Canton supervisor questions FAA letter on Mettetal Airport

staff writer

More questions about the Federal Aviation Administration and expansion at Mettetal Airport are being raised.

A letter from an FAA official to U.S. Rep. William Ford, D-Taylor, said the runway at the Canton Airport could be extended 400 feet to the

"If the length is sufficient, why do they need another 400 feet?" Canton Supervisor Tom Yack asked in response

'And why do FAA, state and Plymouth officials continue to insist there are no expansion plans when Mr. (Edward) Phillips' letter, along with any number of documents uncovered by the Plymouth Concerned Citizens, clearly suggest that expansion is being considered?

Yack and the concerned citizens oppose efforts backed by the majority of Plymouth city commissioners and Plymouth Township trustees to seek federal and state money to buy the Canton airport. Canton trustees last year voted against undertaking such an effort.

YACK'S COMMENTS came nearly a week after Ann Arbor city councilman Kurt Zimmer warned Plymouth residents that once the FAA gets involved with Mettetal, it will push for expansion and not respect the wishes of local government officials

'If the length is sufficient, why do they need another 400 feet? And why do FAA, state and Plymouth officials continue to insist there are no expansion plans when Mr. (Edward) , Phillips' letter, along with any number of documents uncovered by the Plymouth Concerned Citizens, clearly suggest that expansion is being considered?'

'They (the FAA) do give you some autonomy." said Zimmer, who also sits on an airport advisory committee that oversees operations of Ann Arbor's airport.

They let you cut the grass, pay for any lawsuits, and for any deficits the airport runs.

'One of the reasons I personally voted against public ownership is all of the unknowns in one's relationship with the FAA," Yack said.

The documents I've seen and the statements

I've heard and the information from the councilman from Ann Arbor would lead me to believe my position is a justified position.

BUT PHILLIPS, FAA Great Lakes region administrator, also wrote that the FAA - along with the state and Plymouth and Plymouth Township - "do not have any intent to demolish the buildings located south of the runway."

That statement could suggest that the FAA is not seeking major expansion.

The FAA is seeking an aviation easement over the property containing the buildings "to protect the aerial rights above the buildings from future construction of taller buildings, towers or antennas that could adversely impact safe operations,'

SOME DOCUMENTATION collected by Plymouth Concerned Citizens suggests the FAA would favor runway expansion past an additional 400 feet, Yack said.

"The FAA I believe goes about pursuing their goals and objectives irrespective of local considerations," Yack said.

"If they have a goal of expanding the airport I think they will work to achieve it. And the first step in expansion is public ownership.

'Can I believe them? No I can't.' Peter Serini, FAA manager of the Detroit Airports District Office, said last week that the present runway length at Mettetal "is what they would continue to have after public ownership.'

School improvement 'not a choice'

By M.B. Dillon staff writer

Unlike many school improvement plans that have come and gone over the years, those prompted by a new state law called Public Act 25 won't end up in a circular file, say school

Public Act 25 is a massive school improvement plan recently passed by the state Legislature. It addresses building goals, core curriculum, student achievement, student retention, accreditation status and measurements of parental involvement.

While there may have been trends, fads and ideas advanced over the years in education, the difference here is that the initiatives school districts will be undertaking under Public Act 25 will be significant and lasting, because this is legislation," said Lynne Estell, spokeswoman for the state Board of Educa-

This is state law School districts will be participating in the various aspects of the law, or they stand to lose a small portion of their state funding.

Annual reports available to the community "will let taxpayers and parents in general know how the school is progressing," Estell said.

"The school improvement component, where a team in each school building looks at problems in the school and strives to correct those problems; accreditation - all these things are very solid ways of improving our schools. They're handson activities instead of just theory."

Michael Homes, Plymouth-Canton assistant superintendent for instruction, said students, teachers and parents will see evidence of Public Act 25-initiated school improvement this fall But, he adds, improvement plans have been in place in the district since the mid-1980's Parents have been informed of them at coffees, open houses, orientations, and other school activities 'Getting better is not a choice,' said Homes. "We have to get better." The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education also has taken steps related to Public Act 25, particularly in the areas of core curriculum and

According to a resolution the board passed last month

• Students must have healthy self-esteem.

• The district expects all students to be able to function at all cognitive and social levels • Students must be self-directed as learners

· Students must develop a concern for others

George Belvitch, principal at Is-Elementary, acknowledges that Public Act 25 will mean plenty of paperwork But, he says, it's good

I think it's great It includes everybody in the development of plans.

It involves parents and makes schools very accountable for what they're doing. It creates a lot of staff involvement and lends a lot of professionalism to the school.

'When you're all done, you have a very detailed and organized piece of work you can share with anyone that says. 'Here's what we're trying to Students will benefit - all of them," added Belvitch. "Initially, people think of a school improvement plan as painting the building and making it look nice. But this particular thing means addressing instruction and the curriculum, how to improve teaching and learning, and what that means in the end for student achievement money for DARE this time around, but that's not the main thing, said DARE Officer Leonard Schemanske of the Canton Township police.

Plymouth fire Chief Al Matthews takes his turn at flipping pancakes along with Canton Township Supervisor Tom Yack (in background) at the pancake breakfast in downtown Plymouth to benefit the DARE program in Plymouth Canton Schools.

The important thing is the community involvement, Schemanske, who with Officer Jamie Senkbil of the Plymouth Township police heads the Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program in Plymouth and Canton

The Community Flip for DARE from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday drew people to the Community Federal Credit Union parking lot off Harvey in downtown Plymouth, for the second straight year

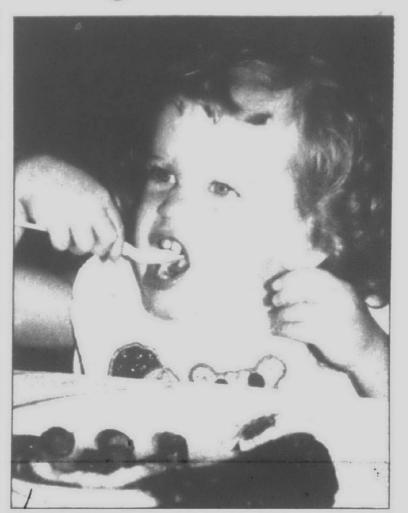

"I think we served 2,000 people Schemanske said.

He stressed that money raised by the pancake breakfast - the contributions are still coming in - is not used to pay the salaries of DARE officers. Rather, it is used to pay for Tshirts, rulers, bumper stickers and other things given out to kids who get instruction in the program.

The DARE program, which started in the Plymouth-Canton public schools in September 1990, seeks to head off future drug and alcohol abuse by instructing fifth and sixth graders in dealing with stress without using drugs and alcohol.

Schemanske said that this school year, "We're picking up three additional private schools

Commissioners support task force on race relations

By Wayne Peal staff writer

Area Wayne County commissioners said they support a county task force on race relations, but they'd like more information on task force goals

'This could be something that's very effective if the task force is given the right charge," said Kay Beard D-Inkster, who also represents Westland and Garden City.

"If it's defensive, if it's more geared toward public relations, I don't know how effective it would Beard said. 'But we all know problems exist and the task force could at least point out what could

"It's something (race relations) that gets in the way of every issue, Maurice Breen, R-Plymouth Township said. "It's time to get things out on the table and discuss them.

But Bryan Amann, D-Wayne, said he was uncertain whether the task force would prove effective.

"Certainly, there's a lot of polarization between the city and suburbs, not just on racial issues, but on a wide variety of issues," Amann said. "My fear is that this will turn into nothing but a photo opportunity.

COMMISSIONERS are being asked to appoint a district representative to the task force. But they say there's been little discussion, outside Blackwell's initial announcement.

Michigan law and custom put up many barriers to adoption, a state Senate committee learned last week.

Black social workers don't want white couples to adopt black kids. Health insurers don't want to cover adopted kids for a year. And counselors tell women with "problem pregnancies" about abortion and birth but not about adoption, the Senate Family Law Committee was told

"There are more unadopted children than the general public thinks," said Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville.

Chairman Jack Welborn, R-Kalamazoo, said the panel would write legislation as it goes along. Goals: "to reduce the barriers to and costs of adoption, reduce the bureaucracy and focus on special needs kids" — referring to handicapped and black youngsters.

WHATEVER THE panel reports is likely to get support from both Republicans and Democrats, pro-life and pro-choice forces. Adoption is turning out to be a popular issue.

Karen Krupanski of Rochester, representing the Michigan State Medical Society, endorsed three House-passed bills requiring health insurers to give adopted children the same coverage as birth children. Some insurers require the adoptee to be in the home a year before coverage starts.

'There are more unadopted children than the general public thinks.'

— Sen. R. Robert Geake, R-Northville

"It will be considered at the same time as other adoption bills," said Welborn. His committee has the bills, sponsored by Rep. Maxine Berman, D-Southfield.

"Women (with problem pregnancies) are not told about adoption — just childbearing or abortion," Krupanski added.

That brought agreement from Ed Rivet, lobbyist for Michigan Right to Life, the anti-abortion group. "Women in crisis are convinced only abortion or birth are their options," Rivet

WELBORN, QUESTIONING a Macomb County foster mother, concluded that black social workers in Wayne County resist letting white couples adopt black children.

"I've had 37 (foster) children," answered Dorothy Tallman of Armada.
"I'm OK to foster. I'm not OK to adopt."

Her testimony called social workers "totalitarian" and "usurpers of authority" who are "so biased as to not listen to the desires of the children themselves."

dren themselves."

Linda Gabriel of Rochester, representing Families for Children, urged Welborn's panel not to wait for a full study of adoption but to move promptly on Berman's health insurance bills. "The problem has already been identified, and legislation to correct this situation has been pending for the past 2½ years. We need you to take immediate action."

Adopted children must go to a doctor who accepts Medicaid patients. "(Other) doctors don't want them. The (Medicaid) paper work costs them more than the Medicaid reimbursement," she said.

"It sends a message to the adoptive child — an awful message: 'You're not as good as other children,' "Gabriel said.

NORA EDGAR, a home health care nurse from Flint, proudly help up the handicapped baby boy she and her husband adopted three weeks ago.

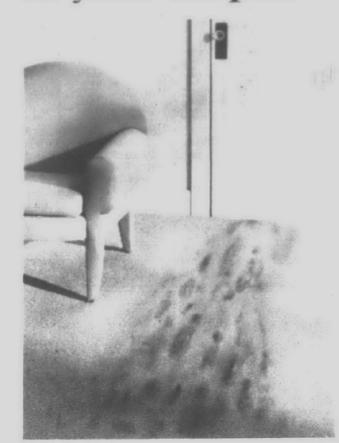

"He's from Ohio. It took five months (to complete the adoption). With the roadblocks, we waited three years in Michigan," Edgar

"Are you saying Ohio has a better system?" asked Geake.

"Maybe it's just the (social) worker," Edgar replied. "We got the brush-off from workers here."

Sen. Debbie Stabenow, D-Lansing, noted Ohio still subsidizes adoptions, but Michigan has cut back aid for "special needs" adoptions.

Choice honors

Magazine readers list area sites as best

From the best pizza to the best toy store, western Wayne County home to a slew of winners of 1991 Family Choice awards, published by All Kids Considered, a family magazine serving southeastern Michigan.

The magazine, with a circulation of 80,000 and claiming a readership of 200,000, polled readers last year on the best places for dining out, shopping and entertainment.

We're a magazine specifically for parents. Our readers know best. They're the experts," said Alexis Bourkoulas, public relations director for the Southfield based magazine.

Response to the first ever such survey, published in the June 1991 issue, was overwhelming, according to Bourkoulas. Some 2,271 readers re-

The top two vote getters in each category will receive certificates and letters of congratulations, Bourkoulas said.

For the many major chains recognized, corporate offices and select franchises will receive commendations. Kudos to independent people and places include Ruth Olson, best photographer, Julie Austin, best local children's entertainer, and Mt. Holly, best downhill skiing.

'What makes this award so special to me is that unlike all the others I have received from professional photographers associations, this one was chosen by the people," said Olson, who presides over a single studio in Westland. Olson has provided several different cover prints for the magazine and has received acclaim from other associations. She currently holds the title of wedding photographer of the year for Michi-

Support for sobriety check lanes has increased, according to a University of Michigan survey.

Roughly 75 percent of those responding to a recent U-M survey considered random driver stops acceptable as a method of reducing drunken driving incidents.

"Alcohol-impaired drivers have left their mark on Michigan communities and most residents believe that the burden of reparation should be carried by the offenders, rather than all drivers," said survey author Frederick Streff, research scientist at the U-M Transportation Research

Edison customers let off steam

By Wayne Peel staff writer

Area Detroit Edison customers said Wednesday they were sick and tired of being left in the dark by the stility giant.

Though still seething over the long ower outage that followed a heavy July 7 storm, customers said power outages were the norm, not the exeption. They also blasted Edison for what they called its slow, often haughty response to their concerns.
"This isn't an attitude of customer service, it's one of customer surliness," said Fred Shadko, who has recorded more than 60 outages over the past five years at his Livonia

Roughly 200 people attended the Michigan Public Service Commission hearing at Livonia City Hall, some coming from as far as Clarkston and Ann Arbor.

Most of the 40 people who voiced complaints came from Farmngton Hills, Redford and Livonia.

A series of hearings were held throughout the state last week to help determine whether Edison and Consumers Power were properly maintaining and servicing power

Farmington Hills Mayor Aldo Vagnozzi, responding to the "deep frustration" of city residents, proposed a number of changes.

Utilities should have clear priorities for restoring service, Vagnozzi said, placing hospitals and nursing homes near the top of the list. Edison should also develop a better system of handling customer complaints, he said, as well as provide notification of when power will be restored.

Redford clerk Marilyn Heldenbrand blamed inadequate maintenance for the power problems in her community, saying Edison should immediately begin replacing old, frayed wires.

"EVEN BEFORE the storm people reported frayed wires, but they weren't replaced," Heldenbrand

"You can't reach Edison unless it's 2 a.m. on the third day of an outage," she said.

Farmington Nursing Home staff members said they feared for patients' safety after the home lost power for three days.

"I have to tell you I felt guilty about going home, when I had air conditioning and refrigeration," said nursing home worker Cherylann Johnson of Livonia.

"They don't discriminate," said Richard Latham of Livoina. "I live across the street from (Wayne County Executive) Ed McNamara and he lost his power three hours before I lost mine.

Bedro, however, said she's taking no health precautions.

"I was planning to have children, but that's definitely out," she said. PCB's have been linked to cancer, though Edison official said they've yet to see convincing evidence PCB's are a cancer causing agent.

"It hasn't been proven, but it hasn't been disproven," Dobkin said. But someone should have met with her to discuss the situation. We still plan on conducting that meeting."

Downed power lines were linked to several deaths in wake of the

No Edison representatives spoke during the three hour public hearing. Afterward, officials acknowledged the company image took a beating.

"WE'D LIKE to think we are competent but we obviously have to prove it to these customers," said Oakalnd County division manager Maurice Vermeulen.

It was charges of Edison insensitivity that might have stung most.

"As for being insensitive, I just don't believe that's fair," Vermeulen said. "We had people handling 150 complaints a day. We instruct everyone to the courteous but it's hard not to occasionally lose your cool when you're in a situation like that."

Polls and wires over 10 years old are annually examined and replaced if necessary, he said.

Over 1 million Michigan residents lost power as a result of the July 7 storm, public service commissioners said. But while the storm prompted last week's hearings, commission chairman Steven Fetter said comty's day-to-day operations, too. Both Detroit Edison and Consumer's Power cutback maintenance five years ago due to financial troubles, Fetter said. The committee's goal, he added, is to find out what's being done now, whether maintenance and response times are ade-quate, home construction and maintenance contribute to outages.

Fetter said he was sympathetic to residents. He was without power at his Okemos home for three days in the wake of the July 7 storm.

But whether the commission has any authority to order changes is open to question.

Using segments of a 1909 state law, Fetter and his fellow commissioners believe they do. but Fetter acknowledged the law appeared "broad based".

"We're doing something that's never been done before," he said.

At the very least, the committee will issue a report on Aug. 30. Utilities will they be allowed to file responses before a Sept. 24 public hearing in Lansing. A final public service commission report is due in late October of early November.

Written comments are still being accepted on the performance of Detroit Edison and Consumers Power. Comments can be sent to Michigan Public Service Commission, executive secretary, P.O. Box 30221, 6545 Mercantile Way, Lansing, Mich. 48909. com-ments should be addressed to Case U-9916.

Engler recall hits halfway mark

The recall of Gov. John Engler: Fact or fiction?

Fact, say people like Dorothy Ha-bicht, a single mother of two. Sunday she held open house at her home in Wayne so some people could sign the recall Engler petitions . . . and oth-ers could get informal schooling on the proper way to circulate petiso names won't later be invali-

"We had 30 to 50 people," said Habicht, who attends Wayne Community College. "We'll get a lot more as this thing catches on."

The recall is fiction. At least from the point of view of Judy D. Riedlinger, who lives in Bloomfield Township and with her husband owns a small business in Novi.

"I haven't seen any sign of a recall whatsoever," said Riedlinger, who is also GOP chairman of the 18th Congressional District that includes much of Oakland County. "I haven't seen proof of any recall."

LAST WEEK organizers of the recall released figures showing they had garnered 351,166 signatures, more than half the 641,141 needed to put recall of Gov. Engler on a statewide ballot.

Besides surpassing the magical half-way point, that figure reflects an emotional benchmark, according to Robert Alexander, a former Oakland County resident who now works in the Michigan Department of So-cial Services and coordinates the recall Engler drive.

"We're gaining momentum ... we're going to make it," said Alexander, a 1964 graduate of Berkley High School. "We're going to get more than enough signatures to force a re-

No Michigan governor has ever been recalled. Until recently, many believed such a recall was impossi ble, mainly because of the large scale organization and effort required to get that many signatures.

Meanwhile, the state GOP isn't worried, according to Richard M. Czuba, director of research and com-their business as if the recall didn't exist, said Czuba. "Recent polls show Gov. Engler's approval rating up by 11 percent (with 49 percent of those responding approving of Engler's performance and 46 disapproving).

"More and more people are starting to realize that Gov. Engler is doing the right thing," said Czuba.

BUT PEOPLE like Vic Taylor of Livonia and Mary Johnston of Farmington Hills disagree.

Taylor, a Army retiree, said he is committed to the recall because the budget cuts attributed to Engler fall most heavily on the poor. "Because of those cuts, people who are de-pendent on general assistance are forced to chose between food and

Donald Broersma, a recall coordinator from Ypsilanti, said many affluent and middle class reside feel the same way. "We were at the Ann Arbor Art Fair over the weekend. They were lined up six deep to sign our petitions . . . and these were not poor people."

Drains Run Slow?

Slow drains, or periodic clogs, are SIGNALS that a thick layer of GOOK is choking your pipes.

Grease, hair, and other waste stick to your pipes, with every use. This gook deposits along the entire length of the pipe. It chokes your pipes gradually, as it gets thicker and thicker.

Ordinary drain products run here. --Conventional drain openers can't fix slow drains. They react chemically on the surface of the gook. To be effective, they must remain in contact with the waste. Even a small tunnel in the gook lets them flow out to the sewer, leaving the gook behind.

In the past, the only way to remove this build-up was to rooter your pipes. An expensive, temporary measure.

clean out your pipes... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean. Its totally unique formula clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. That is what allows it to liquefy even years of build-up. Plumb Clean will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, we stand behind Plumb Clean with a money-back guarantee! Saves Money. A 1 lb. container of Plumb Clean holds up to 41 drain treatments. Even if drain openers could fix slow drains, it would take over 10 quart bottles to get the same number of treatments. Plumb Clean costs about 35¢ per treatment. We don't know of anything that cleans drains for less.

Safe Too. Conventional drain openers are dangerous chemicals, They can injure eyes on contact. They can release deadly vapors, in some situations. Some may damage your fixtures. Plumb Clean will not burn skin, or eyes. It will not release harmful fumes. When used as directed, it is 100% safe for people, and of course, all plumbing.

So, if your drains are giving you a SIGNAL, act now. Get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean today! Available at:

Taking a stand

Woman fights to keep Custer name on field

By Jeff Counts staff writer

A Canton woman is involved in Custer's Last Stand 115 years after George Armstrong Custer, a Monroe, Mich., native, lead his band of 260 cavalry troops into the fatal battle at Little Big Horn in Montana

Janet Guttersohn, 37, who is Custer's great-greatgreat niece, has become dedicated to preserving the memory of her ancestor since the death of her father, Col. George A. Custer III, earlier this year.

And that memory is in danger. Congress is looking to change the name of the battlefield at Little Big Horn from the Custer Battlefield National Monument to Little Bighorn Battlefield National Monument.

HR 848 passed the-U.S. House of Representatives June 24. The bill, which would rename the battlefield and erect a monument to Indians who died there, is before a Senate subcommittee. A hearing was held July 25.

Indians favor the new name, claiming that it would be a fairer tribute to the native Americans who fought

Guttersohn said she's tired of the revisionist history being done on Custer in both the monument controversy and in the recent television movie, "Son of the Morning Star."

"I'm angry. They made him look like an idiot. They stretched the truth and made him look egotistical and obnoxious," said Guttersohn while brushing back her long blonde hair similar to that of her ancestor.

SHE SAID one of the biggest inaccuracies was the depiction of an Indian woman pounding a stake in Custer's ear so he could hear in his next life. "There were two bullets in his head and his clothing was gone. Apart from that the body wasn't touched, she said. "They asked Sitting Bull the next year why he wasn't scalped and he said it was because Custer was a

But while the quest to keep Custer's reputation unsoiled has been a serious concern of Guttersohn and her family, some of the fallout of growing up with the Custer name is humorous.

"My father was bald and when we would move to another army base he'd always get the jokes about the Indians getting a hold of his scalp," she said.

"And then there was my brother, his name is George Armstrong Custer IV. When he was younger, he had a rock band. The other members wanted to name it Custer's Last Stand. He didn't go for it," she said. But while there were some fun and games to being a Custer, things got serious earlier this year with the death of her father and the move to rename the monument in Montana.

Her father was opposed to the renaming, but when he died "that kind of fell on us," she said referring to herself and her two brothers and two sisters.

"We've got more active," she said.

The Custer family quest to stop the name change isn't based on racism, she said, adding that her father raised the family not to be biased against native Americans

"Our idea is to have a separate monument to the Indians who died there," she said. "We want to see their side of the story told, too."

She said the recent movie about Custer depicted the Sioux and Cheyenne Indians as peaceful.

"Some were and others weren't," she said. "The soldiers were butchered and mutilated." She also objects to the characterization of Custer as some sort of crazed killer. "People forget he was just doing the job the government gave him," she said. "He's become a scapegoat for racial problems," she

Since becoming more active in preserving the Custer memory, she and her husband, Rick, 34, learned that he also had an ancestor who died in the battle. It was James Farrand, an Army private from Missouri. She is a descendant of Nevin Custer, George's younger brother, who wasn't at the battle because of an illness

"They were there doing their job and now we're picking on Custer, not the government. We're taking away their honor, if we change the monument's name," she said, and added: "Anyway, we're all native Americans, now.

Mettetal FAA plans cloud airport issue

HE DOG DAYS of summer are upon us. And as the temperature rises, the Mettetal Airport issue has been warm-

In the latest in the continuing Mettetal saga, three members of an Ann Arbor airport advisory board came to town last week. Before a meeting convened by Plymouth Concerned Citizens, they told horror stories of how the Federal Aviation Administration keeps pushing to expand their

The FAA's desire to expand airports is a main issue in Plymouth. Airport opponents here maintain the FAA will come in and take over, while airport backers say that isn't so.

While we've come down on the side of keeping the airport around, after that meeting last week, we have to wonder. The three Ann Arborites one of them a city councilman - said dealing with the FAA can be like your "worst nightmare" come true.

TO WRITE off his comments, to suggest the Ann Arbor councilman was insincere, would be closed minded. We're wondering if the FAA can be trusted to follow local wishes. The man from Ann Arbor — and two of his committee members - said they can't.

Anyone with half an open mind had to come away from the meeting wondering if maintaining the airport - even when there's much to say for maintaining it - is really worth it.

And FAA assertions to the contrary, frankly, weren't too reassuring.

Many people had to leave that meeting wondering if continued backing of the save the airport effort is best for residents. And we're wondering too. .

Recycling

Township sets fine example

ECYCLING makes sense, both environmentally and economically. If you don't believe us, just ask James Anulewicz, director of public services in Plymouth Township. Nearly a year after it began, the township's mandatory recycling program is saving money.

According to a recycling study Anulewicz prepared for the township board of trustees, the quarterly cost for trash hauling per house was $10 to $12. This year, with 31 percent of the township's garbage being recycled or composted, that quarterly cost is at about $9.50.

ANULEWICZ ESTIMATES 95 to 97 percent of residents are complying with the program, started in September 1990

ALONG WITH Dearborn and Southfield, Plymouth Township was one of the first communities in Michigan to start a mandatory curbside recycling program.

It's time now for the city of Plymouth to jump in. There has been enough information and testing done in other communities. The time is right for the city to follow suit.

Progress is being made. More still needs to be done to create markets for recyclable materials and reduce excessive product packaging.

Plymouth Township and a few other communities throughout the region and state have taken an important first step to save our soil and help reduce air and water pollutants.

Thomas: Do the right thing of talk, nationally and locally, among politicians and NAACP chapters, about meeting in Washington. Thomas to take Thurgood Marshall's seat on the court. Much doubt already has been cast on the candidate because of his very conservative nature and whether he is a quota appointment.

"I'm concerned," said Robert L. Willis who is associated with the South Oakland County Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "I worry about his views on abortion and affirmative action."

Willis added that he opposed "stacking the court" with liberals or conservatives.

Given that Bush will not appoint a liberal like former Michigan Supreme Court Justice Dennis Archer to the court, it's important to step back and take an intelligent look at Thomas.

MORE AND more opinions written by Thomas are unearthed daily: He was against busing to accomplish desegration; he let expire without recourse 13,000 complaints of age discrimination while head of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission; he has publicly praised Louis

But, Willis said, "the jury is still out on Thomas.

Disagreement with his decisions is not a good enough reason to keep him off the Court. Disagreeing is a fundamental right in this country.

A thorough grilling by the Senate should be encouraged to insure that any potential problems are uncovered and weighed. Beyond that, there isn't much more to be done.

THE NAACP was unsure of Thomas and de-

HERE'S BEEN an extraordinary amount layed endorsing or denouncing him. That was expected to change Wednesday night at a board

> Their care in making an endorsement was admirable, except on one front: Some members were concerned that if they fought and defeated Thomas, Bush would nominate someone worse and the NAACP wouldn't be able to mount another successful challenge.

That's bad reasoning. If the NAACP believes Thomas is not worthy of becoming a Supreme Court justice, then it should fight the nomination on its merits. That's better than justifying inactivity because of what might, or might not, hap-

And there's really no accurate, certain way of knowing whether Thomas is a quota appointment. Bush said he was going after the best candidate and came up with Thomas. Others say the anti-affirmative action president is contradicting his own beliefs and making a quota appoint-

Speculation is worthless; so-called expert analysis is tiresome and rarely correct. Unless Bush himself cares to step forward and reveal why he chose Thomas, no one will know.

So let's look at the positive side. Inheriting Thurgood Marshall's legacy as a champion of civil rights is a weighty gift. Other Supreme Court nominees, once seated on the Court, have veered off their stated courses and voted in direct contradiction to their stated positions, often to the dismay of the presidents who nominated

Perhaps when seated Thomas will rethink his position, realize his opportunity and widen the path blazed for him by Marshall.

Assembly, petition are deeply-rooted freedoms

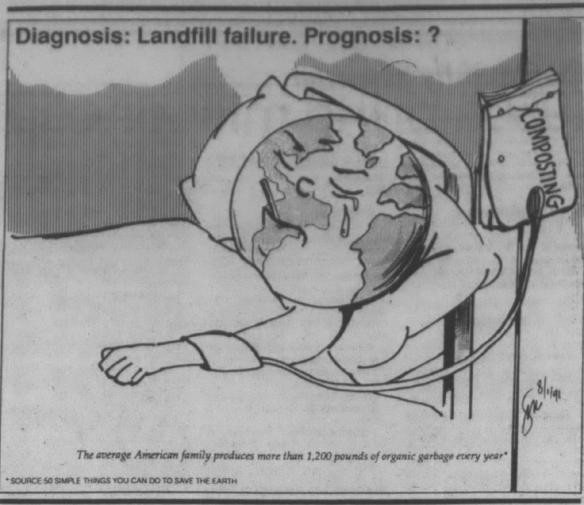

RECALL, STOP the war, no more toxic waste dumps - when Americans don't like something, they take to the streets. Protest, assembly and petition are deeply rooted freedoms. A century and a half ago, Alexis de Tocqueville, the French observer of American life, commented on the inclination of Americans to form voluntary associations to solve common problems.

When the First Congress under the Constitution debated the Bill of Rights in 1789, Rep. Theodore Sedgwick argued that the proposed assembly and petition clause was "trifling" when compared with other rights. Rep. John Page of Virginia disagreed, saying that if people could be deprived "of the power of assembling under any pretext whatsoever, they might be deprived of every other privilege" in the First Amendment.

These two rights have afforded protection for many reform movements, and also nurtured American labor in its long struggle to create unions and to undertake collective bargaining.

This is another in a continuing series of commentaries marking the anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

History, Champagne marked growth at OU

Being president of a large, public university is probably the toughest job in America. Between the competing demands of students and faculty, business and politicians, pure research and crass conniving, Joe Champagne's day has precious little time for himself or his family.

Maybe he'll have more. He will leave Oakland this week to be the new president of Crittenton Hospital. Since managing large hospitals is arguably the second toughest job in America, you've got to conclude that Champagne is either a glutton for punishment or supremely self confi-

TALK FOR A few moments to Champagne and you get a sharp first impression. Dynamic. Self possessed. Compelling. Wonderful salesman.

Maybe first impressions are close to the mark, because in his 10 years at Oakland he fundamentally changed the university - "brought it into the 21st century," in his

He realized shortly after arriving in 1981 that "the I-75 corridor where we already have thousands of acres of land, gas lines in, water with the university" - would make a magnificent research park devel-

The key was to bring "the users of knowledge into close proximity with the creators of knowledge" by en-gaging in a new kind of academic real estate development.

The Oakland Technology Park was thus conceived, to be born two years later when Comerica Bank bought the original 210-acre parcel and started a $40 million operations and computer center that now employs 1,800.

TODAY THE PARK covers 1,500 acres with more than 5 million feet of office space in use or under construction, including the Chrysler Technology Center and a string of Fortune 500 corporate tenants.

The tech center is at the core of Oakland County's ambitious plan to become the center of a high-tech business in southeastern Michigan. And the linkages between OU's science, engineering and technology activities and the world of business have hardened the university's repu-

Champagne acknowledges that at first it was a hard sell, especially with humanists who feared business interests would dominate the university. Today, however, he says most professors agree that "our faculty" will be better off for being directly in contact with the real world."

UNIVERSITIES around the nation today are under assault for being too' self-absorbed, too expensive and too other-worldly.

OU will likely not be the target of such criticism. Champagne cites as his happiest moment as president a review committee's finding that cited OU as being, in his words, "a model university for the 21st century, blending the traditions of academia with the realities of the fu-

His saddest moment was to have decided to freeze OU's enrollment at a little more than 12,000 students. "We had to deny access to a fine university to a lot of kids," he said, "but we had to choose between a good education and a mediocre one.

History, and Joe Champagne's successors, will determine whether he drove the university in the right direction. But certainly his presidency marked a fundamental change in direction for OU and a significant push for the region.

Endorsement questioned

When I moved from Detroit to Plymouth in 1987, I thought that I would leave behind local politics that merged vaudeville and farce. However, the recent campaign for state representatie has certainly highlighted the fact that some of the candidates who seek election in the Plymouth area can succeed, even though they have little understanding of the current issues or the matters with which they must deal.

When the Plymouth voters elected Jerry Vorva to the City Commission, I was at a loss to understand why anyone would support a candidate who was in the process of suing the city. My surprise turned to incredulity when, after he was elected, he proceeded to press his claim against the city and thereafter negotiated a substantial settlement with the very body to which he had been elected. the city commission. My incredulity turned to anger when I learned the terms of the settlement. It is my understanding that Mr. Vorva received a cash payment from the city of Plymouth of $150,000, plus he and his family will receive medical insurance until he retires. This currently costs the city around $5,000 per year.

The source of the funds for Mr.

Vorva's settlement, of course, comes directly from the taxpayers of the city of Plymouth, a small community of approximately 9,500 citizens. For example, the taxpayer who paid $3,000 per year in real estate taxes had $150 taken to pay for the cash settlement. So much for Mr. Vorva's claim that he looks out for the interests of the taxpayer.

Now Mr. Vorva wants this district to send him to Lansing as our representative. If he is elected, I hope that he will not have the same financial impact on the citizens of Michigan as he has had on the citizens of Plymouth. I fail to understand why the Observer would endorse a candidate who has already cost the citizens of Plymouth so much.

state representative candidates. I hope this sets the record straight.

As to the "It's a done deal" statement, this was an expression of my personal frustration with the very quick (and seemingly closed) process by which the new supervisor was appointed. By the time I heard that Maurice Breen had resigned, a majority of the Plymouth Township Board of Trustees had already committed their vote.

I know there were other viable would-be candidates who never publicly surfaced because it was already, in fact, a done deal. Nothing illegal was done and maybe this was just a political fact of life, but somehow it sounded too much like 'smoke-filled rooms" for my taste.

To the editor: In Jerry Vorva's campaign literature, there is a quote from me saying, "It's a done deal."

Some of my constituents have asked me if the existence of this quote in Vorva's campaign material meant that I supported his candidacy. The answer to this is that I have not endorsed Vorva nor any of the

EVERYWHERE YOU turn, people are dragging out the video cameras. Police in Fort Worth have reported several incidents of responding to calls and being taped by passersby armed with the recorders.

A couple of other videotapes have made the news lately that add a whole different perspective to the use of the video camera as a crime fighting tool.

A defense attorney for a Rochester man accused of sexually assaulting a Center Line woman and recording it all with a hand-held video camera got the OK from a judge this week to use the tape as evidence at the trial. He claims the tape will indicate "consent" on the part of the

The fact that the couple was inside their own condo and the neighbors who "witnessed" the act had to look through the windows to do it didn't deter the deputies from upholding their sworn duty. The man and woman were charged and released on $15,000 bail each.

Hawks capture national soccer crown

It took six years for coach Tom Coyne and his Michigan Hawks '74 to reach their

With a roster of 17 players from the Observer & Eccentric coverage area, the Livo-nia Y Premier Soccer Club had reason to celebrate after Saturday's 4-1 conquest over Pegasus, a team from the San Diego, Calif.

The Hawks '74 are newly crowned chamoions of the Girls Under-17 division of the U.S. Youth Soccer Association after winning two straight at Tranquility Park in Omaha,

"This is an exceptional accomplishment for these girls, it's been our vision for quite some time" said Coyne, who molded the Hawks '74 in 1985. "Our theme from the start was, 'Play for one another. You can't be an island.' The team chemistry was just

A slight underdog going into the four-team tourney, the Hawks reached the final with a 4-2 victory Thursday over Plano,

In the other semifinal matchup, favorite Willingboro, N.J. was upset by the representatives from southern California, 3-2. Natalie Neaton, an incoming senior at

Country Day School in Birmingham, was the Hawks '74 scoring leader. She had a pair of goals in the final and a hat trick in the semi-

IN THE CHAMPIONSHIP, Neaton scored

It was 2-0 Hawks '74 only four minutes later after a Pegasus defender accidentally booted the ball into her own net.

Leading 2-0 at intermission, Pegasus struck back early in the second half to slice the deficit to one (off a restart), but Neaton scored on a breakaway and teammate Patty Shea (Livonia Franklin) added another to give the Hawks '74 an insurmountable three-

The story was much the same in the semi-finals as Neaton scored twice in the first half to give the Hawks '74 a 2-0 lead. She added a third goal in the second half and Shea ended the Texans' hopes by scoring on a corner kick from Kristen Westveer (Troy

"We felt very good, we were in the right position after the first game, and we didn't care who we played, we were just excited to be in the final," Coyne said.

THE HAWKS '74 were able to overcome injuries along the way to co-captain Molly Ferguson (Birmingham Marian), left winger Amy Werthman (Plymouth Salem) and backup goalkeeper Alicia Smith (Livonia

Ferguson was out with a knee injury suffered the previous week in the Region II title run in Sioux Falls, S.D. Werthman, meanwhile, had a severely sprained ankle.

Despite the maladies, the defense was brilliant, led by goalie Kristi McGough (Troy Athens), who Coyne said, "had a big

"We had a restricting team defense, they just played great," said Coyne. "They tracked back well to the ball."

Leading the way defensively along with McGough, was stopper Tracy Morrell (Stevenson), left fullback Kim Popyk (Farmington), sweeper Lisa Thomas (Stevenson) and right-fullback Westveer.

The team's unsung hero, according to Coyne, was Stevenson's Shannon Wilkinson.

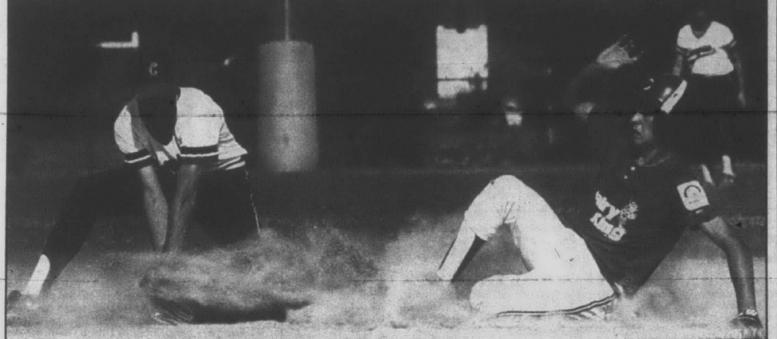

'She was asked to shadow the best player, and she shut everything off," said the Hawks '74 coach. "Shannon is always a worker, very tough. She's a very physical player who also has good skill level

Spartans topple conference champs

Upsets marked the first round of the Metro

Summer Hockey League playoffs Tuesday. The biggest surprise was the Spartans winning a shootout with the Bakes Conference champion and league-leading Bulldogs 10-9. The Bulldogs won the conference and had the best overall regular-season record at 9-2. The Spartans finished last in the Bakes with a

The Spartans outscored their opponent 6-3 in the final period to erase a two-goal deficit and advance to the semifinals Sunday night at the Plymouth Ice Arena. Brett Williams scored his second goal with 2:17 left in the game to give the Spartans a 10-7 lead. The Bulldogs rallied but the effort fell short. Dave Garbriano scored at 1:44 and in a goal in the final tally.

E.J. SAUER of the Spartans scored both of his goals in the third period and also had two assists. Teammate Phil Berger had two goals, too, and three assists. Duane Roe paced the Bulldogs with a pair of goals and one assist.

In the other Bakes playoff game Tuesday, the third-place Lakers nipped the secondplace Wildcats 6-5.

Scott Johnson's goal for the Wildcats tied the score at 4-4 early in the third period, but Chuck Carvey and Mike Krygier of the Lakers accounted for the next two goals.

In addition to scoring a goal, Jim Mitchell had four assists for the Lakers. Krygier also had an assist. For the Wildcats, Mark Johnson had two goals and one assist, Frank Mariani one of each

In the final regular-season game Monday, the Bulldogs trounced the Falcons 8-4, leading 6-0 after two periods. Weaver had two goals and two assists, Roe one goal and three as-

IN A TRIPLE-header Sunday, the Huskies edged the Spartans 8-7 to clinch first place in the Eagle Conference when the Wolverines lost to the Wildcats 9-7.

Cory Kucharski and Mike Kneiding paced the Huskies with three goals apiece. Jesse Hubenschmidt assisted on four goals, and Kneiding added one assist.

A five-goal, one-assist performance by Phil Berger of the Spartans went for naught.

Western Michigan University player J.P. LaRoche had two goals and four assists to lead the Wildcats in their win over the Wolverines. Mark Hernandez scored three goals.

Mark Issel and Joe Burton scored two goals and had three assists each for the Wolverines.

The Broncos and the Lakers battled to a 6-6 tie. Corey Almas recorded one goal and three assists. Joe Bonnett two goals and two assis for the winners. Pat Hultman also had a pair of scores and assists to pace the Lakers.

In Eagle Conference playoff games Wednesday, the Huskies played the Falcons and the Wolverines faced the Broncos. The MSHL championship game will be played at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Plymouth.

The final standings: BAKES - 1. Bulldogs, 9-2; 2. Wildcats, 6-4-1; 3. Lakers, 5-5-1.

"He's at the hospital now but is well aware of what's going on here.

Walt Bazylewicz, the coaching legend who turns 70 this year, proved Tuesday he can still take a hit from someone young enough to be his grandson.

"We had a play going and suddenly the gates open and two 260 pound tackles come through," said Bazy-lewicz, who currently coaches at Redford Bishop Borgess. "They were chasing the quarterback, but he es-caped and they ran into me. I'd rather it be me, than my quarterback."

Bazylewicz ended up getting a twisted ankle out of the hit, but nothing will keep him from coaching on the sidelines Saturday for the 1:35 p.m. kickoff at Michigan State University's Spartan Stadium.

IN NAMING Bazylewicz as head coach of the East, the Michigan High School Football Coaches Association picked a guy with a coaching resume longer and more impressive than most of his colleagues.

Bazylewicz's coaching career began at Detroit St. Thomas in the 1950s and a decade later he won two Catholic League championships as coach of Harper Woods Notre Dame. Bazylewicz went on to become the Catholic League Director for 20

Bazylewicz, who guided his teams in the '60s to two Soup Bowl titles and a pair of Goodfellow wins, will count this week of preparation and Saturday's game among his best memories.

"This is quite an honor," said Bazylewicz, who last fall guided an unheralded Borgess team to a 6-3 record and a berth in the Prep Bowl at the Silverdome against Birmingham Brother Rice. "I appreciate it, especially in my twilight years. There's a lot of talent here. We'll probably draw 10,000 fans, but we should draw 50,000.

Sarcevich played tight end for Harrison, but he made more of an impression at linebacker with a school-record 299 tackles in his career. The East coaching staff, headed by Redford Bishop Borgess' Walt Bazylewicz, decided to move Sarcevich to tight end because of a shortage of players at that

Dairy King bid falls shy

Westland Federation won a mercy-rule contest from Grassi, but Grassi defeated Salem 11-3 and came back to beat Westland 7-6 in the championship game Sunday.

"They were bigger, faster and stronger than our kids," said Dairy King coach Mark LaPointe of the Grassi ballclub, "but (the underdog Canton players) just battled. They had us outmanned physically, but we came within a whisker of beating the DAIRY KING scored first against Salem when Paskievitch was awarded home plate in the first inning as a result of a catcher interference call.

But the Rocks roared back with four runs in the third inning and two in the fourth and fifth. Al Hysko keyed the third-inning rally with a two-run double, and Brian Danek hit a two-run homer in the fourth.

Eric Kida went the distance on the mound for Salem, lding Dairy King to five hits and one walk. He struck out five. Danek, Jim Cunningham and Jeff Hopson had two hits each Cunningham made a key defensive play in the first inning. With one out and the bases loaded for Dairy King, he made a diving catch at shortstop on a ball that appeared headed for left field and doubled off the runner at second.

Horn started, pitched three innings and got the loss. Brett Romack worked 11/2 innings, Paupore 21/2. Adam Gilles was the only player with two or more hits for Dairy King, which finished the season with a 36-16

'We had a great season," LaPointe said. "We accomplished two significant things: we had a winning season and we qualified for the tournament. If anything, this will be an excellent down payment for these kids next season (on the Canton varsity team)."

Caesars, Delwal prevail late

By Steve Kowalski staff writer

A couple of late-inning rallies made for an exciting, almost exhausting, opening night of action in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League playoffs Wednesday at Ford

The night finally ended at 12:53 a.m. after second-seeded Livonia Little Caesars scored five runs in the top of the ninth to beat Fieger & Fieger, 8-6. In the opener, started at 5:30, No. 4 seed Delwal scored six runs in the seventh inning to erase a 7-1 deficit and eventually upset No. 1 Walter's Appliance, 10-9, in 10 innings. Caesars trailed, 5-3, entering the ninth, but loaded the bases on a pair of walks to Andy Weighill and Don Sikora and a single by Earl Johnson. A wild pitch by Fieger reliever David Wood scored Weighill from third and Jeff Bates, who finished as the LCBL's top hitter with a .459 average, responded with a two-run single to give Caesars a 6-5 lead.

After Rich Roy walked, Mike Giacomantonio smashed a two-run double to score Bates and Roy for an 8-5 lead. Despite going hitless in his previous four at-bats, Bates said he wanted an opportunity to hit in the clutch.

"I just owed the team," said Bates. "It wasn't for me, it was for the team. The guys on the team put in so much time, losing doesn't make much sense. The win means Caesars will face Delwal tonight at 8 p.m. at Ford

Fieger in tonight's first game, beginning at 5:30 p.m. For Caesars coach John Moraitis, the win meant satisfaction after watching his team drop out of first place with six straight 'I feel better than I did four innings ago," Moraitis said. "We got beat how many times in the seventh inning, and this time we finally our breaks and won in the ninth. Re lief pitching was great and Jeff and Mike got the clutch hits."

Lou McKaig (Madonna Universi-ty), who pitched 3½ innings in relief of starter Eric Stanczak, earned the win. McKaig had to leave the game in the bottom of the ninth after a single up the middle by Fieger's Aaron Mach hit the right-handed pitcher in the left ankle and loaded the bases with one out. Bill Bannon (Livonia and Dearborn Divine Child), out the last two weeks with an ulcer, came on and got two of the three batters he faced to end the threat.

"Billy was gassing it; he was throwing absolute cheese," Caesars assistant coach Ken Wandzel said.

Fieger scored an unearned run in the first and raised the lead to 4-0 in the fourth on an RBI triple by Kevin Adams and T.C. Raptis' first home run of the year. Flohr's RBI double scoring Aaron Mach gave Fieger a 5-0 lead after five before Caesars scored its first run on a walk to Jeff Miller and a triple by Roy in the 7-1 lead in the opener before Delwal tied the score in the bottom of the seventh mostly on Walter's generosity. Walter's starter Mike Coleman allowed only four hits and one run through six innings, but allowed the first three Delwal batters to reach base in the seventh with no outs.

Walter's was cruising along with a

Three Walter's pitchers combined to walk six batters and hit a batter in the seventh, and Jason Valente and Eric Sumpter also delivered clutch hits to tie the score at 7-7. Walter's Craig Overaitis broke the tie in the eighth with a home run and Paul Pirronello tripled home Joe Sturtz from second base to give Walter's a 9-7 lead after 71/2 innings.

the game was a chance to be with his old teammates.

"If you look around, you know this event has been a success," Mio said.
"This is a real good cause and a good chance to get together with the guys. But what really gets me is the support from the community. They were the ones who bought tickets and came out here."

Red Wing forward Kevin Miller said the cause was the main reason he took part in the event.

"SURE, I don't get to see the guys too much in the off-season, but Raymond Reffitt is the real reason that I'm here," Miller said. "I can't think of a better cause. This kid really needed our help."

Other Red Wing players included Sergei Fedorov, Dennis Hextall, Dwight Foster, Don Murdoch and Dave Lewis.

"It's always nice to be able to help someone," Fedorov said. "I hope we raised a lot of money for the boy."

All-Star Baseball Cards, which sponsored the game, will sponsor a card show Sunday, Sept. 8, at the Wayne Ford Civic League with proceeds from the event also going to the Raymond Reffitt Fund.

THE HAWKS '74, however, were more than a one-man band.

Also showing their stuff were Thomas and Popyk.

"Lisa really caught the attention of college coaches as a sweeper and Popyk did a great job at the fullback spot," Coyne said. "Popyk wasn't 100 percent, her feet were numb, but we were able to get her into most of the action. We were able to get most of them healthy."

Coyne also praised the play of left winger Dana Pososki (Livonia Churchill), calling her "a very determined soccer player."

And glue which held the Hawks '74 team together was Nance, a left midfielder, and Ragen Coyne (Livonia Stevenson), the center-mid.

"Together they were a tandem to watch," said the Hawks '74 coach. 'It took the team to get the ball consistently to Neaton. The team always came first."

Bazylewicz said the week presents a challenge for him and his five as-sistants to blend the talents of his players. Headlining the East team's roster is running back Tyrone Wheatley (Dearborn Heights Robichaud who has signed with Michi-gan), but an emphasis won't be placed on the running game, Bazy-

"We'll be throwing the ball more than 'Bazy's' used to throwing the ball," Bazylewicz said. "This is all new to me. We've got all classy receivers and quarterbacks (including Plymouth Canton's Karl Wukie so for the good of the game and fan interest, we'll throw more."

The week also has been a reunion of sorts for Bazylewicz and East running back Anthony Hood, a 1991 Borgess graduate who will play in the fall for Northwestern University.

"It's nice to have someone on your team who you can yell at without him sulking," joked Bazylewicz.

"It's fun, but you have to have a different frame of mind to be a tight end, said Sarcevich, a 6-foot-1, 225-pounder who caught 12 passes last fall. "You've got to be more controlled, whereas on defense you can go ahead and SARCEVICH WON'T have much time to relax after the game, considering he leaves Sunday for the University of Hawaii, where he'll be a freshman in the fall.

"I've already packed," said Sarcevich, "I just brought my old clothes up here for the week

Plymouth Canton's Karl Wukie will be one of two East quarterbacks. Wukie, a first-team All-Observer choice last fall when he led Canton to the Class AA quarterfinals, has made adjustments with the East offensive scheme.

"All of the passes except one is a drop-back pass," said Wukie, who will walk-on at Western Michigan University. "I'm used to rolling out so we'll see how it works. I'm trying my hardest but I'm not really too concerned with how I perform. I came out here to have fun and get in shape

Tony Prey, of Westland John Glenn, will snap the ball to Wukie, and Redford Catholic Central's Rob Sylvester also will play on the offensive line. Lining up in the offensive backfield is Borgess' Anthony Hood. Prey, who will play for Division III Kalamazoo College, said he's using this game to "prove mething" to other colleges that didn't recruit him.

Hood, the first-team All-Observer tailback, looks forward to playing with Dearborn Heights Robichaud's Tyrone Wheatley, the state's top recruit who has signed with Michigan.

Prey is impressed by both runners. "Thank God I block for them, not tackle them," he said.

'Bugs Bunny on Broadway' comes to Meadow Brook

Wabbit fans of all ages are hopping to see "Bugs Bunny on Broadway," a collection of Warner Brothers cartoons projected on a giant screen, accompanied by the 50-piece Warner Brothers Orchesta.

The show is making just one stop in Michigan, 8 p.m., Monday, Aug. 5, at the Meadow Brook Music Festi-

"It's been playing to packed houses, and 85 percent of the people in the audience are grown-ups," said Sylvia Coughlin Porter, Meadow Brook Music Festival spokeswoman.

MOST OF the musical scores for Bugs cartoons were destroyed long ago, so Daugherty, and a team of students from an animation scoring class at the University of Southern California recreated the music.

"In many cases, we had to transcribe by ear - note by note, instrument by instrument. We also had to wade through sound effects and dia-

In the case of "What's Opera Doc?," there were tremendous amounts of thunder and lightning, and tons of sound effects they had to listen to get to the music.

"We would get it into full score form and listen to it over and over to pick out any inaccuracies. We spent months in this process. Then we tested it for accuracy," said Daugherty.

To create the cels, pencil drawings generated by animation artists are

'Rehearsal for Murder' good, needs faster pace

Performances of the Troy Players production of "Rehearsal for Murder" are 8 p.m. Friday, Aug. 2, and 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 3 at the Troy Community Center. For ticket information call 879-

The Troy Players' production of "Rehearsal for Murder," by D.D. Brooke, has many elements of a good modern mystery, but the current staging needs more sparkle and quicker pace.

John White is appropriate for the role of playwright Alex Dennison who pens a script based on his actress/fiance's last night alive. The play-within-a-play is supposedly written to weed out suspects in Alex's fiance's death. White, howevrange (especially to include urgency) for this complex role, and he is certainly capable of doing so. As many of the characters on stage wonder of Alex's sanity, so too must the audi-ence. This would be one more way to Beautiful Monica Wells (Elizabeth DeWilde), the murdered actress/ fiance, reappears to read scenes from Alex's play with various characters who are suspects. These "scenes" are actually flashbacks and serve to tell the story of the night of Monica's death. DeWilde, new to the Troy Players, is an impressive actress with stage presence, and is a definite asset to the show.

A common misinterpretation in many mystery or suspense dramas is to deliver extremely informative lines (which illustrate events leading to the murder in question) as though explaining procedures to putting to-gether a bicycle. This is particularly evident in "Rehearsal for Murder" because of the flashback writing style of D.D. Brooke's adaptation. Thom Griffin, as Frank Heiler, does splendidly while in the "past," or during scenes involving interaction, when recounting past events without "living" them, the bicycle procedure delivery of dialogue re-

The actors/suspects invited to the reading of Alex's new play (within the play) are cast well. On the whole, however, the cast needs to pick up their lines to pick up the pace in Act I. Act II did bring more intrigue as the story unfolded and more action was presented. Lori Jacobs represented comedic relief as the character of Beila Lamb. Jacobs would have fared better, however, if she delivered her funny and stinging re-marks to the intended targets onstage, rather than to the audi

New Troy Players member Karin Lyons shows promise as ingenue Karen Daniels. Lyons delivers her lines with self-assurance and is a good match for her partner in crime, Bob Zawideh, who plays Leo Gibbs

Handsome Dane Lawicki is also new to the stage as David Matthews, and conveys quite well the typical leading man ambiance required of his role. Don Hagerty renders a creditable performance in his portrayal of Lloyd Andrews, the Broadway director who is also a suspect of by Tom Tighe and Carrie Anglewicz. Tighe is likable as the theater teckie (technical person) who has been at the theatre forever, and Anglewicz plays Alex's quirky, perky secretary

Director Philomena Somers gives us a respectable production of "Re-bearsal for Murder" which could improve with a more creative staging and a faster pace.

You won't notice any difference, but your country will.

The five minutes you spend registering with Selective Service at the post office won't change you. You won't be enlisting in the military. In fact, registration won't make you any different.

But it will make a difference to your country. Having an accurate list of names could save six weeks in responding to a national emergency.

When you turn 18, register with Selective Service. It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Business woes go beyond 'poor economy' platitudes

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

Hadley Arden, one of southeastern Michigan women's apparel main-stays, is planning on closing its doors at the end of this summer.

Livonia-based Hadley Arden is not

The recession has spelled trouble — if not bankruptcy — for a number of commercial ventures including but not limited to, Bonwit Teller, Uptown Charly's, Highland Applince, Willow Tree, Chelsea Stores. Crowley Milner & Co, Dobbs Furniture and Corey Dinette Furniture.

Even developer Western Develop ment of Washington, D.C., the builder of the proposed Auburn Mills mega-mall, is in bankruptcy court considering a real estate loan work-

All this despite a growing number of economists jumping on the recession-is-over - or will be shortly -

HENRY MOSES, vice president of Barry M. Klein Real Estate, a national retail brokerage firm, said he isn't certain what the economists are using for guidelines in their predictions, but they don't apply to the in-dependent and semi-independent re-

"There's still a contraction in the retail market," he said.

Moses said he expects there will be more small, independent and semi-independent retailers declaring bankruptcy or going out of business because they fail to see enough light at the end of the tunnel to justify operating through the coming months.

"If (the economy) is turning around, it's a long, slow turnaround,' he said.

Moses stressed that small and large retailers are operating at two levels. Large retailers may be seeing an increase in apparel, shoes and furniture, but the smaller companies are hurting.

"Independents don't have the luxury of sitting out the hard times," he said. If a major retailer sees sales slip in one area, it can usually hold out until things get better, he said. This is not true for the smaller re-

'All industries need to be able to borrow money to get through the slow times," he said. Large companies can borrow from themselves; small companies go to banks.

When the economy dips, banks are more discriminating in their loan practices which means retailers have to cut costs and inventory. This, in turn, makes it more difficult for retailers to draw customers.

WITHOUT CUSTOMERS, the businesses must cut back still further, but there's a limit to how far a retailer can cut. "At some point, it becomes throwing good money after bad - many retailers will cut their losses and wait until times get bet-

"I don't think anyone can feel safe right now," Moses said.

Tony Camilletti, director of visual marketing at the retail design and consulting firm of Jon Greenberg & Associates Inc. in Southfield, said these are certainly not boom times for retailers, but the economy is not nearly bad enough to drive retailers

Camilletti said he doubts the recent surge in retail hardships predicates bad tidings for the industry as

'But I don't think they're isolated incidents. These are cases where consumer-oriented companies didn't address the consumer market and competitive changes," he said.

The economy may have been a factor, but it hasn't been an insurmountable obstacle - as evidenced. by the success of many retailers.

Problems ailing retailers run the gamut from falling short on the service aspect, an inability to meet customers' product demands, a problem in reaching the correct market, or perhaps just a poor image.

"Some companies may have just expanded too much and not anticipated the slowdown," he said.

ANOTHER POSSIBILITY is ailing companies didn't anticipate or take seriously the challenge of increased competition in a tighter market. "We're seeing the beginning of a change in how retailers do business," Camilletti said. "Some companies haven't been able to re-

Retailers that fail to accommodate for major retailers entering the

Jay Wedevan, principal with the Southfield retail consultant firm Strategic Edge Inc., said from a construction point of view, there are two reasons behind the recent prob-

"In many instances, some areas are just overbuilt."

Simply, if there are too many retailers and not enough customers, some businesses are not going to survive, he said. "The overbuilding has put a squeeze on retailers who expanded too quickly.

Paradoxically, this overdevelopment has caused problems for re-tailers who need to expand or move to stay in business

"Retailers want to go to certain locations, but they can't get there because the developers can't get

Retail developers can't get loans from financial institutions because overbuilding has made them neryous, and even those financial institutions that are open to making loans are asking for substantial equity from the developer.

CHRISTINE LENZ, retail manager in the Detroit office of the public accounting firm Arthur Andersen, said for the most part she is optimistic about the remainder of the year and doesn't anticipate continued problems for retailers.

Most economists are predicting better times ahead, and if that isn't encouraging, the usual retail cycle ought to whip the industry out of its

As back-to-school time approaches, retail sales generally pick up, Lenz said. "After that, the holiday shopping begins."

Lenz said it would be too simple to blame the recent retail woes on the economy. "It's more likely that it was a combination of things.

Consumers are bored with existing products and want something new; people are shopping price; the troubles of larger retailers have weighed on consumer confidence; financiers have been rejuctant to make loans to retailers and manufacturers; and suppliers - in light of everything else that's been going on - are unwilling to work with the retailers.

Couple again gets together for sake of kitchen designs

They met in college, fell in love, married and had two children.

More than 20 years later, they met at their son's basketball game and got engaged in business.

Can a couple divorced for 10 years find success and happiness wed in business?

Janice Steinhardt and Gary Fried are making a good start at it with the Madison Design Group of Troy, designing and installing upscale kitchens and other customized living

In this partnership, Fried, 44, handles the design while Steinhardt, 43, deals with marketing and the bottom

IN A little more than a year, Madison has designed and installed more than 50 kitchens. Fried and Steinhardt credit their early success to business contacts and experience, including Fried's as a cabinet manufacturer and sales rep and Steinhardt's in renovating and reselling homes in the Birmingham area. Fried learned cabinet making after college at his dad's firm, Midwest

Cabinet of Walled Lake. After they get their feet in the kitchen door, Steinhardt said they are often asked to do built-in custom closets, media centers and utility rooms. They plan to expand their business to include commercial off-

Madison prides itself in using the latest of materials. They feature European products, which they believe lead the way in ideas and materials.

"It's like foreign cars; every time the Americans duplicate them, the competition is on to something else," Fried said. "American manufacturers had really grown quite lazy; they continued to make the same products, which were of decreasing quality and no style."

But Madison has found one American gem in Heritage, a Mennonite company in New Holland, Pa. It combines old-world craftsmanship with the newest materials such as polyester cabinets.

FRIED AND STEINHARDT met while undergrads at the University of Michigan. Fried majored in business; Steinhardt earned a degree in speech pathology.

Married in 1969, they have two children: daughter Karle, 18, and son Rvan. 15.

After working with his father, Fried tried manufacturing European-style kitchen cabinets at this own firm, Kinetics, but became discouraged by the cost and attitude of local

His next venture, Light Year Corp., sold cabinets retail and to builders and architects, which led to work in nightclubs.

Asked to do the design and construction management for Cheeks on Eight Mile in Detroit, Fried became its owner in 1982.

A string of club ownerships contin-ued to the late 1980s, including Pri-ma Donna in Detroit, and Menage and ISIS, both in Pontiac. 'It's very exciting, but high-visibility clubs only last a few years at best, and then you have to move on," Fried said. The couple separated in 1979 and divorced the next year.

Gary Fried and Janice Steinhardt, former marriage partners, are now buisness partners as owners of the Madison Design Group sity and taught special education for eight years in Pontiac.

At the same time, she was building business skills by running an art poster firm with Linda Hayman, who now owns a gallery in Farmington Hills, and renovating houses with friend Wanda Maturo.

A chance discussion at son Ryan's basketball game a couple of years ago led to the Madison Design Group, named after the Pontiac junior high where Steinhardt worked.

Steinhardt's present husband, a Southfield attorney, became an investor and is a strong supporter of their working relationship.

Fried and Steinhardt don't minimize the challenges but are determined to succeed.

"There was a long period where we didn't talk so much, and I guess you have to go through all that,"

The "re-marriage" includes their children, who plan on working part-time with their parents.

"ONE OF the reasons I did it was for may kids. I thought it would be good for them," Steinhardt said.

For Fried, it was the opportunity for something less risky than nightclub ownership.

I had always wanted to own a showroom in the design center," Fried said. "When you are in your 20s and 30s, it's very exciting to be a part of the club scene; in my 40s, I want something a lot more stable."

Learning doesn't take a vacation

UMMER TUTORIAL students weren't necessarily smiling their first day of classes this year.

"They look very reluctant to be here because they'd rather be at the beach," said Nancy Weycker, program director. That didn't last long,

"They can see that they're making progress. I think that it builds their self-esteem," said Weycker, a reading intervention specialist for the Plymouth-Canton Community

The summer program, offered each year, gives students in kindergarten through eighth grade an opportunity to take new classes and explore new ideas.

"We try to make it reinforcement for what goes on in the regular curriculum during the school year," said Weycker, a Canton resident. "For the most part, it's kids who need to brush up and don't want to lose ground during the summer."

ABOUT 250 students were enrolled in this summer's program, offered by Plymouth-Canton Community Education July 1-31. Classes were Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings at Plymouth Canton High School in Canton.

Reading and math classes were offered for elementary students. Middle school students had a choice of reading, math, study skills and writing skills. Courses were also offered for special education students.

"So it's a full range of classes that we offer," she said. Many students took two classes and some took just

The program isn't really designed to assist the student who'd otherwise need to repeat a grade, Weycker said. Instead, it offers reinforcement of what's been covered during the

"We want to get the creative aspect in," said Matevia, a teacher at Hulsing Elementary School in Canton. "They really respond to it, and it's such a wonderful story."

Each youngster created a quilt based on one of the main characters in the book. Crayon drawings of Charlotte, Wilbur and the others were featured, along with drawings representing different traits of each

THE CHILDREN, who'll be in fourth grade this fall, were busy doing the hand-stitching on their quilts. Student teacher Lynn Carpenter has a home economics background and was able to help with the

"It's hands-on," Matevia said of the quilt project. "You want to make it interesting for them."

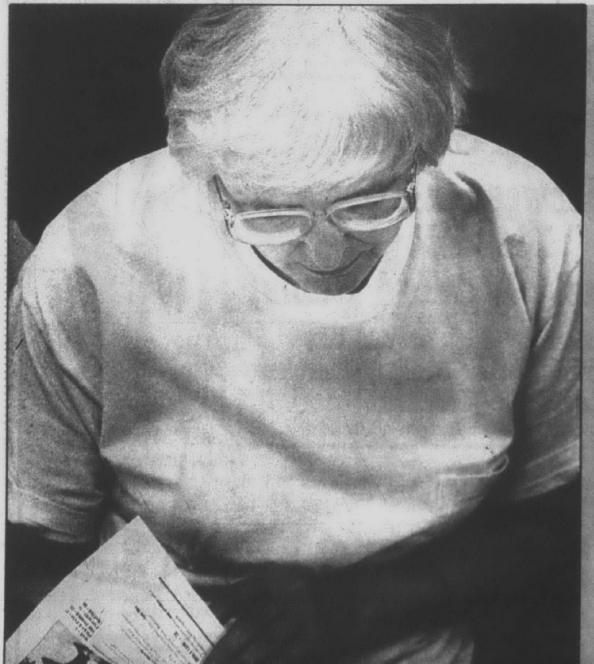

There are different learning styles, and hands-on projects help to accommodate those differences, she said. The small class size makes doing such projects possible.

This is what the whole summer school program is about," said Ma-tevia, a Canton resident. "We're able to do that because of the size of the groups."

Classes included no more than 10 students, Weycker said, and that meant teachers were able to provide plenty of one-to-one attention. In addition to the regular teachers, student teachers from Eastern Michigan University assisted with the pro-

You say the baby is crying, the phone is ringing, the dog is barking and Calgon is doing very little to take you away? You say you never knew your children could be so cre-ative in their abilities to discover new ways to fight?

Did your quiet time after the children were tucked in bed go out the window with daylight-saving time? Is the summer heat driving you crazy, and do you wish you could discover a corner of the world in which just to curl up and enjoy a good book?

Well, cheer up. The PlymouthCanton community offers two such corners. Near one end, on Canton Center, is the Canton Public Library.
On the other code on Main in Plymouth On the other end, on Main in Plymouth, is the Dunning-Hough Library.
"Circulation is up tremendously in the summertime," said Kathy Petlewski, an adult services librarian at the Dunning-Hough Library.

Darlene Ursel, a reference librarian in Plymouth, also notices many eager readers coming to the library in the summer.

"A lot of people come back to read the classics or something they missed when they were younger like Bronte and Dickens."

SINCE SCHEDULES for children and adults are generally a little less hectic in the summertime, leisuretime activities like reading are easier to pursue.

to check out four or five books.

Mariene Roan enjoys romantic and travel books. Roan was checking out two books, "Talked to Death" by Stephen Singular, about a talk show host killed in Denver, and "Final Cut" by Steven Bach, a book about the making of the movie "Heaven's Gate"

John Roan likes to go in the back yard by the pool and "read and fall asleep, read and fall asleep. Summer is more leisurely and relaxing," he

One of the more popular books checked out at the Canton Public Library is "Loves Music, Loves To Dance" by Mary Higgins Clark, said Claire McLaughlin, adult services librarian. The book is about a serial killer, and although the library owns six copies, there are still about 30 holds on it.

DANIELLE "Heartbeat" has been a favorite choice for many. The Sue Grafton mysteries, "'H' Is for Homicide," in hardback, and "'G' Is for Gumshoe," in paperback, have also been popu-

"The Kitchen God's Wife" by Amy Tan has been another favorite. The book tells the life story of a Chinese-American matriarch.

A surprising entry on the adult bestseller list is a Dr. Seuss offering, "Oh, the Places You'll Go!" The book is a collection of verse and pictures.

Two popular self-help books available are "Homecoming" by John Bradshaw and "Wealth Without Risk: How to Develop a Personal Fortune Without Going Out on a Limb" by Charles Givens.

"THERE HAVE always been more books geared toward women, Ursel said.

Two popular choices among the non-fiction bestsellers are geared more toward men.

"Iron John" by Robert Bly highlights the passage from boyhood into manhood in different cultures. "Fire in the Belly" by Sam Keen examines the changing male role in so-

Another favorite on the non-fiction side is "Nancy Reagan" by Kitty Kelley, the much-publicized unau-thorized biography of the former

On the lighter side for non-fiction are "Paul Harvey's For What It's Worth," edited by Paul Harvey Jr., "Real Ponies Don't Go Oink!" by Patrick F. McManus and "Dave Barry Talks Back" by Dave Barry.

Paperback books are much more popular in the summer because they're easier to pack and take along on trips, Petlewski said.

YOU SAY you're going to be driving many hours in the car and when you're not driving reading's precluded because of motion sickness? Take heart. Both libraries offer a solution. Many books are available on cassette tapes.

Program designed to expand horizons

Ninth graders from Plymouth and Canton were among the 54 stu-dents from across Michigan chosen to participate in this year's Sum-merscience program at the Univer-sity of Michigan.

The young women worked on projects in space science, physics, chemistry and engineering/optics during their two-week stay on the

Ann Arbor campus.
Students also used computers to run experiments, graph results and write scientific reports, and attend-ed evening seminars on scientific ethics and careers. Participants stayed in college dormitories during the program.

The Summerscience program is designed to encourage young wom-en to consider careers in science and engineering, and to continue to take science courses in school.

Interest in the arts has enriched her life

By Julie Brown staff writer

When Karen Berrie was growing up, she considered becoming an interior designer. She went on to pursue other options, but her interest in the arts remains strong.

"I always had an interest," said Berrie, a Plymouth Township resident and new board president for the Plymouth Community Arts

She and other PCAC leaders are looking forward to their move into the Wilcox Mill building.

"I think that we're at a very exciting time," Berrie said. The excitement of planning the move "and the challenge of getting into that space, I think, was very inter-

The council's current office is on the second floor of a Main Street building in downtown Plymouth. Leaders hope to house all PCAC activities under one roof at the mill.

THE ORGANIZATION, founded in 1969, is growing and its scope is broader than the founders anticipated, Berrie said.

'We seem to be stretching ourselves more and more to reach more people."

Her volunteer work with the arts council includes having served as a Picture Lady, visiting local schools to tell children about art work. Berrie has also volunteered at the council's art rental gallery, housed upstairs at the Dunning-Hough Library in Plymouth.

She served on the council's board as chairwoman of community programs one year, and last year was the vice president. Berrie and others are organizing a capital fund campaign, with a theme of "Cele-brate the Arts." The kickoff is planned for this fall. Cutbacks in state financing for the arts are having an impact.

"I think more and more private groups are going to have to fill that

CAMPAIGN ORGANIZERS hope to raise money to pay for the mill's renovation. The PCAC took possession of the mill April 1. They're not sure just when the move will be, but most likely it won't be any sooner than 18 months to two years.

"It needs major renovation." Council leaders wanted a building that would be accessible to disabled people, and also were looking for a site that would provide greater visibility. "As our programs grow, we hope to also grow."

The mill's interior has a lot of open space conducive to renovation for shows and classes, she said. The exterior has room for expansion, something that wasn't available at other sites in Plymouth.

BERRIE'S PRIMARY goal during her one-year term as board president is conducting a success-ful capital fund campaign. She also hopes to increase awareness of the organization and its programs.

Another challenge is finding volunteers. With more women embe difficult.

"We're trying to target more short-term things and get people involved that way."

Those one-time projects aren't as time-consuming.

BERRIE WAS born in Virginia, and her family moved to Michigan when she was young. She grew up in Farmington and Livonia, and attended the University of Michigan, earning a bachelor of arts degree in 1967 and a master's in guidance and counseling in 1970.

She worked for two years as a counselor at Vocational Rehabilitation after graduation.

"I just basically chose to stay at home when my children were home.

She later worked part time as a preschool teacher and more recently as a school counselor.

BERRIE'S VOLUNTEER work has been extensive through the years. She served on the board of the local PTO and National Farm and Garden Club of Canton. She has been a Cub Scout den mother and a Brownie and Girl Scout leader.

Berrie, a former Canton resident, has coached girls softball and volunteered as a crisis counselor at Growth Works.

She enjoys reading and currently leads a Great Books discussion group at the Dunning-Hough Library. Berrie's other interests include bicycling, figure drawing and sculpture, pottery and knitting.

Golfing is a real passion in the summertime.

She enjoys gardening and other outdoor activities.

BERRIE AND her husband, Albert, belong to the Founders Society at the Detroit Institute of Arts. They enjoy seeing special exhibits at the DIA.

"We've always been very interested in the arts."

They're season ticket holders for the Ann Arbor Civic Theatre.

Albert Berrie is the director of engineering for FAAC Inc. in Ann Arbor. Their son, David, 25, works at Computer Connection and is a part-time student in computer science at the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

Daughter Kimberly, 21, is a Michigan State University junior working on a degree in personnel management. She plans to apply to veterinary school.

THE BERRIES have lived in the community for 23 years, and Karen Berrie has seen many changes during that time.

"It's not quite the same small town.

The biggest change she has seen has been a shift in downtown shopping from stores for local people to stores designed to attract shoppers from other communities. Such basics as a hardware store and Kresge's are no longer found down-

Club members share commitment to sobriety

The mug rack seems to stretch on forever along the wall. Coffee cups of all shapes, sizes and colors hang in rows on numbered pegs, each representing a dues-paying member of an

And each represents a commitment to a lifetime of sobriety.

The mug rack hangs in the Northwest Alano Club in Westland, which for 21 years has been providing social activities and support programs for recovering alcoholics. The number is a tribute to the power of word of mouth.

"I WAS sent here for the meetings;

I found the club and stayed," Randy Vartanian said. "I stayed because I knew it was a matter of life or gan and after a few phone calls was in touch with the Northwest Alano He'd been drinking for 15 years - and drank daily for 10 of those years when he was introduced to the club in 1984. He was in and out over the next three years before finally joining.

"When I came in here, I knew what I had to do," he said. "I stuck out my hand out and said 'Hi, I'm Randy and I need help."

HELP IS something the Northwest Alano Club has plenty of.

Housed in a wing of the former Perrinville School at Ann Arbor Trail and Farmington Road in Westland, it offers 16 Alcoholics Anonymous, three Alanon and two Adult Children of Alcoholics meetings morning, noon and night seven days

In addition, there are social activities like weekly dances, picnics, coed softball teams, pool and bowling leagues, a lecture series, even a motorcycle club, the Sober Riders.

There is a membership limit of 800. While it did get close to that figure, the club has about 675 active members currently, down from more than 700 because of the summer months.

For Christmas, Thanksgiving and New Year's, there are alco-thons around-the-clock support meetings - and dinners.

IN MANY ways, the inside of the clubhouse resembles any other pri-

THE DUES run $10 a month, but members can save money by paying $50 or $90 in advance for six months or one year respectively. One of the membership perks is coffee for 35 cents a cup.

Dues-paying members also get their own numbered peg and receive special coffee cups marking five, 10 and 15 years of membership.

Only one cup number has been retired, number one. It belonged to the late Bill Kay, who helped found the Northwest Alano Club.

"IT'S A social club for recovering people," said Westlander Bob McCliment, who is currently chairman of the club's board of directors.

"A lot of people go through the 12step program and after the meetings there was no place to go. The club fills that gap."

The club had its start in downtown

Detroit, but 10 members left to open a club in the suburbs. They pooled their money and their talents to remodel a building on Joy Road in Westland.

The Northwest Alano Club opened in 1970 in what became known as the Alano Building.

IT STAYED there until eight years ago, when, in need of more space, the club leased the entire Perrinville School building from the Livonia Public Schools.

However, financial difficulties forced it to scale down the space it had, and now it shares the building with the school district's curriculum department.

McCliment discovered the club 20 years ago. He started drinking at 16 and continued for 15-16 years before he got into the 12-step recovery program in 1968.

"A judge sent me," he said. "I had a choice between jail and meetings, and I'd already been in jail so I took the meetings. I saw people who had something I didn't have, but I didn't

He did decide to go back in 1975 and managed to stay sober for six years. He married and had a family, but when the marriage fell apart, he turned to the club to "help get through it without having a drink." He has stayed sober since 1986.

"IF THERE'S a problem, we encourage people to come in because there's a lot of people here to help, McCliment said.

The judicial system knows about us. They send people here who need to work off time in an atmosphere where they see people having fun without alcohol

"We let them know that there's a life after alcohol, but they have to be willing to work at it."

WHILE THE members share a common goal - life without booze - they also share a common feeling. They care about each other. When one member couldn't afford her mother's burial expenses, club members passed the hat and collected enough to cover the cost, McCliment said.

Although the club doesn't maintain a hot line, it does get "a lot of people calling in for help."

The Northwest Alano Club is at 33344 Ann Arbor Trail, Westland. For more information, call 421-

Church leaders aren't discouraged by slowdown in summer

Attendance at worship services ends to drop a bit between Memorial Day and Labor Day.

"I want people to be responsible about Sunday. In a sense, for what it's worth, I affirm people being gone for the summer," said the Rev. Dr. Thomas Eggebeen, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church

Some members of Eggebeen's congregation have cottages up north and are away on summer weekends. On the other hand, some church members who spend winters in Florida worship on summer Sundays at St. Paul's Presby-

That really does help during the summer months."

There's less of a tendency to feel rushed or distracted during Mass,

"It's kind of the opposite when you have air conditioning. People don't want to leave."

CATHOLICS ARE bound by church law to attend Mass each week, and that's a serious responsi-bility, Wysocki said. He knows it can be difficult for people on vaca-tion to find a church and go to

THAT CAN include attending a service at a church of another denomination, he said.

Attendance at churches in northern Michigan and other vacation areas tends to increase in the summer, said Abbott, who'll soon leave to become pastor of evangelism and outreach at a church in the Grand Rapids area.

Some members of Eggebeen's congregation bring back bulletins from other churches they've visited, so he knows they're still worshiping in the summer.

The church in Plymouth also has a 5 p.m. Saturday Mass, and that remains popular in the summer. St. Michael Lutheran Church started a 5:30 p.m. Saturday service in Feb-service has dropped a bit.

"The number decreased, but people still appreciate it," Abbott said. 'It offers another option."

SOME PEOPLE work on Sundays, and the Saturday service is a help to them, he said. Many Roman Catholic churches have offered a late Saturday service for a number of years, and some Protestant churches have followed suit.

The pastors don't have a problem with worshipers wearing more casual attire in the summer. Even with air conditioning, suit coats can be a bit of a burden in the sum-mer, Wysocki said. He believes casual attire's OK, "but not so informal that it's beach wear."

Attendance does decline at Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic Church in the summer, said the Rev. James Wysocki, pastor of the church in Plymouth. "I think it's a natural phenomenon that all city parishes experience."

Eggebeen put together a sum-mer sermon series, "Remedies for Maladies." based on the Book of Psalms. He has been preaching on such practical concerns as worry, sleeplessness, fear and doubts.

CHURCH LEADERS can use the summer to reach out to non-members, Abbott said. The-church can target certain groups, such as sin-gle parents, rather than just cater to the church's own membership.

We need to think about who it is in our society that hasn't been reached and how to reach them," he said. "There's a large community out there that needs to be reached."

Abbott sees that as an exciting thing; the church hasn't changed in substance, but only in style.

Storm leaves wave of destruction in its path

Many of us still have fresh memories of the early July storm which left a wake of downed trees, darkened houses and dead telephones. More than a few watched their food spoil in dark refrigerators. People with wells had dry faucets. Those stores with power enough to open saw their shelves empty of flashlights, and the sellers of ice almost learned to like storms.

For those who struggled without power to cook, take showers, or do any of the many everyday activities which require electricity it was a week to remember, but not one to repeat. However, in the long run, we did survive had yet to be patched, but for most little more remains than the memory of inconvenience.

The air conditioners are humming again and television again takes place of human conversation. Even the hot water is once again available for showers. The giant camp-out in southeast Michigan gave way to our beloved conveniences.

have already returned to normal. A long time before the winds of July blew down our trees and deprived us of so many creature comforts, another storm hit.

This earlier wave of destruction was not unleashed by Mother Nature but by Uncle Sam and a number of the world's "god fathers." The world knew it as Desert Storm. The winds were hot, the clouds hung low, and trees were not the only living things to be ground into the earth.

We remember what happened to us in early July. It was local enough to have made an impact, and recent enough to still hang in our memory. Do we remember what happened to so many thousands of people who lived in the wake of that bigger storm?

PERHAPS OUR own parades and sense of pride dulled our awareness that many more Iraqi people young and old are still without running water, electric lights, or the refrigerators we take for granted. Detroit Edison would not stand a chance of getting them back on line in a year.

But we were the lucky ones. For most who weathered this storm. lives have already returned to normal.

Apparently, the only real storms are the ones that down our power lines. Local catastrophies always seem more real than those of far away. We might, however, do well to remember that all storms are local to someone. Such awareness may not stop the next tornado, but perhaps it just might make it less palatable to leash storms in anyone's backyard.

Goldfinch breeding just begun

Many species of birds are already raising their second brood of young. Robins and bluebirds have just about ended their breeding season in Michigan. But the American goldfinch only recently started.

American goldfinch, or wild canary to many people, does not start its breeding cycle until there is thistle down or cattail down. Both of these materials are woven into the nest of goldfinch. These light colored downy plant fibers give the nest a silvery appearance. Their fine tex-ture allows the nest to be woven very tightly. Some nests can hold water they are so dense. Young have actually drowned during rainstorms when adults have been unattentive to their nest duties.

Female goldfinch are usually very attentive of their nest. Ninety-five percent of her time may be spent on the nest. She is able to do this because her mate will come and feed her while she remains on the nest. Males are not instrumental in building the nest, but they are important in caring for the female and young.

Incubation of the eggs will last about 13 days. As the young get older and are close to fledging, they no longer enclose their fecal material in a flexible membrane, which the parents then remove. Older nestlings move to the edge of the nest to defe-cate. This behavior leaves some fecal material on the rim of the nest. Abandoned goldfinch nests can be identified by this feature.

The American goldfinch, or wild canary to many people, does not start its breedle cycle until there is thistle down or cattail down. Both of these materials are woven into the nest.

In shrubby fields where goldfinch nest, their presence is not difficult to detect. Males with their bright yellow body and black wings are con-stantly bouncing through the air say-ing "potato-chip, potato-chip." Their undulating flight is very characteristic. They are easily separated from the female in summer, but in winter they both appear in dull yellow-olive colored feather typical of the

After the nesting season goldfinch flock together and feed on various seeds. In the wild they enjoy birch, alder, chicory, and burdock seeds. At bird feeders, they enjoy both sunflower and thistle seeds.

If during the summer you miss the appearance of goldfinch at your feeder, just take a walk through most any field and you will find them in full breeding plumage.

Hundreds of handcarved horses, birds, bears, carousel animals and ducks will fill Eddie Edgar Arena in Livonia Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 3-4, when the Livonia Wood Carvers Club holds its 17th annual woodcarving show.

Two days of fun and camaraderie are sure to prevail as 126 exhibitors from Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Ontario Tennessee, Florida and West Virginia display wood carvings, sell wood-carving tools and supplies, and share carving tips and ideas with visitors as well as Carvers of whittled pieces, wildlife, miniatures, human figures, marquetry, relief, chip carving and decoys will compete for awards.

The show and club are sponsored by the Livonia Parks and Recreation Department.

We like displaying our work to get new people interested in carving to get them interested in something enjoyable," said Livonia resident Ronald Morin, publicity chairman for the show.

Morin has been carving since 1982. He teaches sharpening and wood-carving techinques at the club meetings, and at a 4-H club in Novi.

"Once you get started, there's no end to what you can

"THE THEME of this year's show is horses. We'll have two tables (displaying) every size and shape of horse," said Redford Township resident Bob Brooks, Livonia Wood Carvers Club president.

Pam and Jim Krausman of the Howell Nature Center will visit the show again this year, bringing along their special friends.

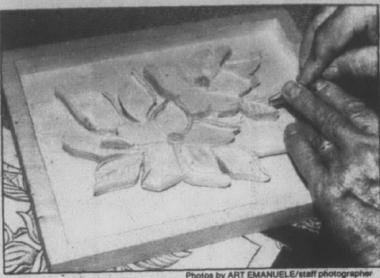

"Pam will have live barn owls, hawks, and a crow who likes to eat fingers," Brooks said. "The Barn Owl is the farmer's dream. They build their nests in barns and they eat the mice."

"The "Karvings for Kids" table is for kids only. Any child can come up and buy things for 50 cents to $6 to give as gifts," Brooks said.

"Sister Mary Magdalene of Duns Scotus will have carvings on display. She's a pretty good carver."

Door prizes, carved by club members, will be given hourly to those attending the show. "Everybody will receive a door prize ticket at the door," Brooks said.

Limited-edition envelopes carry village postmark

By Linda Ann Chomin special writer

DWARD FARHAT'S art is becoming a collector's item, gracing a limitededition envelope with a pen and ink sketch of the Quaker Meeting House at Greenmead Historical Village in Livonia.

The U.S. Postal Service has authorized use of a Greenmead Station postmark on the envelope, illustrated by Farhat to commemorate the 35th anniversary of the Livonia Historical Society, the 145th anniversary of the Quaker Meeting House and the construction of the new Greenmead Post Office on purchased Greenmead land.

The artist will autograph the Quaker Meeting House-illustrated, limited-edition envelopes, with a Greenmead Station postmark, 1-3:30 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 3, in the Michigan Room of the Livonia Civic Center Library, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

Originally, the Livonia Historical Commission commissioned the meeting house illustration in 1974 as part of a bicentennial series, the limited edition of which is on sale at Greenmead.

Art show long on promise; economy tugs at galleries

· Quality art adorns the municipal buildings in Livonia. But only folks who make the rounds get a chance to see it. Still other pieces are in storage. There's no permanent display of city-purchased artwork.

But that'll change in August, thanks to Livonia arts commissioner Dorothy Wilshaw, a master at thinking up ways to bring artwork closer to the community.

She envisions the show giving people "a chance to see what the arts commission is doing and has done over the years." From Aug. 6-23, the Livonia Arts Commission will host a city hall lobby exhibition featuring the best in the city's art collection. It holds lots of artistic promise.

The 34 pieces on exhibit will include lithographs, oils, acrylics, watercolors, paper art, photography and mixed media.

One piece is made of narrow wood strips painted so that it reflects three different pictures, depending on what direction you look at it

Visitors to the show also will be invited to view three-dimensional pieces displayed in arts commission showcases on the second-floor of the city library across the municipal

"A lot of beautiful work belongs to the city," said Wilshaw, who chose the pieces with arts commissioner

the occasion to go to a city office or the library. Unless she can enlist more help, Wilshaw isn't sure she'll push for the show to become an annual event. "There's a lot more work involved than I thought," she said. Though not an artist, Wilshaw is an avid art collector. An arts commissioner just two years, she al-ready has left a lasting imprint on Livonia's artistic landscape.

Only time will tell whether this kind of impromptu summer art show will work in Livonia. But of course, the only way to know for sure is to

A 25-percent jump in sales of glass and wood art has offset the 25-percent drop in sales of paintings, she

Twenty of the 150 artists who exhibit at Chameleon took part in the Ann Arbor Art Fairs last week. A sampling of those 20 artists showed that, for them, "sales are down up to 40 percent over the course of this year," Englehart said.

"The problem we're up against," she said, "is that art is a luxury item. It isn't like clothing. No one has to

At Nelson's Gallery in Livonia, director Laura Hardy has noticed a 15-20 percent drop in lithograph and serigraph sales. "Poster sales and custom framing are still strong but there are no buts about it: People aren't willing to spend like they did last year. We're getting more traffic coming through the gallery but a lot more people are comparative shopping."

Wood-carving fair on weekend

DON DOLAN of Farmington Hills has been carving birds and ducks for about five years. "I enjoy burning the feather detail and I think I enjoy the painting more than anything else," he said.

Southfield resident Bill Lovell, one of the founding fathers of the club, has carved ducks from 100 types of wood. Black Ebony, Sumac, Purple heart, Magasser ebony from the East Indes, Zebra wood from Africa, Coco Bolo from Honduras, and cherry from his own back yard will comprise a 200-duck collection once completed.

"These are only a fraction of the wood in the world," Lovell said. "By selling (starter) blanks, I have the money necessary to buy the different woods. It's a lot of hard work but it's

Compelling tale

Ex-POW releases caged dragons

"Caged Dragons: An American P.O.W. in WWII books LTD., $19.95).

"Caged Dragons: An American P.O.W. in WWII Japan" is not so much something you read as something you experience, so real are its events, so vivid are its characters, so compelling is the story recorded within its pages.

"... psychiatrists expend huge amounts of time and patients' money seeking to identify dragons... so they can be expunged," writes former Michiganian Robert Haney. "Give the dragons a name it is said and they will see a more."

name, it is said, and they will go away. Haney, 70, and now living in California, never needed to conduct such a search, he contends, because he was always able to identify his own personal dragons. They took shape during the invasion of Corregidor in early 1942. They grew to monstrous proportions over the next 41 months months that Haney, then a Marine corporal in his early twenties, spent in Japanese prison camps.

"For four decades after the war, I held the dragons at bay by caging them," he goes on to say. "I did not speak about them, even to my own family. "It was I, of course - not the dragons in the cage — who was held captive . . . That realization and this book took shape together.

"I know there is value for me in putting these words on paper; I hope there is some value for others. The story of POWs . . . has been told neither often enough nor well enough."

WHILE IMPRISONED at camps both in the Philippines and Japan, Haney kept secret diaries and journals in which he recorded his thoughts, feelings and the events he witnessed

He scribbled some entries on bits of toilet paper, others on the backs of canned food labels. Some were destroyed by Haney when his captors began searching prisoners' belongings. He feared that discovery would bring punishment. Others, written during the latter part of his confinement, he managed to keep, and these form a major part of the book.

"Memory can be fallible after half a century," he admits, "but the events . . . remain so vivid as to defy egregious error."

Haney grew up in Big Beaver, Mich. (now Troy), then not much more than two gas stations (one of them run by Haney's father), a dimestore, a pool hall, school and a couple of churches.

At 16, after several clashes with his father, Haney left home and headed west, eventually enlisting in the Marines. He had been in the Marines sot quite four years when he was captured near Corregidor. (By the way, if you're an admirer of Douglas MacArthur, don't expect to find a soulmate in Haney.)

WITH AN eye for the telling detail and a marked gift for scene making, Haney in his book takes readers on an extended visit to several versions of hell - the prison camps where he would spend the remainder of the war.

The scenes and pictures recorded here are not pretty. Prisoners watch as one of their group commits suicide by jumping off a cliff one day. At another time, suffering from dysentery and the intense tropical heat, they travel from one prison camp to another, packed into narrow-gauge

Over 17 days, they are transported from the Philippines to Japan in the airless hold of a Japanese freighter. The hold eventually becomes a kind of human cesspool where the food and water of dysentery-ridden prisoners blend with their own excrement, and the living share their tangled confinement with the dead. Throughout their imprisonment, they contend with cold, heat, illness, starvation, torture. Some are forced to dig their own graves before they are shot.

But the ugliness is not unrelieved. Most of all, it is counterbalanced by the strength and courage of men like Hez Bussey, the Cherokee blinded by a vitamin-deficiency disease in the camps. Or the Spaniard, Angelo Manzano, a merchant marine captured when the freighter on which he worked was sunk in the South Pacific. Or the young lieutenant who sought to relieve the misery of the desperately-ill Haney, fanning his face and talk-ing to him about home and St. Louis beer, as Haney faded in and out of consciousness on the nightmarish freighter crossing.

NOW AND then, one hopes for more clarification of unfamiliar words and phrases here, or the inclusion of a couple of additional basic maps or more careful editing (mostly to eliminate a surprising amount of repetition). But, ultimately, this book's strengths far exceed its flaws.

Obviously, this is a story that could have been overly dramatic, sensationalistic and tainted with self-pity. But Haney's controlled, careful style helps to avoid such literary traps. (His feelings about the Japanese culture that nurtured his captors remain obviously wary; his bone-to-pick with MacArthur sounds a slightly shrill note now and Haney, now an almond farmer and for years a technical writer, studied English and literary criticism at the University of Oklahoma shortly after the war. He briefly taught there before moving on to California. This is his first book.

Boards recognize performance over the call of duty

By Doug Funke staff writer

A willingness to get involved beyond the normal scope of the job is what sets apart Realtors of the Year from their counterparts.

They achieve personally but also reach out to colleagues. They're knowledgeable about real estate issues. They're active promoting the industry and professional associations.

Bill Deacon, Nancy Howell and David N. McNabnay share those characteristics.

Deacon, a broker and part-owner of Century 21 Chalet in Westland, was selected Realtor of the Year by the Western Wayne Oakland Association of Realtors.

Howell, an associate broker and manager of ERA Home & Land in Rochester Hills, was named Realtor of the Year by the Rochester Board of Realtors.

McNabnay, broker and owner of McNabnay & Associates in Bloom-field Hills, was chosen Realtor of the Year by the South Oakland County Board of Realtors.

DEACON, 55, has been in the business for 25 years. The Westland resident specializes in residential sales.
"At this company we're oriented toward training and hiring in new people," he said. "I still do some selling. If there were a highlight of what I do, it would be training and helping other people succeed in real estate."

Deacon is treasurer of his local association and serves on its executive committee, strategic planning committee and membership committee. He's also a director for the Michigan Association of Realtors.

"He's very thorough, dedicated and involved," said Ruth Clevers, Realtor of the Year in 1990 for the Western Wayne Oakland association.

"Bill is very level-headed," said Allen King, president of the association. He thinks out problems, comes up with solutions. He's just in control."

HOWELL, 48, has specialized in the residential market for 14 years. She lives in Rochester Hills.

Howell is currently president of the Rochester Board of Realtors and chairwoman of the Greater Rochester Chamber of Commerce. She has served in all office and committee capacities including long-range planning, education and membership.

"It sounds crazy, but it really is a pleasure," Howell said of her involvements. "It rounds out the whole job. If I just sold real estate and managed an office, it would be tedi-

"In our industry, we have to rely on one another. We work together with our co-agents," she added.

Traditionally, the president of the Rochester Board also is selected Realtor of the Year. Howell served as president and was chosen Realtor of the Year in 1986.

"Nancy doesn't just get involved.
Nancy makes a difference," said Judith Waugh, executive director of the board. "Nancy assesses a situation, decides what needs to be accomplished and sets out to accomplish."

McNABNAY, 45, a Farmington Hills resident, has been active in commercial real estate for nearly 20

"Because of turmoil . . . in the commercial market, ethics and expertise are real important in the broker you select today," he said. "That's what I really try to represent with our company."

McNabnay, second vice president of the South Oakland board, is oversight chairman of the political affairs and community/county relations committees. He serves on the executive committee, bylaws committee and is past chairman of the commercial investment division.

McNabnay also is secretary-treasurer of the state Society of Industrial and Office Realtors.

"He's unassuming, very articulate, and a highly motivated young man," said Maurice Richards, executive vice president of the South Oakland Board.

The Birmingham/Bloomfield Board of Realtors also has selected its Realtor of the Year but won't announce the winner until a September luncheon.

Condo rules apply to renters

We are interested in leasing a condominium. The landlord has handed us the lease, but we are wondering if there are any specific provisions that must be incorporated in the lease to comply with the condominium statute or any of the condominium documents. The landlord didn't want to retain an attorney. We are concerned that he may have missed out on something. I don't want to get into trouble later. Can you help?

The condominium documents provide than any lease arrangement must contain a provision that the condominium co-owner recognizes that the lease is subject to the restrictions, rules and regulations of the condominium and that the proposed tenant agrees to abide by those regulations and restrictions.

The lease should also acknowledge, as a practical matter, that the tenant has received a complete set of the condominium documents including any restrictions that may affect the tenant and that the tenant fully understands the obligations to comply with the condominium documents. If these conditions are met, you will be in compliance under the condominium act and most condominium bylaws. But you should double check the condominium documents to ensure that there are no other preconditions such as a right of first refusal given to the association regarding your proposed lease transaction.

Our condominium project prohibits the placing of "For Sale" signs anywhere in the condominium including windows. Is this an enforceable provision?

An absolute prohibition on signs any place in the condominium may not be enforceable as it may raise reasonable constitutional issues con-

MAKE THE MOVE NOW!!

THERE'S NO BETTER TIME TO BUY

If you've been thinking about moving from your current residence to the house of your dreams or from an apartment to a starter home, this is the time to do it.

- · The selection is excellent.
- · Low interest rates are available.
- There are many financing options available.

Go ahead, make the move.

Now is the right time to buy

NOW is the right time to Buy a Home!

Purchasing a home has always been a wise decision, but current market conditions are making it even more attractive to buy now.

EXCELLENT FINANCING IS AVAILABLE NOW

Interest rates are lower, and mortgage lenders are offering a wide variety of financing options. Low interest rates mean you can get more for your money.

- 30-year fixed mortgages are still available as well as many other financing alternatives.
- First time buyers are encouraged to purchase now through financing packages offering small down payments.

YOUR HOME IS YOUR BEST INVESTMENT

Purchasing a home is the best way to build a solid financial foundation. A home not only provides you with warmth and comfort, it also serves as a secure investment.

- Today, homes in the area continue to be a wise investment.
- Equity in your home can be used as collateral, thus providing you with additional financial security.
- Home ownership provides you with a sizable tax advantage because interest paid on mortgages is fully deductible. Property taxes can also be deducted.

Super job: minding the nuts, bolts

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

When buying a home from a builder - especially in the production home market, but sometimes in the custom home market - the guy with the paperwork with isn't the guy with the hammer.

In fact, chances are the builder won't be on the construction site half the time a house is being built.

The one who does the day-to-day, nuts-and-bolts work is the construction superintendent.

He's the one who pushes the workers, supervises progress, catches and corrects mistakes and makes sure ev-

Darryl Patterson, president of the financial services firm of Patterson, Bryant & Associates in Troy, recently built a home at Vintage Estates in Rochester Hills and can attest to the importance of the superintendent.

"I probably spent a lot more time (at the site) than I needed to," Patterson said.

Birmingham building/development company S.R. Jacobson Development Corp. built his home, and he's very satisfied with the results. But some credit must go to the superintendent, Patterson said.

"Scott (Jacobson) is a very good guy, but Scott's not on the job site," Patterson said.

Patterson said for a person building a home, it's wise to get to know the construction superintendent and become a person to the construction superintendent and not just a faceless name.

Patterson said he feels it's important to establish a "level of trust" because he's the one most responsible for looking out for the homeowner's interests.

BRIAN YAMARINO, construction superintendent for homes built by S.R. Jacobson Vintage Estates in Rochester Hills, said it takes a special type of person to be a construction superintendent.

"A superintendent is a middle-man pin cushion — you're basically a punching bag," he said. Home buyers, builders, contractors - each has its own agenda, and the construction superintendent has to answer to them

Brian Yamarino, construction superintendent for homes built by S.R. Jacobson at Vintage Estates in Rochester Hills, is responsible for all

The hours are long, the stress is incredible and the pace is hectic. Everything that needs to be done can never be accomplished in a 24-four hour period, he said.

People who fail to-accept that fact, he said, generally don't last. Yamarino, a seven-year veteran of the construction game, has been a construction superintendent for two years.

"A superintendent's job has a lot to do with prevention," Yamarino continued. "If nothing went wrong, you wouldn't need the superintendent."

BEFORE ANYONE arrives, the construction superintendent likes to walk through the homes in progress, noting things that have to be taken care of, and planning

JIM RIDER/staff photographe of the homes built by his company in phase one of the project.

"A superintendent that doesn't walk around with a notebook isn't a very good superintendent," he said.

Then it's back to the trailer and more planning and scheduling for the coming week and the week after de-pending on what stage of building the home is in. "That's about the time the workers start coming in."

The most important thing he does, Yamarino said, is meeting with the contractors to discuss the day's work. "The number one reason things go wrong on a construc-tion site is lack of communication."

"I have to stay on top of it — the rule of thumb — don't turn your head and if you see something go wrong, act on it right away, because no matter how bad it is, it will be worse if you have to fix it later.

But that's the thing about this job. No matter what you do, something always goes wrong," he said.

The rest of the day is filled with trying to be everywhere at once, being an extra hand wherever necessary, going over bills, and a lot of screaming and hollering at contractors. The day ends with superintendent back on the phone, calling contractors and suppliers to make sure everything runs smoothly, he said.

So why do they do it? More than anything else, being a construction superintendent gives one a sense of acco

"This was just a piece of ground — now it's a home and people are living there," Yamarino said.

DAN HOUGH, one of two construction superintendents at Stonebridge in West Bloomfield, said hectic days are a way of life for the superintendent. "Basically, what I do is be 100 percent in charge of scheduling, quality control and watching out for foul-ups."

Stonebridge is a joint venture by Nosan/Cohen Associates in West Bloomfield and the Selective Group in Farmington Hills.

Hough, a 10-year veteran of the construction industry, said a construction superintendent is a diplomat, a go-fer, a third hand when needed, the responsible party when something goes wrong and the unsung hero of the building trades — he's generally the difference between a good and bad home.

Hough said another name for a construction superintendent might be fireman.

"It's crisis management - people come to me with a fire and I run around all day putting fires out."

The superintendent's charge is to built the perfect home - which is patently impossible.

"The perfect house has never been built — and I don't think it will ever be built — but it's our job to get it as close as possible," Hough said.

EVEN THOUGH the superintendent is considered a construction job, the contractor's most used tool is the telephone, Hough said. "Keeping yourself out of trouble means keeping in constant contact." Hough said one might think one phone call would be all that's necessary to get a contractor to the job site, but in many cases the superintendent has to make several followup calls. "It's not that they're lazy or bad — contractors are swamped with work and they have to prioritize," he said. As in the rest of life, the squeaky wheel gets the Hough said despite all the hours and all the hassles. superintendents get something out of their work that few can appreciate. "You stand back and look at a half-million dollar home and know you've made a major accomplishment.' It's a certain thrill that those not in the building industry probably wouldn't understand, Hough said.

When it all comes down to the end — you see people walk into a finished home and living there.

Booth lauded for role in construction liabilty law

By Doug Funke staff writer

William D. Booth, a lawyer and senior vice president at Plunkett & Cooney, has been fascinated with construction liability since his first such trial 30 years ago.

at case — the collapse of a high school under construction in Saginaw — was just an appetizer for what was to come involving landmarks like the Pontiac Silverdome, Renaissance Center and Hart Plaza.

Booth, a Bloomfield resident, also was instrumental in promoting a state law limiting liability for design professionals, then successfully defending its constitutionality before the state

Booth was honored recently with the William B. Somerville Award from Schinnerer Management Services, an insurance underwriter, the American Institute of Architects and the National Society of Professional Engineers.

The award is intended to recognize dedication and commitment of individuals who promote a better understanding and enthusiasm for defense of liability claims against design professionals," said Tom Porterfield, a vice president at Schinnerer.

"There's only a very small cadre of attorneys who have taken it upon themselves to invest time and effort to become specialists in this unique law."

PROBLEMS RESULT when plaintiffs take a shotgun approach and haul everyone with a peripheral interest in a project into court, he said.

A law limiting liability for design professional to six years, shepherded through the legislature in 1967 by Booth, was badly needed, he said. An amendment in 1988 extended liability to 10 years in cases of gross negligence.

"A building that has a useful life of say 50 years, without this statute 45 years down the line, you, as an owner, can sue me as the architect," he said. "That is difficult to insure against or protect yourself against. I have no way of insuring myself against that type of loss. That's very important." Design professionals over the years have been dragged into lawsuits on matters outside of their direct control, Booth main-

A current fight is to stop proposed federal regulations that would make design professionals liable for safety on the construction scene.

"We're not against safety on the job," he said. "It's a laudable thing. We should do everything we can. "OSHA wants to increase responsibility for safety on a project to include architects and engineers. They aren't trained in safety matters. They're rarely on a project on a daily basis.

"It . . . gives them exposure . . . when they're not being paid for it and they don't have authority. Now, it's an employee's employer's responsibility," Booth said.

CONTRACT DISPUTES also can provide a steady diet of

"You don't know what's underground no matter how many borings you do. You can't see it all," he said. Booth initially was drawn to construction liability law three decades ago. A school collapsed as it was going up.

"I was called to help one of the parties in the lawsuit. I was born and raised in Saginaw. I happened to know the architect and the young man who was killed. I ended up being the leading attorney for the design group."

The American Institute of Architects liked his work and encouraged him to stay in that line, Booth said.

"I had some engineering background. I understood the principles, spoke the language, learned quickly. Plus I went to semi-nars."

William D. Booth construction liability lawyer

Booth since has been involved in litigation stemming from roof collapses at the Silverdome, the design of the steps at Joe Louis Arena and the fountain at Hart Plaza. Occasionally, design professionals are responsible for problems that develop, Booth said. "We sit down and settle those lawsuits as quickly as we can as quietly as we can," he said.

Since 1968, Booth has missed only one big seminar for lawyers who specialize in construction liability — the Annual Meeting of Invited Attorneys — Porterfield said. That's because he was involved with a trial.

BOOTH IS THE fourth Somerville Award recipient, named for a lawyer who worked to standardize contracts in the construction industry, since it was instituted in 1983.

"We look to individuals . . . who have represented design professionals and helped them avoid liability situations," Porterfield said. And they can get it from all directions - suppliers, the general public, owners, contractors, subcontractors, he added. Booth, for his part, enjoys the work. "I like the idea being connected with a project," he said. "It's kind of fun. It's interesting and intellectually challenging."

His colleagues believe that the award is well placed. "Bill's significant accomplishments and contributions both in the field of law concerning design professionals and to the education of attorneys in the legal profession are responsible for this outstanding recognition," said Joseph V. Walker, managing partner of Plunkett & Cooney, Detroit.

Rental of unsold house can trigger tax problems

(AP) — Many people with an un-sold home feel that they are strapped with a financial and psyical albatross. If you're so afflicted - or worry that you may be because you plan to move soon - renting the old place temporarily may be your best option.

Make no mistake: It's far from an ideal solution. When you become a landlord, you're saddled with a whole new set of record-keeping and tax problems. You'll have to screen tenants. You'll still be stuck with all responsibilities of ownership. And there's no guarantee prices will be better next year.

But renting can be a helpful interim step. Any rental income you receive eases the cash flow nightmare of having to support two mortgages. If your expenses exceed the rent you can command, you may qualify for a tax break.

Before tackling the landlording re-alities of setting the rent, finding tenants and writing a lease, consider the key tax issues you'll confront.

A major concern when you rent your house is to protect your right to roll over the profit and hold off the Internal Revenue Service. If you have owned a number of houses during your homeowning career and used the rollover provision repeatedly, the combined profit from several omes could be at stake. Losing the rollover right could cost you a for-time you buy a replacement home. (You may have as long as four years if you're on active duty with the armed forces.) As long as the new home costs as much as the amount you get from the sale of the old one, the rollover rules will protect you from a tax bill.

Another potential problem is that the rollover break applies only when you move from one principal residence to another. It doesn't apply when you sell a rental property. That means you must be able to show that converting your home is a temporary measure rather than a permanent switch. Proof that you're renting for the short term can include efforts to sell the home prior to renting it and an agreement with your tenant that allows you to show the property before the lease expires.

Although you have to report rent received as taxable income, you may be able to offset most or all of the income by deducting related expenses. Qualifying expenses include rental expenses — the broker fees, management fees, ads, property tax-es, mortgage interest, upkeep and the utilities that you pay.

YOU CAN ALSO deduct depreciation. Homeowners who convert their houses to rentals are often disap pointed by stingy depreciation writeoffs. You write off your basis over 27.5 years, deducting 3.64 percent of the basis each year. Unfortunately, TO AVOID THAT, you have to sell your home's basis may be less -

perhaps far less - than its current

Your basis is essentially what you paid for the house (not including the land) plus the cost of improvements, minus any gain you rolled over from aid for the house (not including the previous homes. If your basis is $100,000, a full year's depreciation would translate to a $3,640 deduction. Although that doesn't cost you anything out of pocket, it saves you more than $1,000 in taxes in the 28percent bracket.

LAUREL

Even if it seems like more trouble than it's worth to figure depreciation on a temporary rental, you can't ig-nore it. The deduction may be small, but the law says your basis will be reduced by the amount of the allowable depreciation whether or not you claim it. That means you're going to have more taxable gain (or less taxsaving loss) when you finally sell the inses are taken into account, many nstant landlords may find themselves in the red. There's no question that when expenses exceed the rental income, renting your home won't hike your tax bill. The big question is whether a loss can be deducted against other income - such as your salary or income from investments to cut your tax bill. There are two potential stumbling blocks between you and a loss deduction. First, the IRS says the temporary rental of a home can't produce a tax loss. If you're treating the home as your principal residence for rollover purposes, the agency says you can deduct rental expenses up to the amount of rental income, but no

But the IRS doesn't always have the last word, and on this issue a court has ruled that as long as a taxpayer was charging a fair rent, a rental loss is deductible. If you find yourself in this position, Brockman, for one, recommends that you claim the loss and take your chances on a possible IRS challenge.

But you could still lose the loss deduction to the passive loss rules. These anti-tax-shelter rules generally allow real estate losses to be deducted only against "passive" in-come — from other real estate investments, for example, or limited likely to allow you to deduct losses on the rental. A loophole in the passive loss rules lets you deduct up to $25,000 of rental losses if you are actively involved in the management of the property

You can meet the active requirement, even if you hire a manage-ment firm to handle the property, as long as you approve tenants, set the rent and approve capital improve-ments. (The $25,000 allowance begins to be phased out when adjusted gross income exceeds $100,000 and disappears completely when AGI passes $150,000.)

When you sell your home for less than your basis, you don't have to worry about whether the rental is temporary because there will be nocapital gain to roll over. But don's expect the federal government to let you write off the loss. The law does not allow the deduction of a loss on aprincipal residence.

Although converting to rental property is often promoted as a way, around that restriction, there's a catch. The basis for figuring your loss begins as the lower of the adjusted basis or the fair market value of the house at the time of the conversion. In other words, any decline in value before you start renting the house would not count when figuring

Thoughtful study of home appliances worth the time

(AP)- Selecting the appropriate appliances for that new house is no easy task. Today's appliances are available in an ever-increasing selection of types, sizes and styles with price tags as far-ranging as the features, reports Better Homes and Gardens Kitchen and Bath Ideas magazine

Once appliance selections are made, consumers will probably have to live with their decisions for a decade or more. These shopping tips will help consumers make choices they can live with well into the 21st century

· Money matters. It's best to es tablish a realistic budget first. This step alone simplifies purchase decle sions and can help folks sort out features that are really necessary

· Check it out - at the library first. Study consumer publications that give brand-name ratings, features available, and prices. Berore goi narrow choices to a few specific brands and models.

· Evaluate durability and serviceability. The quality of the basic components is more important than the number of novelty options. The power output of a microwave oven, dishwasher, and the capacity of a refrigerator-freezer are crucial to the appliance's value and dependability.

9 Mile & Drake, Farmington Hills Baily 1-6, Weekend 12-6, (Closed Thurs.) 474-1060

· Make sure it fits. When shopping for appliances, be sure to have a detailed list of the exact measurements allotted for each appliance. Remember the appliance will be in the kitchen for years, so consider any potential changes in family size, lifestyle, and kitchen design when making capacity decisions.

 Price plus consumption equals cost. The true cost of an appliance should be evaluated by both the sticker price and its energy consumption. Energy Guide labels - a bright yellow tag required on all refrigerators, freezers, and dishwashers - give an estimated yearly cost of operation based on a national average energy rate. The labels also share the highest and lowest estimated yearly costs of operation for similar models

· Shop for the best buys. Don't assume that an appliance warehouse has the biggest bargains. It's true that they buy directly from the manufacturer, but it is also common for a group of smaller dealers to pool resources to buy bigger volumes at discounted rates from the factory,

Find out what is included in the price. If an appliance requires professional installation, ask if it's included in the purchase price.

 In a depressed area on the property, which appears to be a natural water runoff area, the edge of a large barrel is found above ground. When investigated, five barrels that have the word "Toxico" painted on the side are found. They are all rusted and have been leaking their contents into the soil for years. Most of the barrels are now empty. Buyer calls his lawyer, who, in turn, calls the seller and the broker to determine what each knew; or should have known, about the property prior to closing

The buyer says he knows nothing about these problems. The seller says he knew nothing of any prob-lem, as he has only owned the property for three years. The borker says his obligation is only to find a buyer who is ready, willing and able to buy and besides, he knew nothing about the problems.

WHAT RESPONSIBILITY does the commercial real property broker have to know about the environmental condition of the property and to disclose that condition to a potential purchaser?

There is very little question that if the broker knew of the environmental problem discussed above, he has the duty to disclose the problem to the potential purchaser. The recently enacted "Polluters Pay" statutes effective July 1, 1991, codify Michigan case law, indicating that an environment problem must be disclosed to any potential buyer. But whether the broker has an affirmative duty to conduct an investigation of the property where the environmental problem is unknown to the

• Investigate the property and the surrounding area. This does not mean you must be a biological engineer. But rusting drums, oozing green liquid and malodorous vapors are all common sense signs of trouble. Bring these to the attention of the seller and recommend their investigation or disclosure. Be willing to walk away from the sale if no disclosure or investigation is made. Remember that the average cleanup cost of a site runs into millions of

• If the broker represents the buyer, the buyer should be advised to have an environmental audit performed. Regardless of whether the buyer has the audit, the broker should insist that the buyer acknowledge that no reliance will be placed on the broker as to environmental matters, and that the audit has been suggested by the broker, but specifi-cally waived by the buyer, if that is

 If the broker represents the seller, an indemnity provision could be used in both the listing agreement and offer to purchase as to all liability relating to environmental difficulties on the property. This assumes that the seller is financially solvent and available when the need for the indemnification arises.

. The broker should state in the listing agreement and offer to pur-chase that because of the federal and state statutes in this area, both buyer and seller should consult legal counsel. The broker should also suggest that other professionals such as environmental auditors, check if there are any environmental problems with the property.

All possible questions as to a broker's liability and certainly all of the answers are not yet known. What is clear is that if someone is damaged, there will always be the tendency to find someone to sue.
