Sorry to say, but it won't be long now before those nippy and brisk days that spell fall will be upon us. By Marie Chestney staff writer

A 60-year-old Plymouth woman lost $8,000 Tuesday through a "Lotto" version of the old pigeon drop.

Two female con artists - one black and one white - used a money bag supposedly filled with $100,000 worth of winning Lotto tickets to convince the Greenview Place resident to withdraw $8,000 from her bank account. In a pigeon drop, the thieves generally use a bag supposedly stuffed with money. In Tuesday's version, the two thieves used a black money bag stuffed with a two-inch thick stack of Michigan Lotto tickets.

Next to the tickets was a typewritten card which read: "These tickets are worth $100,000. Will you please take care of them for me because I am illegally in this country.

The bag had Arabic printing on it. The victim gave police the following account of the incident:

AS SHE was walking north on Middlebelt near Wonderland Shopping Center around noon, the white woman asked her for directions.

As the two talked, the black woman ran up. She held up an unlocked, zippered bag, said she had just found it and asked what she should do.

The victim said she answered, "Let's open it." They found the tick-

When she came out she said the attorney said he would give $30,000 to each of the three women and keep $10,000 for himself. But each of the women would have to prove "they had money and show they knew how to handle it.' The black woman drove the victim to her apartment in Plymouth to get her bank book and then drove her to the Plymouth and Wayne Branch of Michigan National Bank, where the victim withdrew $8,000.

THE VICTIM gave the cash to the black woman at Wonderland, while the white woman supposedly gave her $4,000.

The black women took the money to the attorney and returned a short time later, saying the victim was to go inside and meet him on a bench in the mall. At that point, she would get the $30,000 promised, plus the $8,000 she had put up.

The victim sat on the bench for about 40 minutes, waiting for the at-

The women were ordered to lie on the floor face down - one in the bathroom, the other in the kitchen.

The men left about 10 minutes later. Several gold chains, a watch and an onyx ring with an aggregate value of nearly $500 was reported stolen as well as about $100 in cash.

THE VICTIMS weren't seriously injured, Snider said.

Dearborn Police reported that two men matching the descriptions of the Plymouth intruders broke into a house in that city Friday morning, woke up and threatened a woman and her son with guns and stole a Pontiac 6000, a stereo, a color TV, and a diamond ring valued at $6,000.

The Plymouth Salem Rockettes have a number of new additions to their trophy case from their activities this summer.

The 30 girls who belong to the pom-pon squad at Plymouth Salem High have be working to perfect their performance since last May.

Lucas budget 'holds the line' on spending

By Teri Banas staff writer

Although county fiscal experts project an increase in property tax revenue for fiscal 1987, Wayne County Executive William Lucas' proposed $203 million budget calls for "holding the line" on expenses.

Despite the modest increase in property tax revenue - the first increase in nearly five years - the county is expected to lose $10.7 million in federal revenue sharing.

Wayne County's financial picture for the 1986-87 fiscal year continues to be severely restricted by reductions in revenue and increases in operating costs. We have over the last four years made great strides toward acknowledging susbstantial debt and obligations previously unrecognized by past county budgets," Lucass said in his budget message to county commissioners, who must act on the budget.

The budget, which Lucas described as "stern," calls for $3.1 million less in spending over this year and outlines reductions in several departments. They include the offices of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners and county executive, medical diagnostic service in the sheriff's department, the Wayne County Youth Home, the Wayne County Clerk's office and the county's office.

According to county budget director Ervin Morehead, the 1986-87 recommended budget will be fueled by $130.5 million in general property taxes, representing a $4.5 million increase over the current year. The difference is projected to come from an estimated and overall 3.5 percent rise in property values (state equalized property values).

THE NEW budget is based on the current 7.07 general operating millage ($7.07 per $1,000 equalized property value), which remains unchanged. The budget year begins million anticipated loss in federal in some cases to 1984-85 levels. revenue sharing. Other factors are the cost of medical care for county indigents and disputed COLA payments now tied up in litigation before the state Supreme Court, said Morehead.

The Lucas' budget, down from this year's spending level of $206.8 million, takes into account the $10.7

There's only two things standing in the way of Wayne County's good health," said Morehead. "(They are) the Patient Care Management System and the AFSCME/COLA issue facing the Supreme Court. Now we've paid some of that (COLA costs) because of decisions made in the Court of Appeals but we're estimating (the remainder) is between $8-$17 million.

"That's going to represent a significant problem for our budget because there's nothing in the budget for that," he said.

According to Morehead, this year's recommended budget draft calls for $12.7 million more in five key areas and some $2.5 million in cuts in others. The balance will be offset by rolling back other department expenses to current levels and

"Some departments will have to cut back further because there are no provisions for pay increase," he

The recommended cuts include: • $800,000 in expenses for the Wayne County Board of Commissioners. Morehead said that amount translates to approximately six staff positions and some operating expenses. Lucas' recommended budget

• $286,000 in the office of the Wayne County Executive, being vacated by Lucas. That leaves a recommended amount of $1.2 million.

• $451,000 in cuts causing the elimination of a Medical Diagnositic Program run in the County Sheriff's Department for jail inmates. In a previous budget skirmish in this area, the Lucas Administration attempted to use outside contractors to perform this service to avoid paying higher government union salaries. Another battle is expected this ty Probate Court. time.

• $391,000 in cuts to the county clerk's office.

• $373,000 in cuts to the county's youth home. Morehead said he expected little impact in this area and expects to offset the cut by raising the daily rate for care of wards to the state. The state currently pays Wayne County $109 a day for the care of one child and plans are to raise that rate to $125. There is a twofold purpose in doing so, he said. The youth home is chronically overcrowded and county placements are difficult to make because of a state backlog in transferring youngsters

• $240,000 in the prosecutor's office. "Their budget is a couple of million dollars so this represents peanuts to them," he said.

Among the largest county expenses are the Patient Care Management System at $32 million and the general fund's contribution to the sheriff's department which is more than $36 million.

In the area of park services, a source of dispute between Detriot and suburban commissioners, the budgeted amount is restored to last year's begining level, $4.1 million. That's up from $3.25 million projected this year.

IN NEED OF A DENTIST?

WE ARE NOW ACCEPTING NEW PATIENTS

DR. MICHAEL CHABEN and DR. HARRY YOUNG are pleased to announce the addition of a Periodontist and an Orthodontist to our staff.

BLEEDING GUMS, LOOSE or MISSING TEETH, and BAD BREATH are just a few of the symptoms of pyorrhea. With timely attention and treatment by a Periodontist (gum specialist), it is possible to keep your teeth for a lifetime.

ORTHODONTICS is the art of straightening teeth and correcting improper bites. A beautiful smile increases one's self-image and confidence, but are only two of the benefits of wearing braces. Crooked teeth can lead to pyorrhea and early tooth loss, and may cause TMJ (joint) pain accompanied by tooth pain, headaches, neckaches, and backaches.

We are confident that the addition of these specialists to our staff will give our patients the tremendous advantage of having a more complete team of dental experts under one roof.

Quality care in a warm & caring atmosphere where everyone is treated with courtesy and respect is foremost.

No post-election blues for Murphy

By Tom Henderson staff writer

It was another day on the job Friday for Oakland County Executive Dan Murphy. First, there was a meeting to discuss where they could build another jail and how they would pay for it. Then there was a meeting with the roads people to plan highways in and out of the new technological park. Then there was a meeting to discuss who the proposed working agreement between Volvo and General Motors would affect the people and economy of Pontiac.

Another, another thousand things to do, or so it seemed. Already last week's decisive and disappointing loss in the Republican gubernatorial primary seemed far away.

IF THERE was any residual disappointment in the loss - in getting trounced even in his home county - it didn't show in Murphy's actions, his words or in his voice, which was firm and quick. Quick? He fires off words the way an Uzi fires off bullets. They're coming at you but it's hard to tell where one stops and the next be-

MURPHY ADMITTED he was surprised by his big loss in Oakland County. On Murphy's home turf, William Lucas won with 36,420 votes; Dick Chrysler was second with 22,687; and there was Murphy lagging back in third with 18,850.

But his big loss statewide - he finished fourth, behind Colleen Engler, with just 11 percent of the vote - came as no shock.

MURPHY SAID he allowed himself the luxury of a few rounds of golf following his defeat, then began catching up on some of the county and personal business that he had let go.

Some critics have said his hard-hitting radio ads may have turned off some voters. Murphy disagrees. "Given the same set of circumstances, I wouldn't have changed a thing," he said, with his customary tenaciousness.

As for the ads, "That's what our consultant said to do and we did it. The only flak we got was from the supporters of the other candidates and from some of the hierarchy in the Republican Party.

Well, if you can't rock the boat in a campaign, what's the point of having one.'

Murphy is 63; his term of office expires in 1988. Except for planning a vacation with his wife, Carolyn, he says he will limit his thinking about the future. Though he says he probably will run for re-election — "I don't have any reason not to" — it is too soon to talk politics.

THE WAX BATH

Despite the development of a number of anti-inflammatory drugs, heat remains a useful therapy in treating

Heat is the treatment of choice for morning stiffness - that ache and resistance to movement in your hands that occurs when you awake. And the best way to apply heat to stiff hands is by using a wax bath.

The wax is a block of paraffin melted in mineral oil. This mixture permits the bath to sustain a temperature of between 110-115F, providing the hand with maximum heat while assuring that the skin will be safe from burns.

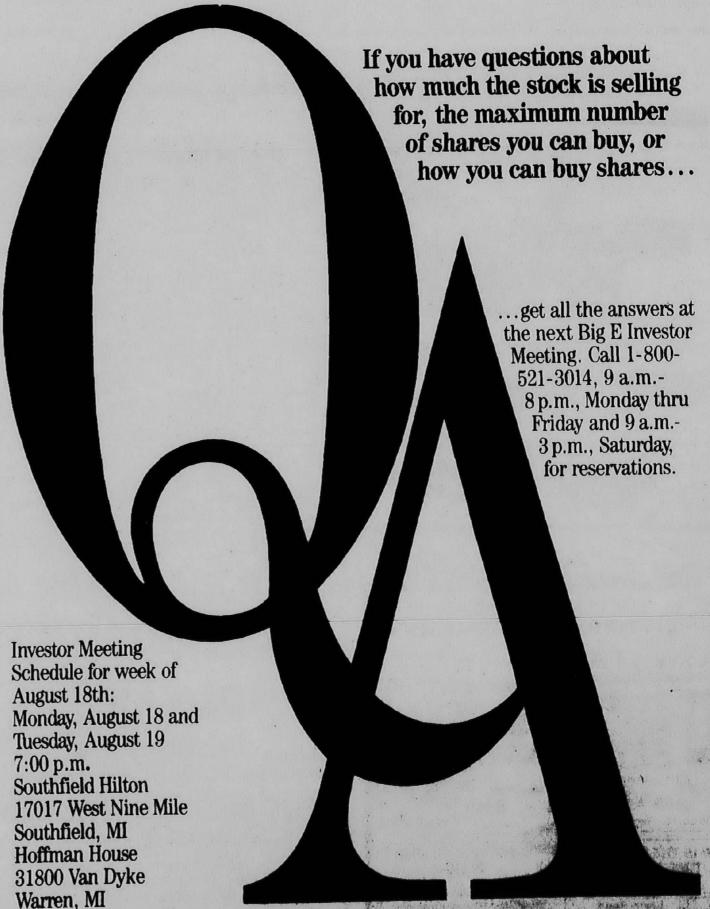

You apply the wax by dipping your hand into the bath 8-10 times. This motion creates a glove of warm wax; maximum benefit from the heat is obtained by wearing the wax glove for 10-12 minutes. Then you peel off the wax and return it to the bath. There it will re-dissolve and be ready for use nce the wax bath is safe, you can repeat the treatment as you need

Anyone with hand pain should consider this theraphy as an additional weapon in his or her battle against arthritis.

Plymouth 100 years ago fun at fairgrounds

(Part 2)

In April 1886, the same year Phil Markham began his air rifle business in Plymouth, a group of businessmen formed a stock company known as the Plymouth Fair Association. For the next 17 years, the chief attraction in the community every September was the Plymouth age agriculture and art and to provide a week's enjoyment for the people of Plymouth and the surrounding country.

Among the prime movers in the Fair Association were local banker T.C. Sherwood, Plymouth Iron Windmill general manager L.C. Hough, and Dr. J.M. Collier.

The 22-acre fairground, located southwest of Ann Arbor Trail where it crossed the railroad, was bounded on the north by Ann Arbor Trail and on the west by Depot (Hamilton)

The fair was enclosed by a high board fence whose main entrance was on Ann Arbor Trail. A secondary entrance, where livestock and race horses entered, was at the dead end of Bowery (now Maple) Street.

Single tickets to the fair sold for 25 cents. Children were admitted for 15 cents. An entire family could buy dent. Hough was its treasurer and a ticket for $1. One day was set aside children; on that day all under 15 were admitted free. School children THE FIRST FLYER explained from one-room schoolhouses as far that the purpose of the group was away as Dearborn came to Plym-

FLORAL HALL, a wooden building with four wings radiating from a central octagonal core, was the most imposing structure on the grounds.

In the middle of the hall, on a platform, Phil Markham's daughter, Maude, demonstrated Grinnell Brothers pianos. Her technique was said to be spectacular. "Her arms would fly higher than her head as she pounded the keys."

It was in the hall that pumpkins, squash, corn and other locally grown fruits and vegetables were displayed. One wing of the building fea-tured displays of home-baked breads and pastries, marmalade, jams, jellies and canned fruits and vegetables. Another wing had exhibits of potted plants and cut flowers.

A collection of prize chickens, rabbits and white mice delighted youngsters. A building east of the hall housed a display of buggies, surreys, farm machinery and other equipment. There were barns to hold cows and enclosures to contain pigs waiting their turn to be judged.

There was a merry-go-round operated by horse-power. A single horse, harnessed between the outer circle and the organ in the center, hauled the device around and around as young cowboys and cowgirls rode the horse's wooden counterparts.

There also was a ferris wheel run by manpower. Two burly men pushed the baskets of kids skyward until the scheduled number of revolutions had been completed. It was no job for a weakling.

Sideshows, shooting galleries, balloon sellers and taffy purveyors lined the midway. Gamei of chance were part of the carminal atmosphere, including a shell game carried on without any sign of official interference. There was a launching pad for the balloon ascension, and a baseball diamond where the Plymouth Pearls played most of their home games.

A RACE TRACK with grandstand was located about where Joy and Fairground streets now meet. The stands accommodated about 500 spectators.

The race track was said to be one of the best in this part of the state. Races included trotting, pacing and the half-mile running race. Purses ranged from $50 to $200. Many local businessmen owned horses which they entered in the races.

During the last two days of the annual fair, bicycle races were featured at the track. There was no entry fee. Prizes were awarded to those who placed first and second. built under a huge bag and the smoke and hot air trapped inside. The balloon rose due to the lightness

But Clara Todd, who lived near the fairgrounds, remembered one balloon event at the fair in which men labored three days trying to inflate the bag. When the balloon finally left the ground it barely cleared the fairgrounds fence. Then it toppled over in a field on an adjoining

A "REST" TENT at the fair was staffed by members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, whose local branch had more than 100 members.

The tent was a popular place with mothers; it was equipped with rockers, chairs, a couch, cribs for infants and a variety of home remedies. Periodic attempts to sell liquor at the fair were beaten back by a coalition of the WCTU, the Fair Association, and the Village Council.

The fair came to an end in 1903. In the preceding year, Floral Hall was destroyed by fire. In 1903, rain fell during most of Fair Week. The grounds were covered with mud and attendance was poor. The fair was not opened the following year.

The property became a real estate development known as the Fair-ground Subdivision. The baseball field was used until 1905. The wooden fence which enclosed the fairgrounds came down about 1907.

"We don't think children should be left to 'guess' what their parents would have wanted regarding final arrangements someday. So we've taken care of it ahead of time-lots of people do these days

"Pre-arrangement does more than just let our survivors know what we want. It guides them on the costs, so they won't go overboard on expenses someday.

We found we could even pre-pay our arrangements-by making small monthly deposits—so the kids won't have those expenses to worry about. And that's important because pre-arrangement freezes the cost at current prices, which protects the family from paying much higher prices someday due to inflation.

Michigan plum orchards produce about 22 billion tons of fruit a year. Plums ripen from August until early October.

Seasonal fruit is plum perfect during Michigan's harvest

The plum is the most widely-distributed of all American native fruits, ing Michigan purple plums. and Michigan ranks third in the nation in plum production, with an average crop yielding 22 million pounds

The harvest of the Michigan crop begins late in August. It continues to early October, leaving a two-month period where consumers can watch for the Italian variety of plums produced in this state.

The primary varieties are the Stanley and Blufre strains. Stanley plums are the large, dark blue-black. freestone plums with a firm, greenish-yellow flesh. Blufre are larger than the Stanleys, but with the same general characteristics.

REGARDLESS of the variety, consumers should choose purple plums that are plump, clean and plums that are plump, clean and fresh appearing, fully colored; pleas-ingly aromatic; and soft enough to ingly aromatic, and soft enough to yield to slight pressure in the palm of your hand.

If you select a plum which has not fully ripened, let it ripen at room temperature, but not in direct sunlight, for a day or two. Ripe plums should always be refrigerated, and kept in plastic or moisture-proof bags to prevent shriveling.

Purple plums contain contain vitamins A and C, plus several other minerals. For the weight-conscious, one cup of fresh plums has just 94 calories

Salad perks up with red tomato

Simple, yet colorful salads with fresh tomatoes can be a welcome change from the omnipresent "tossed greens." To make sure the tomatoes you pick, however, it's usually necessary to "brighten" them yourself at home. To reach this point leave them out on the kitchen counter for a few days until they're ready. You'll know they'll be a true tomato-red and yield slightly to the touch. By all means, don't refrigerate them; it kills the flavor

MONTEREY TOMATO SALAD 4 medium-sized tomatoes

1 medium-sized red onion, sliced lettuce leaves

1/2 cup diced or shredded Monterey Jack cheese

1/4 cup vegetable oil

2 tbsp. vinegar 1 tsp. chili powder

1/4 tsp. salt 1/4 tsp. garlic powder

pinch ground black pepper Use tomatoes held at room temperature until fully ripe. Remove cores and slice 1/4-inch thick. Arrange tomatoes and onions in any desired pattern on a lettuce lined serving platter. Sprinkle with cheese. Combine oil, vinegar, chili powder, salt, garlic and black pepper; spoon dressing over salad. Yield: 4 portions.

RAINBOW TOMATO SALAD

3 tbsp. vegetable oil 2 tbsp. lemon juice

34 tsp. Italian seasoning, crushed 1/2 tsp. salt

1/4 tsp. garlic powder ground black pepper

1 cup broccoli florets

l cup red pepper strips 1 cup green pepper strips 3 large-sized tomatoes

In a medium bowl combine oil, lemon juice, Italian seasoning, salt, garlic and black pepper. In a large skillet bring 1 inch water to the boil. Add broccoli; simmer, covered, 1 minute. Add red and green peppers; simmer, covered, until crisp-tender, about 2 minutes. Drain well and toss with reserved dressing. Cover and refrigerate until chilled or overnight. Just before serving remove cores from tomatoes and cut in 1/2-inch chunks (makes 3 cups). Add to marinated vegetables; toss lightly. YIELD: 4 portions, 4 cups.

Library fun keeps kids entertained

staff writer

OR MANY Plymouth-Canton children, the summer of 1986 has been a great time for reading.

Summer reading programs at both the Canton Public Library and the Duffing-Hough Public Library in Plymouth attracted their share of young readers this year.

At the Canton Public Library, 1,002 children participated in the Summer Reading Club for those in the first through eighth grades and the "Read to Me" program for younger children.

That was a record for us," said Judy Teachworth, children's librarian. During the summer of 1985, 854 children participated in those pro-grants at the Canton Public Library.

The Dunning-Hough Public Library had approximately 315 childrea sign up for the summer reading program for 6- to 14-year-olds this year, according to Pam Rawlinson, assistant director and children's librarian. Of that number, approxi-mately 190 fulfilled the contracts they had signed stating how many books they would read.

THAT REGISTRATION figure is comparable to last year's, Rawlinson said, with this year's percentage seemed to have a really good time.'

Both libraries held a number of activity sessions for children participating in the programs. Summer Reading Club youngsters at the Canton Public Library were entertained by Ann Arbor musician Peter "Mad-cat" Ruth and by professional actors from Crossroads Productions who presented a "Golliwhoppers! A session of "Appalachian Mountain Tales" with storyteller Mary Hamilton was also planned for the Summer Reading Club in Canton. The festivities ended July 24 with a party at the Skatin' Station in Can-in Plymouth included films, a talent show and a "Mission: Possible" session at Kellogg Park. The "Mission: Possible" session included an obstacle course and a balloon toss for youngsters in the downtown Plymouth park.

THIS YEAR'S festivities for the 6to 14-year-olds at the Plymouth facility ended with an Aug. 2 awards party for children who had fulfilled their contracts.

The children signed contracts stating how many books they would read, with a minimum requirement of three books. Becky Uhlmann was the Plymouth program's top reader, with 223 books.

At the Aug. 2 awards party, the children played non-competitive games.

"The kids had a great time, they really did," Rawlinson said of the approximately 80 children who attended the party.

Summer Reading Club participants at the Canton Public Library who read five books received a certificate. A number of the youngsters didn't stop at five books but just kept right on reading, Teachworth said. It was just for fun this summer and to encourage reading and use of the library, too."

Books about school, sports, science fiction and fantasy were popular among the young readers this year, Teachworth said, as were the Beverly Cleary books. Mysteries were also popular.

The youngsters participating in the Dunning-Hough Public Library program also liked reading myster-ies, along with the Judy Blume books and those by Laura Ingails Wilder.

"Mostly the popular fiction seemed to be the popular choice," Rawlinson said.

BOTH LIBRARIANS were pleased with the success of the programs held this summer.

"It was very busy," Teachworth said. "I think they enjoyed it too, It was a fun summer for everybody."

Rawlinson is looking forward to next year's program "after a breath-

Jeff Goldblum is a scientist who gets transformed into a fly when his experiment backfires.

the movies

Dan Greenberg

America's preoccupation with the perverse and the macabre continues unabatéd as filmmakers leed on, and profit from, our fascination with aberrant behavior.

Psychopathology, caged women and "Help me, please help me. I'm being attacked by fly molecules" are featured topics respectively in "Manhunter," "Reform School Girls" and "The Fly," all R-rated for good reason.

Will Graham (William L. Peter-sen) is the "Manhunter," a former FBI agent recalled to help Jack Crawford (Stephen Lang) track down a psychopath who brutally murders entire families when the moon is full.

Graham had been invalided out of service after the trauma involved in catching another psychopath, Doctor Lektor (Brian Cox), who gets messages on toilet paper from the current threat, Francis Dollarhyde (Tom Noonan).

THE FILM IS pretty tense and exciting, in good part because of its technique, not because of the scenario. The psychopathology of both Dr. Lektor and Francis Dollarhyde is fairly mundane. It it gets murky when director/scenarist Michael Mann delves into obscure mysticism, with references to William Blake - a tactic apparently better developed in the book, "Red Dragon," from which the film was adapted.

Editing and photography by Dov Hoenig and Dante Spinotti, however, induce a lot of tension. Wisely understanding that our imaginations are more powerful than our vision, Spinotti filmed relatively little gore for a slasher movie.

Instead, the threat of violence and the authorities' helplessness constantly menace us. Full-faced head shots of Graham and Crawford, disturbed, perplexed but un-able to track down Dollarhyde, are contrasted with the 6-foot-7-inch Noonan, able to come and go as he

Although we don't see all that much, Graham's obsession with what the killer has done serves the purpose. These images are reinforced with some pretty intense music by the Reds and Michael Ru-

But, in the final analysis, the relatively simple-minded psychopathology, the forced solution and cliched conclusion leave the "Manhunter" looking for style and intel-

THE GIRLS in "Reform School Girls" also lack style and intelligence, but they show so much skin that you'll never miss sophistica-tion. The film is heavy on implied brutality and lesbian acts, with just enough shown to whet the appetite of your ordinary pervert.
Producer Jack Cummins and writer/director Tom DeSimone have some pretensions about satirizing women-in-prison movies, but don't you believe it. "Reform School Girls" is more polished than usual for this genre (photography by Howard Wexler) and it has some funny moments, but it's just another skin flick groveling in perversity and exploiting the very thing it pretends to satirize.

"The Fly" is back again, with Jeff Goldblum hovering over Geena Davis and slobbering formic acid on anyone who tries to swat

Times have changed since Vincent Price got his head stuck on a fly's body 30 years ago. The name of the game now seems to be explicit gross-out rather than a good scare or an imaginative ghost sto-

This time the great scientist, Seth Brundle (Goldblum), is building a matter transmitter so that he can avoid conventional travel. He has terminal motion sickness.

WELL, HE SHOULD have taken Dramamine because there's a fly in his machinery. Brundle's molecules are intermixed with the fly's and he begins to change into a fly. One of the interesting thoughts here: "Why is the fly's genetic material so much stronger than man's? Are we that weak and vulnerable?"

In any event, Brundle's foil and lover is an attractive young science writer (Davis) and her nightmare of giving birth to a fly larva is only one of numerous, extremely disgusting images director David Cro-nenberg presents.

It constantly amazes me that so many people enjoy depraved and loathsome images. Life has sufficient horror without spending money to seek out repulsive images. What does this preoccupation with the gross and morbid tell us about our civilization?

City boy whips rapids, sort of

Y STOMACH was thick with apprehension. I was fearing the worst.

Monday, August 18, 1986 O&E

From the minute I told my brother-in-law, "White water rafting? Pennsylvania? Sure, I'll go. It might make for a funny story," I regretted it.

I'm a city boy. I've got no business in the mountains of Pennsylvania. I don't belong there. I don't know how to function there. I can't get a Tigers score there. I can't even get a quarter-pounder with cheese there.

I'd been camping once before and hated it. I don't know how to pitch a tent, build a campfire, co-exist with an assortment of pesty insects or any of those other pleasantries associated with camping. I wear contact lenses, for chrissakes. Where do I disinfect my contact lenses in the middle of nowhere?

On top of that, I'm going to spend two afternoons in a rubber raft on a raging, rock-filled river.

Yeah, I'm into life-threatening sports.

BUT THERE I was. In a car with my brother-in-law Rick, his wife Andrea, (who was perhaps the smartest one of the group; she stayed far away from the raging, rock-filled river) and my wife Susan. In another car were the leaders of the expedition: Dave Roszel and his wife Linda. These are the experienced white-water people in whose hands I placed my future. Rounding out our rather motley crew were Dave Starrin, Su' Vaerten, Jan Hessellbacher and Mr. Hockey himself, A.J. Baker.

It was only mildly comforting having A.J. along. He was as out of place as I was, but he's a crazy man. Crazy people know no fear. I was going to be in a rubber raft, on a raging rock-filled river alongside A.J. "Crash" Baker.

Yikes

AS WE were driving up through the mountains - when I say up I mean up, we're talking ear-popping. nose-bleeding ascent here out of my mind. You remember that movie, right? Not exactly a public relations release for a white-water year. rafting outfitter.

The images from Deliverance greatly increased my apprehension. I had visions of ugly, toothless mountain men eyeing me with bad intent. "How y'all doin? Sure are a long ways from home. Hee hee."

It got to the point where I wanted to hum a strain from Dueling Banjoes out the window to see if anyone would answer.

But the beauty of the place quieted my fears. For the moment. I've never seen real mountains. (Mount Pleasant and Mount Clemens aren't real mountains, are they?) I suppose if I was Thoreau I could come up with the right words to make you see and feel the power of those Pennsylvania mountains. But then, if I was Thoreau I'd be dead. Six of one, half dozen of the other.

Let me just say that they were breathtaking, awesome in the true sense of that overused word. We pulled off the road at a clearing marked "scenic view." It was about a mile from our camp sight in the Ohiopyle State Park. Mountains, lush green mountains, were below and above us. They formed something of a V-shape. At the very bottom on the V, barely visible, was the Youghiogheny River (pronounced Yak-a-gainey). A few short hours from then I would be risking my life on that stupid river.

WHITE-WATER RAFTING, I found out later, can be both simple and scary depending on such river variables as water level, number and size of rocks, steepness of falls, maneuverability and rapid intensity.

Rivers are rated in classes from one to five, class five being the most perilous. There is a class six. Class six is like dead man's curve; you don't walk back from it.

I knew none of this as I was strapping on my life jacket. A ranger with Youghiogheny Outfitters, Inc. - the people who police the river, give tours and supply the equipment — gave us some pre-rafting instructions.

"Try to stay in the raft. If you fall out the rocks can do serious damage. If you fall inside the boat, get up quick because the rocks will still get you. If you should happen to fall into the river, lay on your back and keep your feet out in front of you and let the river carry you to safety. The life jacket should keep you mostly above water.

'You'll miss most of the rocks. Now, if you get turned around and go under, and you happen to hit a steep fall, you're done. There's nothing anyone can do for you at that point."

Excuse me? You're done? You mean done like history, in the arcouldn't get the movie Deliverance chives done? How many people do you lose on this river?

novices a taste of the Yough.

Piece of cake. We had very little trouble. We were like pros. Just zipping through those rocks. The hardest part was carrying our raft back to the outfitter. We had to carry it up this steep and slick rocky mountainside, no steps, then through about a half-mile of woods. We also made the mistake of deflating the raft which made it twice as bulky and twice as hard to carry.

Our first-time success served only as a false sense of security

WE DECIDED to run the loop a second time. Disaster. Jan was aboard with me and A.J. The rapids spun us around and tossed the raft. Suddenly, Jan was in the water, clinging onto the side of the raft.

I panicked. I envisioned her going underneath the boat and never resurfacing. I just stared at her. A.J. calmly suggested that I might want

While the four-person crew was cruising effortlessly, we were finding every rock in the river. We got stuck in the first three rapids and in other parts that weren't even listed as rapids. A.J. was yelling at me, I was yelling back and poor Dave Starrin was looking for help. This was going to be a long, long day.

Luckily, Dave Roszel came aboard to rescue us. Had he not, we would still be out there.

The river's trouble spots have names. I remember three of them.

• Dimple Rock. The river teases you here. It lulls you to sleep with calm waters, but the calm waters quickly draw you into a speedy pocket. The pocket grabs your raft and puts you swiftly on course for a huge rock. You really have no control of your raft as the water rushes you toward this rock sticking about eight feet above the water. My reaction was to drop my oar, cling to the raft and howl like a banshee.

The water pushed us up to the rock nd around it so fast that it felt like we went right through it. From that point, we were traveling backwards into all kinds of trouble. Then, just as quickly as trouble started, it stopped. And we were in calm water

We then watched the three-woman crew scoot past Dimple Rock without a problem.

• WHALE'S ROCK: This was the ultimate in potential death. Dave Roszel kept shouting to steer into the eye of the whale. There was a rock carved to look like a whale. Well, to me, in my agitated state of mind, there were about four rocks that looked like whales. Dave Starrin and I steered toward one whale-like rock, Dave Roszel and A.J. toward

We were in big trouble. The raft went sideways into the rapids, a cardinal sin in white water rafting, they tell me. We came up hard on a high rock. A kayaker was resting atop the rock, and we almost knocked him off. The raft was thrown perpendicular to the water. A.J. and Dave Star-rin were at the bottom, Dave Roszel and I at the top. I immediately abandoned ship for the security of the rock. Roszel, laughing his head off, suggested that I return to the raft unless I wanted to remain on the rock the rest of my life.

Somehow all four us got to the top of the raft and managed to slide it away from the rock. The raft was completely filled with water and we had to trudge off to the side of the river and dump it.

Meanwhile, the three-woman crew calmly passed us by

One minute we're joking around in calm water, the next minute A.J. and I are sitting in the two Daves' laps. It was hilarious though, because we were tossed at exactly the same time. I couldn't get up at first because I was laughing so hard.

The women, to our increasing chagrin and amazement, slid through with minimal effort. I never did figure out their secret. When it was all said and done, and we were back at the camp site resting our weary muscles and enjoying another in a series of super meals, I had a feeling of tremendous accomplishment. I mean, I survived the Youghiogheny rapids. Me, city boy. I

As I was dreaming about guest appearances on Michigan Outdoors or first-person articles in Field and Stream, I hear Dave Roszel's voice:

"The thing about today, the river was really low. I've been on it when the level was between three and five feet high. It was about a foot and a half today. If it had been higher, we would never have survived Whales

So much for my sense of accomplishment. But I did quench any thirst I might have had for adventure. And if the truth has to be told, this city boy had one good time.

But I never did see the funny looking mountain kid with a banjo.

Softball King

Hutton, Canton Sports vie for title

By Chris McCosky staff writer

This is going to be fun.

The best Class A slow pitch softball team from the Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department league against the best Class A team from the Canton Parks and Rec league: The winner earns the distinction of being the Plymouth-Canton Observer's first "Softball King."

We couldn't have hand picked a better matchup for Wednesday night's showdown (game time 7:30) at Massey Field.

E.F. Hutton, for the fifth straight season, captured the Plymouth Class A league. This is a team built around offense. It's a power team with four or five consistent home run threats

Canton Sports, winners of Canton's First Division, is a first-year team that relies on a sturdy, stingy defense. Its infield has committed fewer than 10 errors this season and turned an average of two double

Offense vs. defense. Might vs. lithe. E.F. Hutton vs. Canton Sports. "WE WENT UP to watch them

(Hutton) play the other night," said Lew Huddleston, manager of Canton Sports. "They can hit the ball, no doubt about it. They probably hit between 40 and 50 home runs a year, and our leading home run hitter had

"We're a good singles-hitting team. But we run hot and cold. If we're hot, we can score 18 to 25 runs a game. If we're cold, we score four or five. We've won a lot of games by 5-1, 6-1 scores."

Huddleston, who is Canton's leading home run hitter, has no delusions about holding E.F. Hutton to under five runs. The 290-foot fences encircling Massey Field won't exactly intimidate Hutton's heavy hitters.

'That's their home field," he said. "But I think if we play our game, if our top hitters are hot, and we keep them in the ball park, we'll be able to stick with them."

E.F. HUTTON, managed by Myron Smith, posted a 29-10 overall record this year and has qualified for the prestigious USSSA World Tournament Labor Day weekend at the Canton Softball Center.

Some of the Hutton names will be familiar to followers of local softball. Names like Bobby Smith who hit .530 this season, and Jerry Herbst, who hit .619. Dale Sherwood (.544), Mark Lipinski (.548), Denny McHugh (.540) and home run leader Dave Cain are all recognizable in Plymouth slow-pitch circles. Many played for powerhouse Jamies and MBM Softball Club teams in past years.

"This is a good team," Myron
Smith said. "To qualify for the World Tournament is really special. Only 80 teams across the country qualify. Most teams try to qualify and can't."

Smith said he hadn't seen Canton Sports play. But he doesn't expect his club to take the game lightly.

Plymouth hosts Junior A squad

By Chris McCosky

The Plymouth Cultural Center will be the home arena for the Hennessey Engineers Junior A hockey club this fall.

That's the word from both Plymouth and club officials.

"We're very happy to have the Hennessey Engineers and Junior A hockey here in Plymouth," said Chuck Skene, director of the Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department. "We're looking forward to working with them."

The Engineers - who play in the five-team North American Junior Hockey League (NAJHL) along with the Fraser Falcons, Compuware, the Buffalo Junior Sabres and the Chicago Patriots - were housed in the Redford Arena last season. The club decided to seek a new home after Redford raised its ice fee to $85 per hour.

The club, which carried a $38,000 budget last year, considered several arenas before settling on Plymouth, including Eddie Edgar Arena in Livonia, Lincoln Park, Allen Park and Ecorse.

We wanted to play in Plymouth for a couple of reasons," said A.J. Baker, who will coach the team this season. "No. 1, I think, was my familiarity with this community and surrounding area. No. 2, this area provides a solid base of hockey interest. I think it's going to work out real well."

"I have always enjoyed a good working relationship with A.J.," Skene said. "I expect that to continue with the Junior A team."

The Hennessey Engineers placed second in the NAJHL last year with a 24-14-5 record. Three of the team's top players last year will return: Tom Madden, E.J. Sauer and Lief Gustafson.

Baker also expects the team to feature several local players. Recently, the Engineers drafted 12 players from the Observer & Eccentric coverage area, including Doug Campbell of Plymouth, Tim Olschanski from Livonia Franklin and Rick Robitaille. Olschanski and Robitaille are former All-Area
