Schools may try again for more money

staff writer

The Plymouth-Canton schools are considering asking voters for more money this June to help the district make up for an expected revenue loss of $10 million.

Trustees debated four options on Monday. They are:

a renewal of 8 mills;

e renewal of 8 mills and the waiving of the Headlee Amendment; o millage renewal and a new one- or two-year millage; or · millage renewal, waiver of the Headlee Amendment and a new oneor two-year millage.

BOARD MEMBERS didn't discuss how many mills would be sought, should a property tax increase question appear on the ballot. The board will resume its discussion on Feb. 6.

Talk of a millage increase comes on the heels of four millage requests rejected by voters during the last two years. Those defeats caused a financial dilemma for the schools, officials say. The last defeat led to $4 million in cutbacks in educational programs. Voter approval to waive the Headlee Amendment would allow the district to collect more property taxes. The amendment takes effect when the increase in assessed property values exceeds the rate of inflation. It mandates taxing units to roll back the tax rate to offset the difference. A waiver allows the unit to levy the full millage authorized by

"This is the third year we've survived on a maintenance budget," said Superintendent John Hoben. The district has reduced spending by $4 million, and the fund balance is at $1.5 million, he said. "That's well below what is safe,"

The district is looking at losing more than $10 million next year, said Hoben. It will lose $3.3 million in state aid when it goes out of formula, and another $7.6 million because of a tax rollback, he said.

PROJECTIONS SHOW state equalized valuation will increase by $259 million next year, he said. Should that occur, a rollback of 4.78 mills would result in the $7.6 million

In-formula districts receive financial aid from the state. Districts go out of formula, losing all state aid, when local property values and tax revenue exceed a set level.

'We've kicked it around 1 pretty hard. It comes back to what is the basic level of education this community wants, and what is it willing to pay? What I see is deterioration," said Hoben.

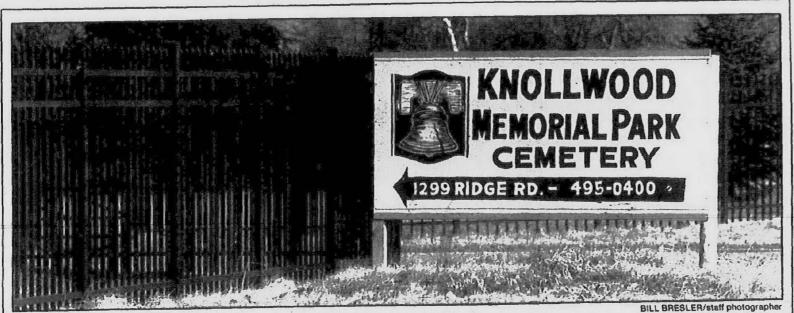

"I feel anything less than the renewed millage and Headlee will result in reduced programs. We need a one-year reprieve from Headlee. I think things will ease out as we go out of formula. Right now we're in deep financial trouble in this school

"We have property values out there to protect that are dependent upon quality schools," the superintendent said. Realtors and homebuyers "are picking up the message that there's trouble in Plymouth-Canton schools and that they may want to stay away from there.

The renewal and a Headlee rollback would reap $5.7 million, enough to restore some program cuts, Hoben said. Cuts have been made in staffing, athletics, the attendance office and other areas.

TRUSTEE DEAN Swartzwelter said, "First, we have to have the renewal. There's no question about that. Second, we all know we need 4

Tips pour in on rape suspect

By Peggy Aulino staff writer

Canton police have received more than 55 tips since releasing a composite sketch of a man who is suspected of sexually assaulting two women in a Canton cemetery

However, there have been no arrests in the Thursday abduction and assault of a 37-year-old Taylor woman, said township police.

The woman was abducted in Dearborn Heights at about 3 a.m. when she ran out of gas, police said. They said her assailant lured her into his car by offering her a ride to a service station.

He drove her to Knollwood Memorial Park on Ridge Road, and raped her, police said, adding that the woman was able to escape from the car after the attack.

The abductor is described as a white man in his mid 20s, with brown curly hair and a mustache. He was wearing jeans and a gold watch and driving an older model brown car with plastic covering the

The sketch was released Monday, and the tips are still coming, said David Boljesic, the department's public information officer.

Calls about the case have come from Wayne, Washtenaw, Oakland, Macomb and Monroe counties, he said. They range from people saying, "I saw such and such a car in my neighborhood" to those who "are actually naming people that might be involved," Boljesic said.

"Some look more fruitful than others, but we have to investigate them all," he said. "Just following up the leads is going to take several weeks."

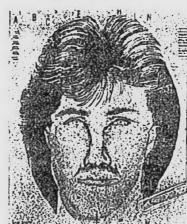

Police believe last week's incident is linked to a similar case reported in August. In that incident, a Westland woman was picked up in rn and taken to the same cemetery.

Canton police have increased patrols near the cemetery.

"Any time somebody rapes once, they are capable of doing it more than once," said Boljesic. Rapists "just don't generally stop because they've had enough.'

The reason for that may be a lack of successful treatment programs for offenders, according to Elizabeth Radcliffe, the coordina-

Township man arraigned on arson charge

Guy Zukowski of Plymouth Township was arraigned on arson charges Monday in connection with a fire at Heritage Square Apartments at 300 N. Mill that left 10 people homeless Nov. 4.

Zukowski, 25, suffered burns over half his body in the fire and explo-sion that started in his apartment in Old Village. A second person suffered minor injuries.

Judge John MacDonald of 35th District Court entered a plea of not guilty for Zukowski, who was released on $10,000 personal bond after his arraignment Monday after-

MACDONALD SET a pretrial examination for 9 a.m. Friday.

Zukowski's arraignment capped an investigation by the Plymouth Fire Department and the Michigan State Police that took nearly three months.

Zukowski turned himself in at the Plymouth police station about 1 p.m. Monday, said Plymouth Fire Chief Alan Matthews. A warrant for Zukowski's arrest was obtained from the Wayne County Prosecutor's office Friday.

Most of the contributions have been on the order of $10 to $25, said the Rev. Stanley Jenkins, treasurer

Jenkins said a direct-mail campaign to residents in the city and township of Plymouth has just been launched. Business solicitations went out earlier this week.

Janitor's job in federal program led to assistant director's post

In days gone by, Jack Stoddard would have been called a rink rat or the Cultural Center about 10 years ago as part of a federally funded program. City officials thought so highly of Stoddard's work and his rapport with children that they found a place for him on its staff when the federal program ended.

"He's a super person," said Chuck Skene, recreation director in Plym-

"He's a wonderful man," echoed Theresa McKendry, a skating teacher and director. "He's concerned about kids. Kids love him. Kids kind of treat him like a grandfather."

you're around young people you stay young. It keeps your mind young." On a recent afternoon, Stoddard set up shop near an entrance to the ice surface.

He juggled a stack of musical tapes to which young figure skaters practiced. He found a screwdriver for another skater to tighten a loose blade. He cheerfully responded to a request to bump up the heat. Stoddard exchanges smiles — and "I KNOW all these kids out there," he said, rattling off names.

"These kids are so nice, you don't mind doing things for them. As long , as I'm working with these girls, they never swear. None of 'em smoke. They're the nicest kids."

Stoddard said he especially admires the lone boy he notices who turns out to practice figure routines.
"Other boys laugh," Stoddard said,

"It takes more stamina and more guts, I think, to figure skate than to play hockey."

Delmore fell in love with the Plymouth community while visiting in 1980 and decided to stay, said Monica Ewing, a friend.

Delmore took a job as stage manager for the Actors Renaissance Theater in Detroit. She subsequently worked as an administrator for the Plymouth Community Council on Aging and at Frank's Nursery.

DELMORE WAS studying nursing at Schoolcraft College when she became ill, Ewing said.

"She just loved Plymouth and had a lot of activities there," Ewing said. "She was a go-getter, the most comedic person I ever met. She was very confident and seemed to draw people to her."

Delmore completed firefighter training and became a volunteer for the city in 1984. She cited a desire to serve the community for getting involved in that activity.

"She was a very ambitious employee once she came on, the type of person we needed in the department," said Al Matthews, fire chief. "She played a very active role. She didn't sit in the back-

Now is the winter of our discontent?

Sorry, Bill (Shakespeare). Not this year. Not in western Wayne County. With a dizzying array of wintertime recreation activities available to them, residents should be anything but morose during the winter

From traditional activities such as ice skating and skiing, to the offbeat like snowboarding and winter golf, there's enough to please even the most ardent outdoor types.

And when the thermometer drops below zero - making it too cold for many outdoor activities - there's always the bowling alley or (for couch potatoes) the good old videocassette recorder to turn to.

For local rink rats, there are winter hockey leagues and figure skating clubs in most communities.

HOCKEY PARENTS should this winter expect to pay $260-$350 to equip young players. The world's fastest sport never claimed to be the world's cheapest.

The equipment has improved greatly in recent years, said Bob

Shop in Livonia, which features hockey equipment prominently among its wares each winter. The equipment gets lighter, more durable and more protective each year,

Griffin, whose son played college hockey in Wisconsin, said the biggest growth may be among older players, in the 25-30 year old range. The hockey generation has grown up. There are fewer kids playing, he

"Back in the early 1970s, it just exploded when they built all the rinks," Griffin said.

But, he said, the success in recent years of the Red Wings has contributed to the popularity of the sport among locals.

The cost of a pair of figure skates is $55-$275, and a pair of hockey skates is about $200.

Figure skating, he said, seems to continually growing, especially in Olympic years, and among men and

"FROM WHAT I've read, every year that the Olympics are on television, on those years you see the number of people interested in the sport increases," said Michael Keyanchuk, president of the Garden City Figure Skating Club.

He said the club, which has a num-Griffin, owner of Griffin's Sport ber of top-rated skaters, began about 10 years ago with 18-20 skaters. There are now 70 skaters, 140 total, including parental members, and growing each year, Keyanchuk said: Most are under 18.

The club hosts a competition this February for skaters from around Michigan and Ohio. The club's major function is to allow members to compete in the United States Figure Skating Association meets.

Competitive skating, he said, is a demanding sport. "If your a competitive skater you have to be on the ice a lot because you know other skaters are on the ice a lot." Keyanchuck said his daughter skates 20 hours a week. The club home is Garden City Civic Arena.

There is cross country skiing in Hines Park and on some public golf courses, including both Idyl Wyld and Wispering Willows in Livonia.

Despite mild weather, the downhill ski season is in full swing at area

But downhill skiers are sharing the slopes this year with a relatively new wintertime activity - snow-

THE SPORT is a hybrid of skiing, skateboarding and surfing and is "a lot of fun," said Brian Sherman of Canton Township.

Sherman, 16, has been an avid snowboarder for a couple of years and says adults in their 20s and 30s are beginning to pick up on the sport in addition to teenagers.

Alpine Valley and Mount Brighton are among the local resorts which welcome snowboarders. But Sherman said any local sledding hill can be used as well.

Snowboarders launch themselves down a hill or ski slope and "ride" the snow to the bottom. Hills are often equipped with half-pipes, a man-made series of banks that allow snowbearders to do flips and other

"It looks scary, but its really safer than skiing because your feet are together on one board, instead of on two separate skis," Sherman said.

Snowboards - which look like surfboards (no bottom fin though) with boot bindings attached - are available at sporting goods stores and ski shops. They range in price from $50 to $500, Sherman said.

Some of the cheaper models that don't feature hard, plastic-coated bottoms aren't allowed at ski resorts, Sherman said.

A snowboarder will also have to wear good, insulated boots with heavy soles. Sorell or other brands popular among snowmobilers are good, Sherman said.

All that is fine and dandy if you're a true winter sports enthusiast. But recreation activities available to them, residents should be anything but morose during the winter months.

With a dizzying array of wintertime what about golf fanatics? Where do they go when the greens turn white. To Redford.

THE GLENHURST Golf Club, on Six Mile at Telegraph is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekends all winter long, weather permitting.

Club manager Bill Everman said the number of winter golfers is on

"If it (the weather) isn't too bad, we might have 40 people out on the course at one time," he said. The club runs a scrambles competition if there are enough players.

Everman said players use orange balls for easier spotting and play continues even with an inch or two of snow on the ground. Anything more than that and the course will probably be closed though.

Fees are $4 for nine holes and $7 for 18. Golfers should call in advance (592-8758) to make sure the course is open. For the golfer who isn't quite ready to forsake comfort in order to hone his or her craft, there's the indoor golf dome at Oasis Golf Center, I-275 at Six Mile in Livonia.

The dome features a computerized indoor driving range that automati-cally figures the distance of any ball

The golf dome is open seven days a week. Fees range between $6 and $8 per half-hour, depending on day and time. For information call Oasis,

If you'd rather just hibernate from now through April, well, there's always your VCR.

NEW RELEASES this winter include "Red Heat", "Bull Durham" and "Die Hard" and "A Fish Called Wanda" (Feb. 26), said Regina Cobb, assistant manager of the Blockbuster Video store on Ford at Wayne Road, Westland.

The store also rents videocassette recorders ($9.95 for two days) on an availability basis.

Got cold feet for winter sports? Try striking out

Skiing? On snow? Ha! That's for people who have a death wish, or at least a gold card when it comes to their health insurance coverage.

Just because the traditional, outdoor winter sports aren't your forte doesn't mean you have to sit around and vegetate.

You can always go bowling. In fact, fall and winter are the height of the bowling season. Local lanes have leagues and tournaments by the score. Even if you're a novice, there are programs designed just for you. Take the "3-6-9 Tournament," held every other Sunday at the Super Bowl in Canton Township. Bowlers mark their score sheets with a strike in every third, sixth and ninth frame

- even if they throw a gutter ball. THE SUNDAY night tourney, which begins at 8:30 p.m., is open to all bowlers. For $9 a person, bowlers get four games, a mystery game and shoe rental. The Super Bowl also features league bowling on Monday, Thursday and Sunday nights, said manager Sandy Combs. Bowlers can be in leagues that meet once a month, every third week or every other week. The $4.95 per session fee includes three games and shoe rental.

You can form a team with three friends, or just show up and you'll be placed on a team.

"Just raping somebody makes you weird, and doing it there makes you twice as weird," he said. "But where do you start to look for the culprit?" The perpetrator of such a crime is probably an angry person who uses sex as a means of punishing and degrading his victims, according to Radcliffe, who said experts classify rapes in three categories.

"One is anger, another is power and control, and those two amount to 95 percent of rapes that occur," she said. "The other 5 percent are what are called sadistic rapes . . . which are by far the rarest form of (sexual)

When a rapist is acting out of anger, he stalks the victim or approaches her innocently, perhaps asking for directions, she said. Such a rapist usually beats the victim. A rapist who is motivated by a desire for power and control "usually uses only enough force to achieve sexual submission," she said, while a sadistic rapist may go as far as murdering his victim.

"Part of why these categories are useful is they get rape out of the realm of 'He was acting out of sexu-al desire.' It's not a crime of sex; it's a crime of violence and power and control," Radcliffe said.

The recent incident in Canton "sounds like an anger rape, given the amount of threat," said Radcliffe.

The victim suffered bruises to her face and was hit and bitten by the assailant, the police report said. Her injuries required medical treatment at a hospital emergency room. The woman told police her attacker said he would "cut her into little pieces and bury her in the cemetery" if she

Radon: 'Silent killer' found in area homes

Radon is an odorless, colorless, tasteless gas. It's also a potential killer. It could be in your home.

It's not the product of a man-made disaster. But over time, radon's devastation could be as great as that of any Chernobyl.

Nearly every American is at risk of radon exposure, according to the federal Environmental Protection Agency. And nearly everyone exposed to radon on a continuing basis is at risk of developing lung cancer.

That's the scary news. The encouraging news is that radon exposure can easily be reduced or prevented.

Radon comes from the ground. It is a radioactive gas formed naturally when radium breaks down. Radon seeps into homes through cracks in basements and foundation slabs or openings for sump pumps and Utlimately, radon is the third step in the natural decay of uranium. Because of the radioactivity involved, radon exposure has been linked to the nation's use in lung cancer, particularly the rising cancer rate among non-smokers.

Radon is commonly found in Mich-

"WE USED to think it was a 'mining country' problem — Pennsylva-nia and maybe the UP," said Alex Johnson, a spokesman for the American Lung Association, Southfield. 'We don't think that anymore. In fact, we encourage everyone to test

It is estimated radon could be found is as many as one out of every five Oakland County houses and as many as one in 10 in Wayne County.

Though testing is far from complete, varying traces of radon have been discovered in nearly 900 houses in the section of Oakland County stretching southwest from Birmingham to Farmington — and 400 more in Novi alone — according to the local lung association office.

Western Wayne County communities also appear at risk.

"THE RULE of thumb in Wayne County is the farther west you go, the greater risk you run," Johnson

(For a detailed breakdown of radon levels already found in area houses, see chart.)

Despite its scary nature, radon can be easily and inexpensively detected and remedied.

But unless tests are done, there's no way of knowing whether or to what degree radon is present in a

Each of us could be exposed to radon every day without knowing it.

Exposure to heavily diluted radon in the outdoor air could produce a radiation level equal to 20 chest Xrays per year, according to the EPA.

ries, a commonly accepted measure of radiation. According to EPA studies, radon generally can't be reduced below 4 pico-curies per liter of air once it.

Exposure is measured in pico-cu-

Radon, a substance commonly found in Michigan soil, is considered a reason behind the rise in lung cancer among nonsmokers. The chart shows the number of area homes tested for radon by the American Lung Association and the corresponding cancer risk, compared with that of a normal nonsmoker, radon-removal isn't undertaken. Radon exposure substantially increases the cancer risk for smokers, the lung association said. Figures give no indication whether people in any community are more or less likely to have radon in their homes than people in any other community. The association recommends all homeowners, including those in most mobile homes, as well as most apartment dwellers test for radon.

a terrific expense to do so," said radon expert Les Johnson of the EPA regional office in Chicago. "There is a great deal of confusion about that number. It doesn't have to be that level in basements, for instance, but it should at least be that level in living rooms.'

EVEN AT the 4 piC per liter level, those exposed could run a risk of developing lung cancer up to five times greater than that of a normal nonsmoker.

Exposure at levels above 20 piC per liter, is equivalent to a two-packa-day cigarette habit for nonsmokers. Levels that high have already been found among houses in the Livonia, West Bloomfield and

For smokers, high-level exposure can be even more devastating.

When you add smoking as another factor, we know the result doesn't add to the risk, it multiplies the risk," the lung association's Johnson said. "It's not one-plus-one, it could be one times 100."

Left unchecked, continued radon exposure is almost certainly fatal. Lung cancer, the fastest growing type of cancer among U.S. adults, has one of the lowest survival rates.

Amercan Lung Association experts say 95 percent of all lung cancer patients will die within five years once cancer has been detected.

The highest level reported in southeast Michigan to date has been 120 piC per liter, a radiation level approaching 20,000 chest X-rays per year. The highest in the state has been 162 piC per liter reported by an Upper Peninsula homeowner.

New houses are no safer from radon exposure than are old ones, he said. Nor are houses with radon-free neighbors. "There's really no pat-tern," Alex Johnson said.

ADVANCE SOIL testing is almost worthless, experts believe, because radon levels in the ground don't necessarily correspond to those in hous-

The highest level recorded in the U.S., over 2,000 piC per liter, was found in a new house occupied by a Pennsylvania man whose body contained so much radiation it consistently tripped the warning system of the nuclear power plant where he worked.

That man's story, revealed in 1985, helped turn radon into a na-tional issue. But nearly four years before that, researchers were examining radon exposure as a possible explanation for the rise in smoker lung cancer. Because radon comes from the ground, soil containing uranium, or granite and shale, or soil exposed to certain types of industrial waste, are likely to produce the gas. Everyone should test for radon, lung association specialists said, except those who live above the second floor in an apartment building.

People with homes, whether over a basement, slab or crawlspace; should test," Johnson said. "People who live on first or second floor of an apartment building, or in mobile homes on a permanent foundation should also test."

There are two simple, accurate tests that can be conducted by the average homeowner. The least expensive is called the charcoal cannister test.

CANNISTERS GENERALLY cost $10-$25 and are available at hardware stores, through specialized dealers or through the lung association itself. Some municipalities, including Novi, also sell them at city

Cannisters, resembling sifting pans used by long-ago gold miners, can be placed in basements or first floor living rooms for three to seven days. Experts say they're a good way to detect whether radon is pres-

> Canton area county commissioner Milton Mack is one of the candidates being considered for a vacancy on the Wayne County Circuit Court

Mack, a partner in a Detroit law firm, acknowledged he submitted his name to Gov. James Blanchard's office to fill one of the county court's two vacancies.

"It's not as if I'm unhappy with my seat on the commission," Mack said. "But for any attorney, a seat on the circuit bench is a major achieve-

Vacancies were created on the county bench in November when judges Thomas Brennan and Maureen Reilly were elected to seats on the new 1st District Michigan Court of Appeals. Appointments to fill the two vacancies are expected before the end of February, Mack said.

MACK, D-WAYNE, would have to resign his commission seat if appointed. Commissioners would have 30 days to appoint a successor, under a provision of the county charter. Because Mack is in the first year of his two-year term, the successor would serve until a special election could be called. County officials speculated the election could occur as early as June, depending upon the timing of the appointments.

The interim commissioner would have to be a Democrat. The special election, however, would be open to all political parties.

County building is site Workplace radon is also at issue for child care program

Children will play on the grounds of the Wayne County Building, after a day care is added to the site at 600 Randolph, Detroit.

Wayne County plans to spend $350,000 to develop a day care center for children of county employees. The center is being developed in conjunction with the Merrill-Palmer Institute of Wayne State Palmer Institute of Wayne State University, a nationally recognized center for child care development.

A day care center for about 90 youngsters will be added to an open room on the building's first floor, beginning May 1. A cannon outside the building's Congress Street exit will be moved to create an outdoor

McNamara said in a prepared statement. "Too often, employers are shirking that responsibility."

The one-time $350,000 grant is expected to save the county money over time, McNamara said, by curbing employee absences. Absences cost the county $100,000 a year in lost productivity, McNamara said

A non-profit corporation has been created to oversee center operations. Deputy county executive Michael Duggan is corporation chairman, county Commissioner Arthur Blackwell, D-Detroit, is vice chairman. Parents of children using the service will also serve on the board.

Home is not the only place we can come into contact with radon. Traces may also be present in the work place or at school. Thus far, however, both sources have been ignored in the rush to increase home

"What we're trying to do is to develop protocol for going into public buildings and testing," said Alex Johnson of the American Lung Association, Southfield.

Another health threat, asbestos, is already being removed from public buildings under state and federal law. Similar laws could speed radon reduction, Johnson said, but speed is a relative term.

Though asbestos has been an ac-knowledged threat since the early 1970s, many municipalities and school districts are only now getting around to removing asbestos-tinged

Because radon has a short half-life, experts believe it's unlikely food is contaminated.

RADON REDUCTION, however, is considered a less-difficult process. "I think radon is a simpler problem than asbestos, here it's eliminating the source, with asbestos there's all that removal."

Because radon has a short halflife, changing into less-threatening substances in less than four days, experts believe it's unlikely food is con-

Nonetheless, radon is just one of many threats in our personal atmos-

Carbon monexide poisoning is another risk, espe-cially in winter, when wood or kero-sene is burned in defective or improperly ventilated stoves and heaters. Formaldebyde, a suspected cancer-causing agent, may also seep into houses through paneled floors or walls, furniture or carpeting. Assestos may still be a threat in some older houses.

EVEN SUCH common household items as bleach, paint and aerosol sprays can be dangerous if improperly stored or used in rooms that are improperly ventilated.

"If there's something good that can come out of radon, it's that human beings are becoming more concerned about the quality of air around them," Johnson said.

"What people need to realize, though, is that the reading is that of the last day the cannister was there," the EPA's Johnson said. "The average level could be higher or lower than that." Alpha track detectors, costlier than the canisters at $20-$50, can test for longer periods of time. Slightly resembling a car's oil filter, the alpha track detectors are useful for up to a year, if necessary, in determining average radon levels in a

More elaborate methods, including pressurizing or depressurizing a house, are suggested in an EPA booklet on radon reduction. (The booklet is available by writing the regional EPA office: 230 S. The EPA recommends seriously questioning a contractor whose bid comes in well above $1,500 for most methods.

Repairs, though, are strictly at the homeowners' expense. There's no government assistance program, though tax credits have been discussed in some states.

Building code changes are recommended for home builders to eliminate radon as a future threat. "We know radon can be 'built out' of homes if the proper guidelines are followed,' Johnson said.

A report on radon has been given to Gov. James Blanchard for review, Johnson said. It should be available "any day now" he added.
From there, legislators may take action, as they have done in other states, including New Jersey, Mary-land, Pennsylvania and Florida.

Changes in the state building code. regulations for those in the radon-testing business, as well as a law re-quiring testing in public buildings, could be a result of the report's publication. A radon center has already been established on the Unversity of Michigan's main Ann Arbor campus. The center, designed to train professionals in radon dangers and remedies, has been hailed as an important first step in eliminating Michigan's radon problem.

Area Red Cross honors volunteer

Gordon Hunter of Livonia has been named volunteer of the year by the northwest regional office of the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Hunter's selection was announced at a recent volunteer awards ceremony. Hunter, who has been with the Red Cross since retiring four years ago, volunteered 634 hours last year. His wife Cathy, a nurse, is em-ployed by the Red Cross.

Hunter said his wife is partly re-consible for his volunteer activities, often calling him to help out on blood drives when she is short-handed. "She says, 'Gordon, get over here,' and I always do what I'm told," said

His willingness to pitch in and cooperate, even on a moment's notice, has made Hunter a favorite among northwest regional office Red Cross

The Red Cross now has many volunteer opportunities in the northwest region, which includes Livonia, Redford, Canton, Plymouth, Northtential blood donors to schedule ap-pointments, assist on mobile blood units, visit patients in the Veterans Hospital in Allen Park, and perform

The other is "to involve more young people in this party — as Ronald Reagan and George Bush have (on the Republican side)." Lewand, 42, of Bloomfield Town-

THE OAKLAND style is to have a part-time policy-making chair and a detail person as executive director.

"Tom will be a catalyst to do things," said Larry Deitch, a Birmingham attorney and party treasurer the last two years.

"The Oakland County Democratic Party is a fine organization, a model for anything," Deitch said. "And Tom's one of us."

"It works very well," said current two-term Democratic chairman Louis Miller of Franklin. "It allows the chair to step in and pull all the pieces together. There is more freedom on the part of the chair to promote universal Democratic inter-

KAY PENNER, former executive director in Oakland and now chief of staff in Blanchard's labor department, said:

Added Mary Ryan Taras, former county Democratic chair and a Birmingham high school teacher:

I would talk to Kay two or three times a day. I made the contacts with the officers and candidates. Her job was putting it together and causing it to happen.

"Tve known Tom Lewand a good many years. This guy doesn't know what part time is. There's no question we will get a full-time chairman. His law practice will be scaled

THERE'S NO job description yet, and no pay scale, for either the new chair or executive director.

"The jobs pay in the $60s (thousands) now. All that's going to change," Lewand said in an interview in a Cobo Hall corridor. He said he expected to be paid less than retiring chair Rick Wiener, 41, of Lansing.

Marya Sieminski, Wiener's chief aide, has left and today is scheduled to be appointed to a new $50,000 post as fiscal adviser to the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

On an interim basis, the chief staff person in the old brick house on Townsend Street in Lansing is Ann Beser, but Lewand said, "She doesn't want to stay. I offered her a chance to stay on.

Meetings need better format

E'VE WATCHED as members of the public anxiously sit at public meetings waiting to have their say. They're often seated quietly in the backs of halls and meeting rooms in Plymouth, probably feeling a little like Jimmy Stewart did in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington."

They'll have their say, if they just wait. The political system works, they're sure of it. It's my government, they'll listen to me.

And most governments do. But the timing is often bad. The public comment portion of meetings often come at the end of a long evening of

THE OTHER night at the Plymouth-Canton school board meeting it was after 10 p.m. when members of the public were finally able to get a word in edgewise.

The situation wasn't fair to either the board members or the public. There were probably some residents there with some good ideas about the school district's financial woes. And there were probably some board members there who would have listened to those ideas.

But when they are expressed at the end of a long night, that usually follows a long working day for the public and board members, those ideas usually aren't heard as well as they would have been earlier in the evening.

We think better ways should be found to allow members of the public to speak.

The function of government is to discuss issues and make decisions that affect us at public meetings. They should hear from us before making those decisions.

Too often, the public is kept from speaking up at those meetings because there isn't adequate time or the schedule of the meeting doesn't allow

It's our opinion that a brief amount of time should be scheduled between the discussion of an issue and the decision made.

We're not calling for prolonged public hearings but for adequate time for the mainstream of thought on the issue to be presented to the board or commission from the public.

WE'VE BEEN to enough public meetings to realize that too much public debate about an issue does nothing but make the meeting longer and more difficult for officials and the public.

We think better ways should be found to allow members of the public to speak.

There are questions: What's enough debate? Should there be a time limit given to each member of the public? Should people be cut off when they speak too long?

The respective governmental bodies will have to make their own decisions about those questions, but here are our suggestions:

• Speakers should have a five minute time limit. If you can't say it in a couple of minutes, it's probably not worth saying. Time limits force people to say things quickly and bluntly. That's the kind of feedback officials need.

 Somebody should time speakers and warn them when they are getting close to the limit.

Government could also help the situation by holding regular public comment sessions at the beginning of the meeting. They should be on the meeting's agenda.

WE FEEL that the earlier the comment session in the meeting the better. Politicians could use those suggestions when dealing with the matters coming up later in the meeting. Also, early sessions during which residents could make general comments about government, would probably heighten the interest of residents. Their voices would be heard early in the evening, when they would be remembered by the politicians.

But while we think governments should be sensitive to allowing members of the public to speak, we also think the public should be polite when speaking to boards and commissions.

Often meetings end in shouting matches.

Also, public comments shouldn't take the place of public hearings. If a governmental body sees that many residents want to speak on a certain issue, it would be wise to hold a public hearing on

Worthy causes

Don't make them beg for funds

ACH YEAR at tax time, some worthy causes become beggars. It's repetitious, expensive and degrading for the Children's Trust Fund and the Non-game Wildlife Fund to trot out sob stories in order to induce taxpayers to keep them going. In past years, the state income tax form contained a checkoff line. It allowed you to donate part of your tax refund to those two state programs, but it was usable only by the 1.5 million taxpayers entitled to a refund. This year Lansing is making it even easier. State Treasurer Robert A. Bowman points to lines 24 and 25 of the 1988 Michigan Income Tax Return MI-1040, saying voluntary contributions may be designated for either fund by entering the amount you want to donate. This will either increase your tax due or reduce your refund. It means 4.5 million taxpayers can contribute. That is supposed to be progress.

The Children's Trust Fund collected $1.7 mil-Jion at its peak (1986) from 200,000 taxpayers. Last year its take dropped to $927,000 from 156,000 contributors.

The Non-game Wildlife Fund received a bit more than $500,000 from some 89,000 designated

The gimmick of asking for voluntary contribu-tions began with the children's fund during the deep recession of 1979-82. We are now in the seventh year of economic recovery, but still this

Each year at tax time, some worthy causes become beggars. It's repetitious, expensive and degrading for the Children's Trust Fund and the Non-game Wildlife Fund to trot out sob stories in order to induce taxpayers to keep them going.

this area, the Association for Retarded Citizens (Oakland County) received $11,610; Common Ground (Birmingham — parenting skills), $8,915; Childrens Protection Program of Mercy Hospital, $12,500; Wayne County Intermediate School District (pregnant teens service), $20,000; YMCA of Western Wayne County (Inkster - family resource centers), $22,717; and so on.

The Non-game Wildlife Fund supports programs for the peregrine falcon, eagles, loons, timber wolves and other endangered species, and surveys of bogs, wetlands and prairies.

BIG QUESTION: Are $1 million for the children's fund and $500,000 for wildlife enough? Just the right amount? Too much?

No one makes a rational, collective decision. What the funds get is determined by how softhearted a taxpayer feels at the moment he/she hits lines 24 and 25 of MI-1041.

There's, a better way. The state Legislature, composed of 148 more or less rational souls, should find money in the budget for these programs if it agrees they are worthy causes. No money? Nonsense. In a year of a supposedly "tight" budget, the Legislature in 1988 scraped up $7.3 million for Gov. James Blanchard's Neighborhood Builders Alliance, a system of grants to community groups to improve their neighborhoods. That $7.3 million was almost five times as much as the Children's Trust Fund and Non-game Wildlife Fund received through begging.

We won't be so mean-spirited as to say "don't give to these funds." We think it would be better, however, for you to write your local state repremake money available in the budget to stop child abuse and save wild animals rather than to pass the buck by making them beg.

Senior aid is appreciated is appreciated

To the editor:

For most of us, the holidays are a time of celebration, reverence and family gatherings, but for many individuals, especially older adults, it's a time of isolation and hunger.

The Senior Alliance has initiated a program to address the needs of nomebound seniors. Our Holiday Meals-on-Wheels program began at Thanksgiving and has become successful because of the large amount of community support. It has been wonderful to see the number of individuals and organizations that truly appreciate what they have and give so willingly to others.

Our sincerest thanks go out to the dozens of volunteers who gave up a portion of their holiday to visit those individuals who were alone. Young and old alike came from many communities to participate and often brought a homemade gift to accompany the meal.

Also, a word of praise must go to the three area hospitals — Riverside Osteopathic, Botsford General and Westland Medical Center — who prepared more than 600 meals for us during Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Thank you all for your invaluable assistance and desire to make some-one else's holiday a little happier, Martin Fleming, chairman of the board

I would like to let you know what a truly fantastic, honest person Francis Saragosa is by what she demonstrated during the holiday season. Sunday, Dec. 16, I had done some early morning Christmas shop-ping at Meijer Thrifty Acres. My daughter needed baby food and other items, so I rushed to obtain these goods. I carried them out to my car in the shopping cart and carefully loaded the groceries. In my rushing, I had left my purse in the shopping cart unattended.

Two days before this incident, I had borrowed over $2,000 from the credit union to purchase some living room furniture in addition to getting paid by the Plymouth Schools. In my purse were $50 in cash plus an assortment of credit cards and other important items.

I returned home not noticing my purse was missing. I was busily wrapping presents when the phone rang that morning. A lady said my whole name. I assumed it was my mom's best friend checking to see when she would arrive from Florida. Francis identified herself telling me she found my purse in the shop-ping cart and seeing money decided to call me instead of giving it to the store manager for fear of theft. She told me where I was to meet her to retrieve my purse

I am grateful for this wonderful woman who came into my life on this eventful day. I will forever be indebted to this fantastic person. I have shared this incident with my colleagues and students I teach.

I have always tried to be honest and pass this message on to my students. I am still at a loss for words in expressing my gratitude to this won-derful person. Knowing such an honest person has enriched my life and restored my faith that there are still honest people in this world.

To the editor:

After reading the article about the decrease in crime in our township, I feel this is the perfect opportunity to commend Chief Carl Berry, Deputy Chief Snider, and all of our police officers for a job well done. For if they weren't doing their jobs, the crime rate would not be going down.

For example, are the residents aware that our police officers will check their homes while away on vacation? This is not just a drive-by. The officer will get out of his patrol car and check the entire grounds. They even look into the house with a flashlight to make sure everything is

My cable company, which serves many communities in these parts, has kicked up the rate for basic service three times since I first began subscribing in August 1984 for $8.25

IN FEBRUARY 1987, the rate went to $10.25. Now that looks like only a $2 increase, but work it out in percentage terms.

It's a 24-percent increase in 21/2 years, or 9.7 percent a year. That was more than double the rate of consumer price inflation.

In February 1988, the company increased its rate another $2 to $12.25. That's a 19.5-percent increase in one year, quadruple the rate of inflation.

The latest rate takes effect this month - an increase of $1.70 to $13.95. That's an increase of 13.9 percent in one year, more than triple the rate of inflation.

Overall since I first began subscribing, the basic rate has risen 69 percent in 41/2 years, or 15.3 percent

A pretty sorry record, if you ask

By the way, I had to calculate all those percentages myself after dig-ging out old bills. The cable company's letter said only that it was kicking up the rate by $1.70 from $12.25

Very sloppy reasoning. It's like saying we're doubling the price of coffee from $3 to $6 a pound, but your total grocery bill is only going from $100 a week to $103 a week, so it's a meager 3-percent increase in your total bill, not a 100-percent increase for coffee.

Frustrations are increasing among cable customers, if I may phrase it that way. There is a lot of waiting for VCR prices to drop before decisions are made to terminate cable service.

Fred DeLano, the fellow who usually fills this space, is far from home, in a California hospital, bedridden with pneumonia. He was on a tour of the country, as his regular readers know by the reports he was filing along the way. I didn't talk to Fred much about his tour, or why he was taking it. I suspect that after a cancer operation last year and the death of his beloved wife, Olga, whom his readers knew as Mother Goose, he needed a change of scenery.

A lot of you know Fred through his knack for local reporting, which he has honed to a fine art. Once, on a trip to the Southwest, he opened a phone book and checked for familiar names of people who might have relocated from our circulation area. He thought you might have wanted to know how your former neighbors were doing.

Fred always talks to people in bars, too - or, more likely, saloons, as he calls them. He wants to know what people are thinking and believes the best way to find out is to ask. That's the essence of local re-

For that matter, it would seem there can't be too many people in Plymouth, Farmington, Detroit, Ann Arbor and other points who haven't warmed a bar stool with him and whiled away an afternoon, listening to him tell stories of covering the Tigers or what it was like in the newspaper business way back when someone would actually show up when you yelled for a copy boy.

Sometimes we get a little impatient with Fred. Every now and then he'll write a column, and a few us think we may have to take a connecting flight to get to the point. But then he shows us up by batting out a column second to none, such as the tribute he wrote about Jim Abbott, the one-handed star athlete.

Fred has only one hand, by the way, due to a birth defect. He has never made a big deal about it. It never stopped him from typing as rapidly or driving a golf ball as far as anyone else. In the winter, he wears a red mitten on the arm without the hand. He doesn't make a big deal about much of anything. Regardless of what's going on, his columns keep coming — and kept coming — even when his wife died.

So frankly, I'm surprised this made print. I was betting Fred's col. umn would have come spitting out of the fax machine by now. In my mind's eye, I had a picture of him, rolling down the hospital hallway in a wheelchair and robe, taking a corner on one wheel and speeding toward the nurse's station, screaming for a fax machine and yelling about his deadline.

I don't know about the rest of you, but I like Fred because he's tough and does what he believes a journalist should do — roam around and write with flair about the things people really want to know about. He studied the great writers and is particularly fond of the ironic short stoe ries of O. Henry. Fred has his faults; like the rest of us, but there's no doubt in my mind that he'd walk through a hail of bullets to get a story. I think that's something all of us would like to think we'd do.

THE TOUGHEST story he even had to write was the death of his oldest son in an auto accident. His eyes red and brimming with tears, Fred trudged into the newsroom after hours and batted out the obituary. His writing was tasteful and concise, his typing letter perfect.

He's given a lot of young journalists good advice, a beer, a cigarette and a kick in the pants when they've needed it. And he's given his readers lively commentary about their own home towns - something you can't get anywhere else.

So, all in all, we appreciate Fred around here. If you're a friend of Fred's, or appreciate the steady, stream of community coverage he's put on these pages off and on for most of the past 22 years, then drop him a get-well card at The Observer

New bridge would boost trade pact — McNamara

By Wayne Peal staff writer

A new bridge to Canada is the key to helping metro Detroit benefit from the new U.S./Canada free trade pact, Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara said.

Traffic tie-ups at the Detroit/ Windsor border must be overcome if a free trade zone is to be established within the metro area, McNamara

'We're very concerned about the lack of sufficient transportation across the Detroit River," he said. "If you drive by the Ambassador Bridge it looks like a parking lot."

IMPROVING TRUCK traffic across the border must be a a major county goal, McNamara said, though he added the county need not build the bridge itself.

While county and Canadian representatives have met to discuss the problem, McNamara said the bridge or tunnel would probably be financed by private, not public, mon-

People with disabilities appreciate courtesy

BILL BRESLER/staff photographe

Clarkston resident Frank Glowzinski works on a crafts project. He's among clients who come to the Easter Seal Society of Oakland County facility in Pontiac.

staff writer

Clients of the Easter Seal Society of Oakland County have some definite ideas about disability etiquette. They appreciate being treated like others, and don't want the primary focus to be on their disability.

"I would just have to say don't be afraid of them," said Marcie Rathsburg of Clarkston. "People are afraid of the unknown."

Rathsburg, who has multiple sclerosis, uses an electric cart and a walker to get around. She comes to the Easter Seal facility in Pontiac for physical therapy and recreational therapy.

People with disabilities may need more time to do certain tasks, she said. They may or may not need assistance from others; it's fine to ask if that's the case.

"Generally if people need help, they'll say yes," Rathsburg said. Asking if someone needs help is better than ignoring that person.

"I DON'T think you can ignore it." Some people become so uncomfortable in the presence of those with disabilities that they act as if those people aren't there.

Others go to the opposite extreme. "They're almost tripping over themselves trying to do something,"

Rathsburg said with a smile. "We can find amusement out of the other world too."

It's important to speak directly with a person who has a disability.

"If my husband goes with me, they speak to him." Rathsburg wants people to ask her how she's doing. She doesn't care for the use of the word "handicapped."

"Everybody in the world's handicapped, because not everybody can do everything. So 'disabled' is bet-

PEOPLE ARE often unaware of the trials and tribulations involved in having a disability, he said.

"I never gave it a thought when I was mobile," said Glowzinski, a retired tool and die maker. "But you never know."

He has some basic advice for those who work, shop and live in the presence of those with disabilities.

"Just go about their business. Don't make a big deal out of it."

Glowzinski sometimes gets offers of help when he's putting his wheel-chair into the car. That doesn't bother him.

"I don't like to ask for help. I like to be independent. There are some days where I appreciate any help I can get."

Glowzinski will either say "I can manage" or accept an offer of help, depending on the situation and the

One day, Marlowe saw the Easter Seal Telethon on TV. She recognized a man who used to belong to a dance group she and her husband had joined.

Agency's goal: increased awareness

staff writer

People who have disabilities aren't all that different from others. They need friendship, understanding and acceptance.

"I think always people are afraid of the unknown," said Susan Beauvais, executive director of the Easter Seal Society of Oakland County. People may shy away from forming friendships with those who are disabled; they may fear being put in situations where they'll be uneasy or unsure of what to do.

At the Easter Seal Society, the emphasis is on trying to show clients "as people being as much in the mainstream as you and I. They're husbands, they're wives, they're students. They're people just like any-comb counties are working on the 17th annual Easter Seal Telethon, to be aired on WDIV-TV March 4-5. The fund-raising effort supports Easter Seal programs for people with disabilities.

"WE OFFER a wide variety of services to people with physical disabilities," said Beauvais, who has been with the Easter Seal Society of Oakland County since March 1979. She's been with the organization since 1973, having worked as a program director and deputy director for the state society in Ohio.

Physical therapy, recreational therapy, screening/evaluation services and education and support programs are among those offered. Increasing public awareness of the needs of people with disabilities is part of the Easter Seal Telethon.

Some basic common courtesy can go a long way in helping people with disabilities. It's fine to offer assistance to a person with a disability, but it's best to wait until that offer is accepted before helping.

should be treated as adults. They should be spoken to directly, rather than through a third party.

CHILDREN HAVE a definite advantage in being with disabled people, Beauvais said. With more disabled children being moved into the mainstream in schools, other youngsters are more accustomed to that.

"So children are beginning to have kids with disabilities sitting next to them in a classroom." There's still a lot of educating to do among children, Beauvais said, but youngsters generally aren't as worried about doing something inappropriate.

People with disabilities have a responsibility to teach others "how we can help and what we can do," she

"I don't think we should overaccommodate." A person shouldn't, for example, be allowed to go first in the supermarket line simply because he has a disability.

If you feel you've done something inappropriate, it's fine to say "I'm sorry. It's as simple as that. Any time you have new experiences, you're going to make mistakes."

Statistics indicate that one in eight people will have a significant temporary or permanent disability at some

"If you can't, it's really no big deal because the person is used to that kind of situation." Using an expression such as "I'll see you later" in the presence of a blind person is no cause for embarrassment. That and phrases such as We'll be running along" are accept; ed expressions.

IT'S IMPORTANT not to use derogatory terms in describing people with disabilities. At the Easter Seal Society, the preferred term is "people with disabilities."

Dealing with the decline of his grandmother's health was difficult for the Rev. Drexel Morton. Morton, the assistant pastor at St. Michael Lutheran Church in Canton, spoke during a Thursday, Jan. 26, meeting of the Friend to Friend group at Plymouth Court.

The Rev. Drexel Morton is looking forward to traveling south to visit his grandmother this summer.

There was a time when Morton wasn't as good about staying in touch with his grandmother. He didn't write or call her for a period of eight months to a year after she'd gone into a residential care facility in Georgia.

Morton, assistant pastor at St. Michael Lutheran Church in Canton, met the afternoon of Thursday, Jan. 26, with residents and family members at Plymouth Court.

"All of us are touched by the aging process at one time or anoth-Morton said. "I'm here as a fellow struggler, one who has struggled himself with the issues."

The meeting at Plymouth Court, a nursing home, was held to open the "Friend to Friend" support group series. Residents and family members of all ages were present, as were staff members.

FOR MORTON, it was frustrating to see his grandmother's health decline.

"We had to make some decisions about her future.'

It was not quite two years ago when his grandmother came to Morton's ordination. He saw that she became confused easily and had trouble remembering.

The family decided she would go to a residential care facility in southern Georgia, not too far from her son's home. That meant Morton's grandmother had to leave her home in Florida

"This grandmother I cherish so much was the grandmother who taught me the faith."

His grandmother had lived in southern Virginia before she and her late husband retired to move to Florida. She planted an acre gar-den every year, her flower beds were visions of beauty.

"She was a remarkable woman of great faith and strength and is today," Morton said. He wishes his grandmother could be as capable physically as she once was.

For a time, Morton kept his feelings inside. He didn't write or call his grandmother.

THE MINISTER told Plymouth Court residents that their own family members may be reluctant to visit them for those kinds of rea-

Health care costs: major concern

Marilyn Alimpich, a field representative for the Social Se-Administration, curity discusses changes in Medistaff writer

Paying for health care is an issue of concern for many senior citizens. Keeping track of changes in Medi-care funding is challenging as well. For that reason, many seniors attended a program on changes in Medicare, offered Monday, Jan. 33, by the Plymouth Community Council on Aging.

"As seniors, we're very interested," said Anne Featherstone of Plymouth Township, secretary of the council. She became involved with the council after learning about the problems of canceled supplementary

This is what seniors are interested in. We're not paupers, we're not multi-millionaires."

Most seniors have worked all their lives and now face the prospect of paying for health care, she said. Prescription costs are a particular concern; Featherstone pays about $150

DURING THE meeting at the Plymouth Cultural Center, Marilyn Alimpich, a field representative for the Social Security Administration, talked about changes in Medicare. John Kwasnik, an agent with Bankers Life and Casualty, talked about

Changes in Medicare are the re-sult of the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage Act, signed into law July 1, 1988. Provisions of that act are to be phased in over the next few years, Alimpich said.

It used to be that under Medicare's Part A (hospital insurance) as many as four deductibles per year were allowed. There's now only one annual deductible, set at $560 for 1989. After that, Medicare is to pay 100 percent of approved charges.

Some seniors may feel they're discharged from the hospital too soon. "You can appeal that," Alimpich said. The state has a Peer Review Organization for that purpose. Patients who file appeals may remain in the hospital during that process; if-the appeal is turned down, however, they're liable for the extra charges.

The Peer Review Organization may be reached at 1-800-228-3297. Medicare coverage of skilled nursing care has also been expanded. Part

He recommends that seniors continue to carry supplemental coverage, rather than rely on Medicare

"Full supplemental coverage means exactly what it says," he said. Such coverage is designed to cover all out-of-pocket expenses.

CHANGES IN medicine make such coverage important, Kwasnik said. Some procedures, such as cataract surgery, are now done on an outpatient basis. Even if seniors are required to pay only 20 percent of such costs under Medicare, those costs can add up quickly.

Supplemental coverage is renewable for life, Kwasnik said; optional coverages are available for doctors who do not accept Medicare. "Supplemental coverage is still important."

KWASNIK SPOKE during a Monday, Jan. 23, meeting of the Plymouth Community Council on Aging.

He talked about changes in health insurance needs for senior citizens.

Kwasnik recommended that seniors make use of a qualified agent and company. It's important to work with an agent who can explain details and take the time that's needed.

He also recommended that seniors' buy nursing home insurance. Such coverage is similar to homeowner's insurance, in that it is designed to protect assets in the worst possible

From a war came peace. Pax Christi wants to keep it that way. That was the idea when the international Catholic peace movement was formed in the aftermath of World War II by a woman and a bishop. Closer to home, Bishop Thomas Gumbleton was instrumental in the formation of Pax Christi USA in the wake of the Vietnam War.

Like the international body, the U.S. group believes firmly in gospel non-violence, peacemaking, disar-mament and justice. Lay people and clergy make up the membership, which numbers 8,000 nationwide.

Though relatively small, membership is marked by commitment.

People sit-in at nuclear sites; they write letters to congressmen to protest actions deemed to go against the grain of non-violence.

More than that, though, Pax Christi begins with the individual.

'You're peaceful to family and neighbors," said Kathryn Farrell, 71, Christi. "You extend that into the community and into the world."

"MOST CATHOLICS welcome it as a facet of their faith commit-ment," said Bishop Gumbleton, who is president of Pax Christi USA.

Tim King of Redford Township would agree. His involvement in Pax

Christi goes beyond the political.
King, 37, became associated with Pax Christi in the late 1970s. The pending military buildup and the Reagan rhetoric "scared" him. He found out about Pax Christi through

That might differentiate us from other peace groups," King said. "We're not as concerned with results as we are with faith."

King belongs to a Pax Christi study group that meets in Southfield. Activities include writing letters to government leaders, protesting weapons systems.

Also, the group spends a good deal of time discussing the Bishops' Peace Pastoral, which was issued in

"Integrating faith life with politics is essential in Pax Christi," said Joan Tirak, who is a state organizer for Pax Christi Michigan. "It's, not like politics is one thing and our faith is another. We don't believe in departmentalizing in our lives."

Some of the movements Pax Christi participates in are nuclear disarmament - they have sat in at missile sites - and non-involvement of the United States in Central

Their views, however, don't al-ways mix with those of fellow church members. For the most part, political conservatism is said to be a growing trend among Catholics to-

"We're always looking to increase membership," Gumbleton said. "Active members have a strong commit-ment, willing to engage themselves in a core of activities.

Political appointments leave observer uneasy

A cabinet of "insiders." Highly qualified and experienced men. So have President Bush's nominees for leadership positions in his administration been described. Acclaimed by both the Democratic and Republican leaders in the House and the Senate. Signs of a new relationship with Congress. Why then, am I uneasy about these appointments.

My discomfort is not rooted in their personal successes or lack thereof. Nor is it derived from whatever image the public has been pre-sented by the media. I am simply not that well acquainted with all of them to make a judgment that borders on a pre-judgment.

My discomfort was given birth in that expectation for success in that unfolding experience of ally working with ally. President Bush's cabinet nominees were made and welcomed for the potential they offered for smoother and untroubled relation-ships with the "movers and shapers" of government, "They are familiar with the Washington scene, and we will be able to work with them."

This is not to suggest for one moment that government works best when all parties are strangers, or that there cannot be active interaction, even friendship, between mem-bers of different political groups. Nor is it to suggest that the role of the opposition must be to thwart or obstruct the plans and policies of the

WHAT I do mean is that the development of policies and practices for the public order based on "the good old boy network" is a long step from old boy network" is a long step from the type of representative govern-ment we would want. Any credential for public servants based on privi-leged information and status only moves them further from those whom public servants serve. Reli-ance on this type of credential su-gests a basic contempt for the public organization and responsibility of life.

I would hope that my elected representatives in government would develop mutually enriching relationships with other elected representatives and appointed members of cabinets. And I would especially hope that their mutually enriching relationships would effect creative and responsible legislation for the public good.

Micah 6:8 has clearly presented an agenda for our time: "He has showed you what is good; and what does the Lord require but to do justice, love kindness and walk humbly with your God." It is clearly a public agenda that must be attended to by the public order and all public servants. If Washington's "insiders" have this as Washington's "insiders" have this as their agenda, why should they be wary of "outsiders?" If Washington's "insiders" have another agenda, then we should be wary of

Song protests planned U.S. raises

By Kevin Brown staff writer

A song recorded in Livonia has be-come the national theme of a protest against pay raises to U.S. legislators.

"The Tea Bag Revolution," recorded in a homemade studio on W. Chicago Street, is being played on WXYT radio in Detroit, and cassette copies of the song are being distrib-uted to radio stations nationwide by the Washington D.C.-based National Taxpayers Union.

On Friday, NBC-TV's "Today Show" filmed a segment at the Livo-nia studio for airing this week. In the segment, song author and singerkeyboard player Keith Wood is backed by Livonia residents Rick Boehms on bass and Mike Grass on guitar, as they perform the song.

"I never expected it to go that far," said Wood, whose wife dropped off a tape copy of the song at the radio station Jan. 13. Forty-five minutes later, WXYT was playing it on the air, and the station continues to play the song three times daily.

HEARING HIS song on the radio "was great," Wood said. "It was like a dream all musicians

Wood was moved to write the song Jan. 9, while listening to the radio as he drove to work.

The host Roy Fox (WXYT) did a little segment on how the pay raise was unjustified," Wood said. In his 1989 budget sent to Congress earlier this month, former president Reagan proposed a 50 percent pay increase for senators and members of congress, to raise their pay from $89,500 to $135,000 per legislators' salaries more in line with workers in private industry, and maintain that to attract quality people you have to pay them what they're worth.

"I have a problem with that," said Wood. "Basically, I look at how much they take out of my pay each week, and also take into con tion our national budget deficit."

For the pay raise to be rejected, Congress must vote against it. The raise becomes automatic if the federal budget is approved.

AS THE radio segment continued, one caller suggested "they ought to have a modern day 'tea party' to protest," Wood recalled.

Another listener "said it was too bad we didn't have a theme song.

So Wood — who supported himself in college as a musician — grabbed a portable tape recorder in the car and began composing a song on the spot. He contacted Boehms and Grass, and they finished recording the song Jan. 11. It was on the radio two days later.

"It has kind of a folk-country flavor to it," said Wood, who currently plays in a weekend oldies band with Boehms, called Starflight.

Their studio, where the song was recorded, had just been set up to record themselves, other musicians, and possibly commercial jingles, Wood said.

The song's chorus goes, "There's no more money, we're angry as can be, so we've joined the tea bag revolution, repeating history."

Opponents of the pay raises for U.S. legislators have been sending tea bags to elected officials to symbolize dissatisfaction with the proposed measure.

Host Fox "had us sit down talking

"Most people supported it, they thanked us for the song, they said it was very catchy."

Keith Wood (center) and Livonia residents Rick Boehms and Mike Grass are getting national attention for the song, "The Tea Bag Revolution," which protests proposed 50-percent pay raises for U.S. legislators.

Nursing home etiquette: It's common courtesy

Dear Jo:
Would you please discuss nursing home etiquette? As a nurse in a small nursing home, we welcome visitors to our units - but sometimes they are at a loss on what to say, or do, while visiting our residents — their relatives and friends. Mrs. E.C.,

Dear Mrs. C.: Although nursing home visits are considered to be "good medicine" for nursing home residents, the hospital-like setting often leaves the visitors ill at ease.

Accidental Discovery May End Obesity

Blocks calorie absorption

SWEDEN-Medical researchers at the University of Kuopio, in Finland, have discovered (accidentally) a new weight-loss formula. The new discovery enables an ight individual to lose pounds and fatty tissue without dieting or exercise

Scientists made the discovery while searching for a formula to lower cholesterol. In a controlled study of a test group of people, cholesterol levels remained unchanged but the doctors were astounded to find that every patient who used the formula lost weight. The published report of this study stated, "A highly significant decrease in body weight was seen" in patients who received the formula.

The formula was then tested in Sweden at Sahlgren Hospital, University of Goteborg. Again, all patients lost a substantial amount of weight even though they did not change their eating habits. The report detailing this study, published in the British Journal of Nutrition, stated: "Body weight was significantly reduced even though the patients were specifically asked not to alter their dietary habits." One patient in this study lost more than 30 pounds.

According to one informed source, the active ingredient comes from a 100% natural botanical source and contains no drugs or stimulants. When taken before mealtime it bonds with the food you eat and "ties up" calories, preventing their absorption.

A substantial portion of the calories ingested therefore pass through the digestive system unabsorbed. The body has to get energy to replace the lost calories, so it starts to burn stored fat. The result is rapid body weight loss. Extensive clinical tests have verified the safety of this formula for long-term use.

The formula is marketed in tablet form in the United States under the trade name Cal-Ban 3000. A firm located in Tampa, Florida, has exclusive North American dis-tribution rights. A review of the customer files of this company revealed the names of hundreds of people who have lost up to 10 pounds the first week and as much as 20, 40 or 60 or more pounds overall with Cal-Ban 3000. This is a golden opportunity for peo-ple who are plagued by fat and cellulite that they can't seem to lose by conventional outlined new federal regulations on woodstoves that were adopted and went into effect last July. As a result, Concern received several requests for additional information about woodstoves. These are a few of the questions that came in and the answers we got from Alan Greenberg, director of the Wayne County Air Pollution Control Division:

Q. "Will the owners of woodstoves, inserts, etc. manufactured before July 1, 1988, have to have anything added to their stoves to have them meet the new federal rules?"

A. No. Stoves manufactured and purchased prior to the new regulations going into effect - July 1 will not need any retrofitting to meet the new standards. Check with your local government to ensure that your stove is in compliance with any local ordinances regarding air pollu-

To ensure the least amount of air emissions from your woodstove or fireplace, here are a few sugges-

· Have your woodstove cleaned and checked regularly. A rule of thumb: Have your stove and chimney cleaned after each cord - not face cord - of wood is burned.

e Keep your woodstove in optimum operating condition. Make sure the stove is installed correctly, and check frequently that all parts are in good repair.

 Choose the best type of fuel. Preferred woods have been air-dried thoroughly for a year . . . Softwoods are good fuels but do not burn as cleanly as hardwoods due to the higher resin content.

 Use properly sized pieces four to six inches thick or larger depending on stove size. Use kindling only for starting the fire. Avoid using loose paper (except to start), household rubbish or garbage, any treated woods or coal.

· Operate the stove correctly.

 Watch for warning signals. Visible smoke leaving the top of the chimney or long, lazy flames leaving the firebox are signs of incomplete air supply. When this occurs, more air is needed to complete the burning process. Open the dampers to let more air into the stove, especially air that will mix with the flames leaving the burning wood.

Protection Agency has several book-lets on woodstove purchasing and use. Write to the EPA, Region V, 230 S. Dearborn Street, Chicago, III. 60604 and ask for a copmlete list of materials available on woodstoves.

'No comment' standard reply for references

By Mary Rodrique staff writer

Good references, the stamp of approval that diligent workers confidently carried to job interviews, are becoming a thing of the past.

Whether a worker has performed exceptionally well or poorly, personnel departments are refusing to give prospective employers little more than a former worker's name, rank and serial number.

Companies are fearful of becoming part of a growing trend - namely being dragged into court by defamation lawsuits. What they have or haven't said about an employee or a former employee has proved damag-ing, especially if the person is denied a job because of it.

Discussion with a handful of businesspeople locally reveals that the trend here among employers is to say as little as possible about former employees.

John Sitarski, vice president for human resources at the Farmington Hills-based Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co., which employs over 700 people, is typical.

"You're betwixt and between," he said. "If you recommend someone highly and the employee doesn't work out, the employer gets mad at us. They think we gave them a bum steer. If, on the other hand, you say, 'Look, Sue is a good internal auditor but I don't think she'll work out in your payroll department,' then Sue gets mad at us.

"(Opinion) isn't worth the powder to blow from here to heaven.

Sitarski thinks employers should look at an applicant's education and job experience to determine if the individual will fit into their organization, "not whether or not they did a good job elsewhere.'

"I rarely do a background check," he added. "(Personnel departments) are rarely going to tell me what I really want to know. If there's magic between us, if (the applicant) has the skills I need and passes some tests, they're in.'

EACH COMPANY sets its own

Edith Davis, personnel director for the city of Livonia, says prospective employers must give her a signed, notarized release from the prospective employee.

Then we release the information if the former employee has no objection. Generally a prospective employer sends us a standard form. They want to know dates of employment, classification of jobs, starting and ending salary.'

The city, which employs 650 fulltime and several hundred seasonal part-time workers, complies if it has the signed release waiver from the individual in question

Mel Albirte, manager of salaried personnel for Ford Motor Co. operations in Livonia, which includes 1,700 workers in the transmission plant and chassis division, says the personnel policy there has been in place for

"We'll respond with the type of termination - retirement, voluntary or involuntary. And we'll answer the question 'Would you consider this person for rehire?' Most of the time, the answer is yes, we'd consider them again. It doesn't mean we'd necessarily hire them again."

Albirte says the policy is much the same for Ford's hourly workers in Livonia, which number 3,400.

Betty Roame, personnel spokes-woman for Schoolcraft Community College, says the Livonia school has no written policy regarding releasing employee information, but an informal practice is to give neutral references

"We ask the former employee to

Employers, fearful of lawsuits, are reluctant to answer questions regarding an employee's job performance, salary and personal traits. Some employers will verify employment dates and nothing moré.

Personnel's 'Catch-22'

Not all personnel departments are mum on former employees' work habits.

Mike Burns, manager of research services and staff counsel for the Southfield-based American Society of Employers, said the association publishes an annual directory geared to member employers helping each

Despite the trend toward more litigation by workers who believe their character has been defamed by a former employer, Burns said companies still need information about prospective workers.

BURNS SAID the society encourages members to spread the word about good workers. About 85 percent of the society's membership is comprised of companies that employ less than 500 workers.

Burns' advice to employers seeking information on applicants:

· Include a waiver with the employment application. Thus the applicant automatically signs over the right of the hiring company to probe into his background. Many employee applications already have waivers that release both parties from liabil-

"(The society) doesn't give advice on how to evaluate," he said. "If the candidate is bad, just give his name, rank and serial number. If he's good, nothing you say can hurt.' But at least one labor law attorney believes employers should stick to the basics to be safe.

Dwight Vincent, an attorney with the Detroit firm of Clark, Klein and Beaumont, says an applicant's signed waiver doesn't protect an employer if the applicant is libeled.

We advise an employer to give length of service, period. Nothing bevond that."

Answers to taxing issue

gun. To help you get a fix on you tax situation, the Michigan Association of CPAs has supplied the answers to some of the most commonly asked questions on 1988 taxes.

· Have the tax rules changed since last year?

Yes. Remember that last year served as a transition between tax systems. In 1988, several tax reform rules become fully effective for the first time while others continue to phase in. Also, this year's tax rates have changed.

• What are the new tax rates? Basically, there are two taxe brackets for 1988: 15 percent and 28 percent. But the benefit of the 15percent tax bracket phases out for single taxpayers earning $43,150-$89,560 and mairied taxpayers earning $71,900-$149,250. These people pay a 5-percent surtax - making their top tax rate 33 percent.

· Has the personal exemption in-

Yes, In 1988, the personal exemption increases by $50 to $1,950. One note of caution: If you can claim an exemption for your child or any other dependent, that person may not claim his or her own exemption.

• How much can I claim as a standard deduction on my 1988 tax return if I don't itemize? For married couples filing jointly, the standard deduction is now $5,000. Single taxpayers can deduct $3,000, and heads of household may claim a deduction of $4,400.

• Does the standard deduction increase for taxpayers who are either blind or 65 or older? Yes, These taxpayers are entitled to an extra standard deduction of $600 each if married and $750 if single. The amount doubles for anyone who is both elderly and blind · How do I know whether it pays to itemize?

A simple test can help you make the right decision. Add up you itemized expenses. If they total more than your standard deduction, you should probably itemize.

• Can I still make and deduct IRA contributions?

As long as you (and your spouse) do not actively participate in an employer-sponsored retirement plan, you are still entitled to the full IRA

GETTING READY FOR YOUR TAX PREPARER

· What if I do participate in a retirement plan?

If you or you spouse participate in a retirement plan, you may still be able to deduct all or part of your IRA contribution. Married couples with an adjusted gross income of $40,000 or less and single taxpayers with an adjusted gross income of $25,000 or less may take the full deduction. For every $1,000 in income over these ceilings, the deduction decreases by $200. So, if you're married and earn $50,000 or more, you lose the deduction completely.

e Can I make a non-deductible IRA contribution?

Yes, but you will have to inform the IRS by attaching Form 8606 to your federal tax return. To ensure that your after-tax contributions are not taxed again at withdrawal, you should also keep a personal record of all non-deductible contributions made between now and the time you receive the entire sum of your IRA money - in other words, for life.

· What are the rules for deducting miscellaneous and medical expenses?

Miscellaneous expenses are deductible to the extent that they exceed 2 percent of your adjusted gross income. Unreimbursed medical expenses are deductible to the extent that they exceed 7.5 percent of your adjusted gross income.

• Has tax reform eliminated the deduction for personal interest charged on credit cards and personal

Yes, but the deduction is being phased out gradually. In 1988, just 40 percent is deductible. The deduction falls to 20 percent in 1989, 10 percent in 1990 and to zero in 1991.

• Is the deduction for mortgage interest being phased out?

No. Home mortgage interest is deductible on loans of up to $1 million as long as the money is used to buy or substantially improve a primary or secondary home. Interest is also deductible on home equity loans of up to $100,000.

• Are state and local sales taxes deductible?

No. Tax reform has eliminated the deduction for both state and local sales tax. On the other hand, real estate, property and state and local income tax remain deductible.

• I donated a little more than $500 to several non-profit organiza-tions. Can I still deduct these charitable contributions? Only if you itemize. If you give more than $500 in non-cash property such as furniture or clothing, you must file Form 8283.

There are 300 full-time and 350 part-time employees at the college.

Nancy Leonard, spokeswoman for Botsford Hospital in Farmington Hills, says personnel policy there is to reveal only dates of employment and positions held. The osteopathic hospital employs 1,500 full- and part-time employees.

John E. Reynolds, personnel direc-tor for Livonia Public Schools 3,000 employees, says he won't release anything without a written release from the person in question.

Detroit Diesel Allison, which employs close to 2,700 workers in a plant on the Redford Township/Detroit border, also proceeds with cau-former employee saying it's OK to release information," said Judy Kangas, company spokeswoman. "Then we need a written request from the prospective employer. We would never give information over the phone. We'll give dates of service, a person's title and salary - only if the employee says it's OK - no ratings whatsoever."

SOME FACTS about prospective employees are available from public

"Hard facts, such as criminal convictions, histories of drug and alcohol abuse, or even involvement in excessive litigation can give substantial assistance in the employment screening process," said Allan Hal-crow, editor of Recruitment Today.

The magazine reports that 91 percent of the nation's counties will release criminal records by phone or mail to employers. At least 97 per-cent of colleges and universities will verify attendance and degrees for

Other sources where data is readily available include federal courts for information on civil, criminal and bankruptcy cases; state departments of motor vehicles for driving records; and state departments that maintain worker's compensation

Are good employees being pun-ished by the practice? Probably, but there are some clever employee relations investigators who bypass personnel departments. They call supervisors directly or, if they won't talk, casually ask other employees about the applicant. Lower-level workers may not be concerned about possible lawsuits; they may not even know they can be sued for what they say.

Many companies rely on thorough interviewing of candidates and on tests designed to measure skills. Then they simply hope for the best.

months writing and rewriting a business plan, but the effort is wasted if the plan doesn't make its way into the hands of the most appropriate potential investors. To evaluate and subsequently approach the right backers, entrepreneurs must resolve these key issues

First, they must decide if they are seeking investment or debt money. Second, they must direct their efforts to the investors or lending institutions most likely to support their type of enterprise. And third, they must find ways to reach targeted financiers effectively.

In the book, "Business Plans That Business owners can spend several Win $$$," the authors agree that the most difficult issue to resolve is the decision to seek out investment vs. debt money. According to John Jenkins, a New York-based venture capital expert, many factors influence

NEW BUSINESS start ups, on the other hand, may find that collateral is more difficult to come by and often takes the form of equity in the entrepreneur's home, stocks or life insurance cash value.

Because many new business owners are reluctant to risk personal assets for a business loan, they often turn to investors. If growth is expected to be rapid among start-up firms, this may be another reason to consider the investment money al-

It's also possible for new businesses to obtain a combination of debt and equity money, which commonly comes from small-business investment companies.

Investors and lenders have preferences about the companies they are willing to support. The type of business, history, company status and amount of requested financing all contribute to the decision of "who gets what when." It is also important to note that financiers are increasingly willing to get involved with new and smaller ventures.

The book, "Guide to Venture Capital Sources" (Stanley Pratt, Venture Economics, Wellesley Hills, Mass.), lists all venture capital firms, along with the kinds of businesses they prefer to back. It is available in most bookstores.

But today the hot subject among marketing types is the so-called
"crossover" market, which means that sometimes a truck falls into the hands of the wrong sort - a woman, for instance, or some guy who arrives at valet parking at the Rattlesnake Club.

Actually, the difference between a car and a truck would be nothing more than an exercise in semantics save for the fact that language has a way of altering even the best of in-

The Germans quickly slapped a tariff on chickens to stop the flood of fryers — and U.S. trade experts quickly sought retaliation by search of a product that was unique to West Germany. Good advice can be free if you are starting a business

So, you're thinking of starting your own business. There are those who would advise you to buy a lottery ticket instead.

If you decide to go through with your plans, you will be joining the ranks of thousands of other Americans who every year opt for self-employment even though the odds are stacked against them. (Six of 10 ventures fail within the first five years.)

Mike Shumate of Salem thrusts a fist into the air triumphantly after winning the 130-pound title in the WLAA wrestling tour-

Rocks regain WLAA title

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

Plymouth Salem is back on top in Western Lakes Activities Association wrestling.

After having their streak of six consecutive league championships snapped last year, the Rocks made a definitive statement with their performance Saturday as they re-claimed the title at Westland John

"Last year was the only year we didn't win the league, and it feels great to get it back," said senior Mike Shumate, one of Salem's five champions. "I just think it's great."

While the Rocks chalked up a 2131/2-point team total, defending champion Glenn was a distant second this time with 156%. Northville was third and fourth-place North Farmington had its best finish since joining the WLAA.

Salem had beaten the host Rockets in two dual meets this season and was considered the pre-meet favorite since Glenn was viewed as its chief competition.

"WE WERE THE underdog coming in," Rockets coach Tom Buckalew said. "We needed to pull some upsets. We didn't do that, and the reSalem boasts 5 league winners

Salem coach Ron Krueger, who also coached 10 league champions in 17 years, recalled the Rocks were in a similar position last year. Salem wanted to guard against another let-

"Last year we fell on our nose," he said. "We thought we had a chance and just didn't wrestle. I was afraid the same thing might happen.

"We approached it from a more cautious point of view. We weren't going to let the kids think all they had to do was show up."

Krueger apparently got his message across. All 12 of the wrestlers who competed for Salem placed, and 11 finished fourth or better. Six reached the finals.

In addition to Shumate, who captured the 130-pound title, teammates Craig Richardson (112), Ed Barlage (140), Steve Burlison (160) and Brian Burlison (171) also finished first at their weights. All are seniors except for the Burlisons, who are juniors.

"OUR THREE captains are league champs and I'm happy," said Krueger of Richardson, Shumate and Barlage. "They're good, clean-cut kids and they deserve it.

"We've got a wall of champions, and those guys are going to be up there. It's going to be nice seeing those guys down the road."

North and Glenn had two individuwinners each, Livonia Churchill, Farmington and Livonia Stevenson

Three wrestlers were repeat champions - Glenn's Rob Matigian (135), Livonia Stevenson's Kurt Will (152) and North's Zaim Cunmulaj in the heavyweight bracket. Matigian won at 132 last year before the weight classes were restructured, Will 145 and Cunmulaj 198.

The other champions were Walled Lake Central's Soren Murphy (103), Livonia Churchill's Darin Dudek (119), North's Jack Beall (125), Farmington's Todd Jacobs (145), and Glenn's Dereck Tharp (189).

Matigian is the only undefeated wrestler in the WLAA, improving to 32-0 after dominating Plymouth Canton's Liam Rentz 14-1 in the fig. nal. But that has become the norm for Matigian, who pinned his first op-ponent in 58 seconds and won hig semifinal match 15-0.

"HE REALLY IS (a dominating wrestler), and I don't know how you say that politely," Buckalew saids "He's just a class act on and off the

Matigian has 116 career victories and is only two shy of Agron Vasha's school record 118. "(Matigian) will be the No. 1 wrestler in this school before he's done," Buckalew said.

Will and Cunmulaj have each lost just one match. Will (22-1) pinned Salem's Pete Israel but not without a test from his opponent. The score was tied 2-2 after two periods, but Will led 7-3 after a takedown that led to the pin.

"He hurt himself, because I heard him moan," Will said. "I knew I could take him.

"It helps a lot having people be afraid of you, especially when you've beaten most of these kids."

Smith to coach boys, too

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

Plymouth Canton had to look no farther than its own backyard for a boys soccer coach.

The district has named Don Smith, the successful coach of the Canton girls team, to fill that position, too. He replaces Mike Morgan, who had the team for five seasons.

"We felt Don has done an outstanding job in the girls position," athletic director Paul Cummings said. "His record speaks for itself."

In just two years, Smith guided the girls program to a 28-5-4 record and the Class A championship last spring. The Chiefs won their last nine games a year ago and finished

But while those achievements appear as a shining star on Smith's resume, his record was not the sole

"I THINK WE had to look at him very closely (because of that)," Cummings said. "Winning the state championship was nice.

"However, I feel there are certain traits a coach must have for us to put him in that position.

"(Smith) has demonstrated he does have those qualities - dedication, pride in what you're doing and being positive person working with young people.

Cummings added Smith is willing 'to go that little extra as an educator," citing his many years of teaching in the Detroit Public School Sys-

Smith, 49, has taught physical education for nearly 27 years at Gompers Elementary School. A graduate of Detroit Western High School, he also has coached football, basketball and track during his reer. Furthermore, Smith has coached youth soccer teams in the

with the boys teams as he had coaching the girls. But he believes "people are pretty realistic," and he won't burden the program with lofty goals or unreasonable expectations to

In fact, Smith's initial plan is the same as he had when he took over the girls team in 1987.

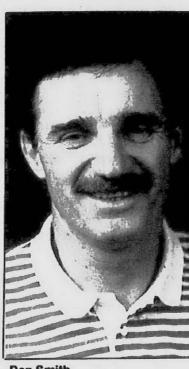

"WE'LL SEE IF we can't pick off some of the good teams," he said. "We've got to prove we can beat some good teams.

"You can be good, but you have to be good enough when it calls for it.
"We'll try to be very competitive,"
he added. "We'll try to get some re-

The Chiefs had a 9-8-4 record last year and finished strong. After having less-than-expected success in the regular season, Canton won a district championship with victories over Plymouth Salem, No. 7-rated Ann Arbor Huron and Ann Arbor Pioneer. The Chiefs won a 2-1 shootout over the Pioneers in the final.

Canton proves self once again

Beating the same opponent twice in three days can be difficult, but Plymouth Canton's volleyball team got the job done Monday.

The Chiefs survived their dual match against Livonia Franklin with 15-11, 15-10 victories, but Canton didn't have as easy a time as it did Saturday when it posted a pair of 15-6 scores in the Plymouth Invitation-

"Maybe we were looking ahead to (Wednesday's match with defending league champ Livonia) Churchill. You never want to do that, but we were kinda lax."

The Chiefs didn't play one of their better matches, but Suffety chose to look on the positive aspect of his team's come-from-behind victory. "They showed me something when they had to come back," he said. "Last year we probably would have lost a game like that, because we were so young."

Once they got behind, the Chiefs realized they had to bear down if they were going to beat the Patriots again.

"I think we got a little more serious about our game and took them as being a better team," Suffety tacks. Karen Keenan and Susan Ferko were 5-for-9. Michelle Fortier notched four kills and Candi Jones added three. The Chiefs are 5-1 in dual matches, not including tournament scores. They are 25-23 in all games.

PLYMOUTH SALEM had no trouble moving its record to 3-1 in the Lakes Division Monday with a 15-4, 15-6 victory over Farmington, which fell to 0-4.

The Rocks, 10-4 overall, overpowered Farmington with their serving, dropping seven aces in the first game and eight in the second.

"We just came out with our guns firing from the service line," Salem coach Betty Smith said. Jenny Justice had four aces in the second game and Asaka Motoyama three. Kaori Saga and Kolleen Lawrence drilled two apiece in the first Salem did have need for an attack, and Maria Wordhouse converted four of her six chances into kills. Motoyama was 3-for-4. The Rocks defeated Westland John Glenn last Wednesday but didn't show up until the middle of the second game, according to Smith. Salem lost the first game 6-15 and trailed 0-6 in the second. But the Rocks regrouped to win that one 15-11 and the rubber match 16-14.

Madonna edges S'craft

All things considered, the outcome of Monday's mens-basketball game between Schoolcraft College and Madonna College was entirely improbable. And yet, it wasn't all that surprising.

Madonna, which should have won easily, was pushed into overtime before it could escape with a home court 97-93 triumph.

"That was terrible," were Madonna coach Bob Whitlow's first words describing his team's victory. "It was embarrassing. What'd (SC) get beat by on Saturday, 20 or 30 points?

"If you'd seen us against St. Mary's (Jan. 25), you wouldn't believe this was the same team.

Certainly the motivation was missing for Madonna. SC has had trouble winning at its own junior college level; Madonna, a member of the NAIA District 23, should have pounded the Ocelots, who had just five

BUT AS WHITLOW lamented, the Crusaders have developed a nasty habit: They tend to play to the level of their opponent.

That wasn't all bad Monday, because SC played pretty well, all factors considered. Two regulars were missing, Bernard McGee and Mark Koronka, because of illness. That left Ocelot coach Dave Bogataj with only unproven walk-ons and the five regulars.

So Bogataj never substituted until he had to - with 50 left in overtime.

Still, SC had a chance to win until an aborted inbounds play with :05 left in OT and the Ocelots trailing 94-93. Mike Mercer tried to pass the ball in but couldn't find a man, so he called timeout. Problem was, SC had no timeouts remaining. A technical foul was assessed, giving Madonna a free throw and possession.

Shaun Hayward hit the technical and Ron Griffin added two more free throws with a second left for the final margin.

"THAT WAS a gritty performance," said Bogataj of his team's play. He put no blame on Mercer for his inbounds mistake, although he did say he told the team they had no timeouts left. The inbounds play was supposed to go to John Moran.

"(Mercer) didn't find anyone open right away," said Bogataj. "It's a timing play, and he didn't see that John was open at first.'

It was hard luck. If effort had decided this game, SC would have won. Whitlow knew it.

"We should beat that team by 20 points," he said.

"Give them credit. They should have beaten us, the way we played. We get a lead and don't play hard. We don't have that killer instinct. We figured we could show up and beat them."

Madonna never had the luxury of a big lead. Hayward's three-pointer with 13:59 left in the first half put the Crusaders up 20-12 - their biggest lead of the game. SC scored the next seven points to close back to

But it seemed the Ocelots could never catch their adversaries. Madonna answered every rally - until the second half.

MERCER'S TRIPLE - he hit three in the second half and OT - gave SC its first lead since the game's opening moments, 50-49 with 14:31 left. It remained close the rest of the way, neither team up by more than

Hayward canned a triple with :26 left in regulation to give Madonna a three-point advantage. But SC had the answer: Ken Fuster banged home a triple to tie it with The Ocelots, forced to play zone throughout the game

due to their lack of players, switched to man-to-man for Madonna's inbounds attempt and forced a turnover. But they couldn't get off a shot in the final seconds, Hayward, who started slowly but finished with a game-high 25 points, hit the key shot of OT — a three-pointer with :21 left that put Madonna up 94-93. SC didn't help itself at the free-throw line, making just two-of-five in OT. Also in double figures in scoring for Madonna were Marcus Lowe (from Westland John Glenn) with 22, Anthony Strickland (from Wayne Memorial) with 14, Brian Daniel with 13, Terrance Bell with 12 and Griffin

SC got 23 points from Mercer, 21 from Al Hudson, 20 from both Fuster and Moran and nine from Rob Har-

The Ocelots fell to 6-18 overall. Madonna is 8-13.

LAST SATURDAY, SC turned in what Bogataj called the worst game a team he's coached has ever played in getting pounded at Henry Ford CC, 82-38. "We could not hit a shot," was his simple explanation.

23.8 percent. They did not make a three-pointer and hit only eight-of-15 free throws (53.3 percent).

Cedrick Van Hook, Brian Miller and John Baker each scored 14 for Henry Ford CC (10-8 overall, 5-4 in the Eastern Conference).

Salem pins wrestling foes

THE 6-FOOT-1, 215-pound Cun-mulaj faced a 50-pound disadvan-tage in the heavyweight final against Glenn's Joe Williams. After one period of probing the others defense, Cunmulai (27-1) scored two nearfalls in the second and pinned Williams in the third.

"He's kinda tough to get down," said Cunmulaj, who has 23 pins this season but beat Williams 5-0 in the dual meet.

"I knew I had to go even on my feet. On the mat, I thought, if I could get him on his back, I could pin him. They've gotta bench press their own weight plus mine to get me off." Richardson (29-4) was ahead by the comfortable margin of 15-4 in the third period when he hit the mat hard and aggravated a hip pointer, raising the prospect of having to withdraw and lose on an injury default. He hung on, however, for a 19-8 victory over WLC's Steve Glowin-

"I put him a double-leg, and his knee was going into my hip," Richardson said, adding there was never any doubt in his mind about continuing. "It jammed into the mat and caused a little pain.

"This is my senior year, and I wanted to finish the right way."

"I'VE HAD TROUBLE with Kuban this year," Steve said. "I've beaten him all three times, but every one has been a six-minute match. He's always been tough." The 6-foot-2 Brian Burlison (33-3)

expected his encounter with the shorter, stockier Jacobs at 171 pounds to go the distance, too. 'He hit me in the head one time, and I was dizzed out from that," Brian said. "Then he shot for my legs, and I went straight into him and got him in a good headlock (which led to

Smith plans to employ the same strategy he did with the girls by playing a lot of players. He likes to shuttle players in and out, and that seemed to be a key to Canton's success last spring when the girls played several tournament games on hot days.

Even when Ron Orris wins only one event, the junior swimming sensation

Orris also joined Chris Butzlaff, Sean Fitzgerald and Mike Hill on the winning 200 medley relay team that clocked 1:47.8. The Rocks won the 400 freestyle relay, too, as Chris Caloia, Mike Axford,

Plymouth teams meet end of line in quarterfinals

By Dan O'Meara staff writer

Betty Smith and Julie Arbour used to be on the same side when they coached volleyball together at Ann Arbor Pioneer.

But they were on opposite sides Saturday when Arbour's Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard team defeated Smith's Plymouth Salem squad in the quarterfinals of the 13th Annual Plymouth Invitational.

The Rocks won the first game 15-9 before the Fighting Irish, always one of the top teams in Class C, rallied with 15-6, 15-7 victories in the next two.

"We were tired," said Smith, who was the JV coach under Arbour at Pioneer. "I left most of my starters in most of the day."

She added all of Salem's matches, with the exception of one, were close, which took a toll on her ball-

"We'd be up; we'd be down," she said. "It takes a lot of games to learn to play volleyball with mental toughness."

Brighton defended its championship, beating Plymouth Canton in another quarterfinal (15-0, 10-15, 15-5), Richard (15-11, 15-10) in the semifinals and Dearborn (15-10, 15-11) in the final

"Their team is so mechanical; they do everything alike," Smith said. "Everything is perfect. They're so fine-tuned in technique they all look alike.

"They've been playing together the year round and under the same

"In the first game, we just let them hit the ball at us," Smith said. Salem, however, stole the momentum when Candy Woitas served two aces in the second game. Wordhouse and Motoyama got the attack going and had five and three kills, respec-

coach for the last five years."

Maria Wordhouse led Salem's hitting attack against the Irish, registering 13 kills out of 31 attempts and prompting Smith to add: "It was not like we stopped hitting." Asaka Motoyama had eight kills and 21 attacks.

Wordhouse and Motoyama also were Salem's top servers, recording four aces apiece.

The Rocks, 6-2 in pool play, defeated Richard when they met earlier in the tournament 15-10, 15-13. Salem then beat Warren Cousino 15-5, 15-13; lost to Dearborn 13-15, 13-15; and whipped Dearborn Heights Crestwood 15-3, 15-4.

For the tournament, Wordhouse had 38 kills out of 81 attacks, Motoyama 30 kills and 65 chances. The latter also totaled 19 aces.

"We have a goal of getting better every time we play and peaking at the right time, which is the league and district tournaments," Smith said.

"I feel we're right on schedule, because every time we step out we seem to be playing better."

Canton was 4-4 in pool play. North Farmington, a semifinal loser to Dearborn, defeated the Chiefs 15-3, 15-5, but Canton was even or better the rest of the way.

Coach Allie Suffety's team split with Birmingham Marian 15-8, 13-15; beat Livonia Franklin 15-6, 15-6; and divided a pair with Saline 15-10, 13-15.

Suffety said his ballclub was in awe of Brighton in the first game of the quarterfinal match in which Canton failed to score a point. But the Chiefs quickly reversed that in the second.

"We're at the point we can compete with these teams now when we're on our game," Suffety said. "When we're not on our game we get intimidated and don't play well.

"This is a good team; we're starting to believe in ourselves."

Suffety added the long day caught up to his players in the third game against Brighton and fatigue caused the Chiefs to lose their concentra-

Canton, however, did a good job overall Saturday, he said.

"The week before we played Saline, and they beat us two out of three," Suffety said. "In this tournament, we wanted to play Saline. We've developed the feeling we want to play these teams and play them

Borgess minus coach, AD

By Brad Emons staff writer

A massive shakeup last week by first-year principal Sister Joan Charnley has left Redford Bishop Borgess High without an athletic director and head football coach.

Sister Charnley said Tuesday that Fred Mushinski, the school's athletic director for the past three years, has stepped down "by mutual consent."

Mushinski reportedly bypassed Sister Charnley when he announced on Jan. 18 that he had hired former Detroit Cooley coach and Pershing athletic director Earnest Thomas as the school's new football coach, succeeding Dan Henry, who resigned at the end of the 1988 season.

The Borgess principal said that Mushinski, who will retain his job as physical education teacher, "did not follow the proper procedures of hiring coaches."

"It was an administrative conflict that caused him (Mushinski) to resign," said Sister Charnley. "But I want everybody to know that Fred is a good guy who has been dedicated to Borgess for 22 years." 'There are no hard feelings or animosity. I accept it. She's the boss and I've got to go along with her.'

- Fred Mushinski former athletic director

SISTER CHARNLEY said that Thomas has been notified that the head football job and AD's position will be reopened to the public.

"What I told Earnest is that I would not confirm his hiring, but he was welcome to re-apply," said the Borgess principal. "He (Thomas) told me that he still wants to coach and that he was shocked Fred resigned.

"Fred was unaware that I had to make the final OK."

Thomas could not be reached for comment on Tuesday, but Mushinski said that "Earnest is shocked by it all." "He didn't expect it to happen and I didn't either, but what she (Sister Charnley) said is true," said Mushinski, who was once the head football coach at Borgess. "We sat down and agreed by mutual consent that I would resign as AD. Technically she's right. I violated the hiring procedure

"There are no hard feelings or animosity. I accept it. She's the boss and I've got to go along with her."

SISTER CHARNLEY SAID Mushinski was part of a search committee that also included assistant principal Gene Grewe, two teachers and a guidance counselor.

Mushinski reportedly bypassed the committee and sought out his own candidates without clearing the final candidate, subject to the principal's approval.

Sister Charnley confirmed to the Observer that "the job was never opened publicly."

She added that Borgess will hire an athletic director before naming a head football coach. The school is also seeking a varsity boys track coach for the spring season. (Interested candidates should call Sister Charnley at 255-1000.)

Thomas remains in limbo.

The former PSL coach, who led Cooley to city championships in 1979 and 1980, as well as a state Class A playoff berth in 1981, has had a rocky relationship over the years with Detroit Public School administrators.

A former professional football player with the Boston Patriots, the 45-year-old coach currently serves as an administrator ad Drew Middle School in Detroit.

Memories on film: 'Forever My Dog'

By Victor E. Swanson special writer

"Forever My Dog," a very special film by Ron Senkowski, 25, of Ann Arbor, formerly of Farmington Hills, will premiere at 11 a.m. Saturday at the AMC Maple Theatre in Bloomfield Township.

No, it's not a big-budget epic set in North Africa during World War II or a fabulous adventure set in outer space or one of those slimy-creature movies, all of which may or may not have long-term importance.

"Forever My Dog" is a low-budg-et, 31-minute, color, local production that has importance, especially to children, for it touches the heart.

"It's about a boy and his dog," Sen-kowski said. "It's actually told as an older person recounting, recalling the different things he went through

... experiencing first great loss."
In the film the loss is of a pet, a loving animal that has to be put to - an emotionally heartwrenching time for a pet owner.

The pet owner is Brian (played by Brian Senkowski, 14, who is Ron's younger brother), a boy like so many others. For example, he loves hockey. The pet is a dog named Shootzi, Brian's real dog, his second. By the way, "Shootzi" comes from that famous hockey expression coined by a Canadian announcer: "He shoots, he scores!")

THE STORY IS about the Swan family, mostly Brian Swan's coping with putting his dog to sleep, and about his sadness, his tears, his grieving.

"Grieving" - that's the key word

Ron Senkowski stressed that the goal of the movie is "to share with people, to tell them that this (grieving) is more of a universal experi-

Dr. David Carron of Plaza Veterinary Clinic in Farmington, who played the veterinarian in the film, said, "The biggest issue is that people need to realize that grieving is a normal part of pet loss and that there is a human-animal bond, and that it's very painful any time we lose our pets.

Part of the story was filmed at Plaza Veterinary Clinic, where Senkowski and his family have taken their pets for care over the years. Karen Cliff, a receptionist at the clinic, played the receptionist for the

"It was . . . voluntary work," Cliff said. "We came in on our days off, came in on a Sunday. I worked here (at the clinic) about five hours. Most of it was just sitting around wait-

Actually, the film, using a small cast and a crew of about 20, took 10 days to shoot in August, one day of which was a full day of shooting at the clinic; it lasted 12 hours. It took three months of post-production work to get a final product.

SENKOWSKI, WHO has a master's degree in telecommunications from the University of Michigan (received in December 1988), wrote, directed and edited the movie. "Forever My Dog" is Senkowski's second film. His first film was "One in a Silent House," a black-and-white short subject, first shown at the Maple Theatre in June. After receiving a bachelor of arts degree in English from U-M, he went to California for a short while and worked on music videos and a film called "Urban Surfing." A teaching position at the U-M lured him back to Michigan.

The idea for "Forever My Dog" came from an incident when Senkowski was at his parent's home having dinner with the family. He was trying to relate an idea for another film to everyone, but they were lost in concern — they were planning to put the family dog to

That was all it took for Senkowski to begin writing again, to create the story and design a shooting script. Funding was accomplished through a business partnership of 14 investors. Next, Lighten Up Productions was on the move, looking for locations tions and cast members.

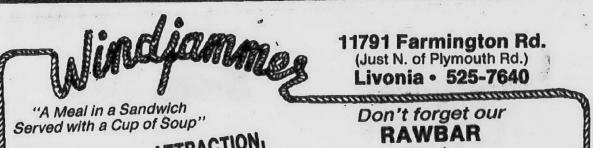

MAIN CAST members are Brian Senkowski, a student at Detroit Country Day School, Beverly Hills; Mark McDonald, 12, a student at O.E. Dunkell, Farmington Hills, who plays Skipper; Dick Tournquist, a

"I definitely enjoyed it," Cliff said.
"It was real interesting. They were a great crew to work with. They were really encouraging . . . I'm looking forward to seeing the film."

"The acting was different for me," said Carron. "I'm not an actor per se. I'm more or less doing my job." Carron expressed these thoughts about losing a pet: "We tell people . . they're going to hurt. And that's normal, and that grieving over a pet is normal . . . It's OK to be upset, it's OK to cry . . . For many of us, the hurt never really goes away."

Two other actors must be mentioned here. In a dream se one of two in the story, Senkowski plays the "mad doctor," the guy with the big hypodermic needle. And in a touching scene, Shawn Burr of the Detroit Red Wings plays a hockey player who talks to Brian about a pet he lost.

Senkowski said he is working on the final details for presenting 'For-ever My Dog" at the Fox Theater, Detroit, in July as part of a benefit for the Michigan Humane Society.

PLUS, HE IS working to have the film used by the Delta Society, based in Renton (Wash.), whose members assist people who have lost pets. (A person wishing to contact a local member can telephone the society at the national number: 1-206-226-

Enthusiastic audiences greet DSO

Editor's note: This is the first of three articles on the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's European tour written by Ervin Monroe, principal flutist with the orchestra. He is also consulting editor for The Flute Quarterly, president of Flutes International Inc. and is affiliated with Wayne and Oakland universities.

By Ervin Monroe special writer

HE EXCITEMENT surrounding the European Tour had been building for months. Yet most of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra members such as myself had been so busy making final preparations for the journey that the day of departure seemed suddenly upon us.

Thursday, February 2, 1989 O&E

My wife, Susan, and I arrived with several other orchestra members at 12:30 p.m. on Saturday, and checked in for the 2:40 p.m. departure flight. The attendant directed us upstairs for "coffee and cookies." To our surprise, what awaited was far more a send-off party attended by board members, symphony friends, a band and all the party trimmings possible.

Mingling and chatting with the musicians were Steve Miller, vice president of finance for Chrysler Motors and chairman of the DSO board, and his wife, Maggie. In a time set aside for speech making, he, the symphony maestro, and a representative of the Michigan Arts Council all wished the orchestra well.

By the time we arrived at New York's Kennedy Airport, where we were to make a connecting flight to Zurich, Switzerland, the orchestra had already had a busy day — yet there was a four-hour layover and still seven hours to flying time to go.

I REALIZE our public often thinks that orchestra tours are pleasant vacations, and indeed many aspects are pleasurable, but tours are also strenuous, hard work. When the orchestra exited the plane in Zurich, there were many tired, sleepy people. It was 9:30 a.m. Sunday in Switzerland but the middle of the night in Detroit.

I chatted with Wes Jacobs of Troy, our tubist, who was beaming with energy. "I read my jetlag book and stuck with the rules," he exclaimed, "I watched my diet and slept on the plane. I'll adjust to the new time just fine."

Later 12 of us had lunch. (It was already too late for breakfast at one of the few restaurants open on Sunday.) Toward the end of the meal the conversation began to drag. Jetlag was taking its toll. Some were hypnotically gazing at their food and I caught Wes staring into empty space. Eventually he too admitted to being a bit disoriented. Susan and I returned to the hotel for a nap.

On such tours the first day at destination is nearly always free so everyone can rest and adjust to the new time zone. This time is traditionally spent relaxing and socializing.

It is surprising how many musicians have friends and acquaintances in many of the cities. Violinists Bruce and Linda Smith of Farmington Hills, met a friend who had driven to Zurich from Strasbourg, France, 2½ hours away, just to visit and entertain them.

GETTING AROUND can be difficult. Fortunately there are always members of the orchestra who have a solution. Sam and Peggy Tundo of Troy, percussionist and violinist, quickly discovered the most efficient and practical way to get to the center of the city — electric street car. These are more modern and practical than Detroit's trolley and definitely go further. Even the city buses run by electricity, which is readily affordable in this country with its mountains, lakes, and streams.

That evening, several of the orchestra members tried to find a place to watch the Super Bowl game. After much inquiry, even a special trip to the Airport Lounge by hornist Bryan Kennedy of Bloomfield Hills, it became evident that the football fans in the orchestra weren't going to see the game.

The hotel manager assured us, however, we wouldn't be disappointed, "I will be able to tell you the exact score tomorrow morning."

The musicians stared at him in silence. Our enthusiasm to watch a live football game was obviously not translatable.

We were all set for our tour opening in Zurich's Tonhalle on Monday, but Susan and I were diverted by a phone call from our good friend Jeanne Galway, wife of the famous Irish flutist James Galway.

THEIR HOME is in Lucerne, 50 minutes by train from Zurich. She insisted we visit, even though Jimmy is away in Sweden. "I'll drive you back in time for the afternoon rehearsal," she said. "If you don't come I'll be very upset."

Making the train connection wasn't easy. Fortunately I have some facility in German, so Susan and I managed to get to the station and purchase tickets at the automatic machine.

As we raced toward the trains, I realized we didn't know our track number. We overtook a well-dressed gentleman to whom I blurted our plight in German.

"Sorry," he said, "I speak only French and English." "Shade," I replied, which means

"too bad" in German and turned away.

Susan looked at me bewildered, "Didn't he say he spoke English?"
"So he did," I said and ran back for directions.

We had a wonderful day in Lucerne. The drive back with Jeanne was truly excitng, although I'm not sure it was good for my heart. "You never have to worry when passing with a 12-cylinder Jaguar," she said.

THE ACCOUSTICAL rehearsal at 5:30 p.m. was short but interesting. The hall was very small and the woodwork resonated with each loud chord. Its appearance was every bit as charming as I rememberd from the 1979 Tour with Antal Dorati. The orchestra sounded ready for the evening concert.

There were a number of local General Motors people at this rehearsal. General Motors, sponsor of the tour, hosted a reception honoring the orchestra between the rehearsal and the concert.

Jack Harned of Bloomfield Hills, public relations representative for GM who is handling our tour, was busy directing the news media and video people throughout the hall.

From a musician's standpoint, the opening night was ideal. It felt like everyone was "on." The hall vibrated, the instruments sang and the audience responded. Four encores later it was all over and we were packing for Lausanne.

Felix Resnick of Huntington Woods, violinist with the orchestra and conductor of the Birmingham-Bloomfield Symphony, invited all his friends to the Oliver Twist, a pub in town managed by an Irishman whose sister sings in Felix's son's band in Texas. Small world, eh?

band in Texas. Small world, eh?

Later that night in the lounge of the hotel, Deborah Borda, executive director of the Detroit Symphony, dropped by to give words of praise and encouragement to members of the orchestra.

DAY 4, Tuesday, luggage had to be ready for 8 a.m. Train left at 10:20 a.m. for Lausanne. Our destination was still Switzerland, but the language is now French, and the architecture looked decidedly different than that in Zurich.

The hotel was beautiful. France was just across the lake and if you read the signs you would have thought you were there. The people were very friendly but the hall

Theatre de Beaulieu is part of a huge building and doesn't offer the visual or accoustical charm of the Zurich Tonhalle. The sound is reminicient of Ford Auditorium and the orchestra worked hard to overcome dead spots on the stage. The crowd

MERICAN art lovers are in for a European treat at Madonna College.

An art exhibit showcasing the work of Polish master Stefan Derbich opens Sunday, in the school's Library Building at Schoolcraft and Levan, Livonia.

Derbich, 80, is a modern-day Michelangelo. More than 50 Polish cathedrals are adorned with murals, altars, stained glass, larger-than-life-size mosaics, gold leaf, paintings — even chandeliers and furniture — Derbich was commissioned to design.

Derbich stood on scaffolding up to seven stories high to complete portions of the work.

Exhibit-goers will delight in Derbich's multidimensional talents. The one-man show runs through Feb. 28. Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. weekdays, and 2-4 p.m. Sundays.

THE MASTER IS equally at home with portraits, landscapes and abstract painting, old world and contemporary art. He's even designed restaurant interiors and restored the town hall in his hometown of Poznan, Poland.

Derbich moved with his wife, Emilia, to Farmington in 1986.

"You think of something, and he's done it," said his daughter Emilia Palmer of Farmington Hills, who with Madonna's Sister Angeline is coordinating the exposition. Derbich's status in the international art community has been evident at international fairs, where his work has been displayed alongside that of the world's top artists. His work has been displayed in one-man shows in cities throughout Poland, at the Galeria at St. Mary's College in Orchard Lake and at the Helen DeRoy Art Exhibit in Farmington Derbich has been awarded scholarships from the Ministry of Art and Culture in Warsaw, and from the cities of Ostrow and Poznan.

He studied art at the Academy of Art in Poznan 1925-1931. Derbich also studied under Professor T. Prouszkowski at the Academy of Fine Arts in Warsaw.

Derbich was born in Berlin in 1908 during the partition of Poland. From 1940 to 1945 during the German occupation of Poland, the artist was imprisoned in a work camp and forced to work for the armament industry.

"THE GERMANS WANTED me to paint Hitler during the war. I told them I couldn't paint people," said Derbich.

Poland's tragic history is reflected in the artist's abstract work. Outstretched hands and expression-filled faces recur as themes in the colorful paintings.

A Tremor-ous event

Normally the Festival of Trees occurs amid holiday trappings in a gala wintry setting in Detroit's Cobo Center. But there's a new wrinkle in the annual benefit to raise money for Children's Hospital's research department. A kind of branching out, so to speak — needed when the December event fell short of its financial goal, it all happens Monday at a special Festival of Trees fashion and hair show being presented by Jacobson's of Livonia in cooperation with Charisma hair salon in the area's trendiest spot, Tremore, at the corner of Six Mile and 1-275, Livonia. Doors open at 1:30 p.m. with an hors d'oeuvres buffet followed by a preview of spring fashions and hair designs. Donation is $40. The event's coordinator is Betty Jean Awrey (right) shown here checking out a three-piece fashion bolero jacket and pants ensemble that will be shown. At the left is Jacobson manager John Purkiss. The benefit is open to the public.

reading. I read slow and when I do sit down to read I usually fall fast asleep. But one place I do in the bathtub. For some reason, I enjoy reading the labels on shampoo. They are a riot. Like who needs to read the need-to-read directions? If they did need to read directions, they probably shouldn't be in the tub unattended.

But the ingredients are especially hu-morous. First, they put stuff in there that's hard to pronounce, like, dodecylbenzenesulfonate. Then they put in stuff that is just plain hard to believe, like "milk and honey." I'm sure! They probably mix enough shampoo to fill a swimming pool and then add one drop of milk and one

One I saw the other day read, "Essence of oak leaves." Give me a break. But do you know what? Some people give me an equally cynical look when I tell them what is in paper or what art boards are espe-cially good for a particular media.

BASICALLY THE two main types of illustration board are hot press and cold press. Hot press is very smooth and is a perfect surface for pen and ink. When my students do any commercial job or lesson, I like them to use a technical pen on hot your hands clean. press illustration board. India ink or technical pen ink merely dries on the surface board which comes in a 30 by 40 size, so it of the board. Any mistakes can, therefore, be easily picked off with an X-acto knife when the ink is dry.

NFORTUNATELY I do very little and merely stains the illustration board and repairs require opaque white, which is more obvious. Hot press is best suited for pen and ink, textured screens and pencil.
Cold press illustration board has a very fine tooth or texture and is receptive to many media. The most popular media suited for cold press would be pencil, pens and ink, felt markers, airbrush, water color, colored pencils, charcoal and pastels, gouache and even acrylic paint. The best thing about illustration board is that it is hardy and stands up well to erasing.

Crescent makes several excellent boards. One is Number 215 board, which is plate smooth and extra white. It is good for inking and especially suited for keylining and camera paste-ups. Line Kote is another specialty board and many artists don't even know about it. Line Kote is also smooth but it has a white clay coating and this offers the artist a beautiful inking surface and the benefit of scratch board for repairs or textures. Any error can be scratched off with no tattletale gray

I WOULD HASTEN to mention that because of the clay coating, graphite and smudges do not erase well. So it is advisable to transfer onto line kote and keep Crescent's latest item is all black. This board is excellent for photographers who like to only mount their photos for their portfolio. On one side is raven black, which has a slight texture and on the other side is 921, which is very smooth black. The core of this board is also black. So, however you cut it, you always have a black mounting board and edge.

Did you know there is an illustration board that is acid-free? This board is double thick and has a wonderful texture for watercolor. Before I leave the Crescent line, did you know that there is such a thing as "charko-board?" This board comes in white, tan and moss green. It has a nice, fine sharp tooth for all media, but it is especially great for charcoals and pastels. A 32-by-40-inch sells for $3.25.

Of course, there are many qualities, thicknesses and varieties of illustration boards. Every year it seems there are new specialty boards available to artists, architects and draftsmen.

Well, a camera club could be just what you need - a place to exchange ideas and to socialize with other photographers. Club dues are minimal and the advantages are maximum. Some clubs are small, some large, and they meet often enough that you're bound to find one that fits your schedule. Clubs are found all over the metropolitan area, from Wyandotte to Utica, from Mil-

Getting in is easy. Watch your local newspaper for announcements or call Loretta Williams, Greater Detroit Camera Club Council president, 548-9087, for information.

Visiting musicians need lodging

The Belgian Youth Brass Band "Kempisch Jeugdfanfare-Orkest" will be performing in the Detroit area July 24-27. Approximately 70 musicians between the ages of 12 and 24 need accommodations during their stay. Limited transportation may also be required between the performance sites of Livonia and Grosse Pointe

Families interested in providing hospitality to one or more of these youths, can call Fran Marable, 776-8076 or 776-8500 or Carol West at Madonna College, 591-5044. One of the orchestra's performances will be part of the Music Under the Stars series in Civic Center Park, sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission.

A camera club's primary function is to promote a common interest and love of photography. And nowhere will you find more willingness to share knowledge and help others than in a camera club. The camaraderie is inspiring.

Clubs have competitions, slide shows, guest speakers, modeling ses-sions, even field trips. Whether your interests are in color slides, black and white prints, color prints or even stereo pictures, you'll find creative outlets in the camera clubs.

Day 5, Wednesday, 9 a.m. luggage in the hall and 10 a.m. departure to the train station. Our local guide was really funny. Susan and I were on bus Two and the fiesty lady loved to talk on the bus microphone. That morning she gave us directions for our train boarding and complaining that the first bus left the hotel with-

"I'm very unpleased with this driver," she said over the microphone, "I will give him a problem when I see him. This is not good Swiss work," she emphasized. Everyone in the bus laughed. She paused and reflected, "Then again, he's Italian." More laughter.

BERN IS the capital and we were split between two hotels. The hotels and the hall are in the center of town. This hall was new for all of us. We didn't play here on the 1979 tour.

The Casino Hall was next to our hotel. No gambling, just music-mak-ing. It looked and sounded a lot like the hall in Zurich, although a bit more colorful and elegant. The balcony goes all the way around the hall and the section behind the orchestra seems to be filled mainly with students seated on long benches.

Susan heard the concert from here and referred affectionately to the experience as "sitting in the bleachers." The audience was very responsive and we played three encores.

The real highlight of the evening was seeing Antal Dorati's widow, Ilsa Von Alpenheim, who came to hear the concert and see her orchestra friends. The occasion was more emotional than she expected. He died last year and she couldn't fight back a steady stream of tears.

"I'm embarrassed," she told me, 'perhaps I should not have come." After assuring her it was OK and that we were honored by her presence, I gave the special lady a big
