Candidates run toward wire in primary races

By Emory Daniels staff writer

Election campaigns for governor, Wayne County Executive and Wayne County Commission races are generating the most interest in Plymouth depending on which party banner residents plan to vote under tomorrow

RECOVERY: John Martin of Northville was surprised and pleased recently when his lost billfold was returned by Neil Oldham of Plymouth Township. John was getting ready to leave for three weeks of vacation and had a large sum of money in his wallet when it apparently fell off the top of his car. Neil found the wallet with money in it in the 6 Mile and Bradner area lying on the roadway and returned it before Martin left for vacation. The Martins, thanks to Oldham, enjoyed their vacation.

seeking their party's bid for the seat held by Republican incumbent Mary Dumas of Livonia who is retiring from the office. Dumas held the office for 14 years Before redistricting, the Plymouth community was represented by Democrat Bill Joyner of Plymouth whose district also included Canton. Since then Dumas' district moved west to include Plymouth and Northville, and Canton now is prepresented by Milt Mack, D-Wayne, in the 11th District.

Another race of local interest features favorite son Thomas Healy, longtime Plymouth attorney, running against Livonia attorney Scott gift in excess of $500,000 has been received by Central Michigan University from a former Plymouthite, even though the man never attended CMU. The late Edwin Towle (pronounced "Tohl"), a supervisor for the Railway Mail Service for 30 years, contributed the gift in memory of his father, William Towle - a 1909 graduate of Central.

Edwin, who lived in Warren at the time of his death last year, was born in South Lyon but his family moved to Plymouth in 1931. He graduated from Plymouth High School in 1931, attended Michigan State University for two years, and then became a supervisor with Railway Mail Service. He retired in 1963. His mother, Edna Dean Towle, was a teacher in Tuscola County and his father taught school in Sault St. Marie and South Lyon. His father, William, was superintendent of shcools in Dryden for about 10 years before moving to Plymouth in 1924 to open the Towle and Roe Lumber Co.

> Plymouth Township has begun a job placement service for residents and non-residents.

> The project, Community Employment Service, was proposed by Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen early this year.

It will be operated by Growth Works Inc., a Plymouth non-profit education and community service organization

Breen said that he conceived the idea for the project from his personal experience as a father of three grown children and from serving on the Private Industry Council in Wayne County

Having personally been involved with young people trying to find jobs. I know the gap that exists for people who don't qualify for federal programs," he said.

Target group is youth age 16 to 21

In spring, the township board voted to allocate $20,000 in tax money from the general fund to develop a computer-supported service that will collect and register employment information on local job seekers and generate a data file on local job openings

The job seeker's background will be compared with registered job opening qualifications and requirements. A referral will be made when a match occurs.

WHILE THE project is intended to serve all unemployed residents, Breen has directed Growth Works to give special attention to the needs of Plymouth Township youth ages 16-21 a relatively low unemployment rate, according to Breen, that does not tell the whole employment story in the township, which had a 1980 median annual family income of $31,000.

Breen said the township has about 24,000 residents and 289 varying businesses. Of 62 manufacturing firms surveyed by the township, 88 percent have 100 or fewer employees, he said.

The biggest problem has been trying to match jobs with qualified people. "We're losing a lot of people outstate because there is a lack of good coordinated efforts."

According to Paul Chamberlain, Growth Works director for employment training, 30 percent of the Although Plymouth Township has 23,000 township residents listed in the 1980 census were younger than 18. At that time the unemployment rate for the township was 6 percent with 2 percent on public assistance. Three percent of youths younger than 17 were listed below the poverty level, he said.

> JIM GRIMMER, a Growth Works employee with eight years experience in placing mostly low-income local youth, will serve as the project coordinator.

> The project will attempt to cultivate employment opportunites for youth, which in many cases, may be their first job experience.

The job locator service is viewed as a support service for the economic development activities occurring in the township. "We've had at least 10 employers start up this year," said Breen.

The computerized job bank services are available free to Plymouth Township residents and open to residents in surrounding communities for a $2 registration fee. There is no charge to employers

The project also will help job seekers and employers identify other community resources that may be available to them. These resources may include programs available through the Plymouth-Canton school district, Michigan Employment Security Commission, Schoolcraft College, local economic development programs and other employment and training services.

"The last couple of years, we have been working very closely with employers," said Grimmer. "There was an A-Line Plastics industry-based training project that worked real well. A-Line Plastics moved into Plymouth Township in 1984 and they wanted to hire new people. We worked up a federally funded training program with them and received money for industry-based training. We were able to fill about 83 basicentry positions (assembly, injection molding, etc.) through federal dollars for training."

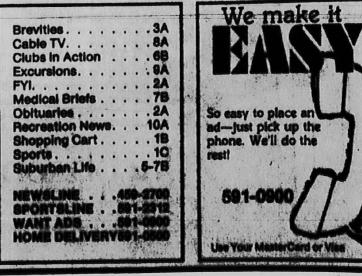

In this phase of hiring at A-Line Plastics, which did not have a personnel department, poor people found jobs.

In another hiring phase, of 3,000 job applicants reviewed by Growth Works for A-Line Plastics, 1,800 were interviewed, and 360 were hired by A-Line Plastics as new employees in one year, said Chamberlain Growth Works has assisted 1,200 youth find jobs in the last three years, he said.

"They learn to have confidence in themselves and how to express themselves," he explained. "It also helps develop their character.

The Plymouth-Canton school - in an effort to put the proboard verbial horse before the cart - is expected to adopt a policy on disruptive students at its Aug. 11 meeting.

Procedures already are in place to deal with students who repeatedly violate school rules. A philosophy, though, has never been elaborated.

"We have a number of approaches and programs in place," said Michael Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction. "The simple fact of the matter is we haven't had a broad policy that covered these things

A task force of school administrators, principals, counselors and other support staff recommended a policy after more than a year of study.

"What it comes down to is it's a mechanism for staff to look at the context in which kids begin to experience problems," Homes said.

Earlier awareness should result in earlier intervention, he added.

BECAUSE only 2 to 5 percent of all students in the, district can be classified as disruptive, Homes said, the vast majority won't be affected by the policy.

The statement submitted by the task force maintains that schools should be involved hot only in teaching academics but also appropriate adult behaviors.

'It is clear that frequent and repetitive disruptions . . . by a small number of youngsters . have a detrimental effect not only on their learning opportunities but on the learning capabilities of the remainder of students as well," the proposed policy states.

Students with persistent behavior problems not the result of physical or emotional handicaps or learning disabilities are now identified.

Programs are established to modify the behavior, modify the environment or remove the student from the classroom. Expulsion remains as a last resort.

"Since these problems originiate from home and social factors, the educational system cannot be held solely and totally responsible for the remediation," the policy continues.

EFFORTS are made to involve families in therapies using resources inside and outside the educational system.

The policy defines a disruptive student as one who:

• Persistently and repetitively violates school rules and regulations over time and in different settings.

• Exhibits behavior which indicates a callous disregard for and infringes upon the rights of others.

• Has been unresponsive or unwilling to modify gross misbehaviors inspite of the application of systematic interventions.

The policy, if approved, will be sent to all building administrators who would be expected to make their teaching staffs aware of its provisions.

The youth's parents complained to the city, Graper said, sparking the writing of an ordinance to encourage dog owners to keep their animals from defecating on public and certain private property, or to clean up soon after.

The Plymouth City Commission is scheduled to vote on whether to approve the ordinance at its regular meeting, 7 p.m. today at city hall.

The proposed ordinance prohibits dogs from defacing grounds or defecating "upon any public property whatsoever, or upon any private property without the permission of the owner," it states. If a dog should defecate in those areas, the owner must remove "and transport those

GOP had best luck getting laws passed

By Tim Richard staff writer

Suburban Republicans had better luck getting laws passed by the Michigan Legislature than Democrats during the last two years.

And that's with Democrat James J. Blanchard sitting in the governor's chair and deciding what bills face value for many reasons. will be signed into law.

The numbers were culled from a report called "Status of Legislation" dated July 1. It lists all bills introduced by all legislators.

IN THE Observer & Eccentric circulation area:

• Five Democratic state representatives introduced 98 bills and saw 12 become law - a batting average of 12 percent.

• Eight Republican representatives penned 97 bills and saw 15 passed - a batting average of 15 percent. The number is significant and the chairmanship of the social because Democrats have 57-53 con- services subcommittee. trol of the House, and the majority party typically doesn't let minority members win many big ones.

• Three Democratic senators introduced a total of 72 bills and saw four enacted - a batting average of 5.6 percent.

• Four Republican senators dropped 124 bills in the hopper and saw 30 enacted - 24 percent. Republicans have a 20-18 edge in the upper chamber.

THE NUMBERS can't be taken at Minor measures - called "dog and cat bills" by cynics - ought not to be given the same weight as major measures, like the statewide branch banking law of Rep. William Keith, D-Garden City.

An effective lawmaker may introduce few measures but have a significant impact on others' bills through the amendment process.

While Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville, saw only one of his 15 bills become law, many senators would steal to get Geake's committee assignment - appropriations,

And sometimes lawmakers on both sides of the capitol rotunda introduce the same measure, but only one version is enacted. Thus, Rep. Justine Barns, D-Westland, introduced anti-smoking bills, but the Legislature moved the versions submitted by Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farm-ington Hills.

Rep. Colleen Engler, R-Mt. Pleas-ant, is making a bid for governor, impressing many political watchers and is likely to wind up on the state GOP ticket for another post. But she's batting 0-for-6 when it comes to getting bills passed.

HERE ARE representatives' records - or luck, if you prefer - in getting legislation passed:

Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia - one bill passed, on child day-care parental visits, of five introduced. She is a freshman.

Justine Barns, D-Westland - zero of 18. A second-termer, she offered many health measures.

John Bennett, D-Redford - three of 20. His laws cover home-improvement financing, business referees and county treasurer investments. He's in his 11th term.

William Keith, D-Garden City three out of 22, including a landmark banking code, restoring immunity from liability for certain govern-lucky freshman mental employees and hiking examination fees for savings and loans.

Jim Kosteva

He's in his seventh term. James Kosteva, D-Canton - four of 18, best record of any Democrat. Also a freshman, Kosteva had bills enacted covering tax credits, school aid, hunting rules and watercraft registration. His major effort, a massive revision of the subdivision control act, was being debated on the House floor as the session ended.

Gerald Law, R-Plymouth - three of 21, covering civil liability, prisons and health maintenance organizations. He's in his second term.

Monday, August 4, 1986 O&E

AREA SENATORS achieved these success records:

Doug Cruce, R-Troy - 10 of 39, mainly in the area of business regulation.

William Faust, D-Westland zero of 21.

R. Robert Geake, R-Northville one of 15, covering bonding for the State Building Authority. Patrick McCollough, D-Dearborn - three of 14, covering the Great Lakes Basin compact, health codes and school bus seating capacity. McCollough will leave the Senate after three terms.

Rudy Nichols, R-Waterford - 15 of 35, including nine that were part of a child support package.

Rouge council eyes new center

By Teri Banas staff writer

The Livonia-based Rouge River Watershed Council last week approved tentative plans to move its headquarters to the campus of the University of Michigan-Dearborn though the move likely won't take place until early next year, said ex-ecutive director Bruce Monson.

Negotiations are incomplete over finances and the exact location for a U-M-based council office, said Monson. The center will likely stay in its Livonia office - in the industrial belt off Farmington Road near Schoolcraft - for the next six months opment of a Rouge Resource Center, an idea that has been discussed by council members and his predecesor, Karen Gottlieb.

Recently, Monson said he and U-M campus naturalist Orin Gelderloos, a professor of biology and enviromental science there, discussed it and Gelderloos said he was eager to help.

Besides being located "close to a scientific base," a move onto the Dearborn campus is expected to improve the council's standing in applying for educational grants and it would be accessible to students interested in an internship or volunteer work at the river council, he Formed in 1977, the Rouge River Watershed Council is a voluntary coalition of government representatives from the 47 communities found in the basin. The basin spreads out across Wayne, Oakland and a portion of Washtenaw counties.

The council, along with a newly formed spin-off organization called the Friends of the Rouge, organized a major clean-up along the 126-mile river last month. The highly touted "Rouge Rescue '86," will become an annual event to continue to focus public attention on the need to improve the polluted waterway. The state, through the Michigan

Why We Played A Supporting Role In The Restoration Of A Community Opera House.

Near the turn of the century, two-bits and a little bit of luck put you near the front of the standing room only crowds that were the hallmark of this opera house. Mary Pickford, at the time just a blos-soming star, graced its stage. As did Annie Oakley's traveling show of six-guns and other assorted shootin irons.

In fact, over the years, what with all the stars of vaudeville and theatre who per-formed here, you would have thought it was Broadway in New York.

Not a small midwest town's main street opera house.

Even talking movies couldn't do to the grand old place what a major fire, many years of neglect and then a condemnation notice would finally do.

Close its doors. Seemingly for good. But to the townspeople, the show just had to go on.

So when private citizens and business people got together to restore this priceless landmark, a lot of our people asked what part they could play. You see, we're not just bankers. We're part of the community. So we believe that sometimes it's just as important to lend a hand as it is to lend

Out-county court office forced to trim services

Lack of money is forcing the ed to uncontested traffic hearings, Wayne County Probate and Juvenile added Weber. The probation office Courts to curtail services for the next four months, and limit operations at its western Wayne County branch, said court officials.

The budget crunch has occurred because of a $600,000 out-of-court settlement between the court and Wayne County, which operates the judicial system.

While the $600,000 accounts for only 2 percent of the court's $26 million budget, the impact is severe because only four months remain in the fiscal year.

The out-county court branch, on Henry Ruff Road in Westland, will stop conducting juvenile hearings, and police officers will be asked to file initial juvenile complaints in the main Detroit center, said court administrator Lorraine H. Weber.

added Weber. The probation office and staff will continue there, as well, she said.

ALL OTHER hearings will be held at the James H. Lincoln Hall of Juvenile Justice, 1025 E. Forest, Detroit. Besides altering services, the court will leave unfilled 27 positions, ranging from clerical workers to 11 probation officers. There will be no lay-offs, Weber said.

In addition to limiting service at the out-county branch, the court will close its Probate and Mental Division, in the City-County Building in Detroit, two hours earlier, at 2:30 p.m. weekdays. Judges' offices will continue to be open until 4:30 p.m.

"As a result of these measures most services provided by the court will take longer to perform, particu-The branch services will be limit- larly in guardianships, adoptions, and probating wills and estates of the deceased, as well as court hearings regarding such matters,[#] said Chief Judge Joseph J. Pernick of the Probate Court.

Likewise, the Juvenile Division's presiding judge, Y. Gladys Barsamian, said the court's ability to handle neglected children and delinquency cases will be affected.

"BECAUSE our staff levels will be reduced in order to save the money, the hearings will be delayed and a backlog of cases will result. It is possible that the court will not be able to return children to their homes in an expeditious manner and that children will linger in foster care for longer periods of time," Barsamian said

Unchanged will be the handling of mental case hearings through the Mental Health Services Department of the Probate and Mental Division, on the ninth floor of the City-County Building. It remains open until 4:30 p.m

This is the fourth year in five years that the probate court has been involved in legal disputes over funding levels with the county. This year, the court argued it was being underfunded by $3.4 million, and settled for $600,000 in lieu of a costly and lengthy court suit.

According to Weber, disputes in prior years were either settled outof-court or in the court's favor.

Unlike Wayne County Circuit Court and Detroit's Recorders Court, the probate court is exclusively funded by Wayne County and receives no state money. Michigan Supreme Court Chief Justice G. Mennen Williams has drafted a proposal before the state Legislature requesting state support, but no action has been taken.

Drain chief sues to stop public vote

By Teri Banas staff writer

The decision on whether or not county drain commissioner Charles Youngblood will be removed from office may come in Wayne County Circuit Court rather than on the ballot this November.

Youngblood has filed suit asking the court to stop a proposition which asks voters to decide the fate of his elective office from being put on the November general election ballot.

The county commission had voted to put on the ballot a proposal which would allow the voters to eliminate the office of drain commissioner.

Circuit Judge Charles Farmer has been assigned to hear arguments on Aug. 25.

YOUNGBLOOD'S attorney, Phillip Alber, said he planned to ask the judget to disqualify the county's corporation counsel from representing the county.

Named as defendents are Wayne County and the County Clerk's office, which technically set the ballot is-

Alber referred to the legal community's "canon of ethics" when he said the county's attorneys should not be employed to "represent the county in an adversarial proceeding against it and the drain commission-

In addition, Alber said he was preparing "extensive briefs" to argue against the ballot issue, including a motion that challenges the legality of a County Commission vote that brought the issue to an upcoming public vote.

He said Youngblood will argue that a two-thirds vote of the 15- edly outraged with the ouster, have member commission was needed to discussed removing Hertel as chairput the issue on the ballot rather man of the commission. But sources fulfill his of selling bonds to finance drain improvements and entering into contracts.

COMMISSIONER Milton Mack, D-Wayne, who led the fight to get the issue put on the ballot, said he thought it would be unlikely and "unprecedented" to remove the corporation counsel from defending the county in the matter.

Calling it a "slick maneuver" to force the county to hire outside legal help less familiar with the complexity of the issue, he said, "Corporation counsel is routinely called upon to defend the county against a disgruntled county official or employee."

"The drain commissioner is just deathly afraid of the public voting on this issue," Mack said.

Youngblood, along with Detroit commissioner Clarence Young, acting in their roles as two members of a three-person Drainage Board, tried last month to appropriate drainage district funds for legal fees in the ballot challenge. The move was thwarted, however, when commission chairman John Hertel, the board's third member, indirectly "fired" Young from the board.

Hertel then replaced Young with a member favorable to the November ballot issue, Curt Boller, D-Brownstown

Hertel was particularly critical of Youngblood and Young's attempt to use drainage district funds (from downriver communities) in the legal challenge. . . to "use the people's own money against them."

That incident has not gone without repercussions.

As indicated last week, George Burr traced his ancestry to a Sanford who was secretary to John Winthrop, the first governor of Massachusetts. His wife, Mildred Bennett Burr, traced her's to a Lyndon who was the royal governor of Rhode Island.

The first Lyndon to come to Michigan was Caleb Lyndon, who walked to Plymouth from Monroe County, N.Y., in 1826. He bought 320 acres at Beck and Warren Roads, the deed being signed by President Jackson. Sanford Burr and his sister, Margaret, still own 20 acres of the proper- the Penn Theatre in Plymouth. ty.

CALEB LYNDON went back east where he died. His son, Samuel, came to the area in 1833, homesteading land in Canton at the corner of Gyde and Beck Roads. At one time, he had over 1,000 acres.

One of Samuel Lyndon's daughters, Dora, married a Corwin, also of Canton. She was the mother of Dr. Edward S. Corwin, born on Hanford

Road in 1878. He achieved national prominence as a professor of politics at Princeton University, and as an authority on constitutional law and the presidency.

Another of Samuel Lyndon's daughters married Sewell Bennett. Their farm was where Michigan Bell has its building on Ann Arbor Road. One of her children was Paul Bennett whose farm was at the corner of Sheldon and Ann Arbor Road on the site occupied by Family Discount. After Paul died in 1919, his widow, Maude Bennett, ran the farm until 1936. It was sold to the parents of Margaret Wilson, former owner of

Maude Bennett was instrumental in getting Moreland Road extended from Ann Arbor Trail to Ann Arbor Road. The name was then changed to Sheldon Road. Maude, a friend of Ruth Huston Whipple (Plymouth's first woman mayor in the 1940s) served as a charter member of the City Planning Coimmission when it was formed in 1938 by Mayor Henry Hondorp. Serving on the Commission with her was her son-in-law, George Burr. When Plymouth Historical Society was formed in 1948, Maude and her daughter, Mildred, George Burr's wife, were charter members.

BESIDES THEIR work with the historical society and the museum, the Burr-Bennett family has taken an active interest in education in the Plymouth community.

Sewell Bennett was a school trustee here about the turn of the century. His son, Paul Bennett, was on the school board in 1916 when the school building burned. Paul's wife, Maude, once said the school board was almost run out of town due to the size of the building it built to replace the one that burned.

The daughter of Paul and Maude

Bennett, Marian Bennett Morrow, served on the school board from 1948 to 1951. As indicated earlier, George Burr was a school trustee in the 1930s.

George and Mildred Burr had two children, Sanford and Margaret. Sanford recalls the days when his father was treasurer of the school district. As a boy, Sanford was pressed into service to carry checks from their home on Sheridan to Superintendent George A. Smith at the high school.

After graduating from Plymouth High and Albion College, Sanford taught history and English in the Madison Heights school system. Later he spent 27 years with the Southfield school system where he taught for two years + then was a counassistant principal. He retired in 1978.

While at Albion, Sanford majored in education and in the ministry. For 13 years he was assistant to Melbourne Johnson, minister at the Methodist Church in Plymouth. He. has served on the administrative board of the church and held offices at the state level. He headed the building committee in 1970-72 when the Methodists built their church here. Sanford also has been active in the Kiwanis evening club in Plymouth.

Ruth Hollowell Burr, Sanford's wife, taught in the Plymouth School System for 17 years, retiring this year. They have two sons, Robert, an executive with Kinney Shoes in New York City, and Charles, who is in the-atrical work with the True Grist Dinner Theatre in Homer, Mich.

Both Sanford Burr and his sister, Margaret Burr Kidston, have continued the family interest in the Plymouth Historical Society. Sanford was the society's president in 1978-80 and selor, a director of counselling and again in 1981-84. Margaret was pres-assistant principal. He retired in ident 1984-86. Sanford also was president of the Plymouth Symphony Society in 1984-85.

Margaret has been an officer in the Plymouth Woman's Club and, like Sanford, has been active in church work. She is married to Dr. Brian Kidston. Formerly in education in Plymouth-Canton Community School, Kidston recently passed his Michigan Bar Examination. The Kidstons have two children, Suzanne and Kathrine.

After living in the old Burr farmhouse on Ann Arbor Road for 25 years, Sanford and Ruth decided to move because of traffic problems. Urged by their sons, they had the brick house George Burr built in 1966 moved to Curtiss Road in 1979.

"Our boys had collected a lot of historical artifacts in the old Burr barn," says Sanford. "When we moved the house they insisted that we take all of them along with us. The old things look nice around the house but the boys are now rarely here to see them.'

he Caribbean Islands were discovered by Christopher Columbus, who described them as countries "far surpassing the rest of the world" in their lush beauty and exotic array of flora and fauna.

You can enjoy a touch of this legendary island magic by creating Caribbean-inspired summerperfect treats. Luscious fruits, fresh seafoods and a dash or two of spice-the staples of Caribbean cuisine-are among the ingredients featured in these tempting recipes.

Seafood Salad Montego Bay is the perfect main course to serve on a sultry summer night. This spirited combo of assorted seafoods, pineapple chunks, papaya and bananas features a flavorful dressing prepared with coconut rum, a tantalizing blend of coconut and Virgin Islands rum that conjures up the tropics even in your backyard. Feel free to substitute fruit or seafood at whim—the more colorful the better.

Sweet Pepper Corn Bread is a spicy, colorful sidekick for the Seafood Salad. Flecks of red bell pepper and a dash of Tabasco lend a punch of flavor to this appealing dish.

Of course, no tropical paradise is complete without a cooling rum punch. The CocoJuanita cocktail combines coconut rum, pineapple juice, guava nectar and lime juice. Serve this sunset-pink concoction in a tall, frosty glass with a lime garnish. And be sure to keep a large pitcher on hand for thirsty chaise lounge dwellers.

Luscious summer fruits take center stage in CocoCalypso Cake, the grand finale to this tropical menu. The dessert's spectacular looks belie its ease of preparation: it begins with an angel food cake (prepared from a mix) with a scooped out center, into which is spooned a delightful melange of summer fruits, freshly whipped cream and a coconut rum accent. Garnished with mint leaves and whole berries, CocoCalypso cake is a light, festive way to conclude a meal.

Any of these colorful treats is sure to add a dash of Caribbean flair to your next dinner party.

Greek Feta cheese adds tangy, new flavor at mealtimes to common fish fillets or other bland foods.

years strong-flavored foods have brine, there is no need to add salt. topped the trend lists. Hot and spicy cuisines such as Mexican and Cajun are catching on. And in fashionable restaurants, goat cheese specialities appear on every course.

This desire for change can be documented by the growth in popularity of foods which might once have been considered 'exotic.' An excellent example is Feta, a tangy cheese of Greek origin, which was difficult to find in the U.S. ten years ago.

Today, Feta is available virtually anywhere in the country. Many people have eaten Feta without knowing it, since it is a key ingredient in the popular Greek Salad.

Whatever the reasons behind this change in eating habits, one conclusion is clear: Americans want more variety on their menus. One way to spark meals is to introduce distinctive flavors to subtle foods. Pasta, potatoes, eggs and fish are well-liked but, by themselves, dull. However, they all have the characteristic of blending well with other flavors.

Adding Feta to these foods gives them new life. This zesty cheese resulting in a refreshingly different ture.

YOU GET A NEW BODY EVERY 12 MONTHS

Did you know that every living cell in your body is replaced with a new one in 12 months (excluding bone cells which are replaced in 7 years and the central nervous system which is never replaced). That is in one year your body is almost totally replaced, your heart, lungs, kidneys, gall bladder, liver, muscles, eyes, ears, skin, hair, etc., etc., etc., are not the same ones you had last year. Scientific research shows that cells within your body are constantly being replaced with new cells.

If that is the case, why do people have disease or disfunctioning organs? Why, if cells are totally replaced with new cells should anything ever disfunction?

Good question, who's answers until recently, haven't even been attempted. However, in the last few years the science of genetics has come of age. The main thrust of many research groups has been on the genetics of life, of aging, and of diseases.

Genetics is a fascinating field of understanding the creation of life from generation to generation. It is the study of why ones eyes are green or blue, why one is short or tall or looks more like mom or dad. It also deals with internal structure and function.

Genetics is filled with amazing facts. One of those facts that has recently surfaced is reported by Dr. Ronald Pero, Director of Cancer Research at the Strang Institute, Manhatten, New York. His research shows that cells in the body disfunction and become abnormal when they loose their nerve supply (impulses) from the brain. Dr. Pero believes vertebral subluxations interfere with normal function of cells causing them to become weak and susceptable to disease.

Chiropractic has been saying just exactly that for over 90 years. Chiropractors remove subluxations from spines with low force adjustments which move the bone off the nerve allowing the body to return to normal.

If you want to have a healthier body next year, start doing something about it this year, it's up to you. We are here to help, call 459-0200 for your appointment.

Ann Arbor bicycle group sees sites, logs miles, tours area

By Susan Buck staff writer

Have bike, will tour.

That's the unspoken motto of the "east fringe" of the Ann Arbor Bicycle Touring Society (AABTS). The group is well known in the area for its lengthy bicycle jaunts.

"We're what they call the 'east fringe' because we're east of Ann Arbor. We're part of the main club, but miles Wednesday evenings to enjoy a family ride.

Members are of various ages. Some members make the trips a family affair.

Tykes like Mark Meredith, 6, and Marty Lenhardan, 4, have ridden tandem with their parents since they were each toddlers, said Cavanaugh. Marty has ridden more than 600

Members have attended bike clinics to prepare for the unexpected.

EVERY SATURDAY morning the "fringe" meets at the old Amtrak station in Ann Arbor and then rides 10 miles to Dexter where the group es for a half hour ialize

"B" riders push 12-15 miles and "C" riders travel about 8-10 miles per hour.

"I call my self a B-minus rider," said Cavanaugh.

The group has two tandem bicy-cles which has one seat behind another and a recumbent bicycle, ridden by John Stinson, which reclines. miles.

Although biking provides excellent exercise, bikers don't always loss a lot of weight because they snack yo much to keep up their strength, Op-vanaugh said. we do two rides of our own here in the Canton-Plymouth area every week," said club spokesman Connie Cavanaugh of Canton.

Eight hundred members comprise the parent group in Ann Arbor which just celebrated its 10th year. The 5year-old local group has 40 members who ride 30-32 miles Monday evenings to increase speed and pedal 25 miles on his Dad's, Dan's, tandem bicycle this summer. Both tykes hold their own as they do their share of pedaling while riding to Michigan cities unknown to most youngsters.

Both Gerry Meredith and and Dan Lenhardan are ride leaders who stay in the back of the group to assist in case there is a problem like a flat tire. "We usually pray we don't get a bakery.

"We decide at the park where we want to go that day and how far - 30, 40, 60 or 100 miles. We split off into three or four groups," said Cavanaugh.

The riders have different riding abilities. "A" riders ride 18-20 miles an hour and usually go 100 miles; Schwinn bicycle.

"I think the bulk of your riders are riders past 40 because when you're younger, you don't have the time," said Cavanaugh, a mother of four. 'But we have teenagers, too. It's really a mix."

In financial matters patience includes keeping calm even at times when your debt, despite your efforts, is growing. The same holds for arthritis: You need to resist emotional collapse despite being faced with new burdens because of flares, fatigue, and the failure of family and friends to realize the extent of your limitations.

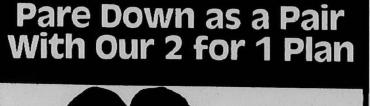

Prudence usually refers to careful use of your money. In arthritis prudence means making good use of your energy, doling out your activities as you would the funds of a well planned budget. Use caution toward new cures before giving such medicines your cash, or risking your health to their claims.

In most instances mortgages are paid off by persistent patience and prudence. The same qualities will help you to reduce the burden that accompanies your life with arthritis.

Adray gets regional bid

By Brad Emons staff writer

There was no doubt Redford Little Caesars was the best team during the regular season, but Livonia Adray left little doubt who was the best team during the playoffs.

Managed by Stu Rose and Ron Hellier, Livonia Adray captured its sixth consecutive Livonia Collegiate Baseball League (20 and under) title Thursday night at Ford Field, whipping Caesars in the finals of the double-elimination tourney, 10-1.

Livonia won three straight during the playoffs by scores of 4-1, 10-6 and 10-1, avoiding a fourth and final game.

"We snuck through, but we had two quality major college pitchers," said Rose. "I felt that in order to win, we had to go with our best pitcher the first game (on Sunday)." Pitcher Don Vesling, who won the first and third games, lived up to his league MVP status.

The 6-foot-5 Ohio native, who plays his college ball at Eastern Michigan University, struck out 14 batters and allowed only three hits against a bruised and battered Caesars lineup.

VESLING, who throws and bats from the left side, has been the league's most impressive newcomer.

After getting a release from Adray Photo of the Detroit Adray League, Vesling, who plays first base when he's not pitching, certainly has earned the respect of the rest of the league

"It's been just great to have him." Rose said. "Don is a team player all baseball the way and he's been fun to have around.

In a second round game of the double-elimination tournament played Wednesday night at Ford, Livonia got another strong pitching performance from Rick Rozman, a right-hander from Michigan State.

Despite throwing 155 pitches and giving up 10 hits, Rozman survived a shaky fifth and sixth innings, finishing strong for another complete game.

Caesars manager Bob Moraitis, whose team beat Livonia five of six times during the regular season, characterized his team as being snakebit.

Pitcher Mark Coburn and Chris Looney played with bad backs, while Brian Roney and Bob Czapla were nursing other nagging injuries.

But Moraitis refused to make excuses

Their pitching was ready and ours wasn't," said the Redford manager. "They only pitched two in the whole tournament.

He (Hellier) always gets his team ready for the playoffs."

IT WAS EVIDENT it was going to be Livonia's tourney from the start. In Wednesday's winners bracket game. Caesars scored two in the first off Rozman, as Czapla and Roney each delivered clutch singles.

Teams beef up rosters

By Brad Emons staff writer

The talk turned to Johnstown, Pa., Thursday night after Livonia Adray impressively swept through three playoff games en route to the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League crown.

But before Livonia Adray managers Stu Rose and Ron Hellier make reservations for the prestigious All-American Amateur Baseball Association tournament (Aug. 11-16) in Johnstown, they must first get their club through a four-team regional which begins Wednesday at Ford Field. The first game of the double-elimination tourney begins at 5 p.m. with Zanesville. Ohio, 'taking on Philadelphia, Pa., followed by Livonia Adray and Cleveland at 8 p.m. (Play continues Thursday and, if necessary, Friday.) The top two teams qualify for the AAABA nationals. Rose and Hellier are cautiously optimistic about their chances of qualifying if they can get some help in their regional quest.

League title six straight years, as a solid hitting club with the likes of Scott Weiler, Don Vesling, Bill Ulle, John Poszywak, Jeff DePorter and Deron White.

But pitching is where it's at in Johnstown, according to the Livonia Adray brass, and that's where they'll look for immediate help.

Livonia could get a big boost from one of its original roster players, Mike Wilkins, who played the first four games of the season before heading for Alaska to play in a topnotch summer college league circuit.

Well, OK, not so typical. But then, Jennifer Knust is far from your typical 14-year-old.

The Farmington Hills Mercy sophomore is a budding worldclass rhythmic gymnast and a member of the United States Junior National Team. That in itself tends to set one apart from the huddling masses. But there's more to Jennifer Knust than just that.

LIKE MANY athletes who reach such a high plateau. Knust is steadfastly dedicated to her sport. Whenever she's home, which hasn't been too often of late, you can find her working on her routines at OCC with coach Michelle Berube. a former U.S. Olympian.

But unlike so many highly skilled, overly preoccupied athletes. Knust maintains a life outside her sport. She doesn't take herself or her success too seriously. She has a quick wit. She laughs easily. And her maturity is somewhat alarming. She is, in a word, likeable daughter grow up at a dizzying rate of speed.

"It hit me last year. I sent a 13 year-old little girl to the United States Sports Festival and a very mature young lady came back," she said.

IT'S HARD to imagine that just five years ago Jennifer Knust was a fledgling, and often floundering, member of an artistic gymnastics team. In fact, her experience in artistic gymnastics pushed her swiftly into rhythmic gymnastics.

During a routine on the uneven parallel bars, Knust took a nasty fall. She got up, dusted herself off and promptly quit artistic gymnastics.

She enrolled into a jazz dance class at the Livonia YMCA and that began her meteoric rhythmic gymnastics career.

In five years, Knust has become a serious contender for the 1988 U.S. Olympic team. In 1985, she placed third all-around at the United States Gymnastics Federation

BUT SHE realizes, at such a tender age, that her gymnastics career is at a make-or-break point.

"I want to make my big push for the 1988 Olympics," she said. "I don't know if I want to stay in the sport until 1992. If I don't make it this time. I'll have a big decision to make. I want to go to college and I want to have a career. If I keep doing gymnastics all the time, I won't have time for the other things."

She got a good taste of international competition last week.

She returned to Farmington Hills Friday after spending 10 days in Brazil with two other members of the U.S. National team competing for the Brazil Cup.

Against 29 other world-class gymnasts, most from South America, Knust took fifth overall. She

SO, HOW does she like her Olympic chances now, after her first bit of international competition

"They are still kind of iffy," she said.

She'll have a better idea at the end of this month. She left yesterday for New Jersey. She'll be spending 19 days training with a coach from Poland. From there, she'll spend another two weeks at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in New York.

She'll get back just in time to start school and commence her first year of competition as a senior rhythmic gymnast.

Off-season rekindles Domke's optimism always seemed to dominate Tim Domke's face was back How va doin', coach?

was reassuring to find out it still is.

The last year hasn't been easy for the St. Mary's College basketball coach. Correction: basketball coach and athletic director. Update to previous correction: basketball coach, athletic director and dean of students.

Such a string of titles sounds formidable. And, as Domke discovered in the last year, the tasks were as tough as they sounded.

It was last summer that Domke was promoted to dean of students, a job he was honored to get and one he figured he could handle. With all his other duties, he knew it would be rough. What he didn't know was just how rough.

THINGS BEGAN to slip away from Domke at just about the time of his promotion. An illness - which HE SMILE that in the past he is still reluctant to talk about hospitalized him for a large part of last summer.

The illness, combined with his new duties, forced Domke to rely heavily "Super," was his stock answer. It on second-year assistant coach Rich Zalenski to handle the basketball program. Zalenski did a commendable job recruiting impressive talent, but other problems cropped up.

Scheduling conflicts arose. What the Eagles ended up with, particularly in the early portion of their schedule, was as treacherous as a blindfolded walk through a minefield.

Road dates at Indiana State, St. Bonaventure and Youngstown State all NCAA Division I schools combined with games against Wayne State and Saginaw Valley State made winning seem farfetched. Only four of St. Mary's first 17 games were at Dombrowski Fieldhouse.

"IF WE'RE .500 at Christmas," Domke said early in the season, we'll be very fortunate."

That was hardly an outlook typical of Domke, normally the supreme optimist. But it proved realistic and, unfortunately for the Eagles, all too accurate.

St. Mary's won just two of those first 17 games. The snowball was rolling, and picking up steam.

No sooner did the murderous part of the schedule subside than academic problems reared. Key players, including promising freshman Theodis Pearson, were lost for the remainder of the season to grades.

An experienced team might have survived. St. Mary's had one senior.

The combined effect of these events - Domke's illness and new duties that limited the time he could devote to the team, the difficult early-season schedule, the loss of important players, and the team's youth - kept the Eagles in a tailspin

THE STRAIN on Domke was evident. In the past his bubbly optimism overcame any obstacle. By season's end, his trademark was severely tested. A campaign that had started with such promise, based on a recruiting class figured to be the best in school history, had crashed.

Such a series of catastrophes would cause others to consider retirement. But Domke's like a cork; you can push him down, keep him submerged for awhile, but sooner or iater he'll bob back to the surface.

Summertime's an ideal remedy for problems like a disastrous basketball season. Domke seems to be healing, a process accelerated by another fine recruiting season from Mary's goes ahead with plans to join Zalenski.

BUT THE RECOVERY isn't complete. Domke's optimistic about the upcoming season, certainly, but his is a restrained optimism.

For one, he isn't as involved in the program as in past years when he literally was the program.

"I did about 2 percent of what I did before in recruiting," he admits. "I'm trying to do my best as dean of students. And Rich has done a great iob (recruiting)."

If Domke learned anything from last season, it's to rely more on his help. Namely Zalenski, who has now been elevated to co-coach. "He deserves it," Domke says.

And yet, it seems Domke is reluctant to part with his basketball responsibilities. He harbors no fears or jealousies toward Zalenski. He's convinced his former assistant can handle the job.

IT'S JUST that Domke still loves the game, and he can foresee his coaching involvement gradually decreasing. Particularly if St.

a new athletic league, called Southern Michigan Athletic Conferenence.

That would mean adding at least three more sports to St. Mary's program. Which, in turn, would further burden Domke in his role as AD.

Not that it's a responsibility Domke is dodging. More than anything, he'd love to see St. Mary's expand its sports program to include soccer and baseball and, yes, womens' sports.

His goal is simple: more sports means more publicity for St. Mary's. That would increase public awareness in the school, which should lead to higher enrollment. And, in an upwardly spiralling cycle, that should put more dollars into the sports budget.

Bigger budget, more scholarships. Which translates into more quality basketball players. Should such a goal be realized, Domke won't be concerned with who's on the schedule. His Eagles won't be manhandled by the Indiana States and St. Bonaventures; they'll be beating them.

"Nothing in Common" but good comedy

Tom Hanks plays David Basner, the young creative director of a Unicago ad agency who must cope with the break up of his parents' marriage while trying to win a large airline's account. Sera Ward is the airline's media director, Cheryl Ann Wayne, who doesn't have any qualms about mixing her business and personal lives

"Nothing In Common" (PG) may her success. After all, she's an MBA not be perfect but it is such good- and can pick up men just as easily as humored satire of the advertising world and the way people deal with life that the story's structural problems may be discounted.

A fast-paced, tightly written script by Rick Podell and Michael Preminger helps, particularly since it is played with great competence by a talented cast.

David Basner (Tom Hanks), creative director of Boyle, Gargas and Lionel, is on his way to a partnership in one of Chicago's top ad agencies. His secret: a flamboyant, unorthodox approach to life and to advertising. But it works; David is successful.

If there's any doubt, just check the women in his bed and the money in his checkbook. We'll leave the implications of that for another day. One of his work-time secrets - David takes care of his people, those who work directly for him They are a tight, happy little group that goes way back.

So, how's David going to become a partner? Simple, it's the age-old adbiz story: Land the new and very big account.

Enter Colonial Airlines looking for a new agency. Colonial's prexy, Andrew Woolridge (Barry Corbin), is an eccentric, former Navy pilot whose media director, Cheryl Ann Wayne (Sela Ward), just happens to be his daughter playing it under an assumed name. She doesn't want any-

In the background, at least initially, are David's parents, Lorraine (Eva Marie Saint) and Max (Jackie Gleason). Now, there's a couple. She's as lovely and lady-like as Eva Marie Saint can make her while he's, well, he's vintage Gleason as a cigarchomping, Dixie-land fan who takes great pride in his success as a salesman of children's garments.

Things heat up in David's chase of the Colonial account, and a bemused Tom Hanks plays some pretty slick comedy trying to figure out if he's making out with Cheryl Ann Wayne or if she's making out with him. There is a considerable difference to a man like David, accustomed as he is to dealing swiftly with airline stewardesses and sundry other gals whose major role in movies these days is to make macho men macho. It's funny, until you think about it.

Just as the Colonial account chase peaks, David's mother, Lorraine, leaves Daddy Max after 36 years of marriage. This is quite a surprise to David who hasn't had much to do with his parents for 10 years. It also one to think nepotism is the secret of comes as quite a shock to Max who,

Aside from the structural confusion in the plot development, "Noth-ing in Common" is a pretty terrific film. Hanks and Gleason are funny guys. Funny guys with good lines are hard to beat. As always, Eva Marie Saint, a great lady of the theater, is a

There are also a number of excellent supporting performances. Hec-tor Elizondo as Charlie Gargas, David's boss, is sufficiently humanized with the running gag about his baldness to rise above the usual ad agency exec cliche. Use of oak flavoring remains controversial

Assemble a group of wine enthusiasts and one topic is almost sure to come up it is among the most controversial in all of winedom: the use of oak flavoring in a wine, especially one made from the Chardonnay grape

There are many schools of advocacy on this. There are those who eschew using any wood at all. This is true of most true Chablis wines. Here the preference is the clean, crisp taste of the true wine, unencumbered by the wood's effect.

There are those who prefer a hint of wood, restricting exposure to brief weeks in new oak or short months in older barrels. Then there are those who seemingly love to stylistic preference. chew wood' and whose enthusiasm

The issue is a deep one.

The growers of Chablis use practically none, those in the Macon only a little, while the Burgundians use a great deal, some better than others.
