City expects higher voter turnout Tuesday

Little impact seen from ballot proposals

staff writer

Voters will decide on two school finance proposals Tuesday that officials say will have little effect on Plymouth-Canton schools. Proposal A would increase the sales tax a half-cent to 41/2 cents.

The new revenue would generate an estimated $400 million for Michigan schools the first year. Approximately $285 million would be added to the general school aid formula, going mainly to low-income districts. Approximately $115 million would be spent on specific pro-

Proposal B would increase the sales tax to 6 cents and reduce property taxes. It also would set permanent school operating millages not subject to voter renewal and dedicate money for local schools. The House Taxation Committee estimates B would generate $325 million for education the first

The proposals are the only issues on the ballot in Plymouth Township. Voters in the city are also selecting council members.

Taking care to avoid using the word "oppose," the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education last week voted 4-0-3 to recommend approval of neither A nor B.

Residents may vote on both proposals. Should both be approved, the one with the most yes votes will

A higher-than-usual voter turnout is predicted for Tuesday's election, in which Plymouth voters will choose four city commissioners.

"There seems to be a lot of campaigning this time, with all the signs and fliers," said Linda Langmesser, Plymouth city clerk. "The candidates are out there stating their

"I'm going to venture a guess; 25 percent, I'm probably being kind," Langmesser said.

The two state school finance-property tax reform proposals, also before Plymouth voters, are the only issues Plymouth Township voters will consider in this election.

BUT ESTHER Hulsing, township clerk, said "The number of absentee ballots we've mailed is higher than four years ago" and predicted as many as 6,000 votes could be cast.

Requests for absentee ballots are. also up in Plymouth, Langmesser said - 764 through Monday. "We usually get about 80 percent back," she said, adding 300 absentee ballots were in by Monday.

Voters will choose four of seven candidates for the city commission. Among the seven are three incumbents: James Jabara, Robert Jones and Ralph (Jack) Kenyon.

The four challengers seeking seats on the commission are Gregory Green, Jean Morrow, Jerry Vorva and John Vos. THE TOP three vote-getters will win four-year terms to the commission. The fourth finisher will be elected to a two-year term.

City commissioners are part-time elected officials. They annually adopt the municipal budget and tax rate, set general policy and act on rezoning requests.

They're paid $10 per meeting. Registered voters in Plymouth can cast ballots 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Tuesday, at three locations. In precincts 1, 4 and 5, voters can cast ballots at the Plymouth Cultur-can be picked up no later than Saturday at city hall. Ballots must be turned in by 10 a.m. Tuesday at city Votes, cast on voting machines, will likely be tabulated by 10 p.m., Langmesser said.

All seven candidates took part in a candidates forum Oct. 24, sponsored by the League of Women voters and filmed by Omnicom cable TV.

It's scheduled for airing at 6:30 p.m. today, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and at 4:30 p.m. Monday

Attorney at JOA hearing

A Canton attorney was among eight area residents who got their first look at the U.S. Supreme Court on Monday, and it wasn't all that big of a deal.

"I wasn't particularly overcome with awe," said Bruce Patterson, who has a law practice in Plymouth. "It's a large courtroom, but not the largest I've ever been in.

"I've been practicing law for 17 years, I've argued before the Court of Appeals before," said Patterson.

Accident near schools spurs safety study

By Diane Gale staff writer

A move to study traffic conditions near Plymouth-Canton high schools on Canton Center and Joy roads was revived shortly after a student struck by a car near the schools last

The traffic survey will target the 45 mph speed limit on Canton Center from Joy to Sheldon Center roads, according to Pat Nemecek, Canton public safety information officer.

Recent road changes that have affected traffic flows have been made, according to Dale Goby, school. transportation director.

They are: • The construction of the Sheldon Center connector road south of Joy Road to alleviate traffic flows on Canton Center and away from school

• The widening of Canton Center to make it easier for motorists entering and leaving the school parking lot.

• The addition of a passing lane on Canton Center to help alleviate traffic back-ups for motorists not going to the school.

The study would log traffic flows, the speeds motorists travel and the low pedestrian and vehicle rules is difficult, Goby said. "I suggest the right issue here is putting sidewalks in the area," Goby said. "And it's there 24 hours a day for kids to use."

MORE THAN 700 high school students aren't eligible for bus transportation/ About 4,100 students attend the two high schools.

If 50 parents demanded Canton Township officials install sidewalks, Goby said, "in time sidewalks would be there.'

A traffic light at Canton Center in front of the school has been considered for three years, Goby said.

"It may offer protection for students as pedestrians, but it may not help traffic," Goby said. "The simple solution is if you have a problem you put up a traffic light, and studies show sometimes this produces additional problems. In many instances

Schools to show R-rated films over protests

By M.B. Dillon staff writer

Plymouth-Canton school officials have no plans to remove R-rated films from the classroom despite objections from a citizens' organiza-

About 75 picketers, predominantly members of a Christian group called Citizens for Better Education, protested the showing of the film "Excalibur" outside Plymouth-Canton High School on Monday afternoon.

Shown to British literature classes, "Excalibur" includes a rape scene and violence, said Diane Daskalakis of CBE.

Weather permitting, CBE plans to picket each time one of 14 R-rated films is shown in Plymouth-Canton schools this semester, Daskalakis

"Excalibur has been shown twice this year," said Daskalakis. "It is vi-olence against women. You have a small child, aged 7 or 8, watching her mother being raped. There's frontal nudity and intercourse.

"I don't understand how our children can respect us when we show the board, which unanimously apthem this type of stuff."

The controversial scene in "Excalibur," a film based on the legend of King Arthur, depicts King Uther making love against a curtain of flames to Igrayne, a woman who is not his wife.

Richard Egli, district community relations director, said the scene is "an integral part of the story, artful-"This scene is done in order that the viewer might understand the unworthiness of Uther to be king and perhaps to hint at a flaw in the offspring of that union, Arthur." Students must have permission slips signed by their parents to see the film. For students whose parents object to the film, other material is available for study, Egli said.

CBE formally objected to "Excalibur" in 1986. A review committee comprised of two residents, a librarian, a teacher and an allow that the control of the con upheld the use of the film. The finding was appealed to Superintendent John Hoben who agreed with the committee. CBE then approached

The movies are shown in Advanced Science Fiction, Approaching the Arts and English classes.

There are no plans to reconsider use of the films in classes, Egli said. "YOU CAN'T HAVE censorship by picket line," Eigli said. "And it's of little value to picket something that's already been judged.
"The board is the word of the district. If you have a majority on the board, you can obviously make changes in policy. The other films will go through the changes precedure and whatever is decided will be followed.

Under Proposal B, there would be additional property tax credits for seniors and low-income people. The lowering of property taxes would reduce the circuit-breaker tax credit for some individuals.

IT'S DIFFICULT to say how the enactment of A or B would affect voters' pocketbooks, said Diane Barnes, assistant district.

"Your scenario is only as good as otions. No matter what you put out, someone can come out with something else and be just as

"When you're projecting reve-nue, especially on the state economy, your assumptions are all over the board," Barnes said.

NONETHELESS, DISTRICT officials are taking a stab at predicting the impact of both proposals.

If Proposal A passes, a family of four with an income of $35,000 would pay approximately $30 more in taxes per year, Hoedel said. Proposal A doesn't affect income taxes or property taxes. Under Proposal B, middle-income families would notice no difference in their taxes, Hoedel said.

Property tax savings of $523 would be offset by $150 in increased sales taxes, $314 in lost state property tax credits, and $59 in lost federal income tax savings.

For a four-member upper middle income family, Proposal B would mean a net tax loss of $7. Assuming an income of $40,000 and ownership of a $100,000 house, taxpayers would save $747 in property taxes. But they'd spend an additional $222 in sales tax, lose $448 in property tax credits and lose another $84 in federal income tax

"Her presence was disruptive, because when she came in and we didn't know what the purpose of her visit was. She became the focus. Kids were asking, 'What is she doing here? Is she watching you? Is she watching us? Who is she?' All those things really diverted students' attention from the task at hand, which is education."

Schneider said she'd "feel a whole lot better" about visitations if she knew the reasons for them. If they're just looking to see what it is we do, we need to know that.

"She didn't speak to me. The purpose I was given was to monitor the showing of Excalibur. What is that? Visitations need to be clear; what their function is, and is it board interest or are they acting as citizens - and what are they looking for?

"No where else do you ever hear of anyone coming and and watching you and not telling you what it is they're looking for. Originally I was given to understand the visit would be one day. At the end of one hour, it turned into five days total. My own administrators don't spend five consecutive days in my class-

"I hope everyone can remember that we gave them more money, she said. "They want more money and more classroom secrecy."

Schneider said "Excalibur" is an effective adjunct to the unit she teaches on Arthurian legend and chivalry and their effect on medieval society.

The film "points out some of the problems that occurred with chivalry," said Schneider. "We do read Morte D'Arthur by Thomas Malory, and this movie is based on that, within the time constraints of a movie. It's the most faithful rendition of this work."

"That's a mind-boggling figure." The taxation committee asked Treasury Department officials to estimate how much money schools and PTAs will lose by paying the sales tax.

Kosteva said HB 5130 won't be considered again until the taxation committee has this figure.

COMPLICATING THE issue is Senate Bill 581, which passed the nate last week and now also is in the House Taxation Committee.

SB 581 exempts all non-profit organizations in Michigan, including schools and PTAs, from the 4 percent sales tax.

Kosteva said the possibility of this bill passing the House is slim. Katz compared the success of SB

"On Wednesday we hear about the House and get depressed. On Thursday we hear about SB 581 and get elated. It's an emotional roller coaster."

PTAS STARTED paying and levying the sales tax in mid-1989 after Treasury Department officials told them they had to at the group's state convention in May.

The Michigan PTA since has become one of the few non-profit groups in Michigan actively pushing for the tax exemption.

The law requiring non-profit groups to pay the state sales tax has been on the books since the early 1930s but apparently Treasury officials overlooked it until recent-

Police arrest three for drunk driving rested by Plymouth police Sunday. Shortly after midnight, police spotted the driver of a red 1986 Ford speeding westbound on Plymouth Road. He was traveling at 56 mph in a 35 mph zone.

The driver refused to pull over, and the officer turned on the siren twice before the man turned right on Church and stopped.

The motorist, who smelled of alcohol, told the officer he'd had a few drinks before 8 p.m. The man failed several sobriety tests, police said. The man's car was parked on Church Street at his request. He was transported to the station where his blood alcohol level was found to be .31. A blood alcohol level of 0.10 is considered legally drunk in Michi-The driver was printed, mugged

The driver traveled down Penniman at 45 mph before he was pulled over at Church Street.

His eyes were glassy, and he smelled of intoxicants. He told the officer, "My foot might have been a little heavy on the lead."

The man failed several sobriety tests and later was tested for blood alcohol, which was measured at 0.15.

While waiting to take the test, the driver advised he'd been drinking at the Silverdome all day and didn't expect to pass the breath test. He was given a court date of Nov. 20.

Two school finance proposals are on the Nov. 7 state ballot, but the bigbattle is over Proposal A -, a half-, cent increase in Michigan's 4-cent i posal- A is close in the polls, with 47 percent favoring it and 50 percent opposed.

It is endorsed by Gov. James Blanchard and the business-labor establishment that served on the Harden Commission. Their committee has been able to raise advertising money for a $3 million campaign. Half is coming from the Michigan Education Association.

PROPOSAL B is more extensive in its potential impact - a 2-cent increase in the sales tax with school operating property tax cuts averaging 37 percent for farms and homes, 22 percent for businesses.

But Proposal B trails badly in the polls, - 40 percent in favor and 56 percent opposed. Moreover, although the League of Women Voters a many outstate school boards support it, they have yet to raise any money to change voters' minds.

Chief opponents of both are the Michigan State Chamber of Compolls, and Taxpayers United, the group organized in 1977 by Richard H. Headlee, whose name is on the 1978 tax limitation amendment.

The Republican Party is deeply split. Half the 20 GOP state sena favor B. The other half oppose both - a group that includes John Engler, the probable 1990 gubernatorial nominee.

As Tuesday's vote approaches, two matters become clear:

· It's easy to decide how to vote if you want to do what's best for your local school district.

 It's far more difficult if you want to vote your pocketbook.

Each proposal is being touted as best for Michigan's public school students as a whole. But voters are rarely that altruistic.

Self-interest, whether on the part

Either one (Proposal A or Proposal B) or the other is going to become law.'

of school districts or individuals, may well decide the issue.

Though no one is saying either proposal will bring about equality among Michigan's public school districts - and voters are free to approve both - the choice between Proposal A and Proposal B still shapes up as a battle between the haves and have nots.

Local district endorsements prove will have to share a portion of its auto plant, office and mall jax reve-nue with other, less-developed, dis-tricts throughout the state. And that is something local officials are obviously loath to do.

In heavily residential Redford Union, school officials are endersing both proposals. But they say they prefer Proposal B, precisely because of its tax-sharing provision. As a rule — and regardless of official board positions - districts that receive direct state aid are pulling for Proposal B. These in-formula districts include Redford Union, Wayne-Westland and Garden City.

"We've encouraged voters to ex-plore both proposals, but B would be best," Garden City Superintendent Michael Wilmot said.

Out-of-formula districts, like Livonia and South Redford, generally prefer Proposal A, though their support appears lukewarm at best. Livonia board members only urged

Schoolcraft joins campaign to get more state aid

Proposal A and Proposal B would grant more state aid to public school districts, not community colleges.

But community college leaders say they are in the same position as many school districts. Simply put, they're not getting enough money from Lansing.

Schoolcraft College officials last week approved a resolution calling on the state to finance community colleges under terms of a 1984 House/Senate agreement, which they said has been too long ignored. Other community colleges are doing likewise.

"WE HAVE agreed to the formula," Schoolcraft president Richard McDowell said. "The problem is, it's never been fully funded."

Schoolcraft would receive an additional $400,000 - and all community colleges a combined $18 million — if the five-year-old formula was fully financed.

Community colleges are currently receiving $212 million from the state, though McDowell said that figure should be $230 million.

'That's what House and Senate fiscal agents said it should be based on the formula," he said.

ing state aid for the 1990-91 school year. By then, community college leaders said, the state would have to provide an additional $25 million or more than $1,000 for for each community college student.

NAMED FOR ITS sponsors, state Sen. Harry Gast, R-St. Joseph, and state Rep. Thomas Mathieu, D-Grand Rapids, the formula is designed to divide state aid among Michigan's 29 community colleges. Community colleges account for 40 percent of Michigan's total college population. Because of that, community college leaders say their 3 percent share of the state's general fund is inadequate.

Proposal A and Proposal B, to be decided by voters Tuesday, involve public school districts, not communi-

"We took no position on either," McDowell said. "We know Proposal B would affect property taxes, but whether that would affect us, I don't think anyone could say at this time."

Schoolcraft levies a community college operating tax in the Livonia, Plymouth-Canton, Garden City, Clarenceville and Northville public school districts, as well as in a small portion of Novi Schools.

Here is the wording Michigan voters will see on the Nov. 7 ballot for two school finance proposals:

PROPOSAL A

A proposal to increase the sales/ use tax from 4 cents to 4.5 cents per dollar and constitutionally dedicate funds for local schools.

The proposed constitutional mendment would:

1) Constitutionally dedicate to schools: a) half-cent increase in sales/use tax; b) Current statutory revenue sources, including lottery profits and some cigarette/liquor sales/use tax (51 percent to 68 per-cent) to substantially replace annual school appropriation.

2) Distribute dedicated funds to school districts as provided by law.

3) Activate increased statutory penalty to deny 100 percent of state funds to schools not adopting core curriculum and improvement plans. Should this proposal be adopted?

House eyes repeal of 1840s abortion la

A bill to decriminalize abortion is on the state House of Representatives' agenda after clearing a friendly Judiciary Committee. "Anti-abortion laws are vestiges of the Dark Ages. My procedure was safe but illegal," said Arlene S. Law, a retired University of Michigan professor who admitted having an abortion in 1957 when she was a 17year-old high school honors student in Birmingham.

The committee gave 11-6 support Tuesday to House Bill 5170, which would amend the penal code by repealing an 1840s law making it a felony to perform an abortion. Sponsor is Rep. Teola Hunter, D-Detroit.

er, on a companion "freedom of choice " bill by Rep. Maxine Berman, D-Southfield.

to place state regulations on abortions following last summer's U.S. Supreme Court rulings.

Berman's HB 5211 says the state couldn't compel a woman either to terminate or continue her pregnancy. Berman cited other states where developmentally disabled women were forced into sterilization.

"That is abhorrent," she said. "The Legislature should remove itself from the abortion issue."

The Judiciary Committee, chaired by the pro-choice Rep. Perry Bullard, D-Ann Arbor, has yet to look at a Senate-passed bill to require girls 17 and under to get either parental or probate court permission for an abortion.

The Senate Human Services Committee is looking at four other bills

THE LAW making the performing of an abortion a felony is unconstitutional but still legally valid, experts told the committee.

Thus, if the U.S. Supreme Court should reverse the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision protecting the right to abortion, Michigan would be in a position to prosecute doctors, nurses and hospitals which perform

One of the six nay votes was cast by Rep. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield.

"It was quite a surprise" that the Hunter bill came up, he said after the hearing. "I just got notice of it side was prepared to testify."

Honigman, an attorney, was bothered by the possibility that Hunter's bill might make it impossible to prosecute one who performs an election of the control abortion on a viable fetus in even the ninth month of pregnancy.

But in the hearing, Bullard said another section of the penal code prohibits abortion of a viable fetus.

Only Right to Life opposed the measure. "There would be a public policy vacuum (if the Roe decision were overturned)," said RTL spokesman Ed Rivet.

BUT IF THE anti-abortion forces were barely geared up, pro-choice

Bullard happily announced that the American Civil Liberties Union,

League of Women Voters, National Organization of Women of Ann Ar-bor, National Lawyers Guild and Na-tional Council Against Domestic Violence and others were there in sup-

The personal abortion story came from Dr. Law, who said she lived in Honigman's West Bloomfield district when "I became pregnant in the back seat of a Chevy" at her older brother's Hillsdale College fraternity party in 1957. Law, a retired U-M professor of education and now a Hartland resident, said that after an unnamed Birmingham gynecologist scolded her, she had considered suicide and a coat hanger abortion until a "worldly man" active in Birmingham Village Players showed her another op-

The man guided her to a clinic on Seven Mile Road in Detroit and gave her $300 cash. Law said two doctors there thoroughly explained the suction procedure, and a nurse afterward checked her signs and gave her prescriptions for antibiotics.

"This statute does not apply to the woman — just the doctors, hospitals and nurses," she said.

From the moment the session opened, Bullard clearly had the votes to report the bill out favorably. But the six-member minority still made its arguments.

"There has been no debate on the rights of the child," said Rep. Nick Ciaramitaro, D-Roseville, legislative spokesman for Right to Life. "Do we protect some people's rights or all people's rights?" Added Rep. William Van Regenmorter, R-Jenison: "Is a fetus a person? We've avoided the question. And what percentage of (aborted) fetuses are female versus male?"

Meteor shower, comets highlight November sky

On the morning of Nov. 17, the moon forms an elongated triangle with Pollus (PAWL lux) and Castor, the twin stars in Gemini. Each star its a "head" of one of the twins. Pollux is to the north (right) of the moon; Castor is north of Pollux.

That morning is also when the Leonid meteor shower reaches its maximum. The Leonids are named for the constellation of Leo, which is east (left) of Gemini and looks like a giant backward question mark.

The Leonids are no more impressive than the S. Taurids were earlier this month; expect an average of 15 meteors each hour. The Leonids are notable for having been very spectacular in 1833 when thousand of meteors lit up the sky.

Such a display is not expected in 1989. There is, however, a 33-year cycle in the Leonid display. If you wait until 1999, the Leonids may put on a very impressive show.

The bright star to the east (left) of the moon on the morning of Nov. 19 is Regulus (REG u lus), the "heart" of Leo the lion.

Last-quarter moon is at 11:44 p.m.

the moon has passed Reg

The moon is in Virgo on the morning of Nov. 24. The bright star to the east (left) of the moon is Spica (SPY ca). The position of the moon also points us to the location of a new comet, one that could be visible to

COMET Okazaki-Levi-Rudenko (named for all three of its discoverers) was first seen telescopically in Kiyomi Okazaki photographed it Aug. 24 with a 10-inch Schmidt camera. Veteran comet hunter David Levi of Arizona spotted it visually with his 16-inch reflector telescope the following night, and Michael Ru-denko of Massachusetts did the same with a 6-inch refractor Aug. 26.

It has been moving from the constellation Bootes (bo OH tees,) which is north of (above) Virgo, into Virgo itself. On Nov. 24 the comet will be near Spica, just above the uppercusp of the waning (fading) crescent moon. The comet will certainly be visible with binoculars, and might even be bright enough to be seen

OF ALL the objects appearing in our sky, one of the most exciting to see is a comet.

The word "comet" comes from the Greek word "kometis," which means "hairy star." A comet looks like a furry star!

Because a bright comet is rarely seen, the appearance of one usually terrified the ancient skywatchers. Most believed comets were mysterious objects; they would appear unexpectedly, then slowly fade from view. All kinds of stories were concocted to explain the reason for their appearance.

IT WASN'T until an English astronomer named Edmond Halley (HALL ee) came along that our understanding of comets began to improve. He had noted a regular 76year interval where historical records made mention that a bright comet had appeared.

Halley made the very daring proposal that comets orbited the sun and predicted that this same bright comet would return in the year 1759.

What made this prediction all the more remarkable was that it was made at a time when the orbits of the planets weren't fully understood.

Many laughed at Halley, but the comet did return. To honor his prediction, the comet was named in Halley's honor. But he did not live to see his prediction fulfilled. He would have been 102 years old if he had!

A COMET can appear in any part of the sky at any time of the year. Infamous Comet Kohoutek was seen in 1973 and named for the man who first spotted it when it was far from Comet Kobayashi-Berger-Milon was seen in 1975 and named for all three of its discoverers. Comet West appeared in 1975 and put on a magnificent display in the pre-dawn sky. The recent appearance of famous Comet Halley was not expected to be exceptional, and it lived up to those expectations!

A comet is the biggest bunch of nothing to be called something there is. It's not much more than a dirty tail begins to form and the comet becomes visible. The comet's tail is produced as the energy of the sun strikes the comet, which makes the comet heat up and vaporize. The sun blows the stream of vapor out into space, causing the tail to always point away from the sun.

WHEN A COMET disintegrates all its debris continues to follow the same orbit around the sun. As the Earth passes through the stream of debris, we have showers of particles falling through our atmosphere. We can predict when the Earth will enter the stream, so we know when the major meteor showers will occur.

It is very difficult to predict exactly how impressive (or unimpressive) Comet Okazaki-Levi-Rudenko will become. We are not certain that a related spectacular meteor shower will be seen.

The only certainty is that the opportunity of seeing a bright comet is very rare. Everyone should make an attempt to see this one. The moon points right to it!

THE MOON also points the way to Mars on the morning of Nov. 26. Face the southeast, approximately 45 minutes before sunrise, to see the moon. Five degrees to the east (left) of the moon is Mars, the red planet. Using binoculars, look for a star named Alpha Libers (LEE) bray), at-most directly above blars. Alpha Libers also has a real mages as well: Zuben Elgenubi (200) has el-gen U bil) which means the "south-

At one time, the neighboring constellation of Scorpius included this star as its southern claw. Of course there is a "northern claw" as will. Beta Librae is named Zuben Epone 11 (1970) chamali (200 ben es she MA li.)

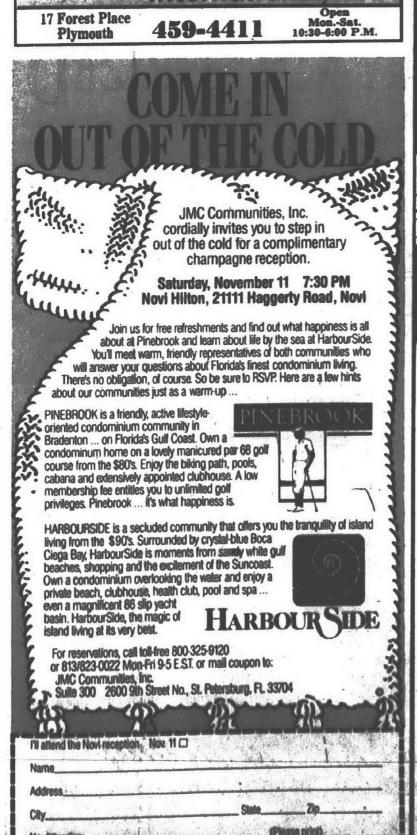

NEW MOON is at 4:41 a.m. à Nov. 28. The moon is between the Earth and the sun, and is not visible.

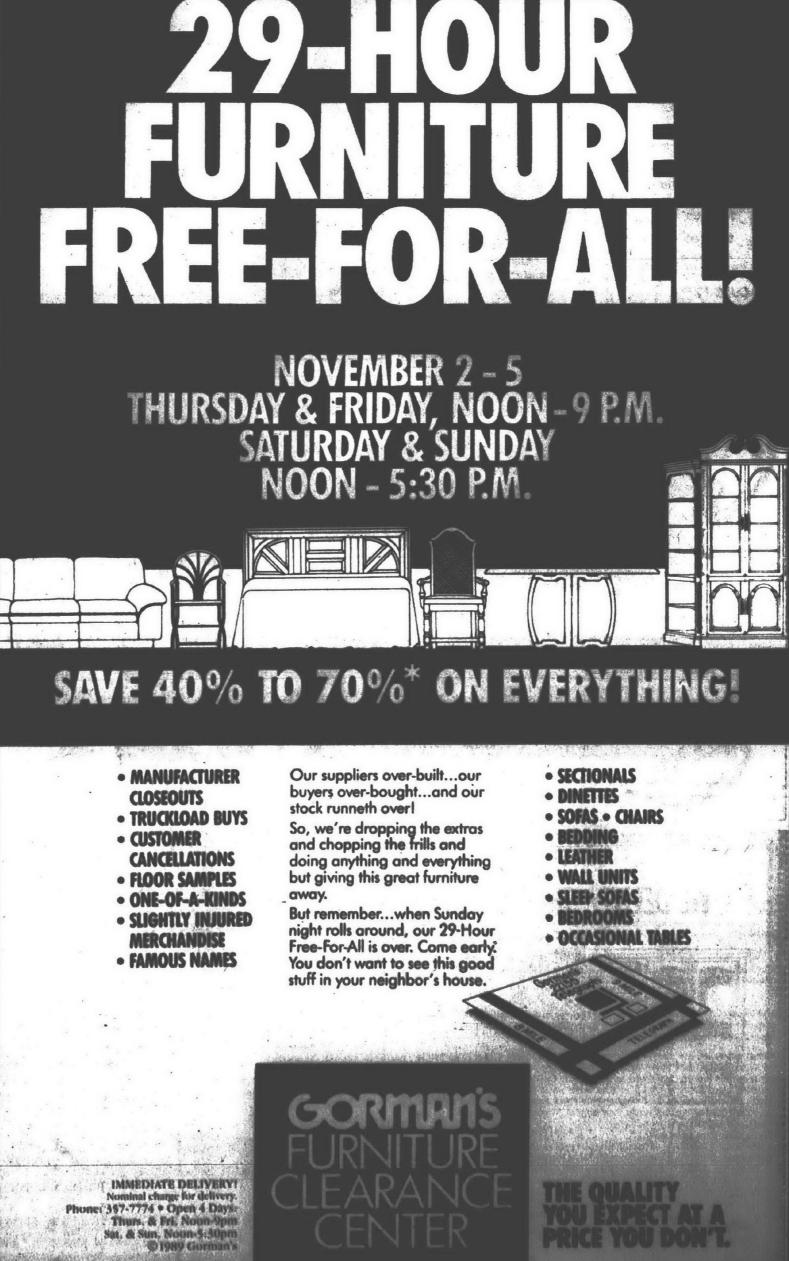

Face west, one-half hour after sunset, Nov. 29. Venus is about as lar south (left) of Saturn, as Saturn was south of Venus four weeks earlier. On the evening of Nov. 30, the twoday-old crescent moon is five degrees below Saturn.

An excellent aid for learning constellations and keeping up to date with the sky is the monthly "Sky Calendar." A one-year subscription is $6. It is available from Abrams Planetarium, Michigan State University, East Lansing 48824.

Waste not: Less garbage, more recycling in 199 to paying by the pound to get of your garbage. Your house if have more recycling bins than trash cans. And your supermarket food will probably come with a little less super-wrapping. Solid-waste specialists say such changes are inevitable because of an g crunch on the garbage et: Half the nation's 6,000 dumps will be filled and closed in the '90s.

The ride into the "recycling dec-ade" may be bumpy. Buyers for reeycled newspaper, glass and plastic are sometimes difficult to find. Breaking the generations-old habit of tossing everything into one garbage can may prove daunting. New recycling systems need hefty upfront appropriations.

But the specialists see overwhelming motivations for change:

The cost of simply throwing things away is rising, as communities ship their garbage farther and farther away and new environmental regulations make dump maintenance more expensive.

· People are growing more conperned about cleaning up the planet. A Media General-Associated Press poll earlier this year found that 87 percent of Americans would back a requirement to separate their trash rules will require dump inspections for recycling.

"ENVIRONMENTAL AWARE-NESS is growing by leaps and bounds," said Sylvia Lowrance, diector of the Environmental Protection Agency's office of solid waste. 'We're going to see a lot of peer pressure, neighborly pressure on people not to throw away everything."

In garbage, the future is also the ast. Greater recycling and reuse of discarded material would represent return to pre-World War II ways in America, including fewer-frills ackaging on food products.

"By the end of the decade, I think recycling is going to be part of the cultural fabric of society," said Bruce Weddle, director of EPA's municipal solid waste program. People will be separating out all bottles, cans, newspapers, plastics, leaves and grass clippings instead of throwing them in one can."

THE TRANSITION will not occur overnight, the experts say. But "even with the recalcitrant ones," said Lowrance, "when it hits their pocketbook, they are going to become re-

The EPA predicts recycling will jump to 25 percent by 1992. Some states, such as Massachusetts, have set a 50 percent recycling goal by the year 2000. That would mean widespread recovery of food and yard waste, which amounts to 23 percent of what is buried in dumps."

Jail overcrowding

Police send prisoners north to ease space crunch

Livonia is sending its prisoners to jail in Alpena. Westland is sending the accused to lockups in Shiawassee or Huron counties.

Those convicted of misdemeaner offenses in Canton Township are likely to serve their 30 day sentences

District court judges across Wayne County are pleading for space for their prisoners downtown at the rate of 10 to 20 requests a week, according to Judge Richard C.
Kaufman, chief of the Wayne County Circuit Court.

In fact, the Wayne County Jail overcrowding has become so severe in recent weeks that pre-trial armed robbers are being released, according to Kaufman. Those prisoners are being sent back to local district lockups, where a 72 hour holding limit is in effect.

The jail (population) is almost entirely pre-trial violent felons," Kaufman said.

"In the four years I've been pre-siding over the jail, this is the worst (overcrowding) has been."

It has become standard practice to exceed the maximum of 1,550 prisoners by 200, Kaufman said. And the new county jail is still two years

JAIL OVERCROWDING has been an issue in Wayne County since the mid 1970s — first as the result of a lawsuit which decreased the number of prisoners who could be housed. It was compounded by the closing of the Detroit House of Corrections earlier this decade, and further frustrated by the slow process of getting voters to approve a hond proposal to build the new jail.

Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano said in the interim, his department will continue to search for jail space out of the county, and has contracted 32 beds with Oakland County and 32 beds with Alpena jails. But some law enforcement officials don't think the county is doing enough.

While privatization was mentioned as a possible solution — that is hiring a private company to house prisoners — Ficano dismissed that he said. "Plus you would need legislation to do it (in Michigan)." Westland police spokesman Mi-chael Frayer said although it may cost less to house prisoners in northern Michigan jails, transporting prisoners to other counties in northern Michigan "is a burden on the manpower in our department.

"Privatization is not successful,"

and Shiawassee counties. Even paying for transportation up there, it's cheaper than Wayne County," said

Wayne County charges $65 a day per prisoner, some northern com-munities charge as low as $40. Plymouth Police Chief Richard

Myers, president of the Wayne County Chiefs of Police, said jail overcrowding "is the number one issue

"Luckily, in Plymouth we have mostly property crime — not violent criminals. But communities like Livonia and Westland are really struggling with this one.
"Ultimately, it's not completely our problem, or the courts, or the county. We all have to work together and try as many alternatives as we can. The real loser is the general public."

LIVONIA IS transporting prisoners to northern communities up to five times a week - 100 prisoner transfers a month.

"We have two classes of prisoner," said William Hoff, deputy chief. "The convicted misdemeanants sentenced to 20 or 30 days and the felony prisoners. We have no place to hold them between arrest, arraignment and pre-trial examination. The past few months it has really been getting worse. The volume has in-creased tremendously. Our arrests are up 50 percent in the last year and a half.

"The additional expense to our de-partment has been great, we've been using officers at time and a half salary rate, plus wear and tear on our

The Livonia lockup has a capacity for 20 prisoners — who have to be shuffled out within 72 hours. "A few times we've exceeded that limit. It has been unavoidable." Hoff

One of the reasons for the threeday limit is that local lockups don't have the facilities for longer incarcerations - no recreation facilities or library. Often food comes from the local fast food restaurant.

Redford Township Police Chief David Parker admits that prisoners serving sentences on misdeameanor convictions are being released early in order to keep felony suspects in the township's over-crowded lockup. Most of those being freed were jailed for non-violent crimes, such as drunk driving and minor assault charges. Parker has said that felony suspects are held until there's room at the Wayne County Jail.

The law enforcement community has formed committees to seek solutions. Livonia 16th District Judge Robert Bizeidneki ia en a juil con-mitte. John Santomaure, Contex Township director of public safety.

is on a corrections comm

"We are working on something right now. My concern is that we would do well not to jump at a simple solution," Santomauro said.

When asked if jail overcrowding in a burden on his department, Garden City police commander Roger Wilkes said "T just not hash from the Wilkes said "I just got back from the (district court) judge's office. We've got a couple of prisoners right now at the 72-hour maximum. We're waiting to hear from the judge."

If he was unsuccessful seeking space downtown, Wilkes said the department would transport the pris-oners to the Washtenaw or Oakjand County jail.

Kaufman admits he has been swayed by district judges arguments in favor of incarceration.

"We could have a guy with 10 priors (arrests), failure to show up in court eight times, and although it's a misdemeanor, he doesn't take the criminal, justice system seriously," Kaufman said.

The overcrowded jail has had some positive effects: creation of an alternative work program for misdemeanants, and a tendency for judges to push cases quickly through the system.

New county jail still 2 years away from completion

Construction of a new 840 bed medium security jail for Wayne County may not solve all overcrowding woes, but will be a monumental step in the right direction, according to one county spokeswoman.

Ground was broken two weeks ago at the site, the Denton/Miller Industrial Park between Jos. Campau and Conant in Hamtramck, Construction of the new jail is expected to be completed in two years.

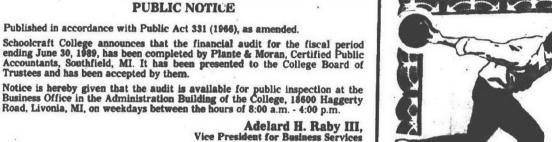

"The county will pay Hamtramck a flat annual fee equal to what a private company would pay in property taxes," said Nancy Mouradian, spokeswoman for the sheriff's department.

"The jail expects to employ 350 workers, with a $9 million payroll." Court ordered capacity at the county jail is 1,552. As of last Mon- for over a year," Mouradian said. day, the number of prisoners being housed there was 1,777.

"We've been running over 200 above capacity for several weeks. The jail has been closed to misdemeanants unless court approved

In August 1988, Wayne County voters approved the one mill, 10year tax increase to support the new jail. It is expected to raise $20.5 million annually for construction and

The global warming trend may help nuclear power regain its lost popularity, said the president of Consumers Power Co.

In Pred Buckman's view, the reason is that coal, oil and other fossil fuels give off gases that result in warming the earth.

"Nuclear power looks very be-nign in a global warming context," said Buckman, the utility's chief operating officer since March of 1988. He once headed nuclear operations and has a doctorate in nuclear engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The company serves most of Oakland and northwestern Wayne County with natural gas. Outstate it sells both gas and electricity.

But in the 5-10-year time frame, American power companies may find they must burn less fossil fuel and look again at nuclear power.

"As a nation, we're not ready to build the next nuclear plant, Buckman said. In time, however, nuclear power will be seen as "not only acceptable but the right

Wear hot pink to bike at night mong

Your column on cycling for con-iers was of interest to our household. My bushand and I are both cyclists — and have been for years now. Our question for you is — what is the ourest color to wear when cycling? My husband says yellow — I think that one of the fluorescent colors (lime green, orange, and pink) would be better. A reply in the paper would be appreciated. Mrs. H. R.

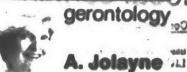

Small Town Senior

Dear Mrs. R.:

You're on the right track. New research supports the use of fluore-scent hot pink as the color most visi-ble and safest for cyclists.

University of Kentucky physiologist Elmar Schmeisser and ophthal-mologist Robert Baker had five colleagues view 24 slides taken through a car windshield on an overcast afternoon. Six of the pictures were of an empty road, and 18 were of bicyclists riding alongside the road fully clad in either hot pink, lemon yellow with an electric blue stripe, or denim (faded blue). Looking at each slide for 1/16th of a second — roughly the duration of a glance - the researchers noticed almost all of the riders at apparent distances of 30 and 75 feet. But at 120 feet, which is about the distance it takes a car going 50 mph to stop, they picked up on the pink outfits 30 percent more often than they saw the yellow ones, and twice as often as they noticed the denim

Mrs. R., this doesn't mean that you and your husband have to buy yourselves hot pink cycling outfits. The same effect can be gained from sewing a large square of the pink material on the back of your riding jack-

'CARGO PREFERENCE' — By a vote of 170 for and 228 against, the House rejected an amendment to scale back the "cargo preference" requirements of a bill (see preceding

At issue was a requirement that American-flag vessels haul all U.S. food provided to Poland. Of the bill's $125 million for food for the Poles about $50 million would go for shipping. Critics said use of lower-cost foreign vessels would free up more of the $125 million for food. The amendment sought to permit half of the food to be carried to Poland under foreign flag.

Supporter Doug Bereuter, R-Neb., complained that money for food would be "siphoned off for the maritime industry."

Livonia Mall officials took time out Sunday to celebrate 25 years of serving area shoppers. Mall director Jeanne Hildebrandt (left) joined mall owners Jack and Miriam Shenkman, Barry and Helen Klein in welcoming the some 200 well-wishers who Is The Vital-18 the Natural Path to Weight Control??

The following INTER-VIEW was originally published in The Health Focus June 1987 issue. Since that time a great deal more people have tried "The Vital-18." According to reports we have received, they have had tremendous success. Since Jan. 1987, we have had one bottle per thousand returned by dissatisfied customers, and we have consistently enjoyed a 90% repurchase rate. We believe these statistics speak for themselves.

s there now truly a way to lose weight without hunger, depression, constipation, headaches and the general lack of energy that goes with strict dieting????

The people who have used "The Vital-18" say so. We recently had an opportunity to interview Charlie Brown, President of Vital-18 Inc., the corporation marketing this amaz-, ing new product, and thought we would share this information with

Question: Mr. Brown, how new is this product and how did it come to velop a lot of the health problems experienced here in the Western world. The medical bills began to get rather expensive so they brought a team of doctors and technicians in from Pakistan, India and Japan to attempt to alleviate the problem. It seems that medical people from these countries lean more to natural remedies that to synthetic drugs. After three years of research, experimentation, and several million dollars in expenditures, "The Vital-18" was the result of their work.

Question: Well, after all this money and time, what did they actually produce?

Answer: There is a rather lengthy technical answer to that, but to make it short they took a very basic form of plant life, a single cell blue green algae, and under controlled conditions fed it specific nutrients and minerals. Through the natural process of photosyntheses, they produced a super plant protein containing 18 of the known 22 amino acids, including the essential eight amino acids, and some 72 vitamins and trace minerals. It is now the highest natural source for beta carotene that I know of, and is even several times higher in vitamin B12 than liver.

Question: What does all this have to do with weight loss.

Answer I to tenginal product was eight of the product to change in the formula to reduce the calorie content. When it is taken as

All this results in weight loss and feeling absolutely fantastically good.

However our tremendous success has generated a great demand by stores that we do not allow to carry The Vital-18. These stores may try to sell what they call a similar product, some of them have copper sulfate in them and some have yeast. Copper sulfate is used as an insecticide on apples, grapes and other fruits. Copper compounds are listed in USA Today as 13th of the top 25 toxins in the United States. THE VITAL-18 IS ENTIRELY SAFE. I cannot vouch for these so called "similar" products. All consumers should read the label on anything they purchase. Don't let someone try to sell you a substitute.

Question: How long has "The Vital-18" been available in the United States and when will we expect to see it in the stores?

Endorsements City needs new faces, ideas

HEN THE CITY of Plymouth voters go to the polls Tuesday, Nov. 7, they will be asked to select four city commissioners to serve on the city's seven-member commission.

The election has attracted more candidates than it has produced issues. Three incumbents and four challengers are vying for the four seats. The incumbents are James Jabara, Robert

Jones and Ralph (Jack) Kenyon. The newcomers are Gregory Green, Jean Morrow, Jerry Vorva and John Vos III.

We have interviewed the field, and found them all competent people. Voters could feel confident voting for any of the candidates. All would do a journeyman's job of watching over Plymouth.

HOWEVER, WE think a commission should do more than just keep things going as they are now. It needs to look at the future of the city and set a tone that will carry into the 21st century.

A big agenda faces the new commission: the hiring of a city manager, the future of the ice festival and the revision of the city's master zon-

Dealing with those issues calls for clear thinking and vision, especially the review of the master plan. The master plan will determine the city's look for a long time to come.

We took those issues into consideration when making our endorsements for the election. We looked at the candidates, trying to judge which ones will be able to meet those challenges.

OUR CHOICES are two incumbents, Jones and Kenyon, and newcomers Vos and Vorva.

We think those four have qualities needed by the city.

Vos is a competent attorney who could bring his expertise to city government. He has some interesting ideas. His proposal to have police walking beats in the city merits some discussion. There are enough events and pedestrians on downtown streets to warrant that possibility.

Another one of Vos' ideas is to put senior citizens from Tonquish Manor, a senior housing complex, on the city housing commission.

We think both of those ideas are good ones. And we could back him just for coming up with them. But with we think there's more to come some new energy.

We have interviewed the field and found them all competent. Voters could feel confident roting for any of the candidates. All would do a journeyman's job of watching over Plymouth.

from Vos and he should be on the commission to voice them

Vorva is a different matter. We worry that the former Plymouth city police officer who was fired could be a one-issue commissioner. The city doesn't need that.

However, we see something in Vorva that we like and would like to see more of on the commission: a willingness to challenge. We think Vorva will do that on the commission.

JONES AND KENYON are incumbents we think are doing a good job and represent the best thinking on the commission.

We see Jones as a good taskmaster when it comes to the city budget. He is known for questioning bills. Every commission should have such a member.

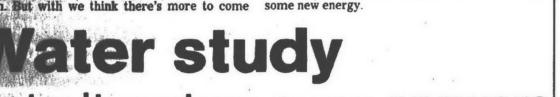

But there's more to Jones than just a sharp pencil. He supports the revision of the master zoning plan because: "It makes it easier for developers, it makes them know what they can and Kenyon has some good ideas for the city that we would like to see pursued. He supports a new master plan for the city, but would like to see two plans, one with a time span of five to 10 years and another longer-range plan that would take aim at 20 years.

We think that's vision, and we would like to see a commissioner with such an attribute.

But there's more with Kenyon. He has a sensitivity when it comes to Old Village. It's an overlooked area of the city to which Kenyon would pay

We think the four candidates we've endorsed represent the best of the old guard and the best of the new. Kenyon and Jones have the experience necessary, while Vos and Vorva will bring

Detroit system owes answers ONCERNS over future drinking water quality shouldn't be dismissed as mere

Detroit-bashing. Detroit Water and Sewer Department officials bristled at a recent metro League of Women Voters report pointing out potential problems with the water most suburbanites and Detroiters - drink. DWSD officials were particularly upset because they believed the League paid insufficient attention to improvements already made to the system.

More troubling, however, is the DWSD's silence on several of the League's findings.

THEY INCLUDE:

A rising number of oil and chemical spills. The League reports 384 in 1987 and 492 in 1988. Contingency plans need to be expanded and strengthened, Leauge members say.

Potential expansion of the system's Lake Huron intake. The intake currently brings in 15 percent of our water. The League believes it should bring in more.

• Lack of routine maintenance and inadequate maintenance staff. The League said repairs aren't being performed on a timely basis, in part because more supervisors and backup personnel are needed.

Other concerns, disputed by Detroit, concern alleged delays in bond issues and construction projects and alleged pollution coming from the DWSD's treatment plant.

THE RELATIONSHIP between the DWSD and its suburban customers -- indeed between Detroit and the suburbs in general — has often been prickly. And when it comes to blame, fingers could be pointed in all directions.

But the future of the water we all drink is too important an issue to become sidetracked by old, long-standing animosity.

The DWSD needs to address the League's findings. If the findings are correct, remedial action should be taken. If not, the DWSD should issue a definitive study of its own.

Simply put, the DWSD owes some answers, to its own city customers no less than to the suburbanites who buy its drinking water.

Michigan State University seems somehow powerless to control the drinking and rowdiness on its East Lansing cam-

Events of recent weeks included chaos on its streets and the stabbings of two students by a non-student, an incident which police said was alcohol-related on both sides.

Just this time last year, a freshman from West Bloomfield was killed on a football Saturday when he attempted to cross the street and was hit by an oncoming car. Both the student and the driver of the ear had had too much to drink.

MSU officials say they are attempting to curb the use of alcohol on campus. But they recently three away two opportunities to do so.

This fall soon after the University of Mich-can amounced its policy to ban all food and beverue containers from its football stands,

The difference was: U.M carried it through.

Even before the first football game, MSU reneged. They said their fans complained because this meant they couldn't bring their own coffee into Spartan Stadium.

Coffee? • The other opportunity was to give students the option of asking for a roommate who didn't drink on their dormitory housing form.

MSU remains the only public university in all of Michigan which has refused to allow students this choice. A recent survey of the three schools closest to the Observer & Eccentric's suburbs - U-M, Oakland University and Eastern Michigan University - showed that more than 1,500 students had requested alcohol-free rooming.

Michigan State is prone to more campus problems on the mere basis of size.

But students see through the lip service it is paying to controlling liquor on campus, when university officials fail to change their own alco-

It conjures up visions of Charlie Chaplin in the silent movie "Modern Times," caught in the cogs of the as-gaze into space. They never talked. The routine had turned into numbing monotony

Despite all the credit given to the assembly line for providing the U.S. with its industrial might, it really only served to fill the pockets of the industrial barons. From the workers, it only stole - their hopes, their dreams, their imaginations.

It worked fine, some thought, for a while, until America was forced to compete on a world market. Suddenly, the assembly line seemed outmoded, even to the industrial czars. THAT'S WHY Geiger's analogy is so startling. What a hateful thing to do to edu-

The individual Plymouth policemen are also to be complimented the use of police cars to block the railroad tracks to stop oncoming trains at both York and Holbrook Streets, the evacuating of the houses adjacent to the fire on York Street, and the alerting of the occupants on the east side of Holbrook Street, also the controlling of the traffic by an off-duty policeman in plain clothes at the corner of Holbrook and Liberty Streets.

HOWEVER, THERE was a glaring negligence of safety on the south side of the fire (the north side of Liberty Street between Holbrook and York streets).

Scores of people (some with children on their shoulders) crowded up to the fences on the south side of the fire, and many stood under the elec-trical high line that also passed over

Approximately 40 minutes after the alarm for the fire, Sgt. Ochal of Plymouth Police discovered this potential disaster and in very firm terms cleared the area. No top police management was overlooking the total picture.

Conclusions: Fighting fires and police work requires separate expertise and continual training. Do not combine the two departments.

about fire safety in the city of Plymouth east of the railroad tracks were addressed before the city commission. Only commissioners James Jabara, Robert Jones and candidate Jean Morrow responded to my request - that these concerns not be buried under the rug. Kenneth L. Wheeler Nana and Papa had not yet retired to their Florida estate, so for Halloween that year, Nana made her a princess dress to match the hat. It was long and blue and form-fitting - not that the 4-year-old had much form to fit.

She loved the dress as much as the hat and when she wore them she was in her eyes, anyway - a real princess. Never mind that a real princess probably wouldn't have en out trick-or-treating.

HALLOWEEN PASSED, but the princess outfit got dragged out on numerous occasions, especially when her friends were over to play dressup. The dress got dirty. The hem ripped out. The streamers came off the hat, Still she loved them.

Until Halloween morning. As she was getting dressed for kindergarten — with the cowgirl outfit carefully laid out on her bed — she decided that no, she'd rather be a princess

After several minutes of debate and, uh . . . discussion . . . streamers were dug out of the toy hox and replaced on the princess hat, the blue dress was found somewhere stuffed behind something and the hem was repaired and a slightly disheveled princess headed off for kindergarten, leaving $100 worth of cowgirl gear sitting in her room.

She did agree, after a bit of intimidation, to be a cowgirl when she went trick-or-treating that night.

IN THE YEAR that followed, the hat and the vest and the shirt were carefully stored away in the closet. The jeans were worn to tatters and the boots . . . the boots were discovered by the live-in Scotty, who decided that real leather tasted much better than rawhide bones.

This Halloween, with the debate occurring far in advance of the holiday, the cowgirl was to be resurrected. The boots were gone, but the hat and vest were still good and there was a choice between the shirt and a new pair of jeans or a new, western-

The night before, after the jack-o'-lanterus were carved, the princess-turned-cowgirl stood in front of a full-length mirror and admired herself. The hat was at just the right angle, the silver on the vest still sparkled and the stone-washed jeans had just the right look of wear to

Then came . . . Halloween morn-

"I want to be a princess."
"No way. The dress is gone. Who knows what happened to the hat? Anyway, you're going to be a cowgiri!"

After the screams and the tears subsided, and with the substitution of the denim dress for the jeans and shirt, a reluctant cowgirl missed the bus and was given a ride to school. By the time she got there, she had decided that being a cowgirl was pretty neat after all.

"Next year we won't have this problem," she was told. "Next year you can go as a monster."

"But I don't have a costume." "Don't worry, sweetheart. You don't need one."

newspapers but my wife is quite up-set because our parent/teacher conng up and I am not ference is comi oing to be able to attend. My daughgoing to be able to attend. My daugn-ter is in the sixth grade and I have attended some conferences when she was in elementary school. My wife usually updates me as to what occurred at the conference. I have another commitment on the night of the conference and do not want to miss it. I'm not sure that going to every conference is necessary. Maybe I am off base and am feeling guilty. In any case, I don't think it is necessary to attend every conference for your child. Am I right?

Yes it is important to attend your child's parent/teacher conference for several reasons. When your daughter wakes up the morning after the conference one of her peers is going to ask her if her parents were at the conference last night. She will say no. My dad had more important

Certainly, after a few years, parents do gain a general pattern of what teachers say about their child - whether the child is an all A student or a C student. The major issue, however, is the interest you show in your child's education by taking time from your schedule to subliminally pass on to her that she is most important in your life.

Parent/teacher conferences have a certain pattern. At the elementary school level, attendance tends to be near maximum. At the middle school level parent attendance drops a bit then tends to fall off at the high school level. Unfortunately, it is at the high school level where teachers desperately need to see certain parents who are no-shows.

Indeed, the real tragedy of parent/teacher conferences is the parents who don't show up. Candidly, the standard comment in the teacher's lounges the day after the conferences is that those parents that you east need to see show up and those arents that you most need to see don't show up. A direct correlation exists between parents of children who show up and parents of children who don't show up. Generally, children of parents who don't show up have more academic and social adjustment problems.

Yes, I believe you should go to your daughter's parent/teacher conference and you might wish to consider addressing the following ques-tions with the teacher. What are the objectives of this course or class (if elementary)? How is my child achieving? Does my child work up to his or her potential? Is her homework completed in a timely fashion? Does my daughter comprehend the material? Does she have good study skills. How is my child getting along with classmates? Has there been any discipline problems? And, most important, what can I do as a parent at nome to help my child?

We had four children go through school. My wife never missed a conference. I missed one or two over 18 years. All people should check their schedule and reschedule appoint ments if possible. In your case, to be brutally frank, your bowling match for first place in a season that goes to May is not that critical. You need to decide what is most important, your bowling ball or your daughter.

Where are old library cards?

WE HAD TO go out of town suddenly, so I called Good Neighbor Harriet, who has a key to our house, to take care of a few emergencies.

There was a movie videotape which had to be returned to Meijer's. And there was an educational videotape which had to go back to the local public library.

Her husband, Good Neighbor Jim, returned the commercial videotape and explained to the Meijer's clerk he was doing it for a neighbor. No problem. The clerk ran a scanner across it, sent Good Neighbor Jim through the line, and had a bill ready for him in seconds.

AT THE LOCAL library, a member of the Wayne Oakland Library Federation (WOLF), Harriet had less luck.

"Our computer is down. You can't return the videotape," said the librarian.

Can't return it?!? That was the wrong thing to say to Good Neighbor Harriet.

Consider: She's a busy lady with a job and a household to run. She already explained she is returning it for a neighbor. She has fought her way through several miles of the city's badly managed traffic. She is standing there with the videotape in one hand and a $10 bill in the other. And a librarian tells her she "can't" return it.

Good Neighbor Harriet was kinder than I would have been in similar circumstances.

"I am returning it," Harriet said, extending the videotape to the librarian.

At last, the librarian began using the brains God gave her. They made an educated guess as to when I had checked out the videotape, and the librarian calculated a rental price.

IN THE INTELLIGENT Days that is, sometime after the Good Ol' Days and before Today - libraries had a better system.

They had a small Manila card with each volume, record or tape you checked out, and they put the card in a little file. If someone came looking for the resource while you had it, the librarian could look in the little card file and in seconds report, 'Oh, it's checked out."

When you brought the item back, the librarian picked out the card from the file and determined whether your return was prompt or late. If it was late, you paid a charge. Simple. School kids could handle the transaction.

You worked with tools they called pens and pencils. They were both cheap and reliable. If the electricity went out, why shucks, you could light a candle or a kerosene lamp, and it was business as usual.

That was in the Intelligent Days.

TODAY IT seems to take an interminable amount of keypounding to find anything in a library computer, or "the system is down" or there's a "bug" or a power failure.

I've had my own experience with a library where a computer had been substituted for an Intelligent Days card catalog. I tried to look up the Woman heads county work force program

Patricia Kukula has been appoint-ed to direct the Wayne County Alternative Work Force program.

The community corrections program provides alternative punishents to jail terms for misdemeanor and non-violent family offenders. The program was first initiated to help alleviate jail overcrowding.

The Alternative Work Perce program has grown by leaps and bounds and Patti Kukula's bright and cre-ative imagination will be an asset to its expansion," said Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara.

"At the start of the program, we were receiving from five to 10 participants a day. Those numbers have now increased to 60 to 65 during the week, and averaging 100 to 120 par-ticipants on weekends."

Kukula said that prior to the county's work/release plan, misdemeanants were set free due to inadequate jail space. Judges are now sentencing those convicted of minor crimes to community service work at an increasing rate. Should the offender fail to show up for a job assignment, he or she is promptly picked up and remanded to jail.

A Detroit resident, Kukula earned a bachelor's degree from Eastern Michigan University in occupational therapy and is pursuing a master's degree in public administration. She has worked in several rehabilitation positions and most recently served as executive assistant to the chief executive officer at Hegira Programs Inc., a substance abuse and mental health agency.

In addition to directing the operations of the work force, Kukula will oversee a collection function for jail space which the county contracts throughout the state. She will also coordinate the activities of the county's property forfeiture program whereby confiscated houses of drug offenders are turned over to neighborhood groups for renovation.

"I look forward to the challenge of making a difference in the community," said Kukula. "There are many people in the program who show real potential."

Kukula cites an example of a work force participant who discovered she liked working outdoors and performed so well that she was hired as a county laborer. Another had been assigned to clean the loading docks at the jail and afterward said: "Once I saw the inside of a jail, I don't ever want to stay overnight."

Married to Recorder's Court Judge James Chylinski, Kukula has been on the job since late September.

The alternative work program is important to county residents for three reasons, according to McNamara. First, since prisoners report each morning and are not housed overnight, there is a saving of $67 a day to taxpayers. That jail space can be used for the more se-

Police to get high-tech fingerprint system

By Jeff Holyfield special writer

AP - A new high-tech fingerprint system that rivals the crimebusting tools of comic-strip detective Dick Tracy already has helped in four murder probes, the state police director says.

'If ever there was a crime-fighting tool that came close to the dgets of Dick Tracy, this is it," at the unveiling of the $22 million computer system.

The local law enforcement agencies that initially will get terminals are Livonia, Southfield, Dearborn, Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids and Taylor police departments and the Wayne and Oakland County sheriff's departments.

"We now will be able to go after criminals faster than before and make it tougher for them to hide," Gov. James Blanchard said. "We are truly adding to the war on crime and drugs a new high-tech

Blanchard said the Automated Fingerprint Identification System eventually would be rated as the third great technological advance in police work, coming behind fingerprints and the police radio.

The new AFIS system electronically scans fingerprints and checks them against other fingerprints on file in a Michigan State Police computer.

More than 730,000 sets of fingerprint cards are in the state police files and it would take 72 years to check each one manually. The APIS system can do that within 24 hours or less.

up to four days. Davis said the system began checking fingerprints from un-solved crimes on Priday and al-ready had generated a list of possible suspects for four murders. He declined to provide any further in-formation about the murders, such as when or where they occurred.

Eventually county jalls will have computer terminals allowing them access to the system, which will de-tect career criminals who some times go free on bond when they give aliases to arresting officers. "That's been a real problem for us. We've had some very bad individuals slip away from us

said that in addition to checking the fingerprints on file, the AFIS system also periodically will compare unidentified prints with those added to the file later.

Initially, AFIS terminals will be installed at the state police laboratories at Bridgeport, East Lansing. Grand Rapids and Stiriling Heights. Others will be installed later at the labs in Grayling, Marquette and Mouthfulle. Northville.

Namer said as more states get such systems, they can be linked together, eventually forming a na-tional network that could be linked to an international network.

FRIDAY EVENING was a time for celebration for those involved with Plymouth Family Service. Agency leaders held a 25th anniversary get-together at St. John's Episcopal Church in Plymouth Township.

Intrepid librarians track down those elusive facts

staff writer

EFERENCE LIBRARIANS have been known to put their sleuthing skills to the test at work. They never know what kind of question the next phone call will bring.

"We really get a lot of ques-tions," said Carol Kuchta, head of reference for the Canton Public Library. "We get questions from all kinds of places and people." One time, a patron came into the library in Canton and asked if there were any Shakespeare plays available in English.

"Another was, 'Where are the books with facts in them?" " Kuch-

Librarians try to be helpful with all requests, she said. Sometimes, a patron just hasn't worded his or her request quite right.

REPERENCE LIBRARIAN Darlene Ursel of the Dunning-Hough Library in Plymouth has had her share of challenging ques-tions. One patron was looking for a copy of the 1946 Lionel Train cata-

"He knew it had been in Liberty magazine in 1946," Ursel said.

Librarians were able to track down that magazine on microfilm at a library in Pennsylvania. They requested the material on interlibrary loan, and the patron found

A patron at the Plymouth library sted a copy of something Ben Franklin had written in 1745. That essay on "The Reasons for Preferring an Elderly Mistress" was found in another library and forwarded to Plymouth.

Another time, a woman called seeking information on the Minnesota town in which her mother was born. Ursel found that in an atlas.

Magazine articles on 'penny rugs" helped another patron at the Plymouth library. Those rugs of the 1800s were made of scraps from woolen garments and blan-kets. Round pieces were used, thus the rugs were known as penny rugs. Some of that material was found in the Dunning-Hough Library, while other majerial came from other libraries through interlibrary

"Sometimes, some of the simplest questions turn out to be the most difficult ones to find information on," Ursel said.

PEOPLE LOOKING for jobs often come to the library seeking information on area employers. Tracking down information on small, privately owned businesses can be difficult.

Sometimes, patrons are referred to larger libraries with more extensive or specialized collections. Librarians can call patrons back with information if they're not able to find it right away.

'We don't always find it, but we do most of the time," Ursel said. There are limits on how much we

Some patrons need to come into the library to find the information they want.

CHALLENGING REFERENCE uestions can be forwarded to the Wayne-Oakland Library Pedera-tion headquarters, Kuchta said. The libraries in Plymouth and Can-ton belong to that federation. Pa-trons can then be contacted when information is available.

Librarians in Canton were once asked at what point one fluid ounce equals one ounce in weight. That answer was eventually found.

'What style of cap does Sherlock Holmes wear?' was another one," Kuchta said. and her colleagues also have handled requests for a picture of an electric chair and a picture of an old-fashioned bathtub. "That took us awhile, but we did find that," Kuchta said.

CHILDREN ASK their share of reference questions. Elementary and middle school children sometimes do reports on life in the 1890s. The Dunning-Hough Library has Sears catalogs from that era, giving the prices for farm implements, clothing and other essen-

"Leaf identification is a biggle every fall," Ursel said. "Now we're getting into Indians and pilgrims, things like that."

Only so many books are available on each subject, she said. When late-comer students visit the library to work on assignments, they may find those books are checked out. Librarians rely on non-circulating reference materials to help those students.

Some of the children at the program had questions about Paul Bunyan. The "Paul Bunyan's Halloween Treats" session, for first through fifth graders, was the afternoon of Thursday, Oct. 26, at the Canton Public Library.

The Canton Public Library program for children highlighted the talents of actor John Puchalski of Hamtramck. Puchalski appeared as Paul Bunyan and told a variety of Halloween-time stories.

signed up for the program, said Judy Teachworth, head of youth services.

"A lot of people are interested," she said. "We've had a lot of requests for Halloween programs. I think most of the kids like Halloween."

The afternoon program highlighted the talents of professional actor John Puchalski. A Hamtramck resident. Puchalski is the artistic director for Crossroads Productions.

That group has performed in the past at the Canton Public Library. Puchalski's Halloween performance was a one-man show.

There was time for children to enjoy Halloween treats during the Moms and Tots get-together.

"We really do it every year," said Mammoser, who attended the party with her two children, ages 31/2 and 15 months. About 50 youngsters attended the party.

"It was fun, just to see all the little kids excited about being dressed up."

The theme of the mission d for the week of Nov. 13-17, "Bring Christ Home to Your Family.

"The idea is we want to make the family so strong by centering it in Christ," said the Rev. Ernest Porcari, pastor at St. Thomas a Becket Church in Canton.

"The parish has been praying for the mission, for its success," he said. Parishioners will have a day of fasting before the mission be-

During mornings the week of Nov. 13-17, the Rev. Jim Burke will offer daily Mass, followed by a program on spiritual and personal renewal. Evening sessions will also be offered daily.

BURKE HAS served as provincial superior of the Dominican Order in La Paz, Bolivia, where he cofounded an institute for socio-religious research and adult education. He has presented mission renewal programs in Detroit-area parishes and elsewhere.

"He is a man of very extensive experiences," Porcari said. "He has given missions throughout the

This fish story keeps brokers reeling in sales

By R.J. King special writer

From the Mississippi delta to area restaurants and supermarkets, a classic Southern favorite making its culinary and economic mark - and Wait a minute. Catfish? Yep, but it's not the same mean-looking, whiskered 12-pound tough guy that roams the murky bottom of the Mississippi River. This fish, says Denny Inman, is raised by farmers through a process called aqua-culture.

The hardest thing about selling catfish is overcoming the misconception that all catfish are bottomfeeders and have a slimy taste," says Inman, who is vice president of Paul Inman Associates of Farmington Hills, a full-service food broker that sold $2.5 million worth of aqua-culture catfish in Michigan last year.

"But there is a great difference with aqua-culture catfish, which are raised in spring-fed ponds and are fed a rich diet of grain and minerals through pellets which float on the

Because the pellets induce the fish to look up, not down, for their food, it's one reason why the aqua-culture variety taste milder and more tender than their river-dwelling counterpart, which prefer to navigate among the mud and silt.

The fish is one of Paul Inman Associates' hottest products.

"We first started selling catfish three years ago and sold $450,000 worth in that first year, and now we've sold over four times that amount," said Dale Murnahan, account executive for Inman's food service division. It's one of our fastest growing lines and should be well as farm-raised varieties of salmon, trout and shrimp, are also showing up with greater frequency at upscale restaurants, said Milos Cihelka, head chef and co-owner of the Golden Mushroom in Southfield. "With concern of cholesterol so high, the demand for fish is starting to outdistance the supply," he said.

"People are also becoming more leery of lake trout from Michigan's Great Lakes and other bodies of water tainted by chemicals. The farmraised catfish offers our customers a choice, and actually it's a very mild, sweet-tasting fish, which can be prepared in a variety of ways.'

Taking on the classic middle-man role, Paul Inman Associates, which has headquarters on Northwestern Highway, acts as the selling arm for more than 40 national food manufacturers, including Delta Pride Catfish of Indianola, Miss., the world's largest aqua-culture catfish processor, controlling more than 64,000 acres of catfish ponds amid land once reserved for cotton.

Delta Pride recently inducted Paul Inman Associates into its Million Dollar Club, an award that honors food brokers based on its singleyear's sales level

"Rather than have a lot of sales AQUA-CULTURE catfish, as well people on staff for each market they LIKE MOST food brokers, the company rarely sees the product it sells. From salad dressings and cheeses to coffee makers and shampoos, the company sells to a variety of supermarket chains and food distributors, with deliveries handled by respective manufacturers.

"Of course, we research and inspect the products we sell for quality and taste, but once we've established an account between a food processor and say, a supermarket, it would be a waste of time to warehouse products here when the processor can just deliver to the supermarket direct," Inman said. Aqua-culture catfish have accounted for substantial growth for Paul Inman Associates' food service division, according to Inman. He declined to reveal the company's revenues last year, as well as commission rates, but said the company has been profitable in each of the last 35 years of its existence. In addition to the company's Farmington Hills headquarters, it has offices in Detroit, Grand Rapids, Saginaw, Toledo, Fort Wayne and Indianapolis.

As for the '90s, Inman predicted supermarkets and retail grocery stores would offer consumers a larger choice of entrees to compete with fast-food restaurants.

"The grocery store acting as restaurant is getting larger every day, and it's having a crossover effect on hospitals and hotels as well. But aqua-culture seafood is just beginning to take off, and I think we've only scratched the surface."

Business groups oppose both education proposals

Favor new priorities, same funds

By Doug Funke

Two organizations representing business interests in Michigan have been going about it fairly quietly, but there's no mistaking their opposition to the two state proposals on next week's ballot.

Listen to Jay Sweeney, who owns a sales consulting firm in Bloomfield Hills and is chairman of the guardian advisory council of the National Federation of Independent Business of Michigan.

'We don't think throwing money at the problem is the answer," he said. "No one has sat down yet saying this is what you're going to get, chapter and verse, for what we want to tax you for.

"We say, as business people, 'Why not have new priorities with existing revenues?'

'Michigan spending per pupil is among the top 10 states in the country. Teachers are among the best paid in the country," Sweeney said.

BOTH BALLOT proposals would modify the state constitution and provide more money for financing public education in kindergarten to 12th grade.

Proposal A would increase the state sales tax from 4 cents to 4.5 cents per dollar. Proposal B would increase the sales tax to 6 cents per dollar and reduce school property

The state chamber of commerce isn't enamored with the two proposals, either. Hear James Barrett, its

"There are no quality (of educa-tion) promises in either Proposal A and B," he said. "Voters who want more equity between districts won't be helped much by either A or H. "In the case of Proposal A, there's no property tax relief at all. B offers some short-term reduction for some taxpayers, but B guts the Headles.

rollback protection against assess ment increases," Barrett said.

The Headlee Amendment generally requires reductions in tax rates to offset soaring increases in property values. Proponents of the ballot proposals say they will shift the method of funding away from prop-erty taxes, which they call an unfair method of school financing, while allowing more money to be pumped into the public schools.

NEITHER THE state chamber nor the federation, which primarily represents small businesses, has spent much money to get their message across.

The national federal of independent business, with some 25,000 members in Michigan, has contributed nothing to the campaign, said David J. Bacrwalds, state director.
"We don't have ongoing assessments (union dues) every month that pay into coffers and build a war

He categorized the campaign as grass roots. Pamphlets have been mailed to the most active federation members. They have been asked to talk with their employees and make telephone calls.

"WE'RE TRYING to get information out on presentations, public affairs programs on radio and TV and requests from journalists," Barrett

Tax increases generally aren't well-received by business, especially small business

"It's going to decrease operating margins," Baerwalde said. "Our feeling is, whenever possible, we should reduce level of regulation and taxation on business and individuals

"Michigan is a relatively high-tax and high-expenditure state for edu-cation," Barrett said.

"Business would like to see more emphasis from state policy makers on resulta rather than inputting high-er taxes. There's lots of room for improvement with the significant investment we already make in educa-

Limited partnership offers high income

Q. My broker has suggested I buy some shares in a master limited partnership for the purpose of ob-sining higher income. He explained hem a little bit, but I would apprecito it if you would make some com-ients about them.

A. MLPs are large limited partnerships, the interests of which are treated like shares of stock. They are traded on public stock exchanges just like shares of stock.

MLPs have an advantage because they allow the interest in large partnerships to be broken up into small pieces. Because they are traded on an exchange, master limited partnership shares (units) have a idity that would not be possible if the interests were kept in large piec-

Because they are partnerships, the organizations themselves do not have to pay an income tax like a corporation does. All the income flows through to the share holders (unit holders).

This means the amount paid out to unit holders is larger than if the organization were a corporation. The investor should study an MPL just as carefully has he would any other investment before putting his money into it. The tax advantage is nice, but it doesn't guarantee the soundness of

New report indicates no ozone crisis in U.S.

"There is no ozone crisis in the United States," said Dr. Kay Jones, author of a just-released ozone analysis. Jones, a former official with the Council on Environmental Quality, reported that abnormal urban ozone levels in 1988 were a result of last year's record heat wave and drought.

"The majority of U.S. cities where ozone levels exceed federal standards will likely come into attainment within five years without additional con-

Jones, a Ph.D. engineer and consultant, is a former EPA official who served as chief science adviser to the President's Council on Environmental Quality. His analysis was sponsored by the Clean Air Working Group, which had taken note of his research and earlier presentations of Council on Environmental Quality data at academic conferences.

Ozone pollution levels recorded in the record heat wave of 1988 were abnormal and they declined dramatically in 1989. The record heat wave of ozone formation in many cities, but 1989 figures show a marked decline in ozone readings throughout the entire area affected by last year's drought.

Historical trend analysis shows that 1986 was a typical or "normal" year in most parts of the country. Further analysis of 1986 figures reveals that most Americans are not exposed to unhealthy ozone levels at all, he said.

Most Americans live in areas with acceptable ozone levels, he said. "Over 160 million Americans — almost 71 percent of the nation's population — live in areas where ozone levels do not exceed standards.

Chairman Roger, I suppose, didn't see "Roger and Me" because he figures the premise of the movie insults him, and he'd rather be duck hunt-

I didn't see "Roger and Me" be-cause I can't afford it. I can't afford it because it costs about $750 a ticket to fly to Denver, the only place you can see the movie. In fact, I think the only person in Detroit who actually has seen the film is Michelle Krebs, a reporter for Automo-

I WANTED to ask producer Michael Moore why I can't see the film in Detroit, so I went down to the Grosse Pointe Yacht Club, where Moore often stands around taking pictures of himself.

(According to Michelle, a large part of the movie involves Moore taking pictures of himself, allegedly trying to get Smith to talk to him about 'Plint's unemployment. He stretches the gag out by going to places where Smith never goes and waits for him there. For this kind of thing, he is being considered for an academy award. Go figure.)

Although I waited for a couple of hours myself, Moore never showed

I wanted to corner Moore partly because I thought he should know it is tough to get an interview with a major auto company chairman even when you don't want to insult him. I know this personally, since I once chased Chairman Lee Iacocca around for about six months with a movie camera while I was trying to make a documentary that made him look only slightly worse than the sec-ond coming, and he wouldn't talk to

I ALSO wanted to meet a guy who lived in Flint for about 30 years and thought it was full of picket fences and roses until all the GM jobs went to Mexico. I remember Flint in the old days as the kind of place where you could drop out of high school and work in an auto plant for more mon-

As for Moore's accusation that GM is sending all those jobs to Mexico, GM is offended, since they actually spent $2 billion giving all those jobs to robots, who at least live in Plint. Government helps when disaster hits

Although the possibility in Michigan seems pretty remote, every business runs the risk of being destroyed by natural forces such as high winds, droughts or flooding. novative solutions are usually managed by those who think creatively. It is important to recognize that creative thinking is not the same as factual thinking or the ability to create something tangible. Rather, creative thinking represents an ability to think in ways that are not the usual or normal in coming up with new problem areas and come up with in-

It is important to realize that all of us are more comfortable thinking in one specific way. As a result, we often restrict ourselves from exploring all the possibilities in a given sit-

To think creatively, there must be an ideal climate for creative thinking within the organization: Four common roadblocks that can hinder this process are status quo thinking, inertia, lack of self-confidence, and a fear of idea acceptance.

Status quo thinking is common among those who always have a predetermined solution to almost any situation based on what has worked in the past. Although past experience should not be ignored, it

Just because a solution was satisfactory in the past does not mean it will be the best answer now.

Inertia occurs when individuals are not willing to risk themselves mentally and think about better or newer ways of doing things. Taking the course of least resistance may appear a safer bet, but it also paralyzes creative thinking.

Lack of self-confidence and fear of acceptance compounds this problem because many people hesitate to endorse a new idea for fear of what others might think. Even more limiting, they are afraid of how others will react if the idea is accepted and implemented by the organization.

To create an environment that encourages creative thinking, there must be the incentive to produce creative ideas. In most areas of management, this is evident in a desire to do things better, be more effilem areas relating to present methods and performance.

The pressure to produce creative ideas because of problems or a forced change in the operation also serves to motivate management and staff to stretch their abilities to think creatively.

Last, the willingness to accept and try out new ideas is crucial. Creative thinking produces little change or progress if management fails to support and implement new ideas.

Next week, we'll discuss how small business owners and managers can improve work methods that affect organizational success and

Pets of the Week

Cally, Smokey and Sunny (left), along with Snoopy and Lucky, need homes. The kittens are 10 weeks old. Smokey and Sunny are males; Cally is a female. Snoopy is a 12-week-old male spaniel mix. Lucky, a 2-year-old black and tan male shepherd mix, is neutered. The pets are offered by the Southeastern Michigan Humane Society, an affiliation of animal hospitals. To adopt these pets or others, call the Kershaw Animal Clinic at 421-7878.

Taxpayer rights detailed

"Your Rights As A Taxpayer" is a six page overview, written in clear language, of all rights and responsibilities of taxpayers in dealing with the Internal Revenue Service.

It is the most requested publication of the IRS.

"This publication not only informs Michigan taxpayers about those rights and responsibilities, but it also includes telephone numbers and addresses for additional free information and help on tax matters," said John Hummel, IRS district director in Detroit.

"Existing, more detailed publications on examination, collection and appeal rights and procedures continue to be available, but publication number one provides a good summary and overview of all taxpayer rights in one document.'

Publication I is available at local IRS offices around the state or by calling the toll free forms order number, 1-800-424-3676.

SC choir performs Ukrainian cantata

The premier performance of the Ukrainian cantata "The Hand of John Damascene" will be performed by the Schoolcraft College Community Choir at 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 5, in St. Mary's Church, Greektown, in Detroit.

The choir, directed by David Jorlett, will be accompanied by the Scandinavian Symphony Orchestra. Based on a poem about the 8th century Christian poet John Damascene, the cantata was written by world renowned Ukrainian composer Andrij Hnatyschyn. Hnatyschyn is well known in Europen and Ukrainian circles for his orchestral and chamber music and for his vast number of religious and secular compositions. He composed the cantata in 1988 in preparation for the Ukrainian millennium celebration of Christianity.

Hnatyschyn will attend the premier. Soloists include his daughter, Liuba Hnatyschyn, alto; Liuba Kozak of Toronto, soprano; Victor Shewili of Hamilton, Ontario, tenor; Jerome Cisaruk, baritone; and Myroslaw Hnatiuk, bass.

Tickets are $15 each and are available by calling St. John's Catholic Church at 897-7300 or Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church at 278-0470. Free bus transportation will be provided between these two parishes and St. Mary's Church.

These bikers are easy to like...

That's because they are a great bunch of conscientious kids who have turned in their Observer & Eccentric newspaper collections accurately and on time.

Their routes take them out into all kinds of weather all year long.

So what better way to show our appreciation than a 10-speed bike? Because these 12 youngsters are exceptional carriers, they were allowed to enter our annual drawing for a new bike. They are winners in every way!

If you have a potential carrier—someone reliable and responsible—in your family or know of someone who does, call us at one of the numbers below.

Rocks' luck is the same: all rotten

HERE'S A THEORY, concocted by whom I don't know, which maintains that for every bad break there's a good one. In the end, it all balances out.

If so, the guys who've played football at Plymouth Salem are waiting still for the scales of fortune to start tipping in their favor.

It's hardly news anymore, hearing the Rocks missed the Class A football playoffs by the narrowest of margins. In fact, after examining their playoff history, could any thing else have been expected?
Salem has qualified for the playoffs once - 1977. Old-timers might remember. The Rocks' best player was quarterback Rich Hewlett, who went on to play at University of Michigan. Hewlett was knocked out of action in the last regular-season game; he never played against Portage Central.

SINCE THAT '77 appearance, Salem has had two 8-1 records. Neither was good enough to qualify. Of course, the Rocks can still boast the highest computer playoff point total ever accumulated for a Class A team.

Unfortunately, it was in 1974, the year of the "paper playoffs." The computer system was just being tested; there were no playoff games that year.

Typical.

But just when it seems one school has suffered enough disappointment and heartache, enough to plead "Stop already!" to whomever controls the fates, another lump of coal is dumped into their Christmas stocking.

THIS TIME Salem missed because their rival, Ann Arbor Pio-

Pete Scerri knows something about state championship soccer teams, having coached five in his 15 years at Livonia Stevenson.

And he likes Plymouth Salem's chances of succeeding his Spartans after the Rocks eliminated the defending Class A champs 5-2 in a regional contest Wednesday at Centennial Educational Park.

'We lost to an outstanding team today," Scerri said. "I'll make a prediction: I don't think there is a team than can hold this team."

Redford Catholic Central will attempt to do that Saturday when it plays the Rocks, 16-3-1, for the regional championship at 2 p.m. The site will be Ford Elementary School, located a half mile west of Dearborn Fordson High School on Ford Road between Southfield and Schaefer.

Salem advanced to the final with a historic victory - its first ever over Stevenson, snapping an 0-11-2 winless streak that spanned the last nine

"THIS IS THE biggest win of my life; this is it," said Salem goalkeeper Matt Tudor after the Rocks avenged a 2-0, regular-season loss to the Spartans. "A lot of emotion went into this game, and we just carried it through.

Wednesday's game was significant for another reason, also. It was Scerri's last, culminating a successful career in which he made Stevenson the foremost power in the state. He coached the Spartans to 242 wins, 19 losses and 20 ties, including a 13-3-2

Scerri, who emphasized he was retiring and not quitting, said he decided to leave coaching after an angry parent called his home and used abusive language because his son didn't make the all-league team.

"I'm going to miss it, but I don't have it in my heart anymore," Scerri said. "When a parent hurts me, when it's no fun anymore, I don't want to be there.

"I never go to the parents, where they work, and tell them how to do their job."

Scerri added he still feels a bond with his players and will continue to be a fan of the Spartans. "You can take me out of Steven-

Stevenson beat in the district final.

The Rocks offered support for that contention and appear to be peaking at the right time. Salem has played extremely well of late and has been on a roll since going 0-3-1 late in the regular season, during which time it lost to Churchill and Stevenson.

We played the way we have the last two games," Salem coach Ken Johnson said. "We're passing quicker and using our speed.

"Like our wins in the district, we knew we could do it if we spread the field and relied on team play. (The players) feel it; they've got the spir-

The game turned in favor of the Rocks late in the first half when Jeff Gold and Greg Christensen scored goals in the last two minutes, breaking a 1-1 tie and sending Salem into halftime with plenty of momentum.

Gold and Stevenson keeper Jerry Smolenski went up for a ball in front of the goal and collided. The ball caromed toward the goal, and Gold drilled it past a defender with just under 2:00 to play.

WITH SECONDS left in the half, Chris Lajoy's throwin was touched by Chris Olson, who directed it to Christensen on the right side. Christensen kicked it across to the opposite side of the net.

"I think that did it," Johnson said, adding no player has scored more than one goal in Salem's last three games. "I think it was just a matter of the whole team clicking and relying on team play."

Salem might have secured its position in the first half, but the Spartans put themselves at a greater disadvantage in the second half when defender Jason Flynn kicked the ball into his own net. Flynn and Olson chased the ball into the Stevenson end, and Smolenski came out to take a security pass from Flynn, who lifted the ball over his keeper's head into the unattended

Stevenson also was minus leading scorer Shane Millner, who was redcarded in the last game.

Salem's Andy Cosenza made it 5-1 when his rebound shot ricocheted off the foot of Stevenson defender John Labadie before Smolenski could recover from the initial attempt.

Flynn scored Stevenson's second goal on a penalty kick with 15 minutes remaining. Tom Baker opened the scoring for Salem after 10 minutes of play, and Todd Krzisnik countered for the Spartans with a

Chiefs rule region

By Ray Setlock staff writer

Plymouth Canton's boys cross country team, with 53 points, managed to walk away with top honors at Saturday's Class A regional cross country meet.

With almost perfect conditions at West Bloomfield's Marshbank Park, the Chiefs cruised past No. 2-ranked Redford Catholic Central, which posted 66 points, followed by Plymbuth Salem (77), Livonia Stevenson (166) and Farmington (168).

Farmington's Ben-Goba won top individual honors, posting a time of 16:14. CC's Mike Sheridan ran a close second (16:27) and Canton's Brian Beach finished third. Chris Antezak of CC took fifth (16:53) and Salem's Brian Uryga sprinted his way to sixth (16:55).

Mike Ream of Canton finished eighth, followed by CC's Jay Schemanske who grabbed ninth (17:06) and Stevenson's Scott Freeborn finished 10th in 17:10.

Canton, CC and Salem will convoy north Saturday for the state Class A cross country finals. Flint's IMA-Brookwood Golf Club will host the 5,000-meter race, which is slated to begin at 11 a.m.

"We feel we can compete with anyone who will be there," Hayes said. "I just hope the conditions are good. No rain or snow.'

Salem coach Geoff Baker also expresses confidence heading into this weekend's race.

"If we are healthy, we can compete with any team there," Baker said. "I think CC, Canton and us are all evenly matched."

Tony Magni, the veteran CC coach, said his team has an inside chance because of experience.

"We've been there before," said Magni, who led CC to titles in 1983 and 1984. "The state run is a whole different ballgame and a lot of these teams will find that out." The Shamrocks, along with Ann

John Barrett figured his Farmington girls cross country team "had a lock on second place no matter what" at Saturday's Class A regional at Marshbank Park.

Barrett's belief proved right enough, but - if he said the same thing to Redford Union coach Bob Quellette - his optimism might have been tempered.

West Bloomfield captured the regional team title easily enough, scoring 31 points. After that, though, it tight. Only three teams could qualify for Saturday's state meet at IMA-Brookwood Golf Course in

And only nine points separated the next three teams. Farmington was and with 103, followed by Plymouth Canton, which edged Ouellette's RIJ team for third place, 107 to 112. Livonia Stevenson was fifth with 240, Bloomfield Hills Andover was sixth with 170 and Livonia Franklin took seventh with 186. Other Observer-area teams in the 17-team region were Plymouth Salem, ninth (266); North Farmington, 10th (285); Farmington Hills Mercy, 12th (312); Livonia Churchill, 13th (357); Westland John Glenn, 15th (408); and Livonia Ladywood, 17th

THE INDIVIDUAL champion was Farmington senior Jennifer Kiel in 19:30. Her season-long nemesis, North Farmington senior Lisa Rives, was right behind in second in 19:35. Other top-finishers from the Observer area included Canton's Amy Smith, fifth (30:39); Stevenson's Tra-cy Clark, sixth (20:43); and RU's Tracey James, 12th. Still, who didn't finish may have had as big an impact. RU's Lim Mockeridge told her coach she was feeling til just an hour before the race. Ouellette wanted to pull her out, but she convinced him she was well enough to run.

Ouellette said he would allow it, but he was going to stand at the onemile marker on the 5,000-meter course and take her out if he thought her condition was worsening.

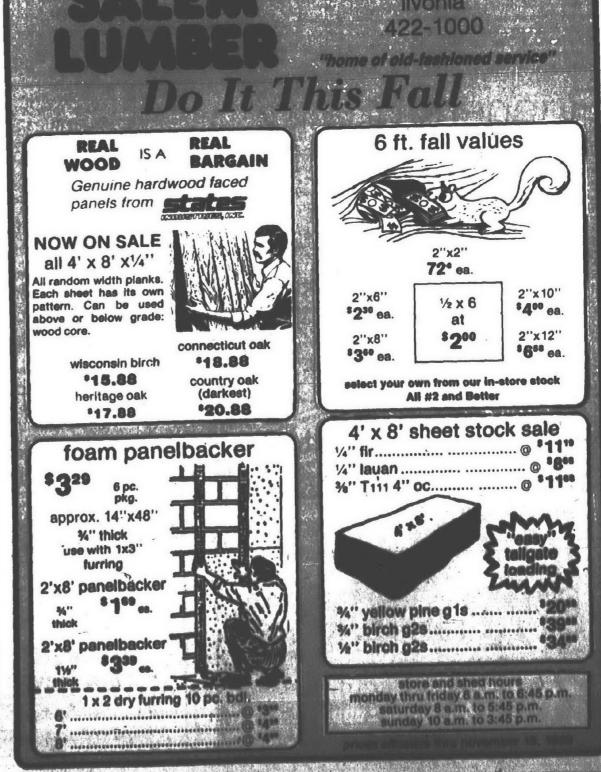

"She never made it that far," said Ouellette. Mockeridge, the Panthers' second-best runner, dropped out of the race early, and that quite likely cost RU a spot among the top three teams in the region. Quellette said Tuesday Mockeridge possibly was afflicted with mononneleosis.

BUT THE RU coach would not use Mockeridge's illness as an excuse. "Everybody has problems," he said. RU's other runners did well, but not well enough to offset Mockeridge's loss. Michelle Daraban was 17th and Jenny Sturdevant was 18th; they will join James in the Class A individual race Saturday.

RU's other finishers were Kelly

Patriots coach Dan Freeman was ecutatic over the victory.

"It was a big win to beat them at their place," he said. "It might not have meant a lot to them (the Chiefs had already clinched the division title), but it meant a lot to us. It was the first time we've besten them since I've been coaching here."

At the outset, it did not appear as if it would be the Franklin's night to shine.

Canton jumped out to a 15-8 lead after one quarter as Chief center Susan Ferko powered her way underneath against the smaller Patriots, acoring 10 of her game-high 19 points in the opening period.

Franklin got out of its 2-3 zone after the quarter and switched to a sagging man-toman defense, with Shannon Eberly guarding Ferko. Freeman called the defensive switch "the key to the game."

The Patriots outscored their hosts 11-10 in the second quarter to trail at the half, 25-

Although bad luck hounded the Panthers Saturday, Ouellette was right: Other teams have endured similar problems all season. Farmington had to rest Margaret Martin part of the season and was without Amy Trunk, who was injured.

But with Kiel leading the pack, the Falcons hung on to second despite a less-than-sparkling overall perform-

"I thought if West Bloomfield had an off-day we could beat them," said Barrett. "But they ran very well and we didn't run our best."

Martin was one of Farmington's bright spots, placing 15th (21:23) in a run Barrett called "quite spectacular for her." Allison Davis was 27th (21:56), Cheryl Casaroll was 29th (21:59) and Jenny Derwinski was 31st (22:07).

FARMINGTON MAY not have been up-to-par, but Canton, according to coach George Przygodski, "ran real well. It was a great meet for us. "We knew West Bloomfield was going to win. We figured we would have a hard time passing up Farmington, and it would be a struggle between us and Redford Union for third. We met twice earlier this year, and they beat us once and we beat them once."

The difference, according to Przygodski, was "We ran our race and they ran theirs. They ran out hard, we went out slower and ran them down at the end '

Joining Smith as Canton's scorers were Adrienne Garrow, 20th (21:39); Kim Gudeth, 21st (21:43); Anne Dib-Jasnowski, 33rd (22:18).

IT WAS a good day for individual runners from the Observerland area as well. North's Rives will be among the favorites to win Saturday's individual race, according to her coach, Bill Pinnell Jr. "She ran one of her best races this month," he said of Rives' run at the regional.

cross country

As for Saturday, Pinnell added, "I think she'll finish in the top five. We plan on her winning it. From what I've seen from results in the paper, I think she can handle it." Stevenson will also send two runners to the individual race, Clark and Carrie Creehan, who placed 13th (21:08). Gail Grewe just missed, placing 22nd (21:44).

Those three worked hard all summer and all fall," said Spartan coach Paul Holmberg. "So it was good to see them do well.

"They just wanted to get there and get a chance. They want to finish in the top third. If Tracy can break 20 (minutes), that's a goal for her. Carrie just wants to stay as close to Tracy as possible."

Salem will also send a runner to the individual race: Jenny Harris, who finished 16th (21:20). Injuries plagued the Rocks all season, with their top runner sidelined with a stress fracture and two of their remaining top six hobbled during parts

Redford Bishop Borgess didn't have enough to field a team, but freshman sensation Erica Shepard was outstanding. Shepard won the Class B region at Southgate Anderson in 19:26. It was her ninth victory in 11 races this season.

neer, played a team with an eightgame schedule (Ann Arbor Huron). That gave Pioneer, which beat Huron, three additional bonus points, points Salem coach Tom Moshimer hadn't figured on.

Moshimer thought Salem had edged Pioneer by three. When those points were added in and the tie was forged, Moshimer knew his team didn't have a chance in the tiebreaking format because it had more wins than Pioneer.

Let me explain. Pioneer is 7-2; Salem was 8-1. Because Salem had more wins, it obviously had more points. For Pioneer to even catch up to Salem would take a lot of bonus points, and the only way to get those bonus points was to hope your opponents won a lot of games.

Pioneers' foes did. The tie brot into effect the tiebreaking formula, which begins with head-to-head competition. Pioneer and Salem didn't play each other.

NEXT WAS total wins for each team's opponents. Since Pioneer had to make up all those points because it had one less win, it's obvious the Pioneers' foes had a lot more wins. Bingo - they're in the playoffs.

What bugs Moshimer is nowhere does the tiebreaking format mention better records. He thinks a team's record should be considered first or second, either before or after headto-head play.

"I'm pretty sure they were thinking that if there were two teams with equal records, this would be a fair way of breaking the tie," said Moshimer, referring to those in charge of making up tiebreaking op-

He's right. Said Jerry Cvengros, assistant director of the Michigan High School Athletic Association: "I helieve it was designed to consider the team's strength of schedule."

TRYING TO be fair about it and there isn't much doubt the Pioneers played a tougher schedule, so if they'd missed out they'd be asking similar questions - doesn't much ease Salem's agony. As Moshimer noted, "This team's been snakebit all year."

Remember, the Rocks' only loss came in the final five seconds to Westland John Glenn, 7-6. After having shut out the Rockets the entire game, Salem surrendered a 37-yard completion on third-down-and-38 in the game-winning 82-yard drive (Glenn, by the way, is in the playoffs).

After that loss, Moshimer figured his team's playoff chances were slim at best. But then Northville pulled a major upset, jolting Novi in t week of the season. And suddenly, Moshimer and the Rocks had hope.

"I told them Friday night the chances of us making it were not very good," said Moshimer. "But Novi gets beat and we beat a 7-1 team (Canton), and I start to think we've got a great chance."

starters (depending on how many went both ways), and all but one is graduating. There will be no second chance for them. "I'm going to do everything in my power to make sure this doesn't happen again," vowed Moshimer. Of course, his promise won't help the '89 Rocks. As the Salem coach noted, "The sad part about this is, the only time a rule is changed is after it

Salem used 12 to 14 players as seven of eight games in the final week," said Moshimer. "That's how they caught us.

They won't be."

THERE ARE alternatives. Cvengros said a committee responsible for the football playoffs meets every January to consider possible changes. "I can tell you this," Cvengros said, "This will be on (our agenda) this year."

Options include Moshimer's idea to consider a team's record in the tiebreaking formula. Or how about altering the regional concept? Instead of taking four teams from each of four regions, take the top two teams per region and then the next eight teams with the most playoff noints as wild cards.

That should satisfy those who insist all regions of the state must be represented and others who would like the best teams to make it, regardless of location.

But understand: No matter how much you tinker with it, there will always be someone unhappy with the playoff format. As Cvengros said, "As long as you limit the number of teams in the playoffs, there's always going to be inadequacies."

OK. But do the inadequacies always have to go against Salem?

They're the invisible men.

They toil in relative obscurity, with little fanfare, but their jobs are vitally important.

Westland John Glenn football coach Chuck Gordon knows the play of his offensive line is vital to the Rockets' hopes in the first round of the state Class A playoffs against Dearborn Fordson. (Game time is 1 p.m. Saturday at Ford-

"It's going to be determined in the trenches," predicted Gordon, whose team is 8-1 overall. "That's where the game is really won and lost when it's all said and done.'

"Those guys have great respect for our line," Gordon said. "They know how important it is because they see all the hard work they put

WHO ARE THESE masked men?

The reliable center is 5-foot-11. 219-pound Todd Horseman. The tackles are 6-2, 230-pound Mark Johnston, an All-Conference pick, and 6-6, 265-pound Harold Rankey, the team's biggest player.

At the guards are Skender Gocaj (5-11, 181) and Tony Prey (6-0, 190), the only junior starter. The tight end is Garnett Woody (6-3, 203).

These six players fit the criteria well this season under the formula Gordon employs.

you're not big and strong, you're going to have problems," he said. "The second thing is that you've got to love being in the weight room. You've got to love to get stronger.

"And the third thing is that you've got to be smart."

The Glenn coach said a lineman stereotyped as "dumb" is a thing of the past.

"Those days are over because the game has changed so much," Gordon said. "They're now asked to block all the different fronts and pick up stunts. It isn't easy as it

GLENN'S OFFENSIVE LINE is under the watchful eye each day by Gordon's staff of assistants: Mike Henry, Craig Hnatuk, Al Dobrovolec and Darrin Wubbenhorst.

"They're usually evaluated on film and nothing goes unnoticed," Gordon said. "This biggest thing about playing the offensive line is that you have to be assignment conscious. You can't afford to blow an assignment. They're efforttypes of guys who love their jobs."

Fordson, a perennial playoff qualifier with a 9-0 record, will provide a stiff challenge to the Rockets' interior front.

But Gordon thinks his group is up to the task because it's adopted a positive attitude.

"They've got to be an unselfish group," said the Glenn coach. They have to understand they won't get their name in the paper. But they typify what athletics are all about because of the sacrifice they make."

Gordon calls these invisible men a "tight unit."

"They have to be because they spend so much time together," he said. "They do a lot of group work, whether it's on the sled or whatever.

In the season football finale Saturday for both teams, Livenia Clarenceville defeated visiting Redford Thurston, 21-14.

Clarenceville finished the year at 7-2, while

Thurston dropped to 3-6.

Quarterback Chris Foss of Clarenceville completed 20 of 30 passes for 228 yards and two touchdowns.

He connected with Andy Weighill on a 20-yard scoring strike in the third quarter, followed by a 30-yard pass to Weighill again, the game-winner with 5:05 remaining in the game.

Junior Kendrick Harrington also had a big day receiving for the Trojans, making a couple of spectacular catches. (Jay Larson booted all three Weighill scored the game's first TD on a 5-yard run, capping a 75-yard Trojan drive in the opening quarter.

Thurston came back to take a 14-7 halftime lead on a pair of short runs by senior tailback Jesse Welker, who rushed for 105 yards on the day. He finished with a season total of 1,060, breaking the school record of 1,034 set by Craig Mutch in 1968.

Clarenceville was stopped twice inside the Thurston 10 during the first half.

Steve Koss, a junior linebacker, paced the Thurston defense with two sacks on the day. Thurston had a chance to tie the game, but nullified in the final minutes. With Clarenceville trying to kill the clock, Scott Cannon picked up a Trojan fumble and ran 75 yards for an apparent score, but the play was whistled back and ruled not a fumble.

REDFORD CC 28, DIVINE CHILD 14: Dave Owens became yet another area runner to crack the 1,000-yard barrier, leading Redford Catholic Central to a season-ending triumph over Deartiers Divise Child in a game played Saturday at Creatwood High.

Owens, a senior tailback cracked an 80-yard TD run on the first play from scrimmage. He rushed for 161 yards in 19 carries on the day, finishing the year with

CC's Terry Licht added a 2-yard TD run, capping a 14-play, 58-yard drive with 3:40 left to ice it for the Shamrocks, who finished 7-2 overall. (Divine Child wound up at 5-4.)

CC outgained the Falcons in total yardage, 266-137. Senior tackle Ryan Bell led CC with seven tackles (one solo and six assists). Jon Barbara, Rob Sylvester and Leo Kowalyk each recovered fumbles for CC.

FRANKLIN 20, GARDEN CITY 14 (OT): The Patriots got a break in overtime when lineman Derek Ploch fell on a Mark Little fumble in the end zone, giving Livonia Franklin (4-5) the non-league win Saturday over the visiting Cougars (1-8). Franklin rushed for 270 of its 311 total yards.

Pete Ministrelli paced the Patriots with 140 yards in 25 carries. He scored on pair of 1-yard runs in the second and fourth quarters. (Tad Dennis kicked both extra points to send the game into overtime.)

"They came out with a 'junk' offense, three receivers on one side," said North coach Jim O'Leary. "It was nothing we expected. We saw a whole different look."

ST. MARY'S 35, BORGESS 8: Quarterback Vaughn Bryant fired four touchdown passes Saturday to lead host Orchard Lake St. Mary's (7-2) to its second win this season over Redford Bishop Bergess (1-8).

Dwayne Carter caught two TDs — 12 and 22 yards. Kevin King added an 8-yard catch, while Nathan Bush contributed another on a 62-yard catch. Jason Janoss, who rushed for 65 yards in eight carries, added a 28-yard TD run. (Greg Palmer finished with 64 yards in Bryant was five of nine for 168 yards. OLSM led 21-0 at the half and 28-0 at the end of three quarters before Borgess scored in the final quarter.

Champ is declared in prediction race

The state high school football playoffs begin this weekend, but for your friendly Observerland grid prognosticators, the season is over and the final numbers are in.

For the first time in four years, Brad Emons is wearing the crown of fearless forecaster.

After going 10-2 last week, Emons finished the year at 98-28, three games ahead of last year's champion and the results are final.

Dan O'Meara. O'Meara didn't quite have the luck of the Irish behind him this season, winding up at 95-31. (He went 9-3 in the ninth and final week.)

Still kicking

Inter-regionals next for Ocelots

It didn't come easy, but it did come - and now Schoolcraft College's mens soccer team is going.

The Ocelots subdued a stubborn Cuyahoga Metro CC team 1-0 last Saturday at 3C to clinch the Region 12 title. The victory improved their record to 11-2-2 overall.

More importantly, the win qualified SC for the National Junior College Athletic Association Inter-regional Tournament this weekend at the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, SC opens the tournament against Lewis and Clark CC (from Godfrey, Ill.) at 11 a.m. Saturday. DuPage meets Bethany Lutheran (Minn.) in Saturday's second game. The winners play at 1 p.m. Sunday at Du-Page, with a berth in the NJCAA tournament at stake.

A CHANGE in fortune has improved SC's chances of advancing to the final tournament immensely. The toughest team in the Inter-regional was Triton CC, ranked second in the NJCAA. Last week, Triton was disqualified for using ineligible play-

It's difficult to say who the favorite is now, but Lewis and Clark the team that eliminated the Ocelots the last time they appeared in the Inter-regional, 2-0 in 1986 — was just 11-7 this season. So SC coach Van Dimitriou is optimistic.

"I really believe we have a shot at this thing this year," he said. "We've improved our team 20 to 25 percent (over last year), and I think it shows. No team has dominated us, not even the big schools.

"If we play at our best, I have no doubt we'll come out on top. I think Jefense is this team's strength. If our offense clicks and scores goals early, we can win it."

IF TRITON'S absence isn't enough, here's more fuel for Dimi-iriou's optimism: Chris Speen is ex-lected to return. The sophomore topper strained his knee midway through the season and has been idefined since.

"Without Chris, it put a strain on he coaching staff and the other layers," add Dimitriou of his miss-og toms, captain. "Chris was our-nater out there." Appear was also SCI top player.

Which is why he was named to the all-Region 12 team and nominated for All-American honors, even though he missed much of the sea-Also named to the all-region team were midfielder Rick Menary, defender Jeff Saylor and keeper Jeff Shuk. Sweeper Dave Dinglie and striker Khaled Zeidan were secondteam selections.

Saylor may prove to be the key player this season for SC. He was a substitute until Speen was injured; now that Speen is "90 to 95 percent healthy," according to Dimitriou, the Ocelots will be much improved.

How much? Saylor's development has Dimitriou thinking about moving Speen to midfield or even forward, positions where his size could prove beneficial - particularly at for-

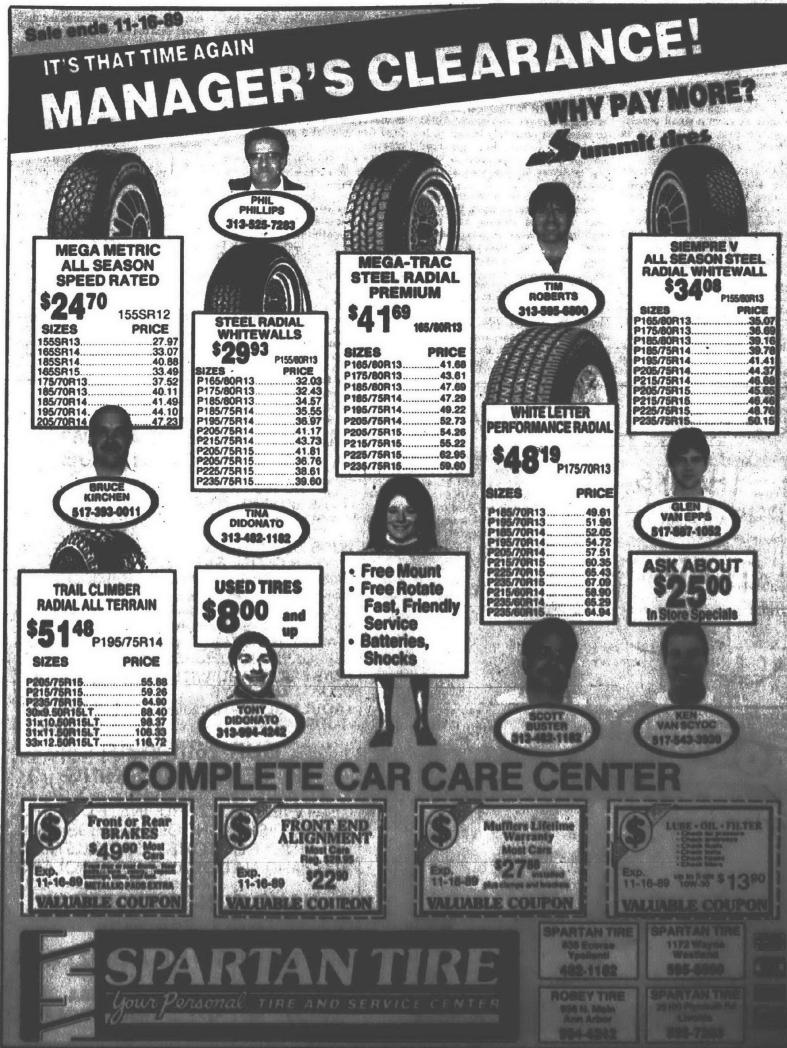

"THAT'S WHERE our weakness is, up front," said Dimitriou. "So far, Khaled (Zeidan, SC's leading scorer with 15 goals) has been a marked man. If we can draw some attention away from him, it's got to help."

Speen will also play some sweeper, with Dinglie moving up to midfield for short stretches. All things considered, Speen's return allows Dimitriou far more leverage in juggling his lineup.

"With your top player coming back, it's got to be a bonus," said

But as Dimitriou and so many for-mer SC players know, having the tal-ent and reaching the Inter-regional tournament is one thing winning it — which SC has managed to do just once before — in another.

In the win over Cuyshogs, the Ocelota scored the game's only got off a first-half corner kiel taken by Brian Thomas. The buil at a Cayyahoga takenter, in from a takenter and beauty, who takenter it in the first has a for all and a cayyahoga takenter.

Mill Coleman will be seeking his second-straight Class B championship as quarterback for Farmington Harrison when the playoffs start Saturday.

Playoff rematch

Riverview eyes revenge against Hawks

Contrary to popular belief, Riverview football coach Don Lessner did not throw away last year's game film that showed his team getting pounded by Farmington Hills Harrison.

Although he doesn't get a kick out of watching the 35-6 loss to Harrison in the second round of the Class B state playoffs, studying the film might actually benefit Lessner, the 23-year head coach.

Harrison quarterback Mill Coleman played the leading role in last year's game, and he has returned with another strong supporting cast.
In short, not much has changed at Harrison

No. 1-ranked Harrison (9-0 overall), the defending state champion, hosts Riverview (8-1) at 1:30

"IT'S BENEFICIAL to watch (last year's game film)," Lessner said. "I remember we could not move the ball on them; they shut us out. And Coleman had a great game - of course he has a great game against everyone.

"I don't think there's any better player in the state. Just look at his statistics. (Matt) Conley is an excellent runner, too. And that guy (placekicker Steve Hill) can kick the ball forever.

Meanwhile, the personnel at Riverview has changed dramatically. The Pirates lost 24 seniors off a team that went 10-1 and was state-ranked, but they've managed to stay successful this fall by winning the Huron League at 6-1.

Monroe Jefferson, a Huron League opponent, handed the Pirates their only loss, 38-20.

"They run the same plays, the same defense and are well-coached," Harrison coach John Herrington said. "They're not as big as last year,

Coleman is suffering from tendinitis in his Achilles tendon, but he took snaps Tuesday in practice and it won't limit his playing time at quarterback Saturday, Herrington said. Coleman normally punts for the Hawks (who don't normally punt), but because of the tendinitis, Hill will

"IT'S NOTHING big," said Coleman, who first noticed the pain a week ago. "It's just something I have to ice down and put a little heat on. I still

The game will mark the last home appearance for Coleman, the only high school quarterback in Michigan to throw for more than 6,000 yards in a

"I want to play my last game here and make it good one on this field," Coleman said. "We just have to take it one game at a time. Once you get in the playoffs, all the teams are pretty good."

Riverview runs out of a multiple offense, and the quarterback is junior Scott Czopek. Czopek is listed at 5-feet-10, one inch taller than Coleman, and that might be the only advantage he has over his counterpart.

Caspek has completed only 27 of 68 passes for 345 yards and one touchdown, and he's gained just 43 yards in 17 carries.

His first job is to hand the ball off to running backs Kevis Jenkins, Jason Turcotte and John Alley. The Pirates have averaged almost 300 yards rushing per game and Jenkins has been the leading ground gainer, amassing about 800 yards.

THE PIRATES are young on the offensive line where guard Brian Whaley and center Brad Luther are the only senior starters. Junior tackles Jason Milanovich and Aram Zidigian are the biggest linemen, each weighing in at about 225

On paper, the Pirates don't stand a chance. Of course, the game's not played on paper.

'We're not as talented as last year," Lessner said. "We were 10-0, state-ranked. It's just one of those things, you know. I don't think there's any team in the state, except maybe (Birmingham) Brother Rice that can match up with Harrison. There are few that can give them a good game."

Riverview's 5-2 defense is led by inside linebackers Mike Orr and Turcotte. Orr, a 6-4, 195pound senior, leads the Pirates with 72 tackles and the best down lineman is tackle Chris Kara-

Tracker stalks black leopard

HERE IS NO camouflage jeep sitting in the driveway and no hi-tech, ultra violet tracking devices and stashed in the corner of the basement. But inside the home in this affluent Birmingham neighborhood rode lurks a man on the prowl.

John Castle is that man. And he's stalking Michigan's phantom feline: the black leopard . To some, Castle is little more than a ghost buster. Many people are convinced the reports of sightings of a large panther-like cat are merely from confused individuals who have seen either a black Labrador, a coyote, a feral house cat or a fisher. They remain convinced, in their own minds, that there is no large-cat population in Michigan.

But to hundreds of other reputable eople who claim to have seen a large, black, panther-like cat, Castle is their only link to the bottom of this unsolved mystery.

"I've seen enough reports that I'm convinced we have a small population of breeding black leopards in Michigan," Castle said.

IF ANYONE has an inside track in the existence of a black leopard repulation in Michigan, Castle does. He has been studying and following up on the reported sightings for 36 years. Sice 1980, Castle has been stalking the cats full-time and has traveled thousands of miles and spent thousands of hours investigating the reports. Castle received his first report of a panther sighting in 1953 while serving as the city editor of the Pontiac Press (now the Oakland Press).

Although intrigued by the idea, Castle decided the sighting was probably that of a cougar under poor lighting conditions. He assumed the cat was probably an escaped pet.

More recently however, there have been a rash of sightings, centered around a number of reports from Michigan's southern Lower Penninsula, which began in 1984.

At that time, Castle had recently retired from an executive speechwriting position at General Motors and had the time to spend to seriously investigate the reports.
"In the early '80s I got the drive to get to the bottom of this mystery," said Castle. "I was a newspaperman, so naturally I was skeptical. But the more I've gotten into it, the less skeptical I've become."

ALTHOUGH NO panther, leopard or cougar has yet been caught, killed or otherwise positively identified in Michigan, Castle has gathered enough physical evidence to raise the eyebrows of even the most ar-

Castle follows up on most sighting reports. He discards many, however, such as sound reports and night sightings. He is also very skeptical of tial reports tend to develop hysteria," he cautioned.

Despite the discarded reports, Castle has files and files of reputable reports, including some which even leave the skeptics with unanswered

· Pat Folaron of Clio saw a panther-like cat on her property 15 different times from 1985-1987. During that time the remains of a neighbor's pet dog were found wedged in the crotch of a nearby tree. At one point, Folaron snapped a picture of the creature. Although the photograph was a little blurry, David Tetzlaff, leopard trainer at Cedar Point Amusement Park, identified the animal as a black leopard.

• U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

Agent Don Burger and a police officer friend spooked a large cat-like creature which was lying on a moonlit trail in Manchester. Burger returned later with a 30.06 and a scope, hoping the cat would return. It did, but Burger couldn't get a clear shot. "I could see it clear as day in my scope. It was a black leopardess, probably weighing 70 to 75pounds," Burger told Castle.

• In July 1986, Selvio Fini, a Milford farmer whose land borders Kensington Metropark, found one of his saddle horses dead in one of his fields. The neck of the horse had been ripped open. Following a blood trail, Fini said he jumped a "huge black cat" and took a shot at it. Later that night a Milford police officer fired two shots at a similar looking

These reports don't prove anything. But they don't disprove anything either.

CASTLE ALSO has dozens of plaster casts of footprints left in the area of panther sightings. Some casts leave unanswered questions as to what type of creature actually left the print, but other tracks were undoubtedly left by a large member of the feline family.

Although Castle has concentrated his efforts in Michigan, he has ventured throughout the nation in his pursuit. He has polled every regional wildlife office in the United States

"My survey did yield an eyepop-ping statistic," Castle said. "Twentyinces have received black panther reports in the past 10 years. Sightings number in the thousands. Where there are that many tales, there must be panthers."

CASTLE'S BIGGEST problem is authenticating the existence of these

'If people see something, they know what they see so they aren't concerned with finding the fresh tracks and making a mold or getting a good picture," said Castle. "People have to understand that if they see something, they must find the trail immediately. They can't wait until tomorrow or all kinds of animals can come through the area and they may never find the correct set of tracks."

Even with tracks and pictures, many people will doubt the existence of black leopards in Michigan.

"The best way to authenticate their existence is to put one up a tree, tranquilize it and cage it," Castle said. "Or if one was killed, either by a hunter or a car, but I don't advocate that and I would hate to see

For now, Castle will continue his hunt with hopes of someday hitting the jackpot. But he knows the mystery could go on for years. "They have been called the feline flying saucers," admitted Castle. "But I've got so many credible reports, I just

Unfamiliar face

Weisburg is the man behind top TV documentaries

TOU WOULDN'T KNOW his face if you passed him on a street of his native Bloomfield Hills.

But through his award-winning tark, millions of Americans, including many of the most important deon makers in Washington, D.C., better understand the often-compliated issues we face today in the United States. His most recent film niered in early October on Publie Broadcasting and was hosted by the dean and news anchor emeritus of American news reporting, Walter

The amazing thing is this - Roger Weisburg, 36, actually began his award-winning career as a documentary filmmaker by accident.

"I actually stumbled into this caby default," Weisburg said, from the office of his company, Publie Policy Productions, in New York City. "After attending Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., I was on my way to a Ph.D. in comparative literature and life in academia. I thight Introductory Philosophy and Spanish for a year at one of the Friends Schools in Manhattan and anish for a year at one of the realized that teaching really wasn't the direction I wanted to go in."

WEISBURG LEFT teaching and hegan working as a consumer activ-ist with a consumer agency in New York City. He was soon pointed out to television producers as a consumer expert. By 1977 he was helping to provide stories and background on er law to PBS Station WNET, ly first work was very consumted," Weisburg said. "But rected by Weisburg.

involved," he said. "Of utmost importance is to have something worthwhile to say knowing exactly and concisely what you want to get across. You have your message. But you have to fairly narrowly define what you hope to achieve because, one, an hour is a lot of time for a TV news story, and, two, it's not much when you get into the complexities of the issue.

"Documentary combines the rigors of journalism with the creative side of filmmaking, merging the two so that the viewer is not conscious either that they're listening to a news report or seeing a movie. with the story and doesn't feel security.

they're being preached to the way they might on the evening news.

"I try to get the viewer hooked on the story, and slip in the reporting and the broader implications of the story they've been drawn into. My goal is to subtly weave the story and the reporting together, so that the viewer doesn't notice where one begins and the other lets off."

Weisburg writes, produces and directs all his films. "No Place Like Home" examined the long-term care options of the frail elderly, and received numerous awards. "Old Enough To Do Time" scrutinized "get tough" juvenile justice policies and received several awards and an Emmy nomination.

"HEALTH CARE on the Critical List" concerned health-care cost containment and "Who Lives Who Dies" looked at how health care is rationed in the United States. Both received awards too numerous to

His most recent project, "Can't Afford To Grow Old," hosted and narrated by Walter Cronkite, examined long-term care for the elderly and the reasons why each year a million Americans are forced into poverty by the cost of long-term care. The program also explored different approaches to providing assistance to this fastest-growing segment of American society.

Weisburg currently has two projects in the works (physical production — location shooting, editing, takes six-nine months). The first is on national health insurance and the second is on preschool children in America growing up in poverty.

"For the first time in history, children are the poorest segment of the population," he said. "In the U.S. there are 3.5 million kids living below the poverty line. Today's kids are the first ever downwardly mobile generation that this country has brought up. The report will be on the competition between the generations for scarce social dollars."

ON THE LIGHTER side is Weisburg's experiences with the bigname host/narrators he uses for his documentaries.

"When we cast, we're looking to match the message of the documentary with the prospective narrator's interests, or public service sensibilities. We, in effect, exploit their TV persona," he said.

better than Walter Cronkite. He is the most incredibly congenial, personable man you could ever meet. He puts everyone at ease. And he's such a pro. I allotted three and a half hours of studio time for Walter's volceover narration session and he completed it in 35 minutes. He read over 50 pages of manuscript. He just doesn't make mistakes. He's so good at what he does that everything he says seems to be his deepest most heartfelt conviction.

"Actor Jack Klugman was veryenergetic, eager to get to the guts of the issue, very interested in coming across as uncovering scandal much like his televison character, Quincy. We had to get him to tone it ?: down a bit. Daniel Travanti, who was at the height of his 'Hill Street Blues' fame as Captain Furillo, also had to let up on his TV persona when he hosted 'Old Enough To Do Time.'

According to Weisburg, the most selfless host who gave of her time and effort was actress Helen Hayes. As a result of their working together, Weisburg and Hayes have maintained an active friendship. Hayes even offered her services for free but worked for scale because of union rules.

THE MOST DIFFICULT host to work with for Weisburg was James Earl Jones - who does indeed have the reputation in the industry of being somewhat cantankerous. "But when all is said and done, and you're in the editing studio and ear his voice coming out of the speakers, it's wonderful. It's like God talking," Weisburg said.

Humor is accented in 'Mr. Roberts'

Thomas Heggen and Joshua Logan's World War II Navy comedy continues to stand as a truly great piece of American theater. The story of Lt. Doug Roberts' quest to get off a cargo ship and into combat during the waning days of the war, it remains one of the warmest, funniest and best written accounts of men in uniform ever staged.

rector Sandra Sutherland's cast has focused more on "acting" (making sure their lines have the proper inflection and that their facial expressions are appropriate) than they have on "interacting" (establishing comfortable relationships with the other characters on stage). This inability to gel as a unit leaves the production without the warmth and human feeling it needs.

Action focuses on the conflict between the title character and a tyrannical ship's captain. As executive officer of Navy cargo ship AK601, Mr. Roberts spends his time trying to get transferred into a combat unit and trying to make life bearable for a crew, which has not had shore leave in more than a year. The captain, one of life's truly embittered losers, has made this ship his own despotic kingdom, which he rules with an inept but iron hand. He hates Mr. Roberts for the respect and loy-

CRAIG FORHAN as Doug Roberts is a likeable leader, but his portrayal lacks the strength and charisma needed to make the love and devotion of the ship's crew convincing. Jack Grulke rants convincingly as the evil captain but fails to give the character the depth needed to make him truly menacing.

Bobb Locks turns in a nice performance as Ensign Pulver, the cocky but totally insecure officer who finds his courage at the show's climax. Locks' self-depreciating humor makes Pulver the most endearing member of the crew. Chuck Fisher is understated and authentic in the somewhat thankless role of Doc, Mr. Roberts' low-key sidekick.

Some of the finest moments in the show also come from minor characters, the sailors who make up the crew. The gruff-talking Jim Snideman, fresh-faced Phil Hadley and alty the lieutenant enjoys from the crew. energetic Frank Marcus especially stand out.

The set, unfortunately, is cramped and awkward. Its restrictions contribute heavily to the show's stumbling pace. Costumes seem simple

"Mister Roberts" is a wonderful play, and despite its flaws, this production does manage to draw a lot of laughs and generate more than a few misty eyes in the audience at the end

Every year, members of the Northwest Wayne chapter of Zonta International put on their best bib and tucker and go all-out for First Step, the shelter for battered families, by sponsoring a benefit fashion show/dinner that is open to the public. This year is no exception. The event will be Thursday, Nov. 9, at Plymouth Manor, 345 N. Main Street, Plymouth. Tickets are $40 and may be obtained by calling 462-4481. In the last several years, local Zontians have raised over $15,000 for the shelter. Fashions will be by Unique Accessories of Plymouth. Shown here is Hilda Bokos (left) pinning a piece of jewelry on Judy Ellis, First Step director, who will be recognized at an awards ceremony that is part of the evening's festivities.

The New York Times called pianist Cynthia Raim "a musician of intelligence and judgment." The Philadelphia Inquirer praised her "impeccable technique, bright but not brittle . . . delicately colored."

She prefers letting the music take the limelight in her interpretations, rather than resorting to keyboard pyrotechnics that draw attention to the planist at the expense of the music, she said.

"I enjoy playing a wide repertoire," she said of her conscious decision not to become musically pigeonholed.

When asked which composer she plays best, Raim defers to the crit-

Unique Steinway coming here

Steinway & Sons and Hammell Music Inc. of Livonia, in cooperation with the Chamber Music Society of Detroit, are hosting "Steinway and Friends at Orchestra Hall" with internationally acclaimed Detroitborn planists Ruth Laredo and James Tocco at 8 p.m. Friday in Orchestra Hall.

The concert honors Steinway piano company's 500,000th piano. Laredo and Tocco will perform.

In its 136-year history, Steinway has built just three specially commissioned pianos. The 100,000th Steinway, built in 1903, is property of the Smithsonian Institution. The 300,000th, built 35 years later, is in the East Room of the White House. Now, the 500,000th Steinway has been created as a "gift to the world."

With an estimated value of over $500,000, it has the distinction of being the most valuable as well as visually arresting plane ever made.

Immediately following the concert, the piano will be taken to Hammell Music showrooms on Middle Belt Road in Livonia where it will be on public display from Monday, Nov. 6, through Saturday, Dec. 2, as part of Hammell's exclusive Steinway factory selection event. It will then be moved to the De-troit Institute of Arts where it will be featured with a complete collegtion of famous works by Castle. In addition gallery concerts on the 500,000th will be presented with two special Brunch with Birds partor mances in Kreage Court.

guest speaker at the Livonia Friends of the Library meeting at Livonia mystery author Sarah Wolf reads over her publisher's 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 8, in Civic Center Library on contract as her cat, Rocky, soaks up some sun. Wolf will be Five Mile Road. The meeting is open to the public.

Wolf: publishers at door

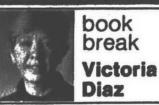

EXT WEEK, Livonia writer S.K. Wolf's suspense-thriller, "The Harbinger Effect" (Simon & Schuster, $18.95), will arrive at area bookstores. It'll be a very special day for Wolf (a.k.a. Sarah Wolf Shoemaker), made especially sweet by the fact that the book — just her second published novel — has been designated an alternate selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club and a main selection of the Mysterious Book Club, a division of BOMC. The new novel, (her first, "Long Chain of Death," was published by Walker & Co. in 1987) is a tale of intrigue and derring-do. It centers on the defection of one Yuri Klebanoff, an important Soviet citizen who not only happens to be the son of the editor-in-chief of Pravda, but is also the grandson of a former Soviet premier.

He is aided in his attempt at defection by an ex-Peace Corps volunteer, Molly Davison, who, though short on a knowledge of international intrigue, is long on spirit and quick wit.

The action moves from Africa to Rome to Greece to points beyond, with stakes growing ever higher, and the plot thickening considerably because of one curious fact:

Along with the KGB, U.S. operatives are also working to sabotage the defection.

WOLF, 53, has lived in Greece sively in the Middle East. She wrote "The Harbinger Effect" over a three-year period, starting in 1985, while working as a librarian at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. Much of it was put together, in fact, during spare moments she could grab on lunch and coffee breaks.

Ideas, outlines, characters and possible plots for the story had been rattling around inside Wolf's imagination since the early '70s, however.

At the time, living in Greece with husband Kent, she happened to meet the CIA agent who had "escorted" Josef Stalin's daughter, Svetlana Alliluyeva, to the United States in her defection in 1976. Hearing his accounts of the experience, the then-aspiring writer was highly intrigued.

"Writers hear things like that and immediately begin to embellish, of course," Wolf said.

Over time, she kept thinking about the story. As a result, some time during the years that followed, a plot line took shape: What if an important Soviet citizen defected, and not only did the Soviets want to get the defector back, but the Americans didn't want the defection to work, either . . .

With that, "The Harbinger Effect" was on its way.

IT WOULD BE another couple of years, though, before any of it was on paper - not only because Wolf was sidetracked by activities like returning to college, graduating, going to work, and seeing her first book published - but because she tends to "write" most of a story inside her head before committing any of it to paper.

In the case of "Harbinger Effect," there was also the matter of conducting some important background research before getting the story down.

Fortunately, Wolf still kept in touch with her friend, the former CIA agent. When she needed details for her opening chapters on how an American embassy deals with a defector, she gave him a call.

"He gave me very detailed information and, in fact, offered to read those parts of the book which dealt with that," she said.

At no time, did the agent divulge any "secretive" information, she

This phrase describes the warming of the Earth that has occurred because the burning of fossil fuels have increased the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, trapping solar energy.

Sarah Wolf's new book, due out this month from Simon & Schuster, introduces a similar phrase that just may become part of the language and raise the national, and possibly global, political consciousness to an even more wary level: The Harbinger Effect.

THIS PHRASE (the title of Wolf's spy thriller) describes the political manipulation of a Third World nation by the American and Soviet military, apparently unbe-knownst to the governments in Washington and Moscow.

Soviet glasnost, perestroika and American proposals of "a kind-er, gentler nation" have become more golitical plots stoked by Sovi-

Wolf takes us first to Rafetna, a city in Bodamwe, a country in West Africa, that is the scene of a civil uprising supposedly run by a group of Bodamwean rebels. Enter Yuri Klebanoff, a Russian photojournalist working for Tass (the Soviet news agency), documenting the fighting in what the Soviets regard as a people's revolution in this tor-

ONE EVENING, as he witnesses another typical Bodamwean sun-set, his artist's eye unconsciously reveling in the subtle watercolor hues that shadow the buildings of this exotic city on the Atlantic, Rie-banoff decides to defect to the United States. After setting in motion his planned ruse, Riebanoff makes his way to the United States readily buy "seeking artistic freedom" as reason enough to grant Klebanoff asylum in America. It isn't until Klebanoff cites his infamous family tree - he's the only living grandson of former Soviet premier Sergei Butakov, the aging head of the old-school, hard-line Soviet politics (we might compare fictional Butakov with Kruschev) - that the embassy officials takes Klebanoff's request for asylum a little more seriously.

APPARENTLY UNAWARE of United States involvement in covert military operations in Bodamwe at the time of Klebanoff's defection, the officials quickly sort out the effects of Klebanoff's defection on current Soviet Premier Kalishev's (compare fictional Kalishev to Gorbachev) soft-line approach of glasnost and perestroites. They also consider what Klebanoff's defection would mean to United States and Soviet relations wants to inform us that the old boy network is alive and well in both the East and the West. Soviet Phase II proponents consist of a group of old-school, pro-Butakov Soviet politicos that don't want to see the communist revolution go down the tubes by diluting it with Kalishev's near-Western reforms.

On the United States side, the Harbinger plan is the idea of a small group of former highly posttioned Army and Navy men, seek-ing to retain the power and money they once held in a former harderlined American president's admin-istration while reinstating the mili-tary-industrial complex that underpinned American government not

FROM ONE short paragraph, a reader known immediately that cter, Yuri Andreyevich Rebanoff, in Russian, a photogra-pher and that he in experiencing a dilemma, a thought that has been obviously nagging him for awhile as he tells himself, "Do it now," and that whatever it is he is goin to do now might cause him considerable trouble, so much so that if he panders too long, he will not do at he he must do now.

The imperative pulls the reader into the story as we internally ask, do what now? What's he's going to do? Is he going to jump out the window? We read curiously on to learn that this is a defection, not a suicide, and then we look for a reason. But what we find is a somewhat attende excuse for seeking asylum in the United States.

INDEED, THROUGHOUT the story, the character of Yuri seems not to have much substance there isn't much meat of reason for the reader to bite into and digest -

so his words and thoughts abo defection and his subseques defection and his subsequent in-volvement with Melly Davison, a Peace Corps worker callisted to escort him out of the country under the guise of American bu and-wife tourists, do not reveal the man inside the political defector.

Yuri gives a good deal of personal history and political background information to Molly, and even explains how glasnost and perestroika should be interpreted from their Russian definitions (somewhat different from U.S. interpretations), yet, he remains enigmatic, if not downright aloof. Perhaps that was Wolf's intention: to make Yuri a somewhat transparent conduit through which the plot and other characters transit.

"THE HARBINGER Effect" could easily be described as a modern woman's story, even though a male is the focal character. The female characters appear the strongest. They are intelligent, can-do women who manage to outsmart the overbearing political machismo of both American and Soviet governments, manipulating them to play the game of Yuri's defection their way or no way.

Wolf's background as a former teaching librarian at University of Michigan's undergraduate library is reflected in the somewhat didactic nature of "The Harbinger Effect." There is a good deal of referential information pertaining to journalism/newspaper source ethics, - publishing a source of infor-mation on "background" or "deep background," when and why this is done, and information about governmental procedures regarding defections, foreign relations, etc.

WOLF ALSO makes use of a lot of italicized terms, some of which she partially defines by the context they are used, and some of which compel the reader to look for a Russian or Italian/English dictionary or a governmental slang dicnew word to be learned is italicized or left blank to be filled in from a list or glossary. However, Wolf left out the glossary, and this is a stopper to another stimulating, well-devised novel for this second

AS HARBINGER refers to an omen of things to come, we can only hope that such subterreanean workings of groups's like Wolf's Harbinger and Phase II are purely fictional concepts in U.S. and Soviet relations and that glasnost and perestroika are the real ice picks to chip away the frozen block we know as the Cold War.

Introducing The Crossings At Canton.

Apartment living just got better.

We're making The Crossings a better place to live and a better value. You'll feel it in the new hallways and newly refurbished clubhouse. You'll see it in the plush landscaping when you enter the grounds. And that's just the beginning. It's the new look and feel of The Crossings at Canton—and it's for you.

The Crossings at Canton offers 19 different floor-plans with 1 to 4 bedrooms. And whether you choose a 2-level townhome or a luxury apartment, the renewed beauty of this charming rental community shines through in every one—the result of our recent. "Capital Improvement & Upgrading" program. These apartments and townhomes are the largest in the area, yet are still incredibly affordable.

Branch support, longevity key to mortgage lenders

By Doug Funke staff writer

Who are the major mortgage lenders in metro Detroit and why?

Standard Federal Bank, First Federal of Michigan and Comerica Bank-Detroit led the way in terms of total amount loaned and number of mortgages issued during August.

According to figures provided by Lawyers Title Insurance Corp:

• Standard Federal, headquartered in Troy, recorded 1,593 mortgages during the month with an aggregate value of $94.5 million.

• First Federal of Michigan, based in Detroit, logged 626 mortgages with an aggregate value of 242.8 million.

Comerica Bank-Detroit, recorded 870 mortgages with an aggregate value of $27.3 million.

All of those mortgages were for $250,000 or less and the great majority were on residential property.

Since the August survey, Comerica has consolidated Detroit, Ann Arbor and Comerica Mortgage Corp. operations into one entity — Comerica Mortgage Corp. Mortgage Corp. — and acquired Bloomfield Mortgage. If those branches had been included as one entity by Lawyer's Title. Comerica's totals for August would have been 1,070 mortgages with an aggregate value of $41.4 million.

THE THREE pace-setters seem to have two elements in common longevity in the financial services business to build a reputation and lots of branches in which to draw

Michael Lubig, vice president and manager of the mortgage department for Standard Federal, said he anticipates that his bank will approach $850 million in mortgage loans this year.

"First, we have a very good branch network (60) that blankets the community we serve," Lubig said. That makes it convenient to filing mortgage applications.

"Number two is the speed at which the customer gets a response back," Lubig said.

"Now, between when a customer comes in and files an application and when we're ready to close on the mortgage has been running . . . 15, 15 % calendar days.

"THE LAST thing is price," he said. "For a lot of customers, that's most important. Standard Federal is very, very competitive as far as rates and fees."

acrete's strong grip in subdivisions may be slipping. Brick patios, brick sidewalks and even brick driveways are becoming increasingly popular with homeowners even though brick landscaping generally costs two to three times as much as "We do 500 houses a year here, said Mike Soulliere, who owns Soulliere Decorative Stone of Utica with his brother, Roger.

"(Homeowners) are looking for that cute little patio or walkway. It's more decorative, more durable." Mike said. "What they're looking for is a style of brick to fit with the "People are tired of concrete and the gray look. They're tired of cracks," he said.

Soulliere is recognized as the largest brick landscaper in the Detroit area in terms of sales and employ-

The other major player, Brick-scape in Northville, is owned by Joe and Diane DiRado. "A LOT of people are looking for something elegant, different," Diane said. "People are getting tired of looking down the subdivision and seeing wood deck after wood deck or concrete patio after concrete patio." "People like the look of brick. It's very rich looking and it's a long-lasting system if installed properly," Joe

The concept of brick landscaping, fairly new in this country, was imported from Canada. Consumers here started showing interest after brickworks were displayed at a Homearama about five years ago, Soulliere said.

Both DiRado and the Soullieres had been in the plant landscaping business and taught themselves brick landscaping. Both also started

"ALL JOBS are done differently. I don't think we've done two alike ever," DiRado said. "We're really pushing into deck guys," Soulliere said. "Number one, you don't have cracking. Number two, you don't need permits." No permits means no inspections and no assessment increases on the property, unless the local assessor stumbles upon an improvement. But we're getting ahead of our-

First, bricks used for patios, side walks and driveways aren't the same kind of bricks used on houses.

Landscaping bricks generally are formed by pressurizing concrete and concrete aggregate using less water than regular concrete. Bricks used on buildings generally are made of Often people have bricks left over from a home improvement job, Soulliere said. "They say, 'Let's build a little patio or walkway.'

them in the ground without thinking of pitching (for drainage). Moisture gets in, they shatter."

Lesson No. 2 — mortar isn't used in brick landscaping jobs. DiRado described the process

"First you excavate an area. Then you install a base of slag gravel and sand - six inches for patios and sidewalks, 8-12 for driveways. You lay bricks one at a time. You lay them hand tight.

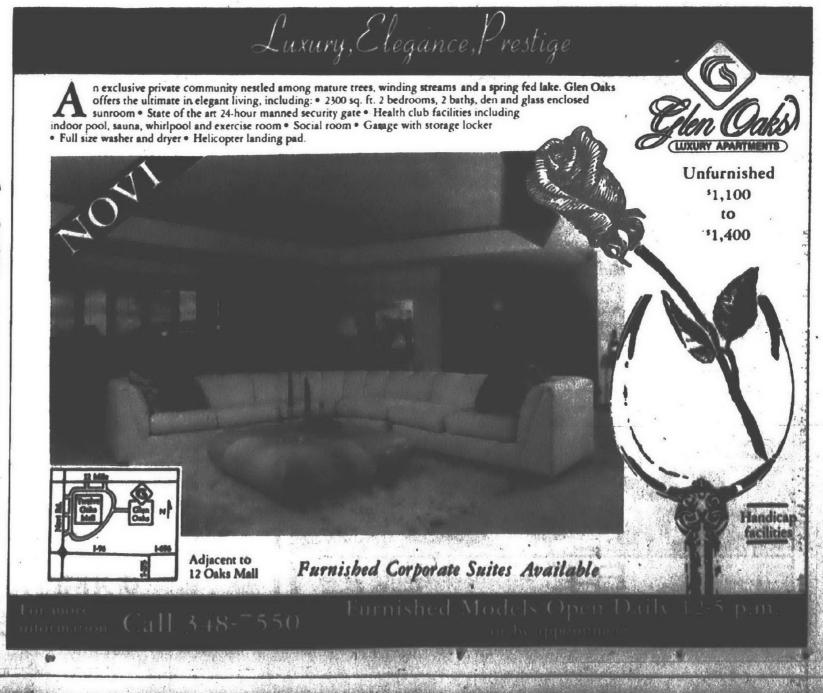

around the surface. Then you run a compactor over the surface that sweeps sand between the joints at the same time," DiRado said.

'You put a concrete edging

The vibration of the compactor and the sand tighten the bricks.

Soulliere picks up the narrative: "You have to follow specifications in doing interlocking (brick) paving.

The turnover rate for owners of single-family and condominium homes in Michigan last year was 13.7 years compared with 11.5 years for the nation, according to a study by Chicago Title and Trust Co.

The turnover rate is calculated by dividing the total number of owned ousing units by the number of home sales in a given calendar year. Na-tionally, there were 59.3 million owned housing units and 5.14 million sales last year. In Michigan there were 2.74 million onwed units and 199,100 sales.

John Pfister, vice president and manager of market research for the national title insurer, said the actual turnover frequency depends a lot upon timing and where the homeowner lives. It can be affected by a number of factors, such as regional economic strengths or weaknesses, population growth or the lack of it, the public's perception of interest rate trends, and the composition of population by age group.

THE STUDY showed Maine residents to be the most restless with a turnover rate of 7.9 percent. California ranked second with 8 years, followed by Delaware, 8.4; Vermont, 8.5; Virginia, 8.8; the District of Columbia, 8.9; and North Carolina, 9.1.

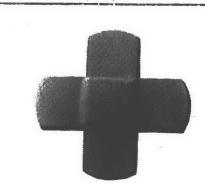

Louisiana residents stick around the longest — 26.3 years, followed by Wyoming, 20.8; Utah, 19.2; Mississippi and Idaho, 18.5; and Montana,

Over the years, the national turnover rate has ebbed and flowed with the business cycle. In modern times, the frequency rose to fever pitch in 1978, when inflation was soaring and housing nationally was turning over at an 8.9-year clip. Four years later thenational pace had slowed dramatically to 19.2 years.

In recent years, the turnover rate has stabilized near current levels, Pfister said.

They like the look that brick provides

The appearance, pure and simple, is what attracts homeowners and commercial customers to brick

Lesley O'Neill of Birmingham said she just didn't think a wood deck would mesh architecturally with the house she shares with husband Bill. The O'Neills wanted to do something with a small plot in the yard that had been used as a garden and contained some old patio blocks.

"I had seen it (brick) at a shopping center in town," she said. "I just think it's a nicer look."

They contracted for a small brick patio and a brick ribbon walkway along the driveway.

"We've had a lot of positive comments. People out walking have stopped and said how nice it looks," Lesley said.

Paul Camilleri of Livonia has installed a brick patio, a brick walkway between the patio and a deck and a brick walkway leading to the children's play area in the yard.

"WE WANTED it to have a parklike atmosphere," Camilleri said of his newly built house. "Asphalt or cement would take away from that."

Camilleri and his wife, Karen, became more and more enamored with brick landscaping the more they saw of it over the years at builder shows.

"If I could afford it, I would have a brick driveway and sidewalk," he Molly Kuclo, who lives with husband Tom in Northville, said there was no doubt in her mind what she wanted when an old brick walkway and porch steps started deteriorating in the house they bought last

More brick.

"I fell in love with it. It really made an entrance to the house,"

"I've had nothing but positive remarks. In fact, another neighbor down the street is going to have Brickscape do something for them.

Even the woman who did our wallpaper and did the master bedroom called and said how nice it looked," Kuclo said.

'It provides the image the city wants to project — a positive, homey kind of image. The brick walkways add a sense of community pride.'

> - Paul Sincock of Plymouth

BRICK LANDSCAPING is going beyond residential.

'Again, it makes a statement about what they're doing, what they're about," said Joe DiRado, owner of Brickscape.

Mike Soulliere, owner of Soulliere Decorative Stone, said his company has done 43,000 square feet of brick landscaping at the entrance to the Detroit Zoo and 25,000 square feet at the Scott Fountain on Belle Isle.

Soulliere also did a brick patio some years back at Oakland Hills Country Club in Birmingham especially for the U.S. Open.

The patio was taken apart after the tournament and the bricks were reassembled at drinking fountains and other spots around the course.

MUNICIPALITIES WITH downtowns also are going for the brick look in central business districts.

wants to project - a positive, homey kind of image," said Paul Sin-cock, assistant to the city manager in Plymouth. "The brick walkways add a sense of community pride."

The bricks installed around Kellogg Park in the early 1970s were financed by private donations, Sincock

Brick landscaping also projects a historical flavor, said Steven Walters, city manager in Northville, where Brickscape has done a number of projects including the area around the city's bandshell.

"Because they're more expensive, you try to get the flavor by doing accents, only the edge (of sidewalks) at certain points and crosswalks," Walters said.

Bricks get the nod over concrete

"TWO FACTORS we work on closely are building a base to handle what you want to handle . . . and total drainage.

'We pitch (slope) at two inches per 10 feet. By doing that, 90 percent (of water) will go over the top and the 10 percent that goes through the cracks will be handled by the slag," Soulliere said.

Bricks are more durable than concrete slabs because they're individually set and, therefore, can tolerate ground movements more, DiRado and Soulliere maintain. Bricks are more dense than concrete and already have been cured before they're set.

Bricks also will stand up to snow shoveling and salt, Diane DiRado Soulliere and DiRado each warrant their work for two years. Price may be a drawback for some people. WHILE IT'S difficult to generalize, brick landscaping, on average, will cost $7.50 per square foot, concrete $3.50, DiRado said. Soulliere estimated concrete work at $3 per square foot, brick at $6-9.

About a half dozen different styles of brick are available. Generally, the fancier the pattern, the more expensive the work. But the total cost of the job depends on such factors as difficulty of preparation, size of the job and type of brick selected.

"It could be less expensive to use a more expensive brick that doesn't need as much cutting," DiRado said. "Everyone has a different idea," he said. "I think more and more people know what they want. They kind of have an idea what they like and what they don't like."

Builders are starting to give traditional concrete or decks, Soul-

"It's an upgraded choice," he said. "They're still green and still scared, but they're doing it more.

"Rich people, of course, had it first," Soulliere said. "Now the middle class is seeing it. They're looking at the longevity of it. They say, T can get concrete for 1/4 the price, but it's going to crack. They look at the long-range investment now."

Both DiRado and Soulliere sell bricks retail and rent equipment to do-it-yourselfers.

Buyers seek quality

when he addressed the Bullers Association of Michigan recently.

"QVA is increasingly more important to home buyers. They will not settle for loss," Link said.

According to Link, the houses of the '9ts will be traditional or cona liberal use of brick, wood and stone. Moveable walls that will allow homeowners to create their own plutions for additional space will owners with generous amounts of storage space in answer to com-plaints about the lack of closets in

Link also sees "retreat areas" as popular, particularly in the master bedroom suite. The master suite will include walk-in closets and luxury amenities in the bathroom, including heated floors and his and hers vani-

Link's look to the future offers

· A stable level of housing starts with no major housing recession over the next several years.

• Mortgage rates currently at 10 percent will remain at 9%-10 percent through 1990.

• The biggest opportunity in the future will be in remodeling. Builders need to be diversified to take advantage of this market.

 The biggest challenge will be to provide affordable housing to as many as possible.

LINK ALSO predicted that the number of condominium communities will grow to meet the housing demand of the fastest-growing American demographic group: those over age 65. Low-maintenance convenience will be something that eve-

Plastic house debuts

(AP) - From the Jacuzzi bubbling in the bedroom to the boot dryer whirring in the mudroom, the 21st century dream house may be molded from high-performance plastics that are literally a snap to put together.

That was the message from GE Plastics executives, who unveiled their Living Environments Concept House at the division's headquarters.

Large and imposing, the light beige colonial bristled with gadgets and innovations - from plastic toilets with built-in exhaust fans to a cedar chest for sweater storage tucked between the bedroom floor-

Many of the innovations borrowed from other technologies, such as model power windows and a remote control unit that made operating the sophisticated lighting and entertainment systems as simple as pushing buttons on a dashboard.

General Electric officials said the engineering plastics used in the house have little in common with the stuff of toys or with the highly futuristic, space-age type of plastic housing that has been experimented with during the past 40 years.

They said not all of the innovations must wait until the 21st centu-

"From a style point of view I think that this is do-able," said Uwe Wascher, vice president for marketing. "It's an attractive style. I could see it overlooking the Atlantic in Newport, Rhode Island."

ABOUT ONE-THIRD of the showcase two-story house is plastic. The total cost is estimated at $10 million, but that includes research and model development.

The engineering plastics used typically have high melting points, create little smoke when they burn and have good sound-deadening proper-ties. But the home is so airtight it requires strong ventilating systems.

The 3,000-square-foot house has curved bay windows, generous decks and huge atrium windows in front and back. Its amenities include double showers that convert to steam rooms and movable walls that would allow a redesign of living space without raising a hammer.

HERE WAS a time when a slow boat to China, preferably a freighter, was the stuff of which dreams were made

There were no lectures on investing in futures or seminars on how to flirt, and, please God, no aerobics. "Relaxing," it was called.

Talk about temps perdu! Today's traveler, glued to the tube at home, wants to be entertained, educated, amused. and force-fed shrimp at all hours of the day and night.

"In my dad's time, the late 1940s and the '50s at the (Joan Anderson) Agency, the mode of travel for those with the time and the money was the ocean liner." recalls Pam Nikitas.

"They took the S.S. France or the first Queen Mary, and had a private driver with a Daimler meet them at the dock. Then they took a leisurely tour of the countries they wanted to see.

Southfield resident Nikitas 'grew up' in the travel business, and took over the Joan Anderson Travel Service when her father, George Nikitas, retired. "The children and grandchildren of those leisurely travelers are our clients today. They can afford the best accommodations, but times

In the course of their 39-year marriage, Lois Kozlow and husband, artist Richard Kozlow, have lived in many and diverse lands. While Richard painted, Lois ran the house, coped with local customs and raised their four daughters.

IN 1981, LOIS decided to share her experience and knowledge, and the first LARK (Lois and Richard Kozlow) tour, No Mexico, was offered. Since then, she has offered 15 major trips: in addition to Mexico, destinations have included Morocco, England, France and Italy. In 1990, a trip to Turkey will be added to the roster

This year, for the first time, LARK offered a one-day tour to Columbia, Ind., where leading United States architects have been commissioned to design public buildings. Renowned architectural photographer Balthazar Korab led the tour, and local docents provided additional information. "It was a great success," said Kozlow. "I plan on more short trips in the future."

"My tours are designed to fulfill everybody's fantasy of what a trip should be," said Kozlow, who manages to be intense and bouyant at the same time. "They are a complete experience. Imagine waking up in a luxury hotel in Marrakech at 4:30 in the morning, getting into a Land Rover, and driving into the desert to watch the sun rise over a sand dune! It's an experience like no other, one that you will never forget. That's what my tours are about the luxury of being able to live and experience a dream, a fantasy, an adventure. Everything is taken care of. there's nothing to do but enjoy."

Kozlow won't take clients to a country that she doesn't know really well. She and Richard are going to Turkey this fall to prepare for the 1990 tour. "I want to know exactly what I'm going to offer my people. I plan every detail, right down to every item on the menus. There are no surprises on my tours: I'm a real challenge to the local guides they knock themselves out for KOZLOW LIMITS THE number of tour participants to 24. "I can't watch out for everybody individually if there are any more.

"People hate sleeping in a different bed every night, so I try to stay in one place as long as feasible, and take side trips by bus. It's not the bus that everybody dreads - it's like a

MUSIC BOXES: updated look

By C. L. Rugenstein staff writer

USIC BOXES, old or new, make a luxurious gift of music for a special someone, and the San Francisco Music Box at Twelve Oaks Mall in Novi is one of the places in the area that has some great new ones.

The biggest and best may well he the 144-note, cylinder music box by the Reuge company of Switzerland.

Of rosewood inlaid with tulipwood and brass, the box is about 24-inches long and 12 inches deep. The brass cylinder has a repertoire of four songs, including Tchaikovsky's "Waltz of the Flowers." Mozart's "Turkish Beethoven's rale" and Chopin's "Polonaise."

The workmanship and deep, rich tone of the box are worthy of its $4,500 price tag.

SOME OF THE most charming of the music boxes are the bird cages, also by Reuge, in three different sizes.

Two birds, one red and one the birds. All the birds' beaks blue, sing. Not like a music box, but like real birds. A card that comes with the bird cages said the songs are actual bird calls, though it doesn't specify which

"Reeds and bellows make the bird calls,"said Linda Jones. manager of the shop, "and an old couple in Switzerland still hand-feather the birds.

The largest cage, about 14 inches high and six inches in diameter can be had for $2,500. Prices for the smaller ones are $950 and $475.

LUXE Fur plus fabric

PORTSWEAR — casual yet elegant is a style known worldwide as The American Look since it was introduced by designer Claire McCardell in Half a century later, fur is showing up this

It's sportswear unlike any other, combining favorite fabrics with luxurious furs. Very weekend, a leather hip-length jacket (left) collared and shawled in a natural brown color mix of finn raccoon by J. Percy for Marvin Richards Ltd. Very urbane, a mid-calf length cashmere coat (center) with a wide sable tuxedo front and sable lining by Yves Saint Laurent Fourrures for G. Michael Hennessy Inc. Very upscale, a reversible brown sheared beaver and pale yellow tweed clutch-coat with matching tweed pants by Geoffrey Beene for Goldin-Feldman.

Everyone's favorite duffle coat - complete with hood and toggle closures - is styled this season in a sage green sheared beaver (left) by classic deigner Calvin Klein for Alixandre Furs. And far from its polar origins, by designer Isaac Mizrahi for Revillon: a hooded, drawstring-waist parka in silk satin with a button-out Demi-Buff mink lining and sable trimming on the hood and cuffs.

season in traditional sportswear styles and an uncommon range of colors, as both American and European designers continue to encourage our love affair with luxe sport.

Once the property of Arctic-dwellers only, the hooded parka and slightly fuller drawstring anorak are favorite fur styles everywhere for winter 1989. Designer Isaac Mizrahi fashions his anorak in silk-satin, then lines it in mink and adds sable to trim the hood and cuffs. Other designers prefer the longerlength duffle coat in furs like sheared beaver with leather toggles, in colors like sage green, peach or wild mink.

Sure to be seen not only back at the ranch but also on city streets, shearling coats and jackets are this year's fashion classic. Worn leather side out, shearlings are comforable fashion for those on the go. Designer choice: shearlings in bright blues and purples, in darker greens, and gold tones. Choose one that suits your lifestyle: a shaped waist-length violet shearling jacket to wear in place of a conventional jacket or sweater; a longer, full parka-style to wear over all your sportswear.

Another designer choice: mixed media fur plus fabric - adds up to luxury sportswear. The combination of cashmere, tweed or leather with a lining of sable, sheared beaver or kolinsky can be elegant alternatives for working women Monday-Friday, or casually styled for fashionable wear on the weekend.

"It's designer sportswear for today's furwearing consumer," comments Sandy Blye, executive vice president of the American Fur Industry. "The look is individual and more relaxed, yet decidedly luxe."

Playing with a mix of charcoal grey, black-and-white stripes in sheared mink. designer Geoffrey Beene for Goldin-Feldman shapes his fur hacking jacket (left) with both color and pattern. And, from Perry Ellis by Marc Jacobs for Birger Christensen, a traditional Wild West red-and-black buffalo plaid zipfront coat patterned in sheared nutria. Worn with it: a ranch mink headband from Lenore Marshall Inc.

> Ed Jonna, Merchant of Vino

be a successful wine merchant if you weren't didactic, but it isn't likely. Certainly, the voluble Merchant of Vino, Ed Jonna, and the silver-tongued Tim McCarthy, of the Eastern Market's Cost Plus Wine Shoppe, are adept at giving the impression that you are doing them a favor by asking questions about wine.

7 OU PROBABLY could

By Joan Boram

special writer

Both Jonna and McCarthy see themselves as primarily educators. "I'm here to answer questions," said McCarthy in his genial brogue. "I love to talk about wine - I'll talk all day, if a customer is interested."

And Jonna admits he would rather preside over a wine tasting than deal with a "money-is-no-object" wine customer

"It's just more rewarding to see people discover the pleasures of fine wine. My wife (Juliette, of Juliette's Cusine) and I offer wine-and-food tastings for private parties. After the hostess selects the foods for the seven-course dinner, I select the appropriate wines. At the tasting, we compare champagnes of the world, several red and white wines, and dessert wines. By the end of the party, guests have tasted 24 wines and know their background and characteristics. They are in the top two percent in the United States as far as wine knowledge is concerned, and they're eager to know more."

"THERE ARE VERY few gifts that will enhance everyday living for a longer period of time than a wine tasting given by an expert who shares not only knowledge, but enthusiasm."

"Wine is a time machine." he continues. "Nothing else can take you back 40 or 50 years like a fine aged wine can. Try eating a piece of fish that's been in the freezer for half a century! Wine is a living thing: it accents life."

Both men agree that a fine palate is made, not born. The problem seems to be that, whereas people who don't know much about art know what they like, they are reluctant to have an opinion about wine. Seeing is more democratic than tasting.

'Go to a shop - Cost Plus, Merchant of Vino, Cloverleaf, Gibbs, Battel's - where they have qualified people who have tasted the wines they stock," said McCarthy. "A reputable shop will only buy good vintages, so you can hardly go wrong. The secret is to ask questions."

MCCARTHY'S ADVICE makes sense when you consider that, typically, Cost Plus carries some 2,000 different wines at any given time. So don't be shy, speak up. Pick a quiet time, probably not a Saturday afternoon, and allow yourself to become educated in one of life's pleasures.

All right, so you're educated. You're educated to the stage where your palate is ahead of your pocketbook. You've begun to snub old friends who still drink wine coolers. Now what do you do?

The first thing you do is develop patience. Buy a few cases of reasonably priced wine every year, put them in the celler, or a cool closet, and foret about them for a few years. Voila! In a few years that $8 bottle of Cotes de Rhone is a $40 bottle of wine - assuming you can find it at any price!

"I recommend a five-year rotation for wines," said McCarthy. "All red wines are drunk too young in this country. The only way is to allow them to mature gracefully in a cellar. The ideal temperature is 60 degrees-65 degrees, which allows the wines to mature gradually. If it's too cold, the wine will stay as it is. Wine matures from the outside in - the bigger the bottle, the longer it takes to mature.

Just remember, we're not talking mutual funds here. The idea is not to sell them in five years and get rich, but to drink them in five years and feel rich. What McCarthy calls pricequality ratio. "The investment is in the pleasure of drinking fine wines."

TO DEMONSTRATE THE virtue of patience, McCarthy tells of two bottles of Spanish wine, vintage 1964 and 1974, that he picked up in a closeout bin in Chicago for $1.99 each, put in the basement and completely forgot about for 10 years. "They were fantastic. I don't often rave about wines, but they had matured into $40 wines."

Jonna feels so strongly about allowing wine to mature that he won't even let you buy a $125 bottle of 1986 Chateau Mouton Rothschild unless you promise not to drink it before

If you want to pamper someone special, like yourself, ioin the Merchant's Wine of the Month Club. There are two categories: The Enthusiast and The Advocate, and membership can be for six months or one year. A bottle of wine selected by Jonna and his "Board of Selectors" is delivered to the door every month, and members receive the club's monthly newsletter.

"Notes" describes the month's selection, and also explores issues in the world of wine appreciation — articles ranging from how to build a wine cellar to planning a trip to the wine country.

(If you're looking for a fine gift for a wine aficionado, the Birmingham Book Store has two elegant volumes any winelover would cherish: "The Sotheby World Wine Encyclopedia," by Tom Stevenson, $40 and Hugh Johnson's "World Atlas of Wine," $45.)

THE NUMBER OF really good wine stores in the area is a tribute to the taste and sophistication of the citizens of Greater Detroit. "Very few cities in the United States have the number of fine food and wine stores that the Detroit area has," said Jonna. "Wine makers all over the world recognize this, and they bring their wines here to sell.

McCarthy concurs. "I don't have to go to France. Everything worth buying comes to Detroit."

McCarthy and Jonna differ over whether 1989 is likely to be a good year or not. McCarthy doubts it: "They had our summer of 1988 extremely hot and dry. The grapes had to be harvested three weeks early. A good wine requires a balance between fruit acid and tannic acid. Extreme heat cooks the grapes, making such a balance unlikely."

Jonna agrees with the predictions that 1989 will be a good year, but, "You'd better check with your acturalist before buying any. It'll be five years before it gets here, and another 10 or 15 years before it will be drinkable."

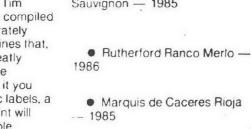

Tim McCarthy

How to start wine cellar

O HELP you get your cellar started, Tim McCarthy has compiled a list of moderately priced ($8-$15) red wines that, properly stored, will greatly enhance 1995. They are generally available, but it you can't find these specific labels, a knowledgeable merchant will help you find comparable

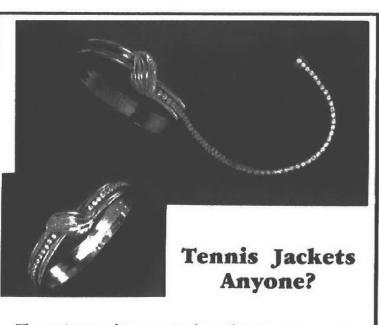

- Cotes du Rhone 1985
- Wyndham Estate Cabernet Sauvignon — 1986
- Franciscan Oakville Estate Cåbernet Sauvignon - 1986
- Barbi Rosso di Montalcino

- The Cutter Cellar Cabernet Sauvignon — 1985
- Torres Coronas 1985
- Montagne St. Emillion: Chateau la Fleur Grandes Landes - 1986 (Note by
