Jack Wilcox had them laughing at Monday's Plymouth City Commission meeting. Commissioners were deciding whether to grant the Plymouth Community YMCA permission to host its annual run when Wilcox asked to speak.

Wilcox stood, but before he could utter a word, commissioners guessed what he was going to say. "You want them to be quiet, because the run starts at 8 a.m.," said a commissioner. Wilcox, who lives along the race route, replied, "I'll be quiet," and sat down.

Better yet

The Knights of Columbus, a Catholic fraternal organization, requested that Plymouth Township donate $25 to its annual fund-raising drive for programs to benefit mentally retarded people.

The township board did even better.

Individual board members last week literally opened their own wallets during a meeting and came up with a total of $35.

The public treasury was preserved, the Knights of Columbus will receive more money than they may have anticipated and board members could feel good about doing something good.

Hard to beat all of that.

Shades of purple

Lawyer Chuck Lowe took some razzing while pinch-hitting at Monday's commission meeting for his brother, city attorney Ron Lowe.

"Is that our attorney with a purple shirt on?" asked a city official who noticed Lowe wasn't joining commissioners at the main table. "You can sit up at this table. This seat is for you," city manager Hank Graper said.

Lowe was attired in a purple plaid shirt, grey tie and tweed coat.

"I thought today was going to be a quiet day in the office," Lowe told commissioners. "I didn't plan on going to court." Or attending the city commission meeting.

Chuck Lowe, a special assistant attorney general, agreed early Monday to sit in for his brother. "Ron was with his brothers at the Masonic Temple taking orphans to the Shrine Circus," said Lowe. Lowe added that his refusal to sit at the main table had nothing to do with his purple shirt.

"I just don't feel it's appropriate because I am not the city attorney. I didn't want to be put in the position of responding to questions I basically am not qualified to respond to," Lowe assists his brother "when need be." Collecting student loans and back taxes for the attorney general is Lowe's full-time endeavor.

Work on a 48-inch water main along Joy Road is scheduled to begin in April. That means motorists will have to contend with restricted use of the road.

Joy Road to close in spring for water main installation

By Doug Funke staff writer

Installation of a 48-inch water main along Joy Road between Sheldon and Ann Arbor Road this spring and summer will send hundreds of motorists temporarily off their beaten path.

Teachers and students trying to get to the Centennial Educational Park, where access will be severely restricted at times, and people who live in subdivisions off McClumpha Road will be most affected.

Construction in phases is scheduled to begin in mid-April and conclude in late August, according to a timetable proposed by M&M Contracting of Michigan.

Traffic pressures are expected to increase considerably on McClumpha, a gravel road in sections, on Ann Arbor Road, the major surface street in Plymouth Township, and on the newly opened Sheldon Center Road in Canton Township.

SECTIONS OF JOY will reopen as the water main is laid westward, and again as the roadway later is restored.

Work is scheduled to begin the week of April 18 with the closing of Joy to all but local traffic from Sheldon to Canton Center Road.

The water main is expected to be installed by late June or early July. A complete restoring of Joy is anticipated by the end of August.

"There will be posted detour routes," said Dennis Oszust, project manager for the contractor. "We have a grader available and will be grading McClumpha."

Jackson 2nd in Plymouth area, 1st in state

By Wayne Peal staff writer

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, beaten badly in most southeast Michigan suburban communities, found his salvation in Detroit and other large metropolitan communities en route to winning the Michigan caucuses Saturday.

Jackson's stunning defeat of Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis prolonged the Democratic search for a front-runner, but it may also have hastened the narrowing of the field. Rep. Richard Gephardt's campaign, weakened by a distant third-place showing, is reported to be moribund, and might be terminated this week.

Democratic voters in Plymouth and Plymouth Township preferred Dukakis, but Jackson's second-place finish raised some eyebrows among area political observers.

Dukakis received the most votes among city and township voters, with 258.

Jackson finished second with 90. Gephardt, who said he needed a strong state finish to stay in the race, received little local help — finishing third with 82 votes.

Illinois Sen. Paul Simon finished fourth with 24 votes. Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr. received 17. Former Sen. Gary Hart, who withdrew from the race, received one vote.

"WE WEREN'T surprised by Dukakis' showing, we figured he'd finish first," Wayne County 2nd District Party chairman Joel Sawyer said. "But we were surprised by Jackson's showing and that Gephardt didn't do better."

Dukakis also carried 2nd District's Livonia portion, topping Gephardt 577-212.

P-C officials suggest $4.7 million in cuts

By Doug Funke staff writer

Plymouth-Canton school administrators have proposed spending cuts of $4.7 million for the 1988-89 school year.

A broad spending plan — with options for specific cuts — was presented to the school board Saturday during a workshop meeting.

To maintain programs and services at this year's level next year would cost $59.6 million, administrators forecast.

However, revenue is expected to amount to only $53.5 million.

The difference would be made up in spending cuts and tapping the fund balance — surplus account — for $1.4 million.

The fund balance then would stand at $2.5 million as of June 1989.

That scenario assumes that the school board adopts the administration's spending plan without change, which isn't likely.

ADMINISTRATORS give four different options of spending cuts in 29 separate categories.

The least painful, if adopted across the board, would save $1.2 million. The most severe would save $5 million.

Specific cuts and projected savings include:

- Eliminate 62 teaching positions — $1.4 million.
- Reduce major maintenance budget by, among other things, patching rather than replacing school roofs and patching rather than resurfacing school parking lots — $670,000.
- Close Lowell Middle School and transfer students to other four middle schools in the district — $465,000.

• Mothball Hoben Elementary School under construction and scheduled to open next fall — $287,000.

• Eliminate five administrative support positions — $256,000.

• Eliminate field trip subsidies, shuttles and temporary busing. Require that students kindergarten through second grade live 1½ miles

Special education tax on ballot

By Wayne Peal staff writer

A 1-mill tax increase for Wayne County special education programs will appear on the August primary ballot.

The increase would double the current county special education tax. It would also make county special education programs self-supporting, a Wayne County Intermediate Schools spokesman said.

THE NEW tax would be first levied with December property tax bills. It would amount to an additional $37.50 a year for persons living in $75,000 homes. Special education programs will produce a $9 million deficit this school year, associate county superintendent James Greiner said. Each of the county's 34 public school districts must transfer money from its general operating budget to eliminate the debt, he added.

"We've been implementing 'charge backs' to local school districts to pay off deficits," Greiner said. "But that means there's less for districts to spend for their own general education programs."

County special education programs assist students with severe mental, emotional or physical impairments. Each local school district provides its own programs for students with less severe emotional and mental impairments.

'This millage is the vehicle for equity for special education students.'

There are 35,000 handicapped students in Wayne County, according to county records. Of those students, 6,000 attend county programs. The rest are served by their local school districts.

Board won't renew bar's liquor license

By Doug Funke staff writer

The other shoe fell, so to speak, for the Plymouth Saloon last week when the Plymouth Township Board unanimously voted to recommend non-renewal of the bar's liquor license.

A state liquor control commission hearing on the non-renewal is expected by mid April, a decision by May 1.

That's the timetable understood by John Stewart, a lawyer representing the township, after he met last week with the chief enforcement officer for the LCC.

"All is subject to circuit court review," Stewart said of LCC decisions.

The township board last month in a separate action unanimously voted to recommend that the state liquor control commission revoke Plymouth Saloon's license.

THE LCC will put the revocation request on hold for now because a revocation will become moot if the license isn't renewed, Stewart said. Liquor licenses come up for renewal annually in May.

The township board based both recommendations on a belief that the bar has become a public nuisance for allegedly serving minors and allowing excessive consumption.

The bar is at General Drive and Joy.

Norman Farhat, Plymouth Saloon's lawyer, wondered aloud at last week's township board meeting whether the non-renewal proceeding was overkill.

"I think it's a rather innocuous proceeding," he said. "What's a non-renewal when you've already revoked?"

Township officials wanted to emphasize to the LCC that they're serious about closing the bar. And they don't want things to fall through the administrative cracks.

Farhat said he would expect the LCC to rubber-stamp a revocation recommendation. Farhat said he'd then appeal to the courts on grounds that the township board's hearing on revocation was unfair.

WHILE THE LCC doesn't have to follow the recommendation of a municipality on a non-renewal, it usually does, Stewart said.

Farhat would likely appeal a non-renewal decision as well on fairness grounds.

Plymouth Saloon has made good on all back personal property taxes owing to the township, according to Mary Brooks, treasurer.

A payment of $1,100 March 17 wiped out the debt. A payment of $3,184 was made March 7. The taxes had accumulated over the past three years.

Pete Eleferio, general manager of the bar, said the taxes hadn't been paid because he's been experiencing money problems.

Business has declined the past couple of years due to police harassment, Eleferio maintained.

Police applaud right to videotape sobriety tests

By Susan Buck
staff writer

Area police applaud a recent Michigan Court of Appeals decision that upholds their right to videotape sobriety tests given to suspected drunk drivers.

But Plymouth Township and Canton Township police say they do not routinely videotape drunk driving suspects.

The case represents the first appellate review of the issue in Michigan and is binding statewide, unless reversed by the Michigan Supreme Court.

The decision could boost drunk driving convictions.

In Plymouth Township, police have $2,000 worth of Beta video equipment that they use periodically to record arrests, but are holding off using it to videotape drunk drivers until policies are in place, according to Police Chief Carl Berry.

Use may be complicated, though, because 35th District Court has VHS equipment, he said.

"I DON'T know if a lot of agencies have the equipment," said Berry.

We have had it since day one, when the department opened two years ago.

The appellate court's case involved videotaping of sobriety tests inside the Lansing police station.

"All of our suspected drunk drivers get videotaped," said Lansing Police Chief Charles Reifsnnyder, Wednesday. "We have been doing it for almost two years. We find it very effective."

Videotaping may take place either at roadside or inside the police station when suspects are brought in for the Breathalyzer test.

Obstacles include additional personnel needed to operate the camera and storage of the tapes throughout the entire appeal process, usually six months.

Some police cars in other areas come equipped with video cameras.

Sobriety tests are used to measure physical coordination, mental attention, ability to follow instructions and to estimate a driver's blood alcohol level.

In addition to Lansing, tests are regularly videotaped by police in Grand Rapids and Wyoming and by sheriffs in Monroe, Midland and Mecosta counties.

AT ROADSIDE, police officers ask drivers to take a preliminary breath test via a portable, transistor-size unit as one means of determining sobriety.

Refusal to take the PBT test nets the suspect a $45 ticket, according to Plymouth Township Officer Erik Mayernik, who also has training as a Breathalyzer operator.

The law defines a blood alcohol level at .08 or .09 percent or above as visibly impaired, a blood alcohol level at or above .10 percent means presumptively guilty of drunk driving.

A conviction of visibly impaired fines the driver four points on his driver's license while a drunk-driving conviction equals six points.

A maximum first-offense fine for visibly impaired driving is $300 and $500 for drunk driving. Driver's license suspensions range from 90 days to one year for visibly impaired and six months to two years for drunk driving.

"Now that we know it is constitutional, we'll be looking at it," said Canton Police Chief John Santomauro. "We're presently not set up to do it. It's pretty hard to argue against a video. It's a real plus for law enforcement."

In the city of Plymouth, police have cameras booked up in the booking and garage areas but these are not routinely used for videotaping sobriety testing, according to Commander Michael Gardner.

Special education tax to be on August ballot

IN 1974, county voters approved a similar 1-mill special education tax. While that millage would continue, Greiner said it hasn't fully covered program costs since 1982.

"Program costs are going up and we're not getting the help we need from the state and federal government," Greiner said.

The new 1-mill tax would provide an estimated $19 million annually, Greiner said. It would allow the county to expand special education programs, as well as making current programs self-supporting, he added.

"There's been a lot of talk about educational equity," Greiner said. "This special education millage is the vehicle for equity for special education students."

Like the 1974 millage, the new 1-mill tax wouldn't be subject to renewal, Greiner said. Also like the 1974 millage, tax revenue would first be distributed to regional centers serving students with "low incidence" disabilities — ranging from deafness to autism.

THESE CENTERS serve students from throughout the county. By law, class sizes are generally limited to less than 20 students.

Roughly 60 percent of center costs are paid by the county. The rest is paid by the state and federal government.

Several regional centers are contained within area school districts.

Livonia Public Schools provides space for a center for the trainable mentally impaired, a work skills center for other handicapped students and programs for the visually impaired.

Redford Union Schools provides space for programs for the hearing impaired. Two day treatment centers for the severely emotionally impaired are also provided within the district.

Wayne-Westland Community Schools provides space for programs for the trainable mentally impaired, severely mentally impaired, severely multiply impaired, hearing impaired and the physical and health impaired. The district also provides space for an early intervention program that targets disabled children three and under and a work adjustment program for disabled adult students.

Garden City Schools provides space for the county's only school program for autistic children.

No regional centers are within the Plymouth-Canton or South Redford school districts.

Joy Road to close for 'waterworks'

James Anulewicz and Carl Berry, Plymouth Township planning director and police chief, respectively, anticipate traffic flow problems during construction.

"There's no question there's going to be inconvenience," Anulewicz said. "Maintenance of this (McClumpha) road will be essential."

"The bottleneck is going to be Ann Arbor Road and McClumpha," Berry said.

MOTORISTS who use McClumpha also can look forward to a good news-bad news situation some time this year.

Several hundred feet of that roadway south of Ann Arbor Road will be paved by a developer. A smoother ride will follow construction tieups.

Exactly when that project will begin hasn't been determined.

Anulewicz would prefer that the McClumpha project precede the work on Joy due to the volume of cars expected to detour onto McClumpha.

Work on the water main extension probably will come first, said a spokesman for the county.

The Detroit Water and Sewerage Department is extending its water main west along Joy to service future development, said Thomas Hollis, Plymouth's water and sewer superintendent.

P-C spending cuts proposed from school rather than one mile to be eligible for busing — $215,600.

• Reduce staff development budget — $200,000.

"OUR PRIORITY is to preserve the classroom as much as it affects kids," Superintendent John M. Hoben said. "With these kinds of cuts, you're going to cut programs."

"I'm dead serious about everything there. Nobody likes to do it. We're open to suggestions," Hoben said.

"It's our obligation to do what the people have said and still give kids the best possible education with the dollars available," said David Artley, board president.

"Yes, it's very serious. We will try to lessen the effect on kids, but it's got to have some effect and the people have spoken."

HOBEN SENT a memo to every employee in the district after the millage proposal failed last week asking for ideas where money can be saved.

He was to meet with representatives of the teachers' union today and said he expects to huddle with other bargaining groups as well.

Further school board discussion is expected tonight (7:30 p.m. at 454 S.

Harvey, Plymouth) and at a workshop tentatively scheduled for April 21 before the budget is adopted.

There was some sentiment — although the board was sharply divided Saturday — to put another tax question to voters on the annual ballot.

"I think we owe this to the students of the community to give this one more shot," trustee Roland Thomas said. "I don't think we've done our job telling. This is where we're going to cut out."

The board must decide by April 25 whether to include a millage proposal on the June ballot.

Caring.

"The job is very challenging."

"Five years ago, a friend who worked in the Surgical Intensive Care Unit told me Catherine McAuley Health Center was a good place to work, so I interviewed. Now I work on the Oncology Unit, caring for cancer patients.

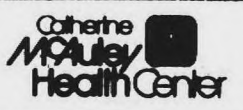

The job is very challenging. There is a lot of family interaction, which I enjoy very much, and a lot of teaching. Many of our patients are dealing with very tough crises.

The nurses I work with care and are very willing to help each other out. It's also nice because the doctors and other professionals respect what we say. They know that we know what we're doing.

District judge warms Detroit court bench

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Judge James Garber of the 35th District Court presided over a trial last week involving a Detroit woman who was attacked by a man with a machete.

A cab driver who came to the woman's aid testified that had the machete been sharp, the woman probably would have been decapitated.

If you're thinking that that's rugged stuff for the local district court, you're right. Garber is sitting for six weeks in Recorder's Court, replacing Judge Joseph A. Gillis, who died earlier this year.

Garber's temporary assignment was mentioned at Monday's Plymouth City Commission meeting. Officials were discussing the cost of keeping Main Street cruising in check this summer.

City manager Henry Graper said "Garber may be a visiting judge in Recorder's Court all summer long. Our revenues will drop significantly if (Garber's replacement) isn't willing to go along with a higher fine schedule introduced last summer to discourage cruising."

DURING A break in last week's trial, Garber said he'll be sitting in Recorder's Court through April 22.

He'll be back on the Plymouth bench for the remainder of the spring and all summer, with the exception of a week. In late July, Garber will spend seven days working toward a master's degree in judicial science at an institute in Reno, Nev. He's one of 18 judges nationwide to be accepted into the program.

Garber is in Recorder's Court at the request of state court administrator Herb Levitt.

"He can't say no," explained Levitt.

When Judge Gillis died, we agreed that maybe a priority would be to fight the backlog in Recorder's Court.

Garber was sought out because we consider him the most capable docket manager around.

Judge Garber's beginnings were in the Prosecutor's Office," added Levitt. "He's well-acquainted with the docket system in Recorder's Court. We really appreciate his willingness to help out."

Because Garber's district court docket is in good shape and fellow Judge John MacDonald helps out in Garber's absence, it "allows us to use Judge Garber as sort of a relief pitcher," said Levitt.

During Garber's absence, he'll be replaced in district court by a visiting judge. That judge will sit for just 17 days. Garber is using two weeks' vacation to help out in Recorder's Court.

GARBER SERVED as chief of Recorder's Court for the Wayne County Prosecutor's Office in the 1960s.

So, he says, "This is kind of like a homecoming for me. I've known my court clerk Jasper Militello for 25 years. I've known Josie the court reporter for 15 or 16 years. I'll tell you how old this makes me feel. I'm running into the sons and daughters and the grandchildren of old-time Detroit lawyers and judges I worked with."

Recorder's Court hasn't changed all that much, Garber said.

There are a lot more drug-related cases, "but the old faces are still there. And the pace is still pretty much the same. It's a fast track down here."

When the Supreme Court checked up on the 33 judges in Recorder's Court one recent Friday afternoon, however, things were moving slowly.

"The Supreme Court came around and found just about all the courtroom doors locked," said court clerk Jasper Militello. "Judge Garber was one of the three judges who were still on the bench at 4 or 4:30. Judge Garber likes to work."

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Judge James Garber says he enjoys the change of pace in Recorder's Court, "but I will be ready to go back."

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

District Judge James Garber, filling in in Recorder's Court, likens attorneys to kids. "They'll push you as far as you allow them to." Garber said he doesn't mean to imply that attorneys are childish, "but the analogy is worthwhile."

P-C students score high in science contest

Middle school and high school students from the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools turned in some outstanding performances at the Wayne County Regional Science Olympiad competition at the University of Detroit.

Thirty-nine schools from Wayne County competed at the March 19 event. Teams of 15 students competed in 18 different science events such as astronomy, chemistry lab, computer programming, metric estimation, mousetrap vehicles, laser shoot and tree identification.

Students were awarded medals for placing first, second, or third in individual events at either the middle school or high school division.

In addition, the total scores for all events were compiled for each team to give a final team standing.

The top three teams in each division will represent Wayne County at the state Olympiad April 16 at Grand Valley State College. State winners will go on to the National Competition at Delaware State University in May.

In the high school division, Plymouth Canton placed first and Plymouth Salem took second.

In addition, individual medals were won by the following students:

Arul Chinnayan (Salem) — first in A is for Anatomy, second in Bio-Process Lab, and third in Science Bowl; Vipul Panchal (Salem) — first in A is for Anatomy, and third in Science Bowl.

David Gackenbach (Salem) — first in Orienteering, second in Calorimeter; Evan Yeung (Canton) — first in Tree Identification, first in Bio-Process, second in A is for Anatomy; Jay Laney and Alex Chien (Canton) — first in Laser Shoot; Dan Gorsich (Canton) — first in Topography and first in Circuit Lab; Mike Abesamis, Pam Penland, Chris Way, and Cathy Yeung (Canton) — first in Pentathlon; Charles Lefurgy and Chris Way (Canton) — first in Calorimeter.

Four Plymouth-Canton middle schools competed this year. Central placed fifth, Pioneer sixth, Lowell 10th, and East 11th out of 20 schools.

Central students winning medals were — Holly Quick — gold in Tree Identification, Leon Hong — gold in Periodic Table; Vipul Parikh and David Wilson — silver in Measurement, Erin McKinney and Amy Ankofski — first in Egg Drop.

East winners were — Jason Finlay — gold in Aerodynamics; EJ Sieraeki — bronze in Orienteering; Tara Blackwell, Arnie Chakrabarti, EJ Sieraeki, and Jeff Noricks — bronze in Science Bowl.

Lowell winners were — Chris Brining — silver in Aerodynamics;

Ron Adams and James Carnes — silver in Computer Programming; Liz Bledowski, Julie Perkins, Bob Whelan, and James Carnes — bronze in Pentathlon.

Pioneer medal winners were — Rob Casler — gold in Orienteering; Prakash Chinnayan — silver in Tree Identification; Neal Lao — silver in Periodic Table; Todd Beauchene and Ashish Panchal — silver in Mystery Substance; Jason Krolski, Dave Donaldson, Neal Lao, Prakash Chinnayan — silver in Science Bowl; Dave Gondoly and Prakash Chinnayan — bronze in A is for Anatomy.

WHAT DID I DO WRONG?

When a physician first informs a patient that he or she has rheumatoid arthritis, often the patient's first response is: "What did I do wrong?"

It is true that physicians do not know the cause of rheumatoid arthritis. However, we have sufficient understanding to be able to say that personal negligence plays no role in its development. Rheumatoid arthritis occurs as a result of abnormal function of the immune system. What upsets the immune system is unclear, but to date no investigation has confirmed a causative role for poor diet, excessive activity, inadequate rest, or emotional disorders such as anxiety or depression.

The patient's next question usually is: "What should I do now?" Using common sense in nutrition, undertaking reasonable activity, and complying with the medical regimen are the best ways for patients to help themselves. Also, the person with rheumatoid arthritis should exercise caution. He or she should be skeptical of anyone who, either from good intentions or for a fee, offers a cure that supposedly medical science has overlooked or withheld from the public.

Caring.

"I've found my niche."

"I like the unit I'm working on and I love critical care, but more importantly, I share the same values as Catherine McAuley Health Center, the mercy values, so that's a big factor for me. It's that feeling of caring, from beginning to end.

We have primary nursing here, which means we coordinate care for our own patients, care from the beginning to the end of their stay. And we work with their families. It's more responsibility, but it's also more rewarding.

I love it here. As far as I'm concerned, this is the only place to work."

Seniors making their mark

By Mary Rodrigue
staff writer

A cluster of students at Schoolcraft, Madonna and other local colleges are proving it's never too late to learn.

Walter Greer is one example. Forced into early retirement by a heart attack at age 53, the former Northwest Airlines pilot found a permanent niche at Schoolcraft College back in 1975.

Two associate degrees (in electronics technology, welding and manufacturing technology) and one part-time teaching assignment later, Greer, 66, is still toting books across the Livonia campus.

"I GOT my first degree in two years, then I decided to take it slower," he said.

Greer even became a Schoolcraft booster, living his Seattle-based son to Michigan for studies in small-business management and culinary arts at Schoolcraft.

"In 1984 I graduated with my son — his first degree, my second," said Greer, who lives in Wixom.

"The thought of retiring and not doing anything was terrible," said Greer, whose health forced the unwelcome early retirement. "There's lots more things I'm interested in. I get along with kids. And I enjoy being with older people, too."

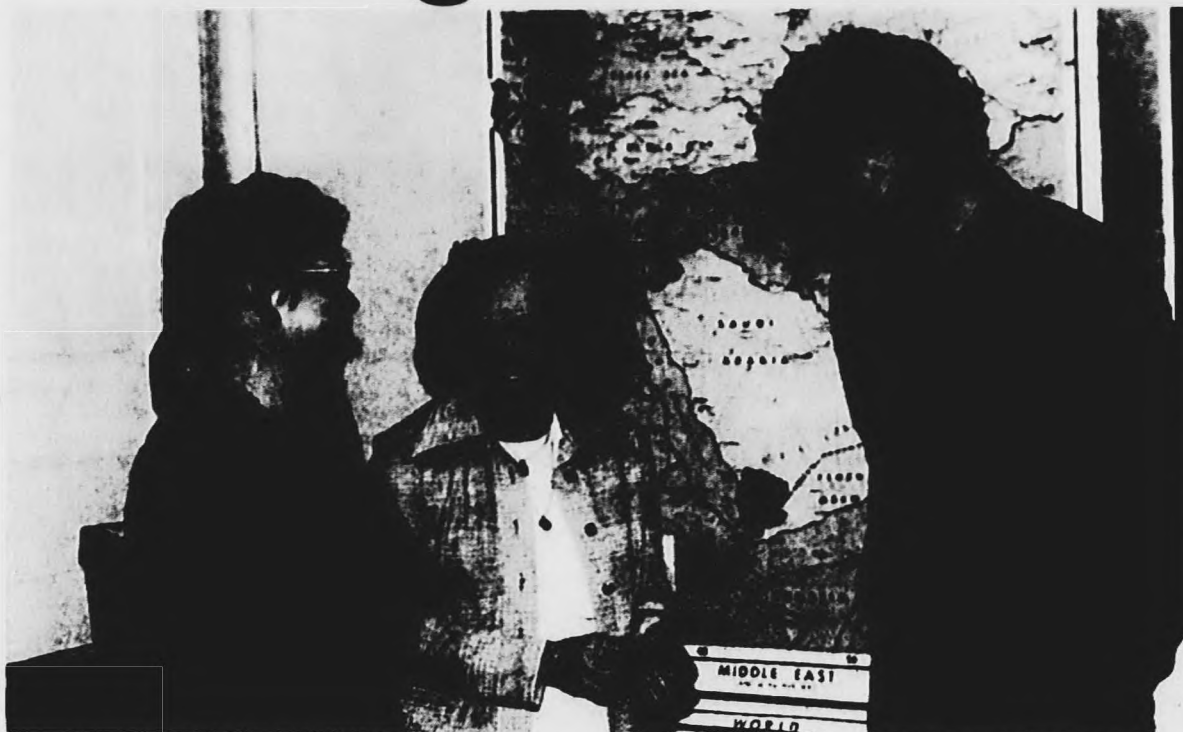

Although Greer passed various courses during his long airline career to comply with licensing requirements, he never went to college until retirement.

"When I first came to Schoolcraft, I felt guilty, like I was taking the place of a kid," he said. "But I realized I was an asset, as all seniors are. I don't feel guilty anymore."

MADONNA COLLEGE'S "senior" student Elizabeth Sobczak, 79, just returned to the classroom after an absence of 63 years — and after passing her general educational development examination.

"I never finished high school because I had to work," she told college officials. "But I have always loved reading and writing."

Sobczak, a Detroit resident, at-

"Mom is such a conscientious student," DeAlbuquerque said. "She receives A's in class, so I study harder to get A's."

Sobczak said she considers her five grandchildren currently in college an inspiration.

When college officials asked her about choosing a major, Sobczak said with a laugh: "If I'm still around, I will decide when it's time. I am not looking for a career, only to expand myself and prepare for eternity." She added, however, that she is considering a major in either English or journalism.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS passed before Livonia resident Frank Fitzgerald found himself back in a college setting 2½ years ago.

The 64-year-old honors student plans to graduate from Schoolcraft in May with double majors in special education and child development.

Fitzgerald took an early disability retirement a decade ago from the state of Michigan, where he conducted psychological tests for the Department of Mental Health and worked as a vocational counselor for the Michigan Employment Security Commission.

"My motivation for returning to school was to be brought up to date on the old concepts," he said.

Fitzgerald has become involved almost full time with the school's learning assistance center, where he works as a tutor. After graduation, he plans to stay with the program.

"Schoolcraft is attempting to screen and diagnose incoming freshmen who are unprepared for college and offer a remedial program," he said.

Fitzgerald wants to be a part of that program.

He calls his student career "tremendously rewarding. I highly recommend it for any (senior) with four or five hours a week they don't know what to do with. If you have more time, you should go (to school) full time."

Men: if you're about to turn 18, it's time to register with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office.

It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

GOP cagers win charity hoop game

The Republican Congressional basketball team, coached by Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth, defeated their Democratic counterparts 45-43 in a recent charity game to benefit Gallaudet University.

The victory evens the charity series at one victory apiece. The Democrats were led by former college and professional star Tom McMillen, a freshman congressman from Maryland.

"We went in with a good game plan, stuck to it and won," Pursell said. "More importantly, we raised $5,000 for Gallaudet University."

Gallaudet, in Washington, D.C., serves hearing impaired people throughout the world with its academic, research and public service programs.

The university also made headlines recently when students protested appointment of a new university president, instead calling for appointment of a hearing-impaired administrator.

Caucus wave abates

LIKE THE "WAVE" in Tiger Stadium, the Michigan caucuses swept over us, cresting in just two weeks of frenetic activity and waning last Saturday.

The pulse of the campaign, which encompassed Democrats in the emotional task of choosing a favorite in the presidential sweepstakes for 1988, was taken every two or three days by various pollsters.

The ball was in Michigan's court now. We were having our turn just as Iowa and New Hampshire did before. And it was heady.

Would Michigan throw its chips in with the miracle-making governor from Massachusetts, the old-line liberal Democrat from Illinois, or his fellow Illini, the liberal, crusading minister?

WOULD WE be shown by the Missouri congressman who would have us get tough on trade, or dazzled by the youthful Southerner who would like to take an option on the White House?

The Rev. Jesse Jackson and Gov. Michael Dukakis were neck and neck, according to reports a week before the caucus. Then Gary Hart, a dropout in the race, was reported holding onto the loyalty of some stubborn soul. And Gephardt was storming the state for trade equity accompanied by a herd of his congressional peers.

Paul Simon will fold if he fizzles in the state, it was rumored. Then on Tuesday, Dukakis, ahead of the pack already, left some daylight between himself and Jackson.

CANDIDATES show up in Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Utica, Saginaw, in Detroit, in Negaunee, in western Michigan and in the upper peninsula.

Students at Southfield High School fill the gymnasium to hear Jesse Jackson tell them to be their best, to make no babies they won't raise, to get an education and to turn thumbs down on drugs and guns.

They stood to confess drug abuse and to affirm peers dead of drugs, violence and suicide. "Jesse, Jesse, Jesse," they called, and they chanted in cadence that if they would be respected they would count.

School board trustee Eric Coleman, long associated with Jackson, is standing squarely on cloud nine, as the facilitator of Jackson's visit.

My grandson is three weeks old and his name is Jesse," I told him, shaking the hand he extended to me.

"I love it," he replied with a grin.

AT THE MEMORIAL to the Holocaust in West Bloomfield, Kitty Dukakis, representing her husband, is visibly moved by the exhibitions and videos. Later in Southfield, she danced with the senior citizens at McDonnell Towers, then went on to a reception for women voters. The governor's mother addressed a gathering in Oak Park, and the candidate hoppedscotched wherever he could.

Senator Paul Simon campaigned on Thursday and Friday. But his wife, a former legislator herself, made friends and influenced people, reaching out warmly and confidently to voters even before her husband.

All along the way the candidates picked up endorsements from labor leaders, municipal leaders, legislators and party stalwarts, each to his own preference.

BARNSTORMING across the state and back again, each one gathered up issues to embrace or reject as they raced toward the nomination, touting free trade, trade restrictions, disarmament, abortion, right to life, taxation, employment incentives and on and on.

Before them and with them were a coterie of volunteers and staff members never too busy or tired, always prepared to make the happenings happen. On radio and television, in press conferences and in the schools and halls, the schedulers had the process working smoothly.

From many cities and states, from campuses everywhere, young people savvy in the ways of political campaigns came to be the lifeblood of each voter drive. They were there in Iowa and New Hampshire, and they were here in Michigan, driving for their hero candidates.

Needing little winding up except for a place to put down a sleeping bag, some not-so-square meals, telephones and transportation, they proved again that democracy depends on those who are devoted to participation and getting out the vote.

Ice arena needs rules

To the editor:

I just recently started bringing my 6-year-old daughter to the Plymouth Cultural Center ice arena and am writing to you regarding an event that occurred at the rink on Sunday, Feb. 28.

A small boy, perhaps about 5 years old, was seriously cut in the face, by the eye, apparently by someone's skating blade. This whole event was a terrible accident just waiting to happen because of the lack of control and supervision at the facility.

I know for a fact, that 250 pairs of skates were rented out, because I never did get out on the ice myself because the skates were all rented out. Add to this fact, all the people who come with their own skates (Who knows how many??) and you can begin to get some idea of how crowded the rink was! I doubt if I'll be back because:

Older kids are racing like bats in this crowded situation, in and out and all over the place, while you have children under 5, wobbling around.

There are no rules and if there are, they sure aren't enforced. There should be

Village views of 1880

(Part 2)

We're on Main Street, corner of Amelia, in June, 1880. That spot on your left by the railroad tracks is where Phil Markham will build his air rifle plant five years from now. The Plymouth Landing Restaurant will be one of the occupants of what remains of the Markham building in the 1980s.

The square brick building on the other side of the railroad tracks is the Bode House, a hotel. It was built there in 1868 by a German, Bode Gottleib, who is 59. In the 1980s, the building will be the home of a restaurant that will be called Bodes.

Let's walk toward our schoolhouse at the corner of Main and Church Street. Classes went only to the eighth grade until 1877. The first high school class, a total of seven, will graduate next year. The lot and the nucleus of the building were donated by E.J. Penniman when Union School No. One was established there in 1853. It's a frame building now, but in four years it will be replaced by a bigger structure made of brick.

THAT MAN walking toward the school is Charles A. Frisbee. Age 55, Frisbee was born in New York State. His wife, Clara, is 38. Frisbee was the school's first principal when it opened in 1853. In 1890, he will be elected to the board of education. That young teacher walking beside him is 24-year old Delia Entrican who will be with the school district many years.

Those two men driving by in the buggy are the Bennett brothers. Charles H. Bennett, age 52, is president of the Grand Rapids National Bank. Lewis H. Bennett, age 44, makes fanning mills at his plant at the corner of Main and Union.

The younger Bennett and his wife,

Carrie, age 42, have four children. The oldest, Charles H., named after his uncle, is 16. He will grow up to be the longtime president of the Daisy air rifle firm. Charley has three brothers: Claude, 5, Bertie, 8, and Frederick, 13, who will become president of the village in 1908.

That woman crossing the street is Mary Ableson. Mary, age 48, is the wife of James Ableson, age 50, a local farmer. They have nine children, including 5-year old Maggie. In 1907, Margaret Ableson will write a long-hand history of Plymouth's log-cabin schools which I incorporated in my recently published book on the Plymouth-Canton School District.

THE BRICK house on Main Street opposite the school belongs to 31-year old W.H. Hoyt and his wife, Mary, age 32. Hoyt is a tombstone manufacturer. He will become president of the village in 1883, and will be supervisor of Plymouth Township in the 1890s.

Hoyt's house is next to the spot where Charley Bennett will build his own home after he becomes a success at the Daisy Manufacturing Co. Bennett's house will be owned in the 1890s by Warren and Vivian Bradburn.

Of the Hoyt site, Charley Bennett wrote, in his memoirs, published in the "Plymouth Mail" in 1952:

"As a small boy, I remember a saw mill located about where Mr. Hoyt built his brick house, next to my own home on Main Street; the hardwood logs to be sawed in summer were dumped out about where Fred Schrader and Leon Huston now have their homes. The sawmill was owned by a man named Scattergood, and he did a thriving business in those days.

"The small engine room and boiler house of this sawmill was of brick

past and present

construction. The bricks were made at a brickyard at the time located about where the small tenant house on my farm now sits away back in the field on the north side of Ann Arbor Trail, and Plymouth's first tragic event was the death of the engineer of this Main Street Sawmill.

"This engineer — have forgotten his name — was one day so careless that he allowed his steam boiler to run out of water. When he discovered his error, he turned the cold water into the red hot boiler and the result was that there was little to be found of his remains, and what few whole brick from other boiler rooms could be found scattered about were later purchased by Joseph Tessman, the father of Joe Tessman, who has so long been an employee of the Daisy Manufacturing Co. Joe later purchased the Mill site and built a home and raised a family on about the spot where my garage now stands at 134 Main Street."

The house at the corner of Main and Dodge Streets, where Plymouth's City Hall will stand in the 1980s, belongs to W.N. Wherry. Born in England, age 43, he is a blacksmith. In 1895, he will patent his "famous self-setting Wherry Mole Trap" which he will manufacture in his shop on shop on Dodge Street at the rear of his Main Street home. Wherry traps will be sold all over the U.S. and Canada and be offered in Montgomery and Ward's catalog for 67 cents each. (To be continued)

Homes face new threat

To the editor:

Plymouth was, once upon a time, the City of Homes. Sadly, neighborhoods are being encroached upon by condominiums, offices, and cruisers. Now, another threat to our homes looms.

It has recently been learned that Our Lady of Good Counsel parish has purchased the home at 197 Arthur. According to Pastor Peretto, other homes will be purchased as they become available for the long-term purpose of parking for the church.

As neighbors of this property, our concern is apparent. We cannot stand quietly by while homes are leveled and trees toppled to be replaced by concrete. Of course, property values in the immediate area will plummet.

As residents of the city, you must also be concerned. Isn't Plymouth's appeal its "charm and quaintness?" You've seen the downtown area invade neighborhoods along Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street.

Now, Penniman Avenue faces the potential blight of a parking lot at the corner of Arthur Avenue. The property owner has already been approached by an agent of the church.

We hope that you are appalled that the lovely, often historic homes surrounding O.L.G.C. are all potential victims. City zoning laws for single-family residences allow all church functions, including parking.

Only a site plan approval is required. Consider also the tax-exempt status of the church and ask yourself if the city wants homes removed from its tax rolls.

We hope that residents and members of O.L.G.C. parish will let it be known that their long-term plans must not include ANY removal of homes.

We believe that if the church leaders realize that neighbors, preservationists, city home owners and members of the parish object, they will reconsider and return our neighborhood to its once peaceful state.

Richard and Lois Moyer,
Plymouth,

Vote robbed our children

To the editor:

The overwhelming defeat of the Plymouth Canton school millage proposal is not a credit to our community. I do understand the need for voters to "take control" of their own resources by voting "no" to a school millage increase so recently following the announcement of a property tax increase. However, I fail to understand the reasoning behind robbing resources from the very essence and future of this and every other community — our children.

As a newcomer to the area, an educator and a firm believer in the public school system of this great nation, I hold high expectations for the improving quality of education our own three young children will receive here. It was the overwhelmingly positive reputations of this school district that prompted us to look for housing in this community.

Do we not wish to maintain that kind of a reputation? Increasing the level of spending per student does not necessarily improve the quality of education. Our school board is to

1) More rink guards with authority and know-how to keep the rink safe for all; especially little kids.
2) A delineation of areas for young skaters under age 8 or so.
3) Throw the speedster skaters out.
4) Keep the crowd size on the rink down to a manageable number.
5) Clean up the whole place — it's dirty.
6) Children below the age of 2½ should not be allowed on the ice.

Spring will soon burst through at Hines Park

By Mary Rodrigue
staff writer

County Parks

The buds may not be on the trees, but spring is blooming in Hines Park.

"We have a very busy spring schedule," said Vic Chiasson, director of special events for Wayne County Parks. It will rain marshmallows Friday, April 1, when the annual marshmallow drop takes place at the Nankin Mills picnic area, Ann Arbor Trail and Hines Drive, Westland.

The event is a variation on an Easter egg hunt. A helicopter dumps 20,000 marshmallows that children can redeem for other treats. Last year, the spring kickoff drew more than 2,500 participants.

In case of rain, the marshmallow drop will be rescheduled for 11 a.m. Saturday, April 2.

IT'S FOLLOWED Wednesday,

April 6, by Mud Day — an opportunity for youngsters to slip slide away in 200 tons of dampened top soil.

Mud Day follows on the heels of the marshmallow drop because most area youngsters are home from school the week after Easter.

"We figure the moms are ready for a break around the middle of the week," Chiasson said.

Games and activities, including wheelbarrow races, are held in conjunction with Mud Day.

The dirt is recycled and used in the park system's regular maintenance program, Chiasson said.

Hines Drive will be closed to through traffic from Outer Drive to the Nankin Mills station 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Saturdays beginning May 7, to allow bikers, hikers and joggers to use the road.

Another program in the works, dubbed "building castles in the sand," would have members of the Greater Detroit chapter of the American Institute of Architects judging elaborate sand castle creations in various age categories.

A request for beach volleyball courts is also being explored.

A MEETING is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 5, at the Nankin Mills administrative office, 33175 Ann Arbor Trail (the old nature center building) for those interested in forming a beach volleyball league.

The parks didn't provide supervision at Middlebelt Hill or other sledding areas this past winter, but a cross country ski program and classes were very successful, Chiasson said.

For information on any event, call the parks office at 261-2022.

It's a marshmallow world every spring at Hines Park during the annual marshmallow drop. Youngsters scramble for marshmal-lows, then redeem them for other treats. The event is the annual kick off for spring parks activities.

Galbraith to speak on peace

Economist John Kenneth Galbraith will discuss arms control and East/West relations at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, April 10, at Christ Church Cranbrook.

Galbraith, a former ambassador and presidential adviser, will deliver the Cranbrook Peace Foundation's first Peace Lecture. The foundation is a non-profit, non-sectarian organization established to promote non-violent solutions to global problems.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Gathering for Seder

By Helen Zucker
special writer

The Sturman family of Bloomfield Township is gathering for a Passover Seder this year as it has for the last 20 years.

A traditional Reform Jewish family, the Sturmans belong to Temple Beth El, as their parents and grandparents did. Over the years, the family has adapted and changed the Passover ceremony, in keeping with Reform custom.

Elaine Sturman grew up in Huntington Woods. She has stayed close to her roots except for five years in Chicago, where husband Dr. Stephen Sturman spent his residency. The couple has three children, Julie, 17; Jeffrey, 15; and Marcia, 10.

Over the last 10 years, the keeping of the Seder rituals moved naturally from Elaine's parents, to an aunt and uncle, to Elaine and Fran, her sister. Fran does the first night, and Elaine does the second Seder. Both nights are equally important. The sisters cook for a week before the holiday.

Each does her own cooking, making the main dish, usually roast chicken, and many of the side dishes. Some of the guests bring matzo farfel, a side dish, or a special dessert. Elaine likes to make lemon-filled cream puffs this time of the year.

THE STURMANS retain the family closeness, the inclusion of children in the reading of the Haggadah, lots of music, singing traditional songs such as "Dayanuh" and "Chad Gadya."

They include a Matzo of Hope in remembrance of Soviet Jews, and they use the Union Haggadah, a rewritten version of the ancient story of Exodus. This includes a special service asking the people around the dinner table to remember and think about Soviet Jewry.

Julie Sturman brings her best friend, Rebecca Leitman, to the Sturman Seder every year. Marcia, who has a pen pal in Russia, brings a different friend each year.

The gathering of 25 also includes Fran's husband, Julian Greenebaum; the sisters' parents, Jean and Irving Rosen; Beth and Bob Sklar and their children, Josh, 8, and Elyse, 3, and, in keeping with an ancient tradition, always a guest who has no Seder to which to go.

THE SEDER begins with the arrival of the guests at about 7 p.m. Everyone catches up on what members of the family have been doing. In this busy household that takes an hour and half. At 8:30 p.m., everyone is seated.

Adorning the long table are placemats, white plates, black napkins folded into seashell napkin rings, a centerpiece of baby's breath and daisies, a decanter that belonged to Dr. Sturman's mother filled with "clash-sic" Manischewitz red concord grape wine (the children partake along with the adults), and Shabbat candlesticks that belonged to Elaine's great-great grandmother in Russia.

The ceremonial plate, filled with bitter herbs or white horseradish, charoset, a shank bone, greens, a hard-boiled egg and salt water, sits near the head of the household. A platter of matzo is near it.

DR. STURMAN begins the Seder by reading from the Haggadah. Parts are given out and everyone present who is old enough to read gets a part. A guest springs up and opens the door for the prophet, Elijah, to take his sip of wine. A glass has been poured for him, and each year a guest swears the glass looks as if someone has taken a quick nip.

Midway through, the reading stops. Elaine and Fran go into the kitchen and a long, lively dinner is served. Restless children are allowed to rise and search for the "Afikomen," the hidden matzo. Elaine gives a small gift to everyone under 18, not only to the child who finds the wrapped "Afikomen" under the sofa cushions or behind the piano.

The Seder ends with lots of singing, and the guests leave reluctantly at about 10 p.m. They will have to wait a year to enjoy another Seder.

Though the purpose of the Seder is to remember the days of slavery in Egypt and to give thanks for freedom, the holiday is always a happy one that gives way to wine, good food and music.

For Elaine, who is chairperson of the Freedom Seder for Soviet Jewry, this is an invigorating season.

Charoset recipe is Yemenite

These Passover recipes are given by American-born Kathy Ozery, who makes her home in Israel with husband Yefet, who was born in Yemen.

Kathy's recipe for Yemenite Charoset was published in an Israeli cookbook. The recipe makes large amounts but portions are easily reduced, she said.

The Ozerys are temporarily living in Southfield. Yefet is a resource person on Israel to the Jewish Welfare Federation. Kathy works at the Jewish Community Council as community affairs associate for Soviet Jewry.

ISRAELI-STYLE ROASTED CHICKEN

- 1 chicken or chicken parts
- 1 cup orange juice
- 1 cup white wine
- 1 sliced onion
- 1 sliced carrot
- 1 stalk celery
- 1 1/2 teaspoon salt
- pinch black pepper
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 3 tablespoons oil
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 1 teaspoon cumin
- 1 orange

Place vegetables in bowl, pour juice and wine over, add spices. Put chicken in marinade for one hour, turning from time to time.

Heat oil in frying pan and saute until golden brown; place in baking dish and pour marinade over. Arrange vegetables on top, cover with lid or aluminum foil and bake 45 minutes at medium heat. Remove cover from baking dish and bake another 30 minutes, turning from time to time to brown chicken evenly.

Strain sauce (remaining juices) through a fine strainer and boil until liquid is reduced by half. Peel orange into segments and arrange over chicken. Add raisins to sauce and pour over chicken.

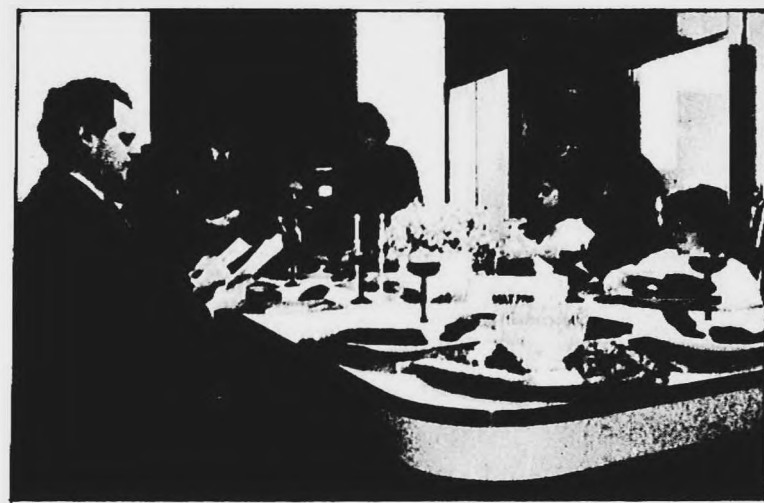

Garnish with a few cumin seeds or thin strips of orange peel (soaked in hot water to remove bitter taste).

YEMENITE CHAROSET

- 8 1/4 ounces sesame seeds, toasted
- 2 pounds dates, pitted
- 1 pound raisins
- 1 cup almonds, chopped
- 1 cup walnuts, chopped
- 4 teaspoons ground cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cloves
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cardamom
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Toast sesame seeds by stirring frequently in pan over medium flame until evenly browned. Combine all ingredients in a pot over a low flame, adding water to achieve desired consistency. Mixture should resemble preserves. Continue cooking, approximately 15 minutes, to allow flavors to penetrate, adding water as necessary to maintain desired consistency.

Pancakes: Here's how they size up

For every meal, every course, from appetizer to dessert, there's a pancake.

A traveler could circle the globe and find some form of this international favorite — in sizes as small as quarters and almost as big as manhole covers — stacked for breakfast, glorified for dessert, stuffed for entrees, rolled and sliced for hors d'oeuvres.

Call them hotcakes, crepes, blini, palacsintak, pfannkuche . . . they're all pancakes.

Today's pancakes are a fluffy, tender, civilized version of an ancient bread.

PANCAKES HAVE been known to be intertwined with religion, tradition and legend. Jewish people eat them on their holidays — at Hanukkah, latkes, potato pancakes; at Passover, pancakes made with matzo meal and no leavening; at Shabbath, when dairy dishes are eaten, cheese blintzes.

In early Christian days, when Lent was a time of abstinence from meat as well as from animal foods like milk, cheese and eggs, pancakes became a treat for the day before the beginning of Lent. Shrove Tuesday pancakes are still eaten in many countries, and in England, Shrove Tuesday is often called "pancake day."

chef Larry Janes

Let's not forget about the old North American legend Paul Bunyan, who had a pancake appetite that supposedly needed a grill so big with a corral around it and grain elevators to hold the flour. Concrete mixers were said to have churned the batter that merged in four-foot waves onto a griddle greased by cooks, who skated over it with slabs of bacon tied to their feet. (Sounds like some of the Janes clan at the last family reunion.)

PANCAKES CAN be cooked in many different ways. Basically, all start with a batter using flour, butter, eggs and milk. Taste and texture difference begin with the addition or omission of a leavening agent such as yeast, baking soda or baking powder.

Should you prefer to use yeast, it would be best to allow the batter to "ripen" for at least six to eight hours before beginning to cook.

Personally speaking, I think the lightest pancakes are achieved by separating the egg yolk from the egg white — with the yolk beaten into the batter and the white beaten separately until stiff but not dry — then gently folding the white into the batter and pouring immediately onto a hot, greased griddle.

A SECRET tip used by the great chefs before beginning to cook their favorite pancakes has them heating up the griddle or frying pan from the start with a small amount of grease and/or butter to coat the pan bottom. After the pan is heated significantly, pour out the grease, wipe with a clean cloth and add more fresh grease or butter and heat accordingly.

Then, just before the pan begins to smoke, add your batter. Always throw out your first, as it only begins the seasoning of the pan and collects too much of the pan taste. Then, repeat with the grease, and you're in business.

Bon appetit!

Passover commemorates exodus

By Shirlee Rose Iden
staff writer

Jewish people everywhere are preparing to celebrate the spring-time holiday that is mankind's oldest liberation movement.

Passover, which begins at sundown Friday, April 1, will continue for eight days. A home-centered observance, it commemorates the exodus from Egypt of the ancient Hebrew people who had been in bondage to the pharaoh and were freed from slavery around 1280 BCE (Before the Common Era).

Family dinners called Seders (Seder means order) are the setting for Passover, which traditionally is a homecoming for holiday members, and a feast unique to the occasion.

On the first Seder night, the youngest family member asks, "Why is this night different from all other nights?" The never-changing answer is that on the first night of Passover, Jews eat unleavened bread, taste bitter herbs, greens and a roasted shank bone, and recline as they eat.

JEWISH HOMEMAKERS know the holiday as one of transformation. A Passover cleaning to surpass other spring cleanings must be undertaken, with all chometz (leavened foods) removed from the house and destroyed, and preparations made for the Seder meals, unlike any other meals, on any other days.

Matzoh, the unleavened flat bread that is used throughout the eight days, becomes the mainstay ingredient for any number of dishes. The challenge is to see how many ways the matzoh can be used.

Matzoh puddings, matzoh cakes, matzoh kugels, matzoh pancakes, stuffing, fried matzohs, and even rolls and bagels are shaped from matzoh meal, similar to bread crumbs, only, for heaven's sake, not bread.

Children, and their elders too, can tell you that fresh matzoh, the large sheet buttered or spread with preserves, is good all by itself, crunchy and crisp.

The Seder services, a ritual one goes through before being allowed to eat, is quite structured, but enchanting in its own way. A mixture of history, legends, old stories and songs, the ritual (Haggada) recounts the story of the freeing of the Hebrews from Egypt, the wandering in the desert, and the symbols of Passover.

IN ADDITION to cleaning the house for Passover, the table is set with the finest of china flatware and utensils, which in religiously observant homes are used exclusively for this holiday, then stored for the next year.

For 3,000 years, since Moses told his people to eat only matzohs during Passover, there has never been a time when Jewish people all over the world failed to eat the unleavened bread at Passover. It is eaten in remembrance of their forebears who fled from Egypt and of those Jews who do not yet live in freedom.

Also on Jewish Seder tables all over the world will be the symbolic foods of the Seder plate: a roasted egg, which symbolizes the loss of the Temple in Jerusalem, charoset, a chopped mixture of nuts, apples and wine symbolizing the clay and mortar used in constructing buildings for the pharaoh; moror, the bitter herbs (horse radish) to remind everyone of the bitterness of slavery; a roasted lamb bone, signifying the roasting of the Pascal lamb karpas, the sweet herbs of springtime and hope, and salt water to recall the tears of enslavement.

CUSTOMARILY four glasses of wine are drunk to symbolize the four promises of God to redeem the Jewish people from slavery. An extra glass is filled and left for the Prophet Elijah, believed to be the messenger of the Almighty who will tell of the coming of the Messiah.

Even today Jews in the Soviet Union wait for their salvation and their freedom and their time to celebrate the Passover joyously. Until they come out, Jewish families will continue to observe another tradition: the one of opening their homes to those who are alone, hungry or in need on the holiday.

At Passover Jewish homes will be bright and cheery, redolent of wonderful aromas and tastes, with the accent on freedom as reality rather than symbol.

'Character' is the word for new champagne

By Ethel Simmons
staff writer

Seventy-six-year-old Hanns Kornell, champagne producer from California's Napa Valley, believes, "You cannot stay put." He has introduced a new champagne for yuppies.

Kornell, who looks kind of like Kris Kringle, with his full head of white hair, florid face and bright blue eyes, recently visited the Embassy Suites Hotel in Southfield, along with his wife, Marilouise, a former opera singer.

They have toured five cities, talking about Character, which is being introduced in this area. It sells in local wine shops for $8.99-$9.99 per bottle. The Embassy Suites Hotel has an exclusive for one year in metropolitan Detroit to offer the champagne in its restaurant and its cocktail lounge. Diners at the Wellington may order Character at $3.95 per glass or $14 per bottle.

Kornell sipped the champagne, which is a blend with chenin blanc, and said, "It is very palatable. It is beautiful. Medium-dry. Produced for our younger generation. Not too light or dark. The taste is for the age group 20s to 30s.

MRS. KORNELL added, "The marriage is between the very traditional, with a touch of the new, in meeting that yuppie taste."

Enhancing the champagne is an elegant, art-deco label, showing a fashionable woman in a hat, drinking from a champagne flute, and a colorful macaw. Artist is Stephen Haines Hall of Sausalito. At the Embassy, the custom neck label reads "Embassy Suites Hotel." The sales manager accompanying the tour said the attractive label helps sell Character. "That's halfway between the shelf and the shopping basket."

Hanns Kornell Champagne Cellars is a third-generation, family-owned business, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Kornell and their daughter and son. The winery is the third largest champagne producer of the Methode Champenoise in the United States.

The winery offers this recipe for:

HAM IN CHAMPAGNE

Marinate a boned ham in 3 or 4 cups of brut champagne for at least 8 hours, turning it frequently.

Bake the ham in a slow oven (300) for about 2 hours, basting it often with the marinade. Remove most of the skin. Score the exposed fat with a sharp knife and brush the ham with white corn syrup. Bake the ham for 1 hour longer and let it cool.

Slice it very thin from the butt end, leaving 1/2 of the ham uncut. Reshape the ham on a platter and decorate.

Champagne Master Hanns Kornell's wife Marilouise is involved in the delicate art of tasting champagne and creatively uses those talents for entertaining in their farmhouse in the heart of California's Napa Valley.

Here are a few of her champagne recipes:

STRAWBERRIES AND CHAMPAGNE

Place fresh strawberries in champagne glass and pour champagne over strawberries.

FROSTED CHAMPAGNE

Place one large, fresh strawberry in glass. Then place in freezer until glass is frosted and strawberry slightly frozen. To serve pour champagne over strawberry.

PEACH DESSERT

Cut a fresh peach in half, pour 1/2 teaspoon of creme de cassis on peach half. Top with champagne.

CHAMPAGNE PEACH DELIGHT

Place fresh peaches in a champagne glass. Pour champagne over the peaches. The sweetness complements each other.

CHAMPAGNE PUNCH

Place one frozen block of strawberries in bottom of punch bowl. Pour two bottles of reising over and allow wine to partially thaw out strawberries. When punch is ready to be served, pour two bottles of champagne in the presence of guests.

Wine label and the new Hanns Kornell champagne called Character is designed to appeal to the yuppie crowd. The name "Character" was chosen in part because people coming to the winery were told, "See Hanns. He's a character."

Orange walnut torte a Passover dessert

This recipe is reprinted from the article "Passover Cakes" in the April issue of Gourmet magazine.

ORANGE WALNUT TORTE

6 large eggs, separated, at room temperature

- 1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
- 1/4 cup fresh orange juice
- 3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons freshly grated orange rind
- 1/2 cup matzo cake meal

- 1/2 cup potato starch
- 1 cup finely chopped walnuts
- confectioners' sugar for sprinkling the torte

In a large bowl with an electric mixer beat the yolks until they are thick and pale. Add the granulated sugar gradually, beating, and beat the mixture until it is very thick.

Beat in the orange juice, lemon juice and rind. Add the matzo cake meal and the potato starch gradually, beating, and beat the mixture until it is combined well.

In a bowl with the beaters cleaned, beat the whites with a pinch of salt until they just hold stiff peaks. Stir one cup of them into the orange mixture, and fold in the remaining whites gently but thoroughly.

Fold in the walnuts carefully. Pour the batter into an ungreased nine-inch tube pan (3 1/2 inches deep) with a removable bottom. Bake the torte in the middle of a preheated 325-degree oven for 55 to 60 minutes, or until a tester comes out clean.

Invert the pan over the neck of a bottle and let the torte cool upside down. Run a thin knife around the edge and tube of the pan and remove the side of the pan.

Run the knife under the bottom of the torte to release it, transfer the torte carefully with two spatulas to a serving plate, and sprinkle it with the confectioners' sugar, sifted.

Creamy herb sauce is made minus fuss

AP — French cooking is famed for its superb sauces. This herb sauce gives you all the flavor of a complicated French sauce without the fuss. Serve it with roast beef, pork, veal or steaks. When fresh herbs are available, you can substitute 1/4 teaspoon snipped fresh thyme and tarragon for the dried ingredients.

CREAMY HERB SAUCE

- 1 cup sliced fresh mushrooms
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped onion
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon dried tarragon, crushed
- 2 tablespoons margarine or butter
- 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup light cream or milk
- 1/4 cup chicken broth
- 2 tablespoons snipped parsley

- 1 tablespoon brandy
- 1 1/2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 4 slices bacon, crisp-cooked, drained and crumbled

In a medium saucepan cook mushrooms, onion, garlic, thyme and tarragon in hot margarine for 4 to 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Stir in flour. Add cream or milk and broth. Cook and stir over medium heat until thickened and bubbly. Add parsley, brandy and lemon juice. Cook and stir 1 minute more. Serve over sliced cooked meat. Sprinkle with bacon. Makes 1 and 1/2 cups.

Celebrate Easter in a Gym.

If you've had it with churches, try this one on for size.

Our people are friendly - the holier than thou types never seem to last. Not many people fall asleep at our services, because our Pastors deliver interesting messages that deal with the real world. We're interested in you - not your wallet. And in spite of this attitude, our income keeps growing. Someday soon we're going to bust out of this gym where we hold Sunday services. We're roughly 400 people from different Christian backgrounds. Some of us never attended church before. Visit our gym next Sunday. We guarantee you'll feel better. Even after just one workout. Nursery provided. Sunday School for all ages after Worship service. First Service 9:30 A.M. Second Service 11:00 A.M. Daylight Savings Time - Be sure and set your clock forward.

Carol Bartley of Southfield with Duffy, her foster collie. Collie are available through the Tri-county Collie Rescue League.

Foster agency helps Lassies come home

By Marie Chestney
staff writer

Carol Bartley is a foster mom. Duffy, her long-haired foster son, bounds toward her when she calls his name.

But he also barks when someone knocks on the door of her Southfield home.

That's because Duffy is an orphan collie. Bartley, a member of the Tri-County Collie Rescue League, is trying to find him a home.

But not just any home. Because Duffy is not just any dog. He's had his share of troubles — from poor health to poor eyesight to occasional poor relations with human beings. Duffy's also more than six years old — barring him from adoption by those who believe they can't teach an old dog new tricks.

No, this sable and white collie is not for just anybody. And Bartley will continue to feed him, brush him, walk him and love him until she, and the rescue league, find a perfect match.

"IT'S ONE of those intuitive things, we know when a match is right," said Carol Fox, the league's adoption secretary.

Since its creation in 1986, the league has found new homes in southeast Michigan for 40 collies. Sometimes it takes only one week to find a perfect home; in Duffy's case, it's been five months and the league is still looking.

While awaiting a new owner, the collies stay in foster homes. The foster parents determine the type of home best suited for the collie.

"The foster family observes the dog's temperament," Fox said.

For example, Bartley knows Duffy would be most happy in a home with older kids who would take him on the long walks he dearly loves.

The biggest problem the league has, Fox said, is losing foster families.

"WE LOSE them because they fall in love with the dog," she said.

Right now the league has about 15 foster families and is always looking for more.

The collies the league rescues aren't generally found wandering hungry and homeless on city streets. Most have had owners who took good care of them, but for some reason could no longer keep them.

Maybe the owner moved to a far off city or to an apartment or to a senior retirement village. Maybe a child in the family has an allergy. Maybe there's a job loss, and the family can no longer foot the food bill for a dog that eats a lot.

The family takes its plight to a veterinarian or the Midwest Collie Club or to another dog organization. That group calls the league. The league, in turn, sends an SOS to its foster families, and one of them takes the collie in until the dog is placed in a permanent home.

The league has rules for foster families, and strict criteria for adopting families.

Both must have a fenced-in yard. One big difference is that a foster family one day must turn the collie over to someone else, while the adoptive family is permanent.

The league looks for a "good match" between all members of the adoptive family. It wants a family

'It's one of those intuitive things, we know when a match is right.'

— Carol Fox
adoption secretary

who won't mind grooming the long-haired animal every other day. The league charges $65 per adoption.

The new family signs a contract, agreeing to do not only those things necessary to keep a dog healthy and happy, but also to call the league if something happens and they can no longer keep the dog.

"That clause is a blessing to seniors who want a dog but worry what will happen to the dog if they have to go into a home," Fox said.

BESIDES DUFFY, the league currently has three collies that need new homes. Fox is taking care of Christopher, a three-year-old collie from Ohio. Christopher's former owner, a dog breeder, is terminally ill.

A Dearborn family is taking care of Dutchess until she's healthy again. Dutchess was ill-treated and, at one point, near death.

A Temperance, Mich., family has Styler, a smooth-haired collie who lost her home because of a family member's allergy.

"That's a collie who's truly unique," Fox said. "With his smooth hair you have all the fun of a collie with one-half the work."

To be a foster family, or to adopt a collie, call Fox at 277-2320.

Birds' songs: as varied as their coloring

MY INTEREST in birds was sparked by their multitude of colors and patterns. Warblers, for instance, have incredible colors in patterns that form bibs, caps, masks and necklaces. To me they are the butterflies of the bird world.

Many people develop an interest in birds because they enjoy seeing them at their feeders, in forests or meadows. Because birds are very visible animals and because man is very visually oriented, the two go hand in hand.

BUT THOSE WHO have spent much time birding realize that seeing birds is only one way to enjoy them.

Songs of birds are as varied as their colors and just as enjoyable to hear. Each species of bird sings a song that is different from all other species. If you can identify the song correctly, you have identified a particular species of bird.

One does not actually have to see birds in order to enjoy birding. Even those who are sightless can enjoy this activity.

Timothy Nowicki

In fact, sightless people can probably recognize different songs better than those with sight, because they have enhanced their sense of hearing to help compensate for their loss of sight. All they need is to get in the field. Before going to the field, some pretrip preparation would be helpful so they will be able to identify which species of bird they are hearing. There are several records or cassette tapes on the market these days that have excellent recordings of all the birds in our area and in eastern North America.

A RECENT publication of the National Library Service for the blind and Physically Handicapped, entitled "Birding," is available from the reference section of the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20542.

This booklet provides information on the subject of birding, reviews one program that involves blind students in Chicago, and outlines several books for children or adults, in Braille, cassette or on disc. Many of these books are popular books currently on the market.

Senior health, fitness is featured

Fitness is Ageless, the 16th annual conference on physical activity for older adults, is slated for Thursday, May 5, at Schoolcraft College.

Geriatric gourmet cooking, fitness workshops and pool exercise highlight the day, which begins 8:30 a.m. with breakfast and ends 3:30 p.m. with refreshments.

Admission is $20 for senior citizens and students, $22 for others. Lunch is included.

Observer & Eccentric food columnist Larry James will preside over "cooking healthy and tasty for senior adults," a lecture and demonstration.

The Silver Streak dance company under the direction of Karen Freeman, Crowell Recreation Center activity director, will provide demonstrations.

Other sessions include "movement to music for the frail elderly" with Alice Andrews, program director, Golden Opportunities Adult Day Care Center. Pool exercise with Schoolcraft swimastics instructor Ilene Adzema and exercise for older adults with Lloyd Morgan are on the afternoon agenda.

Schoolcraft College president Richard McDowell and Marvin Gans, assistant dean of continuing education services, are scheduled speakers. Kathy Clark, recreation supervisor of the Livonia Senior Center, will discuss components of a successful senior activities center.

"Many senior adults attend this conference, which really emphasizes healthful living," said Sandra Florek, director for institutional advancement at Schoolcraft.

Conference goals include motivating those who work with older adults to promote physical activity in daily life, to understand the role of music and rhythm in developing a physical activity program, and to promote good nutrition and health habits as important factors in lifelong fitness.

Participants should come prepared to move. Gym clothes, soft soled shoes and a swimsuit are advised.

Schoolcraft College is at 18600 Haggerty, north of Six Mile. Call 591-6400, Ext. 540 for additional information.

Blazers earn high profile on '88 team

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

At the conclusion of the 1988 volleyball season, there was no doubt Livonia Ladywood had not only the best team in Observerland but the best in the state.

The Blazers, considered the area's premier ballclub all season, went on to capture the Class A championship with a three-game victory over Sterling Heights Stevenson.

Therefore, it comes as no surprise to see Ladywood so well-represented on the All-Area squad, with players filling four of the 12 first-team positions.

Corinne McNamara, Nancy Wagner, Mary Kelley and Sarah Adzima are the Blazers who most impressed area coaches while taking their team to the Catholic League crown and a 51-2 record.

But the list of area talent and good teams doesn't end with Ladywood. In fact, the past season might have been the best ever for the quality of Observerland volleyball.

Farmington Hills Mercy was runner-up to Ladywood in the Catholic League and was one step short of the Class A semifinals.

Redford Bishop Borgess came on the second half of the season and reached the Class B final, and perennial Western Lakes power Livonia Stevenson had another strong team as did Livonia Churchill, North Farmington and Wayne Memorial.

Familiar faces are a part of this year's team, too. Stevenson's Sue Zatorski and Rocky Cibor and Wayne's JoAnn Kolnitys are first-team repeaters. Adzima and McNamara were second-team players a year ago, and Wagner, Kelley and Mercy's Kandi Boyle made the jump from third team.

Tom Teeters, who took the Blazers to the top in his second year as coach and Ladywood's first in Class A, and Jerry Abraham, who guided Borgess to its late-season surge after an uncertain beginning, were selected Coaches of the Year.

FIRST-TEAM PLAYERS

Sue Zatorski, senior, Stevenson: Zatorski has been a mainstay with the Spartans for three years, earning all-league honors twice and all-region and all-state status this season.

Stevenson's most valuable player was a dominant middle hitter, having 618 successful spikes out of 716 attempts that resulted in 329 kills. Her hitting percentage was .863 and kill percentage .322.

Zatorski also had 80 ace serves, putting 258 of 300 serves into play for an 86.0 serving percentage.

"(She) is one of the most dedicated, hard-working players ever to play Spartan volleyball," coach Lee Cagle said. "Sue was always able to help players around her to raise their game during matches."

"Her outstanding, three-year accomplishments have set a high standard for upcoming players," he added.

Rocky Cibor, senior, Stevenson: As the team setter, Cibor was the player supplying Zatorski with the ammunition for her powerful spikes.

Cibor had nearly 400 assists and successfully set the ball to hitters 96 percent of the time. Her assist percentage was .521.

"Her teammates could always depend on her to give them great sets for their individual hitting needs," Cagle said.

"Rocky has been par-excellence as a team leader. Our team effectiveness has been largely in her hands the last two years."

"Plus, her pleasant personality always had a positive effect on team character," he added.

Jennifer Slosar, senior, Mercy: Slosar, who will attend Notre Dame on a volleyball scholarship, was the leader in Mercy's rise to prominence last season.

The 6-foot-1 middle hitter had 123 kills and a .415 hitting percentage. Slosar, who could play the back row equally as well, also averaged five blocks and five digs, and she rated 94 percent on her serving.

"She is an intimidating force at the net both blocking and hitting," said coach Tim DeBeliso of the all-Catholic League selection.

"She displays a poise and confidence that is uncommon for her age. Her potential is unlimited at the collegiate level."

Kandi Boyle, senior, Mercy: Boyle, an adept setter, was to Slosar and Mercy's offense what Cibor was to Zatorski and the Spartan attack.

Another all-league and all-county player like her teammate, Boyle was successful on 95 percent of her setting attempts and 87 percent of her serves.

"She has excellent hands and a good presence of mind," DeBeliso said. "She had the ability to bring the team to another level of play."

Sarah Adzima, junior, Ladywood: Adzima was one of several talented hitters who gave the Blazers a strong, balanced attack.

She averaged three kills per game as well as one serving ace. She was among the best at serve reception and, when on the service line, had an efficiency rating of 94 percent.

Adzima went from being the team's most improved player last year to an all-Catholic selection this year.

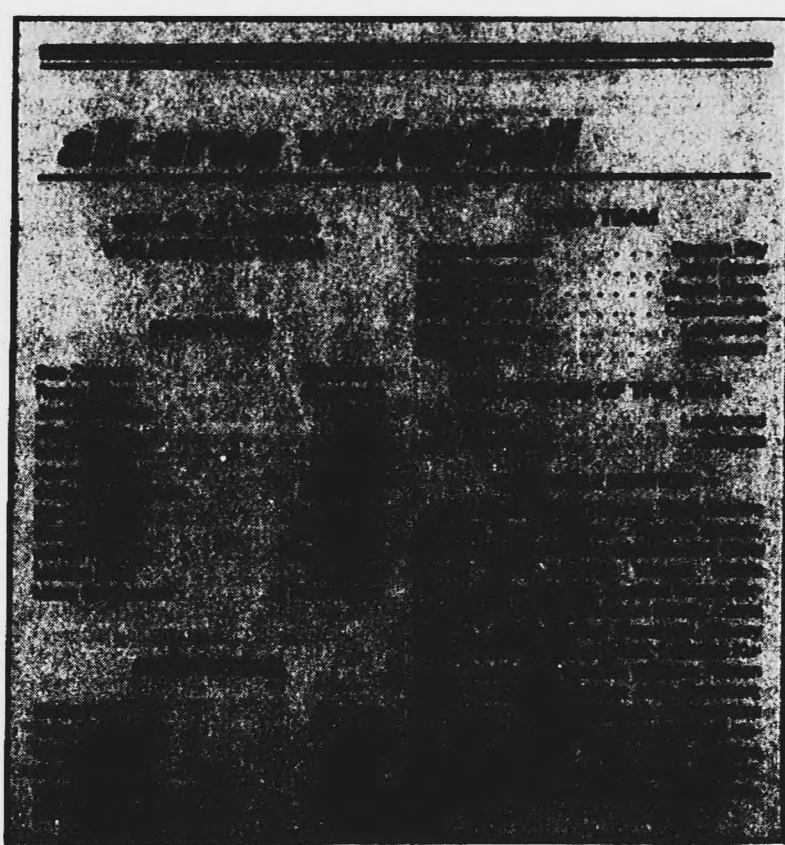

"Sarah has been our strongest outside hitter for the past two years," Teeters said. "She adjusted well to the shute set; her strength lies in a very consistent arm swing."

Corinne McNamara, senior, Ladywood: McNamara was Ladywood's top server with an average of three aces per game, but she also excelled in the front row where she averaged five kills and 3½ blocks.

Like Adzima, she made the Blazers a strong defensive team with her serve reception. In addition to all-league honors, she was all-region and a member of the all-state first team.

"She made the difference in the state finals by coming off the bench and playing on a sprained ankle in the second and third games," Teeters said. "She was still

Borgess 'B' title drive dashed in championship

By Brad Emons staff writer

Mr. Basketballs often do extraordinary things.

Matt Steigenga was no exception Saturday, leading Grand Rapids South Christian to the state Class B championship, a 69-66 victory over Redford Bishop Borgess before a packed house of 13,609 at the University of Michigan's Crisler Arena.

The 6-foot-7 forward scored 21 points, yanked down 15 rebounds and passed off for five assists, carrying the Sailors (27-1) to the coveted title.

But more importantly he managed to stay in the game after picking up his fourth personal foul near the end of the first half.

Borgess was on the verge of winning its first-ever crown, taking a 53-45 lead after three quarters on a driving layup by Dwayne Kelley.

But the Sailors roared back to the delight of the partisan South Christian crowd, taking the lead for good, 63-61, on two free throws by guard Mark Wierenga with 2:27 to play.

Steigenga then scored four straight points to widen the margin to six, 67-61, before Borgess made one last-ditch rally.

AFTER THE TWO teams exchanged two-pointers, Borgess's Shawn Respert drilled a three-point shot with eight seconds to go, cutting the deficit to three.

The Spartans then got the ball back, almost instantly, when 6-9 center Jeff Baker was called for traveling.

But with only two seconds left, no timeouts and the ball nearly 80 feet away from the basket, the odds were stacked against the Spartans, who couldn't convert a desperation attempt just inside the mid-court line as time expired.

"I said before the game that you have to play the entire 32 minutes to win it and unfortunately we didn't play all 32 minutes," said Borgess coach Mike Fusco, whose team bowed out with a 24-4 record.

South Christian's Jim Dykema, who captured his first state crown in 16 years of coaching, said there was no thought of leaving his star player on the bench to start the second half.

"WE WOULDN'T be here if it wasn't for him (Steigenga)," he said. "We can't win without him. We sat him out with three fouls against Flint Beecher (in Friday's semifinal) for one minute and we couldn't get the ball up court."

"It seems he had four fouls the last four or five games, but he plays smart basketball and we had to have him on the floor."

Steigenga's presence on the floor rubbed off on his teammates, particularly 6-foot, 140-pound guard Mark Wierenga, who squirmed his way to 21 points. Baker, the hero in Friday's 68-64 overtime win over Beecher, added 13.

Wierenga was a particular thorn in the Spartans' side, sneaking behind them for several layups.

"We were trying to press, but they broke it a couple of times so we had to be concerned about their transition points," Fusco said. "We were getting caught and we may have lost our intensity."

"Our guards got caught up penetrating the gaps. It's a Catch-22. On one hand you tell them to penetrate the gaps and go to the basket (on South Christian's zone defense), but on the other you're telling them to rotate back on defense."

BORGESS, ALONG WITH its star player, 6-7 Parish Hickman (Steigenga's future teammate at Michigan State), joined forces for an ice-cold start.

The Spartans fell behind 17-9 after one quarter as Hickman missed his first seven shots.

But things quickly changed in the second quarter, thanks to the play of Da Juan Smith, Eric Emanuel and Kelley.

The senior trio dogged the Sailors into a number of turnovers, converting steals into quick points. Hickman came alive as well offensively as the Spartans outscored South Christian 25-14 during the period to take a 34-31 halftime lead.

Borgess carried that momentum into the third quarter, but couldn't get that much sought-after fifth foul on Steigenga, the man who helped turn the tide.

"I was surprised he (Steigenga) started the second half," said Fusco. "Our team never had a specific offense to go to him. We were geared toward continuity and not toward any one situation."

"IN THE FIRST HALF our ball movement was not all that good. We weren't patient and we weren't getting the ball inside. In the second half we did a much better job of getting the ball inside."

The Spartans also got a lift off junior guard Charles North, who came off the bench to score nine points.

He scored a couple of key baskets during the third quarter. Smith also stole the ball and converted it into a three-point play, while Hickman added an impressive slam dunk on an alley-oop play from Kelley.

But the tide began to change when Steigenga opened the fourth quarter with a rebound slam-jam of his own.

"They're one of the best teams we've played," said Hickman, who led the Spartans with 21 points and 15 rebounds of his own. "They were ready to play today and they executed their game plan well."

Borgess whips 'B' semifinal foe

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Frankenmuth is famous for its chicken eatery and Christmas holiday fare, but on Friday its basketball team left Crisler Arena in Ann Arbor broiled and dispirited.

However, give losing coach Warren Wilson credit for a sense of humor after his team was waxed by Bedford Bishop Borgess in the Class B state semifinals, 83-48.

That's an awfully good basketball team, said Wilson of Borgess. "I would love to have their second team. One of my kids on the bench asked me if they were going to bring in their subs. I told him they've been in the whole ballgame. We could have played this team 50 times and probably come close only once."

The lopsided win also gave Borgess coach Mike Fusco time to relax on the bench before Saturday's pressure-packed final. See related story on Page 1C.

"I expected it to be tougher than it was," Fusco said. "We thought Zehnder (Andy) was a hard player to defend, and we also felt they had a lot of skills both outside and inside. I was concerned about their ability to shoot on the perimeter."

BUT FUSCO'S worst fears were erased early as the game was never in doubt after the first quarter, even with 6-foot-7 center Parish Hickman, Borgess' leading scorer, on the bench in foul trouble just two minutes into the game.

Picking up two quick fouls, Fusco elected to sit out his star player the remainder of the half.

Although Hickman was sidelined, the Spartans rang up a 16-5 first quarter lead. It was 37-16 at half-time and 58-27 after three quarters.

"We talked about starting fast," said the Borgess coach. "One point of emphasis was to come out of the blocks with fire in our eyes."

The Spartans did just that and more, as 10 of 12 Borgess players scored. Da Juan Smith led the way with 15 points and 13 rebounds. Dwayne Kelley and Hickman each added 13.

Charles North, Tommie Tounsel, Dameron Smith (Da Juan's brother) and Bertrand Waldon each contributed six off the bench.

"There was a lot of intimidation and that had a lot to do with our poor shooting (16 of 53 from the field)," said Wilson, whose team bowed out at 22-4. "Strength-wise, they are the strongest we've faced. They're not only strong, but they get on you quick."

THE EAGLES were forced into 21 turnovers, finding it difficult to move the ball up against Borgess' full-court pressure.

The lone bright spot for the Eagles was Zehnder, a 6-6 senior center and relative of the town's famous family-owned chicken restaurant. He led all scorers with 24 points.

But with little consolation for the Eagles' dismal showing.

STEVE FECHT/staff photographer
Dwayne Kelley, who makes a quick pass around a Frankenmuth opponent, and Borgess had no trouble passing the Eagles with a 35-point victory in the Class B semifinals.

RIT gives lesson in female hockey

A visit from the Rochester Institute of Technology (N.Y.) women's hockey team, one of 18 college clubs in the country, proved to be a valuable lesson for a pair of local rink foes over the weekend.

RIT, featuring four Michigan players including Plymouth native and Thurston High School product Krista Gack, scored a pair of lopsided wins during an exhibition stint. (Gack, a first-year defenseman, formerly played for the Garden City women's Senior B team.)

Saturday at the Lincoln Park Civic Center, RIT ripped the state champion (ages 14-17) Michigan Capitals midget squad, 9-0.

A month earlier the two teams met with RIT coming out on top, 4-2, although coach Glenn Collins used his third and fourth lines for almost half of the game.

But in the second meeting, Collins went to his first two lines and it showed as RIT peppered Capital goaltenders Kim Flatt and Dana Tinsley with 41 shots.

RIT's top gun, Dawn Cline, a Warren Mott High product, scored the hat trick in the win. The Tigers' Lucy Goodwin added two, while Janet Testa, Betty Jan Morgan and Lori Steck contributed one each.

THE CAPITALS managed only seven shots on the Tigers' net as coach Ron Latta's team played the game as a tuneup for the nationals this weekend in Bloomington, Minn.

Among those scheduled to make the trip this weekend for the Capitals are Linda Broyles, Beth Riffle and Karen Kuphal, all of Livonia; Paulette Freeburn and Jenny Freeburn, Westland; and Jamie Royston, Canton.

Sunday at the Inkster Ice Arena, RIT, minus two of its top players, skated past the Wayne Chiefs, a team made up of area college and high school players, 5-1.

Although the game was much closer than Saturday's romp, the Tigers still outshot their opponents, 28-8, as Wayne goaltenders Darlene Gaglead (Canton) and Kathy Sieloff shared time in the nets.

Alpena's Lori Stibitz tallied the first goal for RIT near the end of the first period. Testa added two more goals and Goodwin another before 16-year-old Shelley Looney of Trenton scored in the third period for the Chiefs.

able to make the great saves even though she had sprained the ankle the day before."

Mary Kelley, senior, Ladywood: As the setter in Ladywood's 5-1 offense, she was the key to the team's success, according to Teeters.

Besides averaging 14 assists per game, the versatile player also contributed 2½ kills and 1½ aces per game.

Kelley, who also received first-team, all-state recognition, has received a full-ride athletic scholarship to Eastern Michigan for volleyball.

"Mary's improvement over the last year resulted from her additional practices and off-season work," Teeters said. "Because of the extra time Mary put in, Ladywood reached all of its goals and more."

Nancy Wagner, senior, Ladywood: The major force in the middle for the Blazers, she was a major contributor to the offense and was the first line of defense at the net.

Wagner averaged 3½ kills and almost three blocks per game. A 93-percent server, she also landed an average of more than two aces. She was named to the all-state third team.

"Nancy is our best natural athlete," Teeters said. "She sparked our defense and offense in situations where and when we needed it."

all-area volleyball

JoAnn Kolnitys, senior, Wayne Memorial: Kolnitys is one of the most talented athletes to play the sport at Wayne.

She could do it all and had impressive numbers in every statistical category: 339 kills (five per game), 202 blocks, 190 digs, 61 aces and 591 good sets.

The honorable mention all-stater and team MVP rated 92 percent on serve reception, 87 percent on serving, 91 percent on blocking and 83 percent on hitting.

"JoAnn loves a good challenge; block her once but never again," coach Ann Kolnitys said. "She has a powerful spike, she always hit the ball with authority."

"JoAnn is definitely a coach's dream player," she added. "She helped bring my team a long way."

Becky Wilson, senior, John Glenn: The 5-foot-11 middle blocker/hitter had over 500 hitting attempts that produced 191 kills (235). Wilson averaged six kills and three solo blocks per game.

In addition, she was a 92-percent server and rated 86 percent on serve reception, which amounted to less than one error per game. Wilson, an all-region pick, has accepted a volleyball scholarship to Wayne State.

"Becky is a very aggressive and dedicated player," Glenn coach Wendy Bostwick said. "She was a definite asset, being the most well-rounded player on our volleyball team."

Melissa Mars, junior, Bishop Borgess: The Spartans should be a solid team and could be in the running for state honors again next year since Mars, an outside hitter and excellent all-round player, will be back.

The all-Catholic, all-region pick had a 333 kill percentage, which parallels her 3.3 grade-point average.

"Melissa improved greatly, and I'm looking forward to next year," Abraham said. "She was our most consistent weapon throughout the year and helped us get to the state finals."

Missy Bosscawen, senior, N. Farmington: Bosscawen was North's leader in kill spikes and kill blocks for the Raiders, who enjoyed a 30-plus win season.

She was the most active digger on the team and went all out for every ball she could reach, according to coach Sandy Lubieniecki. Bosscawen also was graded at 88 percent efficient on serve receptions.

"Missy had many key plays at crucial times of the game or match that turned the momentum in our favor," Lubieniecki said.

George owns hoop records

Perhaps it isn't so surprising that Ken George, a Farmington Harrison graduate, has attached his name to several Albion College basketball records. He always was a talented player.

The surprising thing is how many George already has — and he's just a sophomore.

The 5-foot-11 point guard paced the Britons in assists (3.4 per game) and steals (35), and was second in scoring with a 12.2 average this season.

In addition, George set Albion season and career records for three-point shooting. He was 47-of-96 this year from three-point range (49 percent); his two-year total is 81-of-165. He holds school records for three-point attempts and baskets in both a season and in a career.

In addition, George hit 77-of-90 free throws to set another Briton record for free throw accuracy in a season (85.6 percent). His six steals — in a 96-93 upset of Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association champ Hope — is a single-game record (he also scored 27 points).

Albion finished the season at 13-10 overall, 6-6 in the MIAA. George was honorable mention all-league. He has also been nominated for NCAA Division III academic All-American honors. He carries a 3.5 grade-point average.

Irish sign Mercy star

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

RANDY BORST, staff photographer
Jennifer Slosar, a member of the All-Area volleyball team, has signed to play at Notre Dame next year.

The University of Notre Dame offered Jennifer Slosar the opportunity to earn a degree from the prestigious school and play collegiate volleyball at the same time.

"I couldn't go wrong with that," said the Farmington Hills Mercy senior, who has signed a national letter of intent to attend the South Bend, Ind., school.

"The reputation of the school is outstanding, and the academic program is very good. Combined with the volleyball program at Notre Dame, it was something I couldn't pass up."

The Fighting Irish, in fact, hope to raise their program to the national-power level, and they believe the 6-foot-1 Slosar, a versatile player who specializes as a middle hitter, will help them reach that goal.

Notre Dame plans to beef up its schedule and, next season, will play 10 of the top-20 teams, including Stanford, Pacific, Purdue, Hawaii and Texas.

"(THE IRISH) are going to be up there, and that's why I want to be with them," Slosar said.

"You have to play the best to be the best. They have the same philosophy as me."

The post-season honors are beginning to roll in for Slosar, but she was relatively unknown until this year. However, college coaches, once they got on the recruiting trail, immediately saw potential in the Mercy star.

Plus, the Marlins turned their program around under second-year coach Tim DeBeliso last season and posted a 41-10 record.

"What the coaches like is that she has the size to play at the college level," DeBeliso said. "She has good foot speed, good agility and can play the back row."

"They don't have to worry about taking her out of the game when she rotates into the back row. They want someone who can play all the way around. That's why she was so highly recruited."

"SHE WANTS to be the best volleyball player she can be," he added, "and Notre Dame is the place she thought she would be able to do that."

Slosar, who had 123 kills out of 296 attacks for a .415 hitting percentage her senior season, played for coach Mike Gibson's Victors team in the Junior Olympics last summer. Plus, she sent letters to various schools herself. Before long most of the Big Ten schools, Texas, Rice and Auburn were among the schools recruiting her.

Eventually it came down to Michigan and Notre Dame and a surprised Slosar even got a phone call at home from U-M football coach Bo Schembechler.

"I said, 'No, this is not Bo Schembechler. He said it was 'Oh, my goodness.' He said it was the first time he ever called a girl to recruit her to the school, and I was really honored," Slosar said.

But Notre Dame's volleyball program is more advanced than Michigan's, and Slosar liked the smaller campus at Notre Dame.

"THERE ARE no sororities or fraternities, it's all just combined," she said. "I thought that was really nice. It was like a small-community atmosphere."

The main consideration in choosing a school, however, was academics — an important area for Slosar, who carries a 3.9 grade-point average and plans to study mechanical engineering. She hopes to someday work in the aerospace industry. Two older brothers and one sister are engineers, too.

Slosar, who missed three weeks with a hand injury, also averaged five digs and five blocks. She rated 85 percent on serve reception, passing and 94 percent on serving.

She handled (the recruiting pressure) with a lot of maturity and class," DeBeliso said. "She's a fine, fine person. She comes from a good family, and it reflects on Jennifer."

COOLING HEATING

Remember last spring when you decided to go another summer without air conditioning?

Wouldn't it be nice to have the cool, comfortable feeling of a perfect day inside your home? You can, with efficient, reliable Bryant air conditioning. Don't try to go through another summer without it.

Plus 90's simplicity sanctions its reliability.

Plus 90 uses no exotic components, no radical technology, meaning less chance of breakdown or loss of efficiency with age. That means reliability. Dependability winter after winter. Simple as that.

Add to that Bryant's free gas offer — where we'll pay your highest monthly gas bill if you buy and install a Plus 90 before January 31, 1989, and you've got savings that really add up. Today and tomorrow.

Margie Hewett has a strong following at Harold's Bar in Redford. She's been the bar's piano player for more than 35 years.

By Philip A. Sherman
staff writer

Was this a piano bar?
It sounded like one. Appe'teasers' restaurant and bar is below street level in a Birmingham office building and "As Time Goes By" was curling up the stairs.
Inside, it didn't look like Rick's American Cafe, but none of the patrons looked like Humphrey Bogart, so everything was even.
Even, perhaps, but different. Pat Sajack and Vanna White were there, wheeling in a fortune of $156,000. Only moments before, Dexter Manley of the Washington Redskins told everyone at the bar how he personally was going to skin the Denver Broncos alive.
Gary Reseigh played right through them, eyes almost closed, bent over the keyboard of his baby grand. He wasn't going to let a television set at the back of the bar distract him. In that respect he had a lot in common with Margie Hewett.
She also was playing "As Time Goes By" on the same Saturday night at Harold's Piano Bar, across town in Redford. Hewett, too, had to contend with a television set, this one lighting a corner of the bar with scenes from a hockey game. She lit a cigarette and ignored it.
Television in piano bars. That's like James Bond smoking menthol lights and wearing canvas hightops. Don't blame the bars, though; they're just playing to the patrons, who are accustomed to seeing the world through a 19-inch screen.
The others were listening, singing along, dancing in place, batting an eye and reveling in a smoky pleasure that predates Uncle Miltie — the piano bar.

AT APPE'TEASER, on Woodward two blocks north of Maple in the Great American Insurance Building,

You won't find Bogie there, but you'll find pianos

'I did some boogie-woogie stuff last night and a lot of people at the bar were turning around and watching.'

— Gary Reseigh, Appe'teasers

Reseigh (pronounced riz-A) starts at 5:30 p.m. on Saturday nights and alternates the rest of his time between the Birmingham and Milford Appe'teaser restaurants.

He's been playing professionally since 1971. His first job was playing the organ for the Red Wings at Olympia.
"I've thought that myself sometimes, but I hate to think that," Reseigh said of people finding television more entertaining than live entertainment. "I wouldn't want to be thought of as a human Muzak machine."
His repertoire, like Hewett's, is large and spans decades.
"I'll do a little ragtime, maybe 'Flight of the Bumblebee,'" Reseigh said. "I love playing ballads of the '30s and '40s — the smooth stuff." He played a very smooth rendition of "I've Grown Accustomed to Your Face," and a woman at the bar slowly tilted her head from side to side, smiling at the guy who was making pasta in a cove near the kitchen.

"You judge the age group of the people you've got in and judge things accordingly. This is a quiet night. I did some boogie-woogie stuff last night and a lot of people at the bar were turning around and watching," Reseigh said.

He started some boogie-woogie stuff later that evening and a woman heading for her table took a step in time to the music, did a bent-knee twirl and threw her shoulders back before she realized anyone was watching.

THERE WERE no chairs around Reseigh's piano: the closest seats in the house were a table to his immediate left, or the stools at the closed end of horseshoe bar to his right. At the bar, a woman stood with her back to the bartender.

"Excuse me, can I get you something?" the bartender said to the woman's back. The woman turned around and said: "Yes, a real man." She jerked her thumb over his shoulder at her male companion who was ignoring her and watching "The Facts of Life" on television.

All age groups could be found at the restaurant that night. Younger men wore open collars, older men wore ties. All had jackets and all the women wore dresses. Hardly anyone was smoking.

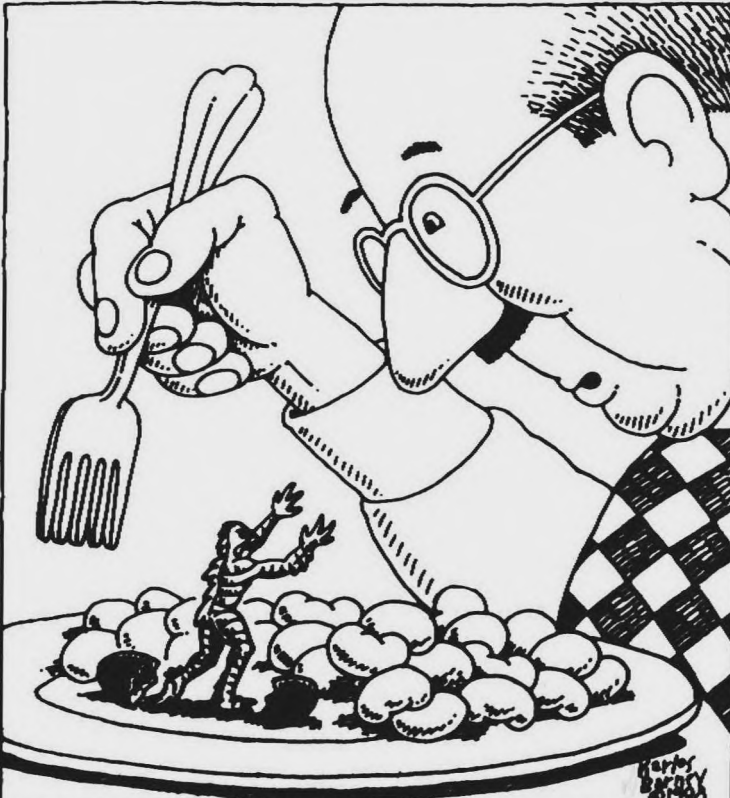

The scene at Harold's on Five Mile east of Beech Daly was similar in one way and very different in at least two others.

A few hockey fans could be heard hooting at the television over Margie Hewett's music. Some people were seated shoulder-to-shoulder, smiling and listening to her play. At Harold's everyone was smoking and there were bar stools around the piano.

Hot lava rocks plus water results in one great Finnish sauna

By Iris Sanderson Jones
special writer

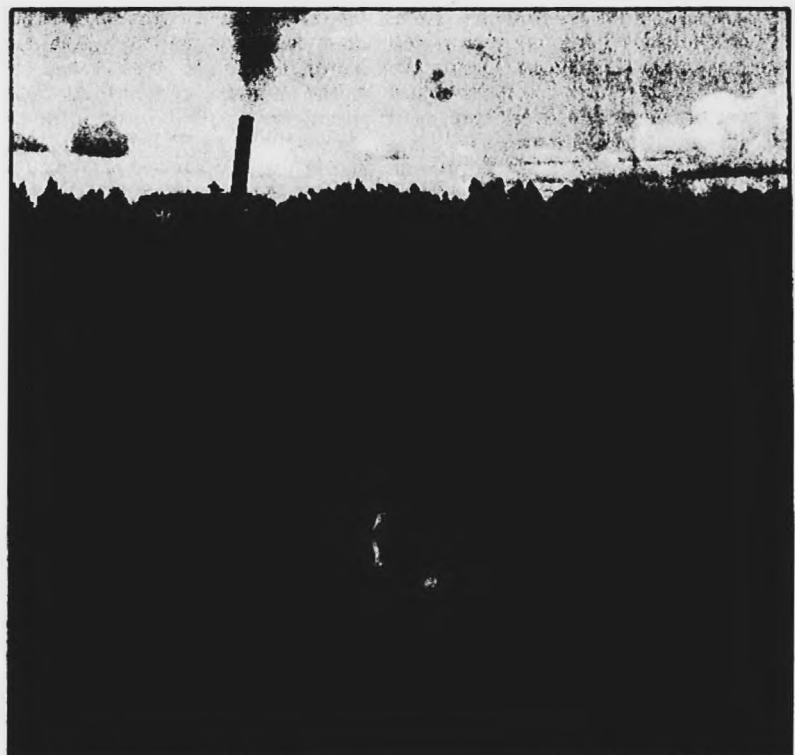

We've just added a dipper of water to the kiuas, the hot lava stones at the heart of every Finnish sauna. A gentle veil of steam rises around us.
The Finns call it "loyly." They say it reverently as they do about everything associated with the sauna. There is the Saturday sauna, the Christmas sauna and, of course, words like "purifying body and soul."
What we call saunas are a big trend in some hotels and fitness clubs in the United States, but you probably have never been in a sauna quite like this one.
It is a three-story affair that occupies the lower level and the main floor of the Hotel Svansolmu in Pieksamaki in the lake district of Finland. Guests reserve the sauna for their own use for 90 minutes at a time.

There are two rooms on the top level — a large changing room with a pile of bathing suits for those moments when you go swimming be-

One way of enjoying a Finnish sauna is in a tent on the beach. After 10 minutes in the luxuriously relaxing, steamy interior, it's just a short dash to the chilly Baltic Sea for a cool-down.

Vogan's 'Leg' looks at the 'game of life' through a ball team

By John Killeen special writer

"Sit in the bleachers and watch the women practice. It is a roundhouse practice, the women fanned out in a rough star pattern. The man pacing the foul line notices the wind stirring the leaves and looks back to his pitcher. She is working on her knuckleball, throwing it without a spin so the seams look parallel.

"The pitch dips and weaves through the air before it crosses the plate. It lands in the catcher's mitt lightly, not enough force to overcome the breeze. The catcher flips one of her black braids over her shoulder before returning the pitch and signals for another knuckleball."

Ah, spring and baseball are back. On fields all over the place, from professional preseason to pickup games played on litter-filled fields, the boys and girls of summer are honing their skills for another season. The crack of the bat and the smack of the ball against a leather mitt are the sounds that fill the air. The game within the game is being developed.

One of the best of these games is played out in the pages of "In Shelly's Leg," by Sara Vogan (Graywolf Press, $7.50). In this first novel we are treated to the game of living, played with all the joy and sorrow and folly that make life alive.

The setting is a small town in Montana. The players are the patrons of a bar, Shelly's Leg, and the members of the women's fast-pitch baseball team the bar sponsors.

SHELLY'S LEG Women's Fast-Pitch Softball Team has been on top for the past six seasons. During the course of the novel, the team moves through one more season. This is not a "baseball" novel, however. It is a season in the lives of the characters. The battery of Margaret, the pitcher, and Rita, the catcher, and Sullivan and Shelly are the center of the action.

Margaret is a divorced mother of two who, at 30, is seeking a stable life for her family. She lives with Woody, a pedal steel guitar player. Woody has filled her life and her house with his presence.

His overstuffed chair and his guitar crowd her living room. His ambitions and his plans crowd her life. When he plans to go on tour with his band he asks Margaret to come with him. She refuses.

She can't imagine life on the road with two children and the uncertainty of a band's existence. She has drifted for too long. She needs roots and familiarity.

Rita grew up in a smaller place and has come to this town. For years she has worked at the bar. For years she has merely been here. Rita is Margaret's best friend. She needs to get out.

When Woody comes to Rita, she is books missed or forgotten ready to go on the road with him. She tells Margaret, "I'm beginning to believe if you sit still nothing moves... I'm pushing 35 and I've done nothing but watch Indians die of depression and whites spend their life drunk."

THE GAME is set. Will Margaret change her mind and go with Woody? Will Rita throw away her friendship and go with him? Can they still be the pitcher-catcher team they once were? Is Woody worth it?

Refereeing this game is Sullivan, the owner of Shelly's Leg. He has lived a full life. He knows all about the wastefulness of broken hearts. He met Shelly when she was a young girl. It was one of those lifelong bondings that some are blessed to find. But Sullivan had gone off to join the Navy and returned to find Shelly married.

The game within the game. They became lovers. Again, in anger, Sullivan had left. Then, the accident. He returned and the two of them ended up in this town. Running this bar. Starting the team. Loving and living. Until her death. Since then, Sullivan has just been passing time.

"In these years since Shelly's death, Sullivan has prided himself on the truth of his memories. He is glad he is not an imaginative man, that his memories are as clear and true as the moments were in time. He remembers colors and smells, whispers of sound fill his mind as he sits behind her bar and stares at her picture above the jukebox.

"It is a good portrait and was taken just a year before she died. He regrets the bullet hole in her throat, the glass pattern fanning out across the star over her face when he fired that shot. He regrets his anger at her death and wants only to remember the good years, 20 good years in his life."

WITH HIS pain and his wisdom, Sullivan lovingly watches over his patrons and his players. They are his family now. They are the ones who benefit from his humor: "You seen the official Kansas bumper sticker? ... Suicide in Kansas is Redundant." And they benefit from his pain: "Men move on. Women mourn."

Filled with a solid cast of supporting characters, "In Shelly's Leg" is a well-pitched novel. As Raymond Carver said of Sara Vogan, "Without flinching, she gives us the inelegant truths of what it's like to hold on, and go on, day after day."

Ticket to fashion

Silk scarves are definitely back this spring as a fashion accessory. European and American designers are showing scarves over the shoulder, tied through a handbag strap and — yes, even on the head. This design is actual ticket stubs from the Metropolitan Opera, rock concerts, sports events and movie theaters. The stubs were artfully arranged and photographed, then copied precisely and transferred to silk. The oversized scarf will take you anywhere — just look at the ticket stubs. $60. Body art?

Kathryn Utech-MacKenzie and Lisa Grix have come up with their own concept of body art.

Now, before you start thinking it's a new version of the 1960's rage or revamped tattoos, read on.

The two women own Accessorize Art on the Alley in Rochester that features the unusual in beads and accessories — selective items, one-of-a-kind items from all over the world.

With that kind of concept in mind they decided their shop need an unusual location and the alleys in Rochester seemed to fit the bill the best.

"We wanted to give people an environment within which they could create their own accessories... learn the skills necessary to construct their own jewelry," they said.

Accessorize... Art on the Alley can be found at 428A Main on the alley just north of the Main Street Plaza. It's open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Dog's life

Does your favorite pooch look like he's going to cry when you leave for work in the morning?

Do you worry that he may be bored while home alone? Well, a Union Lake business has given new meaning to the saying about a dog's life.

Union Lake Pet Services Inc., an affiliate of the Union Lake Veterinary Hospital, P.C., provides a doggie day care program.

The year-old program is similar to a child care program in that it creates a learning environment for pets through intensive training.

The three-week program teaches the basic obedience commands as well as address housebreaking and behavioral problems in dogs. (And you thought Fido would never be house broken.)

People can drop their dogs off in the morning three to five times a week and pick them up in the afternoon. Doggie day care is aimed at families that do not have time or the background to properly train a dog. The program helps puppies get a good start as well as correcting behavioral and obedience problems in older dogs.

For more information about doggie day care, call Union Lake Pet Services Inc at 363-6262. It's at 6547 Cooley Lake Road.

Time's running out for Oscar picks

There are only 11 days left to our Academy Awards contest, so, if you've been pondering your picks for best actor, actress and four other categories, now's the time to start marking your ballot.

If you're good at picking winners, you could wind up winning yourself and a guest a trip to Hollywood in the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers/AMC Theaters/United Airlines second Academy Award contest.

The rules are simple, but the payoff is big for the person who picks the most winners in six categories — best picture, best actress, best actor, best supporting actress, best supporting actor and best director.

The grand-prize winner and a guest will receive a trip to Hollywood with round-trip air fare from United Airlines. The second-place winner will receive an AMC gold pass and the third-place prize will be AMC guest passes.

Here are the contest rules:
(1) Contestants should fill out the Oscar contest entry form, available at AMC theaters and in the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

(2) Forms must be turned in by midnight Friday, April 8. They can be dropped off at any AMC theater and the Observer & Eccentric offices in Livonia, Farmington, Birmingham, Plymouth and Rochester, or mailed to AMC Theaters, Suite 123, 6689 Orchard Lake Road, West Bloomfield 48322.

(3) No purchase is necessary, but the limit is one entry per person.

(4) If more than one entry contains the most correct answers, the winner of the grand prize and subsequent prizes will be selected by random drawing.

(5) Employees of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, AMC Theaters and United Airlines and their immediate families are not eligible to enter the contest.

If he (Bertolucci) wins, he will be the first Italian to garner best director.

"The Last Emperor," starring Peter O'Toole as English tutor Reginald Johnston, is up for a multitude of Academy Awards, including best picture. Its director, Bernardo Bertolucci, also is vying for best director honors against the likes of John Boorman, who directed "Hope and Glory."

Bertolucci is odds on favorite to win best director nod

By Dan Greenberg
special writer

Last week I offered to help you win the Observer & Eccentric/AMC Oscar contest and a trip to Hollywood. With "Moonstruck" your firm choice as Best Picture, it's time to look at the director category.

This one's easy. If the Academy runs true to form, and if the other signs mean anything, there should be no suspense when they ask for the envelope, please, for best director.

It looks like a shoo-in for Bernardo Bertolucci as top director in this year's Oscar race. First of all, on March 12th he won the Directors Guild of America award for "The Last Emperor."

The Directors Guild of America (DGA) award was established in 1948. In its 41 years, only three times have the winners failed in the Oscar sweepstakes. That's 93 percent and you won't catch me betting against such odds.

IN ADDITION, "The Last Emperor" received more nominations (nine) than any other film this year, so the movie is well-regarded in Hollywood. Naturally, the industry looks to the people involved and that many nominations is to Bertolucci's credit. If he wins, he will be the first Italian to garner best director.

For the first time in Oscar's 60-year history, no American was nominated for best director. Adrian Lyne (British) received his first Oscar nod for "Fatal Attraction." His countryman, John Boorman ("Hope and Glory"), was nominated in 1972 for "Deliverance."

Boorman and Canadian Norman Jewison ("Moonstruck") were not nominated by the DGA, although Bertolucci, Swedish director Lasse Hallstrom ("My Life as a Dog") and Lyne were. Jewison has been selected twice before by the Academy in this category — in 1967 for "In the Heat of the Night" and in 1971 for "Fiddler on the Roof."

Hallstrom has never been picked before and his was the only film not nominated for best picture. If he does win, he will be the first Swedish director to be so honored.

But it doesn't seem likely with the limited support "My Life as a Dog" received. It's only other nomination was for screenplay adaptation while the competition has five or more with nine for "The Last Emperor" building overwhelming strength.

Just as Boorman and Jewison failed to receive a nod from the Directors Guild, two DGA contenders — James L. Brooks for "Broadcast News" and Steven Spielberg for "Empire of the Sun" — failed in the Oscar contest.

IT SEEMS as if Spielberg will have to wait until his 60th birthday before the Academy finds him worthy. Although never nominated as best director by the Oscar folks, the DGA has nominated six of Spielberg's nine films.

Another unusual dimension this year is the popularity of Lyne's "Fatal Attraction" with six picks. Down through the years, the Academy has not favored the horror thriller genre. Just ask Hitchcock.

When Bertolucci received the DGA award he said, "This is a very nice welcome to a new member of the DGA." He caught the spirit of Oscar's 1988 international flavor.

"In the darkness of movie theaters," Bertolucci said, "there are no more national identities. There are no more classes. Maybe I'm an idealist, but I still see movie theaters as big cathedrals where people come to dream the same dream together."

That's a pretty nice thought and just the right level of schmaltz to convince the Academy that Bertolucci's their man.

Hallstrom's nomination, just like his film, is a sleeper. "My Life as a Dog," despite its difficulty in getting distribution and its unexpected audience popularity, hasn't generated enough general support.

Boorman's "Hope and Glory" is another unheralded film that gained tremendous attention from filmgoers and is contending in five categories. Despite Boorman's superior track record, I don't think he has much more of a chance than Hallstrom.

Finnish saunas: Steaming away all your worries

tween saunas and a lounging room with comfortable padded chairs, a table lined with cold beer, a roaring wood fire and a rack of long forks for cooking sausages while relaxing and cooling down after the sauna is done.

Go down a spiral staircase to the pool level and you find the shower room, with soap, shampoo and other needs, along with a door that leads to the hotel swimming pool, and the sauna room itself, a carefully built room with wooden benches built like steps at several levels around the stove, topped with lava rock.

A SIGN ON the sauna room door reads "No bathing suits in the sauna." Before you jump to conclusions, you should know that men and women don't sauna together in Finland except with members of their own families. Public places typically have a men's sauna and a women's sauna.

By now you may be beginning to think that saunas are a serious business in Finland. There are 4.5 million Finns and more than a million saunas — more saunas than cars.

You will find them in every house, hotel, apartment building, in many office buildings and in or beside every one of the thousands of summer cottages in the countryside. A cottage may or may not have a flush toilet, but it always has a sauna.

Sauna is a Finnish word. It is pronounced "saw-na" not "saw-nah." If you want to make a Finn angry use it to describe steam baths and the many other variations associated with that word around the world.

According to the Finnish Sauna Association, the sauna was brought to Scandinavia by tribes that moved into Finland 2,000 years ago. Originally, it was a modest burrow in the earth, filled with hot stones.

Water, thrown on the hot stones, gave off steam and the Finn helped the sweating and bathing process along by beating himself with a leafy whisk. Lots of Finns still do.

Remember this. Finland like Alaska and the Canadian Yukon, is north of the 60th parallel. A hot sauna probably felt pretty good on a cold winter day.

SAUNAS COME in different sizes and luxury levels, and each has its own style, but each of them is a very sterile place. Most people shower before they go in. Typically, scrubbed wooden benches surround the two-by-two-foot firebox, once fired with wood, now mostly electric, but always with the proper lava stones on top.

The only things you take into the Finnish sauna are a towel to sit on and a bucket of cold water with a ladle. That is so you can slowly dribble water onto the hot lava stones, increasing the humidity and that precious veil of steam, called "loilyly."

Typically, the temperature is set between 80 and 100 degrees centigrade. That is as high as 212 degrees Fahrenheit, the temperature of boiling water, but you really won't turn into a boiled piece of meat.

You can increase or decrease both the heat and the humidity by sitting in different parts of the sauna and by controlling the amount of water you throw on the hot stones.

The idea is to create perspiration, so after 10 minutes you leave the sauna, don a bathing suit and jump into the swimming pool. In cold weather, in some places, they still roll in the snow.

Finns typically sauna once a week, but in the old days, when most Finns did a hard day's work on the farm, the sauna was heated every night to soothe and relax tired muscles.

In the old, old days, the first sauna was for the men, the second for the women and the third for the fairies. No human being would enter the third sauna.

ANY FEAST day meant, and still means, a sauna the night before. The rituals of Saturday and Christmas saunas are more than rituals of body bathing. Finns will tell you that the sauna cleans the mind of tension and unhappiness, too.

Sauna is more than a health kick; it's part of a philosophy of life.

Most fears disappear in a hurry, especially if you have a Finn along to describe the best way to enjoy the sauna and to share a beer and sausage later.

Tent sauna memorable

By Iris Sanderson Jones
Special writer

I tried a lot of saunas during my two weeks in Finland. One hotel in Helsinki had a deep hole full of icy water beside the traditional swimming pool, a hole just deep enough for the hardy to stand in one at a time when the sauna was done.

Another hotel in the Aland Islands between Finland and Sweden opened directly into the icy Baltic Sea.

My two most memorable saunas, however, were at the Hotel Hesperia in Helsinki, where I was scrubbed down before the sauna, and at the Hotel Savonsolmu in Pieksamaki, where I had a tent sauna on the beach.

The Hotel Hesperia in Helsinki is one of the few places in the country where you can still order a scrub lady with your sauna. These ladies traditionally are old and strong.

We went through all the rituals first — shower, sauna, pool, sauna — then we stretched out, quite naked, one at a time on a table. The scrub lady started by pouring a bucket of warm water over me. When I was thoroughly wet, she began to scrub me with a large stiff luffa sponge, hard strokes from chin to toes. Turn over on your stomach, and it was hard strokes again from the hairline to the feet. If you like being massaged, you'll love being scrubbed.

THE TENT sauna was an entirely different experience.

Our tent sauna was erected at the end of a small peninsula occupied by the Hotel Savonsolmu in Pieksamaki. Hotel general manager Seppa Summanen and his assistant Lili Nissinen carried it out and set it up at the edge of the cold lake.

From the outside, it looked like any small square army tent except for the small chimney that jutted through the roof. Inside the firebox with its lava stones was heated with wood.

talking on the phone and getting blatted at in return, and you're positive the blating noise was made by a musical instrument, but you just can't figure out what kind, then you've heard a pocket coronet.

The coronet's owner dug right into a faultless duet of "Sugar Blues" with Hewett. "She accompanies very well; she backs you up and follows you. And I don't want my name in the paper, if that's OK," he yelled over the crowd's applause.

"Next they're going to do a dedication to Sid Vicious," said Kevin Miley, Ed's son. Kevin and his wife, Rene, were representative of the dress code at Harold's — jeans and comfortable shirts. Hockey jerseys also are acceptable, but Ed said not to wear T-shirts, if you're going to sit at the piano bar.

"MARGIE WILL make you go home and change," he said.

Kevin and Rene also were representative of the age group. It looked like a lot of couples were in the bar with their sons and daughters that Saturday night.

Hewett is at Harold's Tuesday through Saturday nights. The guy with the pocket coronet called a couple days later and said he's usually at the bar on Fridays.

No one knew how often Dick Meloche showed up.

Piano bars aren't quite a Rick's American Cafe

Dick Meloche of Livonia sat on the stool at Hewett's immediate left. He said he'd been coming to Harold's for about eight years. He finished a cigarette, tipped back a small glass and looked at Hewett, who started to play "Nancy With a Laughing Face."

Meloche started to sing. He didn't have a microphone and he wasn't part of the program. He drowned out the television. His voice was excellent. Meloche looked down at the piano bar and smiled when everyone in the bar applauded.

"HE DOES that all the time," said Ed Miley, a Redford resident who said he'd been coming to the bar for 35 years. "I come here to listen to her (Hewett). They get a nice, friendly crowd."

Hewett seemed friendly, but not too talkative; several patrons said she'd been playing the piano at Harold's for 35-40 years.

When Meloche finished singing, another man walked up to the piano with a black lunch box and a chair. He put the chair next to Hewett's piano bench, sat down, opened up the lunch box and took out a pocket coronet.

A pocket coronet makes a clear, high "waaa-waaa" sound. If you've seen any old movies with someone

Burlington introduces digital tape duplication

(AP) — Since most of American Multimedia Inc.'s business comes from audio cassette duplication, the Burlington company had an undeniable stake in perfecting tape duplication.

"We don't hide that fact," Robert Farrow, Concept Design's director of engineering, said. "We brag about it."

The company believes it will revolutionize the world's music markets, with a new digital tape duplication process called DAAD — Digital Audio Analog Duplication — created by the engineering unit of American Multimedia.

American Multimedia is the nation's largest independent audiotape duplicating company. With funding from RCA, its Concept Design unit created DAAD, which transfers digitally mastered music directly to retail cassettes, eliminating the need for costly, short-lived master tapes.

The company is just beginning to market DAAD machines. The first one will go out to QTI, a tape-duplicating firm affiliated with RCA, in Weaverville, N.C., near Asheville. Rick Wartzog, QTI's manager of tape electronic development, said DAAD should substantially improve cassette tape duplication.

"CURRENTLY, when we do our job absolutely correctly, we're capable of very good sound but not perfect sound every time," Wartzog said. "We're looking for a very good improvement in that regard."

The impetus behind developing DAAD was keeping the cassette viable against its competition, company officials said.

DAAD is already a proven financial boon to American Multimedia, which has eight-figure annual sales. Concept Design's sales are about $2 million a year, and DAAD will double that, Farrow said. He expects the company's business to be in the $3 million to $4 million range for 1988 — all because of DAAD.

"Our entire year's production

'Currently, when we do our job absolutely correctly, we're capable of very good sound, but not perfect sound every time.'

— Rick Wartzog, manager, QTI

schedule of this unit is sold," Farrow said.

Unlike digital audiotape, DAAD uses conventional audio cassettes, the double-sided kind which replaced 8-track tapes in the 1970s and can now be found in most car and home stereo systems. The single-sided DAT, on the other hand, more closely resembles a miniature videocassette and requires new machines for playback and recording.

Record labels oppose DAT because it allows perfect CD-quality home recording of CDs, LPs and cassettes. Each successive copy of a DAT tape theoretically sounds as good as the original.

DAAD, on the other hand, is not adaptable to home-taping technology. It allows the record labels to release DAT-quality cassettes to consumers without the risk that customers could reproduce their own copies free.

And it's economical, Farrow said.

"IT'S A cost reduction for them," he said. "It doesn't make the cassette more expensive to produce."

By this time next year, he predicts, all of RCA and Warner Brothers' retail cassettes will be duplicated by DAAD.

The cassette has been cursed by a reputation for sound quality somewhat inferior to the LP and markedly worse than the CD. Even so, in recent years the cassette has replaced the vinyl LP as the record industry's top-selling product.

"Right now, the cassette is literally king," Farrow said. "We set out mostly to try to improve upon the product."

The DAAD machine is fairly unimpressive. About the size of a file cabinet, it is merely a 49-inch tall box, housing sophisticated computer components. Each unit sells for about $105,000.

Beyond the initial investment in the DAAD machine, Farrow said, record companies should be able to save 20 percent to 25 percent on cassette manufacturing. Three DAAD-made cassettes can be manufactured for the cost of one DAT tape because of the elimination of master tape copies necessary for mass duplication. Those tapes cost about $200 apiece, he said.

DAAD stores all the music on a one-megabyte computer hard disk — which can dump all its information in only three seconds — converting it back to a traditional analog recording for duplication.

With DAAD, each tape copy is as good as the first because it's all digital. Additionally, the technology eliminates problems normally associated with music cassettes, such as hiss and distortion.

SOUND QUALITY is not the only advantage. It's also fast.

Music cassettes can be duplicated by DAAD at a speed of 80:1 — 80 times faster than it would take to reproduce the same cassette on a conventional tape recorder. The current industry standard is 64:1.

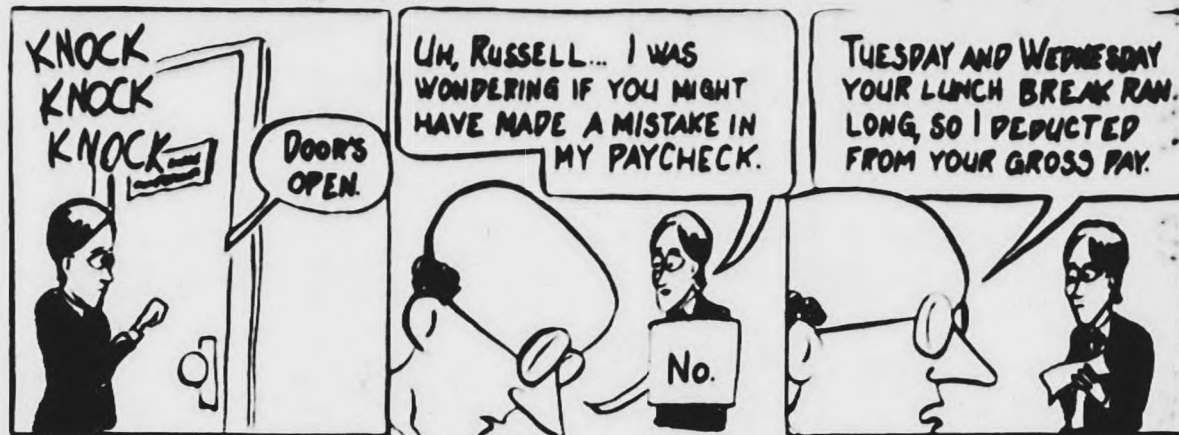

Record companies tried for some time to develop DAAD-type systems themselves with little success, Farrow said. Even though Concept Design finally perfected the system, the patent went to the creator of the original concept.

"The scary thing is it was issued to a Japanese company, and they couldn't build it," Farrow said.

Bed and breakfasts and wine in

NAPA

Napa Valley is "a valley that looks like it should" and one way to see it is aloft in a hot air balloon.

The expanse of vineyards is an indication of how wine making has caught on in the Napa Valley.

There are 160 bonded wineries and new ones are opening at a rate of six to eight a year.

By Dick Watson
special writer

Your return to your bed and breakfast after an exhausting day in the Napa Valley, followed by a splendid dinner in town, to find your FM station on, some bouquets of flowers about the room, the lights tastefully turned on, the temperature exactly right and a handwritten note from your hostess awaiting you.
Dear Dick,

Hope you enjoyed your dinner at the Mount View Hotel this evening. We bid you good night with this Meloso sherry and these Foothill House "Sweet Dreams" wafers. See you in the morning
Susan and Michael

Very nice!

Such is the newly developed ambience of this mode of hostelry, the B and B, that is sweeping Napa. A recent reading of the Yellow Pages showed some 95 of them now in operation. As with the valley's wines, they come in assorted qualities, sizes, costs and, most important, share with the wines distinct personalities of their own.

The commonalities among them are several. There are no in-room telephones, no television, the breakfasts are huge, appealing and informal, towels and soaps are elegant, privacy is stressed and personal greetings are proffered to each guest on arrival. Each has its cozy touches, designed to make one feel like a true "guest."

BUT THE differences are even greater. Four places are worth your consideration when in the Napa Valley:

— Foothill House, 3037 Foothill Blvd., Calistoga, Calif. 94515. Located 1 1/2 miles north of Calistoga, this is without a doubt the most successful B and B I have ever encountered.

Providers of the handwritten notes and Meloso sherry, the Clows have created three rooms of the utmost comfort. Refrigerator with wine and wine glasses, overhead fan, a patio, an in-room jacuzzi in the Evergreen Room, a set fireplace and warm hospitality. Also a diary of notes of thanks from previous guests kept on the table.

The breakfast — negotiable — features warm breads and other amenities, along with five cats sunning themselves on the porch. And the FM reception is on cable so reception is good, unlike most places in the valley.

The cost is $80-$105 per room.

Wine Country Inn, 1152 Lodi Lane, St. Helena, Calif. 94574. Located in the center of the valley, just north of St. Helena, it is larger (26 rooms in three buildings) and has a somewhat more commercial feeling as a consequence.

The rooms are well appointed, many with balconies or alcoves and views of the valley. A preset fireplace and continuous coffee service and kitchen access are part of the ambience.

The continental breakfast features fruits of greater variety, homemade granola, hot breads and rolls, all the while looking out on lovely gardens.

Rates are mostly $100-$120 per room.

La Residence, 4066 St. Helena Highway, Napa 94558. Just above the city of Napa, the heart of this place is a finely restored building from 1870. There are 20 rooms in a Gothic Revival architecture, each of which has been carefully refurbished to modern standards.

THERE IS a pool, outdoor jacuzzi surrounded by patios and gardens and 200-year-old oak and acacia trees.

The commons room features a late breakfast of excellent fruits, croissants and a sinful omelet. Wine and cheese tastings are held regularly in the late afternoon for those who wish to socialize.

Room price varies and is competitive.

Mount View Hotel, 1457 Lincoln Ave., Calistoga, Calif. 94515. Not really a B and B (there are phones in each room, although management fought doing this for sometime), this is more a quaint, restored "downtown" hotel from the rugged days of yore. Very western.

They feature weekend and other package deals that include meals, outdoor pool and a chance to loaf without guilt.

The main charm of the Mount View, however, is its dining room. A first-rate menu, the food beautifully prepared and served by an excellent staff. And a wine list, fairly priced, that you will not believe. Scope and depth abound therein from the boutique (Stony Hill, which I have never before seen in a restaurant) to the elegant (Opus One), older vintages and current releases.

One-night packages (including dinner and breakfast for two) range from $100 to $150. Two-nighters with one dinner event runs about $200.

There are several B and B referral agencies to help you in your selection. At area code 707 the following numbers — 963-8466, 944-1577 and 942-5900 — brought helpful answers to my rather generic questions.

But the real appeal of the Napa Valley rests not in its sleeping accommodations alone. It is "a valley that looks just like it should," where relaxation is essential (the term "Napatime" has real meaning for locals and tourists both) and diverse pleasure seeking is a way of life.

THERE IS ebullient joy of ballooning, soaring soundlessly (whoosh!) and gracefully above the valley floor each early morning that weather permits (the owners of the balloons go along, too, and they're not foolish), as it usually does in season.

A very special way to spend a morning, champagne and all. Call 253-2224 for Napa Valley Balloons from Yountville or Once in a Lifetime in Calistoga at 942-6541.

Prices range from about $125 per person for the ride, but the champagne is free.

The reason, however, for all this Napa tourism is the wineries. The lure of almost perfect weather, seasonal in its way, and the "bottled poetry" are what Napa is all about.

The valley is 17 miles long, three miles wide in the south, tapering to less than a mile in the north before Mount St. Helena stops it. There are today some 160 bonded wineries and new ones open at a rate of six to eight per year. To visit them all is impossible, so one must be selective.

Some court tourists; others disdain them. Some are open by appointment only. The following have interesting features, each having its own points of character:

Ehlers Lane Winery. Call 963-0144 for an appointment to taste some excellent Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc and Cabernet Sauvignon. In doing so, you will be in one of the oldest winery structures in the valley, now converted into a modern, efficient operation.

FLORA SPRINGS Wine Co. They feature wine classes on alternate Saturdays, intimate and informative, for a modest cost. In a "classic" building, with vineyards spanning away from the winery, they make a fine Cabernet, Chardonnay and Merlot as well as their sensational "Trilogy."

Most congenial and interesting people, but that will be true of most places you visit in the valley. Appointment necessary; call 963-6711.

Freemark Abbey. For more than 20 years, they have made vineyard-designated Cabernets and have a long history of accomplishment with their Chardonnays and Reislings. The tasting room is open daily from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in a most pleasant setting. Located just north of St. Helena in a rustic shopping complex, close to the Wine Country Inn.

Sterling Vineyards. A tourist mecca. A tram ride up the steep hillside is the only access to this Spanish-Moroccan stucco delight. The tour is self-conducted. There is a tasteful gift shop and the wines (Cabernet, Merlot, Chardonnay and Sauvignon Blanc) are all top flight.

Groth Vineyards. Makers of fine Chardonnay, Sauvignon Blanc and award-winning Cabernets, the winery is not set up to entertain the public, but may show itself off by appointment, if convenient. Call 255-7466.

The Napa Valley is just a little over an hour from San Francisco, its path well marked after crossing the Golden Gate Bridge.

That hour may be one of the longest you will encounter as a traveler because it takes you from a fast-paced, highly charged city to a land that knows only one dimension: Napatime.

More on cabinetry

LIVING ROOMS, family rooms, dens and libraries are the setting for your active lifestyle. These are rooms used for entertaining and relaxing. Rooms that help you keep your life beautifully organized.

Whether you are building a new home or renovating an existing home, customized carpentry for all your needs gives each room a distinct personality and a sense of unity. Specially designed wall systems can provide space for a family entertainment center, storage for your accretions or to display your favorite collection. This cabinetry can be styled traditional, or boldly contemporary depending on the effect you want to create.

Wood-Mode is a familiar name to those who seek fine custom cabinetry. (I talked about them last week in regard to the kitchen.)

A visit to their local showroom showed me just a few of the many wonderful things they can do to provide all the amenities you desire in addition to kitchens.

I SAW A BEDROOM planned with generous wall storage and other personal items. One thing was a custom designed vanity to keep all toiletries close at hand. You may even build in your television cabinet to coordinate with your decor. Even the smallest bedroom becomes beautifully organized and distinctively yours when you work with "RoomScaping" — the name of the service Wood-Mode provides in connection with the cabinetry.

I saw an exciting eclectic look in a family room where rare collectibles were displayed in a wall system that blends wood and laminate finishes. In one vignette, a stairway is shown with unused space under the staircase. The stairway is transformed into a handsome pine cabinet which houses a wall system, complete with cabinetry, drawer space and storage for a wine cache.

Another clever coverup is a wall system with stereo speakers hidden behind wire mesh cabinets and a wet bar behind a roll-up tambour cabinet.

Any of the cabinetry can be made "on the job," so to speak. However, it takes a carpenter who is, in truth, a cabinet maker, to accomplish the fine detail this cabinet company can provide. I would venture to say you can make your project much easier on yourself and less costly if you go to "RoomScaping by Wood-Mode."

To find your nearest Wood-Mode dealer, check the Yellow Pages. Eve Garvin is a free-lance writer who has been an interior designer in the area for many years.

Her efforts sabotaged by husband, children

Q. I am severely disabled, and it's a constant challenge to remain independent. I couldn't survive without being extremely well-organized.

My biggest problems are being sabotaged by others or having to wait for others to do things for me.

An example of sabotage is when one of my children takes the cleaning product from where I keep it in the bathroom cabinet and doesn't replace it. I have to struggle to open the cabinet, find it missing and then with painful difficulty must go to find it.

By the time I get back with it, I am in more pain, frustrated, angry and irritable. No one can understand how important a little thing like replacing borrowed items is.

As to waiting for others, my husband has been promising for two years to replace a shelf that fell down in our laundry room. He is adamant that I not hire anyone else, yet he hasn't gotten it done. I would if I could.

A. My heart goes out to you, and I have no easy answers. I wanted to print your letter, however, because 1) I hope your family will read this and understand how these irritants impede your life. 2) Whether handicapped or not, almost everyone can relate to what you are saying because it describes a most concise way the frustrations of sabotage and the testing of the patience of Job.

While a fully able person doesn't endure your physical pain, you also point out the disconcerting and time-consuming aspects of searching for out-of-pocket items.

TOO OFTEN people simply don't understand how irritating it is when they cart things off to unknown territory or refuse to either make a repair or allow anyone else to do it.

If your children are old enough, I would suggest that they be taught that if they misplace things, they must pay some natural consequences. If they misplace the cleaning supplies, for instance, then they must do the cleaning job for you.

Next time they may remember better. You must realize that children are children, though, and every mother alive has suffered the same aggravations.

In your situation, of course, the problem is magnified considerably.

I'M SURE your husband has already done a great deal for you and, among other possible reasons, may be just rebelling over the shelf — or he may not understand how thwarted you feel.

Try to keep the lines of communication open. Help him understand that it is a great irritant and try to work out an equitable solution.

Perhaps you can elicit a promise that if he hasn't repaired the shelf by a certain date (maybe two months from now), he will allow you to hire out they job.

Family affair

Bordeners build 'castles' for others

By Joanne Ricker Maynard
special writer

THEY rise majestically out of the ground, their unusually sturdy-looking chimneys revealing, on closer inspection, fine craftsmanship seen all too infrequently these days.

These buildings — homes, actually — appear to be small castles and indeed are described as such by their creator and builder, Bruce Bordener of Bruce E. Bordener and Associates Inc. of Birmingham and Bloomfield Hills.

"Our homes have a styling that give a solid, built-to-last feeling," he said in a recent interview.

In 1988, the name Bordener has become synonymous with custom home buildings of the highest caliber. In the early '70s, though, as a young father and Detroit Edison engineer, Bordener could not have known what great prosperity the future held.

Involved at Edison in designing the Fermi II turbo building, Bordener's outside interest in construction got him involved in a couple of home building projects. One of the homes was his own and the response by friends was overwhelming.

"A neighbor finally convinced me to do some building for him," Bordener said, "and I remember thinking, 'OK, I'll do one.'"

That "one" was only the first of many. Leaving Edison, Bordener opened his own business as an engineering consultant, and kept building homes for friends on the side. He soon decided that the latter was far more rewarding than straightening out the problems of other builders. Thus, in 1975, Bruce E. Bordener and Associates Inc. was born.

IN THE 13 YEARS since, Bordener has designed and constructed

It's simply known as Model 227 — a traditional five-bedroom French chateau, with something like 7,000 square feet if you include a lower level/atrium — offered by the family building company headed up by Bruce Bordener with an assist from his wife and son.

over 80 homes "in the $500,000 to $1-million price range." His dedicated and growing staff includes wife Karen, who is the company's bookkeeper, and eldest son Robert, who directs the company's accounting department. The Bordeners' have four other children at home who will be welcomed into the business, if they so choose.

In addition, three architects, two draftsmen, an ASID-member interior designer, two field superintendents and three foremen oversee each home at every step of the way.

"It takes about 18 months to complete one home," Bordener said, noting that that includes design time as well as restraints on the current availability of tradesmen and materials. The company works on eight to 10 homes at any given time.

In the last year, Bordener's realty branch, Bordener Realty Inc., has expanded tremendously and the number of staff members has doubled more than once. What started as a support service to find land suitable for building has become a full-service realty firm.

Between this and Bordener's plans to build and market a development of scaled down Bordener homes, priced in the $500,000 range, the heads of the Bordener family are quite busy. But they remain very involved on the client side.

"As a family-run business, we give our clients the advantage of contact on a more personal level," he explained. "We are able to help them determine what it is they want in their new home, and we give them as much of it as possible. Their satisfaction is what makes us successful."

"A neighbor finally convinced me to do some building for him and I remember thinking, 'OK, I'll do one.'"

—Bruce Bordener

Heat gun does the trick

AP — Removing old wallpaper before a refinishing project can be done quicker and easier with a variable temperature control heat gun.

Here are some tips from Harry W. Earl, brand manager for Emhart Corp.'s ThermoStrip:

- Moisten a section of the old wallpaper with water.
- Set the heat gun at full power, holding the nozzle three inches from the wall, and direct the hot air at a seam.
- As adhesive begins to soften, gently loosen the paper with a scraper, then peel off.
- Continue moistening the wallpaper throughout the process.
