Committee to review school's film ban

By Susan Buck staff writer

The ban on showing the controversial R-rated film, "The Breakfast Club," from the classrooms of Plymouth-Canton Community Schools still stands pending the decision of a fivemember review committee

Superintendent John M. Hoben announced the committee's formation before a public discussion of the film that was moved from the administrative board room on S. Harvey to the Plymouth Salem High School auditorium Monday night.

Previously, Hoben bypassed a review procedure set up by the school from residents must be followed up by a case-by-case review committee. He chose instead to discuss the matter with the executive cabinet and announce his decision at a school board workshop meeting.

THE CONTROVERSY began last month when Diane Daskalakis, a local dissident and unsuccessful school board candidate, submitted a petition bearing 700 signatures protesting showing the film to high school students.

Last year, Daskalakis objected to the appearance of Gundella the Witch as a speaker at the Centennial that says that written complaints Education Park and earlier this year to the showing of the film "The Sword and the Sorcerer" at East Middle School.

The final decision for acceptance or denial will be made by the board of education. Until that final decision, the ban on 'The Breakfast Club' will remain in effect,' said Hoben.

About 200 people, mostly students, attended Monday's board meeting. Also in attendance at the meeting were a small number of parents. Dudley Barlow, the English teacher in whose class the film was to be shown and David Wineman, a representative from the Metro-Detroit branch of the American Civil Liber-

Barlow, who requested that the item be placed on the agenda of the regular meeting, made only a short statement, citing the First Amendment (freedom of expression) of the U.S. Constitution. "The students' right to receive information and ideas and the teachers' right to teach them is inherent in the protection afforded by the Constitution," he said.

According to community relations director Richard Egli, a grievance was filed by Barlow last week.

The movie in question involves the interaction of five stereotyped high school students - a brain, an athlete, a cheerleader, a non-conformist and an outcast - who are placed on an all-day detention on a Saturday The movie also involves profane language and sexually explicit discus-

'I'm sure that the board is not surprised to see me here tonight, nor would they be surprised if the issue comes to it, to see us in court," said Wineman, an ACLU representative. He faulted the circumvention of procedure and the message that the action sends to the students. He also criticized the school district for 'yielding to community pressure and the signal that it sends to the community - that the library and

Angie Schlagheck, a Plymouth Canton senior, presented the board with a 750 signature counter-petition, which also criticized the original circumvention of review procedure and lack of due process consideration. "We would hope the board would understand the seriousness of the issue and realize that it is their constitutional obligation to protect our First Amendment rights," she

Plan may unplug sewer problems for 3 townships

By Teri Banas staff writer

The townships of Plymouth, Canton and Northville have presented the state DNR (Department of Natural Resources) with a nine-point proposal that, if approved, would open the way for their participation in the so-called "Son of Super Sewer."

The supervisors for the townships formed a unified block this week meeting with DNR chief Gordon Gover in Livonia Monday night.

The meeting, arranged by Wayne County executive nominee Edward McNamara, resulted in a one-week delay in the state's Nov. 1 deadline whereby all identified 16 communities in the regional sewer plan must be committed.

Of the 16 communities all but the three western townships have signed service agreements for the plan formally titled the North Huron R puge on local sewer construction, Canton officials on Sept. 9 opted out of the DNR-promoted sewer plan when they said the local share of the cost was too high, particularly in comparison to the project's benefits in Canton.

Last week Guyer issued that ban and gave Canton until Nov. 30 to develop a plan for solving the problem of its pumping raw sewage into the

"THE PROJECT is still flawed in some of our minds," said Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen. We're going to discuss it for another week.

The super sewer, a $103-million sewer to run through southwestern Oakland County, western Wayne County and into the Detroit Treatment Plant, was supposed to solve pollution problems and increase sewer capacities for participating communities

Among the complex issues that have stalled action on the plan is concern over construction costs. There is federal funding available for 55 percent of most of the costs for the first phase of the three-part project, but a Dec. 1 deadline is fast approaching for capturing those funds The townships' nine-point plan, as outlined in a copy obtained by the Observer this week, calls for assurances. Time include:

• Correcting inequities in the cost allocations, and assurances Acting against the threat of a ban against future capital improvement

· Financial support from the state of Michigan. Local communities have been disturbed by the federal government's declining participation in the plan, from a one-time 75 percent share in the cost to a nowpromised 55 percent share.

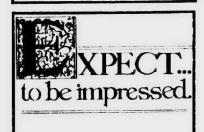

• Assurances over the settlement of future rate assessments.

• They further ask that the townships be open to taking part in other, independent sewer plans in the fu-

A massive, nationwide public education and research effort against AIDS must be launched to stem the spread of the fatal disease.

'How do you tell your friends you're dying?'

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

The piano music of George Winston drones softly in the background as Ed Jenks, 36, sits at the kitchen table with his dog Sam near his side.

He waits. Like a reported 26,566 people in the United States, Jenks has AIDS. The question is not if but when he will die. The mortality rate of the disease, which attacks the body's immune system, is 100 percent. No cure is available. At what time and in what way

Jenks contracted AIDS were not the main issues when he received test results in February that showed that he had the disease.

"My basic concern," Jenks said, "was how do you tell your closest friends that you're dying? That's the hardest part."

DAY-TO-DAY existence is not easy either. Those suffering with the disease get worse. The body slowly deteriorates until it can no longer defeat diseases that a healthy immune system overcomes naturally.

Some days, Jenks, a Detroiter, said he feels well enough to go to work. Other days he spends anywhere from 14 to 16 hours sleeping and with fevers of 102.5

It's the good days that give him a ray of hope. It's the bad days that bring him back to reality.

It also brings him to anger. For Jenks, the disease has struck at the most inopportune time. His life, he said, was just beginning to come together.

JENKS HAD just begun a second career teaching second grade after 11 unsatisfying years as a pharmacist.

His new career, though, was to last only three months before he received the news that he had AIDS.

Jenks was tested for the AIDS virus by his physician while being treated for a bad cold. He tested positive.

His physician suggested he be tested again, and again, he tested positive.

"I still wasn't afraid I had AIDS," Jenks said. "I suspected it when I started to get short of breath and was tired all the time . .

A third test came back positive for pneumocystis carinii (a form of pneumonia associated with AIDS), "that's when I got scared." "That's a death sentence."

FAMILY and friends, he said, were very supportive when he told them he had the disease. He had heard the horror stories of other people with AIDS — fired from their jobs, kicked out of their apartments or shunned by their families.

Fortunately, he said, that hasn't been the case for him. "What I haven't gotten from anybody is the panic of 'Oh my God, I'm going to catch AIDS from this person by talking to them or by looking at them," Jenks said.

BUT KNOWLEDGE about AIDS is something even he didn't have, in the beginning. Jenks, a homosexual, wasn't concerned when AIDS was first discovered.

"I didn't think it could happen to me," he said. "It was a New York or San Francisco problem, not a Detroit problem. I continued to do the things that would put me at risk to catch it."

Jenks, like many AIDS carriers, isn't sure when he contracted the

"That's what bothers me the most," he said. "I don't know when I contracted the virus and God knows how many people I infected."

Ed Jenks never thought he'd be a victim of AIDS.

HE LIVES with that along with thoughts of his impending fate. Friends and family offer an ear so he can tell them his problems.

They also help Jenks with housework and other tasks when he's not feeling well enough to do them

Jenks is being treated at Henry Ford Hospital by Dr. Evelyn Harris, a widely recognized expert on the

Talking to people, professionals or friends, about the disease helps alleviate the burden somewhat.

At first, Jenks interacted with other AIDS patients but found it too disturbing.

"I don't anymore because it's like staring yourself in the face," he said. "I knew this guy, I'll call him Joe, who had his appointment at Ford Hospital right after mine. When I first saw him, he looked thin.

"I saw him again last Thursday and he looked really bad. I just don't need to see that."

Schools grapple with delicate issues

By Larry O'Connor staff writer

Where are the questions about AIDS to be answered? A recent report by the U.S. Attorney General's Office recommends AIDS education begin as early as elementary school.

Most school districts in the area touch on the disease in junior high or high school health courses

Some school superintendents, though, wonder how much information on AIDS can be taught without invoking a negative community response.

"To what degree will the community receive that education with all the factors involved . . . you're getting into a delicate area," said Graham Lewis, superintendent of Farmington schools.

POLICIES on how to handle students who might have AIDS differ only slightly from school district to school district. Most are following the guidelines passed down from the federal Centers for Disease Control and the Michigan Department of Health.

The guidelines suggest each case should be handled individually by a team composed of the family's doctor, a public health official, school personnel and the child's parent or guardian, according to Wanda Jubb, health education specialist with the Michigan Department of Education.

"We advise schools of the evidence that there's no casual transmission of the disease," said Dr. E.J. McClendon, a professor of Public Health at U-M and school board president of Plymouth/Canton Schools. "There is no documented case . . . This is a good reason not to exclude children who might have AIDS from school."

McClendon also is on several state task forces and advisory committees regarding school policies on AIDS. He said the state recommends schools work out the specific details, using the guidelines.

Many school districts in the area, such as Wayne-Westland, Garden City, Birmingham, West Bloomfield, Bloomfield Hills and Clarenceville, already have specific communicable disease policies, which include THEY'RE SIMILAR in approach to the guidelines from the state Health Department and the CDC in Atlanta. These policies also include school staff members as well as students.

"(The state guidelines) don't tell you what steps to go through, or how much of a time line to take," said Dr. Herbert Baker, director of Guidance and Pupil Personnel Services for Birmingham schools. "Our policy fills in those gaps."

Other school districts, such as Livonia, Farmington, South Redford, Troy, Plymouth/Canton, Redford Union, are in the process of developing policies on AIDS and other communicable diseases. Most hope to have a policy by the end of the school year.

AIDS questions, answers

By Larry O'Connor

The only way to stop the spread of AIDS is through prevention methods such as knowing your sexual partner, using condoms and not sharing drug needles.

That's the word from a state expert who says AIDS will increase dramatically in the next decade if educational efforts aren't increased.

"Our most potent tool is not hightechnology success, but more education, communication, understanding and prevention," said Dr. June Os born, dean of Public Health at the University of Michigan and longtime AIDS researcher.

Osborn was part of the panel on the joint study by the National Academy of Sciences and the Institute of Medicine on AIDS.

Q. What is AIDS?

Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome affects the body's immune system when HTLV-III/LAV, the antibodies of AIDS, infect the T Lymphocytes. As a result, a person becomes susceptible to certain cancers and infections, mainly pneumonia (pneumocystis carinii).

Neurological damage also has been detected in those who have died from AIDS. The mortality rate from the disease is 100 percent.

For every case of AIDS reported, there are four more cases of AIDS Related Complex (ARC). ARC can range from something as mild as a fever to serious damage to the immune and nervous system.

People can also carry the AIDS antibodies and yet show no visible signs of the disease.

Q. How is AIDS transmitted?

The AIDS virus is transmitted by the exchange of body fluids, primarily blood and semen, which are infected with the AIDS antibodies.

Sexual contact (especially anal intercourse) and the sharing of contaminated needles provide the most favorable conditions for the transmission of the AIDS virus.

Sexual contact, according to a report by the American Council on Science and Health, is believed to be the risk factor in more than 60 percent of reported AIDS cases among

Heterosexual transmission of AIDS is possible but less likely, experts say. An infected male is more likely to pass on the virus to a female than an infected female would to a male.

Another less likely way to contract AIDS is by blood transfusion. All blood received by the American Red Cross is screened for the AIDS antibodies.

Q. How is AIDS not transmitted? You cannot get the disease from casual contact with an AIDS carrier, such as shaking hands or sharing a drinking fountain. Studies have been done on people who've taken care of AIDS patients, none of whom have contracted the

And, according to the NAS/IOM report, there is no evidence the virus can be transmitted through kissing.

Q. How many people have AIDS? As of Oct. 20, CDC had a reported

26,566 cases of AIDS in this country. For every person that has AIDS, there are four who have ARC.

The Coolfont study reports between 1 million and 1.5 million are infected with the AIDS' antibodies.

The rate of AIDS cases is doubling yearly with 270,000 people accumulative expected to have been diagnosed as having the disease by 1991, 179,000 will already be dead by that point, experts predict.

Q. How many in Michigan?

There are 219 reported cases of AIDS in the state, two-thirds of which are in the southeast part of Michigan. The number is expected to increase proportionately with the national rate.

Q. Who gets AIDS? Men account for 93 percent of the AIDS cases in the country.

Blacks and Hispanics represent 39 percent of the cases.

The majority of men who have AIDS are either homosexual or bisexual, though trends are chang-

Last year, 60 percent of the AIDS patients who were hospitalized in Manhattan were gay men. Sixty percent of the people hospitalized for AIDS this year in Manhattan are IV drug users, according to Osborn.

Q. If I'm a heterosexual, non-drug user, how could I get AIDS?

If you don't participate in highrisk behaviors (male homosexuality with a multitude of partners, IV drug use), your chances diminish greatly. But it's very important to know your sexual partner and to take precautions, such as using con-

For example, it's estimated the number of male bisexuals in the country at least matches the number of homosexual men (estimated at 3 percent). But those who participate in occasional homosexual behavior don't consider themselves to be homosexual and thus not at a high risk to be carriers of the disease.

Infected mothers can pass the disease on to their unborn children.

Q. Can my child get AIDS from someone in school?

Not unless they're involved in the defined high-risk behaviors. Being in the same classroom with a person stricken with AIDS, experts say, doesn't put others at risk since the virus cannot be transmitted through casual contact.

Q. Am I at risk when I donate or receive blood?

No. The American Red Cross now screens all blood it receives for AIDS antibodies and those with highrisk behaviors are asked not to donate will be transferred to other projects in the state.

We'd be starting with no guarantee of funding but we'd maintain our position on the priority list should funds become available," Vago said.

THAT, in itself, wouldn't really mean much if federal officials follow through with plans to phase out the grant program in favor of a loan strategy.

Two possible ways of paying for local share of the project if the township were to enter the sewer service agreement are surcharges on water bills or bonds funded by a property tax, Breen has said.

The township board Tuesday also approved without dissent a 1987 operating budget of $4.1 million. No one spoke during a public hearing preceeding that vote.

Drain funds pile up

Was Redford sewer overtaxed?

By Teri Banas staff writer

A county commississioner has charged that the drain commissioner's office has systematically overtaxed residents for drain construction and maintenance and accumulated a surplus of more than $7 million to pay off an estimated $40,000 in bonds.

Commissioner Milton Mack, D-Wayne, who has been looking into the office's practices for the past two years, called the drain office's billing practices a form of "double dipping," whereby residents have been taxed for projects that were already paid off.

"It's certainly a bad practice and if there's no law against it, there should be," said Mack, whose district includes Canton Township.

The drain office's 1985 annual report, which lists 11 "Chapter 8" drainage projects dating to back to 1954, provides evidence of Mack's charges. Chapter 8 projects include those drains that are under the exclusive control of the drain commissioner, who alone decides the cost, awards contract bids and decides assessments for property owners.

THE PROJECTS today, though almost entirely paid off through bonds, still list a surplus of $7.78 million.

Responding to the drain office's own accounting from its last annual report (1985), Mack said he would advise communities to employ a provision of the state Drain Code that allows communities to seek refunds for overassessed tax dollars. This has been done by a number of communities in the past.

His comments followed disclosures last week in Redford Township that a maintenance project estimated to cost $300,000 in 1983 has yet to begin while estimated costs have gone up to $2 million.

According to that offices' annual report for 1985, the Redford Consolidated Drain, which runs 2.4 miles from Inkster Road to the township's eastern border, was constructed at a cost of $1.67 million in 1961. As of last year, two accounts listed for the drainage system report a balance of $1.4 million even after its construction costs were paid.

Repeated attempts to contact county drain commissioner Charles

Youngblood were unsuccessful.

Local sources say the project has been held-up while negotiations over acquiring an estimated 40 right-away parcels continue. John McClay, the project engineer employed by Consulting Engineer Associates, a frequently used firm by Youngblood's office, said design work "has been done for quite some time." He was prohibited from further comment because of company policy, he said. Company president Nate Shapiro did not respond to Observer inquiries this week.

On the advice of County Commission Chairman Richard Manning, D-Redford, Redford Township Supervisor James Kelly said he would draft a letter to Drain Commissioner Charles Youngblood asking for a full explanation.

"We can't get through either," Kelly said last week in commenting on attempts by the township to question Youngblood directly.

KELLY SAID he planned to ask hanging on to all that money."

for details on the status of the cleanout of the Redford Consolidated Drain, its project plans to date and reasons for its delay. When announcements were first made on the program in the spring of 1983, county and local officials then said it would be completed by that fall.

"Somehow this project has grown. There's more to it than was anticipated," said Manning, offering some explanation for the delays and cost overruns.

According to Manning, "an average drain operation shouldn't take more than six months to a year, especially with money on hand."

The Observer this week filed a Freedom of Information request with Youngblood requesting disclosure of all project contracts, costs and an explanation of its delay.

In the Redford Consolidated Drain, some $1.4 million has been listed as surplus up to the last statement year in June 1985. Two years earlier, the office's annual report listed that surplus at $1.9 million.

According to Mack, the surpluses for the Redford drain and other Chapter 8 projects are too high, suggesting an overtaxation at the start of the projects.

"There is nothing inherently wrong with a modest surplus," he said. "However, the better practice is to use the excess funds to make payments against the principle and interest on a bond rather than assess substantial amounts of cash.

"What good does it do the individual taxpayer to have the drain commissioner making a lot of money on their tax dollars," he added. "The drain commissioner has no business hanging on to all that money."

Clogged and debris filled, the opened section on the south side of W. Chicago, just east of of the Redford Consolidated Drain as it looks Telegraph.

In another example Mack gave, the office's annual report for 1982 listed $12 million on hand on 13 drain districts where only $355,000 was outstanding on unpaid bonds.

"IT'S A PRACTICE that has gone on for decades. No one can stop him from doing it. He doesn't report to anyone."

"He's collected over $2 million from people living in Redford Township in the 1960s. (It's money) that many senior citizens may have used in their golden years."

Mack said that other projects have exceeded their original cost projections, citing the much-publicized Vandicar Drain in Sumpter Township. Originally estimated at $60,000

(in 1984) it grew to $192,000 a year later and today the maintenance project is anticipated to cost at least $232,000 with another 20 percent of the project still unaccounted for.

Wayne County executive nominee Edward McNamara, commenting on the Redford project delays, said this week it "isn't in Redford's best interest to learn after the fact that they had a surplus of at one time of nearly $2 million . . . It's ridiculous to have a project (continue over time) and to have nothing visible."

McNamara said that it was incumbent on Youngblood's office to have kept the local officials informed each year of the amount of money set aside in those drain accounts. BECAUSE OF a lack of accountability, Livonia assumed responsibility over its own drainage system in the 1960s, he said. He said Livonia now maintains its own drains, selecting its own contractors and consultants for maintenance and expansion projects and keeping a close eye on fund balances.

McNamara says it's common to see surplus develop in drainage accounts after an assessment has been levied, but it is unusual for money to accumulate unused, or unspent.

"We use it (fund balances) to either offset our tax bills or to finance new projects," he said.

"This is our money, our town and we wanted to decide the person to do the job," McNamara added.

Lucas, Dole say national drug act needed

By Tim Richard staff writer

Don't be in a rush to pass an Oakland County anti-drug paraphernalia ordinance, William Lucas and Robert Dole advised.

"The problem is on a national scale," said Lucas, the Republican candidate for governor and a former Wayne County sheriff, policeman and FBI official.

"I'm reluctant to see controls on a local and state scale when it's so easy (for drug dealers and users) to cross borders," Lucas said in a Bloomfield Township appearance Monday night.

"I HADN'T thought about it, but there's a great deal to be said for uniformity," agreed Dole, a county prosecutor in Kansas before he went to Washington and rose to Senate majority leader.

They appeared at a Republican fund-raiser in the home of Gerri Swormstedt, staging a news conference in front of the family fireplace.

It occurred only hours after the general government committee of the Oakland County Board of Commissioners decided 5-2 to report out favorably a Democratic-proposed

If approved by the full board and signed by Gov. James J. Blanchard, it would ban and punish the general sale of hypodermic syringes and "hash" pipes.

THE BIG argument was whether the county should act or wait for the Michigan Legislature to pass a similar measure covering the entire state.

Lucas and Dole were saying that even the state was too small a unit to try to stop the sale of drug paraphernalia. Moreover, one of the legal argument used against such local ordinances has been that drug paraphernalia are sold in interstate commerce — a topic only the U.S. Congress has constitutional power to regulate.

Commissioner James Doyon, D-Madison Heights, a co-sponsor of the measure, was all for Oakland showing "leadership" and prodding the state to act.

Commissioner Betty Fortino, D-Waterford, another co-sponsor, added, "You have no way of knowing whether the state will do it." A state law would supersede local ordinances.

Commissioner Larry Pernick, D-Southfield, chairman of the Democratic caucus, said an ordinance "sends out a message. Drug abuse is not acceptable."

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN John Olsen, R-Huntington Woods, voted no, arguing that an ordinance couldn't become effective until 60 days after it's signed by the governor. "A state law can be enacted faster," he said.

Supporting the ordinance were Democrats Pernick, Dennis Aaron of Oak Park, Ruel McPherson of Hazel Park, and Republicans Page of Birmingham and Joseph Calandro of Novi.

Opposed were Olsen and Richard Wilcox, R-Ortonville, chairman of the full county board.

Five new commissioners - including one from the 10th District which includes the Livonia, Plymouth and Northville area - will be elected to the Wayne County Board of Commissioners on Nov. 4.

There are no serious contests in the 11th (includes Canton) and 12th districts (includes Garden City and Westland) which have incumbent office-holders seeking re-election.

Mary Dumas, the 10th District's commissioner for the past 14 years and the board's sole Republican, is not seeking re-election.

The race in the 10th District pits Northville Township Supervisor Su-san Heintz, a Republican, against Democratic challenger John Kopka. HEINTZ, 38, is endorsed by statewide and local Republicans, including outgoing County Executive William Lucas. She favored to win in the 10th District which has voted overwhelmingly for Republican candidates in recent years.

Kopka, 55, a Livonia resident, is a self-described conservative Democrat. A U.S. Air Force veteran, he works as a lab technician for Eaton Research Corp. in Southfield.

The School of Engineering at the University of Michigan-Dearborn has created a new master's degree program in manufacturing systems engineering.

The program will educate the professionals who will be designing, building, operating and managing competitive production systems, administrators say.

Practicing engineers from industry, and some fresh-out graduates, will pursue 36 credit hours in predominantly evening class-

"THIS CURRICULUM is aimed at factories of the 1990s," said William Spurgeon, engineering and mechanical engineering.

Structured plant tours, guest lectures by industry experts, and the wealth of experience in the student body constitute a major asset, Spurgeon said.

'Evening courses, careful scheduling, innovative teaching and learning methods, and a selective admissions policy make it possible for students to complete this highly demanding program while maintaining both productivity at work and a congenial family life," Spurgeon said.

CLASSES AND labs will use UM-D's $1.8 million, privately funded computer-aided design/ computer-aided manufacturing (CAD/CAM) laboratory.

Additionally, UM-D will offer M.S.E. courses at a second location, in the northern suburbs.

Information on the new manufacturing systems engineering degree program is available by calling the School of Engineering at

Elaine Kissel, Ph.D. Clinical Hypnologist

- HOW IT WORKS -

Elaine has created highly sophisticated and effective methods that reveal the source of your problem; and the techniques to eliminate them for good. Using your personal psychic profile, she designs a process exclusively for you through which you develop the kind of control that is natural, easy and comfortable. No more struggling, no more conflict about yourself and your behavior. The formula for your individualized hypnotherapy program is based on Elaine's evaluation of your problem and personal needs. The two hour process of determining what kind of hypnosis, how much and for how long, and what other processes may be necessary for your success includes an in-person interview with Elaine.

Dr. Kissel's hypnotherapy is for individuals serious about making permanent change. No one shot, group, or "canned" hypnosis. Evaluation appointments are by pre-paid reservation only. Use credit card over the phone.

Roll Call Report

How lobbies rate congressmen

cause a typical rating is based on a small fraction of the hundreds of record votes that occur annually in Another objection is that the comparatively few issues selected for each report card are picked on an arbitrary or even whimsical basis. And there is also the gripe that the groups doing the rating are too narrow-minded to acknowledge there usually is more than one "right" side to a given issue. But an authoritative study by the House Republican Research Group concluded that the ratings "cast no light on a member's responsivenes to his constitutents, integrity in his political work, or ability in the legislative forum — qualities all essential to a good congressman."

Still, the report cards can prove instructive to constituents who approach them warily and use them as one of several criteria for evaluating congressional candidates on the Nov.

Here is how a sampling of groups on the political left, middle ground and right rate Observer & Eccentric area U.S. representatives (on scales of zero to 100):

AFL-CIO, the most powerful labor lobby, its rating covers 1986 votes in

• Democrats: Dennis Hertel of Harper Woods, Sander Levin of Southfield, and William Ford of Taylor - all 100.

• Republicans: Carl Pursell of Plymouth, 36; William Broomfield of Birmingham, zero.

NATIONAL EDUCATION Association, which favors a strong federal role in public education (1985 ratings):

100: Levin. 83. e Republicans: Pursell, 40;

Broomfield, 33.

AMERICAN CONSERVATIVE Union, a respected advocate of conservatism (1985 ratings):

• Democrats: Hertel, 14; Ford, 5; • Republicans: Pursell, 71; Broomfield, 85.

NATIONAL TAXPAYERS Union, a centrist goup which compiles the most comprehensive and probably least-biased rating. It tracks every vote in which more or less federal spending is at stake. "We feel a score of. . . 61 percent or higher in the House is a good score," it says.

Clouds of war shadow lives of Detroiters

Early on a windy March morning in 1754 Jean Cuillerier dit Beaubien made haste to meet his brother Antoine at Campau's store. There was trouble ahead and they both knew it.

As Jean strode hurriedly across the family's ribbon farm toward the fort he thought of Antoine's trip with Celeron a few years before, and he wondered if he could get him to go again. Probably not. After all he was already 58, or was it 57? (Antoine Beaubien was born at Montreal, March 22, 1697. The Beaubien farm was the second ribbon strip east of the Fort. It occupied part of what is Beaubien St. today, and extended as far north as Harper Avenue).

Jean made a brief stop at Ste. Anne's and then hurried across the street to Campau's store. An adventurous, young Jacques Campau greeted him at the door. Around a wine barrel in the back room was Antoine and his good friend, Jacques Godfroy. They were talking up a storm. Their plans for the British were morbid, to say the least.

Jean tried to interest them in going with the d'troit militia on a planned invasion of the Fort at the Forks. (Pittsburg). Antoine pleaded "rhumatisme and goutte" (rheumatism and gout) which was true enough. He had not been to well since the Celeron trip.

Godfroy said it would be too much of a hardship for his large family if he went. So they were off the hook. That left young Campau who would go almost anywhere at any time, and on a moment's notice. But oddly enough, this time young Jacques said he was needed at the store. He claimed it was "necessiteux."

"So, that is it. You'll miss the world and all its wonderful adventures while you stay here, a boutiquier counting small change, you silgoose, "Jean said. "Ah, well, so be it. Half the fort is going with me. I'll not be alone.'

Just at this moment Campau's uncle, and the shop's owner walked in, evidently aware of what the conversation had been about. He urged young Jacques to "deserteur" if he wanted to. "Aller de l'avant." (Go ahead.) So ahead Jacques went and with all due speed. In fact, he was halfway out the door while his uncle

RECRUITMENT in d'Etroit in the 1750s was very informal except for the trained militia at the fort and for the few who enlisted.

While Jean de Baubien and Jacques Campau went off to war 56year-old Antoine and his friend Jacques Godfroy joined in supporting the home guard, a skeleton crew left to guard the fort and protect the people. No one could ever accuse them of disloyalty to the French

As a matter of recorded fact, both Jacques Godfroy and Antoine Beaubien stood by their guns, literally and figuratively, long after the British arrived to take over Detroit.

In 1763, 10 years after today's threatened war with the British, Godfroy and Antoine Beaubien openly took sides with Chief Pontiac against some of their own French people. The truth is that some of Pontiac's war strategy was planned in Beaubien's house.

Detroit was a very divided town.

There were many who supported the Indians and did what they could to promote Pontiac and his cause. Others seemed to be faithful to their forced oath of allegiance to King George II.

Among the "faithful" was Robert Navarre, the royal scrivener and notary, whose long service to the King of France may not have been entirely forsaken. Others were Francois and Jacques Duperon Baby who performed valuable service at great risk to their own lives. They took food to the starving fort dwellers at night.) Others were the interpreters, Pierre La Butte and Jacques St. Martin who acted as double agents. (It is a hair-raising story but it does not sequentially belong in Tonquish Tales at this time. Look for it at a later date.)

Meanwhile, back in Alexandria, Va., George Washington was having his own troubles with recruitment.

Dramatic Savings on dramatic styling. Perfect description for this of the Virginia Militia, 21-year-old Washington and two lieutenants are signing up almost any able-bodied man they can induct into carrying a gun on the long hike over the mountain to the forks of the Ohio. Their recruitment office is the back room at Gadsby's Tavern. (See Tonquish Tales, Oct. 16, for the story of Gads-

THERE WAS little enthusiasm in the Virginia House of Burgesses for an expedition to Ohio.

Some of them thought it was a scheme to improve the fortunes of a private company — meaning the Ohio Company, of course. A few actually admitted they they thought the region really belonged to France. The debate raged for days.

The governor and his friends kept harranging the assembly about the dire consequences of failure to prepare for war. An argument that had gone on for almost a month was finally ended when Governor Dinwiddie was granted 10,000 for "protecting our frontiers." There were so many strings attached to the measure that the governor prolonged the General Assembly Feb. 23, 1754. "That's it, boys, you may go home

The men who volunteered for duty were encouraged by promises of a gift of land upon completion of their service. A parcel of 200,000 acres would be set aside for them near the fort they were to build at the forks of the Ohio and the Monaghela. These were the glorious promises but the reality was something else. The men received eight pence a day (about eight cents), their food and some of their clothing. An infantry man was allowed the equivalent of 15 pounds of tobacco per diem. (In current money the value of that was about eight cents.)

ism exceeded their greed. Many men in this ragtag army had nothing to look forward too but the hope of someday having a farm of their own. So that is how George Washington came to Gadsby's tavern — with high hopes, little money, and a bag of promises.

Washington himself was underpaid and overworked. He had been ommissioned a major, and he actively sought the rank of lieutenant colonel which paid 15 shillings a day. A shilling was worth roughly 12 cents. In addition, the General Assembly had voted him 50 pounds to "testify" to their approval of his conduct on his journey to the French forts on the Ohio. George considered this reward totally "inadequate." In all such matters young Washington was both acquisitive and thrifty. He knew his own worth and was not modest in making demands.

For a more detailed account of Washington's pursuit of his own as well as the country's interests history buffs are advised to read Douglas Southall Freeman's excellent "George Washington — a Biography." This book is so replete with data and detail that it is virtually a prime source. Another excellent book is Thomas Flexner's Biography of Washington. If you are looking for a lighter touch I found Marvin Kitman's "George Washington's Ex-pense Account" both richly historical and riotously funny. Speaking of the lighter touch, don't forget the next volume of Tonquish Tales will be available right after Thanksgiving in most area book stores including The Little Professor-on-the-Park, and Bookstall-on-the Main.

The next chapter of Tonquish Tales will describe the battle at Fort Necessity and the first shot in the French and Indian War.

Ex-Plymouthite pens first novel

A former Plymouth resident, Milly Lambe, recently published her first book, "Don't Call Me Lizzie," a member of the Plymouth Theate bittersweet story of a girl's coming of age during the World War II

The story follows Lizabeth Ann Collins from high school, where her father is the principal, to her training in the U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps. Lambe's book depicts the girl's struggle to be loyal to her father, and still fit in with her classmates.

Battles and other war remembrances weave through the story along with the fun of high school dances and the pain of youth. The book's tone is light but there still are reminders of sadness when some of Lizabeth's classmates don't make it back from the war.

"The book is semi-autobiographical," said the soft-spoken author. "My mother was a Latin teacher. You know how popular she was, and how popular I was when grades came out."

The nostalgic book shows a glimpse of life at its best . . . even at the worst of times

WHILE IN Plymouth from 1957 to 1962, Lambe was a vice president and president of the Newcomers, a Brownie leader, a Scout Leader at Farrand School, and a Girl Scout

Woman bites attacker

A 34-year-old woman was beaten and her purse was stolen during the early morning hours Saturday at her residence on Wintercrest, according to a report filed with Plymouth Township Police.

about 4 a.m. as she was about to enter the house upon returning from work, police said.

The woman described her attacker as a white male, 5 feet 6 inches tall, with a slim build, dark hair and a mustache. He was wearing dark clothing.

nowhere, police said. The man hit her with his fire gashing her left temple, the victim said. He grabbed her purse and fled to a nearby car — an elder model Chevrolet, possibly a Nova — aft er she bit him on the hand.

The woman was treated at Oakwood Hospital-Canton Center.

The purse contained endorsed payroll checks, bank books and bank cards, police reported.

Reader shares warm feeling to see the old stately home. It also hurt a whole lot to see child memories

To the editor:

It was wet, cold, damp and I had a hard time fighting back the tears as my husband and I walked your streets of Plymouth Saturday at noon. You see I lived in your lovely town from about 1940-1945 and I came back Saturday to bury the past so it can no longer smother me.

I am an adult child of two alcoholic parents - a wounded child, who is now slowly becoming a healing adult. My parents fought a lot, drank a lot and moved around a lot. I attended grade school in Plymouth and lived on Fairground St.

Harry and Emily lived next door to us with their four or five kids and they were my shelter in a time of storm. I would often go over there to get away from the fighting that went on in my home whenever mom and dad got drunk. That was the era when neighbors cared about each other.

I walked through the Mayflower Hotel, it was lovely. We stayed there for a while until dad found a house for us. You noticed I said house, not home. I never had a real home as a child. I was from a dysfuntional family. The staircase in the Mayflower is still there.

I walked past the old Penn. I have some happy memories of Saturday matinees there. The old big white house several doors away, the one that is peeling and has the large green brick wall in front, also means something to me. I walked past it twice a day on my way to school. It represented a normal family for me. I often wondered who lived there and if they were as happy as I was miserable. I never saw anyone go in or out, but it represented goodness to me. It was a beautiful white home and well kept back then.

I went to the Wicker Warehouse store to buy a little wicker baby carriage, so I would have something from Plymouth and from my past. I had a carriage like that when I was a little girl. It represents a lost childhood to me. The clerk told me the old white house would soon be torn down to make apartments in that area. How very sad that one of Plymouth's most lovely landmarks will soon be gone. I'm so happy I came back before it was gone. It brought back some good memories and gave me a

it in that condition

I was 53 years old this month and I'm just now beginning to have my memories healed. I've become the woman who found herself and it feels so good.

Several months ago I helped start a group here called ACoA, Adult Children of Alcoholic Parents. It's part of the Al Anon Family Groups, or part of the AA programs. It's been most successful and people are having healing of memories taking place at each meeting.

I would just like to thank the community of Plymouth for being there for this little wounded child who hurt so much growing up. The neighbors who reached out to me, my girl friends in school, my teachers they all reached out in love and compassion. Many times I would have meals in homes of other people and slowly began to know what a real normal family is. It was the love and the caring that you gave to me that kept my life from becoming completely shattered. It kept my spirits from becoming crushed.

I can never repay those people, but my life is better because of them. I can now reach out to others and feel their pain and be there for them. I guess it's called passing it on. Writing this letter has made me feel better about the past and thankful that there are caring, loving people out there.

Thank you Plymouth for being there for this little wounded girl. Sorry it's 40 some years late in coming, but it's surely from the heart. Dorothy C. Arens.

Reader comments on Baker-Pursell

Having seen the televised debate on Oct. 21 between 2nd District congressional candidates Carl Pursell and Dean Baker, I feel compelled to help clear up some confusion about an issue we should all be paying close attention to.

If each candidate's position on this issue is not clearly understood by the public, voters of the 2nd District may unknowingly vote in favor of further increases in the incidence of physical abuse, alcoholism and suicide in Michigan's rural sector.

I am referring of course to the farm crisis. Farm price supports are currently set so low that farmers are being paid less than what it cost them to produce. They are forced to plant more so that they break even when the harvest is in. Unable to make payments on loans they took out during a period of low interest rates and high land values in the 1970s, many farmers are selling their herds to the government while others have their land pulled from under their feet by the banks.

Within the next several years, up to 50 percent of the district's family farms may be wiped out. Many Michigan families have recently been forced to pack up and leave farms that have been in the family

Democrats to hold rally

Gov. James Blanchard will stump for support at a political rally in Wayne Ford Civic League Hall Sat-

He will be introduced by U.S. Rep. William Ford, D-Taylor, at the rally presenting Democratic candidates on Tuesday's ballot.

The rally will be from 8:30 p.m. to midnight in the hall at 1651 Wayne Road, south of Ford. Tickets are $10.

Planning to attend are state Sen. William Faust of Westland; state Rep. Justine Barns of Westland; state Rep. William Keith of Garden City, whose district includes part of Westland; state Rep. James Kosteva of Canton Township; county Com-missioner Kay Beard of Inkster, whose district includes Garden City and Westland; Commissioner Milton Mack, whose district includes Canton Township; and circuit court candidates James Rashid, Gregory Stempien, and John Murphy.

Ford will introduce Blanchard at the Westland rally as well as the one planned for 8 p.m. to midnight at the Taylor Democratic Club, on Wick Road east of Telegraph.

At each rally, food arranged by the 15th District Young Dems will be served. The disc jockey for the night will be Dan Featherstone.

100 years.

Pressures placed on these families as a result of inappropriate U.S. agricultural policies are creating emotional hardships, which ultimately lead to child and spouse abuse, chemical abuse and, in extreme cases, suicide. Heavy rains in Michigan's Saginaw Valley should be viewed only as the last straw before five farmers in that area took their lives in recent months.

The urgency of the situation in the rural sector demands that we know exactly whether our political candidates will raise farm prices so that family farmers can make a living, or whether they will ignore the problem and promote the expansion of big agribusiness.

Carl Pursell insists that he "understands the small family farmer," but his voting record demonstrates that he does not care. For example, Pursell has voted against mandatory production controls and various conservation measures and in favor of huge subsidies to absentee-owned, tax-sheltered farms and to multinational grain distribution corporawhich was recently introduced in Congress. This legislation, passed, would raise farm prices so that farmers could meet the cost of production, it would create mandatory production controls to help reduce the absurd oversupply of grain presently rotting in grain elevators throughout the country, and it would place a moratorium on farm foreclo-

For this issue there is no middle ground - one either votes for legislation that would save the family farm, or one votes for legislation that favors tax-sheltered farms, for the Save the Family Farm Act, grain and chemical companies. Pursell's votes have been for big business, and he says he will not support the Save the Family Farm Act. Dean Baker says he will support the Act, and has met with farmers in the district to assure them that he would vote for it.

I hope I have cleared the confusion on this issue because I think voters need to know whether their vote will only exacerbate the suffering in the rural sector, or whether it will help to allieviate it.

Plymouth-Canton band maintains 3rd year state chmapionship title

The Plymouth Centennial Educa-tional Park Marching Band won the Michigan Competing Band Directors State Championship Trophy for the third straight year Saturday evening.

Some 27 bands from around the state competed during the daylong show held at the CEP stadium. An estimated 10,000 people attended the show in spite of the rainy weather.

FOLLOWING THE preliminary competition held during the day, the top 12 bands competed in the evening for the championship trophy.

Bands in competition were Montrose, Petoskey, Dondero, Linden, Eisenhower, Southfield, Wyorning Park, Flushing, Southgate Anderson, Lakeview, Durand and Plymouth Centennial Educational Park.

The CEP band, under the direction of James R. Griffith, also received trophies for best color guard, best winds, best marching and maneuvering, best field commanders and best percussion. This was the first time president, Linda Gasparott; vice the percussion section had received best percussion award at the state championship show.

The Michigan Competing Band Directors Association determines the location for the state competition. This is the fifth year in a row that the CEP has been chosen, Griffith said, because of the excellent facility and the efficient way the Plymouth-Canton Music Boosters have organized past shows.

Officers for the booster group are:

president, Gordon Kisabeth; secretary, Dawn Moneypenny; co-treasurers, John Hill and Don Kaspzyk; members at-large, L. John Miller and Chuck Rowe; and past presidents, Jerry Hotchkin and Dave Art-

The band will travel to Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo Saturday, Nov. 1, for the W.M.U. Cavalcade of Bands and will go to Indianapolis Nov. 6 and 7 for the Marching Bands of America National

Many voters ignore non-partisan ballot

By Tedd Schneider staff writer

Area city clerks are attempting to fight voter indifference to judicial elections by drawing attention to the non-partisan part of the ballot in the Nov. 4 general election.

Clerks say that while voters generally vote for candidates in the top partisan races such as governor, fewer and fewer voters are selecting judical candidates.

Wayne County Clerk James Killeen said he expects the "voter dropoff" to be even more of a factor this year in the race for Michigan Supreme Court because of the number of candidates.

With 24 candidates vying for for two seats on the bench, many voters may well decide it is just too confusing and not vote for any supreme court candidates, Kileen said.

Locally, city clerks are making an effort to make voters aware of the non-partisan portion of the ballot.

"We're instructing precinct chairmen to call it to the voters' attention," said Livonia City Clerk Robert

Nash said a number of posters have been put up in city buildings urging voters to vote the entire ballot, including the judicial races. The posters do not mention the judicial candidates by name.

NASH said city employees have been reminding absentee voters about the judcial races - Supreme Court and Wayne Circuit Court when they fill out their ballot appli-

Statistics compiled by the county clerk's office for the last two elections indicate the extent of "voter

In 1982, 52 percent of the 229,101 registered voters living in the six Observer cities and townships voted for governor, but only 40 percent voted in the judicial races.

The 1984 election figures show even more of a drop-off between those voting for governor and those voting in judicial races.

In Westland, for example, only 38 percent of those who voted, voted for state Supreme Court candidates and less than two-thirds of the city's registered voters showed up at the polls.

With 24 candidates seeking two seats, Killeen said, there is also more tendency by punch-card voters to vote for too many candidates thereby invalidating their ballots.

SOME CITY officials feel that the state should replace the present method of electing judges with a method whereby the governor would appoint judges.

Garden City City Clerk/Treasurer Ron Showalter said a system like the one recently adopted by the state of Missouri could work in Michigan.

In Missouri, the governor appoints a small number of nominees to the ballot and the judges subequently "run" for re-election. The voter has a chance to say whether he approves or disapproves of the judge getting a new term.

Adopting the "Missouri Plan" or a similar system would require a amendment to the Michigan consti-

City officials say another possibility talked about - moving the judicial elections to a different date than the general election of partisan offices - could result in an even lower turnout and less representative re-

Tuition plan: Engler yes, Lucas maybe no

By Tim Richard staff writer

Republican William Lucas and running mate Colleen Engler disagree between themselves on Gov. James Blanchard's plan for a staterun tuition investment program.

"I don't dislike the concept," said Engler, the lieutenant governor candidate who voted for it as a state representative.

Lucas, the gubernatorial nominee, had knocked it in last week's debate before the Economic Club of Detroit. Blanchard chided him for being out of tune with Engler.

But the top of the GOP ticket agrees that Democrat Blanchard is wrong in high-pressuring state col-leges to hold down student tuitions. And if elected Nov. 4, their administration would consider giving twoyear colleges state construction

The GOP ticket met the press during a party fund-raiser Monday evening in Bloomfield Township.

BLANCHARD'S TUITION investment plant would allow parents of young children to invest a lump sum with the state which, at compound interest, would be guaranteed to cover four years of tuition at a state college or university. State officials estimate that a child born in 1986 would need $20,000 to cover four years of state college tuition when he/she reaches 18.

"The reason I voted for it," said Engler, a fourth-term state representative from Mount Pleasant. was to get it into the Senate and substitute with a better bill.

Lucas compared an investment in a state-run tuition plan to "the Her second concern is how the Zilwaukee Bridge and the People program would be limited to 5,000 Mover" - two construction projects youngsters - "how would it be dethat are still incomplete.

Lucas had no comment on Engler's analysis of the bill.

Blanchard was wrong in using state appropriations to force the 15 colleges and universities to hold the line on tuition increases.

'You don't impose an artificial level of tuitions," Lucas said. "Trustees are elected and answerable to the people."

He said capping tuition can't work because colleges can raise more revenue from students by increasing laboratory and computer use fees.

down tuitions will lose students.

"I don't go along with the political pressure," Engler added. "It's a direct violation of the Michigan Constitution. The major universities are nity colleges planning to seek state aid for construction.

Michigan's 29 community colleges must go to properly taxpayers for construction money although the state provides about one-third of their operating revenues

"In the past," said Engler, "property tax revenue has been enough for construction. But they (community colleges) will probably have to be added" to the state budget.

Lucas nodded agreement.

WELDON YEAGER, the GOP secretary of state candidate, said his top priority, if he defeats longtime incumbent Richard Austin, would be to repeal state laws providing state matching funds for the political campaigns of gubernatorial candidates.

"Matching funds got more people into trouble that it's worth," said Yeager - a reference to Lucas' losing fight with the state over 1985 travel expenses.

An early Lucas supporter, Yeager is a Birmingham insurance executive. He has been a Constitutional Convention delegate, state representative and West Bloomfield Township trustee.

will go to the polls to vote on congressional, gubernatorial, statewide and county positions. While much of the radio-TV coverage has centered on the more glamorous governor's campaign, there remain important decisions to make in other races that will affect our community. One of these is the choice for U.S. Congress in the 2nd District, which includes Livonia, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Northville and Northville Township.

Incumbent U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, is being challenged by Democrat Dean Baker, a graduate student/ instructor at the University of Michigan. While articulate on other issues, Baker's primary concern continues to be the fate of the contra rebels in Nicaragua. The question to ask is who can best represent residents of the 2nd District once, and if, the contras emerge victorious. When that question is asked, we do not see Baker as congressional material.

This newspaper does, however, view Pursell as congressional material because he has established that while serving. Given a known quantity who has performed, we do not hesitate to endorse Carl Pursell as the best qualified choice for the 2nd District.

Baker contends Pursell is not seen often enough in Ann Arbor and does not serve constituents adequately in Ann Arbor and Jackson. That may be. The N TUESDAY, Nov. 4, residents Observer does know, though, that the congressman does serve constituents and often is seen in the Livonia-Plymouth-Northville area of the district.

Pursell has worked hard to form a bipartisan regional consortium of midwest states to lure more federal dollars to this area. In that effort he has had a role in high tech industries locating in the Ann Arbor area and, to some extent,

He also has been a champion for small businesses and has been a steady advocote of getting the federal deficit under control. On this subject, he is working for what is desired by most voters in the 2nd District. On the other hand, he has not been aggressive enough in calling for cuts in the defense budget to help balance the budget - a stance many in the district would like to see him take.

But on the whole, Pursell keeps in touch with voters and tries to represent his district - a challenge in a diverse district, which includes large farming areas, sprawling suburban communities, and diverse campus towns such as Ann Arbor, Spring Arbor and Hillsdale.

Nationally he has aligned himself with George Bush, which will give him influence with party leaders as well as within the halls of Congress and in the midwest. We urge our readers to reelect Carl Pursell to U.S. Congress in the 2nd District.

State ballot issues

Approve Proposal C, reject A, B

as the failed attempt to put capital punishment before voters, generated more publicity than those proposed constitutional amendments that will be decided

Proposals A, B and C are dull. But voters should still feel obligated to make an informed choice. The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers recommend a no vote on proposals A and B and a yes vote on C. Here's why:

suggest that the state Legislature hasn't proved it can take care of anything, so why give it the opportunity to mess with the state library system? Fact is, responsibility for the library system was shifted from the executive to the legislative branch back in 1983.

Proposal A would etch today's pracwhy we oppose it. Control of the library is properly handled by the statutory process, not by fiddling with the consti-

It's tempting to tion by wining and dining a few members of the joint committee? It was the joint committee, for instance, that earlier this year obstructed much-needed environmental legislation.

A proposal similar to Proposal B was shot down by voters two years ago. It can only be assumed that it is back on the ballot because some lawmakers astice into constitutional granite; that's sumed it could slide unnoticed past a voting public more interested in other races.

That shouldn't happen. This is a bad amendment and it should be defeated.

PROPOSAL C lacks the significance and should be emphatically turned of most constitutional changes but it is tutional amendment is the only way to correct an unexplained flaw in the way top elected officials are paid.

The State Officers Compensation Commission meets every two years to set the wages for most elected officals. For some reason, the pay for the attorney general and the secretary of state is set by the Legislature. Proposal C puts all wage-setting in the hands of the compensation commission.

Taking the attorney general and secretary of state salary decisions away from the Legislature reduces the chance of political games, especially since two longtime officeholders, Frank Kelley and Dick Austin, will someday be stepping down.

The current system produces peculiar circumstances. In 1983, the Legislature set the salaries of the attorney general and the secretary of state at a level $5,000 higher than that of the governor.

Such inconsistency is less likely if the salary compensation commission sets wages for all elected officials. Sometimes voters must protect lawmakers from themselves. This is one of those

We urge a yes vote on Proposal C, but a no vote on A and B.

McNamara, Heintz best county choices

ON TUESDAY, voters will elect a new county executive and a new member of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners from the 10th District.

Elizabeth Rickard,

The many joys of autumn

TO POETS, fall is a season associated with withering, slowing down, dying. Days are shorter and colder. Kids hate fall because it means school.

There are a lot of bright sides to fall. No more mosquitoes. Remember how those pesky bugs descended on you at twilight and nailed your arms even at mid-day? Remember the harassment, the lumps, the itching? Well, in the good ol' fall, the mosquitoes are gone, along with the gnats and flies.

THOSE DEMENTED morons who let rock music blast from their car stereos are more subdued in fall. They have to roll up their windows, and you have your house windows shut, so their million-decibel blatherings can't reach vou any more.

You can go outdoors on a crisp fall day without sweating and staining your fresh shirt collar.

Those of us who feel socially or economically compelled to wear suits are comfortable again in legislative halls, courtrooms, at weddings.

You can go indoors to an air-conditioned store without being chilled after broiling in the summer's heat.

No more lawn cutting. No more bags of grass to lug to curbside. No more fertilizing. No more watering and watching the water evaporate in the dry summer heat.

No more weeds to be allergic to. Tax bills aren't out until Dec. 1, and you don't have to pay until mid-February, so that worry is off for awhile. Schools time their millage elections for March and April, so no need to worry about them in fall. The candidates are out campaigning in fall, and it's fun to pick out the ones you're going to get even with - some by voting-against them, some by voting for them to get them out of town.

I HAVE a favorite place in fall. There's a community college campus a mile from my house, and at dusk, the Canada geese fly over, from northeast to southwest. Sometimes there are only four in a flock, other times dozens.

Wave after wave of Canada geese sometimes 200 in a half-hour - fly your whole season.

over and disappear toward a pond a couple of miles off. The little fellows who swam between their proud, watchful parents in spring are fully grown now. Some instinct will tell them where in the southland to fly, although a few will stay here all winter.

Many summer birds are gone, but some of the most colorful seed-eaters are more visible than ever with less foliage to block our view. Blue jays are loud and bossy around the feeding station, but they sure are elegant. Cardinals will be with us all year. The chickadees, which we hardly saw in summer, are visiting daily. Red-winged blackbirds will go south soon, but we have them for awhile, now that they've left their swampy nesting grounds.

This has been a wet fall, and so the maples and other hardwoods are more colorful than usual. I've been able to put in some time on two of my favorite rivers — the Huron in Livingston County and the AuSable in Iosco County. Minute after minute, hour after hour, of glorious sunshine ignited the trees in fiery golds, oranges, reds.

Right in the middle of a Saturday on the AuSable, an adult bald eagle flew overhead. Identification was positive and absolute. A sight like that can make

Voting by mail is ballot box bonanza

WELL, THAT'S done. Casting a ballot in Michigan's Nov. 4 general election, I mean. At our hous 2, the missus and I did it a week ahead of time.

It was easy. Esther Hulsing, the elected clerk of the township in which we live, had sent each of us separate envelopes including an easy-to-read instruction ballot listing offices, candidates and propositions; the actual ballot which is a data processing card mounted on foam backing; a punching tool to poke holes in that card indicating choices; and a return mailing envelope.

All that was left was to seal the envelopes, affix proper postage, and drop em in a mail box. No fuss. No standing in line. No worry as to whether it will rain Tuesday.

SOME OF YOU out there in voterville have done it the same way because you, too, are qualified under the absentee voting system. Extending the voteby-mail privilege to everyone is too intelligent an idea for most bureaucrats to understand, although I'm about to cite some exceptions.

through bifocals Fred DeLano

Heaven forbid that those at the public trough in Michigan are behind the times, but consider these experiences in Montana, Kansas, Oregon and Missouri: Election Administration Reports, published in Washington, D.C., relates that an all-mail ballot law in Montana was approved last year by a vote of 97-1 in the House of Representatives and by a unanimous 48-0 vote in the Senate. It is designed only for smaller jurisdictions, but at least it's a start.

Jean Johnson, Montana's director of special projects in the Secretary of State's office, was quoted as saying cities using the mail ballot procedure "would be certain to increase participation while reducing election costs."

By thumping majorities of 97-3 in the House and 42-7 in the Senate, Montana also adopted another interesting piece of legislation, an "anti-exit poll" bill.

THE LAW PROHIBITS anyone from asking how a voter marked the ballot for candidates or issues within 200 feet of a polling place.

As of last November, there had been 20 all-mail ballot elections previously. In all but one instance the turnout was 70 percent or better.

In the city of Wichita and the surrounding county, a measure to impose a county sales tax had been defeated five times. On the sixth try, the state granted approval for an all-mail special election as a means of increasing participation.

A ballot was mailed to every registered voter and the return was about three times greater than had ever voted there on a special election question at the polls. The tax was approved, 61,030 votes to 50,616.

In Multnomah County, Oregon, of which Portland is the largest city, there are about 330,000 registered voters. A study of election expenses and voter turnout concluded that all-mail ballot elections lead to "heightened integrity, greater access to the franchise, and obvious economies in tax dollar expenditures.

The Multnomah director of elections said voter response had been positive with comments indicating an increased awareness, ease of voting, and an ample opportunity to study the issues before casting a ballot.

Missouri has become the latest state to allow an election to be conducted by mail, but I have no reports of success or

The difference between the cases cited and normal elections is, of course, that in these instances polling places weren't open at all. It wasn't an option situation; an elector either voted by mail or didn't vote, thus reducing con-fusion at many schools and fire halls but depriving election workers a day away from home in their dedication to civic duty.

I like the way my friend Esther puts it: "I think voting by mail is an idea whose time is coming, but old habits die hard and there are a lot of obstacles to overcome. Mostly bureaucratic iner-

I cannot help but notice the differences in the portrayals of the Canton Township sewer situation, which appear in the Detroit Free Press and your newspaper. From the Observer I gather that there is some sort of legal problem, cost problems, possible lawsuits, etc.

From the Detroit Free Press I have learned that there is toilet paper being hosed off parking lots after the 6 to 8 inches of water and raw sewage have drained away. What a considerate fire department!

Star Wars will risk war threat

To the editor:

The outcome of the Iceland summit is a very disturbing one. President Reagan continues to hang onto the false security of Star Wars. It can be underflown, overwhelmed and out-foxed.

While Star Wars systems could not be trusted to stop tens of thousands of missiles and decoys, they would be much more effective against a smaller number of retaliating missles left after a massive first-strike. In planning military strategy, that is how the Soviets assume the real intention of the system.

Star Wars will increase fears of an offensive first-strike and raise the level of U.S. and Soviet tension, greatly increasing our risk of nuclear war.

> Carol Carpinelli, Plymouth

Concerned about offensive and defensive weapons, no Star Wars plan

Let me add my concern to the protest against Reagan's rigid stand on S.D.I.

Star Wars cannot be trusted as a perfect defense - it can only increase fears of an offensive first strike.

Because it will increase feelings of insecurity it will escalate the arms race - not stop it.

Economically, if pursued further, S.D.I. will cost the taxpayer $1-2 trillion just to get it started to the point of initial deployment. Meanwhile other govenment projects to meet the needs of people will suffer and developing technology to meet those needs will be set back.

It is too late for any combination of matter how powerful, to make us secure from the other side's bombs. We must back off this arm's build-up or expect mutual destruction.

Creativity gets a boost

By Julie Brown staff writer

Symmetry isn't everything in art. Sometimes it's the last thing in the world an artist wants.

Being creative and trying new things, on the other hand, is just what an artist wants to do "Anything is a good idea, with trying to see what happens," said Shanna Robinson, a graduate assistant at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti. It's only by trying new ideas that artists can see what will happen, she said.

Robinson is an Ypsilanti resident and an art student at EMU, where she is pursuing a master of fine arts degree in textiles and fibers. She spent one afternoon last week teaching stamp printing to a class of students in a fine arts class.

The fine arts series for those age 12 and older is one of several Plymouth Community Arts Council classes being held this fall.

Four instructors are teaching the fine arts series, each one handling a different art medium. The class meets Wednesday afternoons at Plymouth Salem High School.

DURING THE session last week. the students used modeling clay to create stamps. Materials such as wire mesh and Lego blocks were used to give the stamps a design. The students also cut designs into stamps, using erasers and even potatoes. In addition to the materials used in the class, wood and linoleum blocks can also be used for stamp printing, Robinson told the

The instructor reminded the students who were cutting designs in erasers and potatoes that it's always possible to cut away more but not to put back what's gone. The day's class activities were designed to help the students explore shapes and structures of repeated patterns in black and white. The following week's class session was to be used to translate a black and white design into color, to create a finished product.

During last week's session, Robinson suggested that the students think about developing a design pattern that they would like to do in color.

In addition to Robinson's teaching printmaking, students in the fine arts series work with three other instructors, spending two weeks in each area. Those instructors are Barbara Bray, watercolor painting, Toni Ivankovics, pastel drawing, and Christine Hoeprich, calligraphy. The class began in late September.

THIS IS the first time the Plymouth Community Arts Council has offered such a fine arts series.

"It's sort of a new approach," Barbara Bray said. "It seems to be working out fine.'

In addition to this fall's fine arts series, Plymouth's Theresa Ohno, a basket designer/weaver, is also conducting a PCAC class. The arts organization has announced the addition of another session of Ohno's class.

That five-week session will meet Nov. 12 through Dec. 10. Class times will be 1-3 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. Price for the basketmaking class is Registration for the session should be completed through the office of the Plymouth Community Arts Council. To register or for additional information, call 455-5260 between 9 a.m. and noon Monday through Friday.

Ghost chase keeps team on the move

special writer

RE GHOULIES, ghosties, goblins, and things that go bump in the night causing trouble at your house? Are your favorite prints spinning like whirligigs on the wall? Has your newest collector plate been decimated by some of those naughty spirits called poltergeists? Is poor Aunt Mary still fussing about in the kitchen, even though she's been dead for five years now? Take heart. Help is on the way or at least as near as your telephone. Just call the Ghostbusters.

Don't laugh. They're for real, and if you're having trouble with the above, or any other paranormal oc currences in or near your home, office, or wherever, they'll pay you a visit and do what they can.

They work for an extremely reasonable fee, too - you won't be asked to part with a dime.

Don't worry about them brandishing bazookas when they drop in, or showing up on your doorstep looking like a bunch of overzealous commandos. They dress usually in ordinary jeans and sneakers when they go out on expeditions, and the equipment they bring along is more in the line of incense, candles, holy water, tape recorder and infrared cameras.

WHO ARE these people who spend their time searching out something most of us are convinced doesn't

Well, a typical expedition might go something like this - in fact, a recent expedition did go very much says Newman, adding that only specially trained and capable Jesuit priests can handle malignant spir-

Then, they disperse to examine, on their own, each nook and corner of the house. Walls are examined for warm spots, notes are taken, tape recorders are put to work. ("You can pick up sounds with a tape recorder that can't be heard otherwise," says Newman.), and Ron Clegg goes from room to room, snapping photos wherever he or any other 'buster feels there's a need to.

Several hours later, the group slowly converges, one-by-one, in the same place, a room where each claims to have sensed a "presence" most strongly. Everybody compares notes, talks some more with the client. And then, somethings happens. Medium Betty Tibbits goes into a trance and comes up with some intriguing information.

Seems the room they had converged in was the sitting room of a woman who had lived in the farmhouse many years earlier. Seems the woman had met with a sudden and particularly unsavory death back around the urn of the century, fallpronged pitchfork out in the hay-

Seems her son, a violent drunk with a bad-guy reputation around town, discovered her body first and, thinking he'd be accused of murdering his own mother, dumped the body into a lime pit before anybody else knew she was dead. Later he told everybody she'd deserted her family and gone home to live with her mother. (Later, the story was confirmed, Newman says, through city and county records.)

A FEW MINUTES later, still in a trance, Tibbitts leads the group to the spot where the woman's body was dumped, and the group goes into action. Candles are lit, incense is burned, holy water - in a 7-Up bottle - is brought to the woman's "grave," and special prayers are

A "release" is performed, so that the woman's spirit may leave this world, and go to what Newman calls "the other side." (The great majority of entities dealt with by Newman and the group have two things in common: They have met with sudden and violent deaths and/or they have not had proper burial. Picture them as poor, muddled entities, simply wandering around, as surprised as anyone else to find themnselves dead. "You know, one minute, there you are, walking through the barn, and then, the next thing you know, people are talking about you in the past tense.")

"The woman had been dumped like garbage," she says. "That poor soul had been drifting around that place all those years, just waiting for someone to let her go."

once more - to complain that she missed her ghost.

SOME PLACES, however, the group has visited more than once. One farm near Ann Arbor seems to be practically riddled with ghosts, inside the house and out. There's even a haunted pet cemetery. "It's 110 beautifully haunted acres," Newman exults.

Recently, a murder was committed on the property. A woman's body was once interred underneath the house. And, many years ago, a man, stranded in a blizzard and unable to see that he was actually within yards of the house, froze to death in a shed out back.

On one of their visits, the group discovered "something" in the shed, although it's not clear to them, even now, what it was. Newman claims to have even spoken with the apparition at one time. "But he really didn't want much to do with me,' she says.

On the same farm, the recently murdered man was "released" by the group, as Newman stood in the shallow grave his body had been removed from and recited the proper ritualistic prayers. The woman, interred beneath the house, has not been released or seen, but has been heard several times, crying out for a child she lost, she says. No particular places in the Detroit area seem more active than others when it comes to paranormal activimeone to let her go."

An assignment to look into some activity at a cemetery on 12 Mile and Woodward didn't come up with anything, but it did reveal how even searching out spirits of the dead can have its hilarious moments.

"We had a policeman on the team once," says Newman. "Big, burly guy, weighed about 180 pounds, I'd say. But we lost him the first night we went to a cemetery!

'That was the night we found out ducks are nocturnal. Needless to say, we didn't make it 150 feet into the cemetery, and the ducks in the pond went berserk. I think I had to practically carry that guy out of the ceme-

HAS ANYONE ever been hurt on the job? "Ghosts are ethereal," says Newman. "Unless they're evil spirits, they can't hurt anyone. But they can scare you into hurting yourself," she says, adding that there have been a couple of minor injuries along the way, mostly involving investigators who were running and not watching where they were going.

The Ghostbusters are pretty philosophical about those who would find what they do, uh, peculiar.

"Oh, sure," says Newman, "There are the skeptics and those who say, 'I don't believe in ghosts - not me!' And that's OK with us. But you know what, those are the ones who never, ever want to come with us when we go out on our expeditions, looking for ghosts."

ones

MAJOR SCIENTISTS contend that the Strategic Defense Initiative (the public relations description of Star Wars) is nothing more than whistling in the dark. In fact, chasing after the illusion of its effectiveness makes it even more likely that we convince ourselves that the arms race can be safely continued.

Some years ago Albert Einstein warned that with the onset of nucle-thing that can help us play the ostrich. Perhaps that is the real appeal of Star Wars. Strategic Defense sounds so innocuous. The scientists be damned! Who could be against it and call herself or himself and American?

The illusion of truth is always easier to accept than truth itself. Illusions are predictably more palatable. That is why we maintain them. Truth calls us to the drastic change for which Mr. Einstein pleaded. When people of a free society who claim to believe in a God of peace; choose illusion over truth, that is the real tragedy. And those of us blessed with a free society cannot rest content to blame it on the leaders.

AIDS and AFRAIDS:

Education can stem hysteria, keep employers out of court

By Bill Parker staff writer

Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome - more popularly known as AIDS.

The mere mention of the disease causes panic in many people, and the possibility of working side-by-side with someone infected by it often causes instant hyster-

To stem the fear generated by the disease, information must be made available by the employer to inform the workforce of the danger, or lack of it, of working with an AIDS patient.

That was the theme of a recent management symposium on AIDS in the workplace - titled "AIDS and AFRAIDS" - sponsored by the Employers Association of Detroit, in cooperation with the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce and the United Community Services, at the Engineering Society of Detroit.

Because there is no evidence that individuals infected with AIDS pose any risk of transmitting the virus to coworkers, those infected with the virus can not legally be restricted from working simply because of the infec-

Because of lack of education, at both the white-collar and blue-collar levels of employment, legal proceedings have taken place. Cases have stemmed from AIDS victims being fired and co-workers of AIDS victims seeking protection from what they feel are contaminated working conditions.

MANY OF THESE cases need not even have gone to court had educational programs about the disease beenoffered in the workplace, according to attorney Henry Attorneys Saad - of Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van-Dusen and Freeman - and David Piontkowsky - of Pearlman & Piontkowsky - held a debate at the symposium in an attempt to answer the legal questions surrounding AIDS in the workplace. Both attorneys agreed that most answers were complex and differed depending on the individual case.

AIDS victims are protected legally under legislation banning discrimination based on handicap.

tue of handicap regulations and may continue to work unless the disability interferes with the person's ability to perform his duties," Saad said. "If there is a risk that the person may cause injury to others, the employer has every right to refuse employment. But only if there is reasonable likelihood.

Because the virus isn't transmitted through casual contact, it is difficult to prove there is a health risk to someone working alongside an AIDS patient.

The fact that someone has AIDS is not in itself grounds for dismissal. Only work-related consequences provide such grounds

PIONTKOWSKY added that under the employee's right to be free of discrimination based on handicap there can be no pre-employment health tests that do not directly relate to the individuals' ability to perform his or her job. Also, potential mishandling or misinterpretation of positive findings of a test could subject the individual to invasion of privacy and unjust discrimination

It was also pointed out that employees do not have the right to know a fellow employee is infected with AIDS as long as the employer has no reasonable cause to think the disease will be transmitted throughout the work-

Employers should be aware that when dealing with AIDS there is enormous potential for an outbreak of fear among workers. The best way to avoid this outbreak of "Afraids" is to educate employees with the most recent and updated information about AIDS.

According to a recent Michigan Employment Securities Commission ruling, it is the responsibility of the employer to educate the workforce to the dangers working with an AIDS patient to avert an outbreak of hyster-

The main effort is to educate the workforce to prevent any court case before it even starts."

Since medical experts are discovering more and more about the disease with each passing week, information should be updated to keep employees informed on recent medical findings about AIDS.

Health care industry sees treatment costs rising

By Janice Brunson staff writer

As devastating as AIDS can be to the general population, a secondary threat is emerging in the cost of caring for people with AIDS.

The total hospital bill for the first 10,000 cases of AIDS in the country topped $1.4 billion, according to figures from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

The bill includes the cost of 1.6 spent in the hospital by each patient. The average Medicaid expenditure for each patient, the most common source of payment for AIDS treatment, was $52,000 for 20 months of PATIENTS WITH AIDS live an average of two years.

By March of this year, 135 cases of AIDS had been diagnosed in Michigan, resulting in 72 deaths. The majority of those cases were in Wayne County, and authorities agree that while the number of AIDS cases in Michigan is lower than expected, this number is just the tip of the future iceberg.

And J.R. Beauboeuf, an analyst with the Michigan Insurance Bureau, is not certain $52,000 is enough to cover the actual medical costs an million hospital days, or 160 days AIDS patient incurs during the course of the illness.

"It is just too early to tell," he said. "Predictions vary upward to $150,000 per patient."

One reason why, Beauboeuf added, is because AIDS manifests itself through other diseases, like pneumonia, that increase the cost of medical care, making it extremely difficult to pinpoint an exact figure spent specifically on AIDS treatment.

Currently, Beauboeuf said, private medical insurance pays hospitalization and physician care, but does not pay for experimental treatment. Since so little is known in the treatment of AIDS, much that is done falls into the experimental category.

The extent of insurance coverage in the future, Beauboeuf said, will ultimately be based upon exact costs in treating AIDS. "The level of benefits won't be decided until there is enough data to draw conclusions." Beauboeuf also said the insurance bureau suggests insurance companies use only two criteria in determining whether to insure high-risk individuals - whether a person has AIDS or has ever before been treated for the disease.

Ernie Thomas, an agent and coowner of the Alexander & Thomas Insurance Agency in Farmington Hills, said this is the case now. "Insurance carriers are looking at the medical history of a person with AIDS in the same light as any person with a catastrophic illness, like cancer or heart disease. That person is basically uninsurable.

THESE POINTS, as well as many others, were debated by Beauboeuf and others who served on the finance subcommittee of Gov. Blanchard's Expert Panel on AIDS.

Laura Redutey represented the Michigan Hospital Association on the committee. She said after "many months of deliberations," committee members submitted recommendations to Blanchard last April.

The recommendations do not mandate life and health insurance coverage for high-risk individuals, but do recommend making such coverage available until more specifics about costs are known

The report also recommended further study on costs of treatment and care that will eventually be assumed by the Michigan Departments of Social Services and Public Health and the Greater Detroit Area Health Council.

The governor has already acted on another recommendation, budgeting $1 million for education and training of Michigan medical personnel about AIDS. In certain instances, such as Farmington Hills, staff educational seminars on the subject have already been held.

ANOTHER AREA hospital, Henry Ford in Detroit, is recognized as a specialty center for AIDS victims, and staff physician Dr. Evelyn Fisher is recognized as one of the leading experts on the disease in the Fisher believes Michigan has the facilities and programs in place to meet both the current and future demands for treatment of the disease. Comprehensive referral systems like Wellness Networks (876-3582) in Detroit exist throughout the state, speakers bureaus continually educate the public and medical personnel, and at least a half-dozen hospitals are specially equipped to treat AIDS patients.

While the majority of these facilities are located in Michigan's larger cities like Detroit, support groups quietly function in many suburbs and may be located through city-based referral agencies.

There is little question the future demand on existing services and facilities will increase significantly. Infectious disease specialists project that the incidence of AIDS cases will increase 10-fold in the next five Complicating the problem, Fisher said, is the possibility that promising new drugs currently being tested for AIDs may extend life "considerably." But whether this will result in an extension of life in a relatively healthy state or simply prolong illness is not yet known. And she predicts these new drugs will be expensive: "They will cost a fortune, $1,000 a month or more."

BUT THE FACTOR that Fisher at Botsford General Hospital in said complicates the issue most is "fear," and the resulting reluctance of community support systems like nursing homes and hospices to step in to assist AIDS patients when those services are appropriate. Fisher said it is not unusual in Michigan for AIDS patients to spend an additional six months to a year in an acute care hospital when intensive home care or a chronic care facility would be a more humane and less-costly alternative.

There is much a community can do. Wellness House in Detroit (not affiliated with Wellness Network) is a good example. The House will be a supervised living arrangement for people with AIDS who are unable to maintain their own housing either for financial or physical reasons.

Transporting cargo is suburban agents' domain

By Carolyn Smith staff writer

A steamship glides over a glistening body of water, its form accented against a clear blue sky and by other sailing vessels dwarfed by its imposing presence.

A freight train chugs over railroad ties, a seemingly endless series of look-alike boxcars shielding contents from the observer's natural sense of curiosity.

What's in them? Where were they loaded? And where in the world are they going? Only transportation agents, many of them in suburban Detroit, know for sure. They are the hovering lately around $18 billion a ones who arrange the booking and routing of freight via ocean liner, rail and truck.

Because the international balance of trade favors the importers, most area shipping agents work together, said Dan Gregg, owner of Global International Shipping in Troy.

'We're a fraternal group that discusses the overall market every month in meetings at different restaurants in and around Detroit."

Gregg also is president of the 65member Ocean Freight Agents Association of Detroit. The trade deficit, he said, has been "In some cases, we will ship out empty containers for foreign countries to fill. Steamship lines absorb the cost of shipping containers because they know it's inherent to the trade deficit," Gregg said. CONTAINERS ARE steel or aluminum boxes, 8 feet tall by 8 feet wide, and either 20 or 40 feet long.

Using them to load and transport cargo is far more efficient, agents say, than the old bulk-loading process by which commodities were sent down a chute through a ship's sidehole and into a bin. Although bulk loading is still done this way, containers have changed the transport industry, agents say.

The container virtually revolutionized the bulk process by reducing its turnaround time by 70 percent," explained William Hardy, general manager of World Shipping in West-land. Invented in the early '50s, the container didn't make a dramatic impact until the mid-'60s, he said.

Besides offering efficiency, the container is adaptable to what's known in the trade as "intermodal" transit. That means cargo in a container can be placed on a truck, a freight car or an ocean liner.

Bill Lickeret, sales manager for Seapac Services in Troy, gives an example familiar to him and his company: Beans grown in Saginaw are placed in cleanly scrubbed containers, trucked to Detroit, loaded on a Canadian Pacific freight car headed for Montreal, then put on a vessel for a port in England.

AGENTS CLAIM convenience to the customer is a major marketing tool. "In our industry, time is money," Hardy said.

That's why most agents offer shippers a door-to-door service that may cost a little more but spare a merchant from losing sales for lack of available goods. Trucking goods from the point of origin to their final destination is an example of this ser-

American President Lines, a transportation company with a sales office in Southfield, imports clothing in garment containers, said Harriet Seward, manager of the Cleveland home office.

'It's very convenient to get the clothing from such places as Hong Kong. Taiwan, Korea, Japan or India, then be able to move it directly to a U.S. retailer. The clothing is already on hangers, so there's no trouble at all," she said. About 35 agents in the Detroit area arrange for call at the Port of Detroit, and most of them use it for shipping bulk scrap iron and auto parts. Agents claim the $25,000 to $35,000 a day it costs to run a vessel makes use of the Detroit port too expensive. So they are more likely to transport freight by rail or truck to U.S. eastern or western ports. "It would take a good two weeks to run a vessel down the (St. Lawrence) Seaway to the Port of Detroit, so shipping from either coast is less costly and very practical, said Douglas Dymmel, office manager of Maersk Lines Agency, Southfield.

LINDA BARNES, deputy director of the Detroit/Wayne County Port Authority, said officials are encouraging more vessels to come into the port, making them available to shippers on a more timely basis.

We also recognize the realistic and competitive alternatives in intermodal transit, whether they be by rail or truck. Port activities are not restricted by regulation," she said.

Walter VanderVeer, rais division manager of CSX Transportation in Livonia, said he handles sabout 3,000 rail cars a day in Michigan alone. CSX, a Fortune 500 company, also deals with customers who are not on

"If a customer wants to ship only by truck, we'll do it," VanderVeer said. "If he wants a combination of truck, rail and voyage, we'll do that too. We don't want him to worry about dealing with three or four companies. We're very much into one-stop shipping.'

Most agents claim they will import or export anything that's legal and so end up shipping everything from soup to threaded nuts. Some-

When college expenses you are preparing for lie 10 to 15 years down the road, you can buy taxfree municipal zero bonds, which sell at a deep discount from their face value. If the maturity of the bond coincides with your child's college-entering age, the money would become available in time to finance the college costs. A 10-year $1000 zero municipal yielding 7 percent may cost you just $400. Make sure, though, that the issuer does not have the U.S. Savings Bonds with maturifore their maturity date.

Creative option

You may buy shares in a nonleveraged equipment leasing limited partnership usually available through brokerage houses. The cash distributions will increase from 10 percent or 11 percent annually in the first four years to twice that much in the last few years before the partnership is liquidated. The early distributions are largely a return of part of your principal and so are not subject to taxa-

Non-parental gifts

A child may receive a $10,000 gift from grandparent, other relties that fall after the child's atives, or even a friend. If the gift comes from other than a parent, the money will be taxed at the child's rate, no matter what his age. If the money comes directly from a parent, it will be taxed at the parent's rate, even though it is in the child's name.

Refinance mortgage

You can refinance your mortgage, use the money to pay for college costs and still deduct the mortgage loan interest.

If you borrowed money directly to pay for school, the new tax law would not allow a deduction for consumer loan interest.

Low-interest loans

Your youngster may be able to get a low interest student loan if he or she passes a need test that takes into consideration how much the family can pay, plus any scholarships, grants and earnings from a work-study program. There is no test if family income is less than $30,000; but even if yours is considerably higher, a student may qualify for a loan - if, for example, he or she attends a school with high tuition or has siblings who also are in college. bid for an office in the executive

A University of Michigan survey profiling business executives shows the overwhelming majority (97.4 percent) are male. And if the number of women promoted to vice presidential levels is any indication, that percentage will stay unchanged.

"This result is disconcerting because in earlier years we noted a trend toward rising participation of women in the highest executive ranks," authors of the survey said.

"This year's results reconfirm last year's finding that the number of women promoted into the highest executive ranks was droppiong off. One of the most perplexing results of this year's survey is the fact that the percentage of women promoted into vice presidential level positons has fallen off relative to the number of management. Such a finding may portend future reductions in women being elevated into presidential and chairmen's positions.

This year's newly promoted top business executive follows this profile: a 46-year-old married man who thrives on personal challenge, who is hard-driving and willing to work nearly 60 hours a week for his $175,000 annual salary plus perqui-

The survey also shows that the typical corporate leader takes an occasional drink but smokes little, is 10 pounds overweight but otherwise healthy, values family ties and is seldom divorced. He studied business administration or engineering in college and identifies marketing-sales or general management administration as the fastest routes to an executive rank.

men, presidents and vice presidents provided data for the 1985-1986 survey, 16th in an annual series, published by the U-M School of Business Administration as "The Newly Promoted Executive: A Study in Corporate Leadership." It was written by Professors Herbert W. Hildebrandt, Edwin L. Miller and Floyd A. Bond of the business school and Professor Dee W. Edington, director of the U-M Division of Physical Education and the Fitness Research Center.

SALARIES CONTINUE to increase in all of the top executive categories. The survey shows that over the past three years, the mean salCEOs, 19.7 percent for presidents, and 31.3 percent for vice presidents.

After the latest promotion, the mean salary for the three positions was $174,632. Cash bonuses also went to 89 percent of the executives, and stock options were available to 81.9 percent. More than half of them had a company-leased automobile, deferred compensation plan and club memberships.

Most of the newly promoted executives (79.9 percent) were promoted from within, continuing a trend of the last five years. Despite the recent popularity of mergers and acquisitions, such management activity was involved in only 1.9 percent of the 1985-86 promotions. Median length of service with the present employer for the promoted executives was 10.4 years.

be the executives' most important reason for changing positions. It was cited first by 53.1 percent of the respondents. "Importance of job" ranked second at 41.3 percent and "career advancement" was third at 40.5 percent. "Monetary considerations" and "prestige and recogni-tion" trailed at 23.3 percent and 17.7 percent, respectively.

The executive workweek appears to be lengthening, according to the U-M survey. Presidents worked an additional two hours per week this year, while vice presidents added an hour to their schedules, bringing the average to 57.2 hours weekly.

The University of Michigan was most frequently listed as the school from which the respondents received undergraduate degrees. In advanced degrees, Harvard leads all other institutions by a large margin.

Ford will expand transmission plant

By Marie Chestney staff writer

Ford Motor Co. is planning a $100 million expansion of its production operations at its transmission and chassis plant on Plymouth Road at Levan in Livonia. Ford officials estimate the installation of the new machinery and equipment will create 600 new jobs at the plant by 1989.

Livonia city assessor Ron Mardiros estimated the expansion will add $1.5 million in new taxes to the city's tax base and will bring Ford's total tax bill in the city to $8.6 million.

The company is asking the city for a 12-year tax break under Public Act

198. The city will air the request at an upcoming public hearing. The decision whether to give the tax break, and for how long, will be decided by the Livonia City Council.

FORD PLANS three separate new programs at the plant. The first, worth $27 million, would involve 31 new machines. The machines would improve the productivity of transmission operations for Ford's popular Taurus and Mercury Sable mod-

The second, worth $30.9 million, would buy 38 new machines used in machining operations, four new test stands and a new mini-carrousel as-

The third, worth $36 million, would buy 50 new machines for the production of automatic overdrive transmissions. Also included in the program are three new test stands and the major rebuilding of existing transfer lines and other equipment.

According to Mardiros, the plant is currently operating under three tax breaks. Two were given in 1977 and are due to expire in 1989. The third was given in 1982 and will expire in 1994.

Staging new plays is a worthwhile challenge

By Cathie Breidenbach special writer

RINITY HOUSE THEATRE of Livonia is committed to giving new playwrights a chance to see their work

The group enjoys the challenge of producing untried and unpublished plays at its theater, a 19th-century former meeting house that looks like an old country church, on Six Mile Road near I-275. The theater holds 90, and as the season moves along, the house will frequently be full.

the usual community-theater success formula of staging only seasoned, Broadway hits. Most community groups say audiences shy away from plays they don't know and that working out the kinks in a new play can be a director's nightmare.

For six years, Trinity House has been successfully running against the current by producing unknown plays. The group pulls respectable audiences and enthusiastic crews for its production, and its membership is

UNDER THE FRESH leadership of Brian Heersink, Trinity House will continue to premiere new plays and to develop its role as a theatrical think tank where local playwrights can get help pruning and polishing new plays to get them ready for possible production in a future Trinity House season.

'We work with playwrights," Heersink said, "to help them develop their characters, improve pacing and decide what will work on stage. Most plays go through several rewrites. Then we put on a staged reading."

Heersink said, "We love to get manuscripts," and explains that Trinity House hasn't sought out writers because "so far they've found

This season, the group will present several plays which have never been staged before and a few which have seen the footlights only once or twice. In September, the group presented "Vardley's Lives," a comedy about a cartoonist whose comic strip characters jump off the page and invade the life of their creator.

The group's next presentation, "An Evening of One Acts," plays weekends from Friday, Nov. 14, through Saturday, Dec. 13. The evening opens with the Michigan premiere of "Virginia Is for Lovers," a one act which won a playwriting contest in Texas. "Collection," by group member Jim Leach of Ann Arbor, will have its first run before an audience. Rounding out the evening of one acts will be "Maggie and Beth" by Paul Pat-

IN FEBRUARY, the group will present the comedy-fantasy "Candle in the Wind" by Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the Russian writer who emigrated to the United States after being persecuted in a Siberian "work" camp for refusing to espouse the party line.

The body of Solzhenitsyn's work shows a seriousness seemingly out of synch with a comedy-fantasy, yet Candle in the Wind" manages both to ask typical Solzhenitsyn questions about how we should live and to be light-hearted entertainment. "Candle" runs weekends from Feb. 20 through March 21.

Closing play of the season, "Gravity" by Paul Patton, incorporates original rock music numbers into a story about a girl searching for meaning. In her quest, she meets a bizarre wizard who does magic tricks. "Gravity" runs weekends from May 1 through June 6.

Tickets for Trinity House Theatre performances cost $3 for Thursday nights and $4 for Friday and Saturday. For reservations, call 464-6302.

Local playwright Paul Patton founded Trinity House Theatre six years ago and headed up the group until this September. Demands of his new, full-time job as assistant pastor of Trinity Baptist Church forced him to cut back his involvement with Trinity House, but he remains active on the board of directors and as a popular contributing playwright.

BRIAN HEERSINK trained in theater at Dordt College and as an actor in New York. He spent last year working on several Trinity House productions and directed one of them. This year he heads the group and said, "I seem to have two full-time jobs, Trinity House, and my paying job."

Trinity House calls itself a typical community theater, yet the group remains tied to the Trinity Baptist Church, which owns the theater building. Mary Lewis, a longtime

'Dining Room' is a hit in Farmington ton Players production of "The Dining Room" by A.R. Gurney Jr. continue through Saturday, Nov. 15, at the Barn Theatre in Farmington Hills. For ticket information, call 626-5061

By Barbara Michals special writer

Believing that you can tell a lot about a culture by how it eats, playwright A.R. Gurney Jr. explores the foibles and manners of the uppermiddle-class WASP in "The Dining Room." Farmington Players offers a deft and lively production of this warm-hearted comedy.

In a series of vignettes, the dining room becomes a symbol for a vanishing way of life. The author laments that people don't take the time to eat in dining rooms anymore or to fuss about gracious table manners and the family china and crys-

The play's many episodes overlap slightly, so that two sets of characters may briefly occupy the stage simultaneously but be oblivious to each other. Director Cynthia Doehler keeps the pacing smooth and brisk throughout.

Six cast members each play nine or 10 different roles that cover a span from childhood to old age. Kirk Hanley, Duncan Mein, Joyce Moore, Taraynn Razzoog, Jim Snideman Performances of the Farming- and Jane Zucatti are all marvelously adept at shifting persona in the blink of an eye and capturing characterization with a few subtle strokes.

> ZUCATTI'S SHARP enunciation seems too exaggerated in early scenes, but she's pleasing as a bubbly little girl and very touching as a senile matriarch

Hanley is particularly effective as Standish, the stodgy family head dashing off to "the club" to defend his brother's good name.

Razzoog is fine as the teenager unhappy with dancing school and the young mother trying to cope with a children's birthday party and the demands of her lover at the same time.

Gurney's world is peopled with faithful family servants, preppy names like Winkie and Binky, and cocktail glasses adorned with pheasants. Children seem to clutter up orderly households, whether they are young ones at the breakfast table, grown ones returning home with their offspring after a bad marriage, or grandchildren seeking a free ride on the family fortune.

For all, the dining room is a special place filled with family memories, not necessarily all good ones.

Farmington's dining room, designed by Phil Hadley and Bob Batistoni, is a handsome set with traditional furniture and old masters on

Champagne — it's all in the style

Gourmet magazine Wine Editor Gerald Asher made it easy on the guests at a recent champagne and sparkling wine-tasting party at Cranbrook House in Bloomfield

He kept his remarks down to just a few minutes and let the guests learn for themselves through the wines they tasted, without being overwhelmed by a lot of expert

What Asher did stress, briefly, is that, "Every winemaker has his imprint." What's best depends on what style you prefer. Sparkling wines are essentially a product of style."

Each of three tables featured a champagne from France and an American sparkling wine (it can't really be called champagne if it's of France) whose manufacture was troit. supervised by the same maker.

THERE WAS Moet & Chandon Brut Imperial 1981 from Epernay, France, along with Domaine Chandon Napa Valley Brut from Yountville, Calif.; Piper-Heidsieck Brut 1979 from Reims, France, and Piper Sonoma Brut 1982 from Windsor, Calif, and G.H. Mumm Cordon Rouge 1979 from Reims, France, and Domaine Mumm Cuvee Napa from Calistoga, Calif.

Between the sippings, guests nib-bled hors d'oeuvres from the Palate Pleaser in Birmingham and strolled through several grand, yet cozy rooms of Cranbrook House. A string quartet played. In one room, a chef prepared mushroom ravioli filled with dried morels and served with maderia wine sauce and more mushrooms. In another room; a chef pan-fried fresh perch, served on bibb lettuce with French remoulade sauce flavored with spin-tions about which wines he preferred that evening, while a plate of delicious ravioli waited in his hands. From California, he favored the Piper Sonoma.

"I like that very lean style," he said. Among the French cham-pagnes, the '79 Mumm was his choice. "I liked the flavor. It's a more interesting, complex flavor." The California wines tasted ranged from $10-$12.50 a bottle, the vintage French wines, $25.

Verne E. Westerberg, publisher, and Asher hosted the Gourmet magazine party, which was primarily for the Detroit-area advertising community.

Guests also received copies of the October issue of Gourmet ("the magazine of good living"), an issue designated as the largst in the magazine's 45-year history, and the November issue containing a feanot from the Champagne Country ture article "City Dining - De-

Highlighted in the story are three of the metropolitan area's finest restaurants - the London Chop House in Detroit, owned by Max and Lanie Pincus of Bloomfield Hills, the Golden Mushroom Southfield, co-owned by Reid Ashton and master chef Milos Cihelka, and Elizabeth's of Northville, owned by Elizabeth and Douglas Campbell.

JUST DUCKY is the motif for Bloomfield's, once Bedell's, at Square Lake Road and Woodward

Avenue in Bloomfield Hills. Interior desiger Ron Rea has used whimsical, art-deco styling, a color scheme of pink and beige, and such embellishments as duck cutouts for wall paneling.

Lunch and dinner menus, in gray and mauve, are in keeping with the light, tasteful and informal setting for enjoyment of good food.

the restaurant under its new ownership has been open for some months now. It's another of Herb Schmid's places - he also owns the Schmid Haus in Warren, the 220 Merrill Street Restaurant in Birmingham and the Main St. Seafood Bar and Grill in Rochester.

Over a recent lunch, it was difficult to decide between the many daily specials and the menu's regular offerings. The specials included a selection of fresh fish, as well as seafood pasta, a Health Special (lowcalorie, low-fat, no-salt chicken breast with wine sauce, apples and raisins), soup and club sandwich and French dip.

SEAFOOD CHOICES on the menu are saute brook trout, shrimp scampi, monk fish and filet, and seafood and vegetable fettucini. I tried the last dish, which combines whole shrimp and large chunks of scallops with fresh vegetables - broccoli and carrots - and the fettucini noodles. Reduced tarragon cream, topped with Swiss cheese, is the finishing touch, both an attractive and flavorful complement to the seafood and vegetables.

Other entrees include a number of German dishes, a feature at Schmidt's restaurants, such as baked chicken strudel, wiener schnitzel, knackwursts, potato pancakes and grilled Canadian bacon, and Bavarian bratwursts.

For steak lovers there is chopped beef steak, stuffed with bleu or cheddar cheese, served with Bordelaise sauce, or beef tenderloin steak sandwich. Those who eat light might prefer the Oriental stir fry or the fresh vegetable plate.

Soups, salads and sandwiches are its official grand opening, although other choices, as well as appetizers

Dinner, of course, offers an even greater selection of entrees. Again, there are fresh-fish specials, a re-cent one was swordfish oscar sauteed swordfish steak topped with asparagus spears and king crabmeat

OTHER ENTREES range from chicken teriyaki and chicken Pommery (breast of chicken with cheese and sliced ham over rice pilaf with Pommery mustard sauce), both at $8.95, to wiener schnitzel at $11.95. roast raspberry duckling at $12.95 and provimi veal oscar at $13.95.

with sauce bearnaise at $13.95.

There's also filet mignon, New York sirloin, prime rib, and steak and lobster combination. More seafood dishes are baked seafood strudel, shrimp scampi, shrimp and scallops a la Werner, frogs legs roadhouse style, and broiled lobster

All dinners include salad, rolls and choice of baked potato, potato pancakes, vegetable or rice pilaf. Those who don't want a full meal may order from the portion of the menu designating a la carte dinners sandwiches and other light selec-

Again, appetizers, soups and salads may be ordered a la carte. Desserts are tempting - with a turtle sundae the house specialty and the German influence evident in German chocolate cake supreme and in apple strudel.

On Saturdays, a gourmet dinner for two is priced at $21.95 and in-cludes a half carafe of wine per couple with the entree. The gourmet meal changes each week and includes appetizer, soup, fish course. salad, entree, dessert and beverage.

Teacher honored

Wendy Geoghegan, faculty member at Cranbrook Schools' Brookside elementary school in Bloomfield Hills, has been named recipient of the Henry K. Martin award for Drama in Education.

The award was presented by the School of Dramatic Art at the University of Windsor. It has been given annually for the last 10 years to a student with an outstanding academic record engaged in furthering the development of drama for children.

Geoghegan, who teaches drama at Brookside, is on a year's study leave at the University of Windsor, where she is developing a middle-school curriculum guide for the use of drama in education. Her articles on the subject have appeared in the international journal Drama in Educa-

"Drama can be a crucially important learning tool for kids at 'the awkward age," Geoghegan said.

After her return to Brookside School the next academic year, Geoghegan will continue her studies at Toronto's Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, a pioneer in the field of drama education in North America

City by the bay

Baltimore still evokes images of old frigates, clipper ships

It is a foggy morning at Fell's Point in Baltimore.

When I look out the third-floor window of the Admiral Fell Inn, it would be easy to believe that the 18th century frigates and clipper ships are still anchored in Chesapeake Bay, and the morning market is about to begin in Market Square.

The brick fronts of the narrow, three-story buildings are scrubbed and clean, their gold-and-black signs swinging in the wind. The immigrants no longer pour down Broadway, but the market buildings and shops have been restored and the wharves are still busy with ships. Fell's Point became the first historic district on the National Register in

I have had less than 24 hours to see the historic city of Baltimore, just enough to taste it and want more. I have toured the historic streets, cruised the harbor, walked Harbor Place and explored the new National Aquarium, but there is much more: Fort McHenry, B & O Railroad Museum, Babe Ruth House, Lexington Market, Maryland Science Center and Planetarium, and all the colorful crannies available in any historic city.

The Admiral Fell Inn stands at the corner of Broadway and Thames, three connected buildings constructed between 1850 and 1910. It was once the Anchorage Hotel, a boardirig house for sailors. But now the Georgian buildings hold canopied beds and antique furniture for those who love old luxurious settings.

I HAVE MET owner Jim Widman before, not here, but as the owner of the Eliza Thompson House in Savannah, Ga. Widden's story is that Baltimore's colorful mayor, William Schaefer (presently running for governor of Maryland) visited Savan- Skipjack, one of the commercial oynah, fell in love with the Eliza ster boats familiar to Chesapeake to Baltimore. Widden has paid the same attention to detail here as he did in Savannah. You enter the Admiral Fell Inn through a lobby glowing with dark green woodwork and carpets set against stark white walls.

There is no hotel registration counter, just a beautiful antique partners desk, backed by a grandfather clock and a line drawing of the Pride of Baltimore, the high-masted sailing ship that sank in the Caribbean Sea this spring.

The real pride of Baltimore has always been its setting beside Chesapeake Bay. Dan Wilson and his wife Susan, who recently established their classic yacht Sakonnet as a dinner cruiser, took us into the bay, where container ships and loading cranes mark the skyline, and on into the Inner Harbor and Harborplace.

From the sea it is hard to believe that this was one of America's more distressed inner cities until the European-style boutiques and eateries were built under that low, green roofline, now such a familiar sight on the waterfront promenade.

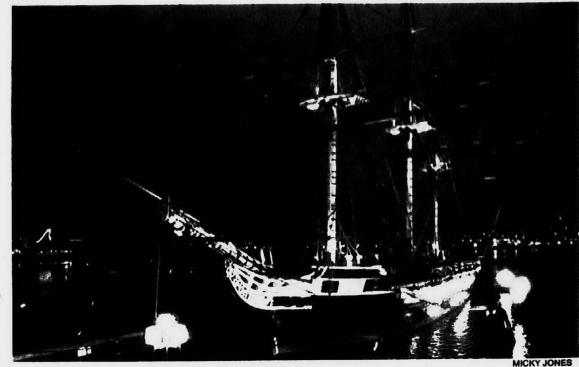

THE FOREGROUND of the Inner Harbor is pure 18th 19th century: the high-rise masts of the U.S. Frigate Constitution, launched in 1797 as the first commissioned ship of the U.S. Navy and now the oldest American warship afloat; the low lines of a Bay cities; the Lady Maryland, a Chesapeake Bay Pungy Schooner now used to take schoolchildren into history. Only the Pride of Baltimore is missing from her moorings.

The background is late 20th century pointing towards the 21st: the angled glass walls of the National Aquarium, the World Trade Center lifting its 17th-floor observation deck high above the bay, the new Maryland Science Center and Planetarium; new hotels and office buildings everywhere.

If you drive through the historic streets of Baltimore, past houses with their traditional marble stoops and colorful windows, you will find a low-income family in an historic but deteriorating house on one block and a Yuppie with a restored house on the next block. Here on the waterfront, the restoration seems to come all together.

The city-owned National Aquarium, so designated by Congress although it was built without a dime of federal funds, is a striking glass building housing a scientific and educational showcase. If you can only make one stop, this is it.

You enter past the glub-glub of water tubes and ride the elevators up, floor by floor, to the sound of water animals. The elevators are in an open atrium dominated by a huge whale skeleton. You travel first from the mountains to the sea, past tidal marshes and coastal beaches, past anemones and clown fish, each stage diverted briefly by a whimsical streak of neon set against con-

When I rode the last elevator to the Rain Forest, I felt that the rest of the aquarium had just been preamble. The forest is there to show the unity of life through water. You must be quiet and patient to see the three-toed tree sloth or to notice the brilliant red birds hidden in the

From there, you spiral down past the coral reef, with tanks circling around you. A spotted eagle ray glides by, folding his graceful tail, a porcupine fish sputters along, a diver feeds the fish as you round a corner, and at the bottom, large as life, is the beluga whale. If you are an aquarium-lover, don't miss this one.

The aquarium is a good side trip for travelers who participate in the many public events going on along the Inner Harbor Promenade as well as other parts of the city. There will be a big Halloween party in the Inner Harbor tomorrow and then the events begin pointing toward Christ-

Works, enjoy the festival of trees at Festival Hall, all in November.

In December things speed up, with candlelit tours of Cloisters Children's Museum; a Colonial Christmas at Mt. Clare Mansion, Peabody Conservatory Christmas concerts, New Year's Eve extravaganzas and cruises. The National Aquarium has many seasonal events: Breakfast with Santa, Candlelit Chamber Music Concert, The Nutcracker puppet show, and a Sugar Plum Fantasy among them.

Cider mills offer family fun

Michigan's tantalizing blend of ciders ranging from tangy to sweet, combined with outdoor activities for the whole family are beckoning thousands of visitors to cider mills this fall.

"The opportunity to enjoy crisp autumn air, savor a glass of apple cider and bask in a kaleidoscope of trees splashed in red, yellow and orange are exciting autumn treats for everyone to enjoy," said AAA Michigan travel services manager James Drury.

"Prices are up only a few cents over last year and health-conscious families know that fresh apple cider is low in sodium and relatively low in calories," Drury added.

THIS YEAR'S apple crop is onethird smaller than last year due to spring frost damage, but the quality remains good.

Some 700 million pounds of apples are expected to be plucked from Michigan trees this year, with the state producing 10 percent of the nation's apple crop. Only Washington and New York harvest more apples.

The most abundant Michigan apples are Red Delicious and Jonathon, but other popular varieties are Ida Red, Golden Delicious, McIntosh, Rome and Norther Spy.

A number of new varieties including the Empire - a cross between Red Delicious and McIntosh - are increasing in popularity, Drury said.

CIDER MILL visitors will find that cider averages $2.40 per gallon, three cents more than last year. Prices range from $1.50 to $3.50. A dozen doughnuts averages $1.30, one cent higher than last year, with pric-

There are 110 mills listed on AAA Michigan's 1986 Cider Mill Guide -10 more than a year ago. Many of those listed offer such family activities as hay wagon and train rides, apple butter making, arts and crafts fairs, pumpkin carving, animalpetting zoos, music, craft demonstrations and baked goods. Pickyour-own apples and pumpkins are featured at some mills.

Most mills also allow visitors to view pressing operations and provide special tours and demonstrations. Visitors should call ahead for pressing dates and times, and a schedule of other activities.

In an action to be filed with the Michigan PSC this week, Kelley is seeking a rate reduction from 10 Michigan utilities because the 1986 Tax Reform Act will reduce their income taxes.

'It is imperative that the benefits of the new tax act be immediately passed along to the ratepayers in the form of reduced rates," Kelley said.

"WITHOUT SUCH a reduction, the utilities will be collecting rates which were established to recover for higher taxes than necessary. It would be unfair for the ratepayers to continue providing money to these utilities for an unnecessary ex-

Big, loud sound from little owl

By Timothy Nowicki special writer

Halloween is the time when we are reminded of spooky sounds of the night. Owls calling are common sounds of the woods at night.

They seem frightening because most people do not know what is producing the sound. Airplane and automobile noises are common at night, but because we know what they are, they do not disturb us.

Learning to recognize some of the natural sounds of a woods can be a rewarding experience. Many animals can be heard easier than seen. Since their sounds are characteristic, species recognition is the metropolitan area than one may think.

Last fall, there was a screech owl calling across the street from my house in the middle of our subdivision. When I lived in Westland along the Rouge River, I watched a family of screech owls in their nest hole.

Though screech owls are only 7-10 inches in length, they can produce a loud call that can be heard a long way away. Their small size and adaptability to small wooded areas allow them inhabit many areas.

WHEN I WAS in graduate school, I surveyed screech owls by counting those birds that responded to a tape-recorded call.

Michigan Supreme Court justices are making law - and doing it wrong, according to two Republican nominees for the high court.

Robert P. Griffin, better known as a former two-term U.S. senator, said, "I condemn the court for legislating," citing a 1979 decision abolishing the doctrine of contributory negligence.

Griffin, seeking a seat on the nonpartisan court for the second time, told an Oakland County audience Tuesday that Michigan's business climate is hurt "largely because of decisions of the Supreme Court."

James Kallman, an Ingham County circuit judge, chided Supreme Court justices for letting Court of Appeals panels issue conflicting opinions that open the door for more

He said the Supreme Court made law again in the so-called Toussaint case by allowing a person hired for an indefinite term to collect damages when fired. "It's a full employment bill for lawyers. There are firms in this state that do nothing but bring and defend Toussaint cas-court," Kallman said.

Criticizing the Supreme Court for allowing conflicting appeals court decisions, Kallman said: "I went one way on a no-fault case and got reversed. So the next time I went the other way - and got reversed.

Please Neighbor's Child In Need!

In Third World countries, hundreds of thousands of children are in desperate need of food, clothing, medical care – the basics of life. These girls and boys are even denied the opportunity to attend school.

They are our neighbors in a world that grows smaller every day. Through CCF, you can sponsor a neighbor's child. The cost is $18 a month—just 60¢ a day – to help a poor child in Asia, Africa or Latin America - a child who has virtually nothing.

Please pick up your phone now and dial the toll-free number below. Be a good neighbor by helping an innocent child.

CALL Elaine Kissel, Ph.D. Clinical Hypnologist

- HOW IT WORKS -

Elaine has created highly sophisticated and effective methods that reveal the source of your problem; and the techniques to eliminate them for good. Using your personal psychic profile, she designs a process exclusively for you through which you develop the kind of control that is natural, easy and comfortable. No more struggling, no more conflict about yourself and your behavior. The formula for your individualized hypnotherapy program is based on Elaine's evaluation of your problem and personal needs. The two hour process of determining what kind of hypnosis, how much and for how long, and what other processes may be necessary for your success includes an in-person interview with Elaine. Dr. Kissel's hypnotherapy is for individuals serious about making permanent change. No one shot, group, or "canned" hypnosis. Evaluation appointments are by pre-paid reservation only. Use credit card over the phone.

Falcons win regional title

staff writer

All season long, the Farmington boys cross country team has had to endure the burden of being favored to win. That can get awfully heavy.

But true to their form, the Falcons carried that burden to a Class A regional championship Saturday at Ann Arbor's Buhr Park. The Falcons amassed 52 points to nip host Ann Arbor Pioneer (58). Adrian placed third with 146 points. The top three teams advance to the Class A state meet Saturday at Brookline Golf Course in Flint.

The storyline was a bit different for the Farmington girls team. Despite being ranked No. 1 in Observerland all season, the Lady Falcons were going to have to scratch and claw to qualify for state. Of the 18 teams running at Buhr Park, six had been ranked among the state's top 10.

But the Falcons came through, placing third behind Ann Arbor Pioneer (61) and Ann Arbor Huron (74). The Falcons totaled 117 points, 30 fewer than South Lyon and Howell, the fourth and fifth place teams

cross country

bor regional? Ask Plymouth Salem girls coach John Gravlin

"We had six girls run under 22 minutes, each one was a personal best time. And we came in seventh. We didn't even come close. It was unbelieveable.

Farmington coach John Barrett agreed.

"There's no doubt this was the toughest regional in the state. That was the topic of conversation out there and a lot of the coaches were commenting that it wasn't fair. And it's not. I don't know how to remedy the problem, but something has to be done," he said.

The boys race wasn't exactly devoid of talent, either. 'We knew Ann Arbor Pioneer would be tough because they were state-ranked," said Farmington boys coach Jerry Young. "Still, we figured if we ran our best - and

Salem, Canton coast in league tilts

If you ever wondered how far the lower-rung teams in the Western Lakes oirls haskethall league were from the elite teams you should have been at Farmington Tuesday night.

Plymouth Salem, the cream of the crop, blasted Farmington 79-17. The score was 26-0 after one quarter.

Dena Head led a parade of Rock scorers with 24 points. Jessica Handley scored 14 and dished out six assists. Jill Estey scored 14 and dished out 10 assists. Kristen Hostynski added 12 points. Keri McBride (10) and Barb Krug (9) and Stacy Sovine (8) pullled down 27 rebounds.

Stacy Swanderski scored seven points for Farmington (1-12 in the league, 1-15 overall).

With a thrilling come-from-behind 52-50 win against Harper Woods Regina, coupled with Marian's surprising 48-46 win against Ladywood, the Marlins are in a superior position to claim the Catholic League Central Division championship.

Mercy needs only to defeat Bishop Gallagher Thursday to claim the title. Marian and Mercy have equal 7-2 league records, but Mercy has outscored Marian in the teams' two head-to-head matchups.

Tuesday night's game was symbolic of Mercy's struggle this season.

Mercy trailed Regina by 10 points late in the third quarter. Two long-range baskets by Yvette Maison and another by Jan Herberholz pulled the Marlins within striking range.

With two minutes left in the game, and Mercy down by three, Regina went into a delay game. A steal and a basket by Margaret DeMattia and a basket off an offensive rebound by Jennifer Slosar helped bring the who had been inserted into the lineup strictly for defensive purcame up with a steal and fed DeMattia for a layup that gave Mercy a 49-48 lead.

After a Regina miss, Maria Dietz who was inserted into the lineup in place of Chapp for her offensive skills - was fouled and made one of two free throws. Later, Maison sank two more free throws to put Mercy up 52-48. Regina scored its final hoop with three seconds left. It was Mercy's sixth consecutive win after losing two of its first three league games lock on a Class A playoff spot out of Region Two. But if the Rockets can beat Wayne Memorial (5-3) Friday night, they'll more than likely get in. Here's how things stack up in Class A Region Two.

Ann Arbor Pioneer (7-1) can lock up a berth with a win against Ann Arbor Huron (4-4). Lansing Eastern (7-1), Portage Central (7-1), Glean, Taylor Truman (7-1), Novi (7-1) and Ypsilanti (6-2) are all still in the Eastern plays Lansing Sexton (5-3), Truman plays Lincoln Park (6-2), Portage Central plays Holland West Ottawa (4-4), Ypsi plays Flint Northwestern (4-4), and Novi plays Northville (2-6).

If all goes according to plan and since when do things go according to plan in prep football? - the following will qualify in Region Two: Pioneer, Eastern, Central and Glenn.

Now what about North Farmington, Livonia Stevenson and Livonia Churchill? Bad news. Those three are among eight teams with 6-2 records hoping to claim the final spot in Region Four. Grosse Pointe North (8-0) has clinched. Dearborn Fordson (7-1) needs to beat rival Edsel Ford and Detroit Henry Ford (7-1) needs to beat Detroit Southwestern to clinch. FRIDAY GAMES

LIV. CHURCHILL at LIV. STE-VENSON, 7:30 p.m.: How much do you suppose that season-opening loss to Redford Union is grating on Stevenson these days? Plenty. LIV. FRANKLIN at GARDEN CITY, 7:30 p.m.: The Patriots (2-6) are coming off a victory against Walled Lake Central, while GC (4-4) endured a 17-8 loss to state-ranked Bay City John Glenn. Kind of a lost season for both teams. Picks — Garden City edges above .500.

WAYNE at JOHN GLENN, 7:30 p.m.: Nobody has to tell the Rockets what's at stake here. After a couple of shaky outings, Glenn got its act in order beating Churchill 17-6 last week. Wayne's speedy backfield is what stands in Glenn's playoff path. Picks - Take Glenn.

RED. THURSTON at CLARENCE-VILLE, 7:30 p.m.: Injuries and other assorted ill will have spoiled what looked to

Skiver a big hit in EMU defense

staff writer

Speed isn't Mike Skiver's greatest asset. Neither is he a great natural athlete. And as Division I football players go, his size (6-feet-1, 195pounds) is ordinary.

sistently makes the play, and oftentimes those plays are big ones.

"He's one helluva football player," said Eastern Michigan football coach Jim Harkema of Skiver after his Hurons upset Central Michigan 34-16 Saturday. "He's as good as any I've coached in the secondary. He's an all-MAC (Mid-American Conference) player.'

Harkema confirmed that what made the Redford St. Agatha graduate and Livonia native so effective wasn't his speed nor his athletic prowess. What Skiver accomplishes he does with savvy.

CERTAINLY CMU would be convinced of that. In the opening quarter, the Chippewas' star running back, Rodney Stevenson, had the football jarred loose at the CMU 42. Skiver recovered it.

"I just saw a big pile and jumped in there," was his simplified description of the play. Skiver's recovery was important; four plays later EMU scored on Bob Foster's 5-yard run to go ahead 7-0.

The Chips, who came into the game tied for the MAC lead, rallied to go up 13-10 at the half. EMU regained the lead, 17-13, midway through the third period. On CMU's ensuing possession, Skiver stepped in front of a Marcelle Carruther's pass and intercepted it, returning it 30 yards to the Chips' 18. The Hurons increased their lead to 24-13 in five Skiver, who plays roverback (a cross between a defensive back and a linebacker), finished with eight tackles, second best for EMU in the game. He came into the contest as the team leader in tackles. His interception was his first of the year, and he is tied for the team lead in fumble recoveries with two.

AND YET, Skiver is far from impressed with his statistics. "I didn't play all that well," the fifth-year senior said afterward. "We always play (CMU) tough. Everybody's up for this game. It feels good to win it. We haven't beaten them since I've been here.'

He downplayed his interception, too, saying that he was only "staying in my zone. I just watched the quarterback, read him and got a good break to the ball."

And yet, Skiver has performed like that throughout his career. He led EMU in tackles with 89 and tied for the lead in interceptions with four last season. His play earned him EMU's defensive player of the year

THE QUALIFICATION was necessary after the Chips gained 202 yards in the opening half. Sixty of those came on a Carruthers' scramble that resulted in CMU's second touchdown just before halftime.

"All the defensive guys felt they weren't moving the ball that well," said Skiver of the Hurons' halftime discussions. "We felt we could stop anything they ran at us. We made some mistakes, so we had to play even harder to make up for them.

"The second half seems to be a big

The Hurons limited CMU to 129 second-half yards, intercepted two passes and pounced on two more fumbles. For the game, the Chips suffered eight turnovers, including six lost fumbles.

The key for EMU's defense was to get ahead on the scoreboard. That would force the Chips, an option-running offensive team, to throw the

"What we wanted to do was stop the run," said Skiver. "We knew what was coming. We felt if we could make them throw the ball, we could get our hands on it."

The strategy worked well enough. EMU beat their intrastate rivals for the first time since 1976, and more than any personal accomplishments. that pleased Skiver.

EMU win helps Jurek avenge CMU jilt

staff writer

Scott Jurek normally isn't one to gloat. But he just couldn't resist a little extra exaltation Saturday.

Jurek, Eastern Michigan University's inside linebacker, helped his football team rip intrastate rival Central Michigan, 34-16.

There was plenty of whooping and hollering going on in the EMU lockerroom. After all, it was the first time the Hurons had beaten Central since 1976. But for Jurek. the moment was extra special.

"This is just the greatest feeling," Jurek said. "The absolute greatest."

Jurek won't soon forget the day CMU and head football coach Herb Deromedi jilted him.

IT WAS 1984. Jurek was an All-Area, all-state prep standout leading Plymouth Salem to an 8-1 season. He was being recruited heavily by CMU, EMU and Western Michigan. Finally, he made up his mind: he chose Central.

"Not too many people know this, but Central offered me a scholarship, a full-ride" Jurek said. "But when I went to visit, at the very a scholarship. It was like, I'd get one if so-and-so backed out or if someone else didn't come through." Pretty devastating moment for a high school senior. Jurek - typical of his strongwilled, aggressive character came home, called Eastern coach Jim Harkema, accepted the full-ride scholarship that was waiting patiently for him and vowed to Jurek was a red-shirted freshman in the 1984 season when EMU jolted heavily favored CMU with a 16-16 tie. Last year, Jurek played a strong game even though the Hurons fell 17-10.

make Central sorry for its impru-

Saturday, the Hurons completed the turnaround.

"I've never experienced anything like this," Jurek said. "We tied them, lost a game we should have won, and now we've beaten them. I'm really glad I came here (to Eastern).

JUREK HAS A unique role in the Huron defensive scheme. He rotates every two series with sophomore Keith Bertram. EMU rotates its linebackers on the other side as Paybacks are a . . .

"The reason we do that is because we have four linebackers that are basically equal in ability," Harkema said. "No one jumps way out. We don't look at that as a sign of weakness but as a point of strength."

Jurek was slated to be the starting inside linebacker before spring practice. He was team's second leading tackler last year with 83 and won the team's "Kahuna Award" for the best hit of the game three times.

Then he banged up a knee early in the spring.

"The injury really set me back," Jurek said. "I was the starter, then suddenly I was battling just to get back on the field. All year long it's been a battle trying to get my spot back. The competition in practice is intense, and that's good for all of us and for the team."

JUREK'S STRENGTH is stopping the run. As he displayed throughout his high school career, he has a tremendous instinct for sniffing out ball carriers. But Jurek has some difficulty defending the pass.

"Scott still has some bad habits we're trying to get rid of," Harkema said. "He has some problems with his foot work. If we can get that taken care of, Scott is going to be a great linebacker. We consider him a big-play guy for us. He is consistently around the ball."

Although Harkema wasn't about to comment on it, it's safe to say he is very glad CMU turned its back on Jurek back in 1984.

• STEELERS END SEASON

The Plymouth-Canton Steelers Junior League football teams closed out the 1986 campaign with a trio of wins against the South Lyon Panthers

The freshmen Steelers, 3-3-2 on the season, won 14-0 behind TDs from Randy Cummings and Andy Coburn. Coburn and David Bucci also teamed up on a safety.

The junior varsity team won 8-7 on Dan Burke's TD and two-point kick. The JV ends up with a 7-1 record.

The varsity Steelers finished with a 6-2 mark after beating South Lyon 20-6. Liam Rentz scored two TDs, Mark Meszaros one and Mike Teller added a twopoint kick.

KICK TRYOUTS

The Vardar III soccer team will conduct tryouts for boys born in 1974 or 1975 at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 9, at the Whitman Center in Livonia. The tryouts are open to boys in Plymouth, Canton, Northville and Novi areas.

After all, he was associated with the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. He seemed a perfect choice to succeed Vern Norris as the Michigan High School Athletic Association's executive director.

Norris often dodged blame. "I only carry out the rules," he'd say. Other times he just wouldn't talk about events that might tarnish the MHSAA's image.

Roberts seemed to be from a different mold. He'd listen. He'd care. Or so we thought

PEOPLE ASSOCIATED with Troy football know differently. Roberts has done a number on them. He congratulated them for helping him enforce the rules. Then he turned those rules against them.

That's the emotional side of the issue. The factual side is just as foreboding. Roberts is attempting to hoist the MHSAA's rules above the

Can it be so? Can any man be arrogant enough to believe his law takes precedence, is actually mightier than those governed by our judicial system?

Apparently so. And caught smack in the middle of this mess is Troy's football team. Robert's MHSAA is attempting to transform the unbeaten Colts into sacrificial lambs.

Here's what's happened. In August, Ryan O'Rourke went out for Troy's team. O'Rourke, a junior, had transfered from Birmingham Brother Rice. MHSAA rules stipulate that any transfer who changes schools without changing school districts must sit out a se Troy principal Al Meloy told the O'Rourkes just that. They asked Meloy to petition the MHSAA for a waiver of the rule. Meloy refused. So they sued him, the Troy school district and the MHSAA.

OAKLAND COUNTY Circuit Court Judge Fred Mester listened to arguments from both sides on Sept. 3. He issued a temporary restraining order and scheduled a full evidentiary hearing a week later. In the meantime, Mester said O'Rourke would be considered eligible under the rules of the MHSAA for interscholastic competition.

That's what Meloy told Troy coach Jeff Keller. In Troy's opening game, a 29-6 rout of Clawson Sept. 5, Keller emptied his bench. Everyone played - including O'Rourke.

The next week, Mester ruled in favor of the MHSAA, Troy High School and Meloy. O'Rourke was ineligible. "We never, ever, ever even considered this kid being eligible," said

The MHSAA expressed its thanks to Meloy, who could have written the petition the O'Rourkes asked for and dumped the entire matter into the MHSAA's laps, in a letter.

Last week - five weeks after Mester's ruling - Meloy got another letter from the MHSAA, once again signed by Roberts. This one brought different tidings. Roberts ruled the opening game must be forfeited by Troy because O'Rourke played.

AT STAKE is a state playoff berth. Meloy was dumbfounded. Meetings were held and a hearing was scheduled before Mester last Wednesday. Mester, too, was dismayed by the MHSAA's callous handling of the matter. He called it "unconscionable and inequitable" and ruled no penalty can be enforced by the MHSAA against Troy.

At issue here is the MHSAA's Regulation No. 5. In essense, it states that any school that uses a player found to be ineligible — whether he was used under a court's restraining order or not - may forfeit that

Mester said he was never informed such a penalty existed when he issued his restraining order. That was the basis for his overturning the MHSAA's ruling. An appeal is now

Why did Keller play O'Rourke if a forfeit was possible? "We were told that if we didn't use him, we could be held in contempt of court," said

Meloy agrees. "What would the community and parents of this kid have said if all 47 other players had played and he didn't?" Not to mention how the courts might have viewed it.

THE DILEMMA was clear: What were Meloy and Keller to do, obey the law or the MHSAA?

Fred Sible, assistant director for the MHSAA, doubted any such penalty would have been leveled against Troy's coaches if they hadn't used O'Rourke. Of course, Sible wasn't the one facing contempt charges.

So O'Rourke played. All of two two quarters of football. We don't need this kind of stuff."

Not where the MHSAA is concerned. Remember, Troy and Meloy were its co-defendents when this started. Meloy was trying to follow the rules. He and Keller operated by the book.

They made just one mistake: They thought a court order should be obeyed. They believed court decisions superceded MHSAA law. Roberts and his cohorts are trying to make them pay for that error.

Good job, King Roberts. You're setting a fine example for the youth of our state. In one swoop, you've taken football off the playing field and made it a courtroom sport; you've shown that compassion and fairness can't interfere with rule enforcement; and you've taken to new heights the MHSAA's unwavering belief that any problem must be molded to fit the rules - no exceptions allowed.

Chris Inch won the individual title finishing in a swift 15:43. He edged two Pioneer runners, Chris Tolonen (15:48) and Jason Colvin (16:01). Farmington's Al Stebbins, at full-strength for the first time since early in the season, placed fourth in 16:09.

Rounding out the Farmington scorers were Brandon London, 12th in 16:34, Matt Walter, 17th in 16:49, and Ron Smedley, 18th in 16:50.

"All our kids just ran super," Young said. "Brad Moss came in 29th and Ken Dunneback was 31st. And Stebbins looked good. He's really come along."

IN THE GIRLS race, Pioneer placed four runners in the top 10. Seanea Arnold (18:49) and Danielle Harpell (18:55) went 1-2. Gabrielle Brown was sixth (19:39) and Allegra Alexander was eighth (19:41).

Farmington was boosted by a best-ever effort from freshman Jennifer Kiel. Kiel placed seventh with a Farmington-record time of 19:40. Annette Sulick set the old mark of 19:46 in 1982.

"Jenny just ran out of her mind," said Barrett. "She had been running second to Bonnie Stecker all season but she took charge Saturday. It was nice to see a freshman perform like that."

Stecker came home 15th (20:08), followed by Amy Trunk in 30th (20:45), Nicole Jelley in 31st (20:45) and Anna Quenneville in 34th (20:49).

"I told the kids before the race, we can end our season today or we can go for it," Barrett said. "They

Rocks and Chiefs DNR acts on hunter safety

staff writer

I overheard a group of archery deer hunters talking over lunch the other day, and what I heard shocked

"All I had was a sound shot this morning," said one hunter. "Yeah. I heard this crrrunch, crrrunch, crrrunch, so I shot at it." Another of the group asked what happened next, and the hunter replied. "Then I heard crunch, crunch, crunch, crunch, crunch, crunch, crunch and it ran

This brought a round of laughter from the group, thinking their buddy had let one get away.

A sound shot. That scared me to death. To think that there are actually people (I refrain from using the term hunter because they obviously don't know the first thing about hunting) sitting in the woods shooting at sounds. How did he know what made the sound? Maybe it was a farmer's cow that had wandered from his pasture. Or, worse yet, what if it had been a person?

I'd heard of things like that happening, but I always thought those stories were just conjured up by someone trying to prove a point. Boy, was I wrong.

The incident persuaded me to call the Department of Natural Resources' Law Enforcement Division and find out more about hunting accidents in general.

THE BARE FACTS are a bit depressing, but compared to the way it used to be, hunting is a lot safer

According to the DNR there were 77 reported hunting accidents in 1985. There were also eight fatali-

Eight people lost their life while hunting. Eight people never returned home to tell the exciting stories of their hunting experience. Eight people will never hunt again.

But what lifted me from my depression was finding out that since the implementation of two hunting safety laws the number of hunting accidents and fatalities has drastically declined.

The first law was established in 1971 and stated that all hunters between the ages of 12 and 16 must successfully complete a hunter's education program.

The second law, established in 1977, stated that all hunters must wear hunter's orange when hunting on public land. That law was ammended in 1985 and now it is mandatory for all hunters to wear hunter's orange on both public and private selves. In 1950 there were roughly 1 million licensed hunters. There were 190 accidents and 25 fatalities that year. In 1960 there were roughly 1.1 million hunters, 296 accidents and 11 fatalities. In 1970 there were close to 1.35 million hunters, 212 accidents and 11 fatalities. In 1980, after the start of the hunter education law, there were 1.47 million hunters, 107 accidents and nine deaths.

In 1985 after the second law went into effect there were 1.24 million hunters, 77 accident and eight

"These were the lowest numbers we've had since 1938," said Jim Dabb, hunter education supervisor with the DNR's Law Enforcement Division. "It used to be considerably higher. The hunter safety programs have made people much more aware, and hunters are more visible in the hunter's orange."

Early reports made to the DNR accidents are down so far. There was one media report of a hunting fatality in southeastern Michigan, but it hasn't been confirmed by a DNR Law Enforcement Division report.

FOR A SAFER hunting season Dabb suggests hunters wear more than the required amount of hunter's orange. He suggests both an orange hat and vest or coat be worn.

He also said hunters should treat every firearm as if it were loaded and to make sure of your target, and what's beyond your target, before pulling the trigger. Hunters should keep track of their hunting companions and never let emotions overcome common sense and safety

"Contrary to common belief, well over half of these accidents involve two people who are hunting in the same party," said Dabb.

Every hunter who enters the woods should know and follow the 10 commandments of hunter safety. If each hunter follows these guidelines and thinks safety before success there's no reason why we all can't have many, many years of safe, successful hunting.

Blazers win 'B' title

Livonia Ladywood and Farmington Harrison were the big winners at the Class B regional cross country meet Saturday at Marshbank Park.

Ladywood and Harrison placed 1-2 in the girls race, while the Harrison boys took third. All three teams will compete in the Class B state meet Saturday hosted by Chelsea.

Ladywood, which scored 24 points to Harrison's 59, was paced by Janine Kloc. Kloc was the individual winner in the girls race with a 20:20 clocking. Harrison's Jenny Anderson placed second (21:08).

Harrison got a fifth-place finish from Edye Fleischer (22:22) and a 13th from Aimee Jarvenpa (24:35).

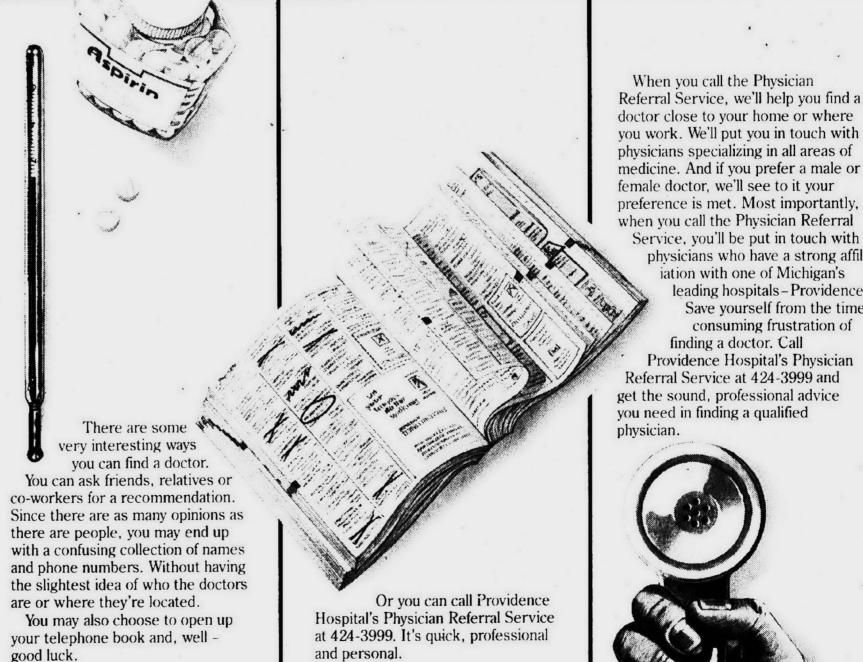

"We're just tickled pink," said Harrison coach John Schumacher. We knew the guys' race would be between six teams and that it would be close. In the girls race we figured the competition wasn't going to be as stiff as it had been in previous

It's the first time a Harrison cross country team, boys or girls, has qualified for state.

CENTER LINE WON the boys race with 64 points. University of Detroit High was second (71) and Harrison third (107).

Chris Hart led the Hawks' contingent placing sixth in 17:35. Jeff Barringer placed 14th (18:00) and Dave Foss 25th (18:21).

Roehling was part of a fivemember design coordinating committee, which also included colleague Matt Bohde. Birmingham interior designer Shirley Maddalena of S.J. Maddalena Inc., CBS Fox director of facilities Harold Domke and an art consultant.

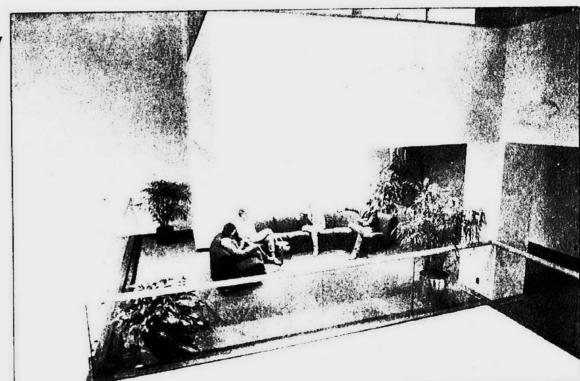

THE 290,000-SQUARE-foot office-warehouse-manufacturing complex reflects CBS Fox's concept of egalitarianism wherein all employees receive the same treatment regardless of how large or small their job in an effort to promote a spirit of teamwork. Roehl-

Inspiration for the employee-oriented design approach was credited to CBS Fox president Fred Fehlauer. "He was a special force in inspiring our firm," said Roehl-ing.

For Fehlauer it was a natural alternative. "We operate in 20 countries, but our name means nothing It's the product we've reproduced that is known. Therefore, our audience is really our employees and we 'play' to them." he said

The building will be the subject of a story in the November issue of Contract, a nationally circulated magazine for the design industry.

The pumps move unwanted hot air generated in the manufacturing end to cooler parts of the building where the offices and atrium are located, thus cutting down on what otherwise would be an enormous heating bill. Roehling explained.

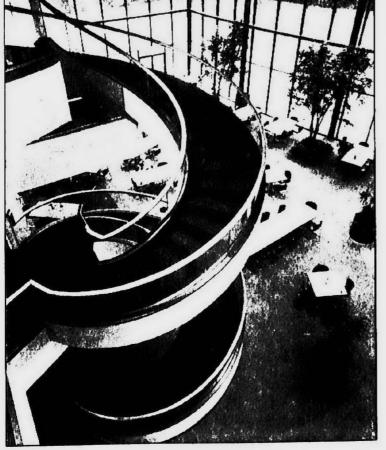

A substantial art collection is in the CBS/Fox headquarters for employees to enjoy. One is the porcelain petal bowl (left) by artist Tom Benesh and a raku creation, titled "Vessel with 2 Wings," by Ed Risak.

Tiered skylights add beauty and light to the corridor linking the office complex to the manufacturing/warehouse facility.

An impressive circular staircase has extra-wide steps to allow for conversations en route.

7 OU MAY KNOW by now that there are a multitude of opportunities to goof with an airbrush. At the top of the long list most common to man (better make that persons) is the "catch-your-foot-in-hose" complaint

This is the most common reason for breaking an airbrush The six-to-10-foot hose is usually looped on the floor or over your knee In the throes of creative expression, it is easy to forget about the airbrush. So when you move, nudge or twist, bump or however it happens - and it is always unexpected and unwanted - your airbrush somehow gets knocked to the floor

The first time it happened to me, it seemed like it fell in slow motion Before it hit the floor, I wondered how I could afford to fix it when I spent all my money buying it. What was I going to do to finish my painting? How could I tell my wife I broke my

FORTUNATELY IT was OK and I did the only thing there is to do to make sure that it didn't happen again. I bought an airbrush hanger which cost about 75 cents. Actually a hanger is only a precautionary measure. I am sure many readers have managed to nudge their airbrush right out

Next to the list is the "too-much-paint-in-too-little-space" syndrome or the "centipede city" painter. With a single-action airbrush, it is important to stay the right distance away from the paper or board.

For example, if you are too close, too much paint will collect on the board and the air will blow little rivers of paint out of the excess, thus looking much like a centipede.

This is an even greater problem with those owning a dualaction airbrush. Here is the cure for "centipede city." Place your second digit on the button rather than your finger tip. It takes a much greater effort to pull your finger back, which seems to give you more "play" with the button. The finger tip is too flexible and gives you too much pull on demand.

I GUARANTEE IT will feel awkward at first, but I also guarantee it will help. Third in the list of goofs would have to be the "staccato scribble stroke."

This mistake I often hear before I can see. In the class with everyone making long continuous sprays, sometimes I will hear a rapid pss . . . pss this is often accompanied by a nervous scribble-patterned stroke. Remember, depress the button and spray in slow and controlled patterns

Of course, there are too many goofs to list, but some noteworthy mistakes are "chief spray in the face," "splatter on the pants," "dirty tip blues" and "clean-it-later complainer."

I feel that ink is the best medium to use with an airbrush while you are learning. It is thin and gives you no trouble becoming atomized. It is rich in coverage, which is important so you can see what pattern you are spraying

Ink cleans easily out of the airbrush and usually a quick rinse with water will do. Most inks are transparent, but with airbrush, transparency is of little use Because of the nature of the spray, even opaque colors take on a form of transparency

Higgens came out with a line of opaque pigmented inks which are my favorite for teaching

AS YOU INCREASE your ability, it is nice to turn to gouache and/or dyes. With gouache, you will encounter the "dirty tip blues" if you fail to thoroughly clean your airbrush after each

But I am a realistic person and I know that if your painting turns out great, you snap it off the easel and go show your critics, leaving a loaded airbrush behind.

Likewise if your painting goes into the circular file or in the bottom of the bird cage, you walk away head drooped, again leaving a loaded airbrush behind. Days later you return to find your color cap is welded into the airbrush, and Hulk Hogan couldn't pull the button back.

Good thing airbrushes are hardy and with a sufficient cleaning can be restored to usefulness.

Alumni exhibit

"WSU in Michigan," an invitational alumni exhibition featuring 60 works by Wayne State University art graduates, will be displayed through Nov. 21 in the Community Arts Gallery. Among the exhibitors is Richard Culling of Livonia, showing "Just Relaxing," (above) an oil on convas. Also appearing in the show is the watercolor-and-ink-on-paper work of Igor Beginin of Canton. Alumni artists are from the classes of 1954 through 1986 and represent 23 Michigan cities. The exhibition, according to Richard Balaitis, chairman of the department of art and history, coincides with the establishment of the School of Fine and Performing Arts and the Sesquicentennial of Michigan. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 1 to 4 p.m. week-

briefly speaking

SENIOR ART EXHIBIT

The Senior Art Exhibit will be on display in the Madonna College art gallery beginning Saturday, Nov. 22 through Sunday, Dec. 7. Among the mixed media on display are drawings, paintings, prints, sculpture and commercial art.

An opening/reception will be held 7:30-9:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 21. Gallery hours are from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, 1-4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. There is no admission charge. For more information, call 591-5102. Madonna is at the corner of I-96 and Levan, Livonia.

Gallery establishes African collection

The show of African tribal art at Park West Galleries of Southfield is one of the largest for-sale exhibits in Detroit to date, said Gary Turla, gallery director.

The gallery, which owns the majority of the 63 works from 12 nations, has made a major commitment to this type of art and will continue to have it available and on display, he said.

The works represent the late 19th and early 20th century up to the last 20 years. Many African pieces are difficult to date precisely, but can placed in more gen eral chronological order.

Francine Farr, assistant curator, Brooklyn Museum of Art, wrote the text for the catalog and was the resource person in documenting the pieces acquired from dealers and private collectors.

All of the works in the collection

One of the interesting works in the show is the Ibo helmet mask. The face is painted white and there's a derby on the head.

The white man's influence is seen the two figures on top sitting back to back are perched on a bicycle.

The polychromed pair of masks, Yoruba, Nigeria, weigh up to 60 pounds each, yet were meant to be worn on the head.

Together they have a strong presence in the gallery where the largest pieces are displayed.

Park West Galleries is at 29469 Northwestern, Southfield.

This seated female figure originated in Cameroon. It's made of cowries, beads, wood, pigment and string.

Zubel

Artist Kachadoorian in special 1-man show

New works from the private collection of Zubel Kachadoorian plus earlier Zubel works from local collectors will be on exhibition at the University of Michigan-library from Nov. 7 to Dec. 14.

Gary Turla, director of Park West Galleries of Southfield, pauses amid some of the 63 works from 12 African nations, which are on exhibit.

The show features work that traces the evolution of that art and outside influences upon it.

Fifteen two-dimensional works and five sculptures belonging to the artist will be on display, along with earlier works borrowed from private collections in western Wayne County. This exhibition is a special one-man show of the annual presentation "The Dearborn Collect," a show highlighting major local artists and collectors.

SMART BUSINESS

SMAHT BUSINESS
Today business demands better office space. More efficient. More "inrelligent." More "user-friendly." But the cost of space has escalated to an all-time high. And all you get is space. EMPTY space. 88
At AmeriCenters, you can lease a plush, private office, with or without furnishings, for as few as six months, and you can tap extensive secretarial services including word processing and phytocopyring

vices including word pro-cessing and photocopying and high tech services such as facsimille and electronic imagine, a prestigious off-ice suite with a support staff and all the service ad-vantages normally avail-able only to big business. All at a cost far lower than

AmeriCenters. Now that's smart business
