donated to the youth teams in the Plymouth Canton Hockey Association, he said.

The Plymouth Masters has eight teams, each with 11 players, Wilson said. "It's an over-40 league; there are no slap shots and no checking," he said.

"We had a lottery to see who would play in the game," said Bob Budlong, a city resident who plays in the league.

Eleven different Masters players will skate against the Wings in each 20-minute period, so 33 will get the chance to "watch guys who can really play," said Budlong, who lost in the lottery.

"I'm sorry I didn't get the chance," he added. "It will be an honor. But the money we raise will be great for the kids."

"I'm not sure if the guys have a game plan yet," to beat the Wings, he said.

The old timer's game is for a good cause, Hextall said.

"Last year, we helped raise about $155,000 for charity," he said, adding that the $1,500 share the team receives each game is divided among several charities at the end of the season.

The Red Wing Old Timers have 19 games on the schedule this year, Hextall said. He admitted they weren't perfect: "Oh yeah, we've lost the occasional one."

Fest carriage rides, refreshments

For the sixth consecutive year, Crown Coach of Birmingham will "add a touch of Central Park" to the City of Plymouth, providing carriage rides during the Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

"We'll have one carriage out there Wednesday (tonight) and Thursday evenings from 5-8 p.m.," said company spokesperson Nancy Eastin last week. "Then we will have two on Friday from 5-8 p.m., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m."

The Amish-made carriages will each be pulled by one draft horse decked in brass bells, she said.

The rides will begin on Ann Arbor Trail in front of the Box Bar and will extend through the residential area behind Plymouth City Hall.

They will last about 12-15 minutes, "depending on how cold it is and how fast Bill and George want to go," said Eastin, referring to the draft horses.

Adults can ride for $5, children under 12 ride for $2, and babies ride for free, Eastin said.

"The carriages will be closed, and we will provide blankets and comforters," she added.

There will be refreshments aplenty on hand for visitors to this year's Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

The Plymouth Rock Masonic Lodge, next to the Gathering on Penniman Avenue, will be serving hot dogs, coffee, hot soup, and hot chocolate inside the lodge hall on Friday evening and all day Saturday and Sunday, said lodge president Larry Smith.

"We'll also have danishes and candy bars to serve early in the morning," he said.

The Kiwanis Club of Colonial Plymouth will park their popcorn wagon near the Gathering on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. They will sell pop corn, hot chocolate, and coffee, said Jim Vermeulen.

Domino's Pizza, Inc. is going to have a full production line set up under a tent at the intersection of Main and Penniman, according to Domino's regional director John Minick.

"We'll be there every day (today through Jan. 21)," he said. "We can make 1,500 pizzas an hour if necessary. We just go to town."

Hungry festival visitors will be able to purchase 10-inch pepperoni or cheese pizzas and Coca-Cola, Minick said.

McDonald's will also have a tent set up at Main and Ann Arbor Trail.

It is believed to be the first time ever that Big Macs will be sold from a portable kitchen, but McDonald's Corp. officials were unavailable to give further details by press time.

Celebrity carve-off

Area radio and TV personalities will be among the celebrities taking part in this year's Celebrity Charity Carving competition at the Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

It is the first time a celebrity carving battle is planned during the ever popular ice festival.

According to Plymouth Police Commander Michael Gardner, about seven "celebrities" will be in town today (Jan. 16) around 2 p.m. to participate in the carving competition.

A tentative list of those participating includes John Kelly from WXYZ (Channel 7); J.J. and the Bruiser, radio morning personalities on WLLZ; decav Ken Calvert from WRIF; news anchor Catherine Leahan from WJBK (Channel 2); Sheriff Robert Ficano; and Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara, though his deputy, Michael Duggan, may be on hand instead.

Most of the carvers do their work during the day, but Leahan will be in Wednesday evening, Gardner said.

Each celebrity will team up with a Japanese or Soviet carver to bring a 400 pound block of ice to life. After judges determine which sculpture is the best, the Ice Spectacular will donate $1,000 on behalf of the winning celebrity to charity.

Gardner said he hopes to have Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen and city Mayor Dennis Bila help judge the ice sculptures.

During 9th ice show A taste of Japanese culture

Besides the four Japanese ice carvers on hand for this year's Ninth Annual Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular, festival goers will get a little taste of Asian culture on Saturday and Sunday (Jan. 19-20).

That's when members of the cultural exchange group at the Japanese School of Detroit in Bloomfield Hills will perform some traditional Japanese dance and music.

On Saturday, Tomoyo Koehler will perform "koto," a traditional style of string music at 5:30 p.m.

Prior to that, though, at 5 p.m., Yukiko Uchiyama will perform a traditional Japanese "slow" dance, "nichibu."

Then on Sunday, festival goers can catch a repeat performance of "nichibu" at 5 p.m.

All of the cultural performances will be held on the main stage on Main Street in front of Kellogg Park (between Penniman Avenue and Ann Arbor Trail).

"We're very excited about it," said Yoshiko Aishima, who has helped organize the cultural performance for this year's ice spectacular.

Ice Spectacular sponsors a must

An event on the magnitude of an ice spectacular could not take place without substantial contributions from the community.

A list of contributors covering cash donations and services-in-kind goes on for eight pages.

Pam Kostepa, director of the Spectacular, said the motivation is simple.

"They like the event and want to support it," she said.

Major contributors include Governmental Risk Managers, Don Massey Cadillac, the Blue Care Network, Ford Motor Company, BFI, Plymouth Masters Central Beer Distributors, Heritage Federal Savings and the local real estate firms Robert Bake Realtors, K.C. Colonial Real Estate, McKeon Realty and Real Estate One.

Other contributors include: Arbor Health, Boloven and Associates, the Cafe Bon Homme, Community Federal Credit Union, Crown Coach, Deitrich Bailey and Associates, H&B Gallery of Fine Carpeting, Law, Hemming, Essad and Polaczyk, Morse Dental Group, the Penn Theatre, Port to Port Travel, Saxton's Garden Center, Station 885, and West Properties.

More than $131,165 was donated by sponsors, according to ice festival board records.

Services in kind came from Thomas Cook/Continental/SAS, Fellows Creek Golf Club, Performance Sound and Lighting, Domino's Pizza, the Side Street Pub, the Press Box, the Box Bar and the Penniman Deli.

Park seniors still fighting rent

Royal Holiday seeks Engler's help

BY JIM WHITE

Residents battling yearly rent increases in Canton's Royal Holiday Park -- a mobile home park exclusively for senior citizens -- are taking their grievances to Governor John Engler.

"We're going right to the top," said Royal Holiday homeowners' association president John Korpus last week.

Korpus and association secretary Nora Isbell sent a letter to the governor that said, in part, "Governor Engler we helped put you in office because we desperately believed you would help us, you are the only one who can."

In the letter, the Royal Holiday residents requested that Engler pass a law freezing the rent of "elderly" citizens. "The elderly people live here on Social Security, a very fixed income as you should know," the letter said.

There are 426 lots in Royal Holiday Park and about 650 residents, ranging in age from 50 to 90, said Korpus. Depending on the location of the lot, rent is between $262 and $292 per month, he said.

Monthly rent was raised $25 in both 1989 and 1990, according to Korpus.

"It's been raised over $100 in the past five years," he said. "Last year, rent went up $25 a month. Social Security only went up $26 a month. This year, Social Security is being increased about $27 or $28, and rent is going up $20.

"We're not expecting to be rich," he said, "but we don't want to have to beg either."

Korpus said the homeowners have been protesting rent increases since October, 1989, when they hired an attorney and sent a letter asking for a rent freeze to Irwin Futernick, operator of the park.

Futernick's father Sheldon, who lives in Puerto Rico, owns Royal Holiday, as well as six other mobile home parks.

Irwin Futernick sat down with the homeowners last February, telling them, "he could charge whatever the traffic could bear," Korpus said.

Last summer, residents picketed in the park and in front of Futernick's Westland office. Korpus said they will be out again this spring if necessary.

"Rent ought to be charged according to the cost of living, like in Ohio and Florida," Korpus said.

"There are elderly people living on fixed income. When these people have to give up their health care or have to work in their 70s to pay rent, well, it's a dirty shame.

"We have people in their 80s bagging groceries at Meijer," he said. "If they want to, fine. But they shouldn't be forced to."

Last summer, the Royal Park homeowners took their complaint to the Michigan Civil Rights Commission, believing there were grounds for an age discrimination suit.

"Mr. Futernick is discriminating against the elderly people on fixed income, forcing us out to bring in senior citizens 50 and 55 years of age that can pay the rent," Isbell said last week.

Peter Bundarin, the association's attorney, feels there are grounds for an investigation, which he said the civil rights commission has not yet completed. But he was unsure of the strength of a discrimination case.

"I really don't know the other side of the story," he said. "I don't know Futernick's costs, he has never opened up his books.

"I think the guy is his own worst enemy, though," Bundarin said. "He fights Canton Township when they want to make improvements at no cost to him. He is totally uncommunicative. He may be right, some people think they are right and just don't have to prove it to anyone."

Students want their bill in handbook

Several of the student authors involved in creating the bill of rights said their main hope was to have it included in the current student handbook.

"We wanted to have something in the student handbook that gives us more rights," said Lynne Cessante, a Canton sophomore in Mike McCauley's Close Up class at Canton. "I think it's a great idea. It gives us a say in our school. It's pretty realistic."

Michele Fliss, another Canton sophomore, said the hope of students was to "get more rights in our schools."

She added, "I think some of the rights are really good. The handbook now is more about what we cannot do than our rights."

Blaine Schaefer said the point of the document was to "address our rights," which, she said, the handbook does not do.

"All of the Close Up classes put it together and we presented it to the student councils," she said. "They really liked our ideas and supported it."

Schaefer said she learned "that by working as a group we can put all of our ideas together and make a good statement."

McCauley, a social studies teacher, said the project began during a discussion on the Constitution when a student asked about his rights.

"It gives the students hope that they can be heard, that people will listen to them," he said. "If they feel they have a stake in this school we will have a more peaceful environment."

BHl Gretzinger's classes also took part in the exercise. "It's a nice way to say this is what you have a right to do," he said. "Schools are among the most undemocratic institutions.

"It makes sense to do this," he added. "Let's give them an opportunity to find out what democracy is all about."

McCauley added, "I thought there was a sense of satisfaction among the students."

There are nearly 400 Close Up students at CEP. The program began in 1978 as a student group and now there are 14 sections at the park.

"The kids were quite perceptive," Gretzinger said. "So each one of these rules has a student's interest or complaint about something unfair."

The bill of rights sections included the ideas that: a "clean, safe environment" should be guaranteed for all students; students should "enjoy freedom of speech"; students have rights to reasonable searches and due process; and responsibilities of "freedom of mobility should be granted to students with parental consent."

"We came up with the ideas in class and presented them to the other classes and voted," said Cessante, who said she believed CEP students in general would support it.

Northwest: no money for school

He also asked, "Is it ethical for two governmental units to form an authority and purchase land in a third governmental unit over the objection of the people in the third governmental unit?"

Gordon Jaeger, Plymouth city manager, asked what a special election would cost. "It's not going to be free," he said.

Plymouth city attorney Ronald Lowe said he must go back and look at the charter before determining if the amendment is viable.

"I've never faced a charter amendment from the people before," Lowe said. "I have to educate myself before I can give a definitive answer as to what the process will be now."

In a separate development, Ann Styx, staffing manager for Northwest Airlines, Inc., said Monday that the airline would not help sponsor a proposed airframe and power plant (A&P) mechanics' school at Mettetal.

"We have no partnership with any schools outside of Minnesota right now," said Styx from Northwest headquarters at Minneapolis/St. Paul International Airport.

"At this time, we have no plans to actively support any program unless we can be encouraging about providing jobs to the graduates," she wrote in a Jan. 7 letter to Tom Kennedy, a Plymouth Township resident chairing a committee supporting a school at Mettetal.

Styx added that the company would re-examine the possibility of a partnership if the hiring projections in Detroit changed.

Bob Gibbons, director of media relations at Northwest, said Monday that the company is delaying building a maintenance base for its fleet of 757s and A320s. At one time, Northwest was considering Metropolitan Airport as a site for the base.

"With fuel costs rising and the economy as it is, now is not the time to be building," Gibbons said. "All we have at Detroit is line maintenance, not major overhauls. There is no demand for mechanics at this time," he said.

A local resident who wished only to be identified as a certified A&P mechanic looking for work said he went through the school at Willow Run airport but there has been little demand for his skills.

"The schools at Detroit City and at Willow Run supply most of the mechanics for the state," he said. "They are having trouble placing their graduates because the market is saturated. I don't see any justification for another A&P school in the area."

Schoolcraft College's pre-needs committee is still studying the idea of the school, said college spokesperson Sandra Florek.

"We can't decide on a school when we don't even know if there will be an airport," Florek said.

Kennedy, who could not be reached for comment, said at the Canton Planning Commission last week that funds are already being raised for the school. He said it would be built in 1991.

Mettetal joint board back on City agenda

BY PHILIP TARDANI

The Plymouth City Commission will again debate the merits of forming a joint board with Plymouth Township to operate Mettetal Airport.

The issue, which was tabled at the Dec. 17 commission meeting, is on the agenda for the upcoming meeting Monday (Jan. 21). About 150 residents attended the previous meeting to speak for and against municipal ownership of the facility.

Supporters of the airport have said that it has a positive impact on business in Plymouth-Canton, that it could be used as an aviation school, and that it is self-supporting.

Others dispute those arguments and are concerned that local tax money will go to support the airport if a joint board is formed.

Plymouth Township voted 6-1 in December to form a joint board with the city.

Mettetal has been for sale for more than a year, at an estimated price of $4 million. The Michigan Bureau of Aeronautics and Federal Aviation Administration have said grant money is available to cover 95 per cent of the purchase price.

City residents with questions about the issue should put them in writing for Plymouth City Manager Gordon Jaeger.

The commission meeting starts at 7:30 p.m.

Canton Holiday suit?

Korpus said, "If Futernick comes to a reasonable agreement with us, the money is his with a snap of the fingers."

Isbell added, "Let him take us to court. He can't evict everyone."

But Bundarin was not so sure. "Why can't he evict everyone?" he asked. "Plenty of workers who have gone on strike believed they could not be fired, too."

Futernick, who was out of town, according to his office, is also involved in a fight with Canton Township.

According to Tom Casari, township engineer, Canton is ready to bring a condemnation suit against Futernick for land bordering Warren Road.

Futernick will be paid "fair market value" for the right of way, which the township needs to continue paving Warren all the way to Lilley, Casari said.

Woman hit, killed in Canton

A Romulus woman, who Canton Police said was hitchhiking in the traffic lanes of Michigan Avenue, was struck and killed by a motorist last Wednesday.

Pat Nemecek, Canton Police information officer, said that Sherry Jean Porter, 33, of Romulus was standing in the right lane of eastbound Michigan east of Canton Center when she was struck by a pick-up at 11:45 p.m.

At that point on Michigan there are two lanes in each direction and the speed limit is 50 miles per hour.

A witness had seen Porter on Michigan Avenue and thought he recognized her, Nemecek said. He had gone ahead to a turn-around but by the time he got back, Porter had already been hit, the officer added.

Porter was a hit by a pick-up driven by Phillip Crandell Schoen, 44, of Westland. Schoen was driving home from his brother's in Ypsilanti, Nemecek said.

Porter was pronounced dead at Ann Arbor Hospital.

No alcohol was involved on the part of the driver, and no charges will be filed in the incident, Nemecek said.

Whether or not the victim had been drinking will be determined pending an autopsy, according to Nemecek.

Nemecek said that the victim had apparently been struck by cars two other times in the past.

This is the first fatal accident in Canton in 1991. There were 12 in the township in 1990.

Canton trains on computers

Canton is ensuring its government is prepared for the information age.

The Canton Board of Trustees last Tuesday approved $20,000 to train all township office employees and board members in the use of the ALR personal computers Canton bought in 1990.

"Every office employee will take an introductory class or a placement test to pass out of the class," said Dan Durack, Canton's director of administrative services.

Classes will be held at Schoolcraft College. There will be 18 students per class, and about 80 employees will be affected.

"We'd like everyone to take Word Perfect-Office," said Durack. "They would learn electronic mail and scheduling."

Salem hoopsters break Mustangs

BY RITA DERBIN

The sharp shooters were out Saturday night as the Salem basketball team defeated Northville, 77-58.

Senior guard Mike Mulder led the Rocks with 28 points, including six three-point baskets. Senior Jake Baker added 13 points in the victory. For Northville, Bill Kelly had 23 points, including six three-point baskets.

Salem outscored the Mustangs 18-9 and 21-15 in the first two quarters to build a 15 point halftime lead, then scored 28 points in the third quarter, including four three pointers by Mulder.

"We haven't played since we lost to Ypsilanti — that was a long time to have the loss on our minds," said Salem coach Bob Brodie. "We finally got a chance to get back on the winning track.

"We're playing a little better," Brodie added. "The kids have more intensity but we allowed too many points on defense."

Brodie was also disappointed in the team's inside shooting.

"I'm happy with the effort," he said. "But I wasn't happy with the mixture of scoring — we need more inside scoring if we're going to win."

The Rocks are 7-1 overall and 2-0 in the Western Lakes Activities Association. They will travel to Walled Lake Central on Friday night for a 7:30 p.m. game. Salem will then begin its division schedule with a home game against Walled Lake Western on Tuesday (Jan. 22) at 7:30 p.m.

Canton hoopsters 2-0 in league

BY RITA DERBIN

The Chiefs are still working on winning consistently. Canton basketball squad defeated Walled Lake Central on Friday, 55-51 to improve its record to 4-4 and 2-0 in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

Karl Wukie and Derrick McDonald both had 14 points in the game and gave clutch performances in the Chiefs' fourth quarter comeback.

With Canton trailing 42-29, McDonald scored 13 points in the final quarter of play and Wukie made key baskets down the stretch including a three-pointer with 52 seconds left in the game to give Canton a four-point lead. He then sank two free throws with 22 seconds left to maintain the four point lead.

"We were sleep walking for the first three quarters," said Canton coach Dave VanWagoner. "But the kids showed a lot of determination to come back and win the game."

"There was a big crowd and it was nice to win on parents night," he added.

On Tuesday night, however, there were no comebacks for Canton. The Chiefs were pounded by Ypsilanti, 74-57.

McDonald had 21 points to lead Canton, Tony Coshatt added 11 points and eight rebounds and Rob Wilson had 10 points in the losing effort.

"We played well for a quarter and a half," said VanWagoner. "Then we didn't execute offensively -- we took bad shots and they were getting a lot of fastbreaks."

"Ypsilanti was just the better team, they outplayed us," he added.

Friday night the Chief will host Walled Lake Western in a Western division contest. The game begins at 7:30 p.m. Next Tuesday, Canton will travel to Livonia Stevenson for a 7:30 p.m. game.

Cycling against MS

Plymouth a stop on 16,000-mile trek

BY PHILIP TARDANI

Bob Carney has logged over 13,000 miles on his bicycle trek against multiple sclerosis, and now includes the city of Plymouth on his list of stops.

Carney, 65, started from Rhode Island in September of 1989 on a crusade against MS. On Monday he arrived in the city and was put up at the Red Roof Inn in Plymouth Township.

MS is a disease that attacks the central nervous system, making even the most routine tasks difficult. Carney said he has six friends who suffer from MS.

"I don't care how tough it gets for me, it's still not as tough as these people have it," he said over a cup of coffee at the city's fire station before resuming his journey. "I started for my friends, but I'm doing it for everyone that's got it because I want to find a cure."

Carney has a bicycle trailer hooked onto his 18-speed Diamond Back mountain bike. In addition to camping gear and some emergency ration canned food, he carries packets of information on MS to distribute.

Since cycling down the Atlantic Coast, through the Gulf States, the Southwest, up California and back across the mountains and Great Plains, Carney estimates he has racked up 13,600 miles.

From Plymouth, he's going to an National Multiple Sclerosis Society branch office in Southfield, then on to Toledo and eventually back to Rhode Island, which he hopes to reach some time "between St. Patty's day and Memorial Day."

City Fire Captain Robert Degen leaned over a map with Carney Tuesday morning, pointing the best way to Southfield.

When he gets to Rhode Island, Carney said he'll "sit around on his boat for two months."

But until then, he estimates he has about 2,500 miles to go.

"I'm not quitting," he said. "I sure ain't."

Dell'Orco B & E

A breaking and entering occurred Friday night at the home where a fire killed seven members of the Dell'Orco family, according to Canton Police.

Sometime between 5 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. Saturday, reports said, the wall board across the garage was apparently pried away from the house.

Nothing appeared to be missing from the home, said police, who added that Debbie Dell'Orco said she believed teenagers had broken in to see the inside of the gutted house.

Police said Dell'Orco was worried that younger children might injure themselves if they got inside.
