The Friends of the Dunning-Hough Library are sponsoring the annual children's bookmark contest.

This year's theme will be "Take Time to Read." The theme may be used in the bookmark design, but it is not mandatory. All Plymouth-Canton students in grades 1-9 are eligible to participate in the contest. Entries must be turned in at the library by Oct. 28. All entries must measure 2 1/4 by 8 1/4 inches and should be done in black pen. Entry forms are available at the local schools or at the library.

The 12 winning entries will be printed and distributed with each book checked out at the library. A reception for the winners and their guests will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 16. Judges for the contest will include local artists, educators and library personnel.

ENTERTAINS:

The Plymouth Polish Centennial Dancers and Crazy Richard the Madd Juggler of Plymouth is among the entertainers who will be performing at the 40th anniversary celebration of Madonna College from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 7, in the Activities Center on the campus at Schoolcraft and Levan. Crazy Richard has made appearances in Plymouth and Canton with his act of juggling fire. Other entertainers for the Madonna Birthday Bash are magicians and clowns.

COMMENDED:

Six seniors at Plymouth Salem High School have been designated Commended Students in the 1988 National Merit Scholarship Program. Principal Gerald Ostoin announced that the following have earned commended status: Missy K. Brenner, Douglas M. Donaldson, Soo M. Kwon, Arpan R. Patel, Nancy I. Rekuć and Julie A. Valsa.

Although the qualifying test scores of commended students are high, they did score slightly below the level of semifinalists, who are now eligible to compete for National Merit scholarships.

ABOUT SCHOOLS:

Dr. Edwin Page of Plymouth spoke last week at the University of Detroit on "Critical Issues in the Schools Now and Their Implications for the Twenty-First Century."

Page, a professor of education in the University of Detroit School of Education and Human Services, worked for 30 years for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, his last position being executive director of special programs and student services.

Page's talk at U of D focused on: the educational reform movement of the past five years; the nationwide teacher shortage; recent legislative actions, judicial decisions and new rules and regulations that affect the handicapped; and the extremists' influence on school curricula.

Page is the executive director of the Michigan Association of Administrators in Special Education and last year served as president of that association. He is a member of the Statewide Dissemination Service Advisory Board, which provides parents, consumers and mental health advocates with information on programming activities, government activities and pending legislation.

For Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, Page had administrative responsibilities in special education, student support services, Title I, Head Start and Indian education.

Salem's queen crowned

Senior Crystal White pulls her royal robe across her shoulder moments after being crowned Plymouth Salem's 1987 Homecoming Queen Friday night. Senior Mike Stout was selected Homecoming King. In addition to their own awards, White and Stout also celebrated Salem's 35-21 victory against the Farmington Falcons. The Rocks' win snapped a two-game losing streak and raised their overall record to 4-2. They are 2-2 in Lakes Division play. For more game details, turn to 1C.

Budget hearing Tuesday

By Doug Funke
staff writer

If you're a Plymouth Township resident and your house has a market value of $100,000, figure on paying about $189 in property taxes next year for municipal services and operations.

A public hearing has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at township hall, 42350 Ann Arbor Road, on a 1988 spending plan proposed by Supervisor Maurice Breen for that money and other anticipated revenue sources.

A copy of the proposed budget is available in the township clerk's office for public inspection during business hours. The township board could adopt the budget Tuesday after the hearing.

BREEN'S OPERATING budget anticipates revenues and expenses of $4.4 million. Property taxes account for about 36 percent of all revenues.

Consider the theoretical $189 municipal property tax bill.

According to charter and tax rates approved by the electorate, $142 would be spent for fire and police services and $47 for other township operating expenses.

Salaries, supplies and equipment for police and fire operations combined were budgeted at $1.7 million.

Schools want land off township rolls

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Plymouth-Canton school officials would rather fight than pay.

Taxes, that is. Plymouth Township's decision to place a 17-acre vacant parcel owned by the school district on the tax rolls — a decision affirmed by the township's board of review — has school officials wondering.

And scurrying for legal advice. "Behind it, of course, they (township officials) would like to get the property," said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business. "They're going at it all wrong."

Township officials have made no secret of the fact that they'd like to acquire the parcel by purchase or as an outright gift to expand Township

Park at Ann Arbor Trail and McClumpha Road.

"Where we are now is we've turned it over to our attorney," Hoedel said.

THE LAND WAS put on the tax rolls last year because it wasn't being used for a public purpose, said John McLenaghan, an appraiser for the firm contracted to take care of assessment matters for the township.

He said it's his understanding that Supervisor Maurice Breen called for a study of all publicly owned lands in the township.

Breen was out of town late last week and unavailable for comment.

The school district acquired the property in 1968 for $59,885 as a future elementary school site.

"There are no immediate plans. However, it could very well develop as the population continues to grow," Hoedel said.

The school district received its first tax bill in the summer of 1986, Hoedel said. The amount was $1,094 — half of the school tax due for the year.

Hoedel didn't pay. "I'd be writing a check to ourselves."

INSTEAD, he wrote to Mary Brooks, township treasurer, indicating his belief that the property should be exempt from tax. He also requested that the board of review consider the matter.

Meanwhile, another tax bill — for $1,916 — arrived last December and one this summer — for $1,034.

School officials only recently learned indirectly that its exemption request was denied by the board of review.

George McEachran, equalization director for the Wayne County Bureau of Taxation, said the school district should win this dispute.

"In the school code, there's a section that says school property can't be taxed in any event unless it's been rented out for private purposes for two years," he said.

"I'm sure it will get off the rolls," Hoedel said. "It's just a question of time. We'll protect it."

City asked to share Tri-City program cost

By Tedd Schneider
staff writer

An appeal is being made to officials in Plymouth, Canton and Livonia to see if there is interest in helping fund an area-wide recreation program for the handicapped.

Last August a decision was made to scale down the Tri-City Therapeutic Recreation program to a Westland residents-only effort.

Participants appealed that decision and asked that Tri-City be allowed to continue serving the handicapped in Wayne, Westland, Garden City, Canton, Plymouth, Livonia.

The Westland City Council has expressed a willingness to do that if

Handicapped program was scaled down

other municipalities agree to share the expense. Letters have been sent making that request to heads of government in Livonia, Plymouth and Canton.

Westland scaled down the program because it had been picking up the bill for the program which benefits handicapped residents in surrounding communities. If other municipalities do not participate, Westland plans on charging non-residents a $150 annual fee.

This past year a therapeutic recreation program was started in Canton and Plymouth, with assistance from the respective recreation departments, but participation reportedly has been low as handicapped residents continued to involve themselves in the more established Tri-City program.

LAST MONDAY, the Westland City Council agreed to schedule a study session concerning the fate of the program, initiated nearly 11 years ago for handicapped adults.

No date has been set for the session, which is expected to include council members from Garden City and Wayne, former partners in the Westland-based recreation program.

The decision by council members came during an emotional demonstration by about 50 program supporters who attended the regular council meeting. Speakers included several handicapped Tri-City participants, who were applauded by others in the audience after they spoke in favor of the program.

The new study session doesn't mean the program is about to be reinstated under its former guidelines, said Ken Mehl, council president.

The council approved changes suggested by the administration to address what they saw as inequities in the program.

City officials had voiced displeasure over the fact that Westland contributed more than 60 percent of Tri-City's $73,000 budget last year, while only 204 Westland residents were enrolled among the 544 clients.

"Things will not go back to the way they were," Mehl said following the meeting.

He said the council agreed to the

On Target

Canton outlet is store chain's aim

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Canton Township is among seven Detroit-area communities selected by Dayton Hudson Corp. for a Target Store.

The Minneapolis, Minn.-based department store chain is building a 100,000-square-foot retail outlet on the north side of Ford a quarter-mile east of Sheldon.

The store expects to provide 250 jobs.

THE CANTON Township Board approved Target Store's site plan Tuesday night.

Target Stores are a merchandiser of discounted apparel for children and adults; shoes, accessories and jewelry; housewares; small appliances; hardware; TVs; toys; sporting goods; school supplies; health and beauty aids; lawn equipment; and paper goods. The store carries nationally recognized brands and has a snackbar.

Dayton Hudson's Thomas Bonnevill told Canton trustees that "we want to open in October 1988, but that's a real tough order because of all the stores we're pushing."

Target Store grand openings took place yesterday in Westland, Dearborn, Detroit, Pontiac and at Lakeside and Southland malls.

Located in 24 states, Target Stores are the largest division of Dayton Hudson, which operates J.L. Hudson department stores, Mervyn's, specialty stores and the Dayton stores of Minnesota.

Trustee Steve Larson said, "I'm happy Target Stores are coming here. I think they'll be an asset to the community."

Canton is Target site

SUPERVISOR James Poole asked Bonneville why he didn't plan to plant more trees on the eight-acre site, which is in Canton's downtown development district.

(By law, communities may use tax revenue from downtown districts for special, localized public improvements. In Canton, the district encompasses 85 acres on either side of Ford Road between Sheldon and Morton-Taylor. A proposed boulevard, park, and public buildings are intended to make the area Canton's "town center.")

Bonneville said the cost of removing snow from parking lots landscaped with trees and shrubbery "about doubles or triples. And merchants go bananas if leaves and trees block their signs from view."

"We're very concerned about landscaping. What we've provided is more than your ordinance demands," said Bonneville.

"We're trying to soften the side of our building up against the side of Ford Road. We do believe it's real important for a city to have an entrance."

Dave Nicholson, director of Canton's community and economic development department, said this is "the first development to occur in the district north of Ford Road; therefore the project will somewhat set precedent for future development in this vicinity."

Budget hearing Tuesday

Currently, the township employs 13 full-time and 11 part-time police officers and 16 full-time firefighters.

Expenses to administer all other departments — excluding water and sewer, a separate budget — were estimated at $1.4 million.

Fringe benefits for all employees covered by the general operating budget were expected to cost an additional $555,500.

Also, $265,000 was listed as unallocated contingency money.

ANTICIPATED revenue sources besides property taxes include:

State revenue sharing, $1.2 million; permits, fees and licenses, $440,200; and distribution of fines from 35th District Court, $210,000.

The owner of a house with a market value of $100,000 also can expect to pay $55 next year to retire the debt that paid for construction of the township's water and sewer systems.

The township's budget year begins Jan. 1.

study session "because we want to know if officials in the other cities have suggestions for a better way to run the program."

Council member Kent Herbert, who attended a meeting of Tri-City supporters the previous week, agreed. "The study session will give us a chance to find out exactly what officials in other cities are thinking."

Mike Mushett, former program director and spokesman for the Committee to Save Tri-City, said he was happy the council has decided to continue the dialogue despite its decision in August.

"It's a start," he said. During the meeting, Mushett expressed dissatisfaction with the way the administration handled the Tri-City situation over the summer. He claimed the city's efforts to entice other cities to contribute financially to the program consisted of sending out "a letter that was more like a bill than anything else. There was no dialogue or anything else."

PROGRAM leaders also stressed that the large number of participants from throughout the western Wayne County area is one element that helped make the award-winning program successful since its inception 11 years ago.

Falling

Dead vines expose bright orange pumpkins ready to be picked.

Apple pickers ride out to the orchard at Plymouth Cider Mill.

SIGNS OF FALL are all around us, although many have become so much a part of our daily scenery we almost take them for granted. Geese flying in formation — nature's air squadrons — are becoming more of a daily occurrence. Hard kernels of field corn hidden away in dried-up husks are all that's left in fields so fertile not that many weeks ago.

Orange pumpkins now seemingly rise out of the ground as dying vines droop toward the ground, uncovering the fruit of fall. Apples ripen, cider flows, and the changing color of leaves is marching forward from the north towards the Plymouth-Canton community. Feel the sticky carmal apples, and pick up the acorns and black walnuts laying on the ground.

Laughter can be heard as adults and children go on hayrides through the fields and down country lanes. Cheering is heard as youth play the games of fall — football, soccer, girls basketball. Yet some athletes compete in silence as runners brave the wet, damp air in cross-country treks of endurance.

Smell the sweetness of hot chocolate on a brisk Saturday tailgate party, smell the aroma of kielbasa simmering on the grill. Smell the hot soup simmering on the stove, and the scent of fresh-baked bread cooling on the counter. Feel the cold air and the sun sets, feel the comfort of a wool sweater as it warms the body, scrape the frost off windows in the morning.

These are the sights, sounds, feel and smell of autumn. Summer is dying, winter's birthing begins.

Field corn, used for animal feed, awaits harvest.

Sheriff opposes combined park, road patrol

By Wayne Pool
staff writer

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara believes the debt-plagued county could save nearly $1.5 million next year by combining sheriff's department park and road patrols.

But sheriff Robert Ficano believes the move could cost the county money, possibly canceling a $1.1 million state grant given specifically for road patrol duties. Losing the grant would cripple the county's ability to provide either patrol, Ficano said.

The dispute surfaced during Thursday's annual sheriff's department budget review session with county commissioners.

Park and road patrols could be cut by a combined 12 officers, Ficano said.

The 18-deputy park patrol provides police service in Hines and Elizabeth parks. The 23-deputy road patrol has provided backup traffic patrol work in Inkster, Garden City and Plymouth Township, among other communities.

Saying the two functions are nearly similar, the executive's office proposes assigning road patrol deputies to the parks.

"When they patrol parks they also patrol roads," executive department spokesman Thomas McCarthy told the commission's Ways and Means Committee.

COMBINING the two activities would save $1.5 million, according to executive's office estimates. Reduced spending for deputies' salaries, benefits and pensions would account for roughly 60 percent of the savings, estimates showed.

But Undersheriff Warren Evans

'The philosophy is that these deputies are assigned to traffic duties, freeing up local officers to work on other crimes. It's the same philosophy behind the state police patrolling the Detroit highways.'

Robert Ficano
sheriff

said road patrol deputies couldn't patrol off-road park areas without jeopardizing the state grant.

There's nothing to stop deputies from patrolling Hines Drive and letting deputies stop people for speeding and other traffic offenses, Evans said. And if they see other crime going on and don't stop it, I'll fire them. But traffic control is their primary duty.

A Michigan attorney general's review appeared to indicate road patrol deputies could patrol Hines Drive, but not the park itself.

It is quite possible a road going through a county park is a secondary road, the attorney general's office wrote. "If that is the case, it would seem appropriate to use (state grant) money to patrol that road, but not of course, to patrol the park."

"My point is why risk the grant," Ficano said.

McCarthy, however, said he doubted whether the grant would be jeopardized. The state grant, he said, had been discussed in debt-reduction negotiations with Gov. James Blanchard.

"We think we can do what we want under the law," McCarthy said. "Once a full-fledged police force in its own right, the road patrol has been reduced to a supplemental traffic patrol force."

The (road patrol) philosophy is that these deputies are assigned to traffic duties, freeing up local officers to work on other crimes," Evans said. "It's the same philosophy behind the state police patrolling the Detroit highways."

The road patrol force stood at 18 deputies before a 1981 outbreak, Ficano said.

The sheriff's department is down playing the dispute, saying it didn't appear as serious as past budget battles. "This isn't a war," undersheriff Warren Evans said. "We're pointing differing at this point."

Ficano likewise said there were "substantial areas of agreement" between himself and the county executive in other areas of the department budget.

EMU adds 3 new majors for undergrads

The Eastern Michigan University Board of Regents, approved the curricula for three new majors in journalism, public relations and language and world business, to be offered beginning in January.

With this approval, EMU is the first university in the nation to offer an undergraduate world business program, which also is a foreign language-business program.

Concentrations in journalism and public relations in the department of English language and literature have drawn capacity enrollments for several years, so most courses for those majors already are in place at EMU. Last year, in anticipation of the two new majors, three new courses were added to the English offerings and one new faculty member was hired.

The journalism major will offer students a broad liberal arts education with technical journalism courses as its center and a 20-hour minor course of study chosen from economics, English, foreign language, geography, history, political science or sociology.

The public relations major will be interdisciplinary, drawing from the departments of English language and literature, communication and theater arts, and art with a minor chosen from marketing, management, communications, writing, social science, telecommunications or a field of particular interest to the student.

The language and world business offering will allow students to obtain both bachelor of business administration and bachelor of arts degrees in language and world business under a five-year program.

Both programs separately are in place at EMU, in the College of Business and the College of Arts and Sciences, although the bachelor of arts is offered under a language and international trade major.

Under a U.S. Department of Education Planning Grant, four new courses have been added to EMU's business curriculum in anticipation of the new major. All business courses also have been revised to include international elements.

The program will offer students an international bachelor of business administration degree in any of the standard tracks of business along with a bachelor of arts in applied German, French or Spanish and international trade.

EXERCISING IF YOU HAVE ARTHRITIS

Often patients with arthritis ask their doctor, "What exercises should I do to strengthen my joints?"

When your doctor replies that no exercise for arthritic patients will help the joints, the physician is not putting down the value of such effort. Having arthritis means that damage has occurred within the joint, and no activity yet devised is able to prevent or reverse that damage.

However, exercise is useful for arthritis. Such activity helps stretch muscles, which because of pain, are in a prolonged state of contraction. Also, exercise increases the blood supply to the muscles, tendons and ligaments that surround the joint. The resulting increased warmth and further removal of toxic substances help the joint overcome inflammation.

If you have arthritis, the best exercises are those that move the joints and muscles without weights or other artificial strains. You can reach this end with stretching movements repeated 5-10 times and a total exercise time that lasts no more than 5-8 minutes per session.

Crew of freight train under fire for wreck

(Part 2)

As soon as news of the railroad wreck between Salem and Plymouth on July 20, 1907, reached Pere Marquette General Superintendent Trump he gathered as many doctors and trained nurses as he could. They accompanied him on the wrecking train, which went to the scene. Also with Trump was William F. Riley, chief clerk of the railroad's legal department, and a number of other officers.

Said the Detroit Journal: "In the seven years prior to Saturday's wreck, the Pere Marquette had but two wrecks attended with fatalities. At East Paris, on Dec. 25, 1903, there was a collision in which 22 were killed. At Elmdale, in Nov., 1904, there was a wreck in which six were killed."

Interviewed by reporters General Superintendent Trump blamed the crew of the freight train for the wreck. The railroad maintained that position throughout the inquest, despite contrary evidence presented at that time. Trump said the freight crew had received instructions that the excursion train had the right of way all the way from Ionia to Detroit; that the freight was to lay at Plymouth until the special passed.

On the Wednesday following the accident, a jury was impaneled in Northville by Justice of the Peace Joslyn for the inquest held in that city. In spite of Superintendent Trump's attribution of blame, Prosecutor George F. Robison, Assistant Prosecutor James A. Robison and Deputy Sheriff Martz went to work obtaining their own evidence of responsibility for the tragedy, which took 33 lives and injured 100 others.

AS NOTED in an earlier column, the jury found that the accident was due to a poorly-written train order.

The line leading from the word Salem might easily seem to lead to the figure 9:25 a.m. the time the excursion train was due at Plymouth, instead of leading to 9:10 a.m., the excursion train's time at Salem. The freight crew thought they had until 9:25 a.m. to reach the switch at Salem.

No one was indicted, although the railroad continued to insist that the accident was the fault of freight conductor Hamilton and engineer Rogers and that neither would be reinstated.

A news clipping dated July 31, 11 days after the wreck, indicates that a Pere Marquette claim agent with several assistants was in Ionia settling minor claims of victims of the accident. The railroad men went around town paying bills for doctors, and for clothing and other effects lost in the wreck. "The claims of those who lost breadwinners have not been taken up, although in a number of cases funeral expenses were paid."

FOR THE WEEK following the wreck there were several funerals a past and present

Sam Hudson

day in the small town of Ionia.

Fifteen funerals were held on a single day. Funeral services for the conductor of the excursion train, Earl J. Pixley, were held at the family home. Pere Marquette shopmen attended in a body.

Prior to the funeral, Pixley's widow, Effie, received a letter from Detroit, written by her uncle. Dated July 21, 1907, it still reposes in Mrs. Tucker's scrapbook. It reads:

"Dear Effie: Mr. Munro and myself went over to Plymouth this morning and saw the officers of the railroad company, the doctor and the undertaker who had charge of Earl's remains, and they assured us of the positive identity of him by the buttons on his uniform and contents of his pockets, which the undertaker holds and will turn them over to you when so authorized. The name is Schrader Brothers, Plymouth. We did not see the remains as Mr. Schrader told us it was unrecognizable."

Sad information to have to give to the widow and her three children. A fourth Pixley child, Earldia, was born Aug. 4, 1907, three weeks after her father was killed in the wreck. Earldia Pixley became Mrs. John N. Tucker of Detroit, and it is she who kept the scrapbook of clippings about the wreck and her father, which provided me with much of the information I am now reporting.

Mrs. Tucker's first name, Earldia, came from her father Earl's desire for a boy in the family. When she was born her mother gave her a variation of his name.

CONDUCTOR Earl Pixley had worked for other railroads before joining the Pere Marquette.

Documents in the scrapbook show that he resigned as a switchman for the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad in 1897, and was a brakeman on the Detroit, Grand Rapids and Western Railroad in December, 1899. That railroad was the east-west line that crossed with the predecessor of the Pere Marquette at Plymouth in 1871.

Pixley also had worked for the Rock Island Railroad, running out of Goodland, Kansas. Mrs. Tucker's scrapbook contains copies of his old train orders, meal tickets, railroad passes, and the letters of condolence received by her mother.

Mrs. Tucker said the excursion train from Ionia was an extra job for her father and that he was paid $18 for the trip. She now lives with her daughter, Mrs. Mary Ann Smith, in Detroit. Mrs. Smith is the mother of Kim Szczodrowski of Plymouth who told me of the existence of the scrapbook.

Earldia Pixley married John Tucker, general sales manager of a Detroit screw products firm and a former secretary-treasurer of the Pontiac Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Tucker died in 1968.

What became known as the Salem Wreck occurred 80 years ago, the year Earldia Pixley Tucker was born. Most of the residents of Plymouth who were old enough in 1907 to have visited the scene of the disaster have since passed away.

But the tragic memory of it still lingers in stories passed down, and in newspaper accounts in scrapbooks kept by people such as Mrs. Tucker, who has strong personal reasons for never forgetting it.

Mangled iron is what remains of the wreckage of this Pere Marquette passenger car.

Youth camp agreement appears close

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

A new Wayne County youth camp could be operating by next summer, as county commission chairman Arthur Carter and county executive Edward McNamara move closer on the issue.

In July, McNamara vetoed Carter's initial youth camp financing proposal. But there are signs the executive may approve a revised draft recently ratified by county commissioners.

"This looks more like something we could support," deputy executive Michael Duggan said. The latest proposal calls for county "seed money" to establish the youth camp, while a private agency would eventually assume control.

How much money the county would provide still needs to be worked out, Duggan said.

The previous proposal called for a county-operated camp, supported by private contributors.

Carter said he hoped the executive's office and county probate court would move quickly to approve the new proposal.

"It's clear the space is badly needed," Carter said.

As proposed, the camp would rehabilitate young offenders.

"We're looking at kids 13 and under," Carter said.

"We've just been ordered to provide more space at the county jail for adult criminals. We'll continually be locked into that kind of regressive spending if we don't attack crime at its source."

The camp could be operating at partial capacity by next summer if approval comes quickly, Carter said. The camp would eventually hold 100 or more young offenders.

In other news, Carter and McNamara appear to be close on an agreement that would send gang leaders and other troubled youth to a specialized school outside Philadelphia.

Glen Mills Schools, in Concordville, Pa., rehabilitates teenaged males with felony convictions.

"It's designed for drug dealers, not the kids they sell to," Carter said.

The private school would charge $73.50 per day per youth for its services. Current youth home programs cost $143 per day for each enrolled youth, Carter said.

Up to 50 young Wayne County offenders between 14-18 could be accepted, school officials said.

Carter and McNamara toured school grounds, accompanied by chief probate Judge Joseph Pernick, county youth home director Peter Wilson and radio personality Martha Jean "The Queen" Steinberg, chairwoman of the recent county Youth At Risk task force.

"I think the executive came away impressed," Duggan said. But this would only handle a limited number of youngsters.

The school, which dates to 1826, provides educational programs in a campus-like setting. Look-ups were abolished a decade ago.

Some of their kids have gone on to college, including such schools as Dartmouth, Carter said.

Vocational education, sports, and guided social activities also are provided.

Its programs are tailored for young felons, as well as youth who display suicidal, psychotic or self-destructive behavior, according to school officials.

"This looks more like something we could support."

Senate amends, passes 65 speed limit bill

By Tim Richard
staff writer

They could call it the "Cruce-ler Bill."

The Michigan Senate last week passed 30-4, and sent to the House, a 65 mph speed limit bill sponsored by Doug Cruce, R-Troy.

But in two days of debate, senators introduced some elements from a broader bill sponsored by Sen. Richard Fessler, R-Commerce.

"It is not a bill which jeopardizes highway funds," Cruce told the Senate. He referred to the fact that his bill applied only to interstate freeways whereas Fessler's also covered four-lane divided highways such as US-23 (Ann Arbor-Flint corridor).

Most state officials believe federal aid could be cut off if Michigan went as far as Fessler wanted to go in raising speed limits.

Fessler's district includes West Bloomfield, Bloomfield Hills, Bloomfield Township and Southfield Township. Cruce's district includes Birmingham and some of the Royal Oak area.

SENATORS failed to give Gov. James J. Blanchard what he wanted — a $5 surtax on traffic tickets to finance more police patrols.

Cruce's bill will apply to 720 miles of rural interstate freeway — in areas of less than 50,000 population.

"It is most likely to be signed by the governor," he said.

The Senate tacked on several amendments by voice vote during general orders debate.

• Cruce would have provided a "sunset" date of April 1989, at which time the speed limit would automatically drop back to 55 unless the Legislature acted again. Senators removed the sunset date, as in the Fessler bill.

• Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, won approval of an amendment to charge no "points" to a driver's record for conviction of speeding one to five mph over the limit.

Sen. Gilbert DiNello, D-East Detroit, blistered the points concept.

"The Secretary of State keeps a record of your points for two years; then you have a clean slate. The insurance companies keep your points almost forever," he said, charging insurers raise rates for drivers with points even when those drivers have no accidents.

• Sen. Connie Binsfeld, R-Maple City, won support for her amendment to make fines "suggested" instead of "mandated," again bringing the Cruce bill closer to Fessler's version.

"We have judges fully capable of making the punishment fit the crime," said Majority Leader John Engler, R-Mount Pleasant.

FESSLER LOST with his pet amendment — to make the speed limit 65 by day and 55 by night. That had been a key provision in his bill, intended to placate those opposed to raising the speed limit at all.

But Faxon countered that he can see as well "by the light of the moon" as by daylight, and that there is less traffic at night.

The Senate also shot down Fessler's request to pass both his bill and Cruce's. He said it would force the House of Representatives to negotiate with Blanchard and pick one version.

"Let's give the tools to the House to work out the differences," he said.

"It's irregular to write two bills on the exact same subject," objected Cruce.

Faxon, a lawmaker more than 20 years, agreed with Cruce.

"I never heard of two bills, in all my years, on the same subject," said Faxon, whose district includes Southfield. "After you perfect one bill, what's the purpose?"

After his bill was postponed for a week, then for a day, Fessler withdrew it entirely.

HERE'S THE schedule of penalties under Cruce's bill

- One to five mph over the limit — zero points, $20 fine
- Six to 10 mph — one point, $20 fine
- 11-15 mph — two points, $40 fine
- 16-20 mph — three points, $60 fine
- More than 20 mph — four points, $80 fine

Crockpot serves up tasty meal

Funny how times change. Remember all the hoopla about crockpots?

Well, I was cleaning my basement out and came across the hardly-ever-used, still-in-the-original-box crockpot and decided to give it one last fling before hitting the garage sale pile already forming in the far corners of my basement.

I never could understand why slow cooking ever died out. I mean, really, fast food is fast but surely everyone knows the secret of slow cooking. The juiciest, tenderest melt-in-your-mouth hunk of meat or vegetable was just hours away, while the kitchen remained cool.

Well, lo and behold, with the trim on my house begging for a paint job, the grass needing cutting, the garden to be planted and the garage to be cleaned, it was about time I spent the day outside doing some work while I let my dinner cook all day, inside, by itself with nary a peek of the lid or stir of a spoon.

Contrary to popular belief, crockpot cookery shouldn't be limited to soups and stews, although, in all honesty, they do make up the crockpot's main repertoire of recipes. Personally speaking, you can't beat the old slow cooker for mellowing in the all-day-cooked flavor of chili, spaghetti sauce, barbecue beef or of chicken paprikash. Cheaper, tougher cuts of beef thrown into the pot with a cup of red wine and a few vegetables turn into fork-tender roasts. These roasts have an added bonus of all the juice in the bottom that turns into the best-tasting gravy money can't buy.

AS FAR AS SPECIAL secrets are concerned for what can go in and what can't, don't shed a tear. If you can cook it, it can be cooked in a crockpot. A visit to my local library turned up an armful of crockpot cookbooks that will tell you how to bake cakes, proof breads and melt chocolate. You still might be able to pick up a paperback here and there, but be cautious of recipes laden with salt and loaded with liquids.

Rule No. 1 when crockin' has you limiting the liquid of everything by more than 1/2. Because of lids on the pots, a great deal of natural juice and moisture is retained, creating an almost sinful amount of the juiciest juice just begging to be made into a reduction, gravy or sauce.

Rule No. 2 has you cooking the potatoes and carrots along with most foods but holding off on other vegetables, especially the more tender, and cooking them during the last quarter of cooking time. Roughly figure on cooking times to equal out to about an hour per pound of whatever you want to cook. In other words, a four-pound chicken will take a little more than four hours of cooking time. Because most moisture is retained, trim as much fat as possible and even pre-brown chicken and meat for the best taste.

So why wait till it's 90 degrees out to find your crockpot. Find it, dust it off and try these great recipes that will give you time to go out and paint the trim, do the lawn work or play the back nine in Leanington.

Oh, and if you come to my garage sale, don't ask for a crockpot. Bon Appetit!

MISSION CHICKEN

Stir in grapes. Arrange chicken on a serving platter and sprinkle with almonds. Pass the sauce in a separate bowl or thicken it slightly with flour and use as a gravy over the chicken.

Hundreds run gamut hot to mild

By Cymbre Sommerville
 special writer

Mustard is nothing new. It was widely used by the Greeks more than 2,000 years ago. The slightly strong cooked greens were a favorite vegetable, and the Greeks quickly discovered that powder from the dried seeds made a delicious condiment.

Mustard has maintained its popularity over the centuries, and today more and more Americans are pushing ordinary yellow mustard aside and opting for specialty mustards that come in a variety of flavors. Mustard greens are still added to salads and soups or cooked with other greens.

Mustard is no longer just for dabbing on hot dogs and hamburgers or dolloping into potato salad. It comes in hundreds of styles from jalapeno hot to a mild dill. It can add flavor to almost any food from appetizers, cheese, eggs and vegetables to fish, game meats, poultry, salads and sauces.

"This is a time when people have a half-dozen mustards in the refrigerator," said Michelle Marshall, maker of Mucky Duck mustard.

"PEOPLE ARE USING mustard more and more," said Rich Carter, an employee at the Market Basket, 32654 Franklin Road, Franklin. Carter said that in the last couple of years the store has added considerably more mustards to the shelf.

John Jonna, merchandise manager of the Merchant of Vino stores, said he has noticed mustard becoming more popular in the last five years.

"Mustard is a strong category in the gourmet field," Jonna said. It ranks third, right behind candy and cookies, he said.

MUSTARD HAS withstood the test of time thanks to its versatility. Mustard seed is first on the label's ingredient list but what may follow is virtually endless.

"There are hundreds and hundreds of methods and ways of making mustard," Jonna said.

"We could fill the store with it," Carter said.

The Merchant of Vino carries at least 100 kinds of mustard on the shelf while the Market Basket carries close to 30.

Essentially two kinds of mustard seed are in the condiment, black or white. The seeds are generally used in two ways. They can be left whole or coarsely ground to give mustard a grainy texture.

The majority of mustards are smooth or creamy. Smooth mustards contain seed that had some of the oil removed, and then was crushed and run through a milling machine.

Mustard producers have greatly expanded their horizons since the first Greek dabbed the condiment on roast meat. Consumers today have an endless array of mustards from which to choose.

INGREDIENTS MAY include sage, vinegar, wine, beer, cognac, peppercorns, mint, raspberry or horseradish. Mustard La Delicate.

Mucky Duck is more than a clever name

By Cymbre Sommerville
 special writer

In a day when up to 60 different types of mustard may be on the grocer's shelf, a successful one must be unique, preferably in both taste and name.

Michelle Marshall of Franklin wanted to give her English pub-style mustard a catchy name, something people wouldn't forget. Today, her Mucky Duck mustard has become a common sight on grocers' shelves statewide.

Marshall, 46, started making her mustard nearly five years ago. Through word of mouth the mustard, her godmother's recipe, became so popular that Marshall and a partner began to market it.

The origins of the name Mucky Duck is explained on the back of each 9 1/4-ounce jar. It comes from a London pub called the Black Swan or, more affectionately by its clientele, the Mucky Duck, Marshall said.

THREE YEARS ago, Marshall bought out her partner and today devotes long hours to her mustard business.

"It went from a cottage industry to a full-time job," she said. "It's really grown."

She began cooking Mucky Duck in a church kitchen but as demand grew the kitchen was soon too small. Mucky Duck is now concocted in Ann Arbor, but quarters will soon be moved to Walled Lake.

Marshall said she has not done any active marketing in two years, yet she bottles some 1,000 jars a week. Mucky Duck is sold in 125 stores in Michigan and in stores in 20 other states as well. A jar ranges in cost from $2.79 to $3.99, Marshall said.

EVEN THOUGH business is better

'I think it's unique because it's hot but it's sweet — a flavor most mustards don't have. There's also no salt or preservatives in my mustard.'

— Michelle Marshall creator of Mucky Duck than ever, Mucky Duck remains Marshall's baby.

"I do everything. I cook it, bottle it, label it and in most cases deliver it," she said.

Even so, she's too busy to work completely alone. She has three employees and her husband does all the bookkeeping.

A CLEVER name makes Mucky Duck mustard tough to forget but it's what's inside the jar that really makes Mucky Duck a standout, Marshall believes.

"I think it's unique because it's hot but it's sweet — a flavor most mustards don't have. There's also no salt or preservatives in my mustard," she said.

In fact, the ingredients are deceptively simple — imported mustard powder, vinegar, eggs and sugar.

WITH WHAT does Marshall recommend her condiment be eaten?

"It's just as good in any kind of cooking as it is on a hamburger, hot dog or ham sandwich," she said.

Marshall recommends it in potato salad, deviled eggs or in meatloaf.

for instance, is a whole grain mustard that contains honey, tangerine, oranges, pineapple, white wine and wine vinegar. La Delicate would be a delicious addition to chicken, Jonna said.

"Standard recipes can be made exciting and interesting by using a different type of mustard," he said.

Instead of adding basic yellow mustard to potato salad, substitute a German beer mustard or a Russian sweet-style mustard. Spread a little authentic brown stadium mustard or a biting, Cajun mustard on a hot dog. Dip a chunk of cheese in a honey mustard.

Plain sandwiches may be spiced up with creole mustard, one of the biggest-selling mustards at the Bottle and Basket, 190 N. Hunter in Birmingham. Creole, a sharp, brown, grainy mustard, contains mustard and vinegar, which Bernie Cole, deli manager, highly recommends on almost any kind of cold cut.

Mustard's smorgasbord of ingredients gives each one a slightly different taste: sweet, spicy, tangy, hot or sharp. The condiment is produced in cities across the United States from New York to New Orleans and in most European countries. Some of these overlooked mustards include an Arizona sage mustard, sharp Bavarian and sweet-and-tangy English pub-style.

Jonna said that about half of the Merchant of Vino's mustards are domestic and the other half imported.

The domestic producers have really expanded their mustard horizons," he said.

THE MUSTARD PLANT grows profusely across the United States. It's a rapidly spreading plant not recommended for herb gardens.

Mustard is often considered a pesky weed by farmers. It's heavily cultivated for its seed in Santa Barbara County, Calif., and in several Western states. It thrives in cold, cool and temperate climates.

Mustard plants come in many varieties, ranging in height from 18 inches to four or five feet. The leaves are fuzzy and varied in color from yellowish to dark green. The pungent seeds originate from clusters of bright yellow flowers, each of which looks like a miniature cross. Powdered mustard seeds range in color from a dark yellow to olive brown.

Mustard not only adds zest to any meal but holds medicinal purposes as well. Oil extracted from the mustard seed is used to make soap. A paste made from powdered seed can be used in a plaster applied to the skin to relieve pain.

Mucky Duck more than a name

"You can put it in a glaze and put it on ham or spread it on salmon steaks or pork chops."

It adds zip to quiche when spread on the bottom of a quiche crust and is excellent when mixed with sour cream and lemon juice and served over vegetables. It can be added to oil and vinegar dressing to bring tang to a garden salad. Mucky Duck also lends itself to sauces, Marshall said.

Marshall is working on a cookbook containing her favorite Mucky Duck recipes.

"I love to cook so it just follows naturally to tell people about all the wonderful ways to use it."

MARTY FIGLEY, 55, of Birmingham also enjoys making her own mustard but has yet to make her hobby a business.

"I enjoy making mustard," she said. "My recipe is from a friend of mine and it's fantastic."

Figley, an active member of the Herb Society of America, began making her mustard more than five years ago before so many different types of mustards were on the marketplace.

Figley said her smooth mustard is an unusual blend of spicy hot and sweet hot, and goes with about everything.

Its base is mustard powder but it also contains four herbs and no salt or preservatives, she said.

Figley wasn't ready to divulge her mustard recipe, but she did share a mustard sauce she and her family love. "It's excellent with ham, lamb and on cheese," she said.

MUSTARD SAUCE

- 4 tablespoons dry mustard
  - 2 tablespoons sugar
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)
  - 2 eggs well beaten
  - 4 tablespoons vinegar
  - 2 tablespoons cold water
  - 1 tablespoon butter
  - 1 cup heavy whipping cream
- Mix first six ingredients together on top of a double boiler in order given. Cook over hot water until it just begins to thicken and no longer. Remove from heat and stir in butter. Cool. Fold whipped cream lightly into cooked sauce.

Whole grains good source of fiber

There is really no great mystery to whole grains. They are simply all of the grain kernel ground into meal or flour. However, when a grain is refined for today's all-purpose white flour, the highly nutritious germ and bran are removed. While enriched flour has some of the thiamine, niacin, riboflavin and iron added back, other vitamins, minerals and dietary fiber are not replaced.

Whole grains are good sources of vitamin E and fiber, two food elements associated with lower cancer risk, so it's a good idea to include them in your menu planning as often as possible. Here are some ideas for increasing your whole grain consumption so you can "have it all."

- Check the labels on breads and cereals to ensure that a whole grain or whole grain flour is listed first.

- Substitute whole wheat flour for all-purpose flour in many baked goods recipes. One cup of finely milled whole wheat flour (or 3/4 cup if coarsely ground) substitutes for one cup of all-purpose flour.
- Use brown (unpolished) rice in place of white (polished) rice for greater nutrition.
- Try barley in a soup or as a side dish, using whole grain rather than pearl barley.
- Bulgur, a variety of whole wheat, is a fine substitute for rice or potatoes.
- Light-textured, mild-flavored millet can replace rice in most recipes.

- 3-4 tbsp. honey
- 1 1/2 cups buttermilk (or skim milk plus 2 tsp. lemon juice)
- 1 egg
- 3 cups whole wheat flour
- 1/2 tsp. baking soda
- 3 tsp. baking powder
- 1/2 cup ground almonds
- 1/2 cup raisins

Combine the honey, buttermilk and egg in small bowl. In a large bowl, blend flour, baking soda, baking powder and ground almonds. Add liquid ingredients to the dry blend, stirring with a spoon only until evenly moist. Add raisins and stir just until evenly distributed. Do not over-mix.

Pour the batter into a greased 5-by-9 loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour, or until a wooden pick inserted into center comes clean. If you prefer a stronger taste of almonds, add a few drops of almond extract instead of increasing the volume of nuts and thereby the fat content.

This recipe will produce one loaf, yielding about 12 slices, with each slice containing about 4 grams of fat and 170 to 230 calories.

SCHOOL FLAVORS

Official school ice creams are being produced by Country Fresh, McDonald and London Dairy, working together with a single flavor house. For Michigan State University, there is Spartan Mint Fudge Ice Cream with fudge pieces and green mint in white chocolate ice cream. For the University of Michigan, there is Michigan Maize'n Berry, a combination of blueberry sauce and graham crust in cheesecake-flavored ice cream. Country Fresh president Delton Parks, an MSU graduate, has declared both ice creams will be treated equally at the company's Livonia and Grand Rapids plants.

ELFIN LOAVES

Single-serve snack breads are in the grocer's freezer case — new Elfin Loaves from Keebler. The loaves are made in four flavors: blueberry, banana, cinnamon-raisin and carrot. The loaves may be microwaved, warmed in an oven, or thawed before serving. Each box contains six individually wrapped, two-ounce servings of the home-style snack bread. Suggested retail price is $2.19 per box. The loaves are made from natural ingredients — blueberries, walnuts and fresh spices — with no preservatives added.

ALMOND RAISIN WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

This hearty bread has the sweet flavor of raisins with just a hint of almonds. Nuts are high in fat and so should be consumed sparingly as an "extra." The small amount in this recipe adds flavor and energy content, without adding too much fat or too many calories.

Send your recipe for turkey stuffing

Recipes have started arriving from readers, in answer to our request for favorite recipes for turkey stuffing.

Everyone who's submitted a recipe, so far, has quite a special way of making stuffing — with some interesting ingredients. We'll print as many of the recipes as possible during November.

But, if you haven't sent in your recipe yet, please do. Mail to Taste Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, P.O. Box 3503, Birmingham 48012.

One reader noted her recipe had been in the family for many years. We welcome traditional, family recipes, but you may submit a new creation if you prefer.

And all the recipes received have been from women. Come, on, fellows, you can get in the act, too. Send us your recipe. We know you're out there cooking.

Macaroons and dough pair in dessert cups

AP — Crumbled macaroons sprinkled between layers of frozen phyllo dough make these dessert cups taste as scrumptious as they look. Strawberries and raspberries make a great alternative filling.

Strawberries and raspberries make a great alternative filling.

PEACH MACARON CUPS

- 8-oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
- 1/2 cup sifted powdered sugar
- 1/4 cup dairy sour cream
- 1-2 tsp. milk
- 1/4 tsp. almond extract
- 6 sheets frozen phyllo dough (18-by-14-inch rectangles), thawed
- 1/4 cup margarine or butter, melted
- 1 cup finely crumbled soft macaroons (about 5 cookies)
- 1 or 2 peaches, sliced

For filling, in a small mixer bowl beat cream cheese, sugar, sour cream, milk and extract with an electric mixer on low speed until smooth. Cover and chill. Meanwhile, brush 1 sheet of phyllo dough with some melted margarine, sprinkle with about 3 tbsp. crumbled macaroons. Repeat layering 4 more times, brushing each sheet of phyllo with margarine and sprinkling with crumbs. Top with the last sheet of phyllo dough, brush with remaining margarine. Cut phyllo stack lengthwise into 3 strips, cut strips crosswise into 4 squares. Press squares into 12 greased muffin cups. Bake in a 350-degree oven 12 to 15 minutes or until golden. Remove to wire rack, cool completely. Just before serving, spoon a rounded tablespoon of filling into each cup. Top with peach slices. Makes 12 servings.

Try various cheese treats

Cheese
With more than 800 varieties of cheese available today, it's no wonder you're confused about how and when to use cheese in your recipes. Well, in this month of "trick or treat," I'd like to teach you a couple of tricks to make some wonderful cheese treats.

First, I'd like to unmask some of the mystery surrounding cheese.

All cheeses, no matter what part of the world they come from, have certain things in common. All cheese is made from the curds of milk that have been expelled of moisture. The curds are packed into molds, then cured or flavored by salting, smoking or injection.

Fresh cheeses include cottage, cream, mozzarella and ricotta. These aren't ripened or aged. Therefore they spoil easily and must be consumed quickly. The best place to buy fresh cheeses is in the supermarket or convenience store, somewhere with a high food turnover.

Hard cheeses such as parmesan, provolone, asiago and romano age for long periods of time and are dense, compact and tangy. (These are suitable for grating over salads and main dishes.) Their shelf life is limited as well. Therefore, the best place for purchase is, again, the market or convenience store.

CHEDDAR, GRUYERE, swiss, jarlsberg and port du salut are all examples of semihard cheese and are favorites of many for cooking and eating. Best purchased in gourmet shops, semihard cheeses have long maturation periods and contain less moisture than fresh or soft cheeses.

The creamy rich soft cheeses like brie, bel paese, fontina, camembert, feta and robiolo are favorites for entertaining and for desserts.

Cheese is full of protein, calcium, amino acids, phosphorus and vitamins. But cheese is also high in fat, calories, cholesterol and sometimes sodium. So do some planning. Look for low-fat, low-sodium cheeses and reduced-calorie products. And when planning a meal with cheese, remember it is a protein source, so you may want to balance out the meal with extra fruit and vegetables.

Now that you know some tricks to selecting cheese, here are the October treats I promised earlier.

CHEESE SOUP

- Makes 2 servings, about 3/4 cup each
- 2 tsp. margarine
- 1/2 cup diced onion
- 1 small garlic clove, minced
- 1 cup water
- 1 packet instant chicken broth and seasoning mix
- 1/8 tsp. caraway seed
- Dash ground nutmeg
- 1/2 cup skim milk
- 2 tsp. all-purpose flour
- 2 oz. emmentaler cheese (a native

swiss cheese), shredded
Dash white pepper

In 1-quart saucepan heat margarine until bubbly and hot, add onion and garlic and saute until onion is tender, 2 to 3 minutes. Add water, broth mix, caraway seed, and nutmeg and stir to combine; bring to boil. Reduce heat to low; let simmer 10 minutes.

In small bowl thoroughly combine milk with flour, making certain that no lumps remain; gradually stir into broth mixture and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is thickened and bubbly. Add cheese and cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until cheese is partially melted; sprinkle with pepper and serve immediately.

Each serving provides: 1 Protein Exchange, 1/2 Vegetable Exchange, 1 Fat Exchange, 1/4 Milk Exchange, 15 calories. Optional Exchange: 195 calories per serving.

CHAYOTES RELLENOS

- Makes 2 servings
- 2 stuffed squash halves each
- 2 medium chayotes, 9 to 10 oz. each (also known as mirliton, vegetable pear or mango squash)
- 1/4 cup minced onion
- 3 tsp. minced green bell pepper
- 1 tsp. seeded and minced drained, canned jalapeno pepper
- 1/2 cup drained, canned whole tomatoes, seeded and chopped
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1 tsp. minced fresh cilantro (Chinese parsley)
- 2 oz. mild cheddar cheese, shredded, divided

In 4-quart saucepan place chayotes and fill pan with water to a depth of about 1 inch. Bring water to a boil, cover saucepan, and cook until chayotes are fork-tender, about 30 minutes. Drain off water and run cold water over chayotes; set aside and let cool.

Spray 9-inch skillet with non-stick cooking spray and heat over medium heat; add onion and peppers and cook, stirring frequently, until onion is translucent. Add tomatoes, garlic, cilantro and saute for 3 minutes longer; transfer to medium bowl and set aside.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Slice each chayote in half lengthwise; remove and discard pit and fibrous core. Using spoon, carefully scoop out pulp, leaving skin intact; save chayote shells. Finely chop pulp and add vegetable mixture; stir in 1 ounce cheese. Spoon 1/4 of mixture into each chayote shell and sprinkle each with 1/4 ounce cheese. Set stuffed shells on baking sheet and bake until heated through and cheese is melted, 15 to 20 minutes.

Each serving provides: 1 Protein Exchange, 3 Vegetable Exchanges, 218 calories per serving.

Popularity comes and goes

One of the many curious aspects of the world of wines (as I suppose it is with a lot of commodities) is the cycle of popularity and decline through which they go. Today, it is possible to say that chenin blanc riesling and the gamays are definitely "out."

On the other hand, the popularity of Cabernet Sauvignon and Chardonnay are now unprecedented. Everyone it seems is producing them, from France to California to Australia.

And there are those wines which hang on barely to their modest positions in the marketplace, neither growing nor diminishing, but marginal nonetheless. Among these are pinot blanc, Petite Sirah and gewurztraminer.

I am going to write this column with no mention of Zinfandel and its metamorphosis from a red wine to an apparent white, a topic in itself.

Then there are those wines whose popularity evolves (bursts?) from nearly zero to full blown in a matter of a few years, going from public unawareness to acceptance and demand in a brief interval.

SUCH IS THE CASE with two recently "found" wines, both receiving increasing press popularity and importance in a short while, certainly within the last year.

The Cabernet Franc, a truly noble red wine grape, has been around for a long time. It has for generations been one of the blending grapes of Bordeaux, rarely if ever being the principal element in a release, almost always contributing to softness and dimension.

wine

In California, little had been planted or used until recently, its use being again to add dimension to cabernets (along with a host of other red varieties, all generally undistinguished by themselves except merlot, which has developed a following of its own as a varietal). Now however, demand for Cabernet Franc is increasing dramatically (witness the $1,400-a-ton cost for the 1987 vintage) for use as a companion to Cabernet Sauvignon as well as now to be marketed as a varietal.

There is yet little available on merchants' shelves as a varietal, but all indications are that this is about to change. Remember, a decade ago merlot was a novelty. Inglenook is about to release a 1983 vintage at about $18, and it is a third of the Flora Springs highly esteemed "Trilogy."

The only locally available release that I am aware of is the Congress Springs, but the Coppola Family winery, a subset of Niebaum Coppola, has made a stunning statement with its 1982 release, available only in California. And it is at least a gleam in the eyes of the Napa property owners of Shafer, Kennan, Sterling, New-growing interest and popularity of Oregon wines nationally will accelerate public awareness of this alternative to Chardonnay.

It is I understand, a most prestigious thing in a fine restaurant to order a pinot gris instead of a Chardonnay, showing the sommelier that you know something he perhaps does not. (Reports that the Zug Island Winery has a small plot of pinot gris are unfounded according to owner Bronco Nerd. He will not yet disclose the name of the grapes presently growing between the winery and the flagpole that always flies the MSC banner. More reports on this later.)

METROPOLITAN DETROIT'S most prestigious wine event of the year is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 24, at Lovett Hall in Greenfield Village. The largest event of its kind in the nation outside of California benefits the Institute of Music and the Center for Creative Studies, one of our most acclaimed institutions.

Honorary chair goes to Gil Nickel of Far Niente Winery. J. Brian Cole of Christie's is sommelier for the evening.

More than 100 California wineries have donated to the auction, and there is also representation from Michigan's industry and numerous private citizens. Truly spectacular.

The event includes both silent and active auctions and a gourmet dinner, the latter prepared by local chefs of distinction. Tickets are $125 per person and may be secured by contacting the CCS at 831-2870.

LAMB CURRY
Serves 10

- 1/3 cup lemon juice
- 2 cups yogurt
- 5 pounds boneless lamb, cut into cubes
- 1/4 cup butter
- more curry powder (if desired)

Combine all the ingredients except lamb and butter in a blender or food processor and process until smooth. Marinate lamb in the mixture at least 1 to 2 hours or longer, if possible. Melt the butter in the crockpot and add the lamb and marinade mixture; cover and simmer for 4-5 hours. This makes a mild curry so have some extra curry standing by.

Contrary to popular belief, crockpot cookery shouldn't be limited to soups and stews, although, in all honesty, they do make up the crockpot's main repertoire of recipes.

Serve with rice.

BEEF GOULASH
Serves 8

- 4 lbs. boneless beef chuck cut into cubes

- 1 cup dry red wine
- 2 tbsp. butter
- 6 onions, chopped
- 4 tsp. sweet Hungarian paprika
- Dash salt
- 2 green peppers, chopped

Brown the meat in the butter. Place meat in the crockpot but do not discard skillet or drippings. Add paprika and wine and cook, covered for 3 hours. Meanwhile, saute onions in drippings and stir in salt and peppers. Add to meat and cook for 1 hour on low. It should not be soupy. Serve with any rice, potato or pasta. If desired, stir in potatoes half way through cooking.

We're winning the race against Rheumatic Heart Disease.

Today, thanks partly to the efforts of the American Heart Association, the death rate from rheumatic heart disease has declined more than 70 percent since 1950.

For decades, the American Heart Association's educational programs have taught parents about the dangers and prevention of rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease in young children.

The effort was worth it. Support the American Heart Association. We're fighting for your life.

deavage, president of Felician College, Chicago, and Richard White, University of Toledo professor emeritus of higher education. White had been a Madonna trustee as recently as 1986.

Mike Jarvey picks up yardage against Farmington as Plymouth Salem returned to winning form Friday. The Rocks converted four Farmington turnovers into touchdowns and routed the Falcons 35-21 at Centennial Educational Park.

Rocks go airborne to beat Farmington

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

What's this? Plymouth Salem throwing the football? And out of the wishbone no less?

Some may have thought coach Tom Moshimer had changed his philosophy Friday night when the ground-oriented Rocks passed for 127 yards and two touchdowns in a 35-21 homecoming victory over Farmington.

"I have nothing against throwing the ball," said Moshimer while taking some good-natured kidding from his assistants afterward, "as long as we can move it by throwing it."

"Now I'm not going to throw it just to throw the football, but the situation was right to throw the ball. And we showed we could throw it — a little bit."

Quarterback Steve Holt lofted TD passes of 26 and 35 yards to Kevin Cousino and Chris Forsythe, respectively, to give Salem a 28-7 lead and break the game open.

BUT, NOT to disappoint those who believe foremost in the running game, the Rocks still had more yards rushing (218) than passing, and four backs had 30 yards or more.

Doug Parrish, who gave a good performance in his role as the starting fullback, was the leader with 53 yards on eight carries and scored the game's first TD on a 32-yard run.

Garrett Bowie and Ryan Johnson, who made an initial impact running the ball before moving to quarterback in the second half, scored Salem's other TDs and had 48 and 44 yards, respectively.

"When (opponents) gang up to stop the run, they open themselves up for you to throw the ball," Moshimer said. "We get 1-on-1 coverage most of the time, and any coach in the country feels he's got a good chance (to pass under those conditions)."

The Rocks, who lost to league powers North Farmington and West-

football

land John Glenn in back-to-back games the previous two weeks, evened their Lakes Division record at 2-2 and improved to 4-2 overall.

FARMINGTON, 1-3 and 1-5, was hurt by the same problem that has plagued the Falcons most of the season — turnovers. Farmington lost fumbles on its first three possessions and committed six turnovers in the game.

"We needed to win," Moshimer said. "If we'd lost this one, it would have been tough sledding the rest of the way."

"North and Glenn are two of the finest teams in the area, and (Friday's opponent Livonia) Stevenson is right there, too. North and Glenn gained more yards than we did, and I guess they deserved to win."

"But I think we're right there with them, and I think we're there with Stevenson," he added. "We look forward to playing them."

While the Falcons failed to cross the 50-yard line under their own power in the first quarter, Salem turned their second and third fumbles into TDs and was up 14-0 after 12 minutes.

PARRISH, A 5-foot-10, 195-pound junior, went over the left side on an option carry, but nobody was there to challenge him. He was into the secondary before anybody noticed him, and he won a foot race with a halfback.

Bowie dashed 13 yards on his first carry of the game and capped Salem's next possession with 0:37 left in the first period. He was ill earlier in the week and didn't start the game.

The Rocks seemed well in control, but Farmington cut the deficit in half after recovering a blocked punt at the Salem 6-yard line. The Rocks came close to keeping the Falcons out of the end zone, but Brian Perkins went over on fourth down from a yard out.

That altered the situation, but only momentarily. Salem went 66 yards with the kickoff to take a 21-7 lead into halftime.

The Rocks ran the ball on the first eight plays, and then Holt hit Cousino on the next play for the score.

"I FELT we would have control of the football game," Moshimer said, "but we had a breakdown on the punt and took too much getting the ball away."

"But we got another one just before the half, and that was the key."

Farmington's troubles continued in the second half as their first two possessions ended with lost fumbles. Salem, getting the ball at the Falcon 41 and 44, scored each time as a result, and the Rocks were safely in front, 35-7, with 2½ minutes left in the third quarter.

Chiefs come up short against Franklin

Livonia Franklin's defense stopped Plymouth Canton twice on goal-line stands and held on to take a 9-6 victory from the Chiefs in a Western Division football game Saturday.

Canton, 1-3 in the division and 2-4 overall, scored first when Neil Hubert passed 65 yards to Joel Riggs midway in the first quarter. The extra-point kick was blocked, however.

"It was third-and-12 and we just blew the coverage," Franklin coach Armand Vigna said. "They had two receivers wide open, and Hubert found the deep one."

"It was a nicely thrown ball. The kid ran under it, and we never had a chance. (Hubert) just picked the right one."

"I'm going to kill someone when I see the tapes," he added.

THE PATRIOTS, 2-2 and 3-3, used the same method to score their only touchdown, with Craig Allard passing 53 yards to Mike Patzsch early in the second quarter.

Allard underthrew the ball, and Patzsch had to come back to make the catch, taking the ball away from the defensive back. Both went up for the ball, but Patzsch came down with it.

"Patzsch made a great play on it," Vigna said. "I didn't think he was going to catch it, because the other kid was right there with him."

"I couldn't believe it, but he stayed on his feet, spun around and went all the way."

Patzsch, however, missed the extra-point kick, pulling it to the left. The score remained 6-6 at halftime, but the Chiefs had been taking the game to Franklin.

"THEY WERE getting the better of it," Vigna said. "Really, all day long they outplayed us on offense."

Canton got inside the Patriot 5-yard line late in the second quarter and again in the third, but Franklin's defense rose to the occasion each time.

Then, momentum shifted to the Patriots. Franklin's Bryan Drabicki ran back a punt to the Canton 6, but it was called back because the Patriots had 12 men on the field.

Greg Panzl intercepted a Canton pass, and his return put the ball on the Canton 6 once again. But the Patriots went "nowhere" on three downs, and Patzsch booted the game-winning field goal with 4:00 left in the game.

"He hit a 52-yarder in practice the other day," Vigna said, "so we had a lot of confidence in him."

CANTON moved the ball to midfield, but a fourth-down pass was unsuccessful, and the Patriots took over with 2:00 remaining. The Chiefs used their timeouts to stop the clock and would have gotten the ball back, but Drabicki's 8-yard run for the first down enabled Franklin to run out the clock.

"Our defense bent all over the place," Vigna said, "but I guess they were real big when they had to be."

"The defense kept us in the game and gave us the opportunity to win the game. They deserve all the credit."

Quarterback Steve Holt looks for running room on this play, but he passed for 81 yards and a pair of touchdowns as the Rocks opened up on offense.

Canton roars back, ties No. 1-ranked team in 'B'

Being ranked No. 1 doesn't mean anything to Plymouth Canton.

Madison Heights Bishop Foley, No. 1 in the state Class B soccer rankings, found out the hard way Friday as the host Chiefs rallied for a 3-3 draw in a non-league match.

Down 3-1 with 10 minutes to go, Canton (5-8-1) struck for two goals. Jeff Tutor knocked in the tying goal with five minutes left. Dave Presley, who scored the Chiefs' first goal of the match, assisted on Tutor's tally.

Joe Pelle scored with 10 minutes left in the game on a header to draw Canton to within one. Tutor assisted on the play.

Bishop Foley led 2-1 at the half after Presley's goal opened the scoring. Canton's Jerry Staszel drew an assist on the first goal of the match.

SALEM 2, N. FARMINGTON 0: With few exceptions, every soccer game played in the Western Lakes Activities Association this fall has been a hard-fought, low-scoring affair.

And Wednesday's Plymouth Salem-North Farmington match was no different. But the Rocks,

soccer

also true to form, got the victory.

"We've had some tough games," Rocks coach Ken Johnson said. "Every team has some good players — a power forward who's breaking away on you or a keeper who makes some good saves and keeps them in the game."

All three Farmington teams have brought greater parity to the league this season, and the Raiders made it tough for Salem.

But the Rocks got what proved to be the winning goal when Mike Ulaszek scored on an indirect free kick 15 minutes into the second half.

"We missed a couple chances, but they were fired up," Johnson said. "It was quite chilly, and we weren't as high as we were Monday."

That was a reference to Salem's 0-0 tie with Livonia Stevenson, the defending WLAA champ and No. 1-ranked team in Class A.

The Rocks made it 2-0 at the midway point on Randy Balconi's goal, coming after a pass from Troy Giacherio. Balconi took the ball up to the penalty line and booted it over the goalkeeper's head.

"Troy sent a good ball through," Johnson said, "and Randy made his run as the ball was coming through."

The Rocks, who outshot North 12-8, received another strong performance from goalkeeper Dave O'Malley.

Salem is 3-0-1 in the Lakes Division and 10-2-2 overall.

FARMINGTON 2, CANTON 1: The Chiefs scored first on a goal by Todd Nichols, but the Falcons came from behind to claim the victory.

"(Nichols) took a shot from quite a ways out, and the goalkeeper just lost it," Farmington coach Ed Bartram said.

Pete Fraenheim scored both goals for the Falcons, 5-3-1 in the Western Lakes and 7-3-1 overall. His second score came at the 37-minute mark of the first half.

Farmington held an 8-5 edge in shots on goal in the first half, and it was even at 5-5 in the second.

Canton slipped to 4-5 in the league and 5-8 overall.

Salem, Chiefs sit atop respective cage loops

The Lakes Division girls basketball season reached the midway point Thursday, and Plymouth Salem, to no one's surprise, is the undisputed leader.

The Rocks have faced all five division opponents now and have trounced each one, the latest being Livonia Stevenson, which absorbed a 74-23 defeat on its own floor.

With a game-high 32 points, Dena Head scored 30-plus for the sixth time in the last seven games as No. 6-ranked Salem improved to 5-0 in the division and 10-1 overall.

"We're still in a situation where we have to continue to play each game and make them meaningful," Salem coach Fred Thomann said.

Though the Rocks have handled the league opposition well, they're still in the process of refining their game, and shooting is one thing Salem will be working on this week.

"We didn't shoot the ball extremely well tonight," Thomann said. "We didn't score like we have, because we didn't make some shots that, quite frankly, we should have."

"We've got to continue to shoot the ball, and we're working pretty hard at that."

The Rocks, averaging over 70 points per game and making 56 percent of their field-goal attempts, held quarter leads of 19-5, 35-10 and 55-17 over the Spartans, who dropped to 1-4 in the division and 4-6 overall.

"They came out to play ball," said Stevenson coach Chuck Hebestreit of the Rocks. "They did a nice job of playing defense and crashing the boards."

"We had trouble getting the ball down the floor. They put a lot of pressure on everybody and tried to double

girls basketball team as much as possible. "They're just a fundamentally-sound team," he added.

The Spartans attempted 71 shots in their previous game with Walled Lake Central, but they were limited to just 26 against Salem. They made 10 field goals.

Jill Estey scored 16 points for the Rocks and has raised her average to 13.7. Head is averaging 28.7 with 316 points in 11 games. Sue Zatorski's nine points was tops for Stevenson.

Head also had 10 rebounds, eight steals and five assists. Estey nine assists and six steals, Kerri McBride six assists and six points and Barb Krug eight rebounds and six points.

"We just wanted to execute, to perform, and we did a pretty fair job of that," Thomann said.

"Our defensive scheme is starting to tighten up," he added. "We're not quite as good as we want to be yet, but we've made some progress."

CANTON 71, CHURCHILL 24: The Western Lakes Activities Association's dominant teams hail from Plymouth and Canton.

While Salem leads its division, the Chiefs are the frontrunner in the Western Division. Canton won its sixth consecutive game Thursday and improved to 5-0 with by thumping Livonia Churchill.

Craig Morton

Morton has big game for Dartmouth

Former Plymouth Salem football standout Craig Morton had an outstanding performance in Dartmouth College's recent 38-7 victory over Davidson.

Morton, a junior wide receiver, caught seven passes for 156 yards and a touchdown. The 6-foot, 170-pounder scored the Big Green's first touchdown of the season on a 45-yard pass from Chris Rorke in the Davidson game.

Morton, a 1985 graduate of Salem, is third in career receiving yardage at Dartmouth with 1,284 yards on 57 receptions. He caught 44 passes for 1,063 yards (24.2 yards per catch) and a school-record 10 touchdowns last year. Morton's 44 receptions placed him fifth on Dartmouth's single-season reception list.

Morton, a religion major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Morton of Plymouth.

football

A whole range of emotions saturated Fred Owens. The combined effect was numbness.

That's what happens when your football team is thoroughly dominated the way Owens' Wisconsin team was by University of Michigan a week ago Saturday.

49-0. That was the final score. But even that was not reflective of how Michigan manhandled the Badgers. The Wolverines scored 42 points and gained 412 yards by halftime, averaging nearly 10 yards a play. They had 11 first downs.

And Wisconsin? With five minutes remaining in the half, the Badgers had just one first down. By halftime they had three. They totaled 94 yards in offense in the first two quarters.

The last three games, we've been moving the ball," said Owens, a Redford Bishop Borgess graduate and Southfield native. "We've been producing some good yardage."

"TODAY'S KIND OF A setback."

The agony of defeat especially pained Owens. He had hoped for a better homecoming.

Now a junior, he is the back up tailback to junior Steve Vinci. On Saturday, he saw as much action as he's seen in a single game all season, carrying the ball eight times for 28 yards. Only quarterback Tony Lowry (82 yards) outrushed Owens.

Among the Badgers, that is, Michigan had six players better Owens' total.

"It's tough to take because I see Mark Messner (a Redford Catholic Central grad) and all these other guys I played against through the years across the ball," said Owens.

Wisconsin came into the game with a 2-1 record, but its opposition was nothing to boast about. The Badgers beat Hawaii (28-7) in their opener, lost to Utah (31-28), then defeated Ball State (30-13). Michigan was the biggest test to date — for the team, their first-year coach (Don Morton) and his new veer offense.

WHAT HAPPENED?
"I think today ... today ... well, it's tough for me to say because I'm so disappointed. Owens' stammered, searching for the same answers Morton and his coaching staff were looking for.

"We couldn't move the ball offensively. We made a lot of simple mistakes. The thing is, we're experimenting with what different guys have to offer. My forte is my speed and ability in the open field."

That comes as no surprise. Owens was a standout in both football and track at Borgess, and at 5-feet-9 and 182 pounds he'd better be fleet of foot to survive in the Big Ten.

But what goes unspoken is how Owens has been used this season. He's one of the team's kickoff return specialists, which is fine — against U-M he returned three for 61 yards. For the season, he's averaging 17 yards per return.

But in previous games, he's played mostly in short-yardage or goal-line situations. He has three touchdowns (second best on the team) but just a 3.2 yards-per-carry average (29 for 94).

OWENS REFUSED to second-guess his coach. "I've been happy with my role," he said. "Going in and out, in and out all the time makes it difficult. You can't get into the flow of the game.

But as a team player, I accept it. I hope to expand my role as the year goes on."

Owens' coach was no more expansive when questioned about any such possible changes. "We'll have to wait until we view the (game) films," Morton said. "This game is not over yet. We have to go in and analyze everything and get better."

Wisconsin threw just 11 passes against U-M, completing two, which led to an obvious question regarding the veer offense installed by Morton.

"I just think we've got a better chance to move the ball on the ground right now," Morton said. "That puts more pressure on our running game. I think we have to get more speed in the backfield."

WHICH SEEMS to lead back to Owens? "I think they'll be some changes," he predicted without saying what they might be.

If Wisconsin is going to make anything of itself in what remains of the Big Ten season, there better be. Otherwise, Morton and the Badgers will be spending lots of Saturday afternoons like the last one.

And as Morton himself said, "It wasn't much fun on the sidelines out there."

Falcon harriers coast to win

Farmington cruised past Livonia Stevenson 21-39 Thursday to set up a Lakes Division showdown in boys cross country.

The Falcons and Plymouth Salem, both 3-0 in the division after the Rocks trounced Westland John Glenn 19-39, go head-to-head Thursday at Cass Benton Park.

Farmington's Brandon London showed he had recovered from a sore hip that slowed him down a week ago by taking first place in 16:52 at Oakland Community College.

The Falcons also got Steve Quenneville back from a knee injury that had sidelined him for 3½ weeks, and he finished sixth overall (17:49) in his first meet since returning.

Farmington, however, lost another key runner Thursday when Rob Holloway hurt his back in gym class. It was not known how serious the injury was or how long he might be out.

London/got support from teammates Matt Walter and Brad Moore, who were third and fourth, respectively, but had the same 17:36 time.

Finishing a second behind Quenneville was Farmington's fifth man, Greg Endres, who broke 18 minutes for the first time at 17:50.

The Falcons, 6-0 overall, also received blocking help from Paul Brandt in ninth place (18:13) and Matt Langdon in 11th (18:17).

Stevenson was led by second-place Jeff Lees (17:23) and also took the fifth, eighth and 10th places.

W.L. CENTRAL 25, NORTH 31: The Raiders had three of the top five runners, but couldn't quite hold off the Vikings, who came on strong in the latter stages.

North's Jeff Simpson, Tom Harnden and Jim Nader finished back-to-back in the Nos. 3-5 places. They posted respective times of 16:45, 17:05 and 17:06. Dave Gerts in eighth place at 17:54 was the fourth Raider in the top 10.

WLC was led by Mike Jensen, who completed the race in 16 minutes flat.

North is 1-2 in the Lakes Division and 5-2 overall.

CANTON 17, HARRISON 41: Six of the top seven runners belonged to the Chiefs, who improved to 2-1 in the Western Division and 6-1 overall.

For the Hawks, Jeff Barringer was fourth (17:48), Chris Hart eighth (18:53), Pat Runk 10th (19:48) and Dave King 11th (20:01).

Canton's Jay Swiecki ran a 16:58 race to capture first place.

Rocks rout Lakes foe

Johnson picked up the first down on fourth-and-1 at the 31, but a holding penalty pushed the Rocks back. Holt, however, threw a perfect strike to Forsythe down the right sideline on the next play.

Johnson, a 6-2, 190-pound sophomore, was at quarterback on the next possession. After throwing back-to-back passes covering 46 yards to Bowie and Forsythe, he capped the drive with a 4-yard keeper.

"I won't hesitate to use Johnson if the situation is right, but Steve Holt is our quarterback," Moshimer said.

"(Johnson) is the quarterback of the future."

THE FALCONS had their spirits lifted when Nick Maisel sprinted 80 yards on first down to score Farmington's second TD. He finished with 98 yards on seven carries.

Farmington copied Salem's tactics when Mike Neal fell on a fumble, and the Falcons mounted an 11-play scoring drive. Joe Johnston passed twice for first downs, and Maisel scored the TD on a 2-yard run.

Holt was 5-of-10 passing for 81 yards, and Mike Boyd added 34 yards rushing. Farmington had 96 yards passing and 157 rushing.

Salem, Canton flying high

Senior forward Karen Boluch scored 21 points to lead a balanced Canton attack. Susan Ferko, who had 30 points in the previous game, tossed in 13. Candi Jones and Meather Miller 12 apiece and Amanda Bell 10.

"A lot of people contributed," Chiefs coach Rob Neu said. "We're starting to get better, and we're not relying on one person to carry the load."

Carey Morrocco's six points was the most by a Churchill player. The Chargers are 1-4 in the division, 1-9 overall.

Canton, which led 17-6, 28-10 and 52-15 at the end of the first three quarters, was 13-of-25 at the free-throw line, the Chargers 3-of-8.

Walking in air

Stuntwoman wings it just for the thrill of it

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

It was a typical day for Lori Lynn Ross, just hanging around the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Long Beach, Calif. — by her fingertips.

The former Southfield resident scaled her way along the 17-story building. Then, in a quick, athletic move, she swooped off a fifth-floor ledge and grasped a nearby balcony with a tiny hand.

Ross, who lists herself as 4 feet 11½ inches and 98 pounds, is one of Hollywood's newest stuntwomen. The 25-year-old lists more than a half-dozen movies and television shows among her credits.

The Long Beach stunt was used in an episode of the "Knight Rider" television series, where she doubled for former Olympic gymnast Julianne McNamara. Movie-goers caught a glimpse of Ross in "Karate Kid II."

THIS DAY, she's at Willow Run Airport getting ready for a weekend air show where she'll perform acrobatics on the wings of a custom biplane.

The wind blows strong through her curly brown hair.

Ross, a former Southfield resident, now makes her living doing stunts in Hollywood.

"I hope we have a little better weather this weekend," Ross says. "I'm working on an aerial headstand, something I've never done before. I want to give the Michigan people something special to remember."

Michigan holds a special place in Ross' own memories.

Though born in California, Ross grew up in Southfield. She played basketball, softball and was a cheerleader at the former Lederle Junior High (now Brace-Lederle).

"I was a pretty active kid in school," she said.

THEN THERE were those summertime trips to her grandmother's house near Fenton.

"A girlfriend and I used to go motorcycle riding in the fields out near the house. The big thing was to beat my brother and the other guys to the lake, even if it meant taking a shortcut through a farmer's field," she said.

"I never will forget the time we accidentally took out a whole row of corn. We sure got out of there in a hurry."

Moving back to California with her family was at first a setback but actually aided her transition from fun-loving youngster to professional stuntwoman.

"It was a real downer to move. I was in the 10th grade and had just been made a cheerleader," she recalled. "My brother was a springboard diver. So to give me something to do he got me to work out with him."

EVENTUALLY, Ross tried out for the high school diving team. And for probably the last time in her life, she was scared.

"The first day I tried the three-meter board, I was so scared the coach had to hold my hand all the way up," she said. "But I wasn't scared for long."

She continued diving during her college years at Cal State-Northridge, while earning a teaching degree.

Ross put her teaching career on hold to join a professional diving team, the first step toward her current career.

"The most memorable stunt I think I've ever done was a fire dive,"

Cruisin' requires long-range planning

By Iris Jones
staff writer

We're a group of high school seniors who want to take a cruise as our class trip. Can we find a cruise we can afford for Easter week of 1988?

S.H.,
Farmington Hills

If you mean a large group looking for group rates, you may be too late for Easter 1988. If you have a small group that can be booked independently at regular rates, you may have a chance.

Some school districts take spring break at Easter, some in February or March. Either way, it is the busy season. The rule seems to be: Start planning your senior trip before you start your senior year!

There are lots of opportunity to relax on board ship.

Chuck Berry Hail! Hail! Rock'n'Roll (A) 120 minutes
Rock documentary looks at Chuck Berry's music, life and career. Interviews and performances by rock 'n' roll greats make this a well-put-together, extremely entertaining production. Reviewed by Kathy Gupor.

"The Princess Bride" (A) (PG) 98 minutes
Rob Reiner's delightful fantasy based on William Goldman's novel involves farmboy-turned-hero Westley (Cary Elwes) and Princess Buttercup (Robin Wright). They encounter miracles, villains and the "pit of despair" in a land long ago and far away. Chivalry and swashbuckling suspense intercut with slashing wit, but true love conquers all. Reviewed by Jeff Lumatta.

"Someone to Watch Over Me" (C-) (R) 100 minutes Slick visuals wear thin in this predictable story of married detective (Tom Berenger) falling in love with lovely witness to whom he is assigned as bodyguard. Facial close-ups, flashing lights and rising steam get tiresome, but story has entertaining moments.

"Surrender" (B*) (PG) 95 minutes
Slick, contemporary romantic comedy with Michael Caine as an appealing novelist disenchanted with greedy women. Sally Field is a poor but good-hearted struggling artist. Throw in Steve Guttenberg as a spoiled yuppie attorney, and the result is a comic plot with unique twists and a great supporting cast. Reviewed by Kathy Gupor.

"The Big Town" (C-) (R) 105 minutes
Small town gambler ventures to Chicago to explore limits of his passion for women and crap-shooting. Fair performances by Matt Dillon as "Cully the Arm" and Diane Lane as a tawdry night-club dancer in this 1957 nostalgia piece with classic "oldies" on the music track. Old story with new faces make it hard to lay money down on this one. Reviewed by Jeff Lumatta.

Mogey may not buy love but a sure buys unpopular Tucson (Arizona) High School student (Patrick Dempsey) a chance to prove himself. Unfortunately popular cheerleader (Amanda Peterson) he hires as girlfriend decides she likes the real him better. Cute idea but hokey, dragged-out ending.

"Dirty Dancing" (B) (PG-13) 105 minutes
Well-done and entertaining show biz cliché Rich idealistic young girl (Jennifer Grey) falls in love with working-class dance instructor (Patrick Swayze). Music, dance and dialogue are good, but plot has more trite twists than Chubby Checker in the Peppermint Lounge.

"Fatal Attraction" (A) (R) 110 minutes
Michael Douglas as a family man whose one-night stand turns into a nightmare at the hands of a psychotic woman (Glenn Close) in this suspenseful thriller. Riveting performances and a strong story build to an explosive, nerve-shattering conclusion. Reviewed by Kathy Gupor.

"Hamburger Hill" (C+) (R) 110 minutes
Brutal Vietnam battle scenes are disordered, confusing and repetitious — just like combat — but that doesn't make an effective film. Good photography and touching scenes between soldiers awaiting combat is not enough to save this movie.

Horror-flick with Andrew Robinson and Ashley Laurence welcoming a former lover back from the grave.

"Matewan" (A) (PG-13) 132 minutes
The history of West Virginia mining town's tragic struggle to organize labor is authentically portrayed in 1920s setting. Despite mining company might, the people of Matewan are moved to change when Joe Kenehan (Chris Cooper), a union man, arrives. Strong performance by James Earl Jones as "Few Clothes" Johnson. Simple and direct dialogue, with cinematography to match, highlight this human drama. Reviewed by Jeff Lumatta.

"The Pick-Up Artist" (B) (PG-13) 80 minutes
Pick-up artist Jack Jericho (Robert Downey) meets his match in Randi Jensen (Molly Ringwald). Good performances, especially by Ms. Ringwald, don't fully overcome weak direction. But it's still cute and entertaining.

"The Principal" (B) (R) 105 minutes
Jim Belushi, the principal of inner-city high school, uses unorthodox methods to combat moral decay of faculty and students and thereby discovers his own identity. Suspense, drama and a believable plot. Reviewed by Jeff Lumatta.

Our bouquets to Bouquets for fine food

Your traveling taster visits area eateries and rates them on a 100-point scale. Up to 30 points are awarded for ambiance, which includes general atmosphere and service; 55 points for food and 15 points for price value rating. A total of 95 points or less indicates a restaurant is not recommended; 60-74 points signify from passing to good; 75-89 points designate very good with some extraordinary features; and 90-100 points show that a very special dining experience awaits you.

BLOUQUETS, Radisson Plaza Hotel, 1509 Town Center, Southfield (827-4000), has a peaceful, relaxing atmosphere. The combination of subdued lighting, pastel decor and well-spaced tables provides a very soft, quiet and pleasing setting. There are fresh flowers on the tables and attractive floral prints on the plum-colored walls.

The restaurant, although small, feels spacious because of the use of mirrors and glass. It lacks only a feeling of intimacy which is missing because of the visual proximity of the bar and other dining room. The delicate crystal and beautiful Villeroy and Boch china add an extra sense of quality.

Our reservations were honored promptly, and the hostess stopped by our table on several occasions to ask if everything was satisfactory. This type of attention is unusual, especially in a hotel restaurant, and we hope that it will continue. Dinner took 2 1/2 hours.

GENERAL ATMOSPHERE — 15 points maximum. Points awarded — 14.
Both the waiter and the busman did an outstanding job of serving our table. The pace of the meal was just right and refilling of water and replacement of used silverware were prompt and unobtrusive. The waiter was informed about the dishes on the menu and offered helpful suggestions.

When we asked the hostess a question about one of the garnishes, she checked with the kitchen and brought us the right answer. In all, the service — like the atmosphere — was gracious and welcoming.

SERVICE — 15 points maximum. Points awarded — 15.

Our choice for best dish of the evening was the cream of roasted red bell pepper soup ($2.50). It tasted just as its name suggests — creamy and rich, peppery and interesting. The sweetness of the cream helped to balance the peppers, and the soup was outstanding.

The seafood sausage with lobster and scallops and a crawfish sauce ($6.95) was also quite appealing, both in appearance and flavor. Again, the menu accurately characterized the dish (as it should, but does not always do at other restaurants). The sausage had a nice texture and hearty sausage-like flavor. It too was sweet, peppery and enjoyable.

A choice of three salads is offered with the entrees, and we tried the Caesar salad. The dressing was too heavy and thick for the salad. Although the portion was large, the fresh, crisp lettuce was drenched by a dressing that lacked the traditional Caesar taste. In addition, there were no anchovies on the salad.

The hard rolls that are served are outstanding, they are European-like, with a very hard crust and very fresh inside. Don't miss them. The drinks ($3.75 for premium brands) are strong. BEFORE THE ENTREE — 15 points maximum. Points awarded — 13.

The New York strip steak with four-pepper sauce ($15.95) came medium rare, exactly as ordered. The peppercorn sauce was well-flavored, and the meat was tender and the portion large. The smoked lamb rack with hickory wood, mesquite grilled and pecan sauce ($19.50) also came in a very generous portion, prepared medium rare. The distinctive smoky smell and taste was exactly as advertised. The pecan sauce, however, was too delicate and was lost to the heavier smoked flavor.

Two interesting garnishes, served with both dishes, were especially noteworthy. The delicious country potato with onion and the spaghetti squash with cream sauce added considerably to the entrees.

ENTREE, VEGETABLES AND GARNISHES — 30 points maximum. Points awarded — 27.

The hazelnut mousse torte ($2.75) tasted rich, but not heavy. It was nicely flavored but lacked any special qualities to make it exceptional. Better was the Bailey's float with homemade cappuccino ice cream. Bailey's Irish cream and soda water ($3.95). The very large serving was refreshing, delicious and unusual. The tastes blended into a fabulous concoction that is well worth trying.

DESSERT — 10 points maximum. Points awarded — 9.

Our meal totaled about $70 per couple with tip, which was a real value when considering the quality and quantity of the food, service and atmosphere. Similar meals at comparable restaurants have been significantly more expensive. If all of the elements of our meal can be preserved in the future, this will be one of the best choices in the area for a quality dining experience.

PRICE VALUE — 15 points maximum. Points awarded — 15.

A COUNTING FOR TASTE — 100 points maximum. Total points awarded 93. Bouquets is superb for couples or friends who want to dress up a bit and enjoy an outstanding evening.

Arena Gardens Skating Club of Detroit

Opening of 1937-1938 Season

The Arena Gardens Skating Club of Detroit stopped rolling long enough to be captured on film back in 1937. In those days, Detroit was the roller skating capital of the nation.

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Who among us has never roller skated? If you can walk, you can roller skate, and probably have.

Bears can roller skate. An elephant named Baby Tarr skates. And millions of people.

Yet how many of us paused the week of Sept. 30 through Oct. 6 in honor of National Roller Skating Week? Irma Lapke of Westland did.

She started skating at the old Dearborn Roller-drome 40 years ago and is a regular each Friday morning for three hours of dancing on wheels at Skate World in Troy. She'll be 75 in December, but her only concession to age is a slightly shrunken repertoire of dances and moves.

"I don't do the three-turn any more, but Jack still does."

Jack is Jack Till, a 64-year-old who has been her dancing partner on skates since they were introduced, years ago at the Motor City rink, may it rest in peace.

At the other end of the age spectrum is little Michelle Gritten, 7, of Troy. She's been skating for five years. Last year she broke her arm working on her routine "and she was just heartbroken because she had to miss two days," said her mom, Sharon.

Michelle got rolling when she went to a rink with the family as part of a fund-raiser for Schroeder Elementary. Soon she was practicing four days a week, two-three hours a day, and even as much as six days a week as big competitions approach.

"Her brother (Michael) probably would be a skater too, but they wanted him to skate pairs with his sister. And boys just don't skate with their sisters. I'm just as glad because I still have two kids left. If he skated with her, he probably would have gotten mad at her about something and thrown her into a wall."

Michelle, who skates freestyle and figures, was fifth in the state championships in July and represented the state in the regionals in Indianapolis.

IT'S FITTING that there are veteran dancers in their 70s and tiny champs who can still measure their birthdays on their fingers and every age in between skating regularly at area rinks (Riverside in Livonia, Skateland West in Westland, the Skatin' Station in Canton, Bonaventure in Farmington Hills, Skate World in Troy).

After all, Detroit was to roller skating much of this century what it also was to automobiles, bowling and potato-chip eating: The Capital of The World. More people skated here than anywhere, if not in the universe, then at least on earth. Rinks were filled, and the Roller Skating Rink Operators Association called Detroit home until the riots hit and the operators decided they wouldn't mind moving home to someplace, like, say, Nebraska.

The association left, but the skaters stayed right here. There are about 32 million skaters in the United States, give or take a hundred thousand. Some Friday nights it seems like most of them are at Bonaventure. There are about 2,250 commercial rinks nationwide.

Fads come and go, skating periodically is one of them. It was red hot in the late '70s, with kids and adults discoing away like John Travolta on wheels. The faddists are gone, but local operators say the sport has remained healthy.

"In 1979-80, we had the biggest boom roller skating ever realized," said Louis Armbruster, who opened Bonaventure 10 years ago, just in time for the boom.

"It's starting to come back now. There's an upward trend. But a lot of people got burned building new rinks. A lot of people lost their shirts, just like in the boom in racquetball courts and tennis."

Rose Martin, activities director at Skate World, said, "If you run a good place and continue your promotions and have a lot of things for people to do, your business is pretty constant. In '79-80, all of us operators were nothing but janitors, busy cleaning up after everybody. It's not that hot anymore, but we do real well."

ON A ROLL

You can't keep a good skate down

Barbara Flanary of Farmington Hills and Scott Sting of Walled Lake get rolling at Bonaventure Roller Skating Center in Farmington Hills.

Detroit may no longer be the nation's roller skating capital, but the pastime still has a big following in this area, as these skaters at Bonaventure will attest.

In honor of the 40s and 50s, when Detroit was the mecca of skating, Skate World holds dance sessions from 10:00 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Fridays.

"It would knock your socks off to see what they can do on skates," said Martin.

IT WOULD certainly knock Joseph Martin's socks off — if he were still alive — to see how far his brainchild has come. His lasting contribution to culture — for a couple of centuries, anyway — has been the invention of the roller skate in 1760.

A Parisian named Vanlede soon popularized the sport when he invented a modified, easier-to-use version. Thank goodness his name for his invention, patin-a-terre, didn't catch on.

French fries? Good name. French horn? Wonderful. But patin-a-terre World just doesn't make it.

Another Frenchman, Petinplep, took out the first patent on a skate in 1819. It had wooden soles with several rollers arranged in a straight line from toe to heel. The rollers were made of wood, metal or ivory, depending on the tall elephant harvest.

For reasons of physics and engineering — don't ask — you could only go in a straight line in Petinplep's skates. There was no need for a rink, then, until an American named James Plimpton invented a racing skate in 1853 that could actually turn. Once skaters could turn, they could go in circles and ovals, and clever entrepreneurs of the day responded by building rinks. The sport moved inside.

Other big dates in roller skating:

- 1903 — Aluminum is first used in skates. Soon, and for several generations, kids are clamping adjustable metal plates and wheels onto the bottom of their street shoes, sliding the keys (on strings) around their necks and zooming around the neighborhood, terrorizing small animals and old women in black shoes.

- 1937 — The first national speed skating championships is held — where else? — in Detroit at the Arena Gardens.

- 1975 — The sport is accepted into the Pan American Games.

- 1979 — The first competition in the Pan Am Games.

- 1980 — Teen girls in California, wearing ridiculously tiny Spandex outfits, show up skating on boardwalks and piers from Los Angeles to San Diego. Soon, businessmen on their lunch hours and budding astrologists from all walks of life — "Hey, you in the tiny Spandex suit doing the piroettes, what's your sign?" — take up roller skating.

- 1981 — The National Museum of Roller Skating is founded in Lincoln, Neb. (No spickers. Its founder, Michael Brooslin, did such a good job he was named this year as curator of the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass. What can you find in the roller skating museum? Would you believe 10,000 objects such as skates and costumes, 500 films and videotapes — count 'em, 500 — and 10,000 photographs? Since the museum opened in 1982, about 15 people a day have visited the museum, some from farther away than Iowa.)

- 1987 — National Roller Skating Week is recognized by the Observer & Eccentric newspapers. (OK, we're a week late, but we're not in this as faddists. We're skaters from way back, and we're in it for the long haul. We cover the sport when it's not even the national week, so there.)

If you haven't been a rink in years, you're in for a surprise. Gone are the old wooden wheels that made so much noise and gone is the powder they used to spread on the wooden floors to cut friction. In are urethane wheels with precision bearings, and urethane floors. Out is disco, in are Friday and Saturday night Top 40 sessions. In, too, are weekend matinees.

Out are the tiny, cramped floors. In are the 14,000-square-foot floor at Bonaventure (180 feet by 80) or the 16,650-square-foot surface (90 by 185) at Skate World.

In, too, are moderate prices. Rinks usually charge $1 to rent top-quality skates, with admission to the rink running about $4 for evening sessions and $2.50 or so at matinees. All rinks are available for private birthday, church or school parties during the week.

Cruisin' takes long-range planning

I called Joan Brooks, vice president and general manager of Cruises Only Ltd., the first travel agency in Michigan to specialize in cruises. They have offices in Livonia, Mount Clemens, West Bloomfield, Grand Rapids and will open offices in Detroit and Troy before the year ends.

When Brooks says "group" she means eight cabins or more. At four people to a cabin, which is how you get the lowest rates, we are talking about 32 people. What if only a small group wants to travel, say half a dozen seniors?

"We would book that small a number as individual travelers, and we would be able to get space for that number for Easter 1988, but of course we would be talking slightly higher rates. At group rates, four people in the lowest-priced cabin would pay $800 to $900 per person, including air fare. Individual travelers would pay $1,000 and up."

Those rates include everything except what you spend aboard ship. Since your room and everything you could possibly eat is covered, extras include tips, purchases, drinks and land tours and possibly a port tax of $35 or so. Allow $10 a day per person for tips, which are given in a lump sum at the end of the cruise to your dining room and cabin stewards.

The legal age requirement creates another potential problem for any senior-class group. There must be a person of legal age in each cabin. Some cruise lines consider legal age to be 21, others 18. You may be asked to sign a waiver and pay a deposit against potential damage; the deposit is returned after the cruise.

The market will be from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children and seniors and $5 for families.

As a special feature, AT&T will allow market visitors to place one free long-distance phone call anywhere in the world.

Bridge work

Bridge players from across the Midwest and Canada will converge at Cobo Hall in Detroit from Tuesday through Sunday Oct. 13-18 for the annual Motor City Regional Duplicate Bridge Tournament. The tournament is open to the public. No special memberships or reservations are required. Entry fees are charged, and partnerships can be arranged at the door. Play will begin at 1:30 and 8 p.m. daily. There is no admission charge for spectators.

Nearly 10,000 players are expected for the competition. The Motor City Regional is the second-highest-ranking tournament sanctioned by the American Contract Bridge League.

(Cobo Hall, downtown Detroit; for more information, call tournament chairman Ronald M. Horowitz at 968-7420.)

Blue Angels soar at Willow Run

Wing-walker Lori Ross was a featured attraction at the recent Willow Run Air Show, but the U.S. Navy's Blue Angels were the stars of the show.

A precision flight team based in Jacksonville, Fla., the Blue Angels made their only Michigan appearance of the year during the Wayne County-sponsored show.

The team is on the final leg of a 75-date schedule in a year that has been better than most.

"Films like 'Top Gun' have really boosted interest," Blue Angel commander Gil Rud said. "I'd say people are more interested (in the team) than ever."

Like movie pilot Tom Cruise, the Angels are spit-and-polish clean. Also like Cruise, they're young.

"I'd say the average age is 31," said Rud, at 41 the team's senior member.

PILOTS ARE selected for two-year tours after completing 1,500 flight hours and a one-year tour of active duty.

A key recruitment tool, the Blue Angels represent the cream of the crop among Navy and Marine pilots.

"This is a very competitive program; there's only six openings," Rud said.

Not all the team members are Naval Academy graduates. Of the current lineup, two were drawn from Annapolis, two from Navy ROTC programs and two from Naval flight school.

While there are only six pilots and no alternates, the team also includes 10 additional officers and a 104-member ground crew.

she said. "As soon as a felt myself getting hot I'd jump off the platform into a nine-foot tank of water."

SIZE PROVED an advantage rather than a handicap when she tried out as a professional stuntwoman.

"This is a very competitive business," Ross said. "You almost have to have a specialty to join the union (the Screen Actors Guild). My specialty is my size. Not only can I double for women, I can also double for a child. There aren't many stuntmen who can do that."

ROYAL CARIBBEAN (800-327-6700) doesn't have any minimum four-in-a-cabin rooms left for their April 2, 1988, sailing, but when I asked about their age 21 minimum the operator told me about a loophole. If both parents write a letter approving the trip, their cruise-line supervisor will call them and possibly not enforce the age 21 rule for that cabin.

Norwegian Caribbean (800-327-7030) has space available on April 3 sailings. Four people in a basic cabin would pay $1,475 per person for the first two people, $495 per person for the third and fourth person.

Regency (800-457-5566) has space for Easter week, and will get you a category seven if possible $1,315 each for the first two in the cabin, $775 each for the next two.

Commodore (800-327-5617) listed their Category 10 rates for that week as $1,095 for the first and second person, $669 for the third and fourth persons, but that lowers to $569 for anyone age 17 and under.

Now hear this! Bermuda Star Line (800-223-3223) has space on their five-day sailing which leaves Tampa for Cancun and Cozumel, Mexico, April 4. The first and second person in a cabin pay $349, the third and fourth pay $200. You can get air fare from them for another $260 per person round trip, or go looking for your own. Not bad.

This year the team switched to new FA-18 Hornet aircraft after having flown A-4 Skyhawks for 13 years. In an average year, pilots fly 140,000 miles. And very quickly. The new craft can travel at twice the speed of sound.

To keep in shape, Ross works out on a trapeze. For fun, she goes rock climbing and water skiing.

She puts her teaching degree to work, too. In between jobs, she's a substitute teacher. Managing a room full of active youngsters in no problem, she said.

"Going in, the kids usually know I'm a stuntwoman," Ross said. "So they know there'll be no stories about my experiences if they aren't good."

Is there any job that would intimidate her? Ross ponders the question for a moment.

"I don't think I could work in an office," she laughs. "Answering all those telephones could get kind of hectic."

Holograms offer a new dimension

Laser creates illusion

The word hologram means "whole message."

A hologram is an image that exists in not just two, but three dimensions. Not only does a hologram give the illusion of depth and solidity, from different angles the viewer can actually see, partially or even completely around to the back of the object.

A hologram is produced with light from a laser — that is, a beam of light that is "coherent." Laser light is made up of waves of exactly the same wavelength and direction.

Ordinary light spreads out, or diffracts, as it travels any distance. Laser light maintains its tight beam over distances as long as from the earth to the moon and back.

That extraordinarily tight beam of light is essential to record the enormous amount of information in a holographic image.

A hologram made with white light would be very blurry, said Lee Lacey, founder of Holo Source Co. in Southfield and developer of an improved method of recording holograms.

A HOLOGRAM works by reflecting or transmitting light at precise angles that create the illusion of depth, though the image itself is extremely thin. Each eye, viewing the image at a slightly different angle (because of the parallax effect) sees a slightly different image, creating depth in much the same way as we naturally see it.

Early holograms required a laser light source to view the hologram, as well as record it. Later techniques were developed that allowed viewing in normal, white light.

There are two main types of hologram — those viewed in reflected light and those viewed in transmitted light. Until recently, the holograms produced on a clear or translucent material meant to be viewed in light that passes through from behind were the more common type.

However, recent advances in embossing the holograms on metallic Mylar film have made reflected-light holograms not only practical, but popular.

LACEY'S PROCESS for recording images on 35mm movie film and transferring the image to an embossed hologram (IPI or image plane integral holography) is a major advance — allowing holograms to be produced at a different size than the original object.

Lacey explained that holograms work because of the precision with which they are recorded. Every portion of the finished hologram contains all the information for the complete 3-D image.

In recording a hologram, a laser scans the original object and transfers the information to a special high-resolution photographic plate. The plate is coated with an emulsion of light-sensitive silver particles. On a nearly molecular level, the individual grains of silver act as prisms, reflecting or transmitting light at precise angles that give the impression of depth to the eye.

The recording process is so precise that the equipment must be jacked on a special table built on a separate foundation from the rest of the building to protect it from vibration.

A HOLOGRAM contains hundreds of separate, superimposed images, each representing a slightly different angle of view toward the object. Therefore, the composite image can be animated, moving as the viewer changes his angle of view toward the hologram.

While an embossed hologram image appears to be colorful, as the highly reflective surface of the Mylar scatters light into the colors of the rainbow, the image itself is not truly in color.

Embossed holograms are best viewed in strong, direct light, like sunlight or the light from a window on a sunny day. They are also best seen from certain angles, so if a hologram is difficult to see, you probably need to move to a different viewing angle.

You're in your local record store looking for the latest Springsteen disc.

You walk by a bin containing the latest release by KISS. It catches your eye. Gene Simmons' face on the album cover suddenly seems to come to life.

The eyes flare and bulge, the lips pull back in a heavy-metal grimace. The jaws open, and that trademark tongue seems to protrude out of the unreal, two-dimensional plane of the album cover and into the real world of the record store.

Send shivers down your spine?

It could happen — and you won't have to wait for the year 2000. The age of mass-produced, 3-D moving pictures is here, and you don't have to wear cardboard-and-cellophane glasses to see it.

Today, holograms — once a novelty seen only in science exhibits — are becoming almost commonplace. If you have a Mastercard or Visa card, you've probably noticed that little silvered picture down in the lower righthand corner. If you've shopped for toys lately, you've probably seen action figures with holograms set in their chests that change with the angle you view them at.

"Holograms are so new, they cause the consumer to spend more time looking at the product," said William Seydel, director of marketing and sales for Holo Source Corp., a Southfield firm that has taken the new and rapidly expanding science of holography a step further.

HOLOGRAMS ARE what's hot in the field of marketing. Seydel sees his company's product on packaging, from record album covers to perfume bottles.

"It's very good for direct-mail and airport displays," Seydel said.

The concept of holography has been around for almost 40 years. The idea first occurred to a scientist who was trying to improve the magnifying power of electron microscopes in 1947. But it wasn't until more than a decade later when the first laser was built in 1960 that the idea became practical.

The first holograms were recorded with laser light and had to be reconstructed for viewing with laser light. The first hologram that could be viewed with regular white light was produced in 1969. It wasn't until the late '70s that holograms could be mass produced.

Those shiny, silver, 3-D pictures that are becoming so common today are embossed on an aluminum-coated Mylar plastic film. The pictures are pressed into the film with a photo-engraved cylinder under tremendous pressure. The embossed holograms can be produced in large quantities, bringing the cost of the original holographic image (an expensive process) within reach when spread over thousands of final copies.

But Holo Source isn't just marketing an existing technology. Holo Source founder and chief executive Lee Lacey has developed a new type of hologram that promises to turn the industry on its ear.

THOSE LITTLE silver-embossed holograms are nifty and economical to produce — but there's a catch. The picture has to be the same size as the original object. To make the hologram of a bird on the Visa card, a tiny model of the bird had to be used. To make a hologram of a car, a tiny model of the car was necessary. To make a hologram of a person — forget it.

Lacey has changed all that. Ford Motor Co. recently sent out an invitation for a preview of the Merkur Scorpio that featured an embossed hologram of the car — not a model of the car, the actual car.

"No one has been able to make embossed holograms other than one

Rob Levy, vice president of operations for Southfield-based Holo/Source Corp., views a hologram the firm did in 1979 for Chrysler. It was the first hologram of a car that rotates 360 degrees.

to one," Lacey said.

"We're one of about a half dozen places in the world that can do this," Seydel said. "That's good for Southfield... as well as for Michigan."

Rather than scanning the object with a laser to produce the holographic master (which is used to make the die that embosses the final holograms), Lacey photographs the object with a 35mm movie camera, rotating the subject about 30 degrees. Then, about 120 frames of film are superimposed on the master to produce the 3-D picture.

Lacey began as a chemical engineer with the Goodyear Chemical Division.

"I've had a long-term personal interest in holograms," Lacey said. "It was my hobby for a number of years. In 1975 I saw the opportunity for growth in the marketplace."

To take advantage of that opportunity, he founded AVM Productions, which primarily marketed holograms produced by existing methods. Lacey started Holo Source last year.

HOLO SOURCE MARKETS its Image Plain Integral holograms throughout the world.

Lacey's process makes holographic portraiture a possibility.

"Executives will have holograms hanging on the wall in their offices, rather than photographs," Seydel said.

The possibilities are endless. Lacey is currently working on a process to make holographic X-rays for use in diagnosing blocked arteries around the heart and in the brain.

But that's not all. Just over the horizon lies a whole new world of applications.

"By the end of the decade, you should be seeing real-time (live) holographic theatrical presentations," Lacey said. "We will be able to broadcast holographic images. It's just a matter of the solutions being brought together."

Bill Seydel, Holo/Source director of marketing and sales, explains the hologram process in the laser camera imaging room.

Let body language speak for you

Good body language is part of good conversation. Body language is a personal thing. A person who has a strong, aggressive personality will quite naturally lean over the conference table and make strong gestures with his/her hands to accompany his/her message.

A normally shy, retiring person who suddenly leans over the table and begins to gesticulate emphatically gives a much stronger message.

Here are a few aspects of body language that concern all of us:

- When you shake hands, the grip should be firm.
- When someone is talking, you should sit attentively and not slump.
- When someone is talking, you should watch his face and not let your eyes roam around the room.
- When you want to make a point, you should sit up straighter and appear more intent.
- When you sit down, you should keep your legs still and not continue to cross and uncross them.
- You should keep your hands from fidgeting and fingers from drumming.

• A woman should not sit in a provocative pose (I do not have to explain what this pose is because a woman who is sitting or standing in this manner is always aware of it).

Dear Joan:
I have noticed the executives in the organization I am with are all accomplished conversationalists. They all appear interested in every subject that is brought up on social occasions.

Since I have high aspirations for my career I know developing the art of conversation is essential in attaining my goals. How can I start developing conversational skills?

R.K., Royal Oak

Conversation is a very important part of executive presence, a natural cornerstone of executive communication. An executive who is at ease in conversation is an asset to the company because that talent directly or indirectly contributes to profits.

A good conversationalist is self-educated, a person who goes far beyond the intellectual demands of his who retell some situation in which they feel they were the star and listened to recount to all who will listen every compliment they have received for the past 10 years.

Remember, conversation includes listening with interest as well as contributing interesting ideas. Someone once said, "Small people talk about other people, medium people talk about material things, big people talk about ideas."

Dear Joan:
I heard the president of the corporation I work for say he can tell the maturity and potential of a young executive by the way he/she moves from the role of speaker in a conversation to that of listener. What does it take to make this transition smoothly?

H.E., Tröy

The most important attributes of a good conversationalist include being polite and caring about other people. A measure of intelligence is also a strong requirement. A good conversationalist:

- Is well-informed and talks on a broad range of subjects.
- Does not have tunnel vision but keeps abreast of the major news in the world.
- Is able to make a fast subject switch.
- Adjusts to the person with whom he is talking.
- Makes statements based on knowledge and experience, not just conjecture.
- Looks a person straight in the eye when talking to him/her.
- Avoids correcting another's grammar or pronunciation in public.
- Shows genuine interest in good news about colleagues.
- Doesn't interrupt.
- Accepts compliments gracefully.
- Knows how to pay compliments gracefully.
- Doesn't overdose on his/her own interests in conversation.

Catch 'Hoosiers' on rebound

Anyone who's ever cared about a high school basketball team, anyone who's been caught up in an underdog's race for the championship will find 'Hoosiers' an engaging movie.

Based on the story of a real-life team in a small Indiana town during the 1951-52 season, the movie does a creditable job of showing a tightly knit farming community's near obsession with the home town team.

Grown men who run farms and businesses remain emotionally tied with the team of teenage boys playing in a rinky-dink high school gym. Although they've hired a new coach with a mysterious past (Gene Hackman), they have absolutely no qualms about telling him exactly how to do his job.

Hackman's convincing as a man

second runs Louise Okrutsky

grasping at a second chance to do the job he believes he was intended to do. He manages to take the Hickory High School team to the state finals in Indianapolis.

Watch the style of basketball this group plays. Next to the fast-moving, high-jumping style we've become accustomed to, these kids with their set shots look like they're doing the minut on the basketball court.

DENNIS HOPPER, who's defnately made a career out of playing geeks of the week, returns in the guise of yet another misfit. He appears suitably tortured as the alcoholic father of one of the basketball team members.

Hopper does a wonderful job with these out-of-the-mainstream types. Watch him sitting on the bench, helping the coach orchestrate the plays. It's a portrait of a man on the brink of unraveling for the umpteenth time. He's so tightly wound you can almost feel the tension of someone frantically hanging on to the last shreds of his self-control.

Barbara Hershey as a teacher in the high school is totally wasted in this movie. She's supposed to be a love interest for Hackman. That relationship is never developed. Hershey's reduced to sitting in the bleachers nervously watching the game.

'Hoosiers' emulates the period it portrays. It's full of the driven optimism of the late Truman, early Eisenhower era. There's an almost desperate, corny hope that the kids from the small, poor town will triumph over the big city kids in their fancy gym.

SPEAKING OF corny, here's a Disney alert. 'Lady and the Tramp' has become available, just in time to get in on the beginning of the holiday buying madness. The animated film of a pedigreed pooch and her Heinz 57 suitor remains charming.

You'd have to possess a stone heart and an extremely biased attitude not to manage even a little smile during the scene in which Tramp treats the Lady to a spaghetti feast, and they end up sharing the same strand of pasta.

This is the kind of film which more recent efforts, such as 'An American Tale' try to emulate with disappointing results. Go ahead, rent it for the kids in your life and then sneak a peek. Revisit childhood.

Gene Hackman plays a high school basketball coach who takes his small-town team to the state finals in "Hoosiers," now available on videotape.

2 women tell their stories

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Penny Klein was 12 when she met her future husband, Bruce. Neither ever dated others. "I'd been with him 18 years and 3 months when he died. We were just so close. We could just anticipate each other's moves."

Like any couple, they had their share of problems. But they were always able to work those problems out and were never separated during their marriage, which lasted 12 years, 3 months and 13 days. "Bruce and I had spent a lot of time together. We had a lot of friends, we kept very active."

WHEN ELAINE Ray-Connell, 37, tells senior citizens she's a widow, they're generally surprised. Ray-Connell, a registered nurse, is seniors health education coordinator for the Catherine McAuley Health Center in Ann Arbor. She also recently received a new assignment to work on women's health education.

As part of her work, Ray-Connell presents programs on widowhood and grieving. Ray-Connell doesn't know many other people in her age group who are widowed. "So we're in an odd category." She found little material on the subject of young widows and widowers in doing the research for her presentations.

YOUNG WIDOWS and widowers face different issues and problems than older people do, Ray-Connell said.

An older widow, for example, may have a grown son around to help her with her business affairs. A young widow, on the other hand, may have a small son to raise.

If Ray-Connell's husband had died when she was 70, she wouldn't have to worry about getting her son through college. She wouldn't, at that age, have to think about rebuilding a whole new life.

Early widowhood interrupts a marriage at a different point in the life cycle, she said. Ray-Connell thinks about such issues as whether she will remarry and what effect marrying or not marrying would have on her son; an older widow wouldn't have those concerns.

Klein, a Plymouth Township resident, has been a widow for more than four years. Her husband died on Father's Day, June 19, 1983. "It was very sudden and very unexpected," Klein, now 34, said of her husband's death from cardiac arrest shortly after his 33rd birthday.

When her husband died, Klein was rubbing his back, trying to help him relax. "And we were praying, praying together that he'd get better."

Ray-Connell, an Ann Arbor resident, has a 4-year-old son. It's been about two years since her husband died. He had a brain tumor and was sick for about a year before he died.

That illness meant Ray-Connell had time to think about her loss, having that time can be both good and bad, she said.

She watched her husband's condition deteriorate. There's some feeling of relief when a spouse's suffering has ended; an illness also gives a spouse time to prepare for that loss and to grieve.

KLEIN AND her husband had two sons, who are now 12 and 14. She works at Medical Staff Resources in Plymouth Township.

"I guess the main thing I miss is the companionship. Even if you don't talk, just to have someone in the room who cares about you."

When Klein takes her sons to such places as Cedar Point, she sees older couples together. It makes her sad to realize she won't have that opportunity.

The loss of many of her friends after Bruce's death was difficult for Klein.

"Nobody plays matchmaker. As a matter of fact, you lose all of your married friends. I lost all of Bruce's and my married friends."

Ray-Connell didn't face the problem of people playing premature matchmaker after her husband's death.

That probably does happen, but I can't say it happened to me. Some people may assume a young widow or widower wants to date immediately or to remarry, people are different, however, and that's often not the case.

Klein still gets together with some of her female friends who are married, she's not often included in events planned for couples.

"That is a very painful thing, especially when you've been friends with people for 25 or 30 years. That's true with family also." Klein's heard the same thing from other people she knows who are widowed or divorced.

Ray-Connell lost touch with a number of her married friends after her husband died. There's probably only one couple left now that she still sees, and she doesn't see them as often.

"You end up really losing your whole network, almost. I know that happens for divorced couples too."

KLEIN'S NOW keeping busy with her job. Her work includes being the marketing director for Medical Staff Resources; she also does hiring and testing for nurses and aides.

Klein is also planning a move out of the Plymouth Township home her family has lived in for a number of years. She'll stay in the general area.

"Finally, I couldn't take it any more," Klein said of her decision to move. She'd changed everything in the house, including adding on a room so she wouldn't have to sleep in the room where Bruce died.

"That didn't help."

At the time of her husband's death, Klein was working full time. Just a few days before her husband died, Klein had hired a sitter.

"I hired a sitter because we expected Bruce to go back to work by the end of that week that he died. As he got sicker, the sitter also ended up taking care of Bruce.

RAY-CONNELL'S 4-year-old son still talks about his dad.

He talks about it still, he asks questions. In some ways, his dad's death may have been easier for him at age 2 than it would have been at 6, 8 or 10. Ray-Connell said.

Young widows and widowers end up with children asking questions about such subjects as where we all go after death. Answering questions about such awesome concepts isn't an easy task.

"My oldest son would wake up in the middle of the night," said Klein. He'd asked her what would happen if she too were to die.

Klein told her sons it wasn't likely that she too would die. The boys also wondered why it had to be their father who died rather than someone else.

And they were very, very close to their father.

Klein and her sons have remained close to Bruce's parents. She and the boys don't celebrate Mother's Day or Father's Day. Instead, they may go out to dinner and to a show or out for a ride.

"We go out to the cemetery a lot."

NOW THAT it's been a little more than four years, Klein's adjusting to her new life.

"I'm finally getting back to a more normal state of mind." She still deals with feelings of depression, loneliness, fear, pain and worry.

Klein avoids bars and singles-type events. A church she attends occasionally in Ann Arbor is considering organizing a singles group; she also belongs to a ski club that includes some singles.

Klein goes to individual and group therapy sessions. She also reads her Bible and books by inspirational writers.

Photos of her children that Klein keeps around remind her of just what it is she's got to live for.

"I am more than thankful to have my two sons. The main thing I live for is, 'God let me live to see my children raised and married.'"

"They have a lot of their dad's traits," she added.

"They remind me a lot of their father."

OTHER RELATIONSHIPS, whether they're with friends, children, grandchildren or a new mate, can also contribute to happiness.

There's a phrase Ray-Connell is particularly fond of. "One is a whole number." It's not a fraction, widows and widowers shouldn't feel they're incomplete people.

"Don't give up" is what she'd tell other widows and widowers. "Life is to be lived by us as we are here now. This is the only chance we have to create and interact and be alive."

"Don't be afraid to talk about the person who died," Klein said. Friends and family members should realize the person has died and shouldn't resort to using euphemisms such as "passed away."

"He died, period. People have every phrase in the world to refer to death except for death."

Offers to baby-sit are much appreciated, she said, as are invitations to lunch or dinner.

"As hard as it may be, listen, because that really helps the person."

MOT starts biggest year ever

By Shirlee Ross Iden
staff writer

If you thought you saw a phantom at the opera last weekend, don't fret.

That was probably the ghost of Giuseppe Verdi celebrating his birthday and the opening of "Falstaff" at the Michigan Opera Theatre.

Verdi, whose birthday falls Oct. 10, and MOT have a lot to celebrate as the opera theater launches its biggest season ever, says John P. Finck of the MOT press office.

"We'd like to think that not only Verdi was looking over the production, but maybe Christopher Columbus looked down on us on the eve of the anniversary of his important discovery."

Finck said MOT already has plans to commemorate the 500th anniversary of the discovery of America in 1992. "There are operas of discovery that we can decide about staging for the occasion."

Right now, his hands are full coordinating the 1987-88 season.

"WE'RE REALLY taking off," said Finck.

"Falstaff," a comic opera, is based on Shakespeare's "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and features Ronald Hedlund, Lawrence Cooper, Marianna Christos with conductor Mark Flint and director Lou Galtiero. Performances continue Wednesday, Friday and Saturday at the Fisher Theatre.

Next stop on the MOT schedule is 16th century Spain as imagined by Miguel de Cervantes. Music lovers will journey back in time with everyman's hero Don Quixote in his "Man of La Mancha" quest to "Dream the Impossible Dream."

"Richard Fredricks, baritone star of the Metropolitan Opera, will sing Don Quixote," said Finck. "He's performed all over the U.S. and Europe in both opera and musical theater, and he's been on the 'Tonight Show' and 'Merv Griffin.'"

Chris Cullen, Broadway and TV actress, will debut as Aldonza/Dulcinea. The production will be directed and choreographed by Broadway veteran Ted Forlow in a four-week run from Oct. 23 to Nov. 14.

Imported from Toronto, the Broadway operetta classic "Kismet" will run for three weeks from Nov. 20 to Dec. 6. Beverly Lambert of the NYC Opera and Broadway will sing nostalgic favorites including "Baubles, Bangles, and Beads," "This is My Beloved" and "Stranger in Paradise."

AN ARABIAN fantasy, the musical will be directed and choreographed by Ted Pappas with Broadway actor David Chaney as Hajj, the Poet.

For next spring, MOT's agenda is for grand opera to be sung at the Masonic Temple beginning with three performances of "Il Trovatore" April 30 to May 7. Leona Mitchell of the Met will sing the role of Leonora while acclaimed Italian tenor Giuseppe Giacomini will do Manrico.

Celebrated American baritone James Dietsch will sing Count di Luna while Livia Budai, Hungarian-born mezzo-soprano, will play the gypsy, Azucena. Budai has been applauded in the world's leading opera houses including the Budapest State Opera, the San Francisco Opera, and Covent Garden. She makes her Met debut this season as Azucena with Dame Joan Sutherland and Luciano Pavarotti.

"Die Fledermaus" one of the world's most beloved operas, by Johann Strauss, is not completely cast as yet, but will feature Andre John, Evelyn De La Rosa and Marilyn Mims in performances May 14-21.

The closing opera of spring will be Giacomo Puccini's romantic drama "La Boheme" to be sung in Italian with English subtitles. Three performances are scheduled for Saturday, May 28, Wednesday, June 1 and Saturday, June 4.

Huston Grand Opera music director, John DeMain and Roman Terlecky will be part of the creative team, and Russian tenor Vyacheslav M. Polozov, a veteran of the Bolshoi who recently made his debut with the Met, will be part of the "La Boheme" cast.

IT ALL ADDS up to 61 main-stage performances of six full-scale productions of grand opera, operetta, and musical theater, many hours of musical pleasure for area audiences, and a gala 17th anniversary season.

And the finale: a glittering benefit concert featuring opera luminary Luciano Pavarotti with full symphony orchestra at Joe Louis Arena on June 12, sponsored by the Ford Motor Co., representing the largest such grant ever made to the Michigan Opera Theatre.

Ranking within the top 10 major opera companies in the country, MOT, founded by Dr. David DiChiery, has been hailed for its innovative presentations and touring performances.

Surmounting earlier struggles, today MOT boasts a deficit-free operating budget for the past five years.

Dr. David DiChiery is the general director and founder of the Michigan Opera Theatre.

Rugby players on a collision course

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

All right, so you want camaraderie? Well, forget the military.

Grab a pair of cleats, some shorts and hike down to the local rugby pitch. College fraternities only wish they had the kinship these ruggers share on Saturday afternoons.

Or at least some of the nicknames. One team's roster consists of Snake, Duck, Dirtball, Beak, Crash and Garfunkel.

Better yet, to find out about the true brotherhood in butting heads, ask an Englishman who's played the game 16 years.

"For 90 minutes, you're tryin' to kill one another," said Grant Mansfield, 28, of Farmington Hills who's originally from London. Mansfield plays with the Detroit Rugby Club. "Then after the match, you want to have a beer with 'em. How many sports are like that?"

REALLY, ALL one had to do was witness the concern and compassion when one of the troops was felled by an obviously broken leg recently at the annual Michigan Cup Rugby Tournament at Schoolcraft College in Livonia.

As soon as the player was brought off the field on a stretcher, teammates and spectators alike quickly milled around to lend some comforting words of support.

"We scored without you, Jack," said one teammate as Jack Karabees of Birmingham, covered by a blanket, lay on the ground in pain. "Weird way to get a breather, Jack," added another.

Someone peels the blanket away and looks at the disfigured limb.

"Will an aspirin do, Jack?" the person asked Karabees even smiles after that question.

Before the ambulance pulls up, a Welsh-sounding gentleman selling rugby equipment at a table nearby yells, "Jack, you ruining me trade."

NEEDLESS TO say, rugby players don't spend their idle time eating quiche and watching Oprah Winfrey.

It takes a sense of humor to play rugby, a sport that originated in the Midlands of England during the 19th century. Sometimes you have to laugh in the face of pain.

But, according to Jim Kennedy, president of the Michigan Rugby Football Union, the sport is not as dangerous to one's health as some would believe.

True, rugby players crash into one another with no pads on. And, yes, there's only one official on the field watching over 30 players.

So an occasional stray elbow or fist might go undetected once in awhile. Still, compared to some sports, rugby's not that bad.

"YOU DON'T have the injuries that you have in (American) football," said Kennedy, a player with the Detroit Tradesmen of the Michigan Rugby Football Union. "How many football games have you seen where two or three guys go out with injuries and don't come back? And (rugby players) don't even wear pads."

Muscle pulls, fat lips and bloody noses are more the norm in rugby. Serious injuries, such as broken legs, are the exception, Kennedy said.

One reason is players know the rugby pitch isn't a dance floor. They expect to get rocked.

Hooligans are weeded out, players say. What the referee doesn't catch, teammates take care of themselves.

"The game will police itself," said Mike Douglas of Livonia, coach of the Tradesmen. "If a guy takes a dirty shot at another, word gets around and he could find himself in the bottom of a pile with 10 guys on top."

"That's why it's a clean game. You know what can happen to you if you do anything wrong."

WHEN PLAYED right, rugby is a game of strength, speed and endurance.

All 30 players (15 on each side) on the field are involved, running all over the 75-yard-by-110-yard pitch. There are no substitutions, except for injuries.

Players try to advance the white ball (which resembles an American football in bad need of a diet) by running with it, laterally to a teammate or punting it.

Ball carriers can be tackled by defenders if they don't get rid of the ball in time.

A try, worth four points, occurs when the ball is brought across the opponent's goal line. Penalty kicks and drop kicks are worth three points, and conversion boots after a try are good for two.

Strategy is everything in rugby. "It usually takes a player three to four years to learn the game," Douglas said.

USUALLY, THE speedy players are put at the back. The physical ones find their home at the forward spot.

Forwards often battle in the pits during the scrummages, which are rather odd to watch. Similar to a faceoff in hockey, teammates hover together in a line and push forward against the other team's line. The ball is thrown in the middle and teams try to win possession.

Scrumms are where games are usually won.

"You have to have a lot of heart to play this game," Douglas said.

That is perhaps the only major requirement to be a rucker. Size helps, but you don't necessarily have to be a Hulk Hogan clone to excel.

AGE ISN'T much of a factor either. People in their teens and in their 40s play rugby. Some players are doctors, lawyers or businessmen. Younger players may have speed, but the older players know the little secrets of the game.

The Tradesmen, who beat the Detroit Rugby Club in the final to win the tournament, have a blend of both younger and older players.

The youth title on the Tradesmen goes hands down to Kirk Borger, 19, of West Bloomfield. Borger, who played soccer and baseball at Southfield Christian, was looking for a sport after a graduating from school.

After a trip to the library, Borger chose rugby.

"I went to the library and read about it," said Borger, who had two tries in one tournament match against the Flint Rogues Rugby Club. "It was different. The second game I got rocked. You sort of get used to it after awhile."

BORGER TAKES some chiding. Not so much about his age but for what he drinks.

Borger is a self-proclaimed Pepsi drinker. Which certainly makes him the minority amongst the rank and file of rugby.

It's an understatement to say a rucker likes his brew after a tough match. And it was no coincidence that free aspirin and Maalox were being offered at the concession stand the Saturday morning of the tournament.

"We enjoy the game," Kennedy said. "We don't commit suicide if we lose. When it comes time to cross the white lines from the other side, it's party."

It's a common practice for the home team to take the visiting team out afterward and supply the beer. Usually the two sides break into a nightlong songfest, crooning old English rugby tunes.

Those interested in playing rugby can call Jim Kennedy of the Michigan Rugby Football Union at 544-9095 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

I have shelves of trophies which I don't really want to part with but they take up so much room. Should I throw them out?

Trophies represent special achievements in life, and I would be the last person to tell you whether or not to keep them. Here are some considerations, however. First, what is your gut reaction each time you see them? Do they bring you a special satisfaction or do they grate on your nerves? Do you ever really look at them anymore or are they just in the way? Do you have to dust them or are they in an enclosure?

People tend to hang onto sentimental items like trophies because it proves they've "been there." If you can feel just as secure or if you would actually feel relief at being without them, then by all means get rid of them. If they bring you joy and satisfaction, then keep them.

You might pack most of them away and display only a few on a rotation basis. Or give away most of them and keep only the most significant.

There is one way to "eat your cake and have it too." Take good closeup pictures of your trophies. Keep the trophies until the pictures develop to your satisfaction and write on the pictures or in an album everything you want to remember about each trophy. Then, if the trophies are in good condition, give them to the Special Olympics. The plaques will be removed and the trophy awarded to some very deserving people.

Decorating with sheets

Country, contemporary or traditional? Whatever your favorite style, decorating with sheets can provide great looks with ease — and for a reasonable cost.

Window coverings, slip covers, table covers, decorative pillows, bed canopies: the possibilities stretch with your imagination.

Sheet projects require varying amounts of time and expertise. Easy sewing whips up a table cover. Greater skill is needed for a bed canopy, balloon shades or an upholstered chair.

Add eyelet pillows, a touch of brass, any personal accessories you wish. The result: a room that's truly your own.

For any project, here are a few tips to remember:

- Carefully measure the wall or the item you'll be working with. Also, remember that some packages give sizes before the sheet is hemmed, while others list finished sizes.

- Buy all the sheets you need at the same time to make sure the dye lots match and that the store doesn't run out.

- Remember that it's easier to match solid colors, a small repeating print or simple stripe than large patterns.

- Don't wash sheets ahead of time for projects that won't allow them to be washed later, such as a bed canopy or wall coverings. Washing the sheets may shrink them enough to cause problems with fit. Besides, new sheets are treated with sizing, which offers some protection against soiling; laundering the sheets eventually washes out the sizing.

- Do wash sheets first for projects where they'll be washed later (such as curtains and table skirts). Use spray starch to restore crispness.

- Pay attention to the surface you're covering. Bright or dark colors could show or bleed through the sheet.

Ravines: 'magical things'

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

FRANKLIN ROAD, north of 14 Mile, which used to exude the sweet smell of apples from the acres of orchards, now carries the sweet smell of success.

There are a few gnarled apple trees at the new Franklin Ravines and, sure, there are still some beautiful views of the Franklin River Valley and Franklin Village is just down the road, but the change is dramatic.

The orchards and fields have been turned into choice homesites, $150,000 up, and a furnished model serves as an idea home for those interested in building on one of the sites.

Holtzman & Silverman/The Fisher Group of Farmington Hills is the developer of the 40-acre, $23 million project, which, when completed, will have 52 custom homes, each valued at $450,000-750,000 ranging from 3,500 to 6,500 square feet.

The 5,000-square-foot, four-bedroom showcase house, brick, wood and fieldstone, is a combination of classic, traditional and contemporary ideas in design and furnishings.

THE ARCHITECT WAS Anderson-Reinke & Associates with interior design by Sara Olesker Ltd. of Chicago. A combination of periods and styles is blended to create a strong, durable, attractive, very upscale Michigan house. But, inside, the amount of light, openness and use of space and color gives it a universal or continental rather than regional ambience.

Olesker said, "There are magical things in this house."

And, in a way, she's right. A lot of the magic comes from the obvious architectural details such as the two-story living room's coffered ceiling, the oversize palladium window at the front stairway (there's also a back stairway), four fireplaces, intriguing repetition of curves in the bay windows and architectural detailing and the beautiful cornice molding.

Equally fascinating are the hidden details which would surely add to the beauty and pleasure of daily life — the combination of gas and electric burners for cooking on the marble topped kitchen island, the completely equipped closets (Clutter Control), the built-in refrigerator-ice maker in the master suite dressing room and the wet bar in the library, for instance.

FRANKLIN RAVINES, BEGUN last fall, is being developed in three phases. Since interest was more intense than anticipated, sales have already started for Phase III.

All utilities, gas, electricity, telephone, cable television, city sewers and water are in. The roads are paved and construction is ongoing.

The sales office is in the showcase house on Franklin Road, between 14 Mile and Maple. Hours are noon to 5 p.m. daily.

The living room of the Ravines features a two-story coffered ceiling with oversize palladium windows. The house also has four fireplaces.
