

Profits Drop, Evans Dismisses More Than 50 Officials

When the board chairman of Evans Products Co. said in late October that "corrective action is being taken at the Plymouth plant" to counter higher expenses, few townspeople expected that 50-60 people at the top management level would be dismissed.

But during the past month, in an attempt to offset "startup expenses and manpower problems", the company has dismissed more than 50 people at the administrative and salaried level and replaced its top executives.

Some of the people dismissed have been with the firm for as long as 18 years, and a number had been promoted shortly before the shake-up.

Among those who "resigned" were James J. Conway, executive vice-president in charge of the Transportation Equipment Group, and C. W. Monk, divisional vice-president in charge of the Railway Car Division.

Monk had been brought to Evans at the end of August from Bethlehem Steel Co. Conway had held his position for about five years.

Replacing Conway is Sheldon Kaplan, who holds the title of corporate vice-president and general manager of the Transportation Equipment Group. He is also president of the United States Railway Equipment Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Evans.

On Oct. 5 Kaplan had been named a company vice-president and assistant general manager of the Transportation Equipment Group, while retaining his previous position with U.S. Railway.

Little more than a month later, on Nov. 10, Kaplan was boosted from assistant to general manager. No mention of Conway was made in the announcement by C. Calvert Knudsen, president of Evans.

Between these two appointments, on Oct. 28, Board Chairman Monford Orloff had made the third quarter report to shareholders, telling that earnings were less than expected and that "corrective action is being taken" at Plymouth.

Performance of the Plymouth plant, Orloff said, "should improve markedly in the next several months. With our present high order backlog and with profitable operations at the Blue Island, Ill. and Washington, Ind. railcar plants, we expect rebuilding to make a substantial contribution to earnings in 1967."

Total profits for the company, Orloff said, were higher than a year ago, with most of the profits coming from the U.S. Railway Equipment Co., the Plywall Division, the Fiber Products Division, and the Capp-Homes Division.

Sales and earnings for the first nine months of 1966 were $214,391,000 and $5,773,000, respectively, in contrast to sales of $177,953,000 and earnings of $5,635,000 for the same period in 1965.

Net earnings per common share for the period were $1.84 compared with $1.96 in 1965. The net earnings figure was based on the average number of common shares outstanding, adjusted for stock split and stock dividends.

Although Evans has cut back its white collar staff, the local plant is still looking for production workers. Signs are now running in Detroit buses which say, "There's a GOOD job for you at Evans!"

The company is looking for square shear operators, burners, arc welders, die setters, electricians, tool and die makers, and unskilled workers. Welder training is also offered for those who want to become welders.

"We are still short from 60 to 70 production workers," Sam Hudson, public relations director, said. Evans lost some of its employees during a wildcat strike last summer, Hudson said, and has not been able to replace them.

Facilities for the manufacture of rail cars in Plymouth have been expanded by more than $6.5 million during the past two years. The company has a huge backlog of orders. While the plant has tried to produce a record 10 cars per day, the production rate has apparently been slowed because

Merchants Gird for Christmas Rush

They're Set To Equal 1965 Mark

With the downtown streets gayly decorated and the arrival of Santa Claus the Christmas Spirit is in the air and the merchants of the Plymouth Community are girding for the annual rush.

Despite the snows and inclement weather of the past week the shopping rush got underway and with 18 shopping days still left, the merchants are anticipating a demand that will even surpass that of a year ago — the best in several years.

"We found business a bit off for the past three months," one of the merchants on Main Street remarked, "but during the past few days there has been an increase to make me believe that this year may even beat that of last year."

This seemed to be the feeling of the vast majority of the shopkeepers in a sample survey taken by The Mail.

On Penniman Avenue, on Ann Arbor Trail and the other shopping areas the feeling was the same as that on Main Street. It was the thought that the enthusiasm shown by the early shoppers was a sign that this would be another good year.

"You can sort of feel it in the air," one merchant on Ann Arbor Trail remarked, "The customers we have had this week were caught in the spirit of the time and you just knew they'd be back and that we are due for some great shopping days."

Another pointed out, "There is a noticeable trend this year. Among the younger folks there is a desire for such things as cameras and usable items, such as clothing and the like. It may be called leaning toward adult purchasing — and that is a good sign."

With shopping slowly picking up the momentum after the snow there is a bigger rush for party reservations at the various clubs and restaurants for the holiday season. This, too, is a good sign.

EMU Choir To Appear In Symphony

The Eastern Michigan University choir and two members of the orchestra will share the limelight on Sunday, Dec. 11 when the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra presents its third concert of the year under the direction of Conductor Wayne Dunlap. The program is slated in the Plymouth High auditorium at 4 p.m.

William Beitner and David Wolter, longtime trumpet players with the orchestra, will join in a concerto for two trumpets and strings as one of the features.

The EMU choir, under the direction of Blaine Ballard, will present two numbers — "The Christmas Story" and "Fantasia on Christmas Carols."

The presentation of the annual Christmas concert has become a tradition for the Symphony in recent years. It highlights the Yule season for music lovers with a tremendous program.

Ballard, director of the University choir, is a graduate of State Teachers College in Mansfield, Pa., and has a Master of Music degree from Indiana University. He has been Associate Professor of Music at EMU since 1960.

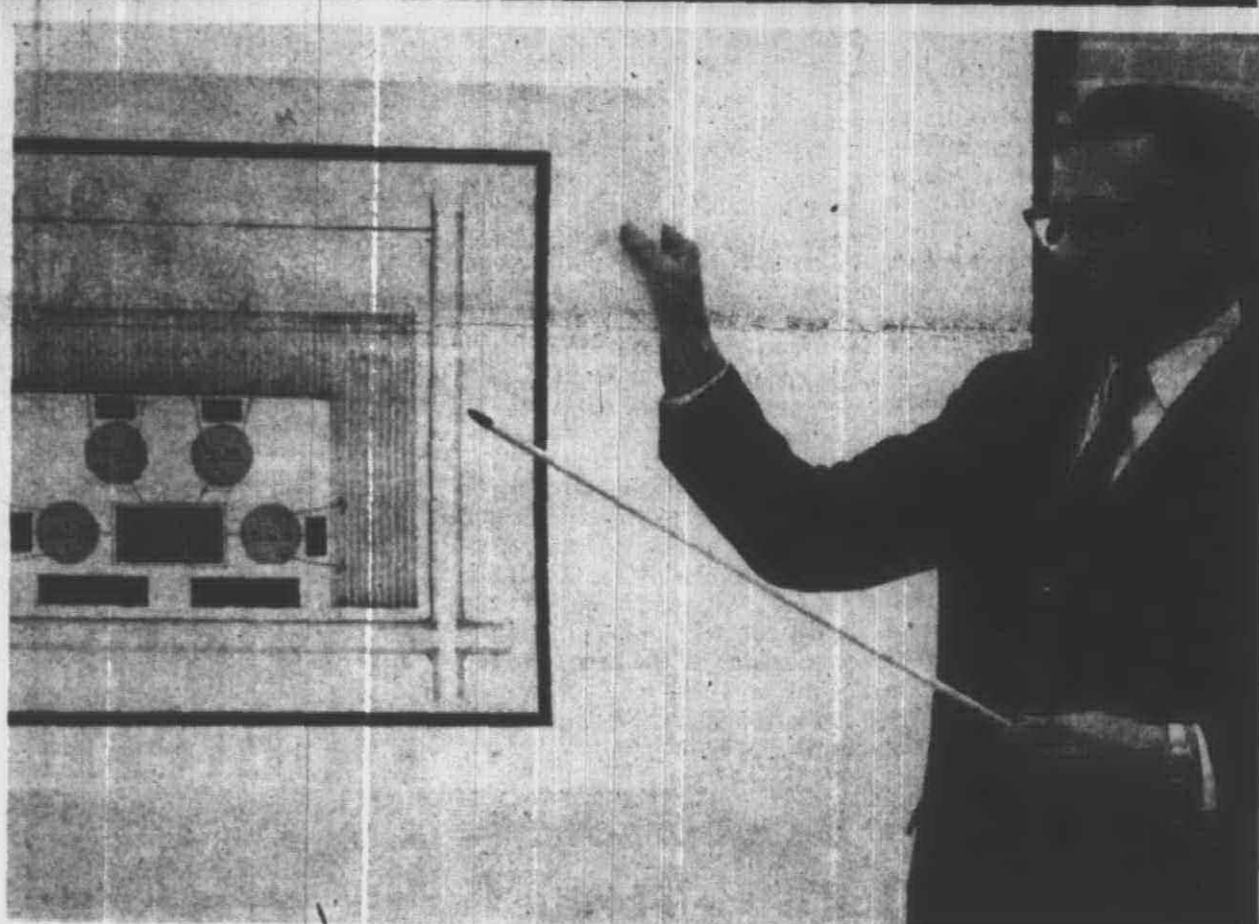

The complete program: "Concerto for two trumpets and strings by Vivaldi with William Beitner and David Wolter as the featured trumpet players.

"Christmas Story by Schutz, Eastern Michigan University choir.

Introduction March and Shepherds Dance from "Amahl and the Night Visitors" — Menotti, Symphony Orchestra.

"Die Natali," chorale prelude from Christmas, Barber, orchestra.

"Fantasia on Christmas Carols," Vaughan Williams, EMU choir.

ARCHITECT HENRY HABERKORN shows to Plymouth area governmental officials a sketch of a possible high school site with several high schools located on it. The plan shown has four high schools surrounding a specialized activity center — research library, auditorium, advanced science area and other facilities — which would serve all the schools.

Shows Eight Sites

The Plymouth Community School Board is considering a plan to put a number of high school buildings on one site.

Owns four school sites and has options on four others.

Is considering the federal Open Spaces program to help pay for part of the school sites.

This was the news heard by more than fifty officials from city and township governments in the Plymouth school district at a meeting Monday with the Board of Education.

The plan for putting several high schools on one site was explained by Henry Haberkorn of the architectural firm of O'Dell, Hewitt and Luckenback.

School systems, Haberkorn said, have always been frustrated by the requests for specialized facilities in the high schools — such facilities as print shops, advanced science equipment, and auditoriums.

Since few high schools can afford such facilities, they have been forced to compromise by making cafeterias also serve as auditoriums and other similar measures.

To help solve this problem, Haberkorn suggested the multiple high school site. On a 200-acre site as many as eight high schools might be located. Each school could have about 600 students, and each would have separate basic facilities — including athletic facilities — similar to those available at Plymouth High School.

But surrounded by the high schools would be a special facilities center. This center would serve all the schools and might include an advanced science area, planetarium, observatory, museum, advanced vocational area, central research library, and a central auditorium.

Many of these facilities, such as the auditorium and the library, would serve the entire community, not just the school.

The model shown by Haberkorn also included a community park, which would be available both to students and the general populace.

A school grouping such as this has been started in Southfield, Haberkorn said, and is working well in cities in the East.

School Board President Gerald Fischer named the sites which the Board now owns: 1) 10 acres on Ridge Road, north of North Territorial and west side of Ridge; 2) 9.28 acres on Warren Road, adjacent to Hough School, near the corner of Warren and Haggerty Roads; 3) 9.26 acres on Joy Road, east of Haggerty and on the north side of Joy; and 4) 16.01 acres on Haggerty Road, east side of Haggerty between Ann Arbor and Joy Roads.

The Board also has options ranging from 90 to 180 days on four pieces of land: 1) 124

Vocational Program Prospers

If by any chance you should walk into Room 201 at Plymouth High School you would see a rather youngish looking man, slightly gray around the temples, leaning over his desk while talking on the telephone.

He would be giving information to the various merchants in Plymouth and managers of the industrial concerns seeking help with their employment problems.

More than that — he would be proving that the vocational training program in the high school was producing results far beyond expectations.

Taking time out between phone calls, Philip Johnson, coordinator of the program, stated that his first annual report to the State Department of Education on the full scale activity showed that about 60 percent of those affiliated with the vocational program in the 1966 graduating class had gone into the work world.

Out of a graduating class of 408 students 187 had engaged in the vocational program, according to the report. Of this number, 32.5 per cent went on to full time colleges and universities while 7 per cent married or were not available for work.

GOING HIGH TO HELP SANTA: Despite the wind and cold there was no deterring the men in the DPW from doing their part to aid Santa. Here is Robert Pohl, high in the air, hanging the decorations for the downtown area.

Goodfellows Ready To Aid Santa Claus

When Santa Claus, the jolly old gent from the North Pole, arrived at Kellogg Park Saturday afternoon and moved into his little red house for the holiday season he found he had plenty of helpers for the big job he has to do in the Plymouth Community.

While the youngsters swarmed all over him and greeted him like he never was greeted before, the jolly, white whiskered old gent found that the Goodfellows again were lined up — and ready to go to work so that there could be "No Kiddle Without Christmas."

The Goodfellows informed Santa that they were going to have their big day on December 6 when they will sell "Goodfellow" papers at every street corner and all inter-sections of the highways just as they have done in other years.

And the Goodfellows, as has been the custom, will be led by members of the police and fire departments of the community. As in other years this newspaper sale provides the funds with which gifts of clothing and food are purchased for the under-privileged and needy youngsters in the entire community.

The custom of selling newspapers on "Goodfellow Day" is unique in the Metropolitan Detroit area. And through the years countless thousands of dollars have been raised and countless youngsters have been made happy on this day of days.

It had its beginnings a half a century ago when Burt Thomas, a cartoonist on the staff of the Detroit News, drew a cartoon depicting a grown man helping an under-privileged child and the cartoonist referred to him as a "Good Fellow."

This inspired the late Jimmy

Bob Richards To Top Fund Dinner Card

Bob Richards, two-time Olympic pole vault champion and TV personality, will help the Michigan United Fund honor its annual Campaign Achievement Celebration in Lansing, Thursday Noon, December 8.

The meeting will be held at the Oldsmobile Auditorium and will honor the volunteer leadership of more than 150 united campaigns which include the Michigan United Fund's 35 agencies as a component of their local campaigns.

In the 1966 campaigns throughout the state, approximately 50 million dollars has been raised to support necessary health and welfare agencies.

Spartan Stores Set July Target Date

The mammoth warehouse being built by the Spartan Stores of Grand Rapids down on Haggerty Road is expected to be in operation not later than next July.

This was the word passed along last Wednesday morning when Joseph Foy, Executive Vice-President of the Company, broke ground for the building that is expected to help in the distribution of food in the entire southeastern section of the state and parts of Northern Ohio.

Braving the cold blasts that swept across the area, the Spartan boss, took a spade full of dirt and announced that the construction activity was now under way. With him Joseph Munnery, Manager of the Detroit District store, Ray Dutmiers, assistant general manager from Grand Rapids, and Len Haut, an assistant manager.

The official Township family was represented by Helen Richardson, Township Clerk, and Elizabeth Holmes, Township Treasurer. Jim Houk, Mayor of the City of Plymouth, also was on hand to take part in the official celebration, along with Harold Fischer, Director of the Plymouth Area Planning Commission.

The warehouse, when completed, will comprise 250,000 square feet of floor space. Of this amount 22,000 will be devoted to frozen foods, 180,000 to dry groceries and 18,000 to dairy products. The remaining area will be devoted to office space and such things as cosmetics and beauty ware.

Cluster Plan Means Better Education

The summit meeting of the Plymouth Community School Board, with representatives of the various governmental units and their planning boards, brought out some interesting points that should have more than passing interest.

Called for the purpose of disclosing the School Board's plans for acquisition of sites for buildings, the meeting also unveiled some thinking in the direction of a cluster type of high school operation in the future.

This was probably the most interesting disclosure, other than the fact the Board owned four sites and had options on four others.

Two of the options are on two parcels at the intersection of Joy and Canton Center Roads, extending almost to McClumpha, with a total of more than 225 acres.

It was this site that drew most of the comments from the audience. These came after a member of the architectural firm, used by the School Board, told of a plan, being used in Southfield and in the east, where as many as eight high schools may be erected on one large site in a central location.

Each high school would be an individual operation with complete facilities. Each would have its own athletic fields, each would operate as if it were the only high school in the area.

However, the benefits of this type of operation is that there could be central facilities common to all schools. These could include one lighted athletic field for use of all, one fieldhouse for indoor sports with a large seating capacity, one library, one set of laboratory facilities. This would enable the school board to use the additional savings for better facilities in the individual buildings.

We believe it was the first time that such a proposal had been made before a meeting of this type. It certainly opened the eyes of all present to the thinking of the School Board and to the thinking of school designers elsewhere in the nation.

Area Should Choose Best of All Eras

It is beginning to seem as if there are as many ideas for the forthcoming centennial, as there are people in Plymouth.

One idea was to fix up Kellogg Park in some way. This seems worthwhile.

Another was to turn this town into another Williamsburg or imitation of Plymouth, Mass. Certainly Plymouth is more than that.

Do we want our town to become a tourist attraction, or do we want it to be a pleasant environment in which to raise our families?

Resource economists from the University of Michigan have made a specialty of advising areas how to attract the tourists.

One of the first things they recommend is to spend several millions of dollars on advertising.

Another recommendation is not to try and import a culture, but to develop what is already there. For instance, Quebec was advised not to compete with northern Michigan and Maine. Quebec has a French Canadian culture, which the other two don't. Therefore, the advice was to make use of what they had.

Importing a culture hardly ever works, warn the economists. The town of Hudson, near Cleveland, is, they point out, an exception to this.

Cheese Leader Now Houses All Foods

There is an old saying that the more things change the more they are the same.

This thought comes to mind with the start of construction of the mammoth warehouse by the Spartan Stores of Grand Rapids down on Haggerty Road.

Back in the "Gay Nineties" and the early part of this century, Livonia, then a township, was the center of the cheese industry in the Midwest, just as Wisconsin is today.

The entire area was one that helped produce food, chickens, turkeys and dairy products.

Then through the years things changed and the area became part of a giant industrial community. The automobile brought a transition, and the big companies and their subsidiaries caused people to

Most of those in attendance came out with the idea that the School Board has thoughts in the direction of the "cluster" plan for future high schools in the community.

From all indications, high school No. 2 is tagged for the site if the Board is able to complete negotiations prior to the expiration of the option.

Inasmuch as the site is in the corner of the school district, it could well become the location of future high schools as well. From the predictions of the future growth of the community, the School Board will hardly have high school No. 2 completed until it will be pressed for No. 3.

When one considers that the projection of population for the school district is 201,000 within a matter of 15 to 20 years, then it is wise for the School Board to start planning now to take care of problems then.

The meeting also brought forth the new federal legislation known as the Open Spaces Act in which a school board can receive a 50 per cent grant from the government for that portion of a school site that is used for community and public recreation purposes.

On this theory, the Board could conceivably get as much as half of the cost for 60 per cent of the 225 acres provided it is tagged for recreation purposes. Inasmuch as the athletic facilities of all the schools are used on a community-wide basis now, this would not involve a change in the present policy.

But it would bring considerable savings in the cost of sites. There were varied views on the subject at the meeting. From what we heard, we believe it is an excellent idea.

It has been used in Ann Arbor to advantage. We believe the story would be the same here if folks would stop some of that talk that the Plymouth Community doesn't need any federal aid. Plymouth isn't any different than any other community, if it is entitled to federal assistance, then it appears to us that the powers that be should make every effort to get it.

Hudson spent a great deal of money developing a colonial atmosphere. But it is exceptional.

It seems unlikely that we want to spend vast sums of money developing and advertising such a community.

Does this mean we should ignore our tenuous ties with Plymouth, Mass.? No. But we should not forget that we have the best of several eras to choose from.

Perhaps, we aren't so much interested in becoming a well-known tourist attraction as continuing to remain a delightful small town, the type that is vanishing from the American scene.

In order to remain a charming community, we should exploit the best of the historical and modern worlds.

And we don't have to concentrate on the colonial era, exclusively. We have a history of our own. The Pennimans and the Starkweathers were individualistic persons who left their mark on this town.

Their heritage is treasured at the Historical museum, but mainly ignored elsewhere.

We should try to be a town which provides a historic range of the best from the past of Plymouth, yet takes advantage of modern progress.

go into industry.

Several years ago another cycle started when the Kroger Company, one of the larger food companies, built what has been termed "the largest food warehouse in the world" in Livonia. This was quickly followed by another large warehouse to service General Foods. And only a few weeks ago, Wrigley's announced plans for its largest warehouse in Livonia.

So, one can easily see the trend. With the Spartan Stores erecting a large warehouse in the Plymouth Community, the immediate area can really be called "The Bread Basket of Southeastern Michigan" — just as it was in the long, long ago, when Livonia was the "Cheese Capital of the Country."

Yes sir, the more things change, the more they are the same.

How many Plymouth parents who took their children to see "Mary Poppins" at the P & A this weekend realized what kind of picture was billed with it? I was one of the fortunate parents who happened to go with her children and was able to take them away from it. If a picture of a man killing his wife because she became a prostitute, scenes of prostitutes and half-dressed women in proper fare for children; well, I guess I'm just old-fashioned.

Liquor

To the Editor:
Now that the City of Plymouth is bowing to "King Alcohol" I suppose that its loyal subjects are willing for the bus drivers who take their children to and from school to be under the influence of hard liquor. I suppose that they will want the surgeon who operates on themselves or a loved one to be under the influence of alcohol. Or, perhaps the pilot of an airliner, who takes them on a vacation trip, to have consumed a fifth before taking off. Or could it be that those who voted for liquor by the glass are prohibitionists after all? I wonder.

No. 4 of Series Plymouth Soldier Cites Experiences

What sort of a feeling does a young soldier have on his first trip to the firing line in Vietnam?
What is it like to fire on the enemy, then scurry back to your position?
And how does it feel to get lost or sit in ambush and just wait?
You can get the answers in these excerpts taken from letters written by a former Plymouth High School student, Jay Dickey, to a friend back home — Mrs. Joseph Haefner.

Vietnam
Dear Mrs. Haefner:
After leaving Oakland we went to Travis A.F.B. and boarded a jet, stopping at the International Airport in Honolulu for a while and then Manila.

We arrived in Saigon about 5 o'clock in the afternoon and it was 95 degrees in the shade. What a change! It was only 50 degrees in Oakland when we left.

I went to Camp Alpha (563 replacement detachment) where we spent the night. We processed the next day and I was sent to the First Infantry — about 10 miles north of Saigon. That night Camp Alpha (about two miles east of Saigon) was hit by mortar fire that killed around 85 and I don't know how many men were wounded. Eight or 10 helicopters also were knocked out and they also hit an oil tank.

I just missed it. The First Infantry Headquarters was expected to be hit next, but I shipped out today on the way to my permanent assignment.

At First Infantry they sent out a long patrol and it was caught by the Viet Cong about 15 miles from camp. About 17 and 18 were killed and they were bringing in the bodies just as I was leaving.

It's kind of sickening. They are sending down what they call an armored helicopter to meet us and take us to Benkat. These helicopters have rockets and six machine guns on them.

The Air Force and Navy were bombing all around this perimeter today. They must have spotted some Viet Cong. What a sight!

The Viet Cong are expected to attack tonight. There are all kinds of American mortars firing tonight and one section is just outside our "hooch". Guess we won't get much sleep.

The jungles here are something else. They are so thick you have to chop your way through them. It has been the dry season, too. I just can't imagine what they will be like when the monsoons hit.

The people here don't seem to care if we help them or not. All they want is food and money. I just can't get over it.

JAY

Vietnam
Dear Mrs. Haefner:
We are presently on operation "Birmingham" and are to join the other units tomorrow for operation "White Wing". We got an alert at 8 o'clock in the morning and an hour later we were loading on C-123

Carribbean cargo planes headed for the Cambodian border. We landed at about 9:30 in the morning and loaded from there on two and two and one half ton trucks. We were shipped to the Mitchland plantation where we set up a hasty defense for the night.

The next morning we loaded on "choppers" and were lifted to a place about five miles from the border. It's amazing how quickly you can unload one of these choppers.

We immediately started a sweep (search and destroy). We burned one village and destroyed anything the Viet Cong could use. The Air Force had bombed and sprayed tear gas prior to our arrival and the people had all gone by the time we got there.

We continued and trapped 50 VC in the west end of the village. With my machine gun smoking we launched another attack and the VC disappeared. There is no trace of them, except for some empty carbine cartridges and a net work of tunnels.

We had to go inside the tunnels and check them out. Man, was I scared. I threw in two M-26 hand grenades before I went into the tunnel. These VC must be some kind of moles. These tunnels run off in all directions.

We found one tunnel that led to a house and we figured the VC had used that as an escape route.

No trace of the VC after that and we got back on the choppers and returned to our original position. Two choppers landed in the wrong place and you might know — I was on one of them.

We were lost from the rest of the Company over night and it was kind of scary. I just felt that the battalion of VC would find us before we found our company. We were lucky, though, and came stumbling in to our base about 10 o'clock the next morning.

Rotary Anns Learn About Christmas Decor

Christmas ideas, and more Christmas ideas were in evidence at the Nov. 28 meeting of the Rotary Anns. The club is made up of wives of Rotary members who get together every other month for lunch.

They also sell goods made by the handicapped.

Mrs. Paul Wiedman, charter member of the group, was the main speaker of the afternoon. She got an assist from Mrs. William Bartel, Sr. who described how to make a pine cone wreath.

Mrs. Wiedman seemed like a magician, as she produced decorations after decoration out of their covers.

Styrofoam was the base for many of her decorations.

Styrofoam wreaths were covered with glitter cloth, a metallic material, available in the dime store. Then different ornaments were grouped on the wreath. Mrs. Wiedman centered the ornaments near the bottom, and simply pinned them on.

She recommends using pins which have a little hook on the top. They should be available in local stores. Other ideas are to use a paper clip, cut in half with wire cutters, or small hair pins.

A huge styrofoam ball was also covered with the glitter cloth. Then Mrs. Wiedman ran sequin covered braid up and down the ball, gathering it together at the top and bottom. The same braid was looped at the top for a hanger.

Mistletoe was slated to be used at the bottom of the ball. Smaller balls could be covered this way and used for Christmas tree ornaments.

Mrs. Wiedman covered a styrofoam cone with net and pinned on artificial flowers, and little elves. Perfect for a child's bedroom.

Instead of ribbon, Mrs. Wiedman wraps her packages with strips of elastic. She sews tiny green felt trees along the elastic.

A dried artichoke was one of the most admired items. It looked like a large many-petaled brown flower.

"Wouldn't it be pretty anchoring evergreen swags," murmured one woman.

To make this unusual creation, separate the artichoke leaves with tissue paper. Then bake at 250 for three hours.

It can be sprayed gold, or any color desired. But the natural brown has a simple beauty.

Ann Arbor Garden Club Schedules Greens Sale

A Greens Market is a market set up where people may purchase fresh greens; scotch pines and the white spruce, fir, balsam and cedar for their holiday decorations. Many arrangements and loose greens are available.

The 17th annual market this year will be held Thursday, Dec. 8 from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. at the Women's City Club on Washtenaw Ave. in Ann Arbor.

Other items are also available for gift giving. There is a baked goods table, apron booth, large table of novelties especially for the Christmas season, hand-knitted articles and a Thieves Mart.

A salad luncheon will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Tickets are $1.75 (inclusive of tax) will be sold for luncheon on the day of the Market.

Strictly Social

Mrs. Frank West of Amherst Ct. took part in a 100 party telephone call recently. She is a member of the steering committee to plan Alpha Xi Delta's 75th anniversary celebration.

While committee met in Chicago, alumnae groups met in their own home towns. Then the telephone company arranged the hook-up.

"We figure we reached more members than at any other convention or meeting," says Mrs. West.

Art Gallery Run by Priest

Father Hickey and Mrs. Peter Aubrey admire a 400 year old painting by an unknown artist which hangs in the gallery.

Guitar playing priests and singing nuns are becoming commonplace. But Monsignor Edward J. Hickey has a really unusual sideline. He runs art galleries.

The Art Guild of St. Mary's at Seven Mile and Livernois is nearest to Plymouth. Many Plymouth patrons have gone there searching for a genuine old master.

Father Hickey turns all profits over to the Church. He is careful never to say definitely that a painting is done by one of the famous artists.

"We think this is a VanDyke. This is definitely from the school of Raphael," are his comments.

One of the patrons of the gallery tells a story of some million trying to authenticate a painting which they thought was a Botticelli.

Although he makes an effort to authenticate some of his paintings, the cost of authenticating all is prohibitive. Of course, experts sometimes disagree.

This is unusually expensive, but still can cost a lot of money to have a painting authenticated.

So a buyer can pick up something he likes, then start on an intriguing detective hunt to see if he has a valuable painting worth twice what he paid for it.

Monsignor Hickey, a fascinating story teller, has a tale for every one of his paintings. A picture of an old Spanish monk is a gift of the Alfred G. Wilsons. (The Wilsons donated some of their property for Oakland University)

The monsignor visited them one day. As a parting gift, Wilson insisted on giving him the painting.

An Austrian portrait had 10 holes in it from bullets or darts. "I suppose it happened during the war," speculated father Hickey.

Restoring that picture was quite a job, finally parts of it had to be cut off entirely.

Another painting by a Detroit artist was commissioned for a golf club. But before the painting was finished, the man who commissioned it got mad at the club. He refused to pay. So now it hangs in Father Hickey's gallery instead of gazing out on a golf course.

"We hope and think this is an original VanDyke," he said, pointing to another picture. "However I'm not enough of a connoisseur to decide."

While he may speak modestly, he is a graduate of Harvard Business School, and knows how to run an art gallery. Much of the profits have gone into the Catholic schools in his parish in Redford.

His pictures range from $25 to $400, with a few really good paintings costing around $5,000. A few statues were included at the gallery.

An old English wood carving showed a man with a hand cut off for stealing a loaf of bread. Several old crucifixes were there.

"I think that's Spanish," said Father pointing to an ornate crucifix that must have been at least six feet tall.

The gallery has been there three years, but Father Hickey has been collecting paintings for many years.

"I started collecting when I worked in the chancery office (the administrative headquarters of the diocese). The diocese was $17 million in debt. We were getting complaints from everyone.

"So," he continued, "I needed something to do to relax. I started to visit antique shops, and gradually began to accumulate paintings.

"I've had a lot of fun, and a lot of adventures collecting paintings," he said summing up his years in the business.

It's Goodfellow Time Again

For years it has been the custom of the Old Newsboys to man their old corners again and sell papers as in the days of old so that no child will be without a Christmas.

On this one day civic, industrial, fraternal and political leaders turn aside from their daily work to aid the spirit of good will.

All of the proceeds of this paper sale go toward providing food and clothing for the needy and to make sure that the slogan "No Kiddie Without a Christmas" will not be just mere words.

The Old Newsboys idea was conceived years ago when Burt Thomas, a cartoonist on the staff of the Detroit News, drew a sketch of a needy child being helped by a goodfellow.

Jimmy Brady, long since dead, carried out the idea by organizing the Goodfellows, and each year they manned their old corners in Detroit. His memory lives on through means of a statue on Belle Isle.

Some years ago, as age overtook many of the original "goodfellows," the services of the police and fire departments in the various communities was enlisted.

Among those selling papers in Plymouth this year will be Fire Chief George Schoenneman (left) and Roger Norris.

The sale will be on Dec. 10 and you can do your part to help make possible a heart warming Christmas by simply buying a "Goodfellow" paper.

Let the slogan ring out "No Kiddie Without a Christmas".

Questions & Answers
How much butter should be used to dress vegetables?

There is, of course, no set amount of butter to be used in dressing vegetables, but minimum amounts may be suggested. Most vegetables will be greatly improved with an addition of at least one teaspoon of butter to each half cup of vegetable. Some vegetables, such as Irish potatoes, Hubbard squash, and yellow turnips, particularly when these vegetables are to be served mashed, will benefit from greater quantities of butter. For these a minimum of one and a half teaspoons of butter for each half cup is suggested.
