BY JIM WHITE

Less than two weeks after the Radisson Hotel in Plymouth Township closed its doors, a new use for the building is in the works.

Cook-Courtney Development Corporation, headed by Plymouth Township real estate developers Ron Cook and Jim Courtney, has bought the Radisson building on Northville Road for an undisclosed sum.

The two men would like to see a senior citizen resident complex there, Courtney said on Monday.

"This particular thing is something I've wanted to do for a long time," said Courtney, who until now has been involved strictly in the development of subdivisions.

"We signed the papers last week forming a limited partnership," he said. "I wanted to buy the building back in 1984 or 1985, but I lost it to the

Twp. mulls Massey plan

BY JIM TOTTEN

The Plymouth Township Board of Trustees was expected last night to vote on the Massey rezoning request for property along Ann Arbor Road and east of Southworth Street.

Although none of the seven trustees would say how they planned on voting, the board was apparently leaning towards denying the request.

Massey had previously requested a rezoning of the property over a year ago but was turned down at the time.

Massey is requesting that the property, zoned single family residential (R-1) and office service district (OS), be changed to a general commercial district (C-2). If approved by the township, Massey plans to construct an autopark with three showrooms for selling luxury automobiles.

The Plymouth Township Planning Commission recommended denying the present rezoning request to the trustees back in May. But the Wayne County Planning Commission recommended approving the request last month. Both commissions have only recommending authority, leaving the final decision to be made by the trustees.

Design plans for the Massey Autopark show three separate showrooms with a large service center in the back. The plans show two entrances to the autopark from Ann Arbor Road. Also, a large part of the Falls deadline extended

BY JILLIAN BOGATER

A one year extension to secure financing was granted to the Huntington Falls Limited Partnership last week, setting the new closing date for June 1, 1992.

The extension for purchasing a 933 acre parcel of land in Northville Township was given because of the sharp contraction in local and national financial markets, said Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara.

Economic conditions are changing and financial institutions are taking longer before making investment decisions, said Gary Roberts, vice president of development for Huntington Falls.

The request for an extension was made by Plymouth Township developer Robert A. DeMattia, managing general partner of Huntington Falls. The other principals in the partnership are the Selective Group and Heritage Development Company.

News of the extension was a relief to those involved with the project.

"It's something we needed," Roberts said, adding that he has no concerns about the extension at this time.

"It's a prudent thing to do at this time," he said. "If everything was perfectly fine, I would still like to prolong the starting date."

The original agreement between Wayne County and Huntington Falls was reached in January of 1990, with a

Coventry Commons files for bankruptcy

BY JILLIAN BOGATER

The primary development group of a Canton strip mall voluntarily filed for bankruptcy earlier this month.

Coventry Commons Associates, which developed Coventry Commons-East mall, filed under Chapter 11 in U.S. Bankruptcy Court July 1.

David Nelson, the primary owner of Coventry Commons, signed the consent action on behalf of the development group. He declined to comment yesterday.

Coventry Commons is located on the east side of Morton Taylor Road, south of Joy Road.

Originally owned by the Nelson-Ross Partnership, Nelson and Jay Ross split up their partnership and holdings in the Coventry Commons development last fall, said Canton Community Planner David Nicholson.

Nicholson said he was not aware that Nelson had filed for bankruptcy.

"When something like this goes through, it has very little or no affect on the operation of a facility," he said. "This gives an opportunity to a company or individual to put their financial holdings in shape and to avoid defaulting on all of their temporary debts."

During this period, filing under Chapter 11 will give Coventry Commons Associates time to rearrange business accounts and come up with a new method of payment for creditors, Nicholson said.

Bankruptcy court records listed creditors holding the 20 largest unsecured claims against Coventry Commons Associates.

Among them were claims for $8.3 million from INB Mortgage Corporation, located in Indianapolis; $11,923 from Dykema, Gossett, Spencer, Goodnow and Trigg, 400 Renaissance Center, Suite 3500, Detroit; and $308 from Sparr's Greenhouse, 42510 Joy Rd., Plymouth.

The original plans for Coventry Commons called for more than 240,000 square feet of retail development on both sides of Morton Taylor. Phase I, on the east side of Morton Taylor, includes about 114,000 square feet of retail space.

It was developed in 1987.

Against Plymouth Hills State reviews complaints

BY JILLIAN BOGATER

The Michigan Attorney General's Office is currently reviewing complaints brought against the owner of Plymouth Hills Mobile Court in Plymouth Township.

Owner Joe Ruggirello met with Steve Zamiara, director of the Michigan Mobile Home and Land Resources Division, last Tuesday to discuss complaints currently filed against Ruggirello.

A total of three complaints have been filed, two from Plymouth Hills Mobile Court and one from Hamburg Hills, claiming unfair rules and regulations regarding the selling prices of homes, Zamiara said.

Ruggirello agreed to provide a change in the home owners manual specifying that residents may contact any appraisal company to determine a selling price for a mobile home, Zamiara said.

Previously, Ruggirello required residents to go through an appraisal company chosen by him for an estimate.

But Ruggirello must still resolve complaints regarding his park rule stating residents must sell their homes for at least 90 per cent of the appraised existing woodlands would also be left on the property.

Township Supervisor Gerald Law said he does not want to pre-judge the rezoning request and will go to the meeting with an "open mind."

Yet he added, "The proposal has not been favorable received by the planning commission and the trustees in the past." He said the township master plan was developed over 15 years ago, and the township has never indicated it would zone the property commercial.

"The trustees don't deviate (from the master plan) unless there are some special circumstances," he added.

But Law said that it would not be uncommon if Don Massey's attorney, John Thomas, filed a lawsuit if the request was voted down.

"The position of the planning commission is what I would like to support," said Trustee Abe Munfakh yesterday. He said the request does not fit in with the township's master plan or the future land use plan.

"I am not in favor (of the request) at this point," Munfakh said, adding that his main concern was the impact the autopark would have on surrounding residential areas.

"From what I have been told, it is inconsistent with the master plan," said Trustee John Stewart. He added that he had environmental concerns about what would happen to the trees located on the property if the request was approved.

"I want to give everybody a fair chance and listen to what each side has to say," said Township Treasurer Mary Brooks. "I want to keep an open mind."

current company."

Columbia-Sussex Corporation, parent company of Radisson, bought the hotel from Hilton in the mid 1980s. The Radisson closed without warning June 30.

Courtney and Cook said they completed the deal for the building Friday.

"It was a great hotel for a long time, but it's too far off the beaten path," Courtney said. "I feel a seniors residence is the highest and best use for the property. I believe Plymouth needs this, and I feel it would be an asset."

The next step, Courtney said, is to meet with township officials regarding Trustee Smith Horton said in June he would vote to deny the Massey rezoning request. He said the request would go "well beyond" the master plan and that it would be difficult to create a sufficient buffer zone for the adjoining residential area.

Esther Hulsing, township clerk, was still reviewing the request and had not made up her mind how she would vote on the rezoning.

what zoning changes need to be made. "We're going to be talking to the township people this week," he said.

The limited partnership will also have to raise funds for the project, Courtney said. No timetable will be set until the zoning details have been worked out, he added.

James Anulewicz, township public services director, said the land is currently zoned for midrise development and residential use is allowed there.

"It is somewhat premature to say what is the best use," Anulewicz said Tuesday. He added that township planners would look at a seniors residence with a "receptive yet critical eye."

price tag of $31.7 million. Under the revised agreement with the county, Huntington Falls will pay an additional $150,000 on the price of the original contract -- bringing its total closer to $31.9 million.

Though "money is always a concern," Roberts said his investors were never worried about financing the bid. "We felt secure then, and we feel secure now," he said.

Work will continue at the site during the next year, including the removal of 18 underground fuel storage tanks, McNamara said. The development team is also dedicated to expend $2 million on the development before the new closing date.

When the development is complete, which is estimated at seven to 10 years from now, it will include residential, recreational, office, retail research and development space as well as an 18-hole Lee Trevino designed golf course.

The development is expected to add millions of dollars to the county's tax base and create 1,800 new jobs for area residents.

City's actions support group

Concerned Citizens have valid point

EDITOR:

The following three items appeared in the July 10 edition of The Crier.

1. The Plymouth City Commission has amended its JOA agreement to provide for city withdrawal if voters approve the charter amendment forbidding airport ownership.

2. City Manager Steve Walters made the following statement in his letter to Plymouth Township Supervisor Gerald Law, "The city commission feels that as the representatives of the city voters, they must implement whatever decision the voters make..."

3. Plymouth Commissioner John Vos III has withdrawn his law suits against Dwight Eckler and the Plymouth Concerned Citizens.

This appears to be the first public acknowledgment by city commissioners that Plymouth Concerned Citizens has a valid issue in its stand regarding Mettetal Airport.

Behind this acknowledgment lie months of struggle on the part of Plymouth Concerned Citizens and its supporters.

I urge Plymouth residents to remember this struggle when they vote on Nov. 5.

'Appalled' at actions of candidate's supporters

Whyman should respect free speech

EDITOR:

I was appalled on the 4th of July when shopping at a local party store on Main Street in downtown Plymouth when six young people entered and started harassing the owner. As I moved in closer to overhear the conversation, the young people were demanding that the owner remove a sign in front of the store supporting candidate Jerry Vorva.

When the owner said that he would not remove the sign the young people talked of boycotting the store and telling others to boycott the store.

I have been a Plymouth resident for eight years and have heard of campaign signs vanishing but I never would have believed that a group of people, all wearing shirts supporting Vorva's opponent Deborah Whyman, would be so blatant in their efforts to curtail and intimidate the activities of any person.

One of the young people said that he was going to remove the sign himself until the store owner told all of them to leave the premises or he would call the police.

No matter whom we support we should each have the right to express our support. Vorva's opponent should be reminded that freedom of speech is alive and well in Plymouth.

As long as I live in Plymouth I will be a protector of this First Amendment right.

On how to govern effectively

Feds could learn from locals

While on a trip to Washington D.C. for four days, I could not help but think about the differences between federal and local government.

In the Plymouth community I sincerely feel that issues and problems in the community are addressed by the local government.

But walking around the downtown streets of D.C., staring up at the grandiose federal buildings and monuments, and then looking down to see homeless people sleeping right outside on the ground, or on park benches, something was just not right. How could this be?

This is our nation's capital. And I immediately thought that our nation's capital was also the murder capital of the nation, that Washington D.C. now has the high murder rate per capita in the United States.

Some serious problems, especially in cities through the U.S., exist which are not getting addressed. And change looks like it is far down the road.

I have witnessed first hand residents speaking up at commission and board of trustee meetings, expressing their concerns and asking for something to be done. An investigation, discussion and action usually follows. Yet that does not mean the problem is always resolved to everyone's satisfaction but something has happened. Action was taken and a change begins.

I have sat at commission and trustee meetings and watched how resolutions are passed and how new ones are proposed. Commissioners and trustees discuss and sometimes debate the merits of proposals, sometimes late into the evenings. Yet a common ground is usually reached.

And action of some kind follows. And then change.

Local government in the Plymouth community works. I think residents know it and appreciate it. Action is not always immediate and often takes longer than expected, but it happens.

I only wonder what the homeless and families of murder victims in Washington D.C. think about the federal government that stands surrounding them everyday.

The French-American Back-to-Back program has come to a successful conclusion for 1991. On July 6, 24 Plymouth Canton fifth and sixth grade students returned from a three week stay in Ormesson, France. This follows the visit of 30 French students to Plymouth-Canton in May.

This program offers an ideal opportunity for youngsters on both sides of the Atlantic to see, experience and learn how their counterparts live. All direct costs for the program are funded by parents of students, excluding the activities and field trips of the French students during their stay in our community. These activities, key to demonstrating the diverse "American lifestyle," are funded by the generous donations of private citizens and local businesses.

As always, The Plymouth-Canton Community generosity was overwhelming. It helped make this year's program the best ever.

Sayres regroup after fire

Gently carrying the crafted styrofoam snowman, Linda Gilstruff placed it on the picnic table in front of her mother.

"Look ma, it's not even wet."

Lila Sayre, 68, chuckled softly but the worry marked her face again soon. The snowman was laying on its side next to a pile of blackened china, and other items salvaged from the freak fire that destroyed her house of 41 years.

"Well, we're alive, and that's the main thing," she said with a sigh. "Forty-eight years up in smoke. It's kind of bad isn't it?"

During last week's storm, a power wire fell onto Lila and Edward Sayre's chain link fence, electrifying both the fence and their house, which was steel sided. The force of the electrical charge blew the gas pipe on the side of the house and started a fierce fire, which eventually gutted their home.

EDITOR:

Inside the kaleidoscope

By Jillian
Bogater

In the 48 years she spent with her husband Edward, 41 of them spent at their house in Plymouth Township, it was hard to believe it was all reduced to a picnic table full of items.

The security was gone. Even their independence - Edward and Lila have since moved back in with her 98-year-old mother until their house can be rebuilt.

Black soot spotting her face, Linda looked at the skeleton that was once the house she grew up in.

"I don't want to be around when it's leveled," she said, pausing. "It's just too much."

Lila stood next to the picnic table wrapping wine glasses in newspaper, seemingly numbed by the loss. Everything in the kitchen was destroyed, as were countless uninsured valuables and heirlooms.

But there was also the cruel ironies in discovering fish still frozen in the freezer and a fire extinguisher that somehow survived the bizarre electrical fire.

And in the midst of their family tragedy, the Sayres were thankful for the helpful thinking of the police and fire department.

"Our camper was right next to the garage and the police called a tow truck to pull it away so it didn't catch on fire," Linda said. "If it would have been in the garage, it would have blew up the house."

"We couldn't have asked for better firemen and police," Lila added. "They're the greatest. They were real fine to us."

The Sayres plan to rebuild on the same lot, with the same structure, but will make a few modern additions.

Among them is to make sure the siding on the house is vinyl.

Lloyd Oliver runs the projection at Plymouth's Penn Theatre. Oliver also hams it up as "the voice" of the Penn. (Crier photo by Eric Lukaski)

Career spans 40 years

'Voice' of Penn follows his love

BY JILLIAN BOGATER

When Lloyd Oliver was 16, he knew he wanted to be in theater.

Following that dream, he has managed to go from popping corn to the voice of Penn Theater in a "big screen" career spanning 46 years.

Oliver, who now manages the Penn Theater as well as runs the projection, began his career in Union City, TN during the 1940s.

"I started at the bottom, popping corn," said Oliver.

Oliver, 62, remembers the days of Roy Rogers movies and ticket prices of 35 cents for adults, 12 cents for children. Soon after starting, he worked as the house projectionist and eventually sub-manager on weekends.

In 1953, Oliver left Tennessee for Michigan to work at the General Motors Hydromatic Plant. Although he needed the money, Oliver did not enjoy his job and eventually went back to his first love-- theater.

When a relief projectionist position opened at the Penn Theater in 1957, Oliver applied and was hired. In 1964 he started to help changing the movie advertising and in 1968 was promoted to full projectionist.

During that time he also worked at two drive-in movie theaters in Ann Arbor. What were once family establishments when Oliver worked for them, have now turned into adult movie theaters, he said.

In the 34 years he has spent with the Penn Theater, Oliver has become a trademark of sorts through his voice.

Inspired by a few radio buddies of his, Oliver created the distinct "Thank you for calling Penn Theater..." recording for the featured movie of the week in 1965. He has remained the voice behind the upcoming attractions ever since.

The favorite part of his job is "running the old films," he said. "Classics like 'Gone With the Wind,' 'Doctor Zhivago' and 'Ben Hur.'"

Though some may think a projectionist job gets lonely, Oliver would beg to differ.

"There's always something going on to keep me busy," he said. "And if not, I've got a television up there in my booth."

Oliver found a way to keep himself occupied when he met his wife Elanor while working at the theater. He was working as a relief projectionist and Elanor was working concessions.

"There's kids that still meet here, like the same way with my wife, and end up getting married," he said.

Oliver currently lives in Plymouth Township with Elanor and one of their three sons.

Thinking back, Oliver would not want to work in another profession. For him it has become almost an addictive way of life.

"It's just something that gets in your blood," he said. "It's hard to explain."

Feds drop charges for now

A federal complaint against the president of a local newspaper chain alleging a check kiting scheme has been dropped.

David Willett, 48, owner of the Associated Newspapers, was charged in June with violating federal banking statutes by kiting checks. Associated publishes six newspapers, including the Canton Eagle.

"The complaint has been dismissed," said Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) spokesperson John Anthony said last week.

But Anthony added the investigation is continuing.

"It is under review by the U.S. Attorney's office for a possible grand jury indictment," he said.

Check kiting involves moving funds between two or more accounts (by writing checks) to make it appear there are positive balances, though the balances are not supported by actual funds in the accounts.

The original charge alleged that Willett carried out a check kiting scheme between accounts at First of America Bank and the Wayne-Westland Credit Union.

Willett was charged with floating $5.8 million between the accounts from January to March of 1990. The alleged scheme resulted in a loss of $30,000 for First of America, according to Anthony.

Willett's attorney, S. Allen Early, saw the dropping of the complaint as vindication for his client.

"We are quite firm in our belief that he (Willett) did not do anything illegal, that he did not intend to defraud anyone," Willett said. "No loss has occurred to either bank."

Early said he and Willett are working with federal agents as they continue their investigation. "We hope there will be a positive outcome to this," he said.

Canton man found hanged

A 44-year-old Canton man was found hanged in his home on Friday in what Canton Police believe may have been an accidental death.

According to police, the naked body of the man was found in his own garage on Leean Lane by his brother, a resident of Dearborn. The brothers had last spoken on July 7, police said.

Police said when they arrived at the scene they discovered a belt from a robe tied around the man's neck. A cord tied to the belt went over a rafter in the garage and the other end was tied to the man's genitals, said police, and the man's hands also were loosely bound with gauze.

The Wayne County medical examiner ruled that death was caused by asphyxiation according to Canton information officer Pat Nemecek.

Police are continuing to investigate the death but have ruled out foul play, Nemecek said. "We're looking at it as accidental," he added.

Tell it to Phyllis

By Phyllis Redfern

Cutting those apron strings is one of the hardest things a mom has to do. After spending last week in Nashville helping my son get settled, I finally managed to cut some of those strings.

Actually I'm not sure how much help I was, but he now has pictures on the walls. I did some mom things like buy him a mop, pail, broom and those things you need to clean with. Then I had to make sure he had mixing bowls (a.k.a. something to put the popcorn in).

Of course we all know the reason for my trip down there was more for me than the kid, but that's what being a mom is all about. If I'm going to worry about this kid properly, I have to visualize where he lives, works and the kind of characters he hangs around with.

As for the apartment he lives in, it's not bad. The closet in his one bedroom apartment is bigger than mine in our four-bedroom house. The view from his living room is rather nice, especially watching the sun set behind the mountains. The pool is just down the hill and the tennis courts not far -- we should all have it so bad. Upon entering the complex you have to drive half way up a mountain, get out of the car, climb the other half of the mountain, then just a flight of stairs. If nothing else, he should stay in shape.

After receiving clearance to tour where he works, from what I saw of the Saturn facilities I was impressed. I'm anxious to go back when they have the official tours set up. Since the kid is excited about his work and loves driving his new Saturn up and down around those hills, I have no choice but to be happy for him (even if I keep my eyes closed).

Now for the best part -- my impression of a few of his friends that I met. I like Dick and his wife Roe. He reminds me a little about my brother and she and I would have a great time touring the area (maybe next time). Thom and Lisa are the newly weds in the group (what else is there to say). Don is definitely the life of the party and his sense of humor probably gets him in and out of many situations. His roommate Chris; although a little quieter I'm sure has the ability to instigate a few things (if the occasion arises). Fran is the quietest, but with that group maybe that's the safest way to be. I'm not sure what to say about Greg other than it sure was fun celebrating his birthday. (Please tell whoever decides when the next birthday will be and include me on the invitation list.)

Well kid, your friends certainly have a sense of humor, but I somehow think you will be able to hold your own with them.

After seeing, meeting and forming my own impressions, there was nothing left for me to do but say "goodbye, good luck and I love you." Although I promised myself I wasn't going to cry when I kissed him goodbye, a few tears managed to escape anyway. Oh well, that's just part of being a mom.

Flames and smoke engulf the Corr-Pack Inc. building in Salem Township Friday morning. (Crier photo by Jim Malson)

In Salem Twp. Fire guts Corr-Pack

BY JILLIAN BOGATER

An early morning fire Friday at an industrial park in Salem Township, completely destroyed at least one building in the complex and slightly damaged another.

The Salem Township Fire Department responded to a call at 6:04 a.m. reporting a fire at Corr-Pack Inc., 9833 Five Mile Rd.

The main building of Corr-Pack, which is part of Larco Industry, was destroyed during the blaze, while a new addition still under construction, sustained lesser damage, said Salem firefighter Ferman Rohraff. The buildings are owned and rented out by Larry Gutowsky, of Orchard Lake.

Though a Michigan State Police fire investigator was at the site for most of the day, a cause has not been determined for the fire, Rohraff said.

The volunteer Salem Township Fire

Department was assisted by three other local departments during the blaze, including Northville Township, Plymouth Township and Northfield Township, he said.

"Northville and Plymouth townships assisted by fighting the fire with our equipment," Rohraff said, adding that other departments hauled the necessary water supplies.

No firefighters were injured during the day long extinguishing efforts, he said. While firefighters originally left the scene at approximately 3 p.m., they were called back two more times after the fire managed to rekindle into "hot spots," Rohraff said.

The last fire truck left the scene Friday at 7 p.m., he added.

The working area of the building was gutted by the fire, Rohraff said, but there are currently no loss estimates.

Set for CEP Michigan Model hearing

BY JILLIAN BOGATER

A Michigan Senate select committee will hold a public hearing to examine the use of what some parents have called "anti-family" school health curriculum Monday (July 22) in the Salem High auditorium.

The hearing will be held from 7-10 p.m. at Salem.

The five member committee, which includes Senator Robert Geake (R-Northville), is currently investigating parent complaints that the six-year-old Michigan Model for Comprehensive School Health Education is teaching elementary and middle school students about the occult and Eastern religions.

The model is used to define the core curriculum in health education areas of study.

Some of the concerns parents have raised include "class projects and discussions that tend to portray parents negatively," Geake said. "It sends the message that you can't trust them."

Other complaints being focused on by the lawmakers include the claim that the program espouses a value free approach to pre-marital sex and substance abuse.

Geake said that parents have complained that the model sends "mixed messages" to students in the area of substance abuse.

The hearing will "provide a forum for people to give experiences and opinions about the Michigan Model," Geake said.

Those who attend will have an opportunity to express their views before the committee.

Four other hearings about the Michigan Model are scheduled around the state. Meeting dates include July 31 at Sault Ste. Marie, Aug. 19 in Traverse City, Sept. 9 in Grand Rapids and Sept. 11 in Lansing.

Commerce coffee

The Plymouth Community Chamber of Commerce has scheduled, along with its regular monthly coffees, a special chance for the business community to meet new Plymouth Township Supervisor Jerry Law.

The new member coffee is set for July 25 from 8-9 a.m. at the chamber office on Main Street in downtown City of Plymouth.

Places to be Concerned Citizens to meet

Residents of The Plymouth-Canton Community will have a chance to hear more about Mettetal Airport in Canton at a joint meeting of the Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Canton Concerned Citizens groups.

The meeting is planned for Tuesday (July 23) at 7:30 p.m. in the Central Middle School cafeteria. The school is located at Church and Main streets in the City of Plymouth.

The meeting will focus on the involvement of the FAA and other concerns connected with public ownership and operation of the airport raised by the Concerned Citizens groups.

Members of the Ann Arbor Advisory Committee will also be on hand to share the experiences of that group with the FAA.

For further information call Sandra Kosky at 459-5471.

Drums boom downtown

The sound of drums will resound through Kellogg Park in the City of Plymouth next Thursday (July 25) when several drum corps in town for a national competition offer up a "stand still" performance.

The free performance is set for noon on that Thursday and will feature the drum corps Limited Edition, Columbus, OH; Pioneer, Milwaukee; and Northern-Aurora, Saginaw.

Later that night the 15th annual Drum Corps North XV Competition will be held in the Centennial Educational Park (CEP) football stadium.

The 7:30 p.m. competition features nine drum and bugle teams from across the midwest, the east coast, Florida and Canada. It was originally scheduled to be held in Ypsilanti but was moved due to repairs at the Eastern Michigan stadium.

Among those competing will be the world champion Cadets of Bergen County as well as the Bluecoats, Orlando Magic, Limited Edition, Pioneer and Northern Aurora.

Tickets for the show are $10 per person in advance and at the gate. Advanced tickets before July 24 are $5 for senior citizens and $5 for children 12 and younger.

Proceeds from the ticket sales will be donated to the Ann Arbor Ronald McDonald House.

Tickets are available in Plymouth-Canton at Evola and Arnoldt Williams Music centers. They can also be purchased through the Ypsilanti Chamber of Commerce. For information call 482-4920.

The competition is sponsored by the Ypsilanti Area Visitors and Convention Bureau.

Eating right, feeling good

BY JIM TOTTEN

Healthy food does not taste great, and great tasting food is not healthy, many folks might think.

Yet that idea really does not hold true, said Thomas Alonzo, chef at the World Gym Cafe in Canton, which prepares healthy dishes, low in calories but high in protein and carbohydrates.

Spices and cooking methods are the key to creating tasty foods that are low in cholesterol, fats and salts said Alonzo, who also teaches culinary arts at the William Ford Vocational Center of Wayne-Westland Public Schools as well as runs his own catering outfit.

"The key is just spices and finding different spices that compliment each other and substitute for the fats," he said.

Basil, thyme and oregano are three spices that he uses regularly while preparing foods that add flavor without the salt or fats.

"You can get a lot of flavor out of foods without the cholesterol and fat," he said. Other fresh spices and seasonings he recommended were garlic, pepper, paprika, cumin, and chili powder.

Alonzo also recommended using olive oil as a substitute for oil or butter.

"When I need oil, I use olive oil," he said, adding that it does not contain any cholesterol. Alonzo said that some scientific tests have even shown that olive oil breaks down cholesterol in the body.

Soy bean oil can also be used as a substitute for oil or butter in cooking he said.

Different sauces or gravies can also be prepared to add flavor to certain dishes.

One of these is chicken broth. Alonzo said the broth is made from corn starch, water, juices from boiled chicken bones, carrots, celery and onions.

"It has lots of flavor because it comes from the chicken but it is also low in sodium," he said.

Unique salad dressings can also be created from different combinations. Alonzo said that lemon and lime juice can be added to vinegar to give salad dressings a new flavor. Also, ginger or raspberry vinaigrette (flavored vinegar) can be purchased at stores to create new dressings.

Alonzo said that frying foods in butter or oil should be avoided since it adds fat and cholesterol. Alonzo said steaming, grilling or boiling are alternatives which retain much of the food's flavor.

"If you can steam food it doesn't matter what it is, you are going to save most of the natural flavoring," Alonzo said, adding that almost everything can be steamed.

Poaching is another method he said that can be used for most foods. He said poaching is like boiling but at a lower temperature. For a piece of fish, he said poaching it would take four to six minutes.

For those just beginning to cook in a more healthy fashion, Alonzo suggested buying fresh seafood. He said that markets carry many kinds of seafood besides crab and lobster.

The fish can be prepared by grilling, baking or poaching he said. "You can get a lot of flavor out of it without the cholesterol and fat," he said.

During the summer, Alonzo said barbecuing is also a good way to prepare food.

Summer great for fitness activity

BY JILLIAN BOGATER

As the heat rises during the summer, weight consciousness also does for many people.

The ability to squeeze a bit more than an inch often inspires the uninspired to get out of their beat up recliners and do a few leg lifts in the name of fitness.

Summer months are the best time to begin an exercise routine because the days are longer and healthy foods such as fresh vegetables and fruits are ample, said Jan Harwood, president of the Plymouth Fitness Studio for Women in Plymouth Township.

Exercises can range from swimming, walking and biking to athletic activities including soft ball and basketball, she said.

"Swimming is the most all around healthy activity," Harwood said. "It's natural and rarely does someone get hurt."

When exercising it is important to approach the activities safely and know as much as possible about the techniques used.

"Learning how to work out in a fitness facility enhances strength, the cardio-vascular system and sports training," said Debbie Miller, manager at the studio.

Even with simple activities like walking, safety precautions must be taken, they said. Placement of the foot while walking, posture and arm motions are all important.

Advanced walkers sometimes use light hand weights to firm and tone upper body muscles and increase cardio-vascular endurance, Harwood added.

Other forms of fitness such as jogging and running are not as safe and healthy as originally thought, they said.

Poor running surfaces, such as concrete, dirt and grass, contribute to ankle stress and possibly knee problems, Harwood said. Proper running shoes are needed while jogging, and it is best if runners can do so on a track.

"If you're old or out of shape, it's also not in your best interest to jog in the hottest part of the day," Harwood said. "It is best in the morning or late evening hours."

New exercise technology has helped those who want to run or jog, but do not want to risk shin splints, ankle problems or knee stress, said Brad McQuiston, owner of World Gym in Canton.

Stair climber machines and stationary bikes are good substitutes which will provide the same results without the danger of muscle damage, he said.

Before exercising, it is important to utilize a stretching routine, Harwood said. If this is not done, the activities can cause a lot of damage.

Finding an individualized target heart rate, based on age and exercise experience, and training in a safe zone are mandatory for health-smart fitness, Miller said. For maximum results, it is best to exercise at least three times a week.

Aerobic exercises are a good way to maintain a healthy heart rate, Harwood said. Her studio offers 24 different aerobic classes per week, she added.

It is easy to elevate heart rates during the summer because people tend to work too hard and overheat. Winter months tend to slow the heart rate, making it more difficult to over-exercise, Miller said.

Warning signs to watch for include shortness of breath, fatigue, light headedness and profuse sweating, Harwood said.

"Listen to your body and use common sense," she added.

Those who feel they can keep in shape via television show or quick-tip videos, should be aware of the dangers that come with those techniques, both said.

"A lot of those people are running on their names or a pretty face, but they aren't executing the exercises properly," Harwood said. "They usually don't have degrees and talk a lot of nonsense."

Dangers that go along with home fitness shows include calf cramps and ankle stress from lack of proper support, the local experts said.

Because most of these exercises are done on a living room carpet in bare feet or stockings, there are also other dangers to be aware of while working out.

"A soft surface can be confusing," Miller said. "When you're on a carpet jumping and bouncing around, the damage is just tremendous."

Another problem with home fitness is the lack of motivation, McQuiston said. While working out at home, since there is not an instructor, the motivation level usually remains low, he said.

Staying with the program is a part of fitness many people struggle with, Harwood and Miller said. But setting personal goals and finding an enjoyable activity will improve chances of sticking with a fitness agenda.

"Exercise shouldn't be a chore," Miller said. "It should be a lifestyle, just like going to bed every night."

Getting down to business

At Aventura

An adventure awaits

BY JIM WHITE

There's a new look to the northwest corner of Main and Ann Arbor Trail in the City of Plymouth.

Aventura, a store specializing in furnishings for the home, has recently opened its doors.

Co-owners Suzanne Bogden, a Livonia resident who previously owned the Gathering Basket on Forest Avenue, and Daniel Mayer, of Plymouth, are testing the market for furnishings in Plymouth.

"We definitely don't want to be known as a furniture store, we specialize in home furnishings," Bogden said. More than furniture, Aventura carries unique accessories.

A gazebo dominates the center of the store. "We just put that in because some of our gardening items are very popular," Bogden said. "We use it to hang our wind chimes, also. We have things that are very different, very nice."

There are plaster columns, some short enough to be used as table pedestals. "We have sold a lot of them," said Bogden. "People like to faux finish them."

Decorative lampshade finials have been another hot seller. "They make great gifts," said Mayer.

During the Christmas season, "this is where people will come to shop," he said. "We'll try to have 10 trees in here, all decorated in a different theme." Bogden added that a favorite at the Gathering Basket was a tree "for him," decorated with gifts for bachelors.

Aventura also carries various lines of tables, sofas and chairs. Custom furniture may be ordered at a 25 percent discount.

Bogden and Mayer have not yet settled on specific lines or styles of furniture because they are waiting to see what their customers want. "We'll market to any source," said Mayer. "We're too new to concentrate."

"We have an eclectic assortment," Bogden said. "Country, contemporary, and traditional styles will be given an equal shot."

"We'll have a true mixture of everything," added Mayer. "Our objective is to clean up this building." Bogden and Mayer have put a lot of work into redecorating the building since moving in. Walls have been painted in a rag roll style to "create a new environment," Bogden said.

Different nooks have been laid out to display different styles, such as traditional items for older homes or more contemporary items, such as glass tables.

"It has been hard to make each area different and still have them flow together," Mayer said.

"It's been a labor of love," added Bogden. "We're not done, obviously, with the cosmetic things."

Still, some items remain from the old Wayside Gifts. Aventura will continue to carry candlesticks, Baldwin brass, and lamp shades.

With its varied collection, Aventura — "the name means adventure," said Bogden — will attempt to break new ground in Plymouth, a town brimming with stores that sell country items.

"It's very hard to have a retail store here," said Bogden. "You have to have a product that's not the same from store to store."

So far, customer response has been "extremely positive," said Mayer. "They're glad to see something that's new, different."

DARE grant helps program

Canton has received a $18,563 grant to expand the local Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program.

According to James Kosteva (D-Canton), the grant will help the township improve the existing DARE program (now in place throughout Plymouth-Canton Community Schools) and reach out to more students with substance abuse problems.

"In a time of increased crime and drug abuse, it is essential to have community programs available for assistance," Kosteva said.

The DARE program was implemented in Michigan in 1988 and originally organized by the Michigan State Police. Since then, however, local law enforcement departments in Plymouth-Canton have taken over the running of the program in local schools.

The program helps equip fifth and sixth grade students with skills for resisting peer pressure to experiment with drugs and alcohol.

Collector brings hobby home

Crazy about shuffleboard, sports

BY RITA DERBIN

A visitor wouldn't suspect the City of Plymouth home of Elmer and Mabel Kapp to be a sports collector's heaven. Once inside the basement, though, it's like seeing a little bit of Cooperstown mixed in with a sports bar atmosphere.

Elmer Kapp, who is retired from Northwest Blueprint, the company he founded over 40 years ago, is a sports nut. He loves sports and collects anything to do with sports.

For recreation he and his wife Mabel have friends over for friendly games of shuffleboard that often last late into the night. The 69-year-old retiree is also on a bowling league and has been known to play some golf.

It doesn't sound too unusual for an active retiree, but Elmer happens to be blind.

"Oh I've played some charity golf for the Lions Club but my scores are real high," said Kapp, who also bowls in a league with the Metro West Blind Bowlers.

His main sport is shuffleboard, however. Kapp learned to play about 35 years ago in a bar across from where his business was located. He would go over for sandwiches every day at lunch and got to know the bartender, who thought it would be fun playing doubles with him.

"It's not as popular anymore, but there used to be a lot of shuffleboards - we'd play for our own amusement," Kapp said. "The owners got a kick out of challenging the people in the bar."

Kapp added that, "no one could believe a blind guy could win at shuffleboard but we'd win most of the time."

He enjoyed the game so much he put a shuffleboard in his office and then bought one for his home.

Shuffleboard is played on a long and narrow waist-high board made out of wood. Players push pucks across the table and try to either knock their opponent's puck off or get their puck as close to the end as possible without going off the board into the gutter.

Mabel helps Kapp by letting him know how close he is to the edge. The Kapp's board also has foot markings on the side to let Elmer know how close he is to the end.

"We've modified the board so I can have my blind friends over," Kapp said. "It's just a fun game that everyone can play."

All four of Kapp's kids -- Dennis, Joseph, Douglas and Marianne play shuffleboard but, as Elmer points out "the kids just argue over everything at the drop of the hat but it is fun."

Kapp was blinded in an accident when he was 18. He was going to college to be an engineer but "at that time there wasn't any use for blind engineers so I started selling," he explained.

And sell he did. Kapp started out with two engineering items in 1941 and was soon selling drafting tools and tracing tables -- anything to do with engineering. When he retired in 1989 his Northwest Blueprint business, which sells engineering and drafting equipment, was a multi-million dollar business.

Now that he's retired, Kapp has the time to pursue his passion for sports collectibles, especially baseball memorabilia.

In his youth Kapp played baseball and has followed the game his whole life. He has made the acquaintance of most of the Tigers through charity events and also knows Ernie Harwell, whom he listens to all the time.

"My favorite Tiger is Alan Trammell and Sparky Anderson is the nicest person. I tease and joke with them all the time," Kapp said. "And Ernie -- we're going to miss him -- whenever you need someone for charity he'll be there if he can make it."

Mabel is also a baseball junkie and doesn't mind in the least that Elmer drags her to all the different fantasy camps and baseball stadiums around the country.

"We go to a lot of charity functions and see a lot of the old players," Mabel said. "They're just tickled pink that we remember them."

"It's fun having people walk up to Elmer and start talking to him."

From charity auctions, sports shows and personal acquaintances the Kapps have put together an extensive collection of sports memorabilia -- autographed baseballs, bats, photos and other items.

They also collect Pistons and Red Wings autographs and various items from public officials, such as a 1984 Tiger jersey signed by Ronald Reagan. In the Kapp basement there are also display cases filled with Tiger mitts, bats and balls from the 1935, 1945, 1968 and 1984 World Series that Mabel has been organizing.

Elmer has donated autographed baseballs to the Lions Club he belongs to in Dearborn Heights. He has also donated goods to his son Dennis' auction for the homeless in Detroit.

"I don't do it for money," Kapp said. "I bid high at charity auctions to get the bidding going and sometimes I have to eat it but it's all for a good cause and I have fun."

36th State Rep. District to be decided in primary have already requested absentee ballots. "That's good compared to other elections," she said, "but I have no idea how many people will actually go to the polls. That's in the lap of the gods."

The three candidates also anticipate a low turnout but all say their campaigns are going fine.

Goss, 54, has been supervisor since 1987 and previously served as township clerk. She said the issues that seem most important to the voters are education and taxes.

"When you go door to door you hear people's concerns," she said Monday. "In the Plymouth community especially, people are very concerned about getting a quality education. Property tax relief is an issue throughout the district."

A few people have indicated concern about abortion. "About three or four people have asked questions on abortion," she said. "For them, it is a one issue race."

Goss herself has said she will listen to both sides of the abortion argument before making up her mind.

She said she has set a tentative budget of $40,000 for her campaign.

Vorva, 39, has been a city commissioner since 1989. He also served as a City of Plymouth police officer for 10 years. He said the district deserves a change in government.

"One thing that should be an issue is that we need to change the way the system has been working," said Vorva Monday. "The good old boy network has to be changed. We need to elect someone with the energy, intelligence, and background to make that change."

"I am only concerned with the message Jerry Vorva is getting out," he added. "The other two candidates are simply reacting. People are responding positively. I'm excited."

He also agreed that education, taxes, and abortion would be issues in the campaign. Vorva is pro-choice.

Vorva estimated he will spend $25,000 on the campaign. "That's a guess," he said.

Whyman, 32, is a Republican Party precinct delegate from Canton. She is a data processing consultant for Ford Motor Co. This is her first time running for public office, which she sees as advantageous.

"I'm from the business world. I'm a refreshing change because I'm not a politician," she said Monday.

Whyman supports Governor John Engler's 20 per cent property tax cut. "That's my stand," she said. "Less government spending, improving the quality of education, and my position on abortion are my issues."

Whyman supports right to life and has been endorsed by Michigan Right to Life.

Going door to door has been the most important aspect of her campaign, she said. "I expect to spend an amount relative to what the job's salary is worth," she said. "I expect to spend $5,000."

expect to spend $5,000."

Also on Aug. 6, Maurice Breen will be on the ballot for 10th District Wayne County Commissioner. No one is opposing him. The district includes the City of Plymouth, Northville and Plymouth townships, and parts of the cities of Northville and Livonia.

City reviews ethics code

BY JIM TOTTEN

A code of conduct and ethics could soon become policy in the City of Plymouth.

The Plymouth City Commission voted Monday to have a new code of conduct and ethics reviewed by city employees, department heads and city boards.

City Manager Steven Walters described the code as a "functional definition of misconduct" which is largely already in effect. The code is based on state law and the city charter.

He said that adopting the code is a common step for communities. Northville adopted a similar code of conduct and ethics in 1988 he said.

Walters wrote that the code would "give city board members, administrative officers and employees a more detailed explanation of what 'misconduct' means than is provided in the charter."

Walters said at the commission meeting that city employees and city boards will have an opportunity to raise questions and make comments on the code of conduct and ethics before it comes before the city commission for a vote on Aug. 19.

price, Zamiara said.

"The issue has been referred to the Attorney General's Office for a legal opinion on how our (Mobile Home Act) laws would apply," said Margaret Patterson, a case analyst for the Mobile Home Commission.

Plymouth Hills Mobile Court Manager Ken Blair said Ruggirello told him that he met with Zamiara last week and "that it's in the hands of the Attorney General now."

Ruggirello did not return phone calls made to him for comment.

Zamiara said he is confident that the complaints will be solved and is hoping to do so as soon as possible.

"Hopefully within the next week to ten days we'll have this problem resolved," he said. "I'm pushing for a speedy resolution."
