City joins lawsuit against state

The city has joined a law suit aimed at forcing the district court to turn more money over from local op-

BY KEVIN BROWN

By investing around $150, the city administration could stand to gain $156,000.

That was the idea behind the decision by city commissioners Monday to become a co-plaintiff in a lawsuit brought by municipalities who operate district courts in Michigan.

The lawsuit was brought against the state, on the premise the state has failed to reimburse the communities costs rise sharply.

for court operating costs as the state once said it would.

The city's cost to join the lawsuit could go higher, said city attorney Ron Lowe who suggested that commissioners opt to join the suit.

The cost could rise to $1,000 or so, depending on how many communities in the state not already part of the suit opt to join it.

Lowe said commissioners could choose to get out of the suit should joining a companion suit to Grand Traverse County vs. the State of Michigan, a suit won by district

"Both parties are determined to see this suit through, even if that requires going to the Supreme Court, Lowe told commissioners.

If the city participates and the state wins, Lowe said, "the city will most likely only lose its small prorata share of the attorney fees

But if the courts win, the city could get its share of the $156,000 in operating costs it paid in 1991 - plus further court expenses incurred this year and in the future "until such time as the legislature acts to change the law." Lowe said.

The city did not join the original suit because the 35th District Court in the city and operated by Plym outh, Plymouth Township, Canton. Northville and Northville Township is one of two district courts in Michigan that make money

Some commissioners said they were concerned that should the state win the lawsuit eventually, the city would lose its district court revenue

They are going to do that whether we are involved or not involved,

"One of the things we're buying with our participation is having a say in where this goes eventually," Lowe

Harassing hunters?

Animal rights activists charged under new law

Two Plymouth people are among seven animal rights activists charged with interfering with arch ery deer hunters last month.

Seven animal rights activists charged with antihunting activity Oct. 3 in Pinckney were to face arraignment in district court in Chelsea Nov 24 on misdemeanor counts.

On Monday, that court date was changed to Dec

The seven activists were charged with violating Michigan's two year old hunter harassment law. The protest was organized by the national Fund for Animals, specifically to challenge the law, said Heidi Prescott of Silver Springs, Md., outreach di

We're the largest anti-hunting group in the country. For three years that's what I've been doing." Prescott said. "We are going to use these arrests as a platform to challenge the hunter

Why challenge hunters? Prescott said Michigan is the No 1 state in the country for bow hunting. There is a high crippling rate," she said

For every one animal that's hit another dies a lingering death," she said.

Prescott said the Fund For Animals bases their findings on statistics compiled by state wildlife in today's society, recreational killing of wildlife should go also," she said.

Charged from Plymouth in the Oct 3 incidens were Karen Elwert, five counts, and Michael Chia do, four counts, according to the Washtenaw County prosecutor's office.

Chiado rejects the idea that hunting is necessary to reduce deer over population, and that people hunt for food.

Since 1972, the Department of Natural Resources has encouraged growth of the deer herd, he said. "They do clear cutting and controlled burning to provide a low browse, that way there's more hunters, more licenses and more hunting revenue

Canton girls upset Salem

LYMOUTH SALEM upset Plymouth Canton in the first round of the state girls' basketball tournament Monday night with a 40-33 win.

One of the top Class A teams, host Plymouth Canton is now 18-3, while archrival Salem's record improved to 12-9

Cyndi Platter led the Rocks with 13 points. Christy Parimucha tossed in 11. In the final minute of the game. Parimucha was 6-for-6 from the free-throw line Top scorer for the Chiefs was Amy Westerhold with eight points.

The Chiefs took the Western Lakes Activities Association title with a 57-42 win over Livonia Stevenson in the playoff final. The victory clipped Stevenson's 19-game winning streak.

The Rocks, who on Monday avenged two previous losses, captured the Western Lakes Activities Association consolation title.

Christmas Cheer Club to help kids

Our readers made it a whopping success last year, so we're bringing it back

We're talking about the Plymouth and Canton Observer Christ mas Cheer Club.

The idea behind the club is that no child should be without a gift on Christmas, and no family should go hungry.

Joining is easy. Membership is open to anyone who can take the time to stop by our office and drop off a canned good or new, unwrapped toy for a needy child.

We'll start taking donations the day after Thanksgiving.

Then, we'll continue to collect them through mid-December. That's when we'll turn them over to the Salvation Army for distribution to needy kids and families in our area.

So once Thanksgiving is out of the way, grab a canned good or gift and come on by our office at 744 Wing. Bring the kids.

Court may decide who runs suburban family shelter

BY SUSAN ROSIEK STAFF WRITER

Wayne County's Westland shelter for homeless families opened less than two years ago with praise and high hopes from local and county officials. It was touted as the the first and only suburban shelter in the nation designed for families

Today the shelter is at the center of a court dispute between the county and the agency hired to run it - Wayne Metropolitan Community Services Inc.

On Monday, Judge Gail McKnight of Westland's 18th District Court signed an order to evict the agency from offices at the shelter on Henry Ruff and Michigan Avenue

The county has charged the agency with mismanagement and misappropriation of funds and is seeking to terminate the remaining four years of the contract.

McKnight's order does not address the contract dispute. The order simply states there is no lease between the county and the agency

Luther Flanagan, executive director of Wayne Metropolitan, called the charges "totally false" and accused county officials of "deliberately making allegations they know to be false.

Flanagan said attorneys for the agency are preparing to appeal the order in Wayne County Circuit Court and he charged that county officials are using the issue for "their own political purposes."

Deputy County Exeuctive Michael Duggan cited the shelter's low occupancy and funding concerns as key reasons for the action. He said the county made "a mistake in selecting the agency."

Duggan said a new director will be hired.

'We're prepared for a smooth transition unless Wayne-Metro has other ideas. It's unfortunate it had to be done this way, Duggan added.

Duggan said occupancy rates at the shelter have been below normal since the center opened.

"It's been well below normal and there's no excuse for that with the kind of homeless problem we have," explained Duggan.

He said the county is moving quickly to restore confidence in the facility and hopes there will be no interruption of service.

The shelter was renovated in part with block grant money from 10 western Wayne County communities including Westland, Livonia, Canton Township, Garden City, Redford Township. Plymouth and Plymouth Town-

The shelter provides temporary housing for 26 families with children. It was also designed to provide job, family and drug counseling and help in looking for affordable housing.

In the eviction affadavit filed earlier this week in Westland's 18th District Court, attorneys for the county charged that Wayne Metroplitan Community Services Agency has committed several serious violations of the contract.

The county's long list of allegations include improper sexual conduct on the part of a staff member, double-billing by the agency and hiring personnel who tested positive for cocaine.

County officials said the agency has refused to allow the county to audit its books and records and has refused and failed to submit budgets and required financial reports which account for funding.

Flanagan said the agency has yearly audits. "We're clean. We've never been accused of any misrepresentation of funds. We're reviewed annually by every funding source and there's no such evidence to document this," he said. He said HUD (U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development) conducted a monitoring visit and "found everything to be in order.'

"HUD suggested we extend from 30 to 60 days the time allowed for stays. We did that,' said Flanagan.

Flanagan said it costs approximately "half a million dollars" annually to operate the shelter. THe only money that passes through the county is a $162,000 grant from HUD . He said the agency won funding from the Michigan Department of Social Services and the Federal Emergency Management Administra-

Flanagan admitted that occupancy has been low but he defended the agency's attempts to market the shelter. He noted that the shelter is restricted to fami-

"If we ran the place for single people you couldn't get in the door. But homeless people are not sentenced to a shelter. THere's no question there are homeless families but we can't drag people in off the street."

New movement to seek public support for arts

BY MARY KLEMIC STAFF WRITER

Arts booster Leon Cohan of Bloomfield Hills will lead a "major new advocacy effort" on behalf of public support for the arts, he said Monday night at the eighth annual Governors' Arts Awards ceremony at the Detroit Institute

Cohan, senior vice president and general counsel for Detroit Edison, made the announcement as he accepted the Civic Leader Concerned Citizens for the Arts in Michigan and Michigan Advocates for the Arts asked him to lead the effort, Cohan said. The new organization "and a plan for a vigorous, high-energy citizen volunteer movement on behalf of public support for the arts" will be unveiled next month, he said.

'This will not be a partisan effort. Our leadership and our supporters will be Republicans and Democrats," said Cohan, who was honored with seven other Wayne State University alumni at WSU's Arts Achievement Awards ceremony in March.

But we will work energetically within the political process to persuade decision makers, and we will make certain that our broad constituency is aware of who are the friends and who are the foes of public support for the arts.'

Honor roll call

Other award recipients Monday night were Tyree Guyton, whose major work is the Heidelberg Project, an "art environment" of several blocks on Detroit's east side, presented with the Michigan Artist Award; Michigan Public Radio and its first executive director. Donovan Reynolds, the Media Honor Roll Award; Ed Jacomo, former headmaster at Friends School in Detroit and now associate professor in the College of Fine Arts at Western Michigan University, the Arts in Education Award; Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall and Zalman "Tiny" Konikow, president of the Chamber Music Society of

Detroit, Special Recognition

Also, the Detroit Edison Foundation, the Business Honor Roll Award; and the Attic Theatre of Detroit and Pontiac, the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp of Twin Lake and the Hiawatha Music Co-op of Marquette, Arts Organization Awards

Arts value

In his acceptance speech, which was interrupted by applause three times, Cohan emphasized the value of public support for the arts.

'The arts must be fully prepared to bear their fair share of the sacrifices required in economic hard times," said Cohan, who was chairman of the Michigan Council for the Arts 1987-91.

"And the private sector of course has a major role to play in supporting the arts, and I'm very proud that the company for which I work, Detroit Edison, is being honored tonight for its contribu-

"But there will always be a public responsibility to encourage and support the arts and arts education. And we need to proclaim that message and to proclaim it loudly and clearly."

The arts will prevail partly because of the boost they provide Michigan's economy, employment, tourism and competitive standing, Cohan said.

"And the arts will prevail because we know that when there is a regular program of arts education in the public schools, a young person's life can be opened to the beauty of music, or painting, or dance, or poetry, and turned away from a lifetime sentence to despair and crime and drugs.

"And finally, the arts will prevail because there is more power and meaning in a symphony conducted by Neeme Jarvi, or a trumpet solo by Winton Marsalis, or a work of art by Tyree Guyton, or a play at the Attic Theatre, than there is in all the arguments of those who seek to persuade us that the relatively few tax dollars invested to bring these glories into the lives of our citizens must either be eliminated or drastically reduced."

Other comments

Gov. John Engler flew in from a governors conference in Wisconsin to present the awards. Engler's budget cuts, which included reducing the amount of tax used to support the arts, had drawn strong criticism.

"The past two years have been a time of great change in the Michigan arts community," Engler said.

'The arts can no longer rely on business-as-usual approach,' and "the key is the development of arts partnerships," he said.

"Let us also look ahead to the new year with a spirit of cooperation and understanding.' In accepting the award, Reynolds referred to Pat Buchanan's comments at the Republican National Convention about a "cultural war.

"(If there is a war,) I am on the side of tolerance, diversity and ar-tistic freedom," Reynolds said to a burst of applause from the audience. "We must fight every attempt to censor what we say and

He went on to quote former Czechoslovakian president Vaclav Havel: "We know first hand how essential is a fierce, independent spirit in the attainment of freedom.

Jacomo drew laughs from the crowd when he described the reaction of some people to the arts: "I feel like the Avon Lady among the Mennonites - 'Who needs it?'

"Far from being welfare for the rich, (the arts are) indeed well

Churches sought to help AIDS patients

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW STAFF WRITER

Does God want churches and synagogues to provide help, comfort and forgiveness to people with AIDS?

The folks behind the Oakland County Committee for AIDS Resource Development think so, and they're in the process of soliciting the resources of 300-plus synagogues and churches to extend their charity to AIDS victims.

OCCARD has invited representatives to an "interfaith service" Dec. 1 at the First Presbyterian Church in Pontiac for the aforementioned purpose.

But given the reputation that Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome has in regard to homosexuality and the reputation homosexuality has among Christians and Jews, the mission is not expected to be easy.

OCCARD spokeswoman Denise Johnson said her organization needs to "get (churches) past the stigma (of AIDS) and try to get them to face what their commit-

According to the most recent state health department statistics, there are 3,232 documented cases of AIDS in Michigan, including 339 in Oakland County, 1,474 in Detroit and 320 in the rest of Wayne County.

Little forgiveness

Of those who have AIDS in Michigan, it's estimated that 83 percent of them acquired the disease from homosexual contact or intravenous drug use. Just 4 per-cent reportedly got AIDS from heterosexual contact.

That's why getting churches in-volved in AIDS care is so difficult. "(But) we at least have to give it our best shot," Johnson said. "We figure nothing will beat a failure except a try.'

Roeper confab tackles gifted learning

Are you one of the many educa-tors and parents, disturbed and bewildered by the recent changes in attitude that are leading to negative changes in services for gifted learners?

Just as you thought the com-munity understood that appropriate educational tasks for gifted learners are so very different from standard educational tasks, are you surprised to discover that many influential experts believe that all students are capable of and need to be exposed to those tasks? Or worse yet, have you discovered that the trend in your school is to give students standard grade-level tasks in cooperative groups whether or not the student has already mastered them?

If your answers are yes to these questions and you have more concerns about gifted education and want to know some answers, then take the opportunity and register for the conference that takes place Friday and Saturday, Nov. 20 and 21, "Equity and Excellence: The Possible Dream," designed to provide the most updated information on both equity and excellence for gifted students through school

Speakers and presenters include editorial advisory board members of the Roeper Review, a peer-reviewed journal on Gifted Child Education subscribed to by readers throughout the United States, Europe, South America and on the African, Australian and New Zealand continents. Join others at the "Meet the Editor," session, beginning at 4 p.m. on Friday evening to discuss your concerns and ask questions at an informal gathering.

Jim Borland, author and editor, associate professor of special education at Teachers College, Col-umbia University is Friday evening's keynote speaker. He will discuss the reform issues and the need for equity for services to gifted students as well as the historic conflict between equity and excellence in our society.

Borland will argue that the need for educational reform should not be a pretext for eliminating special educational programs for gifted students. He will also point out that the field of education for the gifted has made itself vulnerable ethically and politically by failing to attend to equity issues.

■ Saturday morning features nine workshops lead by such notables as Annemarie Roeper, now of California, Nicholas Colangelo for the University of Iowa, Nancy Robinson of the University of Washington, Lannie Kanevsky of Simon Fraser University in Brit-ish Columbia, Karen Arnold of Boston College, Ray Swassing of Ohio State University, Borland and Harry Passow from Columbia University and Linda Silverman, psychologist and director of the Gifted Child Development Center in Denver.

Topics include acceleration, cooperative learning, tutoring and mentoring, educating economically disadvantaged gifted children, self-actualization, gifted adults, and gifted girls.

■ Pat O'Connell Ross, U.S. Office of Education, director of Javits Gifted and Talented Program in Washington, D.C. is the lunch keynote speaker. She, too, will speak about education reforms, their impact on gifted education, and what advocates for gifted education can be doing to ensure that school programs remain.

Book fair: It's a bibliophile's mecca

BY TIM SMITH STAFF WRITER

The voluminous and varied contribution made by Jews to American literature is evident the moment one walks into Hamburger Hall at the Jewish Community Center.

That's where everything from bios about Jack Benny and Bob Dylan to the "Encyclopedia of Jewish Humor" is on display and for sale, through Sunday, at the 41st Annual Jewish Book Fair.

And thousands are pouring into the building to have a look, said event spokeswoman Esther Tuchkalper.

"Jewish people are interested in books," Tuchkalper said. "We're the people of the book and people wait all year for it."

Those people include Miriam Hojda of Oak Park, who works next door at the Holocaust Center and who has been making daily

"I think it's a wonderful opportunity for the community to be exposed to all kinds of literature written by Jews or about Jews." Hojda said. "(And) the turnout every day, both in the daytime and evening, has been exception-ally high. That's evidence of the Hojda is among "thousands" who Tuchkalper estimated are attending the Jewish book fair, billed by many as the oldest and biggest in the United States.

They have much to choose from, with bookshelves lining the exhibition hall that are filled with sections about the Holocaust, Israel, philosophy and religion. Tuchkalper said approximately 4,000 titles are available, most of them at retail prices.

For just under $10, one can purchase the "Encyclopedia of Jewish Humor" by Henry Spalding, which features gems such as this verbal exchange:

'Rabbi, I know I am not permitted to smoke inside the synagogue. But tell me, may I smoke outside, on the temple grounds?" The rabbi responds, "Yes, as long as no one sees you. Take my advice and smoke with the lighted end in your mouth.'

Meanwhile, near the back is a children's book display, with titles such as "Fun With Jewish Stencils" and a pop-up book about Hanukkah.

West Bloomfield resident Karen Adelman said the book fair is "a real tribute to our people. We've made a big contribution to Adelman and her mother, Shreda Saretsky of West Bloomfield, were getting ready to browse and buy after leaving nearby jam-packed Shiffman Hall — where author and guest speaker Naomi Ragen had talked about her new book, "Sotah," described in the book fair program as a "novel of love and faith among present day Jerusalem's ultra-Orthodox com-

Agreeing about the book fair's considerable value was Paul Fink, another West Bloomfield resident who listened to Ragen's presentation with his wife, Idene.

"The book fair is excellent," Fink said. ". . . There's not only a large volume (of works at the fair) but a diversified cross-reference of a lot of subjects.'

Not to mention a number of Jewish authors stepping into Shiffman Hall to publicize recent offerings, including Al Franken of Saturday Night Live fame, who at 7 p.m. Sunday will talk about his "I'm Good Enough, I'm Smart Enough, and Doggone It, People

Smokers' rights bill wins OK from House-Senate committee

AP — A bill backed by the to-bacco industry to outlaw discrimination against employees who smoke off the job won approval last Thursday in a House-Senate

The bill, which has passed both chambers in different forms, now returns to the Senate. If passed there, it would go to the House for final approval.

The bill was pushed by the tobacco industry. It was portrayed as a civil rights measure, an attempt to prevent employers from favoring workers and job applicants who don't smoke.

It was criticized by others as reversing the trend to restrict smoking in Michigan and labeled as an industry profits protection

"I feel real comfortable with the bill," said Sen. Fred Dillingham, R-Fowlerville, the bill's sponsor who, ironically, quit smoking months ago. "The bill does what I want it to do."

The bill, which was approved 5-0 in the six-member conference committee, would ban discrimination against smokers who light up outside the workplace. It would make it illegal to make

Madrigal feast set at S'craft

Tickets are still available for the 16th annual Christmas Madrigal Dinner Thursday, Dec. 10, at Schoolcraft College.

The college's music and culinary arts departments team up to recreate a 16th century English feast complete with merriment and song.

The dinner begins at 7:30 p.m. in the college's Waterman Campus Center, 18600 Haggerty Road, between Six and Seven Mile

Proceeds from the dinner benefit culinary arts and music schol-

The singers, under the direction of conductor James Nissen, will enter the hall in full costume to present the Wassail and toast the holiday season. Each course of this year's prime rib feast (complete with all the trimmings) will be presented to the court with trumpet fanfare and ceremony, including the presentation of the boar's head. A court jester will entertain throughout the evening and the madrigal singers will perform period musical arrangements. The culinary arts department will have holiday treats available for sale that evening.

Tickets are $30 per person; tables seat eight. Personal check, Visa, Mastercard or Discover are accepted. To reserve or for more information, contact the college's institutional advancement office from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 462-4417.

ployment or a factor in pay or working conditions.

But the bill also bans discrimination against non-smokers and would permit employers to charge smokers more for health coverage. And an employer could refuse to hire a smoker if it's "a bona fide occupational qualification," such as when an anti-smoking organization refuses to hire a smoker.

Backers say that increasingly, employment ads state that only non-smokers need apply, even if they only smoke at home.

"All you have to do is look at employment ads," said Dilling-ham. "It's one of those problems out there but it was difficult to find people to speak out. We're running out of good arguments against it."

Raj Wiener, legislative counsel for the Michigan Coalition on ly opposed the original bill, said her group is neutral on the final version.

"The bill also protects nonsmokers' rights," she said. The bill in its present form is less harmful in both its message and its impact than the bill as introduced. This bill attempts to address the issue of privacy instead of being a direct plug for a tobacco company."

She said her group will concentrate on pushing legislation designed to curb smoking among

"We're putting all our energies into passing those bills," she said.

While the bill was based on the concern for smokers' rights, it was expanded to include all "consumable products." And the bill would apply only to businesses with five or more employees.

Newcomers club

he Plymouth Newcomers Club holds its annual Holiday Open House from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 3.

A light lunch will be served, and donations for the Detroit Rescue Mission will be accepted. If you wrap items, designate the age and sex of the person the item is for.

Then at 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 5, the group will meet at The Gathering off Kellogg Park to decorate the downtown with garland and bows.

The club is for Plymouth or Plymouth Township residents who've lived here two years or less. For more information, call 459-5328 or 451-0847.

Ski club

tudents in grades six through 12 can continue to sign up for the Plymouth Canton Ski Club before the first trip scheduled for Dec. 4 and 5.

Cost to join is $65. The fee includes the student's first four lift tickets, transportation costs for the entire season and the student's ski club photo ID.

Membership also entitles the student to discount priced lift tickets for all club trips. Trips are chaperoned and transportation is on school buses.

To sign up, students should contact the Plymouth Canton High School community education office in Room 130 of the school at 451-6660.

Officer named

evin Gramlich has been named vice president and chief financial officer for the R.A. DeMattia Co.

The Plymouth Township company is a development, architectural engineering, design and construction firm. Gramlich is a former regional controller for Trizec Properties Inc. of Detroit.

Program accredited

ersonalized Nursing Light House Inc., a Plymouth substance abuse counseling program, was recently awarded a three-year accreditation by the Commission on Accreditation for Rehabilitation Facilites.

The accreditation was awarded after the program was deemed to have heeded standards of clinical and administrative excellence.

An additional strength is the provision of clean and sober private living arrangements for program participants, Light House reported.

Old Russell House coming down

■ The Russell home in Canton has stood the test of time and now historic commission members are looking for a way to

By JOANNE MALISZEWSKI STAFF WRITER

There's irony to the 100-year-old Russell House.

"In 1892 James Russell was a blacksmith and dealt with the vehicle of the day. Now his house will be torn down because of the vehicle of the day," said township trustee-elect Melissa McLaughlin, vice chair of the Canton Historic District Commission.

The Russell House, occupied by James Russell's descendant Gertrude Russell until she died recently, will be torn down soon to make way for a Mobil self-serve gas station and convenience store on a half acre.

"It's a historic house. I hate to see it torn down," said Anwar Shar, owner of the soon-to-be gas station. "I offered it to the township but it costs too much to move it."

Shar said he even advertised the house, hoping someone would be interested in buying and moving the structure, which he says is deteriorat-

"It makes a lot of people sad. Everybody feels a loss when a building like this is torn down," McLaughlin said.

The house, however, was never officially designated a historic building or included in the township's historic district. "We only got involved to a minor extent. The question is always money," McLaughlin said.

The historic district commission is committed to other projects, such as the Sheldon School and Travis House. "Unfortunately, the private sector hasn't rallied to the cause,' McLaughlin added.

Like Shar, McLaughlin and other historic district commissionere or other commercial use, consistent with the commercial zoning on the corner.

Because of the historic significance of the house - which is a smaller Greek Revival house with two additions - Shar plans to take a video camera through the house. He also allowed the historic district commission into the house and will save a shed behind the house that used to be a baggage depot for the interurban railroad. The district commission is expected to move the small depot to Sheldon School.

Also on the property is the foundation of Russell's blacksmith shop. Items from that shop had already been donated to Greenfield Village

Late in the 19th century, the Russell family moved to Sheldon Corners on the old Sauk Trail - an Indian trail that later became known as the Old Chicago Road - from nearby Wayne. The Greek Revival portion of the house was moved from its original site on the Downing farm on Michigan Avenue, west of Beck.

The Russell House shared its location in the intersection with two fancy churches, two general stores and an inn. Sheldon Corners was actually first settled by Rachel and Timothy "Legend has it that they stopped at this point and spent the night. The next day they got up, looked around and decided to settle right there,' McLaughlin said.

Yet the historic corners "is an area that hasn't gotten as much exposure" as other areas, such as Cherry Hill. McLaughlin and the historic district commission are hoping more residents will become interested in the township's history. They particularly hope residents who are living in the historic houses will ask to have them historically designated and put in the

"If they just would understand that we will not hurt them. We would be their advocates. In Canton because we are so spread out and the identification of Canton's heritage is so faint, people perceive historic designation will give them difficulty in selling their house and will hinder new own-

But that's not true. The historic district commission has jurisdiction only on a building's exterior, not interior. "You can't neglect these homes. There is no cost to getting designated. And it doesn't have to be a museum."

Workshops offer fresh approach to teaching

The Detroit Area Council of Teachers of Mathematics and the Metropolitan Detroit Science Teachers Association presented the annual Mathematics and Science Fall Conference recently at the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools' Centennial Educational Park (CEP).

More than 2,000 teachers from around the state took part in the day-long event, according to Barbara Church, CEP area coordinator for mathematics and vocational education.

"The conference featured one of the largest exhibits of math and science materials in the state of Michigan," Church said. "Participants had the opportunity to select from nearly 200 exciting, informative sessions and workshops.

The sessions, were designed to help new and experienced teachers learn fresh approaches to teaching in the math and science fields. The conference provided a balanced program of practical, informative sessions and hands-on participatory workshops. More than 100 companies exhibited the latest books, media, suppplies and equipment in the fields of math and science.

This is the second year the conference was held at the Centennial Educational Park. CEP is the location of the District's two high schools, Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem, as well as the Phase III building.

"This site was chosen again this year because of its ability to accommodate the large number of participants in this ever-growing conference," Church said.

A wide variety of exhibits were featured at Phase III, the building located between the two high schools. Eleven teachers from the Plymouth Canton Community Schools were among the workshop presenters at the event.

Miller Elementary School teacher Kay Koch presented 'Multiplication & Division Using Manipulatives" for secondthrough fifth-grade teachers. Math teacher Peggy Bosworth discussed "Algebra One Updated" for eighth- and ninth-grade teachers. Science teacher Sally DeRoo presented "Let Science Drive Your Curriculum" for kindergarten through eighth-grade teachers.

Through dissection of owl pellets. Miller Elementary School teacher Carol Packard reinforced understanding of the food chain during her presentation entitled, "Mouse Parts." Teachers Renee Nowaske and Jacqueline Getz presented "Everyday Animals and the New State Objectives" for fifth- through seventh-grade teachers. Math teacher Jennifer Melkvick presented "The Phantom of the Bell Tower," a math problem-solving activity using a video and manipulatives in cooperative groups.

Physics teacher Stephen Rea discussed "Astronomy Activities for Junior & Senior High School" for sixth- through 12th-grade teachers. Rea also presented "Teaching 'Newton's Third Law' With Student Involvement" for sixth- through ninth-grade teachers on how much usable land and fresh water are present on our earth.

Canton High School mathematics teachers Sandra Downs, Barbara Marshall and Cheryl VanWestenburg discussed "Outcomes Based Mathematics at Canton High School" for sevenththrough 12th-grade teachers. Science teachers Victoria Maciag and Jan Coratti presented "The Wonderful World Glurch, Slime & Oobleck.' Designed for sixth- through eighth-grade teachers, this session gave partic-

Special workshop presenters at the conference included Bill Aldridge, executive director of the National Science Teachers Association, who presented "Principals of Scope, Sequence and Co-ordination." Aldridge discussed the national project on SS&C and its role in reforming science education in kindergarten through 12th grade.

LeMoine L. Motz, past president of the National Science Teachers Association, presented 'Restructuring the Science curriculum." Designed for kindergarten through 12th-grade teachers, the session focused on the need for change in the science classroom due to developing technology. Charles Allen of the Michigan Department of Education presented "Interpreting Your MEAP Results and Instructional Changes For Your Classroom." His presentation, open to all teachers, provided information to help teachers interpret MEAP results and use the information to formulate changes in instruction.

DARE program expands

The Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program has expanded this year to include follow-up sessions with sixth-grade students.

DARE is a preventative program designed to help students recognize and resist pressures which might influence them to experiment with harmful drugs. The program begins with 17 weeks of training for students in the fifth grade. This is the first year the program has involved follow-up sessions at the middle school level.

The first of three visits to the District's five middle schools took place in October and early November. DARE officers will return to the middle schools in March and April.

At the follow-up sessions, students were enthusiastic about meeting with the DARE officers and many wore the DARE t-shirts which they received while participating in the fifth-grade program. The sixth-grade visits dealt with such topics as peer pressure and the consequences of occasional and heavy use of alcohol and drugs. Students were shown a movie entitled, "The Game of Life," which taught them about the effects alcohol has on one's ability to drive and make judgments.

The DARE program is spon-sored by the Canton Township Police Department, the City of Plymouth Police Department, the Plymouth Township Police Department and the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

New to the DARE program this year is Officer Craig Bauldry from the Canton Township Police. Returning for their third year in the program are Officers Leonard Schemanske, also of the Canton Township Police, Jaime Senkbeil of the Plymouth Township Police and Ron Kaminski of the City of Plymouth Police Depart-

"We want students to know that DARE is still there for them as a support system," Senkbeil said. "It is important to follow-up and reinforce what students learned while in the fifth-grade DARE program.'

Moving paper boxes an error

he Plymouth's Downtown Development Authority wants to banish newspaper boxes from Penniman and Main streets as part of its street scape project.

Apart from violating the First Amendment, such an action will most likely bring about law suits and hurt business in the city.

The drive to move the newspaper stands and put them in uniform boxes comes as the DDA looks at getting the street scape going. The project would spruce up the commercial area, using paving, lighting and possibly plantings.

Our paper supports the street scape plan but opposes tampering with the newspaper boxes.

Moving the boxes will probably prompt a lawsuit by Gannett, which owns the Detroit News and USA Today, representatives of the newspaper chain told DDA members at a recent meeting

Such a lawsuit would do nothing but drain DDA coffers and do nothing to improve Plymouth's retail climate.

Then there's the matter of the First Amendment. Moving the boxes from the corner of Penniman and Main streets would restrict the public's access to the press.

For newspapers, there really isn't much money at stake. Newspapers aren't going to live or die financially because of one newspaper box more or less. Newspaper boxes are a service to the public and an asset for downtown Plymouth. Newspaper boxes create traffic, both foot and auto.

When people know they can get a Wall Street Journal downtown, chances are they'll swing through town. And once they are out of the car, they'll discover the surrounding businesses.

That makes us question why the DDA is making such an issue out of the boxes.

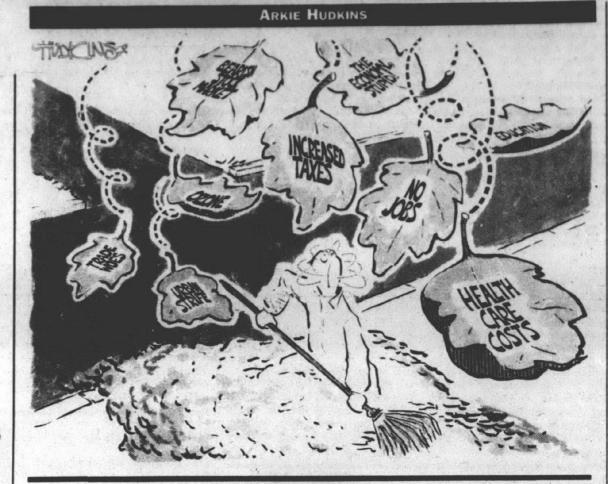

Maybe it's a smoke screen to divert attention from the real problems with retailing in downtown Plymouth. Those problems are store hours, parking credits and joint promotions.

Merchants don't have consistent hours. When you go to a mall, you know the hours. In Plymouth you don't.

Then there's the parking credit situation.
Businesses must buy them to expand or locate downtown. The system evolved over years of use and abuse and now is a road block to attracting restaurants or other such entertainment type of businesses.

The promotion front is finally moving forward, but more emphasis is needed on festivals and other special events.

Those are the major issues. They make the newspaper box situation seem silly by comparison

On Lafayette Clinic

t galls me to see state mental health director James Haveman and Gov. John Engler try to blame the patients and their relatives for the tragedy they created at Lafayette Clinic.

What a travesty the Engler Administration is trying to perpetrate on the mentally ill of this state when they shut down a world-acclaimed facility that had distinguished itself with many breakthroughs in the treatment of patients.

What's wrong with spending state funds on a facility that offers the last chance for many mentally ill persons to be able to lead a normal and fruitful life?

How cruel must state government be in order to satisfy the Engler-Haveman goal of eliminating any vestige of decency in our mental health program

How many mental health patients must be forced out into the streets to join the ranks of the homeless to glorify the Engler Administration's scorched earth policies against state social services? If another recall campaign is started against Gov. Engler, I will gladly sign the petition. Aldo Vagnozzi, Farmington Hills

District is role model to follow

oices raised against the teaching of sexual orientation in the Birmingham schools are whispers of ignorance. Those voices could force changes in the sexual orientation section of the health studies program, although the board voted Tuesday night 5-1 to continue the general program.

Joining the cacophony has been a virulent stealth campaign, anonymous of course, of letters circulating throughout the district that has thrown the district on the offensive.

In the light of intense pressure, the Birmingham district deserves praise for being a model of enlightenment — for not only the students and parents but for other districts to follow as well. That, after all, is the function of education — to inform, not to ignore a serious situation.

With statistics showing the likelihood that about 10 percent of the population is homosexual and with the ever-escalating scale of AIDS cases and a new strain of the disease, it's time for all school districts to approach the subject of sexual orientation with understanding and compassion.

That's what Birmingham schools, despite the shameful protests of some, is doing in setting the tone, if not the detailed program, for all districts to follow in developing a new sexuality curriculum.

Unfortunately, not all districts are that courageous. In Livonia schools, fifth, sixth and middle school grades receive instruction in human growth and development. The discussion of sexual intercourse before marriage comes at the high school level. And while AIDS is discussed, homosexuality isn't unless a student directly broaches the issue.

This issue goes beyond morality; in many cases it's become a need for information to survive.

Sure, it would be nice if parents talked with their kids about homosexuality, and they should. But many can't, possibly because of their own discomfort or lack of information.

The Birmingham district's curriculum includes increasing homosexuality awareness, reducing myths about homosexuality, offering resources to students dealing with the issue, stressing the human dignity of all persons.

Indeed, a study of ancient and current history shows that the United States may be the aberrant one in its homophobia.

"(The classes) basically tell you to treat homosexuals as normal people," said Christopher Zammit, a Groves student, at an earlier board meeting. "We teach about communism." But that doesn't turn students into communists, he added.

Ignoring a situation doesn't make it go away. What a student learns may indirectly benefit the parents.

"I've become aware of their search for acceptance in a world of intolerance," said Shirley Gach, whose son David died of AIDS. "They want the same things from life we all want — to be loved and respected."

Hopefully the pleading voice of that mother won't be replaced by the shrill squeals of fear, punishment and intolerance being heard now.

City vs. state comes in focus

ormer Michigan Supreme Court Justice Dennis Archer is running for mayor of Detroit.

Archer is an able and energetic person, capable of mounting an extremely serious campaign, whether or not an ailing and increasingly disconnected Mayor Coleman Young decides to

It's significant for those of us who do not live in Detroit because the real prospect of a change in leadership puts squarely into focus the issue of how Michigan's largest city relates to the rest

Mayor Young's prickly personality, persistent preference to cry "racism" in response to criticism and anti-suburban orientation has served to put Detroit into self-imposed exile from the rest of Michigan.

Just how significant that exile is became clear to me a few years ago when I had a look at some polling data compiled during the old Blanchard Administration. The idea was to survey heavy decision-makers in business, the people who could decide whether to place a new plant in Michigan or to put on another shift in an existing factory.

To my amazement, Michigan looked just like Illinois or Minnesota, once you eliminated Detroit from the landscape. But with Detroit in, Michigan looked like the worst place in the upper Midwest for business to grow.

Why? The usual. Crime, poor schools, poverty, urban decay. But many respondents cited the fact that Detroit was not really a functioning part of what otherwise was a pretty attractive state.

This conclusion has been reinforced in my mind by recent visits to Indianapolis and Cincinnati.

Both are thriving. Indianapolis is growing faster than any big city in the Midwest, while Cincinnati remains the economic and cultural center of southern Ohio.

Why?

I believe it's because both cities are inextricably welded into their regions rather than suffering from isolation. Through a system called

PHILIP POWER

"unigov," Indianapolis is governed jointly with surrounding Marion County. Downtown Cincinnati is surrounded by a patchwork of neighborhoods, each of which looks for leadership to the core city.

That's not Detroit. Even attempts at something as beneficial as regional planning have been rejected here by both the city and the suburbs because neither wanted to share power or lose independence.

Regional transit, a necessary tool for economic growth for the entire region, is stalled because Detroit won't consider merging its system with suburban lines. The Detroit Institute of Arts is facing crisis because nobody can square the circle of city ownership with suburban patronage.

Although much of Detroit's isolation may have originated with suburban racism pure and simple, Mayor Young certainly hasn't helped matters in recent years.

At the end of the day, Michigan communities like Birmingham or Plymouth or Howell or Grand Ledge will be stronger if and when Detroit returns from exile and gets healthy.

Political leadership can help bring that about, which is why Dennis Archer's candidacy should be followed with interest by folks all over Michigan.

Thankful for support

n behalf of the Plymouth Centennial Educational Park Marching Band I wish to express our gratitude and appreciation to the good people of the Plymouth and Canton communities who generously responded to the recent door-to-door financial appeal by our band members. The citizens of each community contributed $7,000, for a total of $14,000.

Because of the support and generosity of our neighbors the PCEP Band has been able to bring the distinction of two marching band Grand National Championships to our community during each of the past two years. One of our band parents recently traveled to Portland, Ore., and walked into a store wearing his bright yellow Band Booster jacket. The clerk who waited on him asked, "Is that the national championship marching band?" Needless to say, a very surprised and proud dad said, "Yes."

But one of the main reasons he was able to say, "Yes," is found in the way the Plymouth Canton community has supported its marching band. Because the people of our community have said, "Yes," to its band, our young people have been able to raise the artistry of high school marching band performance to new levels.

We want to take this opportunity to thank all of the people of the Plymouth-Canton community who have generously supported the PCEP Marching Band over the years and have helped make their band the envy of many communities around the country.

Pat Liljestrand, President Plymouth-Canton Music Boosters

Is he societal menace?

read with overwhelming pleasure the comments of copy editor James Radebaugh related to the "writings" of Observer & Eccentric columnist Jeff Counts. My feelings concerning Mr. Counts' columns are best summarized by Mr. Radebaugh's statement, "the man is a stark raving jerk." An appropriate enough description given that the statement is intended for a family newspaper.

With a writer-husband, a daughter and son-in-law that began their careers as reporters and a son and daughter-inlaw that (who) practice law, how could I help but support Mr. Counts' right to disgorge whatever the management of the Observer & Eccentric is willing to tolerate. In our family, lively discussions and tolerance for differences in viewpoints are the norm; however, let's make no mistake. His writing cannot be classified as eccentric musings written to challenge the readers thoughts. Mr. Counts' writings encourage the darker side of the human situation, fostering bigotry and general disdain for seemingly all but whisky-drinking, cigarette-smoking white Southern males. Should his columns continue, I see him progressing from a raving jerk to societal menace.

Sally Bila, Plymouth

Do soul searching

uring my first reading of James Radebaugh's column in the Nov. 9 edition of your newspaper, I thought that he was attempting to emulate editor Jeff Counts' frequently used tongue-in-cheek style. A second glance proved that my initial opinion was definitely wrong.

It appears rather that Radebaugh is like the little boy who, when disciplined by his father for inappropriate behavior, is not willing to accept responsibility for his own actions. So (he) chooses, instead, to take out his rage on the lovable family dog.

It is unfortunate that Radebaugh is not yet wise enough to discern the benefit that this community derives from Jeff's articles. One such column that immediately comes to mind dealt with the issue of high school letter jackets and who should be allowed to wear them. With tongue firmly implanted in his cheek, Jeff opined that only athletes should have the honor of sporting this distinctive outerwear. Then, as he had expected, he immediately incurred the wrath of members of our PCEP marching band who were themselves wearing letter jackets because they had won the national championship.

Jeff published their objections in the "Letters to the Editor" column. He also appeared on a live cable TV program and, with a smile on his face, withstood a full half-hour of their harangues hurled at him for his position. When the show went off the air, he then treated the more than 50 students to soft drinks at a local restaurant. I certainly would not classify this as the behvior of a stark raving jerk.

The only unfortunate element in all of this is that the protesting students missed Jeff's point completely because of his veiled style of writing. The underlying larger issue that he addressed had initially been raised in Livonia where parents were threatening to sue in order for their children to have the right to wear letter jackets. Jeff felt that their threat of litigation was ridiculous. His response, using his hyperbolic style, was to write what on the surface appeared to be a ridiculous article.

Now I understand that high school students can't always perceive such nuances. I do, however, find it difficult to believe that a person in the capacity of copy editor either cannot recognize hyperbole when he reads it, or is totally unaware of the current issues at play within his community so as to not be aware of the context within which a column is written.

Regarding Mr. Radebaugh's concluding remarks about Jeff's childhood and what he perceives to be Counts' struggle with his masculinity, I would only paraphrase Shakespeare and suggest that I find his protestations to be a bit too blatant.

Our First Amendment gives James Radebaugh the right of free expression. I would only hope that the next time he chooses to put his opinions in print, he might first take his own advice and do a little soul searching so that his thoughts might reflect the maturity and insight that his reading public expects. His article smacks of sibling rivalry, and I suggest that if he has a problem with Jeff Counts, he settle the issue in his own back yard of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers rather than my living room.

Rev. Bill Myers, Canton

Why print attack?

n 1992, the last thing you want to be, if you are applying for college admission or scholarship or a job or promotion, is a white male. Whatever your individual struggles and accomplishments may have been, they may be discounted in favor of a candidate who is female or of an officially favored race.

Also, if you should decide to drive yourself home after having a few brews — beware. The ladies of MADD have got the cops alerted, and if you put your turn signal on too early, they'll know you are impaired and have stooped to compensatory cautiousness.

When I read Jeff Counts' column on whiskey drinking white males, I took it to be a piece of humor directed at this current, politically correct piety. So far as I could tell, his column did not contain any insult to any person or group.

What then could explain James Radebaugh's response? He accuses Jeff Counts of idiotically raving and blabbering baloney and malice. He accuses Counts of arrested development and of being a jerk. He accuses Counts of being attention starved and bothered by something psychological.

Such a personal attack would be a surprise even in a high school newspaper — its publication in The Observer & Eccentric is an utter mystery.

Joseph Armstrong, Birmingham

Let's respect life

During this quincentennial election year, of the discovery of America, I believe we as Americans need to ask ourselves first, to kill an unborn baby, is it a sin against God? Second, we need to ask, to join hands with or vote for someone who promotes the killing of an unborn baby, is it a sin against God?

From what I know about God, one of the Ten Commandments says, "Thou shall not kill." The Bible also says not to join hands with the wicked lest we be punished with them, Proverbs 16:5.

May Almighty God give us the wisdom and courage to choose a president and other government officials who respect the sanctity and unborn human life, the sanctity of marriage, the sanctity of the family, and the sanctity of the aging, according to His divine will.

Tax is illegal

read your editorial comments about the election with great interest. I agree that many flaws remain. Many people I talk to are confused and perhaps angry with our present Congress and state Legislature and are looking for an answer to return our government back to the citizens.

I suppose this is why Mr. Clinton was elected. He seemed to make some sense out of the campaign issues. By the way, he is a Senior Demolay. So he has some obligated moral background as well as his church background. I am a Mason and a former member of the Schoolcraft Chapter Demolay Advisory Board at Schoolcraft Masonic Temple. I fully support the concepts of Demolay and Masonic Fraternities.

This brings me to the point at hand. (A proposed)"Liberty Amendment" is the answer to return our economy back to our control. This amendment is written to repeal the 16th amendment to our Constitution which is the illegal personal income tax. This tax robs the working man or woman of the buying power to help our free enterprise system keep working. We all know about inflation. Ask yourself what has caused the inflation to go up? Answer, income taxes. When the income tax is taken out of our pay checks our buying and saving power go down. The bank system suffers as does our buying power.

Baker named Mr. Soccer

lymouth Salem senior Tom Baker received the highest individual award possible for a high school player when he was named Mr. Soccer by the statewide coaches association.

"I figured if our team did well and we went far in the state tournament, I'd have a real good chance at it," Baker said. "I think that's one of the main reasons I won. "I was lucky to play with a really good team. I know guys who played on teams that were not so good but were real good players." While not a prolific goal pro-

Baker scored 11 goals and had nine assists this year while leading the Rocks to a runner-up finish in the Class A tournament and 18-3-2 record.

He was a four-year starter during which time Salem was 66-14-6, won three district championships and reached the state final twice. He had career totals of 34 goals and 23 assists.

"He's a level above the other good players," Salem coach Ken Johnson said. "He's not a real rahrah kind of player, but he leads by example.

'The Olympic Development Program has taught him so many things, and he's practiced them on his own time. Each year when he came back I noticed an improvement in him. Every year he was at another level.

Baker, who has visited Wisconsin and Wake Forest, will probably go out of state to play college soccer. He will attend an ODP tryout and try to make the under-20 national team Nov. 25-28 in Coco Beach, Fla.

Farmington High's Mike Giese and Catholic Central's Rich Walos joined Baker on the all-state

Giese, who had 27 goals and 10 assists, led the Falcons to their first Lakes Division title, a share of the Western Lakes Activities Association crown and a 10-6-3 record.

Salem's Chris Saline and Canton's Owen Crosby and Mike Wdowiak were honorable mentions.

Rocks achieve upset of Chiefs

The circumstances were the same as last year, but the roles for each team were reversed when Plymouth Salem upset state-ranked Plymouth Canton in the girls district basketball tournament Monday.

BY DAN O'MEARA STAFF WRITER

Cyndi Platter was ecstatic when she learned Plymouth Salem would play girls basketball rival Plymouth Canton in the first round of the district tournament.

That was despite the fact Salem had lost a second time to the Chiefs a day earlier in the Western Lakes Activities Association playoffs Nov. 10.

'When coach (Fred Thomann) came into the gym and told us, I started jumping up and down," she said, "because I knew we could beat them and we were going to play them

Platter's confidence was borne out Monday night in the Canton gym when the Rocks upset the No. 4ranked team in Class A and newlycrowned WLAA champions 40-33.

Salem (12-9) played Northville last night, with the winner advancing to the final Friday. The Chiefs finished

"We've played so well and lost to so many good teams," Thomann said. The Rocks lost six non-league games - four to rated teams - by an average of seven points early in the sea-always thought we could win a game like this. I wish we had won one earlier, because it might not have been such a struggle to get to No. 21. But we sure are excited about winning this one."

Rocks turn table

The Rocks also did to Canton what the Chiefs did to them last year. Salem beat Canton twice in the 1991 regular season but was upset in the district final.

Salem was routed 53-31 in late October of this year but showed much better during a 46-35 loss in the league playoffs.

"I think we were ready (to play) but didn't realize the desire and determination the Salem team was going to have when they came in here," Canton coach Bob Blohm said. "I give them all the credit for getting ready to compete.

"They executed very well from the beginning of the game to the end. When things get tight, they always had an answer. Someone would make a free throw or hit a shot. That's what the game is all about — making plays and dealing with pressure."

The Rocks got key contributions at crucial times from an assortment of players, including Platter, who scored a game-high 13 points and led a strong rebounding effort.

Christy Parimucha had 11 points and was 6-of-6 shooting free throws late in the game. Shelly Sockow scored seven of her nine points in the first half to keep Salem in contention

Amanda Tubaugh provided some offense again with five points off the bench, and Karen Gundry's lone basket gave Salem a 34-31 lead with 1:47 remaining and helped nail down the Westerhold scored eight Amy points to lead Canton. Alyson Noune and Kelly Holmes had six apiece and Stephanie Gray five.

'When you're playing a team as good as Canton, everything has to fit just right for you," Thomann said. You have to make shots, defend better and rebound offensively. We took care of the ball better than we did in the other games.

"We had a great effort all the way around. I feel really good about these players. We went through so much. We played some good teams and just weren't finishing. To finish one is an awesome feeling.

Free throws crucial

Salem led 28-23 entering the fourth quarter, but the Chiefs closed to 30-29 and twice missed a free throw that would have tied the score. After the Gundry basket, Canton missed a oneand-one, and Parimucha started her string of made free throws.

The Rocks, fighting to hold the line at 36-33 in the final half minute, missed a pair of one-and-ones before Parimucha put down the last four throws for insurance.

As they did in the second meeting, the Rocks played a zone defense and were more polished this time. Salem

Platter signs with Pioneers

BY DAN O'MEARA STAFF WRITER

Centennial Educational Park girls basketball teams have added to their reputation for producing college post players with the announcement Cyndi Platter will play at Oakland University.

The Plymouth Salem senior will become the fourth CEP player at that position in the college ranks next year. Stephanie Gray of Plymouth Canton signed earlier with Western Michigan, and former Salem teammate Darcie Miller took a scholarship to Valparaiso last year. Susan Ferko, who starred at Canton, begins her third season at Miami of Ohio.

"I suspect she's going to play Salem coach very well there," Fred Thomann said. "I don't know when she'll get her turn, but she's a good player and will do well in that program.

The 5-foot-11 Platter has improved her post game during a three-year varsity career with the Rocks.

She is averaging 19 points and 12 rebounds this year. The Rocks are 52-18 (prior to a second district game Wednesday) with Platter on the team Platter chose OU because of its proximity to home, its engineering program and its success in women's basketball.

She also related well to coach Bob Taylor, who she said understands the time management problems a college athlete faces.

Platter, who plans to study mechanical engineering, was contacted by all the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference schools and visited Ferris State and Michigan Tech.

"I'll be going into a good program, and I would like to make it stay that way," she said. "I think I can be successful in Division II. My goal is to be an impact player, but I know it will take a lot of Platter plans to be ready for the challenge when preseason practice begins next year.

She will play volleyball for the Rocks again this winter but will begin her own workout schedule when that sport ends.

"I'll be in the gym a lot," she said. "I think that will help me to get playing time.

The Pioneers also signed 6-3 center Kim Bailey from Wyandotte Roosevelt, who will handle many of the true post duties, and 5-10 forward Alyson McChesney of Clarkston.

"Their offense is reversible," she said. "I'll be playing inside and outside. I like that; I plan to play on perimeter and in the

$C\ meets\ Eisenhower$

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

Players come and go in high school sports, so every year coaches look for new blood to add to their lineup.

At Utica Eisenhower, football coach Bob Lantzy also keeps his eyes open for new "Youngbloods."

Four Youngbloods have played for Eisenhower over the last eight years, including this year's set of senior twins - quarterback Tim and wide receiver Terry. Redford Catholic Central will meet Eisenhower at 2:30 p.m. Saturday in a Class AA playoff semifinal game at Eastern Michigan University's Rynearson Stadium.

Both teams are 11-0 overall. The Youngblood tradition started in 1985 when quarterback Bob Youngblood led Eisenhower to the Class A state playoffs before losing in the first round.

Quarterback Joe Youngblood arrived on the varsity in '87 and a year later became an all-stater and led the Eagles to the Class A semifinals before losing to CC 13-

Now Joe is setting records at Central Michigan University and is one of the Mid-American Conference's best quarterbacks. There are no more Youngblood brothers but Lantzy would welcome any relative.

"Anything in the bloodlines, we'll take," Lantzy said. "The key to the Youngbloods is their competitiveness.

CC won't see a more sophisticated passing attack than Eisenhower's. The Eagles use at least 10 offensive formations and Tim Youngblood has more than just his brother, Terry (5-foot-9, 150 pounds), to throw to. Terry has 22 receptions, which is third on the team behind 5-10, 180-pound senior running back Derek Aberlich (40 catches) and 6-3, 165-pound junior receiver Scott Hiegel (36 catches).

Tim Youngblood hears comparisons all the time between himself and older brother Joe. Comparisons aren't fair, however, since Tim stands only 5-9, compared to Joe, who is 6-1. Also, Tim runs a 40-yard dash in 5.0 seconds, compared to Joe's 4.6. Still, Tim has completed 125-of-219 passes for 1,800 yards and 23 touchdowns. He threw for 270 yards in a 41-0 Class AA firstround win over Detroit Cass

"I love it (the comparisons to Joe), but it's really hard to live up to them - I don't live up to them," said Tim Youngblood,

Salem routs N'ville in district semi

BY STEVE KOWALSKI

Plymouth Salem senior guard Christy Parimucha will face another neighborhood rival Friday night, but this time the opponent won't be from Plymouth Canton.

Salem, which got past Northville 46-22 in Wednesday's district semifinal game, will meet Livonia Ladywood at 7 p.m. Friday in a Class A district championship game at Canton.

Parimucha, who starts at point, lives across the street from Ladywood's starting point guard Tracy Prvbvlski.

Before the game, I'll say 'Hi, how ya doing?' but on the court it's business," said Parimucha, who has known Prybylski since grade school. "It'll be just like playing Canton. We're going to play hard.'

Ladywood earned its way into the district final with a comefrom-behind 55-51 win Wednesday over Livonia Stevenson. Salem wasn't tested in its game against Northville, and coach Fred Thomann was pleased about that since the Rocks were fresh off Monday's 40-33 upset over Canton in the district opener.

"It's so hard to play a game af-ter the Canton game," Thomann said. "You never know what to expect. But we had some bursts when we looked decent. It was a good effort and I'm satisfied. It puts us in a game we want to be Salem led 20-10 at halftime and outscored Northville 14-6 in the third quarter to go ahead 34-16. Northville (5-15) made only eight of 51 shots from the field and coach Bob Shoemaker had a couple of opinions afterward.

On the game:

"That's about what we (normally) shoot. This is no shock today. We played real good defense to be down 20-10 in the first half. Plus. I knew Salem would be in for a letdown after beating Can-some No-Doz. We put everyone to sleep."

Salem (13-9) was led by senior post player Cyndi Platter's 11 points. Senior forward Shelly Sockow added eight and Andrea Ramsay, Leslie Gotts and Kelly Lukasik contributed six each.

Salem beat Ladywood in a 1987 regional game, but the teams haven't played since.

"Any time you play one of the top teams in the state, which Ladywood is, you have to play errorfree basketball," Thomann said.
"You have to defend, rebound, shot-make; that's still the criteria we need to use. We're not on a roll; we're taking one game at a time, digging and scratching.'

Blazers rally for 55-51 win over Spartans the lead for good 47-46 with 2:35

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

Livonia Ladywood sophomore center Anne Poglits found a place Wednesday night that was more comfortable than her seat on the bench: the paint.

Poglits, the tallest player on the court at 6-foot-3, came off the bench to rally Ladywood to a 55-51 win over Livonia Stevenson in a Class A district semifinal game at Plymouth Canton. Poglits scored only eight points, but four came in the last 2:15, and she also helped the Blazers enjoy a 21-11 rebounding advantage in the second half.

Poglits' rebound and basket after a missed free throw by teammate Mary Jo Kelly (who scored 14 points) gave Ladywood a 53-48 lead with less than a minute re-

"That was very lucky - it was a 'Hail Mary' on that one," said Poglits, who battled a pair of Stevenson players for the rebound. "I just try to do whatever I can."

Ladywood, 14-5 overall, moved into the district final at 7 p.m. Friday against Plymouth Salem (13-9 overall). Salem advanced with a 46-22 win Wednesday over

Northville. Salem has a starting point guard, Christy Parimucha, who lives across the street from Ladywood's starting point guard Tracy Stevenson enjoyed a 32-25 halftime lead but then went cold, failing to convert a couple of fine passes from point guard Mo Drabicki and finishing the second half eight of 30 from the floor (26 percent).

"We came out too fired up," Ladywood coach Ed Kavanaugh said. "Real credit goes to the girls. because, even though they were down against a very good team, we didn't fold."

Sophomore forward Tara Overaitis was the Blazers' catalyst, scoring 14 of her game-high 19 points after halftime.

Overaitis' driving layup with 2:00 left in the third quarter tied the game for the first time, 38-38. Overaitis also gave the Blazers

With a senior-dominated team, the Chiefs had hoped to make another long post-season run after reaching the state semifinals last

"The seniors have hung in there for four years to make Canton a good basketball team, Blohm said, adding they were 52-16 the last three. "Learning to deal with adversity through sports is not all bad. In fact, it's real good compared to some other things. I'm real proud of what they've accomplished.

Sophomore guard Karin Reed scored 15 points, which included 7-of-10 free throw shooting, to lead the Eagles (12-9). Lauren Horton and junior forward Kristina Tilly added eight apiece.

Six-foot center Shalisa Self scored 16 points, Brenda Felice 13 and Megan Heslip 12 for Oakland (13-8).

Horton was named to the All-Michigan Independent Athletic Conference first team after averaging 11 points and 10 rebounds during the season.

She also led the Eagles in steals (three per game), was in double figures for scoring and rebounding in 12 of the 21 games and was the team's most valuable player.

Reed earned a spot on the MIAC second team. She averaged 12 points and seven rebounds.

Eisenhower's offensive line averages about 210 pounds per man and the Eagles score about 40 points per game. But CC's defense, which has allowed an average of 121.4 yards per game and surrendering only 87 points all season (7.9 points per game), should be a severe test.

Linemen Paul Nemzek and Joe Suhajda and linebacker Joe Hermann led the Shamrocks defense to post-season wins over Detroit Mumford (28-12) and Troy (9-6). Suhajda is tied for the team lead with teammate Joe Lopez for sacks with six.

"I love it (the comparisons to Joe), but it's really hard to live up to them — I don't live up to them.'

Crusaders hope for NAIA invite

What else can Madonna University's volleyball team do? Ranked 10th in the final NAIA poll, the Lady Crusaders have a chance to make the 24-team field in the NAIA National Tournament, hosted by Point Loma Nazarene College in San Diego Dec.

But it's hardly certain. Twenty of the berths will be filled by NAIA district winners; another will go to the host team, provided Point Loma did not win a district.

That leaves three spots. If higher-ranked teams than Madonna also failed to win a district, they'll be chosen ahead of the Crusaders.

All this could have been avoided if Madonna had beaten Northwood Institute Saturday in the District 23 championship match in Midland. Alas, it was not to be; the seventh-ranked Northwomen prevailed in straight sets, 15-9, 15-11, 17-15.

Madonna advanced to the final by beating Aquinas College 9-15, 15-4, 16-14, 15-11, earlier Saturday in the district semifinals. The Crusaders were helped by the play of back-up setter Laura Fisher (from Wayne Memorial), who came in for an injured Mazie Pilut and contributed 14 assists-to-Pilut did return and finished with 74 assists for both matches. But there was nothing the Crusaders could do to topple Northwood.

Elena Oparka finished with a team-best 29 kills in the two matches (and a .327 kill average). Dana Finley (.425) and Tonia Smith (.355) each had 26 kills, Maureen Paulin had 15 (.302) and Melissa Mars totaled 13 (.295).

Finley also had four solo blocks and 23 digs. Smith paced the defense with 27 digs, while Mars had 24 and Paulin 23. Sue Bell added 17. Madonna is now 43-10 overall and waiting to see if its season will be extended, a decision that won't be made until Monday, after all the district tournaments are completed. If it is, it will mark the first time a Madonna team has qualified for the NAIA Tournament.

Stevenson trio headlines '92 All-Area team

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

Observerland teams failed to make a run at a state girls cross country championship, but several outstanding individuals made the 1992 season one to remember.

Four girls named to the '92 All-Observer first team finished among the top-10 in the individual race at the Class A state meet: A.J. Koritnik, Livonia Stevenson: Sharmila Prasad, Farmington Hills Mercy; Emily Shively, North Farmington; and Amy Freund, Mercy.

Stevenson will lose Koritnik to graduation but the Spartans' future looks promising with two of Koritnik's teammates, Bridget MacKinnon and Sarah Rieder, also making the first team. MacKinnon is a junior and Rieder a freshman.

Plymouth Salem placed second in the Western Lakes Activities Association and was led by freshman Leah Retherford, a member of the Observer first-team.

Farmington Hills Mercy won its second-straight Catholic League championship and for that, coach Gary Servais is Coach of the Year.

Following is a profile of each runner:

FIRST TEAM

A.J. Koritnik, senior, Stevenson: Koritnik's best time (18:54) established a Stevenson record. Koritnik, undefeated in dual meets the last two seasons placed second in Class A and second at the regional. She also won the Gabriel Richard, Ypsilanti and Centerline invitationals and owns a 4.0 grade point av-

"A.J. was the most dedicated runner on the team," coach Paul Holmberg said. "She led every practice and was never out-worked. She sets goals that most people would only dream of. She is a confident and fierce competitor who is driven by her desire to succeed.'

Sharmila Prasad, senior, Farmington Mercy: Prasad was a three-time state qualifier, capping her career with a sixth-place finish at the Class A meet earlier this month. She was 22nd in 1991 and 42nd in '90. A three-time All-Catholic performer, Prasad placed third at the

"Sharmila has worked very hard to become the first all-state runner I ever coached," Servais. "Her dedication and hard work reflect her love for the sport. We will miss her leadership and love of the sport next year."

Emily Shively, senior, N. Farmington: Shively's best time (19:14) earned her a Class A regional championship. She was eighth at the Class A meet (19:22), second in the WLAA (19:17) and Walled Lake Western meet (20:30) and third in both the Huron and Redford Union invitationals.

"Emily's turning point was the RU Invitational," North coach Bill Pinnell said. "From that point on she started running with more desire and determination. Her stride was more aggressive and you could see the intensity in her face. It was nice to see the hard work and dedication pay off with the success

Amy Freund, junior, Mercy: Freund was 10th at the Class A meet and fifth at the regional. She placed second in the Catholic League meet behind teammate Sharmila Prasad and was third in the Operation Friendship meet.

Leah Retherford, freshman, Salem: Retherford made an impact as a fresh-man runner, twice breaking 20 minutes. She won the Westland John Glenn Invitational (19:53) and was 17th at the Class A meet (19:59). Retherford took 12th at the regional (20:34) and fifth at the WLAA meet (20:18). She also placed second at the Ann Arbor Pioneer Invitational (21:17) and was fourth at the Ypsilanti Invitational (20:27).

Dana Goba, sophomore, Farming-ton: Goba finished 25th in the Class A individual race (20:20), seventh in the regional (20:11), eighth in the WLAA (20:28), seventh in Oakland County and fifth at West Bloomfield.

"Her times got better and better as the season progressed," coach John Barrett said. "She peaked at the end of the year. Her best meets were the regional and state meets. She probably would have done better (at state) if she hadn't been sick (with strep throat). I'm confident she would have been under 20 min-

Bridget MacKinnon, junior, Stevenson: MacKinnon's best time (20:00) was the third fastest ever run by a Stevenson runner. She placed 18th at the Class A meet, 13th at regional and seventh in the WLAA meet the last two

With continued improvement, MacK-innon could be the "A.J. Koritnik" of 1993.

"Bridget places team goals above her personal goals," Holmberg said. "She will drop back in a race to urge a team-mate on and give them encouragement. She will be a great leader to build next year's team around."

Sarah Rieder, freshman, Steven-son: Rieder gave the Spartans, already strong in the senior and junior classes, strength from the freshman class. Her best time was 20:20 and she took 26th at the Class A meet, 18th at the regional and 11th in the WLAA.

The future looks secure for several years with Rieder and other freshmen providing a foundation for success, Holmberg said.

"Sarah was the best of a good group of freshmen to join Stevenson's team," Holmberg said. "Her accomplishments were outstanding. She should be the first Stevenson girl to run in four state

Malia Dixon, senior, Ladywood: Dixon placed 16th at the Class regional and 28th at the state meet but even more impressive is her 4.15 GPA, which is tops in Ladywood's senior class. The Student Council President had a personal best of 19:59 at the Gibraltar Carlson Invitational. She was fourth in the Catholic League meet despite nagging

"Malia's determination this year was commendable," coach Joe Peruski said. "She was able to still run a competitive season, even with her injuries."

Kathleen Landelius, sophomore, Canton: Landelius' personal best time of 20:23 was almost two minutes better than her best time as a freshman and it was the fourth fastest time in Canton Landelius was 34th in the Class A meet (20:34), 14th at regional (20:43) and sixth in the Western Lakes meet (20:23). Landelius, who carries a 4.0 grade point average, placed second in the Jefferson Invitational (20:39) and fifth at the Carlson Invitational (20:07). She broke 21 minutes eight times.

"Kathleen is a strong competitor who thrives on running in pressure meets,' coach George Przygodski said. "Her year-long training regimentation, combined with her competitive nature has made her a successful athlete she is.'

Catholic Central contingent paces All-Area squad

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

The leader of this pack doesn't drive a motorcycle, but he runs like a Harley.

State boys cross country cham-pion Mike Mittman could be caffed "Easy Rider," while his Redford Catholic Central High teammates were definitely the top gang to represent Observerland at

The Shamrocks, coached by Tony Magni, won three major titles this season including the Catholic League, Operation-Friendship Invitational and Class A regional.

CC also continued their fine tradition under Magni by finishing second in the state Class A meet behind champion Monroe.

Catholic Central garnered three of top 10 All-Observer berths and placed another four on the second

FIRST TEAM

Mike Mittman, Redford CC: The senior was the individual 5,000-meter champion at the state Class A meet with a time of 15:55.8 in the team race held at the Flint IMA Golf Course (Nov. 7).

He also won the regional at Marshbank Park in 16:26.9 and added a first in the Operation-Friendship meet, pitting the best runners from the Catholic and Detroit (16:18) and regional (16:53). "He has what it takes to run well," Har-rison coach John Reed said. "The kids with the mental ability are the ones who

Of all the kids I've coached, mentally he's one of the strongest. He has a lot of confidence."

Brian Mockeridge, Redford Union: Only a sophomore, Mockeridge has a bright future ahead of him.

He qualified for the state Class A meet by finishing 10th in the regional (16:54). At the state finals he took 46th in 16:56. At the Schoolcraft Invitational, Mockeridge finished fourth and added a fifth in the Northwest Suburban League meet. In the RU meet, the sophomore finished took 13th and led the Panthers with a third at the Walled Lake Western meet.

"Brian is simply relentless in the pursuit of the goals he sets for himself," RU coach Tobin Jones said. "He has intensity, and the willingness to embrace pain.'

Scott Creehan, Liv. Stevenson: The junior finished 11th in both the WLAA and regional meets and took 42nd in the state Class A individual race.

He was the Livonia Public School League champion and added a sixth at His best time of the season (16:42) came at the Center Line Invitational where he wound up 15th.

'Scott led our team in every race," Stevenson coach John Gores said. "He was our team leader in workouts and our team leader in spirit

"He's an extremely hard worker and has the physical strength to be a dedicated runner.

Creehan also carries at 3.5 G.P.A.

Lee Devers, Liv. Franklin: The Patriots' senior co-captain sported an impressive resume with a second place finish in both the Livonia City and Belleville meets; fifth in the WLAA (17:02); 10th at Schoolcraft (17:31); 14th at the regional

(16:57); and 32nd in Class A (16:45) 'It's been a pleasure watching Lee develop and this is by far his best year," Franklin coach Bob Holmes said. "He became both a consistent and outstanding

Selection process

The fall All-Area selection process for girls and boys cross country, along with boys soccer, is done entirely by area coaches who gathered recently in meetings held at the Observer offices

Each area coach is extended an invitation and vote at the selection meetings.

The All-Area football and girls basketball teams will be selected by the Observer sports staff.

The All-Area boys soccer team will appear on Monday, Nov. 23.

"In the past he showed flashes of being a good runner, but this year he just kept getting better and better.

Derek Cudini, Ply. Salem: The senior was solid as a Rock for Salem, finishing 18th in the state Class A meet (16:29.5) after a 15th in the regional (16:58.1). Among his other outstanding races:

Ann Arbor Pioneer Invitational (second); Western Lakes (sixth); Jackson Invita-(10th); (15th)

"Derek was our captain this year and our number one runner the past two years," Salem coach Geoff Baker said. 'He works hard and is a great kid."

Jamie Fitzgerald, Redford CC: The senior became one of the Shamrocks' mainstays.

He made the All-Area squad a year ago and wound up his career with several high finishes including Sturgis Invitational and Operation-Friendship (third places); Shamrock Invitational (fourth); Catholic League (sixth); Haslett Invitational (10th); West Bloomfield Invitational (13th); regional and Holly Invitational (17th); and state Class A team race (24th with a time of 16:30).

"Jamie has worked hard all year," Magni said. "He's always giving 100 percent, whether it was a dual meet, invitational or state final."

Mark Leo, Redford CC: The junior was Mr. Consistency for the Shamrocks.

He finished fifth in both the Catholic League and Operation-Friendship meets; seventh at Sturgis; eighth at Haslett; 11th the Shamrock; 16th in Class A (16:22.81); 18th in the regional (17:02.3); 20th at Holly; and 24th a West Bloomfield.

'Mark was always ready to run regardless of the race," Magni said. "He follows pre-meet direction very well, which attests to his success this year.

David Yack, Ply. Canton: The Canton senior finished third in the Western Lakes meet (17:01); 19th in the regional (17:05.1) and 29th in the Class A individual race (16:41).

"As a captain, David has been a focused leader for the team," Canton coach Mike Spitz said. "He worked diligently to reach his goals for the year.

"His mental toughness and preparation are his athletic strengths." Yack also excels in the classroom, car-

Rutherford signs with EMU

Observerland baseball stars Mark Rutherford and Brian Hicks have signed letters of intent to attend Eastern Michigan University.

Rutherford is a right-handed pitcher/infielder from Livonia Churchill. Eastern was 22-26 overall and 10-15 in the Mid-American Conference.

Rutherford was 4-2 with a 1.61 earned run average as a pitcher and a .350 hitter last spring for

"I like Eastern being close to home, I can be in touch with my parents," said Rutherford, who wants to be an education major. "I like the facilities, coaches and a lot of the players."

Rutherford's sister Lynn graduated from EMU.

Hicks, a left-handed hitting catcher and first baseman, batted .404 with nine home runs and 36 RBI last year for CC.

Local chef teams up with Chuck Muer

The all new "Rocky's of Northville" at 41122 West Seven Mile will open on Nov. 23. Proprietor and Chef Chuck Rachwitz, of Livonia, "Chef Rocky" to his friends and followers, and partner Chuck Muer are not strangers.

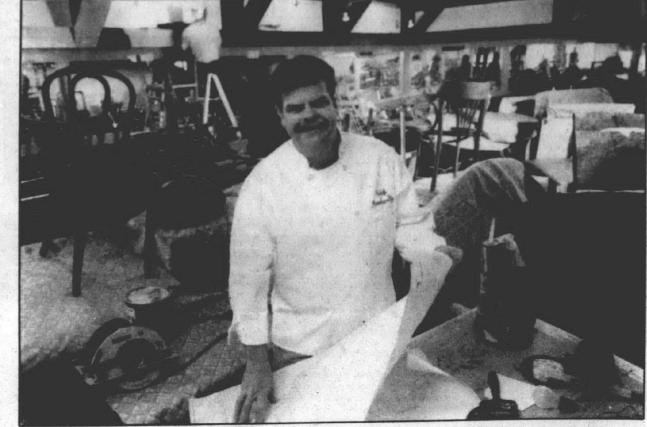

Born and raised in Livonia, Rachwitz began working for Muer in 1976 as kitchen manager in the very same building he now calls his own. He worked his way up the ladder to become Muer's executive chef, responsible for menu planning and kitchen operations for as many as 31 restaurants in six states.

Rackwitz is a graduate of the culi-nary school at Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills and credits his expertise to both his formal education and nine years working under Muer's former executive chef Larry Pagliari.

"It was time to leave the security of the corporate nest and open my own restaurant," said Rachwitz. "A restaurant where attire and formalities are not a concern. A place to go for great food and service with personality. I want people to leave saying 'wow, everything about that place is berries.

The decor was the work of Muer's wife Betty. "Fins and feathers is the look we wanted," said Rachwitz. "Sort of a hunting lodge, but nicer."

Prices for luncheon entrees range from $3.50 to $9. Dinner entrees are priced $5.50 to $18.75. The restaurant will be open seven days a week serving lunch 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Dinner hours are 4:30-10:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 4:30-11:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays. On Sundays, dinner will be served 3-10 p.m. For reservations call 349-4434.

Featured on the menu are eight or more fresh fish entrees, such as Barbecued Lake Trout, Grilled Mahi Mahi, Roasted Monkfish and Chef Rocky's signature Potato Encrusted Whitefish.

Landlubbers will be equally satisfied with items like Roasted Half Duck, Turkey Steak Au Poivre with brandy Dijon sauce, Pork Loin Tosca with spatzle, Paella, Rack of Lamb or Filet Mignon with sweet potato chips. Other offerings include stir fries, pastas and Rocky's chili.

Hardwood tables with fish and game-bird placemats, natural wood beams, earthtone colors, wildlife prints of elk, wolves and birds, and even hand-carved decoys decorate the restaurant. On entering, guests will be treated to a 40-foot mural of the Rocky Mountains, hand painted by local artist Diane Sybelldon.

Symphony meets challenge after guest artist cancels

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

The Livonia Symphony Orchestra under conductor Francesco DiBlasi deserves a standing ovation for executing the much anticipated Nov. 14 program of classical and jazz in two weeks after a cancellation due to illness by trumpeter, Armando Ghital-

The second concert of the 19th season found the orchestra drawing upon its own talent to fill the challenging spot. Like stars shining through a night sky principal trumpeter, Brian Moon performing Farberman's, Double Concerto for Trumpet and Orchestra dazzled the audience as did composer/violist, Christopher Tew with the Michigan debut of his "Elegy for Strings - November 1963," written in tribute to the late President John F. Kennedy.

The program began with a bright and sprightly rendition of Glinka's, Overture to Russlan and Ludmilla, followed by Tew conducting the elegy, he began writing on the eve of Kennedy's assassination.

Before the end of the first section, the sorrow of the violins deeps considerably, preparing the listener for the tragedy yet to come. Introducing the second section, the violoncellos with full-throated darkness sound the death knell. Funereal in nature, the final section resigns itself to a dirgeful melody evoking emotions of hopelessness over lost dreams.

Tew unifies the three sections by repeating musical themes from the first, in cyclical form in the second and third.

A second listening of this moving work is in order, perhaps on the 30th anniversary of President Kennedy's assassination in 1993.

Guest artist, Moon was up next replacing Ghitalla who underwent a serious surgery three weeks ago, Diblasi told the audience. The orchestra plans to feature him at a future date.

Playing from two stands, Moon filled the air with the brilliant and penetrating sounds of brass playing a variety of jazz styles ranging from the smoky sweetness of the blues to big band swing.

This one movement concerto written for Ghitalla serves to challenge the soloist as it is demanding musically and technically. At the onset, Moon seemed tense but loosed up very quickly. His intensity and inspiration impressed the audience as he played to them, instead of at them throughout the concerto, and an improvised jazz solo.

Moon seemed capable of great agility. It is hoped that an encore guest performance is in the works for next season.

A graduate of the Curtis Insti-tute of Music, Moon began to play trumpet at age nine, studying un-der his father, Benny Moon. He has also studied with Irvin Sarin, Frank Kaderabek, Gilbert Johnson, and Ghitalla

Moon was principal trumpet of the Teatro Communale under Ri-cardo Muti in Florence, Italy. He has performed with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Eugene Or-mandy, Boston Symphony under Arthur Fiedler, and Detroit Symhony Orchestra. He leads the Moon Trumpet Ensemble.

"Letters are a way of presenting yourself in the best possible light to another person," writes Kiley who portrays Andrew Makepeace Ladd. "A letter is a present of myself to you. You can keep me and read me anytime you want.'

"Love Letters" chronicles the lifelong relationship between Ladd and Melissa Gardner, portrayed by Bacall, solely through their letters. They come from "privileged" backgrounds, but aren't untouched by life's trials and tribulations.

"Love Letters" weaves a spell. Gardner and Ladd are likeable characters. You empathize with bit of yourself.

We meet Andrew and Melissa in second grade when Andrew writes a letter to Gardner's mother to accept an invitation to Melissa's birthday party.

After the party, Melissa and Andrew begin writing letters to one another, and through the letters, the audience watches them grow up, test their values, fall in, and out of love.

Sometimes the letters are funny Ladd asks Gardner to send him a postcard during summer vacation. She does, and writes 'Here is the postcard you wanted me to send to you."

Later, the two try to be boyfriend and girlfriend, but it doesn't work out. Gardner tells Ladd that though her mother told her she should never say this to a boy, she thinks of him more like a brother and a friend. "I count on you Andy," she writes him. "I need you.

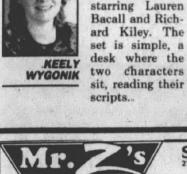

The letters continue, interupted only by occasional spats between the two.

Gardner's mother gets divorced and remarries. She hates her mother's new husband.

Later, the two get divorced, and Gardner's mother develops a drinking problem.

We follow Gardner and Ladd to college, then to Italy where Gardner takes up painting. Ladd joins the Navy, and falls in love with a Japanese girl. Gardner marries, and has two children.

Ladd breaks up with the Japanese girl, and goes to law school. His father tells him people from privileged families have a responsibility to help others.

Plymouth Symphony deserves praise for Nov. 13 concert

BY KRIS SPENCER PECIAL WRITER

The tape was ready to roll at the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra's Nov. 13 performance at the Novi High School auditorium. Michigan composer Anthony Ianpaccone was set to conduct his new symphony "Night Rivers" for he first time, before a sizable aulience. Needless to say, the air was heavy with anticipation. Anything could happen.

The lights came down. A hush ell over the space. PSO music diector Russell Reed appeared on stage. One wondered what meaningful words he'd impart; after all, it was a world premiere.

"I'm afraid we'll have to rearrange our program tonight," he said with some embarrassment. Our second chair French horn player thought the show would be Sunday. While we await his arrival, we'll hear William Grant Still's "Afro-American Sympho-

The audience shared a discreet chuckle. It seemed as though human error lifted some of the tension, allowing audience and orchestra to ease into the program without the burden of expecta-

In a way, the "Afro-American Symphony" made the transition easier yet. With its blues-inspired passages, Still's landmark work seemed immediately familiar.

Although the piece lacks the flair of the oft-compared "Rhapsody in Blue," it is historically interesting. As the program notes indicate, it was the first piece by a black composer to be performed by a major American orchestra, in 1931. What it lacks in musical

But that certainly isn't the case Iannaccone's "Night Riv-Inspired in part by Walt Whitman's metaphorical use of the words "river" and "night," Iannaccone explores the spiritual qualities of motion as a journey through the tumult of life onto death and then rebirth. The piece is breathtaking.

Consider the program notes. One learns that Iannaccone reworks the introductory melodic statement throughout the one movement piece. Reading this, one almost anticipates the repetitive phrasing found in the work of Philip Glass or Steve Reich. Wrong. Although "Night Rivers" does not engage straightforward melodies, its chilling, swirling theme is unforgettable and deeply touching.

And that ultimately means high praise for the PSO. They took a challenging piece and gave it their all. Anyone who entered the auditorium expecting a "community orchestra," plodding through highbrow atonal mire, soon found out otherwise.

In a way the show should have ended at that point. But alas, the second half was yet to come, featuring the Jack Brokensha Quartet playing jazz standards.

In the style of the Modern Jazz Quartet (xylophone, piano, bass and drums), the quartet offered up such favorites as Dave Brubeck's "Blue Rondo Ala Turk," and Thelonious Monk's "Round

Although the quartet's grasp of modern jazz is polished, its interpretations tend toward staid. And though the group's presence showed that the PSO's heart was in the right place, the performance itself simply didn't measure up to the concert's first half.

Once near death, marathon man encourages seniors

BY M.B. DILLON STAFF WRITER

Lest Kirk Douglas and Jack Palance think they're only septuagenerian specimens of physical fitness around, they'd do well to lay eyes on Ed Andrysiak.

Andrysiak of Plymouth Township, who celebrates his 79th birthday Tuesday, is less than 10 percent body fat with chiseled muscles, a sparkle in his eye, and energy equal to that of his grand-children.

In 1958 after he had open heart surgery, Andrysiak was given up for dead. He received the last rites, and was hospitalized for 10 months.

"In one week, I went from 192 pounds before my operation to under 100 pounds, I was dehydrated so bad," he told an attentive audience at Carriage Park senior community in Canton recently.

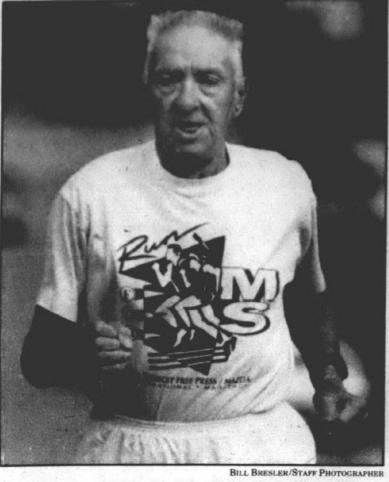

"I had to be taught how to walk again."

Seven years ago, six months after his wife died, Andrysiak was hospitalized for yet another major heart attack.

If the medical team that treated him could see Andrysiak now, they'd no doubt be dumbfounded. They figured he'd follow his doctors' advice and move into a nursing home.

"My doctor had me living on pills, which was not good. He opted for me to go into a convalescent home, because I was old and I was dying," said the great-grandfather of five.

Andrysiak's daughter, Judith Rudzewicz of Plymouth Township, said nothing doing. She insisted he move in with her family in Colony Farms, which he did, though he was so weak he couldn't climb stairs and had to sleep in the dining room.

From near death to health

Now a lean, trim 165 pounds with a 34-inch waist, Andrysiak is a veteran of four marathons. Most recently, the racewalker and runner completed the 26.2-mile distance at the Oct. 18 Detroit Free Press/Mazda International Marathon.

Andrysiak told Carriage Park residents about some of the things he does to keep himself "feeling like I'm in my 40s.

"As far as I'm concerned, age means nothing, I honestly mean it," said Andrysiak, who for the Multiple Sclerosis Society raised $1,054 in pledges at this year's Free Press marathon. The MS Society is the longtime beneficiary of the race.

The weather the day of the Free Press was so windy, cold and rainy that it was tempting to drop out. "But I couldn't quit; a lot of people pledged, and it would have dropped my total," said Andrysiak, who racewalked the distance in six hours, 20 minutes.

"When I make my cereal in the morning, Fm like a bartender," he said. "I mix high fiber bran with bran flakes, and add bananas and half-percent milk. Then I put in some Rice Krispies to improve the taste. I also have an eightounce glass of orange juice, a bagel and a cup of de-caf coffee. When I'm training for a marathon, I can eat 3,500 calories a day, just to maintain weight.

"For lunch, I make myself a sandwich with wheat bread and turkey breast with a little mayo and spicy mustard and a cup of decaf." Dinner is usually a pasta dish with a glass or two of milk. Andrysiak snacks on popcorn, fruit and pretzels — ("pretzels are baked, not fast-fried, so you can do this," he says).

Drinking lots of water "will keep your body clean, inside and outside," Andrysiak added.

Key to longevity

Diet alone won't get you feeling your best. "You have to exercise with it," he said, and "you have to walk at a certain speed. To do a couple of miles a day is great. Some people will lose weight, some won't. But they'll shape up. They say no pain, no gain. Don't believe it," said Andrysiak, who gradually increased the distance he walked from a few hundred feet to several miles.

Walking or running is all the more pleasurable if you do it with others. Conversation helps the time and miles click by, said Andrysiak, founder of the Holy Strollers, a walkers' club at St. John Neumann's Catholic Church in Canton.

With inspiration from Andrysiak, two fellow Holy Strollers also completed this year's Detroit marathon.

Andrysiak advises wearing good shoes, and alternating two pair to avoid injury, and prolong the life of the shoes. For safety, the former baseball and softball player recommends walking against traffic and leaving stereo headsets at home.

Retired from Detroit's Murray Corp. and Ford Motor Co., Andrysiak can't believe how getting fit has transformed him.

"My body fat has gone from 27 percent to 6.4 percent. In the last four years, I haven't had a cold. I haven't gotten any flu shots either. My immune system is very strong. And I have no problems with my heart. It's phenomenal," said Andrysiak.

Anyone interested in walking weekdays with Andrysiak and the Holy Strollers is welcome to call him at 455-9042.

Handy hankies

Send-a-Song helps loved ones tell feelings

BY LARRY O'CONNOR STAFF WRITER

It's called Send-a-Song, but Keep-a-Hanky-Handy could be a more apt moniker.

The founders of the family business operating out of Farmington Hills tell of tears — those of joy of course - from overwhelmed recipients of their personal music renderings.

"We did one for a couple in Farmington," said Karen Price, who's involved in the business with her husband, Rick, as well as her sister and brother-in-law. "They were having an argument. She's in the car really slamming into him.

"At that point, he put in the tape of the song she had written for him and she began crying.'

Stories flow

Stories of welled-up eyes flow from Price, who is the enthusiastic collaborator in the enterprise that started out as a simple favor for a neighbor back in 1977.

The premise is rather simple. People call Send-a-Song (at appropriately 44-A-SONG) and Price or her sister, Jacki Sutherland, takes the customer's information about the special person and their relationship.

From there, Sutherland writes a story that proceeds the song while Karen and Rick Price work on original lyrics and music for the piece. Then they take the composition into a professional studio, record it and send the cassette tape off to the usually surprised listener.

Then it's tissue time. "We take what's in your heart," Karen Price said, "and we write a song."

Song prices vary

Send-a-Song prices range from $49 for a stock musical number with a personal greeting at the end to $300 for both an original story and song recorded with a complement of musicians.

Usually the numbers are piano massaged ballads, but Send-a-Song is flexible. They recently received a request for a country and western tune from a gent in Del Rio, Texas.

At least 90 percent of orders are from men for women.

"They all say to me, 'It's so hard for me to tell my wife I love her,'" Karen said. "I'll ask them, What does she mean to your life?' After a half-an-hour, it's like pulling teeth before you can get them to tell you.'

Others are gushing with heartfelt sentiments about their spouses. Karen relates how she met one ex-Marine at a nearby Coney Island to listen to him pour out his feelings about his

"When the song was finished, we went into the car to listen to it," she said. "He said, 'I came prepared.' He had a box of Kleenex."

Hobby led to job

The idea for Send-a-Song was borne out of a hobby. Karen and Jacki were asked to compose a tune for neighbors in Lathrup Village, who were celebrating their first anniversary.

Karen was an accomplished vocalist and an actress who already had a role on the TV sitcom "Welcome Back Kotter" as one of the more obscure "Sweat Hogs." ("I only had one speaking line," "We did one for a couple in Farmington. They were having an argument. She's in the car really slamming into him. At that point, he put in the tape of the song she had written for him and she began crying.'

> Karen Price Send-a-Song

she said cranking up a Brooklyn accent."Here's my homework Mister Kotter.'"). Jacki was an English major at the University of Michigan.

"We went across the street and we played it for them," Karen said. "The woman cried . .

The business didn't hit a high note until later. Karen and Jacki only did the service during the Then Karen met and married Rick, who was touring the country as a gospel singer. He's helped on the creative end of the business.

Jacki also married James Sutherland, who is pastor at Victory Fellowship in Lathrup Village. He's provided a sound business acumen, which is increasingly in need as orders increase.

Send-a-Song shifts into overdrive during the holiday season, composing up to 50 songs a month. The normal amount of rate is around 25.

Ideally, they'd like to keep their headquarters out of Farmington Hills but use 1-800-numbers to expand their customer base nationally. But with growth comes caution.

"We're to the point now we have to hire people," said Rick, who is a 1974 graduate of Garden City East. "The problem is if the people we'd hire would care as much as we care."

Added Karen, "We don't want it to be a production line. We want quality.

Walking into a forest or natural area is the preferred method, but after arriving, take time to sit and watch. Spending time in the natural world does not mean you have to hike every minute. In fact, sitting is one of the most effective methods of observing.

Although you cover more ground hiking, everything is moving in relation to you. If everything is moving, it is more difficult to detect movement of other animals. As you hike, it is hard not to make noise that can be detected by animals long before you arrive in the area.

Sitting allows you to relax after an invigorating hike and study one area thoroughly. It's surprising how many things can be observed by sitting and watching. Because you are stationary it is I have suggested easier to detect any movement made by animals. That little moth that flutters by would likely have gone undetected if you had been hiking.

Sounds come alive when you sit and listen. Scolding squirrels, screeching jays and flutters of feathers jump out at you while you sit. I became aware of my first pileated woodpecker while I was sitting in the forest one day. As I was scanning the area in front of me I heard a wooosh - wooosh wooosh sound off to the side. When I focused in on the bird flying through the woods, I realized it was my first sighting of a pileated woodpecker.

Sitting allows time to just think about what is around you. Watching for branches and fallen logs while walking can distract your thoughts from more insightful contemplations. There are no signs, lights, people or cars to distract your attention from the beauty of the natural world in front of you.

Expansion plans serve Flint Ink well

■ The world's largest supplier of newspaper ink has its finger in many pies. Its next step is global, as plans are made to expand to Europe and the Pacific Rim.

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

Executives at Flint Ink, founded in 1920 and now headquartered in Redford, describe their company as the largest American-owned manufacturer of ink and pigment products in terms of annual sales.

The company reaches a milestone next month.

H. Howard Flint II, grandson of the founder, becomes the third generation to take over as chairman and chief executive officer. He succeeds his uncle, Robert H. Flint, who retires from dayto-day responsibilities.

Leonard D. Frescoln, hired nine months ago as chief financial officer from the aerospace industry, becomes president and chief operating officer. His promotion marks the first time that a non-family member will hold such a high-ranking position.

"The next generation of family members are not in a position to assume a major management role, and the company is a lot larger in size and complexity than when I joined," Flint

"I feel I have the support of the whole family and we have compatible views for the company," Frescoln

Flint, 53, a Bloomfield Hills resident, sees himself as Mr. Outside, working to expand the customer base.

"We only have about 15 percent of the U.S. market share and the whole U.S. market is only $3 billion," he said. "We have a clear opportunity."

Frescoln, 47, of Milford envisions his role as Mr. Inside, tending to dayto-day operations and taking the company to its next technological pla-

"My goal for the rest of the decade is transition into the technology of the 21st century - to enhance technology in the manufacturing process as well as research and development capability," he said.

The company will have sales this year of about $535 million, Flint projected, and $575 million next.

He declined to reveal specific profit figures. "The company always has been profitable, although each year's sales didn't grow," he said.

The profit margin throughout the industry averaged 2.9 percent last year, Frescoln added.

The commercial and packaging ink group accounts for about 35 percent of the company's sales, Flint and Frescoln reported. Cereal boxes, candy bar wrappers, checks and maps are among products colored by Flint Ink.

The publication ink group accounts for 30 percent. "We're the world's largest supplier of newspaper ink,' Flint said. This newspaper is a client.

The publication gravure group, highest quality color reproduction, accounts for 15 percent of sales. National Geographic and catalogs published by JC Penney and Boston's Museum of Fine Arts have been printed with ink supplied by Flint.

The other two major components include the pigment group - which produces color for paint, latex products like rubber gloves and balloons, plus coatings for textile printing and ribbons — and the Canadian Group.

New responsibilities: H. Howard Flint II, left, and Leonard D. Frescoln will soon take on new management roles at a 72year-old ink empire headquartered in Redford.

Each accounts for about 10 percent

Flint employs some 2,700 in the U.S., Canada and Mexico.

The company operates more than 60 plants, the vast majority in the U.S. The headquarters and a manufacturing plant are in Redford, a small staff support building in Livonia and a corporate research center in Ann Arbor.

Half of the growth over the years has come through internal expansion and half through acquisitions, Flint

"I see moderate growth for the industry," Flint said. "More environmentally friendly products will be utilized. Bigger companies will get bigger. Many small producers will sell to larger ones because they can't ac-

"Many of our larger customers are going on a global basis," Flint continued. "We're looking at a joint venture or acquisition to get involved in Europe and the Pacific Rim.'

"We're going to have to become a global company," Frescoln said.

"Ink is used on almost everything in one form or another," Frescoln said. "You can almost call it a service business. The winner is going to be the one that provides the best ser-

"Saving for today is security for tomorrow. Money can beget money, and its offspring can beget more." These words, penned by Benjamin Franklin more than 200 years ago remain true today, as illustrated by this month's profiled couple, Brad and Patty Norman of Farmington.

Brad, 50, is a self-employed psychologist working through a clinic in Livonia. Patty, 10 years younger, is an elementary school teacher in Plymouth. Their three daughters were born relatively late in their lives; Brad was 44 and Pat was 34 when their first daughter was born, and their other two daughters followed at two-year intervals.

Their primary goals include saving for their daughters' college costs while preparing for their own early retirement. Specifically, Patty asks, "What must we save each month to accomplish our goals of retirement in 10 years and also have enough for our children's college education?'

In current, non-inflated dollars they expect to spend $12,000 per year on each child's education. Besides the assets listed on this page, they have saved $3,000 each for their daughters under the Uniform Gifts to Minors Act and have purchased two years of a Michigan Educational Trust prepaid tuition contract for their oldest daughter.

Lack of debt

Our projections indicate that they need to save $250-$300 per child for college expenses. This is a significant amount, but since they have no debt it is within their capabilities. They might view these college savings as their 'mortgage payment.'

We would suggest conservative growth and income mutual funds because their children are so

They would like to retire in 10 years when Brad turns 60.

They have accumulated a comfortable, but not overly generous, nest egg for someone Brad's age. They realize that this early retirement would take place before their daughters enter college, which is an unusual circumstance; it is for this reason they would like to fully prefund the college savings, if possible.

Frankly, we expected the twin goals of an early retirement along with providing for the significant outlays of three college educations to be overly ambitious.

Attainable goals

Early retirement is a frequently heard financial objective, but often reality dictates that people work at least through their early 60s. But after some "numbercrunching" and generating some computer projections, we believe their goals are attainable with careful planning.

Their biggest strength is one which we have seen before in this column: They have systematically kept their debt to a minimum, and they have kept their expenses below that which they could afford given their incomes. Both of these factors give them the ability to save significant amounts between now and retirement. This is the best formula we know for financial success.

Brad has his own retirement savings plan, called a "Keogh" plan, but has no other pension. Patty would be eligible for a teacher's pension in 10 years if she buys five years of service from the Michigan School Retirement Pension Plan at a cost to her of $40,000.

Patty is unsure whether to spend this $40,000. This "universal buy-in" provision allows teachers to retire earlier and receive a larger pension than they would otherwise qualify for. Though the cost is not insignificant, we believe it is a bargain for

Investment a bargain

Because it will allow Patty to retire five years earlier, she receives five years of additional benefits during her lifetime. She recoups her initial investment in the first two years of retirement, and the present value of her future pension benefits are tens of thousands of dollars greater than this initial cost.

The $40,000 should be taken from their municipal bond fund, which can be accessed without

Patty also had the foresight to join the retirement plan's "member investment plan," which provides her with annual increases in the pension benefit for a modest current income reduction. Particularly for early retirees, this program is a real plus. These are opportunities all teachers should review and evaluate carefully.

Brad and Patty are currently saving the maximum possible in tax-deductible accounts. Patty places almost $800 per month into her tax sheltered annuity, which is available through the school district. This amount is taken out of her paycheck before taxes, and it grows in an account that is not taxed until money is withdrawn.

Similarly, Brad is placing 15 percent, or $6,000, of his self-employment income into his tax-deductible Keogh Retirement Plan.

Together they save an average of $1,300 a month, which, if compounded over the next 10 years at 7.5 percent, should increase their existing nest egg to almost $750,000. Our calculations indicate that, along with their Social Security and Patty's pension, this nest egg will be sufficient for their

Inflaton buster

They expect to need $4,500 per month in today's dollars. They reelize they must take inflation into account. But Social Security payments are indexed to inflation and should ultimately provide about 40 percent of their retirement needs.

As mentioned, Patty's pension will also increase each year; it is expected to provide almost 45 percent of her preretirement income. Along with the income taken from some of their investments, their retirement income should be sufficient to allow them to maintain their lifestyle.

Their own portfolio needs more growth. Most of their assets are in interest-bearing accounts, which provide stability but little protection against inflation. Brad should consider shifting the majority of his Keogh Retirement Plan into quality stocks or mutual funds to help balance the portfolio with greater growth assets.

The attainment of their goals could be short-circuited if their wages were to cease due to death or disability. Both have only $100,000 of life insurance. This would not come close to replacing the income lost to the family over the next 10 years. It would force the survivor to cut back the family's standard of living and work at least until age 65.

A few thousand dollars spent on insurance premiums would go a long way toward solving his problem. We'd suggest an additional $250,000 of coverage during the next 10 years for each of them.

Superstores threaten independent book shops

With the consolidation of the retail book industry into librarysize outlets, small independent stores will likely lose market share even as book sales have grown at an annual clip of 8.7 percent over the last five years.

The reason? Library-size outlets, commonly referred to as superstores, often keep long hours, stock thousands of titles and offer steep discounts due to their ability to buy in large vol-

"Whether their concern is justified or not, the independent owners are all worried about the superstores cutting into their business," said Dan Clinton, buyer for Redford-based Merle Distributing Co., which distributes books throughout Michigan and the Midwest.

"The way for the independents to compete is to know their customer base, offer impeccable service, perhaps move into more regional titles or specialize in specific genres to maintain their business. The superstores have enough capital to take losses; the independents don't.

A case in point, O'Neill & Austin, an independent bookstore in Rochester Hills, closed last year after a Barnes & Noble superstore went up nearby in 1990. Ann Ar-bor's Little Professor bookstore chain, which had 145 stores two years ago, none of which were superstores, has since shrunk to 122 stores.

Superstores are also competing with mall-based stores, in some cases forcing the closure of outlets within the same company.

'Quite often you'll find that when a superstore opens up in a given location, any independent store nearby will close within the first year," said George Barry, owner of George Barry Books, a Whether their concern is justified or not, the independent owners are all worried about the superstores cutting into their business.'

used book dealer in Farmington

"There's no way an independent can compete with the number of titles and the amount of discounts a superstore offers. And now that Kmart has bought Border's, can you imagine what their buying power will be? We're seeing the new book market change very rapidly.

Troy-based Kmart, which already owns the Waldenbooks chain of 1,200 stores, announced in early October that it was acquiring Ann Arbor-based Borders, the founder of the superstore concept and one of the most prestigious chains in the nation.

Although Border's has 22 superstores to date, Kmart has ambitious plans to expand, especially given the retailer's sterling record with mass merchandising. What's more, Barnes & Noble, the nation's largest bookstore chain, is also adding superstores to the metro Detroit market. The latter chain plans to take over the Frank's Nursery store at 15 Mile and Telegraph in Bloomfield Hills, directly across the street from Metro News Center, one of the area's premier independent bookstores. Frank's is planning to move further north along Telegraph in Bloomfield Hills. But competition from superstores can be advantageous. 'When the Borders store opened (four miles away in Beverly Hills), we thought they would take some of our business, but in fact we've become more like colleagues, with calls and referrals going back and forth," said Sue Weiss, manager of Metro News Center. "But if a Barnes & Noble store opened across the street, that would change things. They're more like a supermarket, and their intention is predatory. Many people in the industry are concerned and angry with that approach, but in the end it will be up to the customer to determine what works.

Weiss said the bookstore hasn't lost much ground to Border's, save for what she called the "academic client," but she felt confident Metro News could compete with a superstore across the street knowledgeable staff and special

Meanwhile, Deborah DeLaunay, owner of The Paperback Exchange in Rochester, said while she offers the same 20 to 25 percent discount on new hardcovers as superstores do, the store's focus is being transformed into more of a cultural center. "People like to browse when they buy books, and while we don't have the space of a superstore, we're starting to emphasize a children's story hour, establishing more ties to local churches and community groups, and displaying works of pottery by local artists," she said .'It's hard to match the discounts of the superstores, but I feel we can compete by establishing our own niche in the marketplace. And since we're close to Oakland University, we'll continue to offer excellent service to the students and faculty."

When my routine pregnancy suddenly wasn't...

I was glad I'd chosen Hutzel. From the beginning, my pregnancy was described as "normal." So when I wanted a private room-one where labor, delivery, and recovery could all take place-my doctor had no objections. But if something went wrong,

I wanted to know my baby and I would also have the most knowledgeable specialists and the latest medical technology nearby. So I chose The Detroit Medical Center's Hutzel Hospital.

To my surprise, Hutzel's private LDRP (Labor, Delivery, Recovery, Post-Partum) rooms were among the most spacious and beautiful I'd seen. I was glad I could be in one-and that I'd chosen Hutzel. Because at the last minute, my baby developed complications and a team of Hutzel specialists was right there to provide the care we both needed.

Like a lot of other women, I've learned there's no such thing as a "routine" pregnancy. Thank Wayne State University goodness there's Hutzel Hospital.

Housing fumbles leadership role

AP — The nation's snail-paced housing recovery won't pick up any real speed until employment and consumer confidence rise decisively. That's the main message Realtors will hear as they gathered for their annual convention.

There are some positive trends to give the National Association of Realtors some encouragement. The economy is no longer shrinking. And although economists differ on whether a permanent recovery is under way, there have been some upbeat signs in housing:

Housing starts rose 1.4 percent in September and are up 23.1 percent over the last 12 months.

While sales of new homes dipped 1 percent in October, that was after four months of gains.

■ Nationally, rates on 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages have risen to 8.25 percent from their 18-year low last September of 7.84 percent. But they are still very attractive and likely to remain stable or drop, said Frank Nothaft, chief deputy economist at the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

In the past, Realtors have clung to the conventional wisdom that housing leads the economy out of recession. But the current recession has taught them the age-old lesson that rules are made only to be broken.

But the Realtors are well aware that most prospective home buyers pay little attention to economic statistics. Many consumers are out of work or know people who are, and they remain uneasy about the job market.

Unemployment has fallen to 7.4 percent from 7.8 percent last June, but that is because fewer people are looking for work. And permanent downsizing has cut 2 percent from the number of available jobs.

Job concerns have kept consumer confidence at depressed levels. "When consumers are worrying about their job prospects, they're not going to put money down for a house," said Nothaft at Freddie Mac.

Commercial realtors are facing residential counterparts. Vacant downtown office space continues to grow, reaching 17.6 percent in the third quarter, according to CB Commercial Real Estate Group.

That oversupply is "not going an even tougher time than their

to go away until the economy starts to grow and we have job creation, and companies are expanding sufficiently to first occupy the space they have, and then build," said Stephen Blank, managing director at Cushman & Wakefield, a major commercial real estate firm.

Developers are finding it very difficult to secure long-term financing for projects already begun, Realtors said.

If they can find financing, the terms are much tougher than they were in during the more speculative 1980s. Lenders for both commercial and residential projects are demanding higher down payments, longer depreciation schedules, better cash flow projections, and iron-clad lease agreements.

In the past, Realtors have clung to the conventional wisdom that housing leads the economy out of recession. But the current recession has taught them the age-old lesson that rules are made only to be broken.

During the last recession in 1981 and 1982, a little more than 1 million housing units were built each year. That number jumped to 1.7 million in 1983, the first year of recovery. That upturn "had a tremendous effect on the overall economy," said Jay Shackford, spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders.

This time, housing is a laggard. In 1991, a little more than 1 million units were built; the home builders' projection for this year is an anemic 1.2 million, and it could edge up to 1.32 million in 1993, Shackford said.

That kind of growth has not been enough to stimulate the economy. In the four quarters after the last recession ended, the nation's gross domestic product—the measure of all goods and services produced—grew an average of 5.2 percent. That compares with a paltry 1.5 percent in the four quarters following the end of this recession, the realtors association points out in a recent report.

Economists at the Realtors group say they expect the economy to continue to grow through 1993, "but at rates which pale beside growth experienced in the 1980s."

Artist touched by victimized animals

ictures of an emaciated afghan hound awakened Livonia artist Bonnie Rigelsky to the horrors of hungry and homeless animals

Fellow merchant Linda Reeves brought the pictures to Rigelsky's now-closed baseball card shop in Northville last summer. Reeves had earlier adopted the now 3-year-old dog from an animal shelter and had nurtured it back to health.

But before sharing those shocking photos, Reeves had commissioned Rigelsky to sketch her dog Lady after seeing examples of the artist's pet portraits and the slogan "Let me draw your pet" on the wall of the baseball card shop.

Rigelsky, who operates Pet Portraits by Bonnie as a hobby, uses colored pencil to create pet portraits from a favorite color snapshot.

After seeing pictures of what that afghan hound used to look like, I couldn't believe it survived," Rigelsky said. "Those pictures really pulled at my heartstrings.

"I knew then I wanted to help out. Linda Reeves encouraged me to find out how I could do more to help animals through my portraits.

So Rigelsky called the Michigan Anti-Cruelty Society in Detroit after reading about its financial plight and the emotional trauma associated with euthanasia in "The Kiss of Death," a Detroit News story that ran in September.

Rigelsky and society secretary Marilyn Iskra decided on a joint fund-raiser that showcases Rigelsky's artistry.

Pet portrait donations

Until Christmas, Rigelsky will donate 20 percent of the proceeds from each pet portrait she creates. Call her Livonia studio at 471-2743 for an

The price depends on the size and detail of a portrait. The base price for a 16- by 20-inch portrait of one animal is $175.

Iskra commissioned Rigelsky to create portraits of her 9-year-old miniature collie Casey and 2year-old mixed spaniel Hazel.

"The detail is just incredible," said Iskra, a Northville resident and one of the Michigan Anti-Cruelty Society's nine volunteer board members.

For example, the spaniel's eyes are a very light brown, the color of a peanut shell. "I can't believe Bonnie picked up the color so perfect," said Iskra, by day a Ford Motor Co. telecommunications ana-Iskra had the portraits framed at The Framespace Gallery, which will give to the society 20 percent of the proceeds from framing each Rigelsky portrait. The gallery has stores in Travelers Tower, 26555 Evergreen, Southfield, and at 21565 Grand River, near Six Mile, in Detroit.

Rigelsky captures all animals in pencil, not just

The 1985 Plymouth-Salem High School graduate's only artistic training is one semester of basic drawing at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. Examples of her portraits hang in Linda Reeves' rughooking shop, Ewe, Me and Co. in Northville, and at Roose Animal Hospital in Plymouth.

Rigelsky is banking that her colored pencil skills distinguish her from other pet portrait artists: "Most of them work with pen and ink, watercolor or oils. I offer a different medium, a different

'Animals a blessing'

The Michigan Anti-Cruelty Society reaches out to abused and abandoned animals through a $400,000-a-year operating budget raised from donations, memberships and fund-raising. All administrators for the 57-year-old, nonprofit group are volunteer. The 12 staffers who work directly with the animals at the Joseph Campau shelter receive minimum wage.

The cash-starved shelter holds only 125 animals but 8,100 are brought in each year. Last year, only 5 percent were adopted. The rest were humanely killed within four days of their arrival.

"'The Kiss of Death,' "Rigelsky says, "brought tears to my eyes. It really hit home. It was really sad. It made me aware of how bad things are the mistreatment and suffering of the animals before they come to the shelter and the depression and nightmares that overcome the workers who must do the euthanizing.'

The heartrending story, she said, "told that people aren't adopting older animals, that longtime donors to the society are dying and that nearly 26 animals are brought to the shelter each operating

"Animals were put on this earth as a blessing, a reward," she said. "But some people just don't

She added: "It's really sad to read about people who just don't care about animals - starving them, leaving them. Being an animal lover, it does my heart good to know I'm able to help where I

ception.

The Plymouth artist, known for creating paintings at local art shows before your very eyes in an hour and a half, will exhibit traditional northern Michigan landscapes and abstract florals Saturday, Nov. 21, at the second annual "Celebration of the Arts" in Northville.

"I do a lot of family-oriented art shows. I've always been a homebody, always doing shows in the surrounding area," LeGault said in an interview at his home. "I'm trying to find a balance because things have

Learn about fine points of lacemaking

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

In the 15th and 16th centuries, handmade bobbin lace was reserved for garments worn in the luxurious courts of kings and queens.

Learn about the skills and equipment that went into this time consuming craft at Love of Lace III, presented by the Great Lakes Lace Group, Saturday, Nov. 21, at the Livonia Civic Center Library, Five Mile and Farmington Road.

The free event runs from 11 a.m. to Mayor Robert Bennett has dedicated the day to all lacemakers "in recognition of the contributions which have been made by those who practice this craft and for their efforts in the collection and preservation of lace.

Exhibitors inside the library atrium will display handmade lace and demonstrate the age-old art, while vendors from Michigan, Illinois and Quebec offer a selection of equipment, including bobbins, lace pillows and fine threads necessary for be-

along with books, beads and antique laces in the community room. Only the wealthy owned the lace. The fishermen and farmers started lacemaking to save their families from starving to death in winter,' said Canton resident Marian Tyler,

YOUNG ARTISTS

The Plymouth Symphony will host a young artist competition for instrumental music students in the Plymouth/Canton, Northville and Novi school districts.

A $200 cash prize and a possible solo appearance with the PSO goes to the first-place winner. A $100 cash prize goes to the second-place finisher. Both will have the chance to play at the Plymouth Symphony chamber concert Jan. 29 in the Plymouth-Canton Little Theatre.

Art Beat

To be eligible to compete, students must play a band or orchestra instrument and meet the requirements for entry in the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association District 12 Solo and Ensemble Festival. Solo pianists are not eligible for this competition.

The competition will be held Dec. 14. The deadline to enter is Nov. 23. Direct queries and applications to Russell Reed, PSO music direcand gals in the Livonia Symphony Orchestra by buying one of the new LSO T-shirts.

The $10 gray shirts with logo come in medium and large and are available noon to 4 p.m. Monday and Wednesday at the Livonia Symphony office, 30499 Plymouth Road at Middlebelt. Call 421-1111.

AT THE MUSEUM

A display of Christmas ornaments and milk glass light bulbs are on display through December at the Canton Historical Museum, on Canton Center at Proctor Road.

The items date to between 1900 and 1940, according to the Canton Historical Society Newsletter.

The museum is open 1-3 p.m. Tuesdays and 1-4 p.m. Saturdays.

Fine arts and craft show to benefit school

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

New Morning School of Plymouth presents "Celebration of the a juried fine art and crafts show, 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, at Northville Recreation Center, 303 W. Main.

Admission to the second annual fund-raiser is $1.50. Proceeds fund the operating budget of New Morning School, a pre-k through eighth-grade parent cooperative.

Watercolors, acrylic and oil paintings, drawings, etchings, pottery, photography, jewelry, folk art, glass, wearable art, weaving, woodworking, baskets, bells and limited edition porcelain dolls created by more than 70 artists and crafters will take center stage.

"We have photography this year — more painters, two potters and weavings," said Leslie Stolaruk, show coordinator. "Over half of the artists and craftsmen have received some sort of special recognition or are in galleries.

Holiday music will sound throughout the show in the background, courtesy of Richard Lee and Unity Productions of Plym-

Irish folk and old-time fiddle tunes by the musical group consisting of Larry "Renzo" Hutchinson of Farmington, guitar and dulcimer, Kris Wheeland of Farmington, dulcimer, Jim McKinney of New Britton, fiddle, and Lora Vickerman of Dearborn, dulcimer and accordion, will fill traits and landscapes. the air 1:30-3:30 p.m.

Food will be served by the West Side Deli of Novi.

Barb Shram of Washington will personalize Christmas ornaments with hand painting while you browse at the show.

Shapiro earned a master of arts degree from Leningrad State Pedagogical Institute. He has been a successful artist for 22 years in portraiture, scenery, dioramas, stage and costume design, and an art director for more than 50 plays. He has participated in more than 20 shows in Rus-

For the second year, Stolaruk will exhibit her handcrafted paper and puzzle collage jewelry along-side hundreds of other great gift ideas made by artists and crafters from Michigan.

Hockey, soccer, skating, sewing, ardening, nursing, teaching, junk food, chocoholic, and dog and cat theme pins boldly display the wearer's fondness on their lapel.

"My bestsellers are my teacher line. They like fun things for the classroom. If they're discussing a unit on recycling, they'll wear the recycling pin," Stolaruk said. "I have over 75 themes now and all my pieces are handsigned and dated."

gotten out of hand. I want a manageable business.

So far this year, LeGault has painted his way through more than 35 art shows and fairs. By early summer, an uneasiness had settled in and he grew increasingly disturbed as he watched people standing in line, waiting for up to three hours to place orders for his acrylic paintings.

"There are people who have been waiting since May for a painting but there's only one person. I can only produce one painting at a time. I've booked over a year and a half of people who want paintings," LeGault said.

"My life is in a transitional stage. I can't paint 18 hours a day anymore. Right now, I have to do weight training and running to be able to endure. I'm looking for a way of slowing the pace and keeping the quality high.'

Lithographs could hold the answer. LeGault has found a printer in the Detroit area with whom he feels he can work. "I'm looking for a target date to be around the first of the year so I can accommodate a lot more people," LeGault said.

The viewer is drawn to the quiet solitude of LeGault's paintings. His colors span a spectrum from misty pastels accented by deep teals to bright violet blues pushing reds in aggressively strong florals created with a palette knife.

At age 14, LeGault learned to paint when his sister dragged him to a painting class, never stopping since. He opened his first studio at 18 and christened his second by the time he was 21. For the last 22 years, he has painted full time to support his family, now grown to four.

LeGault and wife of 22 years, Nancy, have two children, Michael, 7 and Jennifer, 3. Until two years ago, they lived part time in Florida where Le-Gault exhibited at art shows in Palm Beach and Boca Raton.

Tiring of the fast track, he describes as "too many shows and rich people who treat art as just another purchase among many," LeGault returned to the warmer, kinder folk found in Michigan.

Once again, he's reassessing his priorities with the hope of balancing the business of painting and family.

"My priorities are changing. Some of my friends make money-making their priority and are losing their families, their marriages. There's more important things than making money. The kids are growing up fast and I don't get a second chance," LeGault said. "Wherever we go, we hear, 'It's Tom the artist,' but without Nancy there wouldn't be a Tom the artist."

An example of his new priorities is a volunteer position as art director, designing and building sets, for an upcoming production by the Canton Community Church. He also plans to halve the number of art shows in which he'll exhibit next year.

"I'm having a blast with the kids. They're older now and the dynamics of the family is changing. I really love my family. I look at the pictures of the kids from a year ago and can't believe how fast they're growing," LeGault said. "I'm looking to simplify. I'm looking to focus in on the kids and Nancy. We want to have quiet time."

Lace-in: Karen Folland of Canton will demonstrate bobbin lacemaking on a French bolster pillow at Love of Lace II. After winding threads separately onto all-wood Belgian bobbins, she will twist and plait the threads together to make French lace.

Great Lakes Lace Group membership chairwoman.

The interest in lacemaking seems to go in cycles. I visited my son in Wyoming this summer where the daughters weren't interested in learning, but now the granddaughters have this lace that grandmother made and they want to learn how to do it.

"That's why this lace-in is open to the public. We're trying to teach the public about the art of lacemaking."

Before the invention of buttons and other fastenings, garments were held together with laces. Needlepoint, or point lace, developed in Italy, while bobbin pillow lace evolved in Belgium.

"While there are many types of lacemaking - bobbin, needle, tatting, crocheting and knitting to name a few the most popular types in this area are bobbin and tatting," Tyler said.

Bobbin lace is made by twisting and plaiting threads together. To begin, a lacemaker winds single threads on bobbbins, holding them in place on a pillow with pins, then works them over a parchment pattern.

saw Mary McPeek of Ann Arbor demonstrating the art at

'At the time, I didn't have the time to go to Greenfield Village to take her classes, but eventually took classes at her home. Lacemaking was just a natural thing for me to "Tyler said. "It's my therapy."

Teresa Mize of Berkley concurs with the idea that lacemaking serves as a natural tranquilizer.

"The world disappears when you're making lace — the troubles, the frustrations," said Mize, who after earning a bachelor of fine arts degree in textile design from Utah State University became a self-employed production

"Lacemaking is a miniature world. The intricacy of the interwoven threads have always intrigued me being a hand weaver. They're just like little works of art.

Mize, who started her "Interlace" business in 1989, will offer beginning lacemaking supplies, including English spangle bobbins from the Midlands, Belgian bobbins and three tables of glass and wooden beads for bobbins and jewelry making.

Bobbin lacemaking is one of the oldest crafts, dating back to the 15th and 16th centuries. Since little of the lace survives from that time because it disintegrates with age, most of the knowledge on its existence stems from paintings and woodcuts.

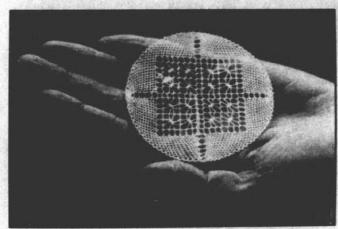

Engravings after Martin de Vos from 1580 show a young girl working on a lace pillow with bobbins. European portrait painters such as Rembrandt van Rijn and Anthony Van Dyck record the wearing of fine lace. Jan Vermeer of Delft shows a Belgian girl with a pillow on her lap used for lacemaking in the oil painting, "The Lacemaker.

Bobbin lace evolved from netting or network. Examples of network that date back to 1000 B.C. have been found in the ancient sealed tombs of Egypt.

In America, bobbin lacemaking, following English traditions, became known as early as the 17th Century. At one time, it flourished as a cottage industry in Ipswich, Mass., where workers produced 42,000 yards of silk lace annually.

Countries and districts developed a style of pattern and working manner characteristic of that region. It is possible to identify whether a piece of fine old lace was handcrafted in Brussels, Belgium, or Chantilly, France, or Spain or Enga land.

By the late 1800s, little handmade lace was produced due to the invention of lacemaking machinery. The time-worn craft of making lace by hand using a pillow and bobbins

Antique to modern: Karen Folland, a lacemaker for 12 years, displays French Torchon lace Tyler became interested in lacemaking in 1978 when she made with traditional linen thread. The upcoming lace-in will feature antique to modern lace that's handmade.

Today's fast-paced living finds collectors searching for handmade lace and handturned wood and bone bobbins. The Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, Art Institute of Chicago and Victoria and Albert Museum in London maintain exquisite collections of fine old lace.

"The children are the ones we need to reach," Tyler said.

Dressed in costumes from the mid-1500s to the colonial days, Tyler, Corinne Suptlee of Livonia and Shirley Coe of Redford Township traveled Nov. 5 to a grade school in Ohio to demonstrate the art to the students.

"It's a faccinating thing to watch. We take a hands-on pillow so the children can work the bobbins for themselves and learn how it's done," Tyler said.

Student teacher participants include Cathy Vergos of Livonia.

The event marks the 25th anniversary of the program and Professor Fred Attebury as its director.

A reception at 1 p.m. Sunday in the gallery opens the exhibition. Former students and student teachers are encouraged to attend, meet classmates and share expe-

The exhibition features drawings, paintings and selfportraits of 150 grade and high school students in the studio art program this year.

The program provides art instruction to young people in the university region as well as experiences in teaching for WSU students in the art education program before their student teaching.

Over the past 25 years, 2,000 children and 800 student teachers took part int he visual art program.

He said he wanted to write a novel — then did it

VICTORIA DIAZ

A few years ago, Frank Wydra made up his mind to write a novel.

Nothing unusual about that, of course. A lot of people make up their mind to write a novel. The twist here is that the Bloomfield Village resi-

but he also has seen it published. "The Cure," a fast-paced thriller set in Detroit and centered on AIDS, was brought out this month by Dell. Paramount Pictures is taking a look. Foreign rights have been sold.

And on its release, the book received enthusiastic praise from such literary lights as Gregory McDonald ("Fletch"), who called it "a contemporary novel that badly needed writing," and Rich-ard Condon ("Prizzi's Honor"), who judged it "the most original novel I have read this year."

Not too bad for somebody who, before he sat down to write "The Cure," had never written a single word of fiction, had never darkened the door of a writing classroom and knew next to nothing about marketing fiction. (A health-care consultant, he authored or co-authored three nonfiction books on the industry several years back.)

Wydra, 53, remembers "the exact moment" the idea for the story began to take shape in his

"I was attending the American Hospital Association Convention in Chicago in 1987. And in a discussion with several other healthcare professionals, someone brought up the subject of whether or not medical science would come up with a cure for AIDS. Someone else answered that it would be a long time before that occurred because there was not enough money in it.'

The group was shocked at that thought, he remembers, and none of them more taken aback than Wydra himself.

"The idea just stuck with me," he said, "and for months, all these words went around inside my head. Then one day, I sat down and started writing. The book eventually came out of that.'

"The Cure" takes a close look at the world of research medicine and poses a disturbing question: What if a researcher at a pharmaceuticals company discovered a cure for AIDS and the discovery was suppressed - because the market was not yet large enough for massive profitability?

"Having never done this before, I just had to start by working up some characters and see if I could develop what would be a good story," Wydra said.
"What happened was the charpull them back, but I found them getting themselves into situations still found it necessary to reand then telling me how they wanted to get out. They'd also demand other characters."

Luke Chinsky, a slightly paranoid but disciplined researcher at the fictional Croft Pharmaceuticals Inc. in Troy, heads Wydra's cast, along with Brenda Byrne of the Free Press and Sgt. Cal Washington of 1300 Beaubien, homicide division.

Contemporary villain Brad Snell, the scheming director of Croft, and his assistant, Ben Proxy, also spark the action in such diverse spots as the Townsend in Birmingham, Carlos Mur-phy's in Southfield, the Brewster project and Tiger Stadium.
"I did a lot of research during all phases of the book," says Wydra, who worked on "The Cure" in spare time left over from the hours he spent on his full-time

"Today, there's a lot known about AIDS but at the time there was relatively little available. I went to the stacks at libraries here for information. And my daughter, who was in Boston, conducted a separate search at the Harvard Library."

Though his own experiences as health professional had made acters took over. I'd be trying to him more familiar than most with medical research procedures, he search, for example, some past drug investigations. This includ-ed looking into the history of AZT, developed at Wayne State University in the early '60s as a cancer drug and now used in AIDS treatment.

He learned something about what goes on in a newsroom through a friend, who made it possible for him to spend time "snooping around" at the Free Press, he says.

"Another friend introduced me to some gay men. We sat down one day and had lunch together while I interviewed them. All of them were quite open.

After finishing the first draft of the novel, Wydra went back to the beginning and started revising, a procedure he remembers doing at least 13 times before taking even a first step toward selling the

When he finally contacted "50 or 60 publishers," every single query eventually resulted in rejection. "None of them took unagented work and this being three or four years ago - before Magic Johnson and Mary Fisher - most of them didn't feel AIDS was an appropriate subject.'

The dozens of rejections from publishers seems hardly to have even fazed Wydra, though. If nobody took unagented work, he reasoned, then he'd find an agent

"I must have written to 70, and at least 65 of them came back and said they couldn't handle unpublished writers! One guy, though, called me, asking to see some sample chapters. Two days after I'd sent them, he called, asking to see the book. Two days later, he was on the phone, saying he wanted to represent me. A few months later, he'd sold the book to Dell."

Along with celebrating the success of his first novel, Wydra is looking forward to the publication of his second thriller, "Do No Harm." Set around a small-town Michigan hospital faced with financial disaster and a widespread epidemic, it's due out from Dell sometime next year.

In the meantime, the new author is scheduled to meet readers and sign copies of "The Cure" at two Waldenbooks: in Roseville at 6 p.m. Friday, Nov. 20 and at Lakeside Mall in Sterling Heights at 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21.

Return of assumable mortgages pleases Realtors

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

Assumable mortgages, difficult if not impossible to find for the last decade or so, have returned.

And that feature could give homeowners an edge when it comes time to sell, especially if interest rates have risen significantly since they bought, real estate agents say.

"Everything has its cycle. I think rates will go up sometime, and when they do, houses that do have it (assumption feature) will be at an advantage," said Jim Willis, sales associate and part owner of Mayfair Realty in Livonia. "Mortgages that were assumable certainly carried more weight on resale," he recalled. "I was excited to hear about it, frankly."

Assumable mortgages increase marketability, said K.C. Mueller, broker with Remerica Hometown in Plymouth.

"When I saw it come through across my desk, I smiled. I was pleased," she said. "I can't think of one agent who wouldn't be hap-

"We would definitely use that as a marketing tool," said Mary Moore, associate broker at Real Estate One in Rochester and president of the Rochester Board of Realtors. "I think it would bring the telephone calls in.

Detroit Mortgage & Realty Co., headquartered in Southfield, recently announced that it would offer to buyers an "assumption" option on 15-, 20- and 30-year fixed mortgages at ¼ percentage point higher than market interest

Subsequent buyers can assume - take over - the existing mortgage rate and outstanding principal by paying off the seller's

"It's going to make a house more attractive to a broader range of buyers," said Charles W. Adams, senior vice president and Mortgage & Realty.

Mortgage assumptions were in vogue until the late 1970s and 1980s. Financial institutions put a stop to the practice when inflation soared and the gap between original mortgage rates and market rates greatly widened.

But there are advantages to assumptions even if the spread between rates isn't large, Adams

"Assumptions speed up closing time," he said. "You expect to go through the process quicker. What they (buyers) don't need that eats up a lot of time and money is an appraisal. They don't regional manager for Detroit need surveys, they don't need mortgagee title insurance.

And there generally aren't points to be paid, Mueller said.

When you have an assumption, you're thinking down the road for resale," she said. "You're going to save a purchaser closing costs. That's going to make your home more saleable." Fees charged by Detroit Mortgage & Realty to buyers who assume mortgages it issues are 1 percent of the outstanding principal and a credit check, Adams

It may take some time to get people used to the concept again and for mortgage rates to rise appreciably for the momentum to really start rolling, he conceded.

'We're looking for tools to help people buy and sell homes," Adams said. "This gives them peace of mind when it comes time to sell regardless of what the economy is doing."

So far, DMR appears to be alone in offering assumable mort-

"We've concluded here it will be a niche product - there will be some demand for it but not a lot," said Michael Lubig, mortgage department manager for Standard Federal Bank, the state's largest mortgage originator.

Court rules esthetics no basis for ruling on satellite dish

We can have antennas but CONDO

only if they are no more than 10 feet above the roof line of the dwelling units. Someone has installed a satellite dish that falls within that criteria, but the board is saying that a dish does not look good and is attempting to deny its installation based on esthetics. Do you think the board can do this?

Probably not, based on a recent Ohio appellate decision that found that the guidelines and limitations applicable to television antennas do not grant the association the right to ban certain types of antennas based on their general effect on the "look" of the subdivision.

More significantly, the court placed the burden of proper draftsmanship on the association even though the association generally has no input in the original drafts of the documents and even though changes to the documents are often difficult to make. The case serves as a warning to associations to ensure that their documents are state of the art.

I am an attorney on the board of a condominium subdivision who's wondering whether our attorney is wasting some of our money. In a foreclosure action, he has joined the bank that holds the first mortgage, then apparently dismisses the bank once the case is started. I questioned him and he said it was a procedure that he has followed but has not given me a good explanation for it. Comments?

The Condominium Act and most condominium bylaws give the first mortgagee of record super priority over that of the condominium association lien. Therefore the association is not in the position to foreclose out the interest of the first mortgagee when it forecloses on its lien for non-payment of assessments. So there is no need to join the bank as a party under those circumstances. But the bank should be listed in the complaint as having an interest in the property.

To the extent that you are incurring legal fees by joining a party, including service of process fees, the additional time incurred in both preparing the complaint and preparing a dismissal of the bank, may be wasting legal fees. Under the circumstances, it's advisable to get a second opinion.

Builders reflect on success in field they love

■ Builders count success in several ways, with public recognition among them. At the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan's annual awards night, several local builders will take their bows. Here's a look at what makes them successful.

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

Robert R. Jones, a West Bloomfield builder, has a sharp eye for detail.

During a recent tour of one of his furnished models, Jones noticed that a bulb had burned out in a bedroom reading lamp, a small strip of molding in a bathroom needed a second coat of paint and a closet door could be improved with a hinge bump.

"It's a detail business," Jones said, making mental notes to rectify the problems. "It's never-ending."

A commitment to quality, plus several unorthodox ways of doing business earned Jones Builder of the Year honors from the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan.

Joseph Slavik, president of Slavik Co. of Farmington Hills, was chosen Developer of the Year and Stephen J. Taglione, president of BBC Group in Farmington Hills, was selected Young Builder of the Year.

All will be honored by the association at a banquet next month.

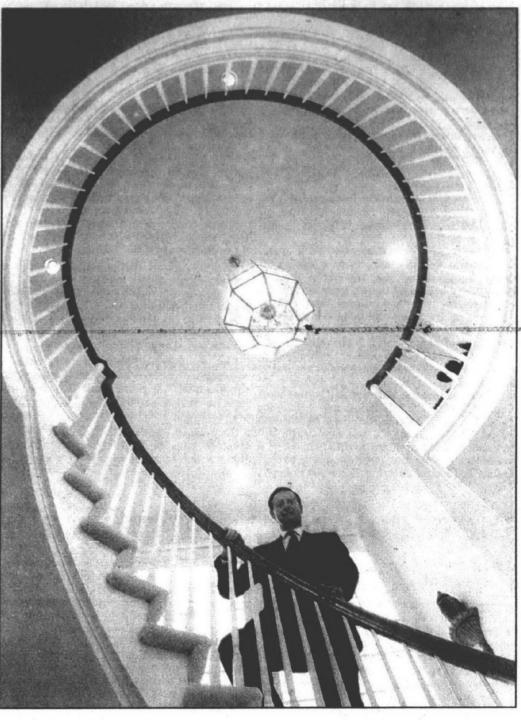

Jones, 56, has run his own company since 1979. The native New Yorker cut his teeth in the business with Herman Frankel and the Frankel Organization.

"I would say what we do is specialize in customizing our homes for individual purchasers," Jones said. "Quite frankly, there isn't a change we won't make for a customer."

In a good year, Jones will build up to 25 houses, in down times as few as a half dozen. His models start in the high $200,000s. He said he's never lost money in a budget year and never has been sued on a construction quality issue.

Bonadeo reaps highest honor

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

James Bonadeo, a Plymouth builder who served an unprecedented three consecutive years as president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, has been selected for that organization's Hall of Fame.

The honor is the highest BASM can confer on members.

Bonadeo has built thousands of houses in western Wayne County since breaking into the business in 1947. At that time, he was the youngest master plumber in

"I've always tried to give everyone a fair shake," Bonadeo said. "You have to be a man of your word. You have to live up to what you sell.'

Bonadeo also has developed a simple but effective financial philosophy.

"You don't try to live beyond your means," he said. "In the building business, you handle a with you. In 45 years in the building business, I've always lived within my means.

Bonadeo, 76, lives in Superior Township. He's still active building in the Plymouth and Canton communities and as a director for BASM, but finds plenty of time to travel.

He has a genuine liking for people and seems to get as much pleasure helping others in the business as succeeding himself.

But don't get the idea that Bonadeo rests on his laurels. "I'm the kind of guy that delights in everything that happens today,' he said.

Irving Yackness, BASM executive vice president, has been a colleague and friend for years.

"As a builder, he's very competent, a master craftsman," Yackness said. "He's a very vigorous and enthusiastic participant in all of the association activities. He has a wide circle of friends not only in the construction business, but in the political arena. He's always on the go.

Methodology draws scrutiny

BY GERALD FRAWLEY STAFF WRITER

One thing about building recessions that may not be so bad - it allows people to slow down, sit back, and take a look at how things work.

Take the design-build delivery system.

During the mad building rush of the '80s, when office buildings and retail centers were almost popping up overnight, there wasn't time to look at the process and see how well it was working, but now the report card is in.

While design-build has allowed for rapid building - often at lower cost - it has taken its toll on traditional architecture/contractor relationships.

Dick Bither, president of Giffels Associates in Southfield, said the very nature of design-build distorts the architect's role and way of doing business.

Twenty years ago, if someone wented a building, they would go to an architect or engineer, work out a drawing, and then go to a contractor for an estimate. Design-build has changed all that.

Under design-build, the potential owner approaches the contractor (or in some cases, several contractors if the project is being let for bids), who in turn, approaches the architects or engineers to do a building design, Bither said.

The building design - preliminary though it may be - is then used for construction estimates, Bither said.

The problem with the designbuild system, from the architect or engineer point of view, is twofold, he said.

One, the architect or engineer is being asked to do work — with no promise of payment — before an agreement has been reached to build, Bither said.

'For us, it's a disaster because we have to expend a minimum of 70 percent of our work just to pre-pare a quotation," Bither said. 'Our industry is just not structured financially to participate in design-build."

The other problem, he said, is the new relationship perverts the architectural-building owner relationship, Bither said. "The relationship has changed totally."

Traditionally, the architect or engineer has worked for the potential owner - under design build, he now works for the contractor. "We were (the owner's) knowledgeable eyes and ears.

"Design-build has turned that around," Bither said. "We have a 5-percent interest in a project instead of a 95 percent interest.

Rick Haller, executive vice president of Walbridge Aldinger in Detroit said that while it's true the design-build process places a hardship on the architects and engineers, it has many advantages for the building's end user.

The market drives the designbuild process, he said. "Delivery systems (the building process) are dictated by our customers."

The challenge to architects, engineers and contractors is to develop a system where the designers and contractors have a more equitable relationship, he said.

The main advantage of designbuild is speed.

Under traditional construction, the architect would design the complete building, then the owner would take bids on the project. After the bidding process, the contractor would develop a schedule and begin work.

Under design-build, the design process is generally done in stages and work can begin on - for example - the exterior, while the inner workings of the building are still being designed.

Another advantage offered by design build, Haller said, is it

simplifies the process for the end-

"Many owners are not suited to buying effective design and build service. The less qualified you are, the less likely you are to meet your eventual requirements.'

Design-build is inherently less expensive, Haller said. "Designbuild will always look for the least costly way of doing something; designers will always look at the best way of doing things," he said.

Haller said design-build does not construct buildings poorly.

Because designers don't have to deal in construction costs, they are less likely to keep an eye on the bottom line, he said. Contractors, who have to deal with the bottom line on a daily basis, are better able to judge what is needed and what is extra. Under the old system, it wasn't unusual for a potential owner to have to scale back a building plan because of costs. Under designbuild, the owner becomes aware of potential cost problems sooner.

Bither of Giffels said the speed of design build can be overcome with effort and planning on the part of the building owner, but there are disadvantages to the design build method.

The most important of these, he said, is that the building owner doesn't know what the end result will be before construction starts. That's because it's not done.

"There is a real concern in our industry, that under design-build we are abandoning the owner," Bither said. "He could get a building that doesn't meet his needs in 10 years."

Bither agreed that design-build doesn't result in poor building. "Even in design-build, we are not absolved from our responsibility to protect life and safety.'

Still, a poorly designed building may become a problem for the user in the future. Under designbuild, a building may not be constructed to last as long, or it may not function as well as it might

It also may not be as expandable or as flexible as it could have been, he said.

"The life cycle tradeoff has been thrown out the window in the interest of cost savings.'

A house to grow into

The Gentry 3 is a large, country-style plan that includes partially finished bonus rooms on the second floor that can be converted to bedrooms or hobby rooms.

Finished rooms upstairs include a bedroom with walk-in closet, a storage closet and a bathroom with ample counter space for two basins and linen storage.

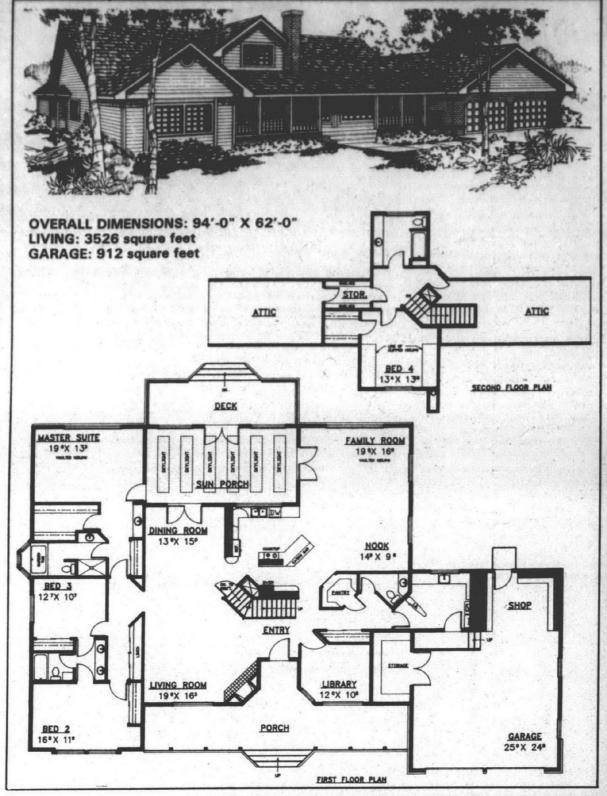

The house features a windowrich sun porch with six long skylights. Light spills into the family room and dining room through French doors. In the kitchen, a wide window in front of the sink offers a vista through the sun porch and into the back yard.

Family living and entertainment areas cluster around the centrally located kitchen. Living room and library face the front; dining room and vaulted family room at the rear. And there is a choice of three eating areas: formal dining room, informal nook and an eating bar.

The spacious kitchen has a built-in cooktop, dishwasher and oven, lazy susan shelving in the corner, and a walk-in pantry. Some of the pantry shelves are directly accessible from the kitchen.

A storage closet and an oddshaped powder room flank the hallway that leads to the utility room — a large space complete with a deep sink, fold-down ironing board and counter space for folding clothes. This room can also be reached from the two-car garage, which has extra space for storage and a small workshop. Additional space is available when the house is built over a basement.

Procedures can resolve confusion

Does this scenario sound familiar? A threeyear-old child has coughed all night, but has no sign of fever the next morning. She seemed OK at breakfast. Child's mother is a court reporter scheduled to be in court early. Dad is out of town, so mom takes child to the family day care home. She remembers to mention the cough to the provider, then she rushes off.

By noon, child has a fever, coughing, and throwing up on the carpet in the play area. The provider calls mom, but mom says, "Just let her lay down until I get off work.'

In such a situation, keep in mind who the key focus person must be here . . . absolutely, the child. However, in many documented cases, it results in misunderstanding, confusion and a breakdown in communication between the child care professional and the parents.

Why? The child care professional is upset because he or she recognizes the importance of a sick child needing the tender loving care and attention of mom or dad. The extra comfort and security may also come from the child being able to snuggle underneath their Mickey Mouse bedcovers at home

Secondly, the provider has the responsibility of caring for the "well children" already present who may require immediate attention and supervision. Thirdly, the provider may, too, find that the parent is in direct conflict with the child care program's written policy.

The parent, on the other hand, usually becomes frustrated by not being able to leave work and feels guilty, therefore, they may react in a manner that can be easily misinterpreted as being uncooperative, when in fact it could the a response of feeling helpless.

A parent then may request a child care professional to sit with their child or administer medicaion usually aspirins, until they pick the child up later. "Isn't that part of being a child care professional? Isn't that what the tuition covers - even if my child is sick while in your care?" These are questions parents ask or assume answers to regarding the care of their child.

The adult confusion can go on and on, and again who suffers . . . the child. Many parent-provider relationships are strained due to poor or the lack of effective communication. Here's where policies and procedures must take place.

Why are policies and procedures vital in a child care setting? Adults as well as children need guidelines. People need to know what to expect and what their responsibilities are. Boundaries must be defined and policies/procedures do just that. Policies are most meaningful when communicated in writing, and discussed verbally to help ensure that an understanding between all parties

A written agreement not only is a powerful business tool, but it reduces the risk of either party "dreaming up" rules as situations present themselves. Policies in a child care setting or in any business for that matter, defines boundaries between emotion and good sound business sense.

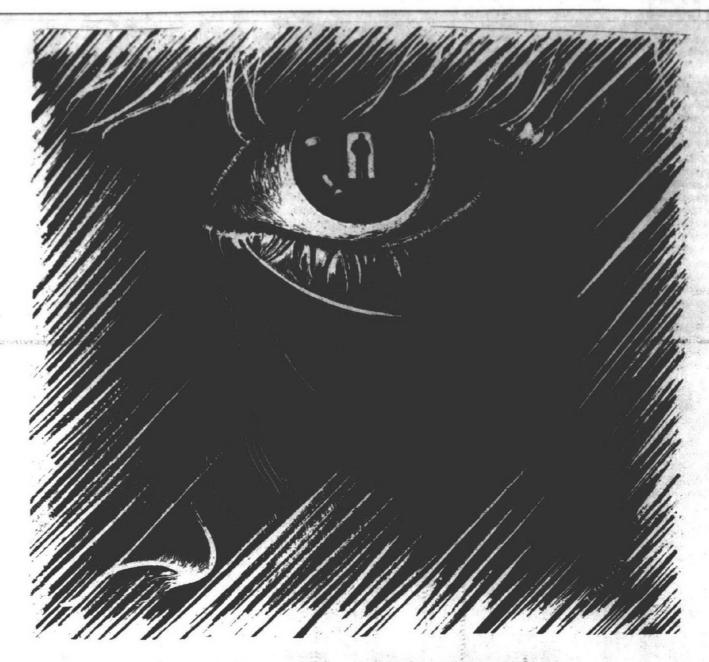

When a child care program establishes policy, or incorporate a contract it should not be a policy writer's take-all situation. It should be one that meets the needs of its participants. In a family day care or center, the philosophy sets the tones or spirit of the day-to-day operation. The policies/ procedures dictates in what technical manner the operation will flow.

Here are some common policies in child care

(1) Alternative persons — During the enrollment process parents should consider the importance of designating other responsible adults, who are available as well as accessible to the child, should he or she becomes ill while in child care. In the scenario described earlier, where the parent was unable to pick up her sick child, a designated adult could have been called. The alternative person must be indicated on the child's emergency information card.

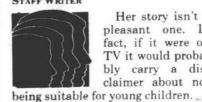

(2) Late fees — Applied when child is picked up later than the contracted hours. Ten hours a day is a "normal" scheduled day for a child. However, contracted time for each family is different. For example, 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. is the contracted time for a family. Consideration for travel time to and from work to the child care facility is made. If time is beyond what has been taken into consideration then the parent is late. Late fees may then be enforced.

Justice is swift and sure when the victim of sexual abuse is young, but it is less than supportive when the sordid truth is revealed by the adult child.

BY SUE MASON STAFF WRITER

Her story isn't a pleasant one. In fact, if it were on TV it would probably carry a disclaimer about not

She asks that her real name not be used even though it is included in Wayne County Circuit Court records. She wants to tell her story, but there is still a concern for family members - a mother in Westland. a brother, a sister, three stepsisters and a half-sister who live in Northville, Plymouth, Ferndale and Garden City. Her story is of one of those deep family secrets that are rarely permitted to surface, kept hidden behind closed doors. Her story is one about incest. It starts at the end rather than the beginning.

At age 40, Jane, on paper, had a wonderful life. A business consultant with a $70,000 a year income, she lived in a loft in Ann Arbor and had a long-term commitment with her boyfriend.

But she was experiencing migraine headaches every day and the left side of her body was going numb. Her boyfriend objected to her making her office in the loft and her father, a retired auto executive, was telling her to get a serious job.

Jane decided to get help. She enrolled in a yoga class and started seeing a therapist and eventually a psychiatrist to deal with her problems. She even turned to massage therapy because her body "was so

Two years into the therapy, she got an inkling of what was at the root of her problems. It was April 4, 1990. She was at home one night and suddenly was terrified about disrobing to take a shower. She "was convinced a man was there.

Uncovering the past

"I didn't even know that part of my life," she said, "but I was able to come up with several events where I felt that way. Two were when I was an adult with my father. There was something odd about the relationship with my father and it scared

Jane turned to her therapist and asked if the therapit thought she could have experienced physical or sexual abuse in her family. The answer was yes. Jane's family, her therapist said, fit the profile of a sexually abusive family.

"I realized I had virtually no memories of my childhood," Jane said. "When I thought back prior to age 15 I didn't have a clue."

Jane started hypnosis in hopes of retrieving some clues about her childhood; she never realized that in the next 10 months she would recall at least one incestual event each week. At her first session, she talked about being sexually abused at age

Her journey into her deepest, darkest memories revealed that her father and both grandfathers had abused her and that her mother had known about it. Jane also realized that her mother "was emotionally out to lunch" and as the oldest daughter, it fell on her to stand-in for her mother for her brother and sister and for her father.

"We were very middle class, Jane recalled. "My father was a manager with one of the Big Three. He was a churchgoer and didn't drink alcohol, but he was very demanding and yelled a lot.".

Jane tried to get a sense of what had happened. Through reading, she realized she had to approach her family about it. A year earlier her mother had hinted at some kind of abuse and when Jane talked to her that April, she pressed for an defini-

Something happened

Her parents had been divorced for 25 years, and her mother, like Jane, had no memory of her daughter's childhood nor any recollections of her own childhood.

Her mother, who now lives in Westland, said there had been no physical abuse, but was silent about any sexual abuse. She did say she thought "something had happened" to Jane's girlfriend who had lived with the family after Jane graduated from high school.

Jane hasn't seen or talked to her mother since that encounter; her mother "just bolted the scene." She did see her girlfriend at a class reunion, who when asked "blurted out

'yes' and told me of three different incidents.

'She had never told anyone before and said she had done nothing to bring it on," Jane said. "She told me that 'it was as if I had replaced you when you moved out of the house.'

Jane had her first big flashback at Thanksgiving in 1990. Her mind recreated the event down to how she felt emotionally. It was, she said, "an absolutely terrifying experi-

By the Christmas holidays, she was having flashbacks as often as five times a week. The massage therapies were unlocking the memories and she was learning to feel things again.

"Incest affects the core fiber of a person," Jane said. "I discovered I didn't show my emotions around my father because I felt like a moving target. If I acted happy, he would come after me.'

Jane's father had remarried when Jane was 22. His new family included three stepdaughters 6-12 years old. The family lived in Detroit then moved to Canton Township. The marriage produced a fourth child, a daughter, before dissolving after 13

At Christmastime, Jane broached the subject with her stepsisters through their mother. The sisters used to complain to their mother about "having no privacy and how he would burst into their room when they were changing." They also told their mother that "something had happened, but played down its significance," Jane said. Their mother never did anything about their com-

Victim's time short for legal challenge

There was a time when Jane had no recollections of her childhood. She couldn't remember the house she grew up in, even what the living room looked like.

But two years ago, those memories began to surface and what she recalled explained why there was a gaping 15-year hole in her memory.

Through extensive psychotherapy, hypnosis and 12 different massage therapies, Jane has pieced together a childhood of sexual abuse by her father, involving herself and occasionally her younger sister and witnessed by her mother

She now understands why her body is so tense, "like a block of cement," why she gasps for air like she is choking when she cries, behavior learned in infancy as the results of her father's oral sex acts, and why she never showed her emotions, all behavior she learned within her dysfunctional family.

"My mother was out to lunch emotionally and I was what held the family together," Jane said. "I was a stand-in mother for my mother,

Jane has a reason for talking about the life she is slowly remembering. She wants state lawmakers to revamp a law permitting victims of childhood sexual abuse to sue the perpetra-man and Lynn Jondahl - seeking their sup-

So far only Pollack, a Democrat from Ann

The victims

Jane is well aware of the difficulty of challenging the perpetrator in court. She sued her father, a retired auto executive, now living in California. Hers was only the third such suit to be filed by an adult victim in southeast Michigan. And her settlement - $14,000 - was the largest to date.

'I never did it for the money," Jane says. "I knew I wanted to confront my father, but I couldn't figure out a way to do it. I knew it was important to confront him and the lawsuit was

"It afforded some protection for me and was a powerful tool to strike back at what he had

See LEGAL CHALLENGE, 2H

Legal challenge from page 1H

But what was troubling for Jane and is for other victims is the law's statute of limitation. In most states, victims have three to five years from the time of their first real recollection of an incestuous act to file a lawsuit. Some states allow up to six years. But in Michigan, a victim like Jane has just one year to take legal ac-

A year to the day, Jane came to grips with her past and found an attorney, Peter Conway of Birmingham, to champion her cause. Many victims aren't as fortunate.

Studies estimate that one in three girls and one in seven boys are molested as children and that 94 percent of acts occur between father and daughter. They also show that the average perpetrator has 73 victims over the course of a

Because these childhood memories are so repressed, most victims are in their 40s and 50s when they begin remembering the past. By then, the perpetrators are retired and what assets they have are protected by federal pension laws. As a result, monetary awards are small, discouraging some law firms from taking on such costly cases. Conway is a white knight of sorts. He handled the first such civil case involving two sisters who won a $10,000 judgment. He took on Jane's case despite the objection of the law firm he was with.

"Sometimes you have to get into your suit of armor, climb on your war horse and just do it,' said Conway. "When I did the first one it seemed like the right thing to do and in the process I learned a lot about child abuse.'

Lack of understanding

One of the problems with such lawsuits is a lack of understanding, according to Conway. Most people don't understand the nature of the crime.

Incest and child molestation are considered the most heinous of crimes, but adults victims face a system that doesn't want to get involved in such nasty, sordid de-

"It's not any different a philosophy than if you're driving down the road and hit someone who ends up breaking their arm," Conway said. "You're being compensated for value of the injury, the pain and the suffering.

"But when you go to mediation with a suit like this, you have two white males who are not familiar with that abuse. They don't understand the nature of the problem, so as a result these cases don't mediate very well.'

That misunderstanding also shows up attitudes. Early indications were that Jane's lawsuit wouldn't survive the legal process and comments by Wayne Count Circuit Judge Michael Talbot "didn't understand anything about incest," Jane said.

"From what we heard, we were led to believe that if we went to trial, we would lose," Jane said. The judge was ill-informed; the tribunal was ill-informed; the entire court system was ill-informed."

Evidence is hard to come by for adult victims. Childhood physicians are long gone; family members decline to talk about it, sometimes out of embarrassment, sometimes out of denial. And yet survivors must provide more evidence than required to bring as charge of murder against a per-

Jane's evidence was 10 months of hypnosis records, affidavits from her three step-sisters who were victimized by Jane's father although not as severely as Jane and Jane's therapist. The most incriminating information was the hypnosis records, but such evidence had never been used in a legal proceeding in the state. In the 10 months of hypnosis, Jane came up with one incident of incest each weekly session. She found that her "father and both grandfathers had abused her and that my mother knew but did nothing." When it came to the lawsuit, her mother sided with her father and signed an affadavit that nothing had happened.

"To side with me, she would have had to acknowledge that she hadn't protected me, and potentially, she would have had to acknowledge her own past," Jane said. "Her father molested me and her brother, so there is a good chance as an only daughter that she had been molested as a child by her father as well."

Finally over

At the 11th hour, Jane father agreed to a "no fault" agreement

- the tribunal's $14,000 award and a letter of understanding, drafted by his attorney that acknowledges something had happened, but it's doubtful as to what it was.

Jane's share was $8,600, a drop in the bucket, considering she has already spent $37,000 for medical and therapeutic treatment. The $5,400 Conway earned didn't even cover his expenses.

She did find that things can change. In accepting the settlement, Talbot told both parties that based on the evidence in Jane's affidavits, he would have tried the case. He also refused to suppress court records, to continue keeping the secret secret.

"You can't imagine how important that was to me and everybody," she said.

Jane had her day in court and she wants other victims to have that opportunity, but she knows many women can't do what she did in one year's time. Those she has talked to say it takes threefive years to come to terms with the past.

"This . . . should make it apparent that there are potentially an enormous number of incest cases out there that could be tried if victims knew their rights and believed that the judicial system would support them," Jane said. My lawsuit allowed me the chance to face this horror from my past, push through it and past it, and come out the other side reasonably healed.

'My hope is that other survivors will be able to have this chance as well."

Jane had considered suing her mother as an accomplice to the incest. But to do so, she would have to had known her parent's insurance company at the time of the abuse occurred. She would have had to sue under her parents' homeowner's policy.

Instead, Jane wrote a long letter to her mother, describing the incestuous acts and blaming her for not protecting her. She also wrote letters to all of her immediate and extended families, telling them about the abuse.

Jane's story from page 1H

sisters. It was January 1991, and that's when they admitted there had been indiscretions. Their experiences were not as severe as Jane's - voyeurism, exhibitionism and touching. They hadn't told their mother what really happened in order to protect her.

That day the four women sat down and wrote a joint letter to Jane's younger sister who lives in Colorado. Jane had had two hypnosis-induced memories of her father with her and her sister.

Big secret

"Incest is always a big secret," Jane said. "The family doesn't want to know it happened or they want to keep it behind closed doors.

As Jane progressed, she began struggling with the idea of confronting her father in a lawsuit, but feared the ramifications of it.

'Announcing it to the family in a lawsuit would blow the family apart," Jane said, "and I still had a fantasy of having a happy loving family with supportive parents. I now realize I carried the enormous responsibility of holding this family together for all these

In February, Jane hired attorney Peter Conway and on April 3, 1991, one year after her first recollectim, she filed a lawsuit against her father. It wasn't until 11 months later that she endured eight hours of depositions in which her father's attorney "tried to paint me as a smart person but that this was a fad, one of many I had gone through.

Because of the nature of her evidence, most of it records of her hypnosis, Jane feared the lawsuit would be thrown out of court, She eventually agreed to a settlement - $14,000 and a letter of understanding that "something had happened" but neither side accepted responsibility for it.

A new life

Jane's father lives in California and has married for a third time. His new wife has married children and grandchildren. Fearing the abuse will continue with other children, Jane waited until the legal process was completed in July before she wrote her father's new wife and her grown children to warn them about their grandchil-

The only response has come from her father who through his attorney said he is considering suing her because of the letters.

"My therapist said he had probably started abusing children when he was in high school and he will do it his entire life unless he get helps," Jane said. "The average perpetrator has 73 victims during his lifetime. We can count at least nine and that doesn't include my sister and half sister."

Jane is building a life for herself for the first time. It's a slow one, but she has had help. The weekend she filed her lawsuit, she met her husband. He has proven to be "a wonderful champion for me throughout it all."

"At first I didn't want to tell him, but I couldn't make the flashbacks go away," Jane said. 'He's been extrordinarily supportive and wonderful. He's been right there for me and actively supporting me through every aspect of my recovery process.'

With the help of her therapist she is learning those things that she never developed in infancy.

Programs help needy people

For more than a decade, friends of Focus: HOPE have made "adopting" a senior citizen or a family with children a holiday tradition.

The Share with a Senior and Family to Family programs have provided thousands with food and companionship to help them celebrate the holidays. Recipients are chosen from the more than 85,000 children, pregnant mothers and elderly persons who receive food monthly from Focus: HOPE's Commodity Supplemental Food Program.

For additional information about Share with a Senior or Family to Family, call Focus: HOPE at 883-3131.

Focus: HOPE volunteers will match donors with family and senior program participants.

am right handed. I have always wanted my handwriting analyzed and am very excited at the thought of this opportunity. Also, I love astrology and have strong intuitive abilities. I love helping people in my career, and my children and grandchild are most important in my life. I can tell you also enjoy people and try to help them have an enlightened life. Thank you for considering my letter. E.M.

Grosse Pointe

People fill an important role in our writer's life. In her interpersonal relationships she seeks amiability and peace. Often she is inclined to take the line of least resistance, compromising to keep harmony. However, when push comes to shove she can hold her own. And in some areas she may even be assertive.

This is a rather emotional periences feelings of restlessness and highs and lows in her moods. At the time she wrote she seemed discouraged about something in her life. Money challenges may be on the horizon.

There is a measure of humor in her handwriting. She enjoys a good time and her sense of humor should prove helpful on the rough

Making a good impression on others is important. To accomplish this she may come on a little strong. I think she also enjoys experimenting with the way she looks and/or dresses. A seeming contradiction here is her desire for attention and approval and yet she does not always put forth a great deal of effort to receive it.

Our writer finds it difficult to conceal her feelings. If she is tired, euphoric, sad, enthused, discouraged, etc., it will show in her body language. She is mindful of correct behavior for her social set and those who mean most to her. And she may have a possessive attitude toward them.

Throughout this handwriting there is a strong need to possess many things. And she tends to cling to these possessions. Seemingly, she perceives some emo-

Some of her goals necessitate challenge on her part. She has been blessed with the necessary energy to carry them out. She organizes her daily routine rather well, even though she does not do too much planning prior to becoming involved in the work.

She enjoys her work and her enthusiasm for it can be contagious to those around her. The garland connections between letters and the forward slant of her handwriting provide her with a measure of empathy. She is able to relate to others and feel both for and with them. Her empathy and intuition should be definite assets in working with people.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. # We turn politicians into our scapegoats tribes of people would come together in the desert and seek to themselves of their problems. They did it with a goat. They would touch goat, believing that their troubles would go into the goat. In turn the goat was chased off into the desert and presto; the problems were gone.

Scapegoats, however, are not a thing of the past. We still use them extensively. Although they come in a variety of shapes, sizes and names, there is one variety that is especially popular. They are known as elected officials. Their names are not important, nor for that matter, is their party affiliation. The one qualification is that they be elected. From that moment on we can rest assured that either the problems we decry will all go away, or in the event that they do not we will at least have someone to

They may be the beauty of having elected officials at any level. Whether they are local, state or national, our problems are now for them to fix. We chase them off to do the deed and if they fall, we will know whose fault it is, why theirs of

If we do not like the economy, it is up to them to fix it. If we do not have clean air to breath or clean water to drink, they will simply have to do something about it. If we have an epidemic the likes of AIDS. it will be for them to find a so-

If we have tossed in the values that make life meaningful for us and those we touch, it will be the responsibility of these elected officials to recover them and bring them back to us. They will be the ones to fix an educational system, to restore law and order, to bring justice to corners in which it has not been known for some time. They will be the designated hitters, expected to produce at least a triple on just about anything that we may choose to throw their way.

There is, of course, one hitch in all this. We want them to do the job without inconveniencing us in the least. This is what scapegoats are for. It was for this that they were born, and for goodness sakes, it is for this that we elected them.

Our tribe, the American people, and on a wider scale yet, the human family, has a num-ber of formidable troubles piled in front of the goats. I wonder if down deep we are really as gullible as those folks in the desert. Do we really believe that they can fix it without us? Do we really believe that the economy can be fixed to everyone's satisfaction without a price? Can we expect any administration to be powerful or resourceful enough to undo the environmental messes of our land without exacting the cost of a lifestyle change from just about everyone who lives on it?

Can there be hope for our nation to continue to be a catalyst for people while creating enemies? And can we realistically stop creating enemies, if we insist on using their lands, their forests, or their other resources to preserve our way of life, ever to their detriment?

The power to do all of these things that goats can fix. In fact, donkeys and elephants cannot do it either. These are things that fall to all of us together. Officials can be leaders, but they can't fix problems.

To listen to local talk show comments, some hosts and caller alike are already gathering to send off the goat. Those who are disgruntled with the choices of Nov. 3 are hope to be proven correct. They already have their goats poised for the desert. Those who are gloating believe that the troubles will float away as the new terms of office begin.

Hopefully, there are enough in a third group who are wise enough to realize that scapegoats are no more effective when they emerge from an elective process than when they are chased into the desert. This is the group that can admit to where they may be a part of the problem and who are willing to join in becoming a part of the solution.

Maternal weight gain patterns can indicate risks

Women who are proud of their slim figures when they're four-five months pregnant should turn away from the mirror and sit down at the dinner table.

A University of Michigan School of Nursing study of maternal weight gain patterns, length of pregnancy and infant birth weight found that moth-ers to be who have gained less than 10 pounds by their 20th week of pregnancy are more likely to deliver infants who have a low birth weight than are women who have gained more than 10 pounds.

"It appears the "pattern" of maternal weight gain is as important a risk factor as the mother's total weight gain," said Ninfa Springer, associate professor of nursing and lead author of the study, reported in the Journal of the American Dietetic Association earlier this year. "Half the infants weighing less than 6 pounds, 4 ounces were born to mothers who gained less than 10 pounds at 20 weeks gestation.

"No low weight infants were born to mothers who gained at least 20 pounds by that time."

The Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences recommends that women of acceptable pre-pregnancy weight gain a nine-month total of 25-35 pounds.

derweight women was reduced by 12-13 days and the mean birth weight of their infants was nearly one pound less than normal," Springer said.

The U-M study also confirmed other studies that have found that smoking affects infant birth weight. The mean weight of infants born to smokers also was nearly a pound underweight.

The study included 107 mothers who gave birth in September 1988 at U-M's Women's Hospital in Ann Arbor. Data were collected on smoking, drinkunderweight before pregnancy, 19 were overweight and 46 were within an acceptable weight range.

Underweight was defined as weighing 10 percent less than the acceptable weight-for-height categories based on Metropolitan Life Insurance Company standards. Overweight was defined as 20 percent more than the acceptable weight-for-height.

"Given these findings, we suggest that pregnant women receive nutritional information and counseling early in pregnancy," Springer said. "In a culture that views slimness as a highly desirable goal, it is important to emphasize that weight gain is not only normal, it is vital to healthy babies.

(3) Overtime fees - If a call is made requesting over time hours then the parent should be aware that the provider expects overtime pay, keeping in mind that the parent is working, too, for overtime pay from their employer. Payment may be made on the actual day or included in weekly tuition.

(4) Health exclusion policy -It specifies procedures for children who are sick. How sick can children be to attend day care. Certainly, contagious diseases and high fever, a temperature of 101 degrees, an unexplained rash, excessive crying and several episodes of loss stools may warrant exclusion

(5) Trial period of adjustment - Usually, a period of two weeks to a month is common policy for trial period. This is the period where a child is adjusting to his or her new setting, as well as an observation period for both the parent and the child care professional. For whatever reason, either party may observe that the arrangement may not be a workable one, and reassessment or termination is best decided at this

(6) Payment for hours not used - Payment may be expected for contracted hours not used. This is appropriate. Remember, if payment adjustments are not agreed upon before payment is due, a child care center or family day care home has a right to expect payment due based on contract for "reserved space" assigned to your child. For example, a parent decides to take a child to the grandparents' house for two days during the week. Payment is expected due to the reservation of space/contracted hours. If a child is out due to certain illness then an adjustment might be made based on program's policy.
