The appearance of Plymouth's first outdoor street cafe will be delayed at least three weeks. The city commission voted Monday to delay until April a vote to establish a policy to guide the creation of outdoor sidewalk cafes.

It just puts us a couple of weeks further back than we'd rather be," said Penniman Deli owner Russ Web-

Several downtown business leaders enthusiastically support the creation of outdoor cafes downtown, saying they could help spark interest in shopping in Plymouth.

"I'M IN FAVOR of the concept," said city commissioner Jerry Vorva. "But are we doing this the right

City attorney Ron Lowe said the policy statement contained much arbitrary language, including terms like "ample space.

Also, should the city decide to revoke a outdoor cafe permit for violations, "You don't have a policy established on how that revocation will take place," he said.

We're looking at a little bit of a time bind," Mayor Robert Jones told commissioners, as Webster seeks to have the Penniman Deli outdoor cafe ready for warm

This is not a Penniman Deli request, this is really a policy, we're looking at this for everybody," commissioner Bill McAninch said.

Lowe asked commissioners to submit questions on the policy, which is to be revised and again presented to the commission. Box Bar owner Chip Falcusan has said he's also interested in creating an outdoor cafe this year.

Bill aimed at local control of oil, gas drilling

State Rep. Georgina Goss, R-Northville, has sponsored a legislative package that would allow townships and counties to adopt ordinances regulating oil and gas drilling, and the operation of injection wells. Southeastern Michigan citizens are becoming increasingly concerned about the lack of regulations over the growing oil and gas drilling industry," Goss said. "Township and county residents have virtually no control over either direct drilling or injection drilling, which deposits oil byproducts from drilling into resi-dential property. This legislation would give counties and townships the same authority cities already have to regulate this field that directly affects their health and environment

House Bills 5604-6 would:

 Allow townships and counties to regulate hours for transporting to or removing oil, gas or brine from the wells; determine access routes; regulate site appearance; and file information about the disposed substance with the local health depart-

• Require a surety bond for all

• Restrict the placement of wells.

· Require a detailed drilling operations agreement.

• Provide for compensation to land owners for property damage due to contamination, as well as clean-up costs.

· Provide for arbitration in the event of drilling operation disputes between surface rights owners and mineral rights owners

The lawmaker said the hazards from direct and injection drilling include potential groundwater and land contamination, excessive odors. noise, dust, structural damage to

The many problems associated with gas and oil drilling operations have long raised the issue of safety, and injection wells pose another set

buildings and decreased property of hazards," Goss said. "In addition to the need for greater federal and state recognition that oil and gas drilling require stronger regulation, affected counties and townships should have a voice in regulating

"This legislation is a major step toward ensuring some much-needed local control and safeguards over an industry that directly affects people's health and property.

The lawmaker said the hazards from direct and injection drilling include potential groundwater and land contamination, excessive odors, noise, dust, structural damage to buildings and decreased property values.

"The many problems associated with gas and oil drilling operations have long raised the issue of safety, and injection wells pose another set of hazards," Goss said. "In addition to the need for greater federal and state recognition that oil and gas drilling require stronger regulation, affected counties and townships should have a voice in regulating these operations.

"This legislation is a major step toward ensuring some much-needed local control and safeguards over an industry that directly affects people's health and property."

You're holding next year's tax deduction in the palm of your hand.

Even though you may still be struggling with your 1991 taxes, it's not too soon to think about your 1992 deductions.

Now that the tax deduction on consumer loans has been phased out, borrowing on the equity you have built up in your home is a bigger tax advantage than ever. And the interest expense on a home equity loan is 100% tax deductible in most cases.

Old Kent is waiving all fees on Home Equity Loans.

The equity in your home can help you put your hands on the money you need for the things you want, like a new car, a boat or even tuition for college. With a Home Equity Loan from Old Kent Bank, you can borrow for any of your major credit needs, and there are no annual fees to pay.

So go ahead and think about next year's deductions this year. And then take advantage of Old Kent's no-fee Home Equity Loan — so that next tax season, you'll have a firm grip on some cold cash.

Scandals during 1991 deprived House members of their bounceproof brand and see-no-evil credit politics at their Capitol restaurant. But the congressional budget remains fat with perks.

It funds on-site doctors' care and low-premium, taxpayer-subsidized healthcare plans; domestic and foreign travel, where the line is blurred between work and play; parking comes free at National Airport; expense accounts liberal enough to reimburse all that can be claimed as official business; and many more privileges that set lawmakers apart from the way most of their constitu-

The bill allots House members $537,480 in payroll for up to 22 per-sonal staff aides. That figure is near-ly $62,000 or 12 percent, higher than the $475,000 allotment in effect at the end of 1990.

It gives senators a staff payroll increase of between $42,000 and $165,000. The average senator has 41 personal aides paid $1.86 million annually with specific totals varying

The fiscal 1992 house budget provides $80 million for members' free postage. In this year of congressional redistricting, the franking allowauce of about $176,000 per member will help incumbents to promote themselves in new territorities at taxpayers expense. The Senate postage figure is $32 million, an average of $320,000 per senator.

Here are the issues that make up the 1991 Comfort Index votes show on the accompany chart.

· To cut mail costs: By a vote of 198-277, House members refused to cut the outlay for their postage from $80 million to $59 million (HR 2506; June 5, 1991).

· To curb spending growth: By a vote of 171-255, the House refused to trim 1.4 percent from the 1992 legislative branch appropriations bill. The proposed cut did not address Senate funds. (HR 2506; June 5,

To pass congressional budget: The House voted 308-110 to pass the 1991 legislative branch budget of nearly $1.81 billion. Senate funds of about $500 million were added later. (HR 2506: June 5, 1991).

 To approve committee budgets: The House voted 363-58 to approve a $60.8 million measure to fund about half the cost of its 180 committees and subcommittees in calendar 1991. (House Res. 92; March 20, 1991). • To close house bank: The House voted 390-8 to close its bank and probe an auditor's finding of large checks bounced without penalty. (House Res. 236; Oct., 3, 1991).

• For spending growth: By a 56-

40 vote, the Senate killed an attempt to trim spending on its 19 comm tees from $118 million to $111 million in fiscal 1992-1993. (Senate Res. 62; Feb. 28, 1991).

 To expand committee staffs: The Senate killed, 55-41, an amendment to freeze committee staffs at the 1990 complement of 1,203 (Senate Res. 62; Feb. 28, 1991.).

 To approve committee budgets:
The Senate voted 72-22 to approve a fiscal 1991-1992 committee budget that was up 6 percent over 1989-1990. (Senate Res. 62; Feb. 28, 1991).

• To raise senators' pay: By a vote of 53-45, senators raised their pay from $101,900 to $125,000 and renounced honoraria as an income supplement. (HR 2506; July 17,

• To exempt Congress: The Sen-ate voted 61-38 to keep members of Congress exempt from several major laws affecting employees, such as occupational safety and health, collective bargaining and civil rights statues.(S 1745; Oct. 29, 1991).

Kelley announces bid for sheriff

Kevin Kelley is throwing his hat - and everything else - in the ring in his challenge to Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano.

Kelley, 33, is giving up his $43,000plus seat on the county commission to run against Ficano in the Aug. 4 Democratic primary.

"With my background in govern-ment at all levels, I feel I can bring a lot to the job," the Redford resident

Kelley said he expects to mount a "six-figure" campaign against the two-term incumbent

Democratic primary. Wayne County Sheriff's Local 502, the county deputies' union, is "carefully considering" Kelley, union president Don Cox said. We'll take it to the membership at the end of the month," he said. The union has been at odds with Ficano for filling vacancies on his administrative staff, rather than using the money on training and equipment for jail deputies.

Kelley criticized the sheriff for being "more involved with politics than with policy".

"ONE THING I've learned from my father (longtime Detroit councilman Jack Kelley) is that if you take care of your job, the politics will take care of itself," he said. "I think the sheriff looks at things the other

Clinton eases, Bush breezes in local voting

STUDENTS AND THEIR PARENTS

As part of our continuing commitment to community service, we want to help high school students select courses which will prepare them for academic success at Wayne State

Recommended Course of Study

University.

1. ENGLISH (4 years recommended) Students entering the University should be able to (1) understand the main and subordinate ideas in written works, lectures and discus-sions; and (2) conceive ideas about a topic and organize them for presentation in verbal and in written forms, using standard English sentences. Effective use of the English language is central to one's ability to succeed at the University and in the professions and occupations for which our students are pre-

2. MATHEMATICS (4 years recommended)
Entering students should be able to (1) add, subtract, multiply and divide using natural numbers; (2) use the mathematics of integers fractions and decimals; (3) understand ratios, proportions, percentages, roots and powers; and (4) perform the mathematical operations of algebra and geometry. Most careers for which University students are preparing require mathematical competency, and an increasing number of careers in the science and technical curricula require advanced preparation in mathematics.

3. BIOLOGICAL AND PHYSICAL SCIENCES (3 years recommended) Students should be acquainted with (1) concepts of matter, energy, motion and force, and the natural laws and processes of the physical sciences in general; (2) the science of life and living matter with special attention to growth, reproduction and structure; and (3) laboratory methods. A basic understanding of the physical and biological sciences is essential for many fields of University study, and is necessary if one is to comprehend our world and the impact of science and technology on it.

4. SOCIAL SCIENCES/HISTORY (3 years recommended) Students should study different cultures and societies-their social systems, customs, communities, values, economics, governments and politics. Knowledge of the major events and ideas that have shaped our nation and its place in the world is a necessary foundation for college study in several subjects. Students should be able to make inferences about how the past affects the present and future course of the world. The social sciences, by teaching the use of critical analysis, develop an understanding of society and current events that is essential for an informed citizenry in an open society.

5. FOREIGN LANGUAGES (2 years recommended) Proficiency in a foreign language not only introduces students to non-English speaking countries but also heightens awareness and comprehension of one's native tongue. Language is the basic instrument of thought; the ability to read. speak and write a foreign language permits one to understand another culture in a more fundamental way. Foreign language competency will open up career opportunities denied to those without it,

6. FINE ARTS (2 years recommended)
Students entering the University should be acquainted with the visual and performing arts through study and/or participation. Several academic disciplines at the University require high levels of skill in the arts. Study in this area enriches life and heightens one's sense of beauty and aesthetic perception.

7. COMPUTER LITERACY Some formal instruction in the logic and use of computers in problem solving and data retrieval is increasingly important in all fields of study.

We suggest that this letter be clipped from the newspaper, and we urge students to review and discuss these recommendations with their parents and school counselors as they develop plans of study for high school. If you have any questions, please call the Wayne State University Director of Admissions at 577-3577.

With best wishes for a rewarding and productive future.

Man ordered to trial in ex-boss's killing

By Darrell Clem staff writer

A Canton Township man accused in the shooting death of his former boss, Charles W. Piper of Westland, has been ordered to stand trial for Frederick Morris, 33, was bound over for trial in Detroit Recorder's Court during Monday's conclusion of a four-day preliminary examination in 29th District Court in Wayne.

After hearing closing arguments from attorneys, Judge Carolyn Ar-chbold decided there was probable cause that Morris committed crimes resulting in charges of first-degree murder, felony murder, armed robbery and a felony firearms violation.

Wayne police found 53-year-old Piper shot to death at his Wayne business, Chuck's Cycle Service, about 5:30 p.m. on Jan. 5, a Sunday. Police arrested Morris after a lengthy investigation. He has maintained his innocence.

Piper's fiancee, Sharon Piper, who has the same surname, collapsed in tears in the arms of friends following Archbold's ruling.

Chuck might have the last word in this yet," she said. "I just pray that justice will be served.

In asking that Morris be bound over for trial, assistant Wayne County prosecutor Michael Reynolds pointed to court testimony that Morris had threatened to "blow his (Piper's) head off" and "get even."

Piper and Morris had been named in a lawsuit filed by Morris' girlfriend, Sharon Broughton, who claimed that her son, Frank, had been injured in an accident at Chuck's Cycle Service. Other testimony indicated the child, who had been burned, was injured elsewhere.

COURT TESTIMONY revealed that Morris had become worried about the lawsuit and its potential costs. Witnesses also testified that Morris had planned to open an engine repair shop and that he needed money to get started. Reynolds stressed that Morris knew of a cash box, containing about $3,000, that Piper kept at his motorcycle shop.

Moreover, Reynolds noted that Morris had become angry last summer, when he was fired by Piper.

Testimony from Morris' friend Bob Sikes indicated that Sikes had given Morris a .38-caliber handgun two days before Piper was killed by two shots - one in the face and one at the base of his skull. Reynolds and Wayne police believe the same gun was used in Piper's death.

Workers at Chuck's Cycle Service testified that Morris had visited the shop on Jan. 5 - the same day Piper was killed. They said he wore a latex glove, though some acquaintances had seen him wear gloves on previous occasions because of a skin con-

Morris' arrest last month in the Ottawa County jail came after a prisoner there, Salvadore Friare, told authorities that Morris had talked about Piper's death. Morris had been jailed in Ottawa County on a car theft charge.

JOAN MORGAN, Morris' attor-ney, called Reynolds' case "extraordinarily weak" and accused him of trying to tie together "little pieces of testimony" to make Morris appear

Morgan noted that police didn't find a gun, fingerprints or any other evidence directly linking Morris to Piper's death.

New call service offers access without listing in phone book

Bell customers now can choose to allow Information operators to give out their telephone numbers to callers but remain unlisted in the telephone directory.

Bell's "semiprivate listing" service started last week.

"We're happy to offer customers this option, which offers the privacy of not listing their numbers in the directory, but gives access to their numbers through Informa-tion," said Pat Black, product manager for listing services

Black said neither "semiprivate" nor "private listing" service (non-published) would prevent customers' numbers from being displayed when they call businesssuch as mail-order firms or credit card companies - with automatic number identification.

Similarly, semiprivate and private listings will be displayed if the customer calls someone who has "caller ID" service and a number display device.

Speedy reply 55 is too slow for X-ways

HIS IS TRULY the Age of the Criminal. In metropolitan Detroit, where auto plants are closing and crack houses are opening, the good citizens are constantly under siege by the lawless.

We writhe under the onslaught of dope-dealing, carjacking, murder, rape, child molestation, embezzlement, armed robbery, assault, house-breaking and other assorted acts of dishonesty piled up almost beyond society's ability to comprehend it.

Faced with this overwhelming criminal activity, it isn't comforting to know that the police and courts in some of our Wayne County communities are cracking down on freeway speeders.

Oh yes, as detailed in a press report recently, suburban cops and the Michigan State Police now view expressways like I-96 and I-275 as happy hunting grounds for nabbing those bad folks among us who might just be going a bit faster than the ridiculously low 55 mph limit.

POLICE AND judges are quick to give the old

"speed-kills-and-we're-just-saving-lives" routine, but that doesn't wash in an age when limited-access, high-tech highways and the cars that travel them are engineered for much higher speeds.

The speeding fines (Has anybody noticed how hefty they're getting? They start at 60 bucks in Plymouth!) also provide needed revenue for the communities lucky enough to have such an interstate highway.

That was pointed out in the press report. Give our communities half a point for owning up to how much revenue such tickets raise, and then put cops back to work solving real crime. We think that going 65 or 70 mph under optimum conditions on a highway designed for such speeds hardly qualifies as real crime.

You speed through a sub or other congested area and you deserve the ticket, fine and points. But the expressways are a different matter. Reasonable and proper should be the only speed

Spring time

Greening of grass, economy

HE ARRIVAL of spring in Michigan is usually pretty much of a moot point. It's rooted between St. Patrick's Day and Opening Day, and it's usually marked by a snow storm. But this year we are putting more stock in it.

It's been a tough economic year for everybody, with General Motor's grim announcement that Willow Run will be closed. But somehow when spring does come, and its rains wash away the salt on the roads, things look a little better.

The warmer weather slows down strollers, and there's time to look in the display windows of merchants.

It's time to put away the wool clothing of winter and pull out the spring wardrobe. That always means a few purchases.

Spring is the time to walk around the house and see what damage the long winter did to the homestead and the garden. That leads to a trip or two to the hardware store or lawn and garden center.

WHEN IT comes to the car, washing the winter gunk off it reveals the dings and rust spots. And it often leads to a trip to a car lot.

Warmer weather makes us feel better; it makes us feel that everything will be all right after all.

This is especially true for us folks in Michigan who tend to hibernate from the first of November until the first crack of the bat at Michigan and Trumbull.

Baseball played on grass means that the golf and fishing seasons are on their way.

Spring is hope. And that's something we all need this year.

Act now Make assisted suicide illegal

HE ARRANGED deaths of two women in an Oakland County park and the subsequent charges of open murder against Dr. Jack Kevorkian have brought the debate over the ethics and legality of assisted suicide back to the courts.

But Michigan legislators still have not passed legislation to address assisted suicide as separate from murder. And unless they do, the courts could be seeing a lot of Dr. Kevorkian or others who insist that assisted suicide should be legal.

The Legislature has come up with two bills that specifically address assisted suicide as a four-year felony, not murder. Legislators should adopt those bills into law, with a few changes, and soon.

THERE IS precedent for making assisted suicide a crime distinct from murder. Laws similar to bills working their way through both chambers in Lansing are already on the books in 22 states.

The proposed bills make it a felony punishable by up to four years in prison and a $2,000 fine to intentionally provide the means by which another could commit or attempt to commit suicide. Anyone who knowingly or intentionally causes another to commit suicide, by force or duress, would be guilty of murder under the bills.

The major flaw of the bills is that they would consider withholding medical treatment under direction as assisting a suicide. That practice is currently allowed under right-to-die statutes and should not be changed.

An assisted suicide law should address the fundamental differences between murder and "mercy killings" while addressing the legitimacy of an individual's right to commit suicide if he or

SUICIDE IS not a crime in this country, but many other states have already recognized that bringing another person into the picture is dangerous because it forces that person to take responsibility for another's death.

There is a large body of psychological literature that suggests suicide assistance may well be a response to coercion and manipulation exerted by the suicide "victim" against the assistant.

A relative or friend of someone in great physical pain could be made to feel guilty or responsible for the plight of that person and could be coerced into helping that person commit suicide.

The argument that a "qualified" assistant, such as a doctor, could make sure nothing goes wrong with a suicide has two flaws. It qualifies someone to validate a judgment that only the individual can make. And it presumes that with such an assistant the suicide could not be botched. There is no reason to believe an assisted

There is precedent for making assisted suicide a crime distinct from murder. Laws similar to bills working their way through both chambers in Lansing are already on the books in 22 states. suicide couldn't go wrong. If it did, the assistant might make sure the act is completed. That action would become something other than assisting a suicide

LEGALIZING ASSISTED suicide would obscure the differences between murder and suicide. If there were only two people involved and one of them dies, there are no other witnesses and determining whether there was an assisted suicide or a murder would be next to impossible.

Opponents argue that such a law would punish someone, for instance, who intentionally leaves a bottle of sleeping pills out at a spouse's direction to make the suicide easier.

The law would make it up to a four-year crime. Circumstances, however, could warrant a lighter sentence.

The House is also considering a bill that would create a commission on suicide and one that would make assisted suicide legal. These would both do great harm.

CREATING A commission would only serve to put off a decision with no sure prospect that, after some length of time (the bill suggests two years), there would be some recommendation concerning the question. The Legislature has already wasted too much time and must address assisted suicide now.

The bill to legalize assisted suicide would have doctors determine the medical condition and life expectancy of someone asking to die. That is contrary to the position taken by the Michigan State Medical Society, which says "Physicians must not perform euthanasia or participate in assisted suicide."

The Legislature should pass a sensible law making assisted suicide illegal and do it soon. Otherwise, the state could become a mecca for anyone and everyone wanting help to commit

Recession to change auto industry, labor

LAST WEEK I suggested the closure of Willow Run symbolized the fundamental changes now shaking the core of Michigan's political economy.

Aggravated by the recession, the basic changes now shaking the American auto industry will in time redefine the relationship between our state's two most powerful institutions: the Big Three and organized labor.

Because Michigan's economy is being transformed, so too will our politics.

GOV. JOHN Engler, Michigan's first radical governor since G. Mennen Williams was elected in 1948, seems to understand this.

Engler argues that because our economic base is crumbling, Michigan is no longer a wealthy state with high personal incomes. The state cannot, therefore, afford to sustain its historic level of government activity at an overall tax burden that citizens are willing to accept.

The policies adopted by the Engler administration follow logically. Slash government programs to cut costs, especially now that the recession has cut income so drastically. Focus what government can spend on education in order to make Michigan more competitive at home and abroad. Cut taxes, especially those on real proprety, to improve the climate for business growth.

Informed by a conservative ideology that holds that government is always the problem and never a solution, Engler's prescription for a state in turmoil is classic supply side politics.

As part and parcel of the fundamental readjustment in Michigan's political economy, our current political system will have to change, too.

FOR DEMOCRATS, the best news is Gov. Engler's policies are more popular than he is. Some are even beginning to realize that ceaselessly calling the governor "mean-spirited" does not itself constitute a credible policy alternative.

Beginning with State Rep. William

Keith's underreported set of hearings on how to improve the skills levels of those who leave school and thereby Michigan's economic competitiveness, Democrats are developing an agenda built around the idea of "government as investor."

Instead of spending money solely on income supplements, insist that it be accompanied by job training. Instead of giving expensive real estate tax breaks to employers, find out what skills they need and get the K-12 system to provide them. In the words of a bishop friend of mine, "Instead of giving a hungry man a fish, give him a fishing rod and teach him to fish."

This process will take a while, if only because the components of the Democratic coalition are less coherent than the Republicans, and getting agreement from them takes time. But now there is some chance for a genuine policy debate by the time we elect a governor in 1994.

BOTH PARTIES, however, are going to have to realize that in politics, as in economics, it cannot be "business as usual." Current fear and loathing of the political system as it presently works is higher than I have ever seen it.

Philip

Most folks believe (correctly, in my view) that the political system is largely designed to serve the interests of a bunch of professional politicians, interested mainly in getting (re)elected, bought and paid for by money from the special interest groups.

Speak to some thoughtful political insiders, people who have devoted years to public service, and you get the sense that they, too, agree. But they don't know how to change from inside the system that has sustained them for so long.

They'd better think fast. As part and parcel of the fundamental readjustment in Michigan's political economy, our current political system will have to change, too. Otherwise, the anger and alarm that so many people are now feeling will be expressed in extra political — and very dangerous — ways.

Black opinions don't get respect

MY WORK BUDDY, Barry, came bounding into my office last week, clutching a copy of the Eccentric. He was excited — agitated really. I could see his jaw muscle working in the side of his face as he waited for me to hang up the phone. As I turned to greet him with a "Good-morning-how's-business," he blurted out, "I have to talk to you about your column," pointing to the newspaper he held.

"I mean, you write some good stuff and make me think about things the way I normally wouldn't, but, I mean, why do you have to put that line at the bottom about one black man's opinion? Why do you have to call attention to your race? Why can't you just be a man with an opinion; why do you have to be a black man?"

Well, after my mouth had closed, after five seconds of astonishment at his outburst, all kinds of impulses came to mind: Defend my position; explain the point of the statement again (as I had done in my inaugural column); drop the phrase because if it were causing people to turn off, then maybe it wasn't worth it; get angry at his attack. But then as his words penetrated the fog of my defense mechanism, I realized that he was still speaking, and I tuned back in.

"YOU KNOW, Jeff," he said, "I don't look at you as a black man, I mean, I respect you. I know you and I know you're not a racist. But when you put 'black man' at the end of your column, when you bring race into what otherwise are good ideas, you sound like you have a chip on your shoulder. You sound like a rac-

I nodded my head in acknowledgement of his position. I told him I'd think about what he had said and went back to the business of lining up guests for the next installment of my show "Transition." My mind, though engaged with the task of producing a quality TV program, would not disengage from Barry's comments.

One in particular stood out, glared out actually, almost as if it were highlighted with a bright red border: "I don't look at you as a black man, I mean, I respect you."

Respect. Perhaps the most critical ingredient in the mix of a satisfying life for all adults is largely lacking in the life of most black Americans.

The stereotypical responses of most of America toward African-Americans in this culture are not compatible with the notion of respect. Welfare cheats, drug addicts, undereducated, ghetto dwellers, lazy, shiftless, illiterate, violent, oversexed baby makers. These images perpetuated in virtually all media do not engender respectful attitudes. What Barry was really saying to me was that I don't fit the stereotype of "Black Man," and by identifying myself that way, I somehow had diminished the value of my commentary.

THE TRAGEDY that is the ultimate outcome of this type of thought process is already occurring in our nation. A generation of young, black Americans finds little to respect in its own culture and looks to Africa for its historic roots.

A generation of young, white Americans has bought the affirmative action myth that blacks with responsible careers achieved that success due to some sort of quota.

As a black person in our melting pot culture, respect is given to athletes and entertainers. Perform for the greater enjoyment, and honors and cash are freely given. But if you are an average looking, sounding, acting African-American, your contribution, your motivation is suspect.

My work buddy, Barry, means well. He's a nice guy and I like him; I don't look at him as a white man, just a man. But it's different for the Barrys of this world. Disrespect is not a birthright as it is for those born with black skin, and until that changes, I'm gonna keep signing off my column with: This is just one black man's opinion. What's yours?

Trustee responds to conflict of interest charge

special writer

Recent news accounts and editorials in your newspaper have accused me of a conflict of interest because of my employer's involvement on the Western Townships Utilities Authority project without any investigation as to the facts of the selection of the firm. Your comments, accusations and innuendo leave me no alternative other than to write this letter to stress the facts of this matter:

. It is a fact that Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc., my employer, has been in the wastewater systems design engineering business since 1923.

• It is a fact that Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc. is very well qualified to design this project for WTUA.

• It is a fact that Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc. is one of the top five consulting engineering firms in Michigan in the design of wastewater systems. A check with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources would verify this contention.

• It is a fact that Ayres, Lewis,

guest column

Norris & May Inc. has received awards from the Michigan Consulting engineers Council each of the last five years for excellence in design of wastewater facilities.

· It is a fact that Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc. submitted a Proposal of Service (bid) to WTUA to design this system, and that their selection was based entirely on the qualifications of the firm.

• It is a fact that I, as a trustee in Plymouth Township, had no role in the selection of Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc. as the engineering consultant for WTUA.

• It is a fact that I never voted for the selection of Ayres, Lewis, Norris, & May Inc. as a consulting engineer for WTUA or Plymouth

 It is a fact that Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc. has never done any work for Plymouth Township for which I voted.

· It is a fact that when WTUA selected my employer as the consultant for this project, I disclosed that selection in public, and I have abstained from any votes on the Plymouth Township Board that had any relationship to WTUA. Minutes of the township board meetings will verify this fact.

• It is a fact that the fee of Ayres, Lewis Norris & May Inc. to design the project is 4.85 percent of the construction cost, well below the recommendations of the American Consulting Engineering Council of 5.7 percent for a project of this size.

• It is a fact that WTUA has paid Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc. a fee much lower in percentage than that paid by Wayne County to its engineering consultant for the design of the "Super Sewer."

• It is a fact that the WTUA project is proceeding on schedule and below budget, and it will be completed on schedule with no over-

In addition to the above facts, I believe it is unfair and unjust for one of the top consulting engineering firms in Michigan to be denied a contract because one of its employees sits on the Plymouth Township Board. Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc. has never done any work for Plymouth Township, and I as a trustee have never voted to award Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May Inc. any projects. Any allegations to the contrary are malicious, false and self-serving

I have served the Plymouth Township community for over eight years with due diligence. I find it unacceptable to be accused of a conflict of interest if my employer receives a contract which I had no role in awarding. I believe my record is clear, and I have served the public in our community well. The record

Resident defends project

On Monday, March 2, the Detroit Water Board, which governs the sewer rates of Super Sewer, was granted a better than 10 percent increase in sewer rates effective August 1992. Reported the same day was the death of bald eagle hatchlings due to toxic poisoning of the Detroit River. The major contributing factor of this poisoning being the Detroit waste water treatment plant.

This is exactly why the officials of Plymouth Township, Canton Town-ship and Northville Township developed Western Township Utility Authority to build their own sewer system. We will not be subject to the ever increasing rates and the upgrade costs that will be necessary to bring the old Wayne County System into conformity with new water quality standards.

The fact that Plymouth Township is a desirable and pleasant place to live is because of the fiscal responsibility and forward thinking of the people that have been representing the Township for most of the last 20 years. An example of this is that Plymouth Township has one of the lowest tax rates in western Wayne

Prospective candidates are doing a great disservice to the people of Plymouth Township by using the sewer issue to further their own personal causes instead of looking at what is the best fiscal and environmental policy for the people of the Township of Plymouth.

I was reading the financial condition of the Plymouth-Canton schools and tears started to form in my eyes.

I suddenly remembered that the school board gave the teachers a 71/2 percent raise each year for the past two contracts (six years) and pay $7,000 per year to lease a new Cadillac for the superintendent. My tears suddenly dried up. How many taxI wish my income would increase 45 percent in six years. I know how I can do it. Being self-employed I can work 90 hours per week.

Canton committee trying to save Hough School

By Virginia B. Parker special writer

It's more than an history that makes Hough School important to Canton

The "Little Red School House" on Warren near Old Haggerty Road is the only landmark that connects newer residents to historic Canton.

More than 2,000 children attended the school during the 24 years the buiding housed the Plymouth Co-op Nursery School.

During those years, the building was preserved by parents who performed the maintenance.

The school's history and the community's commitment to education date back to 1827 before Canton was

THAT FIRST school, undoubtedly a log cabin, took its name from the family on whose property the school was located.

The school comprised its own district, paying a teacher, Mary

Barber, $32 for 1827. They also paid $11.67 to Emily D. Brown. A broom purchased that year cost, curiously, one schilling.

During the 1890s, the district purchased a parcel of E. Anderson's orchard across Warren and built the red schoolhouse. A second room was added in 1942 to accommodate two teachers. Hough served as an elementary until 1956.

School records have been losts, possibly in a fire that destroyed Bartlett School in the 1960s.

But there former students with memories, like Flora Thorman who attended the school for eight years starting in 1919.

"The building was heated by a lit-in a shed outside. One of the other students, Wilfred Bunyea, used to ride his Shetland pony to school, and the children played with it during recess," she said, and added that parents were afraid the pony might kick the children, so her classmate didn't get to ride his pony to school for Thorman's father was a student at Hough when he was 15 years old and had just arrived from Germany.

'He went to school for one winter, and that's where he learned to speak English," she said, adding that he wen on to serve on the school board. His director's book is in the possession of Canton's Historical Society.

HOUGH HAS been designated by the Canton Historic District Commission the the Township Board as a historic site.

It's one of five one-room schoolhouses in Canton. The others are: The Canton Center School, which serves as the Historical Museum;

The Cherry Hill School, which has been restored; Sheldon School, which is being restored; and the Hanford and Hough schools, which are privately owned.

The Committee to Save Hough School hopes this historic school can yet have a bright future, so it is exploring avenues for preservation and adaptive reuse of the building.

The committee would like to hear from anyone who attended Hough school, or who otherwise has a fondness for this treasured landmark and its place in the community's heritage. Bonnett captures Class A crown

By Dan O'Mears

Saturday was pay-off day for Dan Bonnett.

The Plymouth Salem senior, having sown the seeds of success the last four years, reaped his reward by winning the 125-pound state championship in the Class A wrestling finals.

"It was four hard years," said Bonnett after winning his last match 9-3 over Andy Behm of East Lansing in Battle Creek's Kellogg Arena.

"It was a lot of tough work, but it was worth it. This is what you're working for every day when you go running. It's makes four years of hard work pay off."

Salem teammate Scott Martin was fifth at 119, and Plymouth Canton also had a pair of state placers in senior George Young (171) and junior Nick Spano (130), who were third and sixth, re-Bonnett, who went all the way in his first state-meet appearance, didn't have to wrestle longtime rival Mike Scully of Romulus, who was in the opposite half of the bracket. He was upset by Behm 3-1 in the second round and finished third. Bonnett had beaten Scully in the regional final two weeks

WE'VE BEEN such great rivals - almost hating each other - and we didn't even know each other," Bonnett said, adding it was best that way Dan Bonnett (front) wrestles Andy Behm for the Class A chamfor competitive reasons. "Now we're friends. We can kick back and talk about things.

wrestling

"He's been making me work hard, too. I knew we had the hardest regional and winning our region helped.

Bonnett (46-1) said he was awed by being in the state finals for the first time, but he avoided a first-round mistake and started well by pinning Lapeer East's Steve DeHaven in 1:52.

"The first match was a crucial one, because it was my first time here," Bonnett said. "Sticking the guy and getting it over with was important. A lot of guys freeze up. Bonnett defeated Grandville's Mike Glane by the same score as the final in the second round and pinned Battle Creek Lakeview's Bob Holczman in the semifinal by almost the same time

(1:51) as he did DeHaven. He was in control in the final, scoring the first points and leading 2-0 after one period. Bonnett scored another takedown and then an escape in the second to take a 5-2 lead. He continued to wrestle well in the third period and maintain his advantage.

"It's always good to get the first points, but I didn't in the other matches," Bonnett said. "I wasn't worried about the first point. It's not the first takedown; it's getting the second and third."

SALEM ASSISTANTS Larry Fidge and Dennis Dameron deserve credit for the success achieved by Bonnett and Martin, according to Salem coach

"Larry Fidge has worked with Dan and Scott on the special wides and turns they do for two years, and the success they had this year was because of him." he said. "Those two (coaches) made those two boys what they are today.

Martin (41-10) won his first two bouts to reach the semis where he lost to state champ Derek Moscovic of Birmingham Brother Rice. He lost his next match to Fred Schumacher, the defending champ, but finished with a pin over Howell's Nick Wahl in the contest for fifth place.

"I really wanted to go out on a winning note, too, especially sticking him the way I did," Martin

"The only two people I lost to were former state champs. I don't like to lose at all, but I'm happy with my tournament."

Martin avenged a previous loss to Lansing Sexton's Asaste Cain with a 6-5 win in the second round. Martin planned to remind his friend Bonnett he beat two wrestlers (Wahl and Cain) who had beaten Bonnett.

"(Wahl) beat Bonnett last year, so I was glad I beat him," Martin said. "I like to beat guys who beat Bonnett. It's kind of a running joke. It's fun to tease him a bit.

pionship at 125 pounds. CEP gymnasts finish among state's best

By Steve Kowalski staff writer

After failing to win a team state championship on Friday, Plymouth Salem and Plymouth Canton had several gymnasts gain personal satisfaction in individual competition Saturday at Trenton High School.

Salem, which came in second place in the team standings after carrying the role of favorite, placed three gymnasts and Canton one in Division I competition.

Salem junior Courtney Gonyea was third in the all-around competition (73.85) and freshman Melissa Hopson took ninth place in the all-around despite a fall on the bars.

At the Division II level (for those who don't compete on club teams), Salem's Kristen Atkinson managed a tie for eighth place on the vault with 17.95 points.
"Kristen did real well; I'm real proud of what she did," Salem coach Becky Martin said. "I'm proud of what all the girls did. We

MUSKEGON MONA SHORES, which won the state team championship, dominated the individual activity as well. Sophomore Heather Schneller won the all-around (75.10) after taking taking the vault, bars and floor championships and placing eighth on the Mona Shores' Becky Swelnis captured the other individual championship on the beam. Gonyea showed great improvement over last year when she took ninth all-around.

Gonyea placed in all four events and her best showing came on the vault, where she took second place (18.85). Gonyea was third on beam (18.40), fourth on the floor (18.65) and tied for eighth on the bars (17.95).

Gonyea would like to catch Schneller next year, but that's not necessarily her goal.

"My goal is to just keep healthy and try to stay at the level I am or better," Gonyea said. "Schneller is a very good gymnast and she's very nice.

"I was pleased with everything, except my first day on floor when I thought my routine got marked low, not just mine but everyone's on the (Salem) team."

HOPSON, ONLY a freshman, gave an encouraging performance with two fifth-place finishes and a sixth. Hopson took fifth on both the floor (18.55) and beam (18.30) and sixth on the vault (18.60). Unfortunately for her, Hopson fell on bars Saturday to finish with an 8.55 score and out of contention.

Maples oust Chiefs

Adrian's Eric Nichelson disrupts a shot attempt by Canton's Hal Heard in the regional game.

Adrian's victory over Plymouth Canton in a regional basketball game Wednesday night was not surprising, since the Maples were the pre-tournament favorites.

But the amazing part was Adrian so overwhelmed the Chiefs, winning 76-59 at Ypsilanti High School, and still didn't have to fire all of its big

The Maples came at Canton in waves, and the first was 6-foot-10 center Eric Nichelson, who scored 20 of his 22 points in the first half.

Sharp-shooting point guard Todd McDevitt came along later with 19 points, and 6-2 junior Greg Stephens tossed in another 17 while grabbing game-high 10 rebounds.

But 6-3 guard Mario Patterson, the second-leading scorer — averaging 12 per game — and an early sig-nee with Central Michigan, was in foul trouble early and had only six.

'Sometimes Patterson has to be a role player when we need him to be, and other times he's able to take over a game in certain stretches,' Adrian coach Pat McDevitt said.

COMPOUNDING THE effect of Adrian's offensive show was an aggressive full-court defense that made it difficult for the Chiefs to inbound the ball and forced 18 turn-

Cooley ends CC's tournament run

Detroit Cooley held Redford Catholic Central to 35 points Wednesday night, which was one less than CC enior center Chad Varga scored the night before.

That about says it all.

Cooley's deliberate offense and suffocating defense were just good enough to end CC's run in the state playoffs, 39-35, in a Class A regional basketball final before a capacity crowd at Southfield.

Varga, who averaged 30.8 points in four previous postseason games, was limited to 11 points, only three after halftime. Cooley, which won three straight Class A titles from 1987-89, held the ball for minutes at a time to get CC out of a zone de-fense and also forced 15 Shamrock turnovers.

The Cardinals, 23-0 and top ranked in the state, made 15 of 31 shots from the field (48 percent) compared to CC's 12 of 29 (41 percent). CC did a commendable job on defense in both the man-to-man and

"THE OBJECT of the game is to win. If it's 2-1 isn't that all right?" Cooley coach Ben Kelso said. "We came for one reason and that was to win a ballgame. He (CC coach Bernie Holowicki) had all the choices. If he wanted to press he could have, if he wanted to play man-to-man he could. You play with what you have."

Guido Legardy, Cooley's 6-foot-7

senior center, was responsible for guarding Varga. After making four of eight shots and scoring eight firsthalf points, Varga took two second-half shots and made one. He failed to shoot in the third quarter. Varga scored 36 in CC's 62-60 regional sem-ifinal win over Detroit Southwest-

The Maples (21-3) will play Belleville for the regional championship at 7 p.m. Friday. It became a frustrating night for Canton (18-5), which watched everything go Adrian's way as the game progressed.

"They were a lot more physical and aggressive than we were tonight," Canton coach Dave Van Wagoner said. "It seemed we were out of sync all night. We just didn't play defense, and we got beat by a good team tonight.

"On the positive side, we had one of the best years in Canton history, and I'm extremely proud of our bas-ketball team. We didn't get here on a fluke. We just didn't step out and play tonight."

Senior Derrick McDonald scored a game-high 24 points for Canton on eight-of-20 shooting, but 18 came in the second half after the Maples had established a lead and Canton was struggling to catch up. Tony Coshatt added eight and Hal Heard seven to go with seven rebounds. Mike Brennan led the Chiefs with eight re-

NICHELSON, a strong player with a Big Ten body, signed early with Cleveland State but might be a sleeper other schools overlooked, since he reportedly never attended a camp outside of Adrian.

"He's legit," McDevitt said, "and they're smiling (at Cleveland State)." Nichelson, who averages 17 points and seven rebounds, got the Maples started by scoring his team's 11 first-quarter points. He was six of seven at the free throw line in the first half.

That followed district games in which Nichelson was 10 of 10 and nine of 13 with 24 and 23 points against Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor Huron, respectively.

Canton stayed even for one period but fell behind in the second quarter when McDevitt and Stephens started to score, too. Adrian scored the first six points of the quarter, and McDevitt hit back-to-back threes for a 28-17 score. The Maples maintained that margin at halftime, 34-

"There were a lot of holes in the dam," Van Wagoner said. "Every time we would plug one, another one would spring open."

Coshatt had three fouls at halftime and got his fourth midway in the third quarter, but Nichelson also spent time in the second half on the bench in foul trouble.

However, McDevitt, who made half of Adrian's 10 triples, scored 13 points in the second half and Stephens 12. Stephens averages 10 points and McDevitt, who was 50 of 131 shooting the three in the regular season, eight.

"AT FIRST THEY were putting pressure on our three-point shooters," McDevitt said, "and once Nichelson got 11 points that put pressure on their inside defense and opened up the outside for us.

Teams are going to have trouble zoning us, because we have so many good outside shooters. I thought they got a little impatient with their offense when we got some turnovers on them."

Canton trailed 54-37 after three quarters, but two McDonald baskets got the Chiefs within 13 points at the start of the fourth. But the Maples forced three straight turnovers in the backcourt, and Stephens converted all three, including a three-point play on the last one for a 61-41 lead with 4:44 remaining.

most of the game. And then, even though CC had the lead from the end of the first quarter on, there was the pressure of the Prospectors' unrelenting attack.

As Shamrock coach Bernie Holowicki summed up: "There was a lot of pressure. They wouldn't go down without a fight."

TWO FACTORS allowed CC to take control early and maintain it fouls and shooting. Southwestern got into foul trouble almost immediately, with starters Derrick Hayes and Anthony Eagle drawing their third personals in the second quarter.

Shooting didn't work in the Prospectors' favor, either. They started both the first and second quarters by missing their first five shots; at halftime, they were 9-of-28 from the floor (32 percent). Which is why the Prospectors trailed 32-21 at the break. "We got the shots we wanted, right around the basket," said Southwestern coach Larry Pierce. "They just didn't go CC's biggest challenge came in the third quarter. After padding their lead to 36-21 on two Varga baskets, the Shamrocks found themselves in trouble. Varga picked up two fouls in an 18-second span, giving him three and putting him on the bench.

THE PROSPECTORS rallied immediately behind Hayes. They outscored CC 18-7 through the rest of the quarter to pull to within 43-39 heading into the final period. Hayes scored 10-straight Southwestern points in the rally and had 12 in the quarter. When Bob Kummer - who scored 11 points in the first half — was whistled for his third foul with 1:37 left in the third, fate seemed to have turned on CC. But there was another reversal ahead; Hayes drew his fourth foul with :35 to play in the guarter. Which freed up Varga even more in the paint. The 6-foot-5 senior took advantage, pivoting his way to 14 fourth-quarter points. A CC adjustment early in the game had helped.

Holowicki: Explained (Southwestern) was in their 1-3-1 (zone defense), and we had some trouble with it. So we moved Bobby (Kummer) outside, and that opened up the middle for Chad."

The Prospectors' pressure didn't hurt, either. CC point guard Eric Justice adeptly handled the ball through most of the game; the Shamrocks had just 12 turnovers.

STILL, SOUTHWESTERN kept it close, and a three-point play by Diar-ra Wilkerson left CC clinging to a 47-46 lead. But the Shamrocks answered with an 11-3 run, punctuated by a Varga floating slam with 2:30 to play that prompted a Prospector

CC had a 58-49 lead, but managed to keep Southwestern in the game by missing free throws down the stretch. The Shamrocks were 15-of-21 before the final two minutes, then went 4-of-11. Still, they had enough of a lead to keep Southwestern at bay; Hayes' three-pointer at the buzzer made the score closer, but the outcome was the same.

The loss left the Prospectors with a season-ending 14-8 record. Pierce could only praise Varga for his per-formance. "We wanted to front him and give weak-side help," Southwestern coach said. "But he's a helluva player. When he gets the ball, he knows what to do with it."

Hayes finished with 21 points to lead Southwestern, 19 coming in the second half. Wilkerson had 11. Kummer netted 15 for CC. Varga and Brian Paluk had eight rebounds apiece for CC; Hayes grabbed eight for Southwestern.

felt I had to stop him for us to win," said Legardy, who finished with six points and five rebounds. "My game plan was not to score. I wanted to stop him."

The loss ended CC's six game winning streak and left the Shamrocks with a 19-5 overall record. The game was the last played by CC's four seniors: Varga, Bob Kummer, Tom Laco and Will Marcoux.

KUMMER, A 6-foot-6 forward, bowed out with 12 points on threefor-13 shooting. Kummer missed his first six shots in the second half.

'We're going to miss them (Varga bread and butter," Holowicki said. 'We lost, we're hurting and there's a sting in our heart, but I've got to be proud. Kelso is a good coach, a grizzly bear, and I enjoy coaching against him. Cooley makes very few mistakes and before the game we told the kids if they make any we got to capitalize on them.'

Senior guard Fred Montgomery, whose right arm is shorter than his left because of a birth defect, scored nine of his game-high 13 points in the first quarter when Cooley opened up a 19-16 first-quarter lead.

The tempo slowed considerably, however, in the next eight minutes as CC went nearly seven minutes without scoring and Cooley held the ball most of the time. The Cardinals scored the first four points of the second quarter to lead 23-16 before the Shamrocks outscored the Cardinals 7-1 in the last minute to pull within 26-25 at halftime.

KUMMER'S THREE-pointer followed by a basket at the buzzer by junior forward Brian Paluk highlighted the rally.

The second half was a struggle for the Shamrocks, who made two of 10 shots from the field and suffered nine turnovers. Holowicki would have liked to have at least another day to prepare for Cooley after beating Southwestern Tuesday. "If you make it to the regional you'd think they'd accommodate the teams better, but it's Southfield's prerogative," Holowicki said earlier in the week. "This was a tough regional. We played man-to-man against Southwestern and against Cooley on back-to-back nights and not too many teams in the Catholic League can do that."

Spartans finish 6th in 'A' meet

By C.J. Risak staff writer

A change in focus this season may affect Livonia Stevenson swimmers of the future.

Instead of concentrating solely on the Western Lakes Activities Association meet and tapering for it, Stevenson coach Doug Buckler tried to divide attention between the league meet and the Class A state finals.

It wasn't exactly a resounding success, but it worked well enough. With the change the Spartans may have moved up a level into the state contenders' club, after finishing sixth at Saturday's Class A meet in East Lansing

Stevenson wasn't the only local team to excel. North Farmington, sparked by its 200-yard medley relay, turned in a superb effort. The Raiders nearly caught Stevenson, scoring 95.5 points to finish seventh. The Spartans had 97.

Redford Catholic Central lacked the depth of both Stevenson and North, but the Shamrocks - who finished eighth with 81 points could boast the only state champion from Observerland: Randy Teeters in the 100 breaststroke.

BLOOMFIELD HILLS Andover ran away with its third-consecutive championship, notching 221 points. Ann Arbor Pioneer was second with 111.5, just ahead of Birmingham (110). Grand Haven was fourth (103), followed by Dearborn in fifth (101).

"We wanted to swim well (at state)," said Buckler of Stevenson's performance. "That's the best we've swam there. We've always peaked for the league meet because it's such a tough meet. This year, we did it for both

That's easier said than done. Getting one swimmer in top form for one meet (season bests for winners were trimmed by at least 1.7 seconds in every event but the 50 freestyle Saturday) is difficult; multiply it by 10 (approximate size of a statetitle contending team) and the task spirals in difficulty. Then try and do it for two meets instead of one.

Still, the Spartans did well enough. Two of their three relays reached the championship final: the 400 free team of Aaron Reider, Bryan Morrison, Alex Goecke and Gordy Gatewood combined for a fourth (3:11.26) and the 200 free foursome of Morrison, Jeff Buckler, Gatewood and Greg Priede placed sixth (1:28.41).

STEVENSON'S 200 medley relay team of Reider, Mike Gravina, Goecke and Greg Priede was seventh (1:38.55).

But it was North's medley relay that nearly stole the show. The Raiders surprised by qualifying first in Friday's preliminaries, but they couldn't hold off Andover's powerful team, revamped for the final.

North's Mike Drelles, Chris Knoche, Jonathan Kershaw and Adam Kammer were second in 1:36.28. Andover won in 1:35.92; the Barons went on to sweep all three relays, two in state-record time.

Drelles anchored North's effort. He finished tied with Ann Arbor Pioneer's Bill Beecher for second in the 100 butterfly (52.37), was 10th in the 100 backstroke (54.93) and led off the 400 free relay, which was sixth (3:17.23). Karl Kozicki, Knoche and Kershaw were also on the 400 free KNOCHE, KERSHAW and Kozicki scored in two individual events apiece. Knoche was fifth in the 100 free (47.44) and 12th in the 200 free (1:46.09); Kershaw was sixth in the 100 backstroke (53.87) and 11th in the 200 free (1:46.07); and Kozicki placed sixth in the 500 free (4:43.40) and eighth in the 200 individual medley (1:57.79).

For Stevenson, individual standouts were Morrison, fifth in the 500 free (4:37.96) and seventh in the 200 free (1:42.66), and Gatewood, fifth in the 200 individual medley (1:56.80) and ninth in the 100 fly (53.42). Other Spartan scorers were Goecke, sixth in the 100 breast (59.19), and Reider, 10th in the 200 IM (1:58.50).

CC survived on the strength of its relays (all three scored) and the individual prowess of Teeters, James Leslie and Steve Reinke.

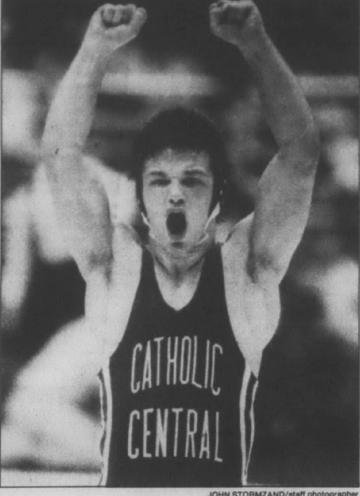

A strong final 50 yards earned Teeters first place in the 100 breast in 57.63. He also finished fourth in the 200 IM (1:54.38). Leslie scored in two individual events as well, placing seventh in the 100 back (54.03) and ninth in the 200 IM (1:58.33). Reinke was fifth in the 100 fly

CC'S 200 medley team of Leslie, Teeters, Reinke and John Brogan was fifth (1:37.35); the 200 free foursome of Brogan, Paul Magoulick, Devon Fekete and Teeters was eighth (1;28.19); and the 400 free team of Reinke, Fekete, Chris Meck and Leslie was 11th (3:17.40).

Other Observerland scorers were Farmington diver Brandon Richardson, who placed ninth with 362.55 points, and the Plymouth Canton 400 free relay of Jeff Clark, Craig Steshetz, Pat Lancaster and Mike Orris, which took 12th (3:17.97).

Andover's Mike Lane was named the coach of the year, and Lansing Eastern's Ian Mull repeated as swimmer of the year. Mull won the 200 IM in a state record 1:49.84 and the 500 free in 4:28.85.

Andover's Raffi Karapetian was also an individual double-winner, capturing the 50-yard free in a staterecord 20.37 and the 100 free in 45.00. Karapetian was part of two state-record setting relays for Andover as well: the 200 free (1:23.57) and

Blazers aim for state title again

By Brad Emons staff writer

Tom Teeters never dreamed his volleyball team would get this far.

But the veteran Livonia Ladywood coach is no stranger when it comes to playing in the state finals. His 1988 and '89 squads won the coveted title and his 1990 team reached the Class A championship before finish-

With a team dominated by underclassmen, Teeters is back again, this time in a tough quarterfinal matchup, 4 p.m. Friday against Temperance-Bedford (61-6-7) at Nazareth College in Kalamazoo.

"At the beginning of the season I thought it would be great if we could take second in the Catholic League," said Teeters, whose team is 42-9-5 overall. "We lost a ton of good people, but this year we've had a good mix of seniors, juniors and sophomores, and even a freshman gets in there from time to time. I thought we'd be good next year, but I never thought we'd be where we're at

The Blazers exceeded Teeters' expectations by winning the Catholic League, followed by upset district and regional wins against the likes of defending Class A champion and Western Lakes Activities Association winner Livonia Churchill, along with state-ranked Farmington Hills Mercy and Livonia Stevenson

"DEFENSIVELY we made some saves that were unbelievable," said Teeters after Saturday's regional conquest at Ferndale. "We've had many opportunities to fall apart, and we didn't. We've played consistently, and even when the other teams step it up a notch, they don't seem to sustain it for three games.

Bedford is no stranger to Teeters, but Kicking Mules ironically have not faced the Blazers this seaso

They are led by 5-foot-10 senior setter. Stacy Scarbrough, who has signed with Miami of Ohio, and 5-8 senior Jennie Bringman, who is bound for Division I school Wright State of Ohio.

"Bedford is a strong team," Teeters said. "They have some of the best setting in the state. I'm not sure of any weaknesses they have. They have talent on the bench, and when everybody else is tired, they bring more people off the bench. They pass very well and they're always consist-

The Blazers rely on the one-two hitting combination of 5-10 Liz Gunn and 5-8 Mary Jo Kelly, both juniors and better known as "Machine Gunn Kelly was a freshman on the varsity squad when Ladywood reached the 1990 state final.

"Our dominant attack comes from the outside," Teeters said. "That left hand (of Gunn's) is hard to block and Mary Jo has that quick arm swing.

"But we're not going to block or snuff them (Bedford). We're going to have to make them re-direct their LADYWOOD'S defense has been bolstered by the play of 5-8 senior middle hitter Jannel Hemme, along with 5-4 senior Michelle Wilson.

Outside hitter Valerie Adzima, a 5-4 junior, and Andrea Putti, a 5-8 junior, also figure prominently in the stop Bedford scheme, along with Nancy Burr, a senior, and Kristy

Walker, a sophomore.

"We're going to have to serve tough," said the Ladywood coach, "and absorb at lot of their hits. On Saturday, Jannel and Michelle made some great digs. We need to continue that kind of play.'

Bedford is not the prohibitive favorite to win the state crown, but the Kicking Mules are rated as the No. 2 choice (behind Portage Norther) to

'We're definitely an underdog, but we were that way in '89 at Wayne Memorial when we knocked them out," said the Ladywood coach.

It could be a dream come true once again for the Blazers.

Pitching paces Madonna softball

By C.J. Risak staff writer

The promise of Madonna University's second softball team lost some of its luster Monday.

With the return of the MIAs (Madonna's Ineligible Athletes, or something similar), it seemed a bright campaign was about to begin. Then sophomore Hughanna Wilkie broke the little finger of her left hand; she had surgery today to have a pin placed in it and is lost for the season

That put a damper on things, but the Lady Crusaders will still be a force. How much? Well, they lost their top pitcher from last year's 22-16 team, Joanne Donehay, who left school — and its no big deal. Said Madonna coach Dave Racer: "She would have been No. 4 this year."

The reason Donehay would have slipped so far in the rotation is that two of the returning MIAs are pitchers: junior Kristin Wasil, from Garden City, and freshman Holly Jondro. Both had to sit out last season due to a lack of credits.

COMBINED WITH newcomer Tracy Vachon, from Class A champion Waterford Kettering, Madonna has a formidable mound corps. "Our pitching is very solid," said Racer. "Pitching and defense are our strengths."

Indeed, during fall practice, 38 of 44 innings were The defense is anchored in a classic sense: strong up the middle. Freshman Kim Supron (Livonia Ladywood) has been so impressive with the bat, she has moved into the No. 5 batting slot. "She's really making good contact for us," said Racer. And she has a great arm, he

At second is sophomore Mandy Armstrong (Kettering), an all-district player last season. Armstrong batted a team-best .377, with 43 hits and 27 runs batted in, and she struck out just seven times. Sophomore Jenny Marquette (Dearborn Divine Child) is the shortstop; she hit .333 with 27 RBI and 12 steals in 14 attempts. "She's our best all-around athlete," said Racer.

IN CENTER field, junior Megan Armstrong, Mandy's older sister, returns from an all-district season.

Megan topped Madonna in runs scored (40), hits (44) and stolen bases (18-of-20). She also batted .349 with 21 RBI as the team's lead-off hitter, striking out just seven times in 126 at-bats.

Unlike last year, when the Crusaders had several weak spots to guard, there are few this season. The third MIA, freshman Kay Lee Davis, fills in at first base. She, too, lacked the credits to play last season. Davis will be the top first baseman with the loss of Wilkie, who hit .357 with 25 RBI last year. The biggest loss with Wilkie, however, is in versatility. She served as back-up catcher and played in right field. "She's an intelligent player," said Racer. "It really hurt to lose

At third base is junior Jill Burt, who also starred on Madonna's basketball team. Burt batted .311 last season with a team-high 39 RBI; this season, she's made great strides defensively. "I think she'll be one of the better defensive third basemen in the district," said

THE RIGHT and left field positions will be patrolled by pitchers most of the time. Jondro has the strongest arm on the team; she'll play left when she's not pitching. Wasil will take over in left when Jondro's on the mound.

Vachon will be in right. She batted .400 for Kettering last season.

Others who will contribute are: sophomore Cheryl Baker (.240 and 11-of-11 in stolen bases last season), who will pinch-hit and be the designated hitter; freshman Emily Skura (Livona Franklin), a back-up at third and short, and the starting DH; and freshman Jenny Smith (Ladywood), a backup at second.

If Madonna has a weakness, it's experience. "We're such a young team," noted Racer. "There's a lack of senior leadership. I would have to say we're a year or two away from challenging for the district champion-

It won't take long to find out how good they are. They open the season Sunday in Fort Meyers, Fla., against NCAA Division I teams Florida International and Harvard, then follow that with another NCAA I encounter with Brown University Monday. Half their 12-game Florida schedule will be against NCAA I and II teams.

"I was disappointed in myself because I knew I could stay on," Hopson said of her fall. "I was in a 'bail' and my hands barely touched the lower bar. I had too much momentum and I fell off.

Like Gonyea, Hopson believes she got lower scores than she deserved on the floor on Friday.

The floor routine was my best ever, and a lot of people told me it was a good routine. But when I got off the floor my score (9.15) didn't show it," she

Salem's other top performer in Division I was Stephanie Skeppstrom, who finished in a tie for ninth place with Holt's Sara Faculak with an 18.50 on the

Canton, which placed third in the team standings, had Kim Rennolds take sixth place in the beam and floor events. Rennolds recorded an 18.00 on the beam and 18.45 on floor. Rennolds placed sixth on floor and eighth on vault last year as a sophomore. She said the competition on consecutive days took its toll. "I think I could have had more energy on the floor," she said. "I was sore in my legs and arms. I did a good beam routine but scored better on the floor. I was a little mad (about the lower beam score) but since this was the state tournament I knew scores would be lower.'

CANTON HAD no other Division I qualifiers, but Dawn Clifford managed to finish in a seventh-place tie on the beam (16.85) in Division II and Jenny Tedesco tied for 11th on the vault (17.80) in the same division

North Farmington freshman Annie Jud qualified for the Division I individual state meet but injuries prevented her from performing. Two North gymnasts placed in Division II: Michele Tsai took eighth place on the bars (17.35), and teammate Jameelah Gater took ninth (17.15) in the same event.

North coach Jeff Dwyer was pleased to have a pair of his athletes compete in a state meet in Division II. "It's good for the sport, because now some of the other girls who don't compete in clubs can get recognition," he said. "I think separating divisions is the best rule that has happened in a long time."

Westland John Glenn had one Division II performer, Kyna Morgan, who took fifth place on the floor (17.75), seventh on the bars (17.45) and 14th in the

Bowlers like good cause

OWLERS HAVE always led the way when it comes to charity events. No other sport comes close to holding as many fundraisers for the many worthy causes that

Plum Hollow Lanes in Southfield now offers a competitive event for a very worthwhile cause — Leader Dogs for the

On April 11, Plum Hollow will host a moonlight doubles, 9-pin no-tap beginning at 10:00 p.m. The winner will receive $150, based on a 30-couple participation.
Handicap will be 80 percent from 400 and the entry fee is $30 per couple. The entry includes door prizes and a 50-50 raffle will also be held.

All proceeds from the tournament will go to Leader Dogs for the Blind. The event is for a good cause and one in five entries will win cash. THE GRIGGS brothers like to bowl together. They get together each week for three games of open bowling at Thunderbird Lanes in Troy.

The senior member of the Griggs clan is Mitchell at 85, followed by William at 83, Henry at 76 and Edward at 74. Each is a retiree from Chrysler Tank, except for William, who is a retired steel worker.

The "boys" love their bowling and average about 135 together. When not bowling, they enjoy golfing, as well as walking to keep limber.

They've been bowling together for a number of years, and the highest game bowled so far has been a 180. It's people like the Griggs who make bowling such a great game for one and all.

ROBERT FORSYTHE of Farmington Hills is the current leader in the singles event at the 89th annual ABC Tournament in Corpus Christi, Texas.

The ABC is the largest and longest running of any tournament. Forsythe rolled a set of 258-277-244 for a series of 779 and the leader spot.

BOWL ONE LANES in Troy is offering free bowling instructions from hall-of-famer Gerry Ritter from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. each Monday.

This bargain is for anyone and is a great opportunity to improve on your game.

'On Golden Pond' Plenty of warmth, humor

Theatre Guild production of "On Golden Pond" continue through March 28 at the Water Tower Theatre on the campus of Northville Regional Hospital. For ticket information call 349-7110.

"On. Golden Pond," by Ernest Thompson, is offered by the Plymouth Theatre Guild with plenty of warmth and humor, but director Dean Acheson has culled the script only for that humor while neglecting some of the human complexities.

Set in a rustic summer home/cab-"On Golden Pond" draws a charming picture of the faltering twilight years of Norman Thayer Jr. (performed by Robert Ketterer) and his wife, Ethel (played by Rosemary

Norman is on the brink of celebrating his 80th birthday, and is reminded of his mortality by recurring forgetfulness and heart palpitations.

Director Acheson opts for comedy and plays down the serious tones to be found in the "Pond" storyline. While the play is funny, opportunities abound for various levels of anger and uncertainty which are not extracted from the script.

SOMETIMES, SCRIPTED anger springs from nowhere. For instance,

in one scene, Ethel rants during the "Old Poop's" anger and even leaves the room because of the "hot air," but Acheson has not precipitated this by any show of anger on Norman's

Robert Ketterer is well-cast as Norman, and plays excellently his forgetfulness. Ketterer is a natural and subtle comedian. He brings color and dimension to the character with a strong sense of loss and fear when tragic lapses of memory occur.

Ketterer has, however, erroneously taken off the gruffest edges expected in Norman, as this is a character known to be domineering and curmudgeonly.

Ethel is Norman's loving partner and wife who gives unconditional support. Rosemary Rock portrays Ethel with almost too much understanding rather than being slightly ornery. Rock's delivery is funny when quoting Norman's belief that, "It isn't fair to get a dog when you're planning to die soon." But when she receives a letter from her muchmissed daughter, Chelsea, her Carole Channing expressions are histrionic in lieu of a genuine emotion.

Norman and Ethel have been encumbered with a guest for the summer. Their daughter has left her fiance's son with them. Wayne Faler is terrific as Billy Ray, the snotty kid who eventually learns to respect, and even like his elders despite his obvious reluctance to admit he's enjoying himself. Faler is a definite bright spot in the show.

Nancy Matejak portrays Norman and Ethel's daugher, Chelsea Thayer. Conflict ensues when Chelsea visits the summer home from the West Coast for the first time in eight years, and feels all the insecurities of childhood and domineering parents engulf her.

ALTHOUGH MATEJAK is supposed to be wishy-washy in her per-formance, the "I'm in charge in Los Angeles" line is never apparent to and Norman Thayer (Robert Ketterer) in a scene from the Plymouth Theatre Guild's presentation of "On Golden Pond."

(Wayne Faler)

Adding quirk to his character is Jack Abella as Charlie, the postman. Abella creates a likable personality who paints a picture of life on Golden Pond

Rounding out the cast is Kevin Kowalski as dentist/fiance Bill Ray. The scene between Ray and Ketterer is interesting as men from different generations explore each other's morals, and whether it is acceptable for Bill and Chelsea to sleep togeth-

Enjoy 'Old Time Movies' with Livonia Symphony

By Linda Ann Chomin special writer

If Scott Joplin's ragtime music sets your bones a-jumpin, and pratfalls by silent screen legends like Charlie Chaplin, Laurel and Hardy, Fatty Arbuckle and Buster Keaton are your cup of tea, grab a bag of popcorn Friday night, March 20, and head for the "Old Time Movies" with the Livonia Symphony Orchestra. The fun starts 8 p.m. sharp when the orchestra under the musical direction of Francesco DiBlasi accompanies the "little tramp" in an evening of antics that'll leave you wishing for those silent golden days of comedy at the Livonia Civic Center Library Auditorium, Farmington Road at Five Mile.

Tickets are $10, ($6 seniors/students) at the Livonia Civic Center Library, Madonna University, Schoolcraft and Levan, and Hammell Mu-sic, 15630 Middlebelt. Tickets available at the door the night of the concert.

"IT WAS a lot of work to put this together. This week we went through 15 reels of film to get what we wanted," said DiBlasi. "We are using three projectors (run by Gordon Draper) to keep the continuity."

The idea to feature silent movies set to chamber music came from Di-Blasi's daughter who plays with the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra.

'My daughter tipped me off. The old-time movies have been done a lot on the West Coast by chamber orchestras where a single ticket to a benefit concert can cost $1,000," Di-Blasi said.

Leading off the evening's program, Ernest Bloch's "Concerto Grosso No. 1 in d minor" features orchestra violinist, Victoria Haltom, violist, Christopher Tew and pianist, Diane Lord.

"Ernest Bloch is a composer who spanned classic, romanticism and into the modern. Concerto Grosso was written in 1925," DiBlasi said.

Music history points out that Bloch's style was based on a mystic identification with what he conceived to be the Hebraic spirit.

"As a composer, Bloch wrote a lot of folk tunes," said concertmaster, Haltom. "He's well known for his ethnic folk melodies. He's written a lot of famous, Jewish music.'

LSO principal flutist, Robynn Rhodes' enthusiasm for "Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano" by Claude-Bolling bubbles over as she describes the homogenization of two vastly different styles spotlighted in the second selection of the evening.

"THE FLUTE is baroque. The flute and jazz piano play off each other till in the second part there is harmony instead of separate melo-dies by the classic style flute and jazz piano, a melding of the two genre."

James Poe, bassoon, Robynn Rhodes, flute, Kristen Williams, oboe, Carl Karoub, French horn, and Colin Lord, clarinet, will be performing with the Livonia Symphony Orchestra on Friday.

Joining Rhodes on stage is percussionist, Pam Manos, bassist, Dave Reese, and pianist, Diane Lord.

"The Bolling is unusual," said Haltom, "because in jazz music there are no parts written for any instruments, no violin, no piano, not any instrument. The Bolling allows classical musicians to play in the style of jazz without any jazz training."

— Francesco DiBlasi

Adept at playing classical and jazz flute, Rhodes attended the Philadelphia Musical Academy and Wayne State University. She studied with Loren Lind of the Philadelphia Orchestra, and Ervin Monroe, principle flutist with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Rhodes, who made her debut at Orchestra Hall in Detroit, toured China and Japan with the Wayne State University Symphonic Band. She performs around town with chamber and orchestral ensembles, and with the jazz group James Tatum Trio Plus

The four year LSO member said, a flute sounded like, when she saw a classical flutist walk out on stage for a performance.

"I've tried lots of instruments." Rhodes said, "but when I saw it shine, and reflect the light on stage, that was it for me.' After intermission the lights go down and the projectors whir with silent movies as the Livonia Symphony Woodwind Quintet takes center stage. The quintet, featuring Rhodes, principal oboist, Kristen Williams, clarinetist, Colin Lord, bassoonist, James Poe, pianist, Diane Lord, and Carl Karoub perform the music of Leroy Anderson, Morton Gould, Gustav Hoist, the ragtime of Scott Joplin, and a Gay 90s medley by Shostakovich.

From the dramatic strings and piano melodies of Bloch to the silent ises an entertaining trip back to the turn-of-the-century.

"You don't hear music like this anymore, Bloch, Bolling and Laurel and Hardy," said DiBlasi.

Cast provides lots of razzamatazz in 'Barnum' dale Players production of "Barnum" continue through March 29 at the playhouse in Troy. For ticket information, call 644-8328.

The Ridgedale Players production of "Barnum," directed by Kent Martini and Bill Glace plays well despite Cy Coleman's thin script.

The savvy 61-year-old troupe manages to give theatergoers a night of razzamatazz: it's wall to wall clowns, balloons, bearded ladies, tumblers, trapeze artists, flags, fireworks, the Bridgeport Pageant Choir, confetti and lots of inventive lyrics by Michael Stewart.

The mild overtones of Mark Twain's world and Frank Baum's 'Wizard of Oz" add a necessary ingredient, a bit of salt to this musical biography about the famous P.T. who founded "The Greatest Show on Stephen Tadevic gives us an ener-gic Phineas Taylor Barnum. Tadevic s surprisingly swift on his feet; he's a good dancer as well as fast talker. One of the best numbers in the show is "The Prince of Humbug," and Tedvic pulls the show together while giving his all to this terrific song.

He's believable as the dreamer who built the successful American museum in 1851 and went on to found a traveling circus after the museum burned down in 1852.

Holly Hellsten is equally believable as the down-to-earth, exschoolteacher, Chairy Barnum. P.T. needed a wife who kept her wits about her, and Chairy's tart words and clear vision help make P.T.'s dreams reality.

Hellsten has a lovely voice, and she and Tedvic do a moving rendition of "The Colors of My Life." We feel Barnum's loss when his price-less wife dies, and understand that the three-ring-circus as America knew it might not have existed if James A. Bailey hadn't convinced Barnum to fill his late years with Bailey, Hammell is splendid, no matter who he's playing. He's the spirit of progress, the voice of the late 19th century.

Genie Garner is amusing as Joice Heth, the 161-year-old woman. Garner doubles as a very nimble dancer/juggler. Mike Elbert is an uses great Cowardly Lion phrasing in his "Bigger Isn't Better" number.

Karee Stegeman is gorgeous and funny as Jenny Lind, who becomes Barnum's mistress for six months. 'The Swedish Nightingale," a name ironically dreamed up by Chairy Barnum, is glorious and stiff as she sings the "Jenny Lind Obligato." Stegeman gives us a Lind who moves believably to the French Ambassador on the night Barnum goes home

Lori Jacobs is wonderful as the blues singer who gives us "Black and White." Julie Klock-Tilotson is efficient as Lyman, Barnum's faithful helper. Carl Territo is a sober Amos Scudder, co-founder of the American

Kudos to producer Donna Backus who put together the "cast of thousands," the terrific costumes, and the great special effects, including popcorn for 10 cents. And to Jody Lavin for fine choreography, Robin Kearney and Chick Ray for the set, and to music director Kerry Price, his piano and to the orchestra, Dan Gardner, Don Martin, David Coleman and Eric Shea.

Don't miss the museum show in the lounge during intermission.

Mystery party at Meadow Brook Hall to benefit MO

staff writer

Michigan Opera Theatre devotees likely know their Verdi and Wagner, but they'll have to find out who killed philandering tycoon Montague Almond at the Founding Guild's mystery party at Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester Hills 7:30 p.m. Friday, March 27.

For ticket information, call Nancy Carmichael at (313) 874-7850.

"The Case of the Golden Key," an original script written by Sally Harlow, executive producer of Foul Play Productions in Bloomfield Hills, will have its premiere at the MOT Guild's party.

"WE KILL 'em for a living," quips Harlow of Foul Play. "We do a lot of these mystery parties for charities like the American Cancer Society.

ALL YOU CAN EAT

As long as you can get 40 or more people together, we can put one on."

The party will be a first for the guild, but hopefully not the last, said event co-chairwoman Carol Wendzel of Bloomfield Hills.

"We're trying to build up a guild that will be able to do a lot of fundraising," she said.

The 100 member guild is made up of "opera lovers" who volunteer their time to strengthen MOT through community outreach programs and fund-raisers like the murder mystery party.

The party, like all guild functions, is open to the public. The $90 ticket includes cocktails, dinner and valet parking. The murder mystery will be played out during the evening's fes-

Harlow said she came up with the idea of forming a company after seeing a poor attempt at murder mysties has a lot to do with the players.

"You've got so many people out there who are closet actors," Harlow said. "Once they get into it, they really love it.

Wendzel said the party is one of many guild functions designed to build up membership as well as keep MOT going strong.

"The money goes wherever MOT needs it," she said. "MOT is one of the best companies in the country. A lot of this is due to (MOT director) David DiChiera. We want the guild to be one of the best too."

Eaton's obscurity won him Chrylser top job

This has been another bad week for journalism, at least for those in the business of predicting the future, rather than reporting the past. Normally, it's far easier to speculate on things like who will be the next chairman of Chrysler than take notes, get wet, etc., which goes along with more mundane reporting jobs. The best speculation is about something far enough in the future so that when reality comes due, most people have forgotten the idiotic prediction you made way back when.

Not that there isn't some danger in the speculation business. As I have pointed out in the past, nothing cools an executives chances to become the next chairman of Chrysler, or General Motors, for that matter, like too many speculative stories that put you into office before your boss and board of directors get around to making up their minds

Which brings us around to the point: Who the heck is Robert Eaton? In the five years or so of speculation about just who is going to succeed Chairman Lee, rumors have started up about every top-level administrator except possibly Coleman Young as a possible successor to the flamboyant | Iacocca.(Actually, even Young may have been a candidate, particularly when it turned out the last five acres of land to build the new Jeep plant downtown was going to cost $50 million, but I digress.) Nobody gave Eaton a chance, in fact, nobody had even heard of Ea-

WELL, MAYBE a few. I remember Eaton as one of the principal architects of the Corvair, after which he worked on the front-drive X-car program. Later, he was an unusually quiet head of GM's advanced engineering staff. At the time, I figured he was so quiet because he had a lot of secrets. That was before Donald Runkle got the job and demonstrated that you could talk a lot and still keep secrets. Now I know that Eaton was being quiet so that nobody would write about him and mess up his chances to be chairman of

Then Eaton sort of disappeared, having been named head of GM's European operations. Eaton finally was seen in Czechoslovakia or someplace like that, negotiating obtuse deals to make defunct Russian tank tracks into suspension components, an area where GM is credited with being far ahead of the competition, figuring that the remnants of the Soviet Block will turn to Chevrolets as soon as they get the food problem straightened out. This was where

Chairman Lee found him, and no-ticed that Eaton had been in the auto business for nearly 30 years, and nobody at Fortune, Time, Newsweek or Automotive News had ever speculated that he was going to become chairman of Chrysler.

Even the New York Times had never heard of Eaton, mainly because Doron Levin, chief auto writer for the Times, was busy working on a book about how the Japanese are going to take over Chrysler, and he had been ignoring the meaningful happenings in Eastern Europe.

CHAIRMAN LEE was impressed. For one thing, Eaton was making a lot of money in a GM division, a rare achievement these days, since most GM division only made money after they were sold to Roger Penske.

Penske to be chairman of Chrysler. but Penske didn't want the pay cut.

Chrysler President Bob Lutz had already been named Chrysler Chairman by Fortune, the Wall Street Journal, the New York Times, and David E. Davis Jr., editor of Automobile Magazine. These important ublications often pointed out that Lutz had managed to orchestrate the reorganization of the company and developed a new line of cars that will carry Chrysler forward for the next millennium. Unfortunately, this is the sort of thing that the actual chairman of a major auto company likes to read about himself.

Bob Lutz, himself former chairman of Ford of Europe, had heard of Bob Eaton. "I just didn't think he'd be my boss," he said.

"We never know the worth of water until the well runs dry.

The wellspring of financial security is one's income. If this is in jeopardy, as it may be for Andy and Jo major financial difficulties could follow

Andy and Jo live in in Canton with their 1-year-old daughter. Jo, 28, works as a part-time producer for a earns $14,000. Andy is 31 and is in machine maintenance at the General Motors Willow Run plant and earns $30,000

With the recent announcement of GM's plant closings, Andy's future employment situation is uncertain. He may be laid off permanently or he may be transferred to another facility, which would result in Jo leaving her job. In either case, they will experience a drop in income, at least temporarily.

Jo asks, "What steps should be taken now to prepare for these changes? Should we pay off our car? Take money out of the IRAs to build up our cash reserves? What is the best course of action?"

OUR FIRST BIT of advice is not to panic. The Wests are actually in good financial shape, especially for a young couple. They obviously have done some good financial planning in the past, and now is their payoff

They have an emergency reserve of six month's expenses in a money market fund. This can help tide them over this transition period. They have no debts beyond a modest mortgage and an auto loan taken out when they bought a new car six courage them to avoid additional debt until their incomes could easily support additional payments.

Andy also has a union-sponsored plan for laid-off auto workers. This ensures that he will continue to receive a majority of his income for a number of months if he is not offered another position. It offers a measure of short-term security, and along with their other assets, it gives the Wests time to prepare for their

Their estate plan is in relatively good shape. They established wills when their daughter was born. The wills contain a contingency trust, which provides that in the case of simultaneous death, their assets and life insurance proceeds would be managed for their daughter's benefit until she reaches her mid-20s.

But a trust within a will is subject to the probate process. Probate remains open until the trust provisions are completely satisfied, which could be 20 years or more (when their daughter becomes an adult). This could result in significant probate administrative expense. We would suggest that they may want to consider changing to a revocable trust outside of and separate from impending decrease in income is to use any available cash to pay down loans, and even to prepay upcoming bills such as property taxes and insurance. This may provide a measure of psychological security be cause those bills won't be coming in over the next few months.

But we believe this is the wrong approach to take. Although the Wests should not incur additional debt, they should hoard their cash reserves to provide the greatest cushion for the long st possible peri-

Andy periodically buys individual stocks for growth in his portfolio. We recommend that he defer such purchases until their future is clearer. Stocks and bonds are subject to greater short-term fluctuations. If they were forced to liquidate at an inopportune time, they could be faced with a significant loss. They should build up the cash in the money market fund as long as their incomes are steady, even though interest rates are currently low.

Andy and Jo should not take assets out of their IRAs at this time. There is a significant tax cost to liquidating these funds. Any money withdrawn would be subject to ordinary income tax plus a 10 percent penalty; thus, about 40 percent of the funds withdrawn would be due in taxes and penalties. If they are forced to take IRA withdrawals in a later year to maintain their standard of living, it is likely that their income tax bracket will be lower, and therefore the tax cost will be less for such with-

PERHAPS LESS obviously, Andy should also continue the tax deferral on his 401(k) plan monies. If Andy is terminated from GM, it is likely that he will receive a lump sum distribution of the entire balance in his 401(k) account - currently $12,000. Especially for those who have recently lost a job, it is tempting to put this money into a savings account and let it sit there until it needed.

This is a mistake. Like the IRA. such a distribution is typically subject to ordinary income tax and a 10 percent penalty if the recipient is under the age of 591/2. If this distribution is rolled over into an IRA within 60 days, it continues to avoid current taxation; yet withdrawals are still available if needed.

In their efforts to conserve cash, Andy and Jo should defer all possible major expenditures. They were hoping to buy a second new car this year, but this is obviously an expense that they do not need to incur. In fact, if their income is reduced for an extended period of time, they may have to look at whether it makes sense to keep the new car. It might be necessary to downscale and reduce or eliminate this debt pay-

Similarly, they were planning on starting an educational savings plan for their daughter and any future children. Though we believe it is important to do this as soon as possible, this is a discretionary outlay that should be put on hold for now.

ONE AREA OF weakness is their insurance coverages. Their auto and medical coverages are fine; their life and homeowners coverages need re-

"We have never felt comfortable reviewing our insurance program," Andy said. "I am not sure it is adequate. Please review it for us."

The only life insurance they carry is that which is provided through General Motors: $44,000 on Andy and $10,000 on Jo. Should Andy die Jo's income and the $44,000 would not go very far toward meeting her long-term living costs. Furthermore, if Andy is terminated from GM he could lose these benefits altogether.

This is not the time to scrimp on insurance. We would suggest a minimum of $250,000 on Andy and $100,000 on Jo. We would suggest term coverage for them because of the low cost and their need to conserve cash. The annual outlay would likely be no more than $400-$500, and it might be less. Eventually, when their future becomes more certain they might want to consider converting a portion of this coverage into a permanent policy that builds

Another less critical problem is in their homeowners coverage. They believe their house is worth $120,000, but they have only $90,000 of property coverage. This may be adequate if their insurance carrier can assure them that this is the full replacement cost of rebuilding their home. But if they find that the amount of coverage has not kept up with the cost of inflation over the years, they should increase their coverage

Andy and Jo have done a good job of preparing themselves for the worse. Their financial "well" is deeper than perhaps they realize, and with some effort and a bit of luck, they should be able to get through this difficult period in good

"We're going to take a hard look at it," said Daniel Hayes, executive vice president of the Detroit association. "We don't want to put false impressions out there. We just want to make sure it's right. That's why we're going to go slow and steady."

Training sessions have been scheduled for Cleveland. Buffalo, Salt Lake City and Casper, Wyo., after a trial run in suburban Washington, D.C.

"It's no secret customers are not happy with the new car buying process," said Deborah M. Hopkins, spokes-woman for NADA. "We want to make buying a new car fun again. We want people to feel comfortable walking into a dealership. We want people to look forward to it, not be apprehensive."

To get NADA certification, salespeople must score at least 70 on an exam that covers ethical and legal sales practices, car selling techniques, and consumer psychology and loyalty.

EACH OF those three units consists of several audio tapes, a workbook and a daylong classroom session. The ethical and legal practices unit is mandatory, the others optional.

Cost of each unit is $150.

Certification also requires at least six months of sales experience, which can be acquired concurrently, and completion of manufacturer product training, which most salespeople do anyway.

"This is much more than a self-help program," Hop-kins said. "It's rooted very firmly in ethics and law." Several dealership owners and managers contacted here were lukewarm about the NADA certification pro-

With product training their salespeople get from the manufacturers, the competitive market in metro De-troit with some 250 dealerships and the Big Three headquartered here, some wonder how much difference NADA certification will make.

"DEALERSHIPS do a good job educating salespeo-ple. I think salespeople in this area are knowledgeable and polite. I just don't know what a certification will do," he said.

Bill Ritchie, owner of a Lincoln Mercury dealership and the Detroit delegate to NADA, has similar feelings. "We have been a little more in the forefront in that area," he said of training. "The majority of us (here) would say that (NADA certification) is like taking altar boys to church.

But Ritchie believes that it will be offered here as soon as a program dealing specifically with legal practices in Michigan can be put together.

'We've all become more consumer-oriented in the last 10 years," he said. "It's a different world out there and we better recognize it."

Brian English, general sales manager at Birmingham Chrysler Plymouth in Troy, said he believes a NADA certification program is just as important as other training salespeople receive.

"I SPENT 12 years on the floor selling cars. When I was on the floor, I always looked for new opportunities to learn something," English said. "Today's buyer is pretty sophisticated. People demand a little more." Susan Ianni, general manager at Gordon Chevrolet in Garden City, said her salespeople don't negotiate pric-"I don't know what they (NADA) offer. If it's to teach for NADA. "It certainly is needed from a consumer point of view," Leary said. "Long-term, it's needed by salespeople. It will increase their professionalism, increase

"That's really the purpose of the program - to help salespeople sell in a more customer-friendly way, help-ing the customer rather than controlling the situation," he said. "The mindset of the program is that the salesperson is there to act as a sales consultant.

"WE'RE SETTING about to make a fundamental change in the way the average consumer views the carbuying experience," Leary said.

'The answer on whether we're successful may be a few years down the road. If consumers look at the experience as a fun, interesting, positive . . . we will

"I think it's really great for the kids," said Chris Weinrauch of Northville Township, a homemaker who has a son in the program. "It's really nice he gets to come twice a week. He looks forward to it."

She and the other parents were working with Mary Lou Boyd of Plymouth, classroom/parent education teacher, on a lacing project, designed to help children develop fine motor skills and eye-hand coordination. Parents follow up on many classroom activities at home with their children.

THE FREE PROGRAM is open to children who live in the attendance areas of Eriksson, Farrand, Field, Gallimore and Hoben Elementary Schools. Children must be 4 on or before Dec. 1, 1992, to participate during the 1992-93 school year.

"We've had such fun." She knows children benefit when parents get involved in their education.

"Oh, yes, very much so," Butter-field said. "Last year, he was very shy and this year he's opened up. He really seems to enjoy it.

"I think it's good that they know we're here behind them." Parents have an opportunity to meet each other, and also learn what's going on in the school district, Butterfield

Recruitment is under way for PLUS, which is operated by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools in conjunction with a grant from the federal government. Classes for parents and children are held at Central Middle School, 650 Church in downtown Plymouth. (For registration information, call 451-6656.)

THE PROGRAM has been offered since 1974, said Mary Fritz of Plymouth Township, program director. Parents, grandparents, babysitters and other caregivers participate.
"It's been very popular." More than 150 children are involved. Children attend classes two afternoons a week at Central, and their parents participate in one session each week. Parent education classes focus on such subjects as child development/management, nutrition, health, safety and others.

Parents are busy, but find time to range to come in on their day off from work. In some families, the mother chooses not to work full time outside the home when children are preschoolers

"They have to make a commitment to be involved, so that's what makes it really special," she said. The program, to be offered next October through June, is taught by specialists in early childhood education with many years of experience.

A home program, coordinated by parents and a PLUS teacher, is also offered. Those participants go to "school" in a neighborhood home for sessions led by a parent. Families also attend some sessions at Central

'It's the parent's preference. They just like doing it," Fritz said.

SOME OF THOSE families have a younger child at home, which makes coming to the school in Plymouth more difficult. About 25 children and their parents participate in the home-based program.

In PLUS classrooms, the emphasis is on helping children acquire readiness skills. In one room on a recent day, children were working on a computer in the quiet area. In a nearby room, Catherine McAuley

Christopher Lachowicz and David Lachowicz bought the franchise last summer, after seeing an ad in the Wall Street Journal. The brothers, who had looked into a number of different franchises, got their business up and running in October and November.

They have the franchise for Wayne County and Monroe County. Michigan has one other Caring Concepts franchise, in Bay City.

Caring Concepts Inc., based in New York City, has eight franchises. Plans are to add another 12 this year, said Christopher Lachowicz, a Westland resident who serves as Caring Concepts president.

"It's really growing." The clothing designs are helpful not only for senior citizens but also for younger people with mobility problems.

CARING CONCEPTS was founded in 1990. Founders worked with nursing home staffers "so they knew exactly what the demands were.' Clothing designs have such features as: Ring-pull zippers, to help arthritic people or those who've had strokes;

Writer wants to control life

Dear Ms. Green,
I enjoy reading your column and am very interested to see what you could tell me about myself. I am right-handed and 33 years old.

I would like very much to see my letter in print. Thank you.

Looking at this left-slanted handwriting one may think it was written by a left-handed person, but this is not the case. The writer is right handed and 33 years old.

Within this young woman there is a basic conflict between dependency and independency. On the one hand, she wants to be independent and in control of her life. On the other hand, however, she has concerns about the future and is reluctant to move for-

Growing up, our writer appears to have felt hurt or rejection. Although she was exposed to a great deal of criticism, she conceals her vulnerability behind a calm facade. Female influence from this period was strong with the result she may have a little difficulty with female author-

Although quite reserved, she often acts more outgoing than she inward-ly feels. She has learned to "role play" rather successfully. Seemingly, she has a need for attention she missed earlier in her life.

A cautious nature allows her to pause and size up a situation. Before becoming actively involved, she will take time to decide whether this action is prudent. And also whether her self-interest would suffer from the consequences of said action. She appears to worry over everyday happenings.

Her personal life is not an open book and she can be secretive about some things. At times, she may be tempted to color the picture a little different than what it is to place herself in a more favorable light. Her imagination may cause her to get a tad carried away relating an experience or incident.

Don't spoil nature ... leave only footprints.

Observer & Eccentric HOMELINE

Knowing plants pays off in green - leaves, that is

staff writer

You say the leaves of your corn plant look as yellow as a ripe ear of corn. Your philodendron has as many tiny leaves as Munchkins for "The Wizard of Oz." And your ficus has developed a receeding leaf line.

Well, one of the causes could be abuse of the two most important things needed for green plants.

"The two most important things for green plants are water and light," said Colette Bielat of Sparr's Greenhouse in Plymouth. 'Too much sun can bleach out a plant's leaves and, if poorly watered, the leaves can fade.

Bielat was the star attraction at the second of three winter luncheons staged by Schoolcraft College's Women's Resource Center. The fact that she grew up on greenhouse truck farm that sold its plants at Eastern Market and trained in her parent's floral shop in Manistee came through in her presentation.

Bielat came armed with a variety of potted plants to educate luncheon goers on the how to's and how not to's of healthy

According to Bielat, knowledge is an important tool in keeping plants healthy and a place to get the information needed is the library. Knowing about specific houseplants goes a long way toward a healthy relationship.

"High light would be a south window that's really sunny," she said. "Medium light is the east or west window and low light is a north window. A fiscus is notorious for dropping its leaves and the major cause is a lack of light.

"A PHILODENDRON will grow in low light but you'll get smaller leaves and with a pothos a member of philodendron family, you'll lose the varigation and get small leaves." But excessive light can cause problems for plants. It can dry well as bleach and fade the leaves, not to mention, causing scorch spots, she said.

That's why knowing about the plant is important. You don't want to put low to medium light loving plants like pothos, philodendron, bamboo palms and spi-der plants in high light areas that are favorites of most ivy plants, she said.

And the same goes for watering. If you're looking for hail and hearty plants then good choices would be umbrella and jade plants and cactus.

"They can stand neglect," Bielat said. "You can water them every two months and they do

But for plants that require more frequent refreshment, there's a proper way of doing it — that's if it's due for a watering. Not all plants require water on a weekly basis. Bielat recommends feeling the soil. You can stick you're finger in or use a modified cake testing method - inserting in a stick the size of a pencil.

"IF YOUR plants are on a schedule of once a week, you may be overwatering or underwatering," Bielat said. "With overwatering, the plant can wilt and there's no new growth. The lower leaves can turn yellow and drop off and the stems can turn mushy at the soil line because of root

"If you underwater, you can get wilt. The leaves will curl under, the leaf tips will turn brown and green leaves will drop off."

Bielat recalled a time when she was caring for plants at a church. The pastor, members of the Altar Society, even the janitor took turns watering the plants. "By the time I got there, there was water running all over the floor.'

And when you water, it's best to water from the top of the plant and let it run out the bottom. If the pot sits in a saucer, the excess water should be drained off. Such watering leeches out salts that can kill a plant and the good accomplished by that is reversed if the plant is left to re-absorb the liquid.

Cacti, jade and yucca plants and bromeliads like drier conditions while azelias and certain ferns need moisture all the time And the ideal temperature for plants is between 65-75 degrees. Anything colder than that can stunt the plants' growth, she said.

BIELAT ALSO recommended fertilizing once a month during the winter, when plants go dor-mant. During the summer months, plants reproduce tissue lost during cold weather and during the growing season should be fertilized every two weeks.

And taking your plants outside during the summer is healthy, but be sure to slowly introduce them to sunlight and temperature changes, Bielat said.

Now those tips may ensure green plants, but there are still some bugs you might have to work out.

If you see webs similar to spider webs on your plants, you'll be going to war with spider mites. If you're finding small white things on the stems and under the leaves, the challenger is mealy bugs and those brown bumps on leaves is scale.

Bielat recommends wiping the underside of leaves with denatured alcohol then using a good insecticide soap on the infected plant. If the problem is white fly, you'll need to spray the plant every 14 days until the problem is der control, she said.

AND A word to the wise about giving plants as gifts. Don't let the poor thing sit around for an extended period of time sealed up in florist's wrap. Plants produce an ethelyne gas and if kept sealed up it, they will literally gas them-

That is all plants except the bromeliad, which apparently is immune to the fumes. In fact, place a cut apple with a bromeliad in a plastic bag and you can force it to bloom, Bielat said.

As for flowering potted plants like mums, they can be planted outside after the first frost. But don't expect blooms right away.

"You have to wait until they get on cycle to bloom again," Bielat said. "And that usually takes a year."

Key of G takes Word to cable

It isn't quite the caliber of an MTV rock video. Heck, every now and then, Gail Carson messes up on the lip sync. But such miscues aren't stopping the Key of G from taking the "Leap" to the airwaves.

The Plymouth-based contempo rary Christian rock group has parlayed cable TV community access training, donations and friendships into a series of videos, featuring 10 songs from its latest LP, "Leap of Working with this medium is fun and challenging; it's a whole new art form," said Carson of Plymouth Township. "It's a fantastic way to introduce Christian music through the secular world."

Carson is the group's driving force, handling the production and promotion chores along with the songwriting and vocals, no easy chore for the 29-year-old mother of two boys, ages 3 and 5.

Admittedly, a late bloomer on the music scene, she had been crafting "silly love songs and gospel songs for years before approaching her husband's best friend, also a musician, about her music two years ago.

Carson was into classical and folk music, bass player Jeff Lightfoot was into heavy rock, but he decided to give her music a listen. What he found was a positive message, backed up with some straight music.

"Had she presented it to me five years earlier, I probably would have laughed or turned my nose up at it," the Livonia resident said. "But I found her stuff genuine, sincere and homey and that appealed to me."

ONCE THEIR interests merged, they decided to add guitarist Rick Zerndt of Garden City. He brings classic, acoustic and the electric guitar sounds to the group's music. Zerndt found the group through an advertisement in a Christian musicians network.

"I saw the ad and it sounded interesting, so I went over and listened to them," he said. "I thought they them," sounded greet."

And when the trio went into the studio this winter to work on "Leap of Faith" they called on drummer Larry Cunningham of Plymouth who performed on their first LP, "Take a Little Step." Carson hopes they can convince Cunningham to join the band on a more permanent basis.

"Leap of Faith" is a "fun rock" album for the group. Recorded at Christian Music Productions in Ypsilanti, the album features a mix of country rock, love songs, '50s rock'n'roll, Motown and reggae

And the fun is reflected in the videos. In one video, Carson dons a Carmen Miranda outfit, complete with a fruit salad hat. Props included a collection of tropical bird hand puppets from the Canton library and pseudo steel drum made by her husband Daryl from an aluminum

IN ANOTHER, the studio was transformed into a '50s soda shop. Carson chuckles when she watches the first take. Amid the collection 45 rpm records on the wall is a more modern compact disc and there she is, sprawled on the floor, the victim of a clash between her rollerskates and recording cables.

It took three days to complete the 10 videos and it took as many photo shoots to come up with the cover for "Leap of Faith." The best photo was of the group on the Belle Isle Bridge, but with an album title like "Leap of Faith," Carson worried people might get the wrong impression.

They settled for a cover that features the trio airborne while working out on trampolines at Joanne's Dance Extension in Plymouth.

Carson writes the basic words, melodies and chords for the songs. Lightfoot and Zerndt do the more intricate things that help flesh out the songs. It's a gradual process that can weeks, even months, Zerndt

"This is the most-well-organized group I've been in and Gail has the to make things happen," he said. "This has been a dream of hers for a long time and she's really made a push for it."

"I'VE BEEN playing for about 15 years in other bands and basemen groups and this is the first real band I've played for with this level of proonalism," added Lightfoot. "And it all boils down to maturity."

The group has been doing the cable talk show circuit of late, but has performed at local churches in Livonia, Caton and Northville and music festivals in Ypsilanti and White Lake. Carson would like to add the Ann Arbor Art Fair to the

"We're ready and it would be a re-ally good ministry and a good place to air our music," she said.

And that hasn't been easy. The band by no means is getting rich. They barely broke even on their first album and to finance their latest one, Carson raised and sold eight of her nine purebred Vizzla pupples.

But while they would like to land a contract with a major record label, they haven't lost track of why they're playing - to get the message of God to the people.

"The most important thing in this band is the message in the words, and to spread the word of the Lord," Lightfoot said. "Whether or not we get picked up by a major label, we'll still be playing."

AND THE videos are another way of getting that message out.

"My hope is that some day some one feeling really down and desper-ate would flip the channels on TV and get a laugh at what those crazy Christians are doing and then really think about the truth of what the music is talking about," Carson said. "And that's exactly when God can make an impact on their lives."

The videos will air at 7:30 p.m. March 19-20 on Channel 15 of Omnicom of Plymouth, Canton and Northville. According to Carson, they also are being picked up by Continental Cablevision in Westland, Metrovision of Livonia and Redford and MacLean-Hunter in Garden City.

The "Leap of Faith" album is in the final stages of completion and will be available wherever the group performs as well as by special order through Eden Books on Ford Road in Copies also can be ordered by mail ($10 plus postage and handling) by writing Carson at 8850 Brookline, Plymouth 48170.

of Plymouth Township and Jeff Lightfoot of Fear of death clouds our thinking

My great-grandfather told many stories about his life out west following the Civil War. One of these stories is about how he encountered men who carried guns.

He told of an incident in the family's move from Ohio to Kansas. Several men rode near their wagon and shot to one side and to the other just for the fun of scaring them. At the next town, great-grandpa bought a

He then added another point to the story. After living in the west for a time, he noticed something. He realized that the men who were killed by guns were the very ones who were carrying guns. Great-grandpa decided not to carry a gun.

I believe that our society is still living like the old west in the 1860s. Not only do more and more people want guns; more and more people believe that violence solves problems. Unfortunately, most of us have not gotten to the stage at which great-grandpa realized he needed to put his gun away.

VIOLENCE AND death excite us. In the words of Matthew Fox, "We are an age which is busy with death." Think for a moment how death attracts our attention. Killings, abortion, the death penalty, assisted suicide, guns, movies such as "The Terminator," these and many more things direct our attention toward death.

Remember the war in the Middle East? People got excited. Yellow ribbons lined the streets of several suburbs. There was high energy genmoral perspectives Rev. David Strong erated by this war. We all became involved either supporting the war or opposing it.

By March of last year, it was all over. The yellow ribbons got dirty and ragged. Our souls and hearts felt the same way. Many in the majority who had opposed the war in the first place wondered why they had changed their minds. Why did they support it? We now know about the tragedy it has caused for thousands of children in Iraq. We wonder if anything has really been solved.

Only death excites us. With the Soviet Union no longer our enemy, Americans find it difficult to be excited about anything. Poverty, unemployment, homeless people, the need to repair our streets, our schools and our cities provide no excitement. Only a war or a good murder gets our juices flowing.

What is most often reported on television and in the papers? A gruesome death will get us excited for at least several days. If this is not ugh to convince us of the death orientation of our society, we simply need to notice our passion for guns Like the use of drugs, guns are carried by younger and younger chil-

WE ARE FASCINATED by death,

yet we do not want to face it in a personal way. Gone are many of the beliefs that at one time helped us to face our own death. Thus, we become obsessed with the deaths of

The psychologist Rollo May believes that our society's focus upon sex expresses an inability to deal with death. Sex is sought out as a means to control life in a world which seems increasingly out of control. By pursuing sex, we fool ourselves that we do not have to face

We fool ourselves that we are like the television ads. We are young and desirable and will always be this way. As long as we believe this, we will not have to think about decline and death.

Great-grandpa learned in the old west that those who carry a gun are most apt to die by a gun. So it is that our obsession with things of death in this society leads us to more things of death. War begets more thoughts of war. More guns in the streets creates a market for even more guns.

Where does it all end?

FIRST. WE MUST be clear that death does not lead us to life. Only love and forgiveness can lead us to life. Religion must guide us to focus upon life. This focus must not be expressed in terms of another battle or another demand.

Life is a gift which becomes effective through love and forgiveness. Religion must also help us to deal with our own deaths. Religion must undergird the four pillars of a healthy society the family, the schools, the neighborhoods and the churches and synagogues.

Second, we must deepen our understanding of what our obsession with death hides. Our death-oriented society fails to help us deal with the uncertainty, the fear we feel in the face of real or imagined threats. War, violence, guns seem to many people to be a way to defend our-

Third, we should be clear that our deepest desires, our deepest struggles are finally a way we need to encounter God. A person can come to an understanding that death is our encounter with God. At one level, death is the opposite of life. At a deeper level, death is an encounter with a loving God.

New ways of thinking and new ways of acting need to be found which will shake us out of the death orientation we see all around us. Each person can do his or her part. Each of us can reject things that are oriented to death. We can seek the ways that lead to reconciliation and

Memorial observes 50th year

In March 1942, a small group of Christians met in the Detroit home of Wilfred McIntosh for Bible school and church services. Today, 50 years later, the small group has grown to a congregation of 500 and has moved from Detroit to Livonia.

Memorial Church of Christ will observe those simple beginnings when members gather Friday-Sunday, March 27-29, for a 50th anniver-

The festivities will kick off with a banquet Friday evening at the Holi-day Inn in Livonia. Lawrence Downs, a former Memorial member who was ordained as a minister in 1961, will be the guest speaker. The music will be by Amy Emmert, wife of a former youth and associate pastor Chuck Emmert.

A video program and photographic displays depicting the church's history will be presented at the church Saturday morning. Max Copeland, a minister at Memorial from 1962 to 1973, will be the guest speaker. John Wright, an elder at Memorial who was ordained to the ministry in 1979 will also participate in the program.

BIBLE CLASS reunions will be held at different locations in the afternoon for returning members and in the evening, a concert at the church will feature performances by the church choirs and past and present Memorial members

The weekend will conclude at the Sunday worship services, with two past ministers returning for the celebration. Lloyd Taylor, who was min-ister from 1954 to 1962, will speak at the 8:15 a.m. service, and Lee Doty, who served the congregation from 1944 to 1953, will address members at the 10:45 a.m. service.

Three former Memorial members who are now ministers — Paul and Mark St. Louis and Bill Ely — as well as Emmert will participate in the worship.

Starting with 84 charter members, Memorial has undergone a number of changes during its 28 years in Detroit. It moved from the McIntosh house to Burns Elementary School, an American Legion Hall and Healy Elementary School until moving into a new church at Schoolcraft and Fenton in Detroit in 1960.

The congregation remained there until 1970, when it moved to its present location, a move prompted by the construction of the I-96 freeway.

MEMORIAL Church of Christ also has played a role in starting new churches in the metropolitan area. Presently, members are assisting in the start-up of the Southpoint Community Christian Church in the Woodhaven area.

The church also has a strong youth program with more than 160 children in preschool through high school activities; a new MOMS (Mothers Out for the Morning) to provide fellowship time for mothers and their children; a Women's Council that has taken on service projects like the First Step Shelter for battered women and children; and a Golden Agers group for seniors.

Mark McGilvery is the current minister, with Steve Allen as associate minister. Memorial Church of Christ is at 35475 Five Mile Road. For more information on the celebration, call 464-6722.

One thing is for certain, the ani-mals know how to find their food because they are observant. Hikers and naturalists can enhance their powers of observation by writing and drawing in a notebook.

A written description can be long and flowery, or short and simple. No matter how it is written be sure to put a date and place notation. This will be helpful to know if comparisons are to be made in the future.

Complementing written descriptions with some drawings or illustrations will enhance a journal remarkably. Drawings do not have to be superior, they are just a means to help learn about a particular subject. Many people feel they cannot draw, but a rough sketch with written de-

Artheat spotlights vignettes from the suburban arts scene. Send news leads to: Artheat, Creative Living, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

A former Livonia Public Schools art instructor will be among seven alumni honored at the Wayne State University Arts Achievement Awards ceremony March 28 in the McGregor Memorial Conference Center

Alumnus Sharon McColl will receive her award for dance. She's artist-in-residence at the State Arts Council of Oklahoma

In other residencies, she focused on elementary and secondary schools and provided dance experiences for preschool handicapped students and mentally retarded students She provided art education at the University of Oklahoma School of Music and Central State University School of Health For the Oklahoma State Department of Education, she planned and introduced training institutes for coordinators, teachers, administrators and selected educators/artists.

The annual awards program is part of a two-day Celebration of the Arts Friday-Saturday, March 27-28, to showcase creative arts programs and events unique to the university.

Come celebrate! To celebrate its 10th anniversary, the Canton Historical Society will host an open house 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, March 21 at the Canton Historical Museum, Proctor and Canton Center roads, south of Cherry Hill. Refreshments will be served

"Come and see what we've been doing," says Marta McCabe, society president.

In addition to periodic special exhibits, the museum boasts three permanent exhibits, which spotlight the history of the township's farms, villages and schools. Other regular displays serve up tidbits from early Canton life.

A new alcove display shows a turn-of-the century family washday scene.

The current special exhibit features DeVileiss perfume atomizers, loaned by a private dates from the 1920s. The 30piece set includes accessories like powder boxes, travs and a perfume nightlight.

"What I'm tired of seeing are big clearance and sale signs in everyone's window," said Hardy. "Times are tough, but we want to come up with different sales; techniques to find the business that's still there.'

IF THE recession and road work weren't bad enough, Nelson's received another blow recently when its neighbor, Baker Street Interiors, announced plans to move to downtown Farmington. Besides being a good source for referrals, many customers stopped in Nelson's to browse after doing business at Baker's.

Though retailers in Terrence Corners have asked their landlord for rent incentives just to get by, Hardy wants to believe that good times are around the corner.

Spring show palette awash with color

By Linda Ann Chomin special writer

The Palette Guild's spring art show, featuring watercolor, acrylic, oil, pastel, graphite, colored pencil and collage, awakens the Livonia City Hall lobby with bright red tulips, geraniums and petunias through March 27.

Fifteen Guild artists display florals, landscapes, portraits and still life in the tradition of realism and abstraction in the 73-piece exhibition judged by Marie Larson, who teaches oil portrait and figure painting at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association.

"The show is hung so that the colors kind of flow. We wanted a nice showing, a nice interplay with the work, a certain amount of watercolor, a certain amount of oil," said Guild president Callie Thomson of West Bloomfield.

"I hate to see a show that's all watercolor or all oil. We wanted all of the media to be represented in the prizes."

Thomson took first place for the collage, "Underfoot," a dark dynamic work with a woodsy feel. "I love to work on a black background," Thomson said. "It doesn't mean there isn't color in there. They're very subtle."

SECOND PLACE honors went to Evelyn Henry of Redford for "Orchids No. II," a pastel of pale pink moth orchids

"I like working in pastel because you're working with pure color," said Henry, exhibit chairwoman with Pat Quiery. "I like pastels because I'm more loose and free with them."

Henry, who began painting in oils in the 1950s, worked 21 years in the art department of Campbell-Ewald in downtown Detroit. Elements of design and color present in her art-

Fabric art will energize Livonia library's visual appeal

SOME MAY see them as rags. Others may think they're attractive. Many will recognize their artistry. A few may view them as a textile medium within a collage of brick, mortar and glass

No matter. Fabric art from Michigan artists will adorn the Atrium of the Livonia Civic Center Library, 32777 Five

Livonia Friends of the Library are sponsoring a statewide contest with the intent to buy or commission fabric art for permanent display in the Atrium, home to chamber concerts, used book sales, art exhibits and other community events

The fabric art will fill a sort of architectural void.

"We wanted something to hang from the ceiling - to float in space," says Jack Olds, Friends president and a Livonia arts com-

LIVONIA ARTS commissioner Dan Kachnowski suggested fabric art when the library opened in 1988.

'What it does," he said, "is bring art into a real part of the communi ty, where everybody can see and be a part of it."

Kachnowski, a member of the contest selection committee, called the library "a beautiful building. It's a delight with all the glass so visitors

"What we're hoping to do is add inside color to the relative plainness of the Atrium, to warm the library up, to give a new look and feel, to make it even more beautiful."

The Friends have ticketed up to $5,000 from their used book sale proceeds to buy and install fabric art for the Atrium.

"For the amount of money we had available," Olds said, "this made more sense than try to acquire a piece of sculpture that would be put outside or on the building."

CONTEST ENTRIES have been sent to 30 fabric artists around the

The library's two entryways lead to an Atrium that's 40 feet high and which slopes to a height of 14 feet.

There's no contest theme. "We've left it open for artists to dig in and do whatever design they think is appropriate," Olds said.

Designs must be original and be made from durable materials.

Olds hopes this year's kickoff contest results in the purchase or commission of maybe two fabric pieces The contest won't be held yearly

For art buffs, libraries long have been a popular place to stimulate the mind through literature.

But as Kachnowski put it: "Fabric art, coupled with the other artwork in the library, will give the eyes a little bit of pleasure."

Bob Sklar is assistant managing editor for special projects.

One of my earliest, most vivid memories: my older sister and me, seated in the balcony at Grauman's Chinese Theater in Hollywood, watching Walt Disney's animated short film "Saludos Amigos."

I must have been about 3 years old then. It's hard to remember a time in my life when I wasn't crazy about movies. I mean really freaked out. Good movies, bad movies, in-between movies - I'll watch just about any movie ever made

This is not to say that I don't have a Favorites List, of course. Every discriminating movie freak has one of those. Right now, mine is headed by "2001," "Deliverance," "One by "2001," "Deliverance," "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," "We Were Strangers" and "Chinatown," although not necessarily in that or-

Naturally, since I love to read, reading about movies, moviemakers and moviemaking is one of my favorite pastimes.

What more enjoyable way to savor "The African Queen," for example, than to read Katharine Hepburn's lively 1987 memoir, "The Making of the African Queen"? Except perhaps to read director John Huston's account of things in "An Open Book" (1980). And, speaking of John Huston, how better to acquaint yourself with the nitty-gritty of filmmaking than to study Lillian Ross' "Picture (first published in 1952), which centers on the creation of his film "The Red Badge of Courage"?

HERE. A list of recently published books that can take fans behind-thecelluloid

• "Fred Zinneman: An Autobiography," by Fred Zinneman (Scribners/Stewart, $29.95). This memoir by the Oscar-winning director is a sparkling treasure for all film buffs. Zinneman reminisces about the making of such classics as "From Here to Eternity" (its upbeat ending, he says, "makes me sick every time I see it"), "High Noon" and Oklahoma!" (shot on location in Arizona), plus more than a dozen of his

other films. Of all his movies, Zinne man names "A Member of the Wedding" (1952) as his favorite, even though, commercially, it was a resounding failure. Splendid photos.

• "Martin Scorsese: A Journey, Mary Pat Kelly (Thunder's Mouth, $21.95). A large, stellar cast of characters, including Robert De Niro, Liza Minnelli, Paul Newman, Sting and Scorsese himself provide the dialogue for this engrossing look into Scorsese movies like "Raging Bull," "Taxi Driver," "The King of Comedy," and others. The book also contains preview material from Scorsese's latest film, "Cape Fear," plus notes on some intriguing future projects. Dozens of black-and-white photos complement the text, although you may want to keep a magnifying glass at hand; many are rather poorly reproduced.

Naturally, since I love to read, reading about movies, moviemakers and moviemaking is one of my favorite pastimes.

• "The Devil's Candy," by Julie Salamon (Houghton Mifflin, $24.95). All 423 pages are devoted to the making (unmaking?) of one movie: "The Bonfire of the Vanities," from Tom Wolfe's megaseller novel. Perhaps the movie was a sputtering failure (one group of American film critics voted "Bonfire of the Vanities" the worst film of 1990), but this book most definitely is not. It's a highly entertaining, thorough account of how Hollywood decision makers can sometimes make all the wrong decisions backstage. Salamon, a film critic for The Wall Street Journal, was allowed unlimited access to the production from the beginning. The story she came out with is movie material in itself. Blackand-white photos.

· "Bloody Sam: The Life and Films of Sam Peckinpah," by Marshall Fine (Fine, $24.95). If Peckinpah films such as "Ride the High Country," "The Wild Bunch" and 'Straw Dogs" are your thing, you'll be especially interested in this book focusing on their creation and their late director was often criticized for explicit violence and brutality depicted in his films, Fine contends that the movies were the result of-"skill, artistry and vision." Blackand-white photos · Ticket to Paradise: American-Movie Theaters and How We Had Fun," by John Margolies and Emily Gwathmey (Bulfinch, $29.95). This is not really about films and filmmaking, but if you're a fan, this book is' something you don't want to miss. Veteran moviegoers, ushers, a former projectionist, an entertainer, director John Landis and others remember their own moviegoing experiences in the heyday of the grand-theater palaces like the Roxy in Manhattan and the aforementioned Grauman's Chinese in Hollywood. Text is accompanied by some fun photos and illustrations, including anumber of reproduced postcards from the era.

Last year also brought tough times to D & M Art Studio & Cooperative Gallery in Plymouth, which sells original work by

Michigan artists priced from $50 to $900. "This has been a tough year and a scary one," said owner Sharon Dillenbeck, whose business has dropped about 35 percent compared to a year ago. 'A lot of friends have lost their galleries or have gone into smaller places. It takes a lot of money to run a gallery and it's

SINCE DILLENBECK sells on consignment, she has reduced her fee from 40 to 20 percent so artists can lower their prices. To reduce overhead, artists who show work at D & M volunteer to work at the gallery one day a month. Dillenbeck also has beefed up advertising and, like Nelson's Gallery, has increased the number of parent-and-child workshops, especially during school breaks.

'All of the galleries are networking to help each other," she said "Commissions are down, but if I get a request for something I can't do, I'll recommend another local gallery or artist."

Last November, Dillenbeck and Julie Giordano, a Northville gallery owner, organized a bus tour of 10 galleries in Northville and Plymouth "just to let people know what was in their own community." Gallery owners chipped in to rent double-decker buses from Dearborn Trolley and just about broke even on the one-day event, Dillenbeck said.

BUSINESS AT Native West Gallery in downtown Plymouth hasn't decreased, but customers are choosing modest-priced prints over limited editions and other higher-priced art like acrylics and watercolors, said owner Becky Dodson, who sells original southwest art, rugs and jewelry.

With the recession came the downtown closing of Me & Mr. Jones, Fred Hill Haberdashery and Cloverdale Ice Cream Parlours & Restaurant - closings that did little to bolster consumer confidence in Plymouth, Dodson said. "I think people were worried by what they experienced right here in town," Dodson said. "But business volume has picked up in the last two months and response to our in-store shows has

For now, Dodson will stock more modest-priced art than she did a year ago, but she'll also start selling Navajo rugs, priced at $150 to $3,000 and sandpaintings priced as high as $2,000.

UNLIKE ITS competition, Wentworth Gallery, headquartered in Miami, Fla., is going ahead with ambitious plans to open 12 new locations throughout the country this year. Their newest opened Feb. 29 in Laurel Park Place Mall in Livonia.

An optimistic Michael O'Mahony, company president and CEO, reports that sales in all 22 of his galleries are well ahead of previous years. He believes his galleries thrive in spite of the times for three reasons: right mix of merchandise, right price,

Though O'Mahony says there's no magic to selling art, his company does extensive market research before setting up All of his galleries are in upscale malls like Laurel Park, which also includes Jacobson's, Ann Taylor, Gantos and Talbots (coming this spring). Wentworth sells oils, sculptures and numbered lithographs and serigraphs by 40 renowned artists from the U.S. and Europe. Prices range from $100 to $50,000, with the greatest number of sales in the $300 to $4,000 range.

O'MAHONY SAYS his galleries have an "art-friendly" atmosphere to encourage browsing: the door is always open and the gallery is brightly lit.

"I find it very offensive to walk into a gallery and be asked, 'Are you a collector?' " he said. "You don't have to be to appreciate fine art. Everyone starts by owning his or her first piece of artwork."

You could say Wentworth Galleries also gives customers an offer they generally can't refuse. They'll deliver and even hang your selection at no charge. And if you can't decide what to buy, they'll deliver as many as 20 paintings to your home, so you or a designer can see the work with your furnishings and lighting.

Said O'Mahony of the recession: "I'm refusing to take part in work speak of skills learned during the many years spent in advertising. "I like all kinds of color. I see colors in people's skin that others don't, bluish and peach tones," Henry said.

Two one-person shows at the Scarab Club in Detroit, two at Livonia City Hall and two at the Farmington Community Library demonstrate an advanced degree of maturity in Hen-

Henry plays with the sun and shadows it casts upon foliage in "Orchids No.II." The stem holding up the cluster of moth orchids looms upward, leading the viewer's eye to translucent petals, pale pink and lyrical. A huge old snarling tree on the left contrasts the orchid's delicacy and the foliage's sharp lines.

THIRD PLACE winner Rose Marie Starke of Farmington Hills rendered "Breakfast in the Garden" in colored pencil. In this whimsical piece two rabbits, jolted to attention by an unseen sight or sound nibble beet leaves in a vegetable garden. Their beige fur is accented by hints of white rimming their eyes, noses, Judging for the spring show went according to Guild guidelines, Thomson said.

"You should give the judge guide-lines. They've got to judge on tech-nique, use of color and design. Art is art. There are the rules and it should be judged on the basics."

Organized in 1954, the 58-member Palette Guild takes pride in that its numbers run smaller than most art clubs. "We're a quality club and because we have fewer members, we relate more on a one-to-one basis," Thomson said.

An in-house critique session of works in the spring show took place at the Guild's monthly meeting a week previous to the city hall open-

"We view our peers works, add our comments. Everyone adds something. It's kind of nice because it gives you an idea how it is going to hit someone else," Thomson said.

HONORABLE MENTIONS went to Evelyn Henry for "Lola Valley," Madeline Tabock for "Winter De-Marlene Zazoulinsky for

• WILDLIFE ART

The wild ones will return for the ninth annual running of the Michigan Wildlife Art Festival, Friday-Sunday, March 20-22, in Southfield

The annual benefit for wildlife restoration is designed to raise public consciousness about the needs of wildlife by exhibiting the best in wildlife art.

For the first time in many years, all festival activities and exhibits will be in one facility, the Southfield Civic Center, on Evergreen between 10 and 11 Mile.

All festival admissions and art purchases are direct investments in the wildlife work of the Michigan Wildlife Habitat Foundation. The festival is produced by the foundation in cooperation with the city of Southfield. For information about becoming a sponsor or to receive a schedule of events, call the foundation at 517-882-3630.

The Southfield Pavilion will be the site of the largest exhibition of wildlife art in the Midwest. More than 50 of the USA's premiere wildlife artists will display hundreds of paintings, prints, carvings, etchings, bronzes, photography and scratchboard. All art work at the festival will be for sale.

The festival will feature "The Federal," a montage of the present, past and most interesting details of 58 years of the Federal Duck Stamp Program.

Also present will be the last three winners, including the only woman to ever win, three of the top four finishers in 1992, the top 20 original entries and the only brothers to ever win the contest. The U.S. Department of Interior will present an exhibition, "The Duck Stamp Story. The 1992 featured artist is Al Agnew of Ste. Genevieve, Mo. Agnew's red fox painting, "Running Wild," will be the festival print and given to all habitat sponsors. Sponsors will also receive two tickets to the festival preview, which includes the third annual Celebrity Decoy Painting Contest. Those attending the preview may vote for the 1993 featured artist.

Also at the '92 festival will be the Outdoor Writers Association of America Photo Contest winners, a wildlife seminar series, the ever-popular decoy painting contest and exhibits by Michigan conservation groups. Wildlife Marketplace, a supermar-ket of wildlife gifts, will be back by popular demand.

Buyers stand to gain with consumer information

Behind all the fancy words relating to marketing, financing and product, residential real estate is still a consumer transaction with a buyer and seller at each end.

Carol Hainline, a Realtor for nine years and currently president-elect of the Society of Consumer Affairs Professionals in Business, Great Lakes Chapter, has applied some tips she's learned from involvement in that organization to her workaday world.

"In real estate, our customers are consumers as well," Hainline said. They are making one of the largest financial decisions of their lifetime. It should be looked at as an investment as well as a place to live." Hainline, a Livonia resident, also works in that community at Century 21 Row.

'I provide a lot of information to consumers, not just sales," she said. There's mortgages, condition of houses as far as inspections . . formation about what to look for in a home, investment potential, what neighborhood will resell.

"I do it (consumer affairs) differently than corporations. I do it more on an individual basis," she said.

HAINLINE RECALLS taking to heart the message of a luncheon speaker, John Knappenberger, affiliated with the American Society for Quality Control. "When he talked about quality, he talked about not only products, but services," she

"In general, there's a lot of seminars and publications, little hints about going out of the way to help customers," Hainline said of membership in the association.

Specifically, she has learned to:

• Carry a cellular telephone in her purse. "If I'm out of range, I have a message beeper. I'm always available. Customers can't get frustrated if they can't reach me.

· Look for ways to cut down busy work. "We're independent contractors. Generally each individual goes to the banks on their own to get information. I contact people in community affairs (at banks) and ask, 'Can you send me 100 pamphlets?' It helps me as well."

· Make contacts to keep current of events that could impact her business. "A lot of information is available to me. Knowing what's going on with the economy and what's going on with a company can help me with job insights."

ONE EXAMPLE she cited knowing in advance about the possibility of the GM Willow Run Assembly Plant closing and potential impacts on the local real estate market.

"Sometimes, I'm facing a little downturn in the economy," Hainline "I can discuss with Credit Counseling to see how it affects their . . and how I can advise (adverse) credit situations.

The Great Lakes Chapter maintains a video and publications library for members that address a variety of consumer affairs issues, she said. Monthly luncheons and seminars also provide an opportunity to learn and network.

'Most people are involved in consumer affairs at some point whether they realize it or not," Hainline said. "Most people in sales or public relations are involved with a customer one way or another.'

Real estate professionals and others interested in joining the Society of Consumer Affairs Professionals in Business should contact Hainline at her office, 464-7111. Dues are $95 the first year.

Tax advantages sound great but read the fine print

I understand there are new tax advantages having to do with home sales. One regarding a delay in a tax on the appreciation of the home and the other regarding an exclusion for persons age 55 and over. Can you explain this?

The new rules are potentially simple tax breaks that may be a trap for the unwary. If you sell your house and buy another within two years before or two years after the sale date, you can defer taxation of the gain from the sale of the old house as long as the cost of the new house at least equals the sales price (minus certain expenses) of the old. This does not include special rules for military service people and job-related foreign moves. If the new house costs less than the old, then some of the gain on the old will have to be recognized to the extent of the difference. Both the old and new houses must be principal residences. The deferral of gain is not optional — if you meet the requirements of the tax law, you must not report the gain. As to the exclusion to which you refer, taxpayers who are 55 or older can elect to exclude up to $125,000 of gain on the sale of a principal residence. Taxpayers must have used the house as a principal residence for at least three out of the five years before the sale. There is a special rule for taxpayers who require care in a nursing home or other fa-

condo queries

If you qualify for this break, you can subtract up to $125,000 from whatever gain you have on the sale of your house in figuring your tax liability. But the exclusion is available only once in a taxpayer's lifetime.

Beware of the potential trap because a married couple is treated as a unit for purposes of the $125,000 exclusion. Thus, if a couple owns a house in joint name, and only one spouse is 55 or older and satisfies the three out of five years rule, then both can elect the exclusion on a joint return. But once a spouse has used the break, the couple is "tainted," and the "taint" stays with both spouses wherever they go.

If the couple divorces, or if one spouse dies, the break cannot be used again with a new spouse. So if a home-owning taxpayer who has not used the break marries a divorced or widowed taxpayer who has used it, that couple cannot use the break. If a couple is contemplating marriage and both are homeowners who would qualify for this break, they should consider selling both homes before marriage if circumstances otherwise favor such a move.

In determining what is a principal residence, if taxpayers have more than one house, only the house in which they live most of the time will qualify. In that regard, a co-op, condo, houseboat, trailer or yacht can qualify. Renting out the old house for a short period will not prevent the house from being a princiapl residence under these rules. But you are adviser about all details of the tax breaks discussed here as they relate to your own situation.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate and corpo-rate law. You are invited to submit topics you would like to see discussed in this column by writing Robert M. Meisner at 30200 Telegraph Road, Suite 467, Bingham Farms 48025. This column provides general information and should not be construed as legal opinion.

On April 17, 1990, three unsuccessful applicants for employment with the City of Detroit brought a lawsuit challenging the City's policy of rejecting those who were not residents at the time of application. On March 5, 1990, the Court determined that the lawsuit could proceed on

On April 5, 1991, the Court ruled that the City of Detroit's pre-employment residency requirements result in an impermissible burden on the fundamental right to travel and are therefore unconstitutional (unlawful). The pre-employment residency rules struck down by the Court include the requirements (1) that applicants for general City employment be residents of the City at the time of application: (2) that applicants for employment as police officers hall have established permanent residence in the City of Detroit at least 60 days prior to application; and that non-residents of the City shall not be certified for employment (regardless of their position on the eligible register) as long as there are Detroit residents on the register. At the same time, the Court recognized that the City had the right to require residency of those who actually do become City employees.

Cost and location are among the top factors for choosing an office site. But other less obvious factors such as prestige, address and even proximity to the CEO's home are often considered before a lease is signed. Above are Seven Mile Crossing (left) and Victor V, both located in Livonia.

Subtle factors influence choice of office location

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

The economy is slow, and there is little growth — we know that. Office leasing is flat - we know

Any leasing that is going on is just a result of a lease expiring — or to put it in the vernacular, it's all musical buildings - we know that.

What we don't know is why one building is chosen over another.

Price is important, but how im-Location, location is critical in every real estate transaction, but location in relation to what? Developers spend thousands of dollars on architects for plans, but how important is that? A tony Birmingham zip code adds distinction for a house, but does it mean anything to an office? According to Jerome L. Reiss, an office specialist with Burland, Reiss, Murphy & Rembiesa Inc. in Southfield, prospective tenants want efficiency, not necessarily price. In any given market, competition between offices governs leasing prices, he said. "Price will seek its own level. Since most buildings will have similar leasing rates, Reiss explained efficiency is a better dete miner of what space will lease.

Efficiency in an office building means several things, Reiss said. Naturally, the office should have enough space to meet tenant present and future needs.

For a growing company, that means room to expand. For a mature company, that means space to meet existing needs. It also means how adapable a property is to needs.

Efficiency also means location, but it's not necessarily an address or zip code that attracts tenants, he said

"Location means proximity to the firm's clients — to many firms that is the most important factor.'

STEVEN CHABEN, executive vice president of Farbman Stein & Co. in Troy, said the type of office also enters into the space equation. Is the office going to have clients visiting, or do sales people use the office as a central headquarters?

If clients visit, potential tenants want an office that is easy to find and accessible to clients. That means access to roads and airports, good parking, and easy to find. A business that has frequent visitors may also want a more glitzy building to put on its best face for clients, he said. If a tenant uses the office as a headquarters, but mostly works in the field, a firm can do without the frills and be more concerned with space and basic needs.

Chaben stressed it's difficult to speculate what a potential tenant looks for in an office building. "Each has specific and specific wants.'

REISS OF Burland, Reiss, Murphy & Rembiesa agreed. An upscale community or building is important for some: for others, it's not

Cost still biggest factor in leasing

By Gerald Frawley staff writer

No matter how nice a building looks, no matter where it's located, no matter what other perquisites an office building has to offer - the greatest concern of all potential tenants is cost, said Steven Chaben, executive vice president at Farbman Stein & Co. in Troy.

"Today, there are two things motivating people to move — num-ber one is downsizing, number two is economics," he said.

With companies cutting their work force, they obviously don't need as much space, he said.

Economics, naturally, speaks for itself. The tenant wants the most space and best address and amenities for his dollar, he said. Right now, that is the overriding concern of tenants looking for office space.

In a competitive market, comparable buildings would have comparable lease rates, which means that other, non-financial considerations might make a difference in how an office building is leased.

BUT IN A competitive, overbuilt market suffering from a recession, there are other factors at work. Two identical office buildings in the same area may have drastically different

Lately, there has been a steady stream of foreclosures hitting the

After a building owner defaults on a loan, the lending institutions takes control of property. The lending institutions' primary concern is to break even and collect on the debt, not make a profit that is necessary to pay of a loan.

Therefore, the lending institution can undercut other building owners who need the profit margin. The result: More tenants go to the less expensive buildings.

Building owners either lose tenants and cannot make their loan payments or they try to match the lending institutions rates and have full buildings but still can't make their payments.

"More than likely, the en-trepreneur is going to lose his prop-erty," he said, adding this will lead to more foreclosures.

"It's a domino effect." As more lenders foreclose on buildings, the rates are dropping below levels where building owners can compete,

"After he (the prospective tenant) has worked the competitive juices of the market and it comes to applesand-apples comparison, it's all up to the individual needs and wants of the company," he said. "If you get beyond that, your talk-ing non-economic factors and that's really not worth editorializing

A tony address and architectural flourishes are generally more important for firms seeking prestige. "All other things being equal, prestige can be very important."

Reiss related a story of an advertising firm he set up in a prestigious office building.

"Basically, they didn't want a high-prestige image anymore they didn't want to have better quarters than their customer," he said. Reiss said he found them a plain, but functional office building.

Several years later, when that lease had expired, the company contacted him about another move this time to nicer quarters.

"There was a change in management philosophy - they went from less expensive to very expensive because they felt the nice offices would help them to attract new clients,"

PAT PULKOWNIK, president of the Patrician Group, said in her experience it is still location that leases office space. Proximity to clients, proximity to airports, proximity to the road network - firms need to be near clients.

But one factor that isn't often discussed, but which is important concerning location, is convenience for the chief executive of the company. "Daily drive time for the CEO can make the difference - he always wants a location that is closer to "One of the things I do in the first interview is find out where the (chief executive) lives," Pulkownik said.

Many companies are also concerned about where employees live when considering an office move. Less disruption for the employees means less disruption in the work-

The third critical area to consider is the landlord. Early on in the process. Pulkownik said she likes to set up a meeting between the tenant and landlord.

"Tenants want to see how easy the landlord is to live with. I want the tenant to be satisfied," she said. "If he's not, the tenant will badmouth

Preparation key to reducing stress on moving day

By R.J. King special write

For anyone buying or selling a home these days, negotiating with mortgage lenders, real estate agents and home inspectors is nothing compared to moving day.

If unorganized or unprepared, get set for both physical pain and mental anguish. Even under the best of conditions, moving from one home to another can bring on stress in the worst way. Perhaps the most important consideration in moving, according to area experts, is whether homeowners can afford professionals to do all the transporting.

In most cases, a full-service move across state lines will run $3,000, and will cost more than a do-it-yourself move. A full-service move within metro Detroit will run roughly $500 to $600. But if you have the money and are considering spending it on something else, calculate what your time is worth per hour and how many hours it would take to move, pack and unpack without any help. Then factor in the cost of renting or borrowing a truck, gasoline, something breaking in transit and physical wear and tear. (See box.)

"Cost really depends on how much people want to do," said Wayne Daniels, president and CEO of R.J. Liddy Moving and Transport in Plymouth Township. "If you pack everything yourself, mark the boxes, and are waiting when the movers arrive, it will be a lot less expensive.

'If you're planning a move up think about what will be packed. It doesn't really pay to haul timber or gardening stones because you can get that stuff a lot cheaper by buying it after you've settled."

In a given metropolitan area, most movers charge by the hour (about $50 to $70). The price includes two or three movers, depending on the size of a home. Savvy customers may also get movers to lend them used boxes at little or no cost.

Outside metro boundaries, though, the cost of a move is based on the weight of the shipment and the distance to be traveled. But again, the more work you do beforehand will reflect on the final price. While most moving companies provide free estimates, as a general rule, figure about 1,000 to 1,500 pounds per room, using the higher figure for ap-

The time of the move is also important

"Most movers charge more for Sundays and holidays, but if we're booked on a Saturday and you really have to move, we may waive the extra Sunday cost at our discretion," said JoAnn Clark, office manager of All State Van Lines in Troy.

away, people can also save by making trips on their own and putting things like kitchen items away when no one is around. That way, you can have the movers take care of the heavy stuff and save time."

Another way to save money is to cut down on possessions, Movers recommend having a garage sale before an estimator comes to the house. Pitch or give away items that can be easily replaced. In addition, large items like dressers can be left intact as movers will lift them regardless of whether clothing is inside or not.

On the morning of the move, save a few empty boxes for such items as coffee makers, overnight linens and bathroom towels

In hiring a professional, buyers should check that both the company and individual movers are license and carry insurance. State law also requires that movers have current physicals. In turn, while it may be cheaper to pack boxes yourself, consider that liability for damaged goods such as broken crystal shifts to the homeowner, unless a mover happens to drop a box somewhere

We have a free brochure we send to people which outlines everything you need to know about moving. said Jenni Page, office manager for O'Sullivan Moving & Storage Co., Inc., which has offices in Farmington Hills and Rochester.

Generally, if the mover packs the boxes and something breaks along the way, then the mover is responsible. But if the customer packs the box, and the dishes wind up broken after the move, the customer is re-

One way to avoid some liability is to pack everything but the most

me movers will lend furniture pads and Styrofoam inserts at no extra charge. As for the do-it-yourself move, it pays to have friends, especially those who work for automotive companies.

Such people may have the clout to borrow a free van for the weekend. Friends also won't charge for their services, although tradition mandates a homeowner spring for lunch or dinner. But keep in mind that someday you may have to return the

(AP) - Home buyers would be told more about the presence of the radioactive gas radon on their property under a Senate-passed bill.

The chief sponsor of the measure is Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J. It passed 82-6 and has yet to be considered by the House.

It would require mortgage companies to provide information about the health risks in areas of the country where problems with the naturally occurring substance are preva-

The bill stops short of requiring

The Environmental Protection Agency also would be required to make a detailed assessment of radon contamination and establish "radon priority" areas, estimated to cover about one-third of the country, where high levels of the gas are considered most likely.

me for putting him in the building."

If the landlord keeps his word, keeps the building maintained and takes care of problems quickly, that will go a long way toward cementing a lease agreement, Pulkownik said.

REISS OF Burland, Reiss, Murphy & Rembiesa said building ownership or management does play an important role.

A full-time, professional, nearby ownership should also not be discounted, Reiss said. "For a more sophisticated type of corporation - that's

'A busy professional who has a problem with his office does not want to chase some guy in Florida around all day to get it resolved," he said. "We as brokers, bring this out up front."

Pulkownik said amenities like auxiliary and commercial services near the building also score fairly high on tenant preference lists, he said. Banks, hotels or retail space that cater to the specific needs of a company in the building or nearby are also a big plus.

Security and lighted parking has also become a far more important issue for tenants as well.

A building's appearance should also not be overlooked, she said. For the most part, architecture is a given. "A building has to look nice.

Still, the corporate culture and type of business may limit the type of architecture and design ap-propriate for a given tenant, she said. Some tenants may demand a more traditional-looking building or more contemporary building.
