Schools OK use of sex ed fil

After much debate the Plymouth Canton school board approved the showing of one sex ed film to students. The discussion centered on the issues of abstinence and AIDS.

BY M.B. DILLON

After lengthy debate, Plymouth-Canton school board members adopted one sex education film and rejected another at their meeting Monday night. "Friends Raping Friends" and "Considering Condoms" were recommended by the district's reproductive health committee for inclusion in the

"Friends Raping Friends" was adopted, 5-2, with trustees Barbara

Graham and Jack Farrow dissenting. Canton parent Paul Jackson led off the discussion, voicing his objections to "Friends Raping Friends."

"It doesn't send a strong message at all," said Jackson, the father of five school-aged children. "I don't know if I'm the only one who feels like this, but I think we can tell our kids to wait until they are married, or at least until they are out of their teens, to have sex. There are better materials out there we could be using."

Trustee Jack Farrow called the film 'sugar-coated political correctness. I didn't see anything terribly offensive; I just didn't think it was that good."

Trustee Dean Swartzwelter said it's a good idea to present the subject to students so that when they're confronted with situations, they're not caught off guard.

Friends do rape friends, said Trustee Dave Artley. "The video gets a very difficult concept across. Males and females have to be responsible for themselves.'

Trustee Carl Battishill called the film a "valid beginning to a very difficult subject. It begins to address the issues Mr. Jackson was concerned with. Maybe the movie doesn't express fully everything this community would like discussed, but there is discussion afterward, and very valid teacher guides that go along with

City seeks an end to rule

BY DIANE GALE

Commissioners are dancing around a city residency requirement that has pushed the recreation director out of a job and the police chief out of his Canton home and into the Plymouth house market.

The requirement forced recreation director Chuck Skene to take another job Tuesday night as Westland recreation director.

Police Chief Robert Scoggins has until March 1 to relocate from Canton to Plymouth. If he doesn't have a house in the city, the commission likely will vacate the position, immediately reappoint him as police chief and extend the residency waiver.

The residency requirement is the result of voters' rejection in November of an amendment to the city charter. The amendment would have allowed non-residents to serve as city department heads.

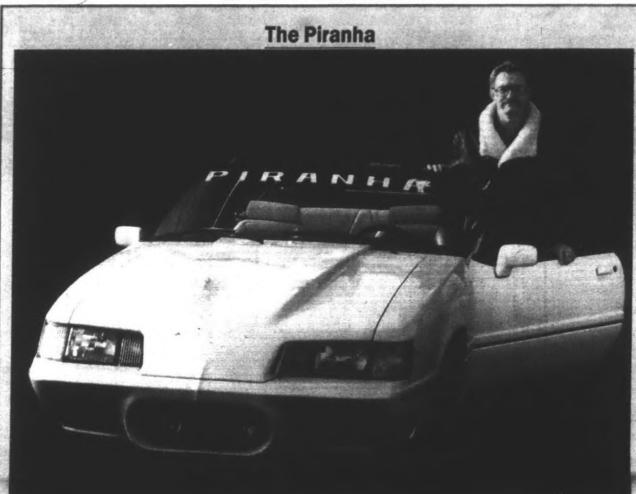

Commissioner William McAninch id once residents are aware the city commission "may have to go through to keep competent people' they would be willing to eliminate the requirement. Commissioner Stella Greene agreed: "Our charter is tying our hands. This is a perfect example of our limitations that are so severe that we can't practice good government.

Something should be done. Both department heads have been living out of the city for more than one year. A committee appointed by the city commission last year recommended the residency requirement was outdated and should be dumped like so many other cities have already done. Skene was a longtime Plymouth resident who recently divorced, remarried and began living in Westland. He was appointed Westland recreation director at a Westland city council meeting Tuesday night.

City looks for input on parking plans

BY DIANE GALE

Commissioners are asking residents and business people to take part in developing a plan to ease parking requirements and revitalize business growth in downtown Plym-

Comments about changes to the city's parking ordinance will be heard at a planning commission public hearing, 7 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 10, in the city commission chambers.

"We're trying to remove at least one of the barriers to downtown redevelopment," according to Commissioner Doug Miller, a member of the city parking committee.

One of the barriers is a very restrictive parking policy," he said. "A lot of people have attended the parking committee meeting and there's been a lot of good input in this." If the ordinance passes it will go to the city commission. The issue is how much downtown businesses should pay - if anything to provide parking spaces. The restrictive parking requirement discouraged potential businesses.

Currently new businesses that lack sufficient on-site parking must pay thousands of dollars for "parking credits" required by the city, because customers park cars in existing city lots or on the street. In 1986 a parking credit was $4,300. The amount is supposed to be tied to how much it costs to create a parking

The parking committee also is looking at developing a financial plan and a parking management plan that would address enforcement, employee parking in the downtown development district, and signs.

The proposed ordinance allows for changes in businesses without requiring additional property.

Additional parking would be required, for instance, if a business owner wanted to change a clothing store to an office building.

It would also allow businesses to expand up to two stories without having to add parking.

doesn't send a strong message regarding abstinence. "I would ask that we start looking for something a little bit more appropriate and professional," she said.

Trustee Les Walker favored the film, saying the district is constrained by having to choose from the few materials on the market. He also made the point that the film isn't presented in a vacuum; that classroom discussion is part of the process.

Addressing Jackson, he said, "I wish the only kids we had to teach were mine and yours, but there are kids whose families don't necessarily share our values. We are forced to recognize that in each of these cases.'

School board president Roland Thomas, in favor of the film, said, "It's a good start in teaching students about something occurring more and more often in our soci-

Considering condoms

A majority of board members objected to the lack of seriousness with which "Considering Condoms" was presented. The movie was defeated, 2-5, with Battishill and Walker supporting it. Artley acknowledged that the reality is that young people are going to engage in sex. But, he said, the film talked too little about abstinence. It also failed to mention that "not all condoms will adequately protect against the AIDS virus." Because the AIDS virus is 450 times smaller than a sperm cell, it can permeate a condom.

■ The problem with the film 'Considering Condoms' is that 'the whole tone of the thing is like something stuck into a beer ad. 'Know when to say when.' The basic assumption is you're drinking. The assumption here is you are having sex. I certainly wouldn't want to give my kids that message.'

Kathy Rucinski, a registered nurse and a member of the reproductive health committee, would like to see the district adopt an abstinence-based curriculum similar to those in place in hundreds of districts nationwide.

The district "needs to have a different emphasis," said Rucinski, a parent. "They're missing the whole issue. They have to decide what they want to teach. If you want to teach abstinence, you don't teach kids how to use condoms. You tell them abstinence is the way to go, and encourage That's how they make their livings. To many people the jobs may sound menial, but for the three women, clients of the Community Work Opportunity I vocational program, the jobs have opened up a new world.

"These items will go back to the company, which pay for the piece work and we pay the trainees," said Elaine Dozier, program director.

The chance to learn a skill, work and get paid for it is a far cry from how mentally retarded people were treated years ago when they were institutionalized.

'We spend a lot of time undoing years of what institutionalization have done to their bodies," said Val Sovinski, executive director of Today's Living Concepts, of which the Community Work Opportunity program is a subsidiary.

Not all the 142 clients work in the program's Koppernick Road site. Many work on lawn care and janitorial contracts. Many of the contracts are with group homes, where many of the clients live. "We have built-in customers," it's still tough to get a mentally retarded person a job in the world. But it's happening at places like Taco Bell, Kroger Supermarkets, Meijer and Sears.

"It was difficult to get people to take the risk," Sovinski said. "They are dealing with keeping customers satisfied. Yet we don't want our clients victimized because they have a handicap.'

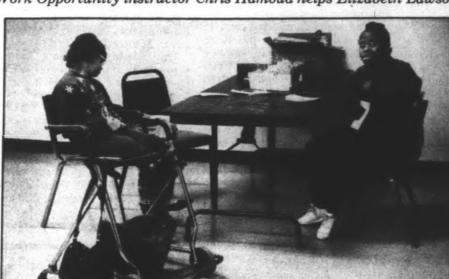

Skills are taught

The program isn't as simple as finding jobs and sending clients out to work. First, job and social skills must be taught. "We look at this on an individual basis. We look at the people and do a skill assessment. If we have someone who is 40 years old, we won't teach them janitorial work if they have no interest in pushing a broom," Sovinski said.

If a client likes to build or put things together, they are taught those skills. But social skills are just as important. Often clients will become frustrated and have a communication problem, which can sometimes result in public outbursts. "These are the types of things the community doesn't understand," she added.

Working for a living: Debbie Baker (left) and Delores Summers are employed through the Community Opportunity Work Program. They are twisting wires on tags for the Plymouth Bag-Tag trash collection program.

The skills they have are adapted to lower level entry or smaller jobs for which no one else has time. With handicapped people there's less employee turnover. If one of Sovinski's clients don't show up for work, the employer doesn't lose. Each client has a job coach who steps in for the client.

And Sovinski understands the business bottomline. Businesses who hire handicapped people are entitled to a federal credit on income tax for a portion of the

New restaurant will offer Trivial Pursuit side dish

By Joanne Maliszewski Staff Writer

Admit it. Who doesn't watch "Jeopardy" while eating dinner? It just seems the thing to do.

By spring, though, you'll be able to do something similar at a new restaurant in the Canton Corners shopping center on Ford Road.

"You'll ask your waiter for your game board," said David Khoury, owner of what will soon be Damon's restaurant in the vacant Great Scott! supermarket.

The game board will let you play Trivial Pursuit from your table on a big television screen. It won't be just to pass the time, either. There's a benefit to playing: Contests will be held within the restaurant. Winners will move onto regional games and finally national games, Khoury said.

"You have to rack up points against other places in the Midwest," Khoury said. Players at other restaurants have already won dirt bikes and trips to Las Vegas in national tournaments.

But back to the restaurant, a franchise out of Columbus, Ohio. "Our specialty is our slab of ribs. They are St. Louis ribs," Khoury said.

The lunch and dinner menu will serve a full line of hors d'oeuvres, such as potato skins and onion loaves. Entrees will include salads, a seafood catch of the day, shrimp, barbecue and broasted chicken, and beef. The lunch menu's prices start at $3.95. Dinner runs from $6.95 to $13. Prime rib and filet mignon will cost more, Khoury said.

The more than 10,000-square-foot restaurant will start off with about 120 employees to get the place off the ground and level off to about 75-90, Khoury

The restaurant will have three major areas that will flow into each other. One is the bar - Khoury was approved for a Class C liquor license - and holding area. This area also will have seating for dining and four television screens for sports events.

A main dining room will have no television sets. A third area, called the clubhouse, will have seating for dining and large television screens with speakers at the tables, Khoury said.

"Each table will have a speaker system and you can pick a channel," Khoury said.

Despite the large television screens, Khoury said he doesn't want Damon's to be thought of as a sports bar. "This will be a full-course restaurant."

Damon's will be located west of the new Kid Kingdom, also in the Great Scott! space. Khoury expects to complete negotiations with the Kroger Co., which holds the lease on the vacant supermar-

A 21-year-old Plymouth man was arrested after he was found unconscious, hunched over the wheel of his car in the Taco Bell parking lot on Main Street last weekend.

When police arrived the man was in the car with the motor running, the gear was in drive and the man's foot was on the brake. The officer banged on the window and could not wake the man. The officer entered the car through the passenger side door, put the car in park and removed the keys.

Meanwhile, the man awakened. The man said he had been at a party and had too much to drink. He had a blood alcohol level of 0.18. In Michigan, a person is legally drunk if the blood alcohol level is 0.10

Lots of laws proposed as reps gird for '93 session

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

Legislative Democrats will push a public works program, financed by bonds, to jump start the Michigan economy.

Republicans will offer property tax cuts, tort reform and deregulation of business.

All have high new year's hopes for a session that will begin Jan. 26 with Gov. John Engler's state of the state address, followed in early February by a possible twoyear budget.

"I hope to see an easing of the combative and counterproductive partisan politics that caused gridlock on many issues in the past," said Sen. Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, issuing a 90-day agenda.

"With Bill Clinton in the White House," said House Democratic leaders, "we're beginning a new era of governmental invest-

Rep. Kirk Profit, D-Ypsilanti, emerged as one of the House Democratic leaders pushing a plan to use $1 billion in state bonds to create 70,000 jobs. The money would be used on roads, bridges, airports, harbors, rail lines, environmental technology, waste management processes, sewer systems, university and college renovation and maintenance.

'Right now, Michigan universities have about $500 million worth of unmet maintenance and renovation needs, with $200 million worth considered 'critical'." said Profit, whose district includes Eastern Michigan Univer-

Glut of tax bills

The GOP theme was that Michigan needs less government, not more, and relief for business as well as homeowners. First to drop a bill in the hopper was Sen. Gil DiNello, R-Macomb County. His SB 1 would roll back the state equalized valuation, on which property taxes are based, from 50 percent of market value to 40 percent by 1994.

Senators, with four-year terms, weren't slowed their first day by the reorganization process. They managed to introduce 139 bills the first day (Jan. 13) - 47 by ville, said he was preparing 15 bills covering worker training, creating trailways and fighting "sex-ual predators" such as serial rapists and child molesters. Sen. Dunaskiss announced "my legislative agenda for the first 90 days" as including property tax reform, budget reform, a federal balanced budget amendment, energy policy, affordable health care, tort reform and auto insurance re-

None of those, however, was introduced the first day. Dunaskiss co-sponsored a capital outlay bill for the Departmentof Natural Resources and sponsored an amendment to the 1978 Solid Waste Act. Only one Democrat, Michael O'Brien of northwest Detroit, introduced a first day bill.

Calendar change

The biggest single change may

Senate majority leader Dick Posthumus, R-Alto, issued a calendar calling for two-week Easter break and adjournment by the end of May. In the past, sessions have dragged on to the end of June. Sometimes budget bills have had to be completed in September, just days before the Oct. 1 start of the new fiscal year.

change from year to year. The Piranha gives the Mustang a new, more modern and exclusive design, Cayce said.

The attraction to the investment that could run $30,000-$40,000 "is that no one else has one. It's an ego thing," he said.

The design and engineering of the Piranha components maintain the factory crash bars and complete structural integrity. If you want more horsepower, that's up to the customer. "We don't want to pretend we are engine people. We're not. We're body people," Cayce said.

Piranha components

The Piranha components can be installed - either by yourself or by Barracuda Enterprises on the Mustang's three platforms, including convertible, fastback and notchback coupe.

The sleek hood of two-piece fiberglass construction — an inner and outer hood for heat dissipation - is considered Piranha's statement, along with the car's nose that sports an oval grille with honeycomb mesh.

The Barracuda partners, who incorporated in 1990 when they built their first prototype from a new Mustang, do things a bit differently than other car people. Instead of using a blueprint of what they wanted their Piranha to look like, they started with balls of clay. They knew they wanted a new look for the Mustang, so they went for reverse engineering.

"You take balls of clay and build them into the shape of the car you want," Cayce said. "Then you make plastic molds off the

Options available

Features of the Piranha include dual side skirts, full real bumper skirt, and a roll bar for the convertible. The Piranha is also available with a standard, frontopening engine hood or a hydraulically operated tilt front end. Rear spoilers, decklet or by-wing, with brake lights also are available.

On the fastbacks, buyers can also have rear window visors and side window sculpted covers. When a Piranha driver puts a foot on the brake, those behind will see the name Piranha light up in the brake lights.

That's not to mention that buyers can have a Piranha color of their choice. When buyers get their Piranha, they also get authenticity papers and a vehicle plaque.

To promote their cars, the partners recently placed a test market ad in Mustang Magazine offering an information kit, plus video-tape. They got more than 75 responses, more than half from New Jersey, New York and Pennsylva-

The Piranha also received 1991 and 1992 Detroit Autorama Class trophies, for the tilt car and hood Recently, Langlois was headed to Florida to meet with an engineer at Cape Kennedy.

Area folks celebrate Clinton inaugural in D.C.

Packed: Two hundred were expected but nearly 700 showed up at the McNamara breakfast in Georgetown's Cafe Milano.

The nation's capital was awash in sunshine Wednesday for the inauguration of William Jefferson Clinton and Albert Gore Jr.

Sworn in at noon, Clinton immediately made a speech setting the stage for legislation he hopes to enact as president. The country's founding fathers, he said, knew that America, to endure, would have to change.

Invoking the name of former president Thomas Jefferson, Clinton said the former "believed we would need dramatic change from time to time.

Clinton also said the country is in bad shape, but we can fix it, and that he and other Washington officials should "give this capital back to the people to whom it belongs.'

Local participation

Local residents played a part in the inaugural parade. A pom pon squad which included students

Air Force Major Michael Huhn of Garden City led a group of 100 Air Force trainees - the only Air Force contingent in the parade. Huhn is a 1973 graduate of Garden City West High School.

Representing the Schoolcraft College Culinary Arts Department in Washington, D.C., this week is chef Dan Hugelier.

Hugelier will join his friend Mack Winker of Memphis, Tenn, to create two ice carvings for the Clinton inauguration festivities. Huglelier said both carving will be for events on the first day of Clinton's presidency.

One party will be for approxi-mately 40 Clinton associates and the other will host 1,00 people at the Gore residence. The Gore parduction of the vice presidential home, Blair House.

S'craft represented

This is Hugelier's second inauguration. In 1989, he participated with 60 restaurants as part of Taste of America to prepare food for 10,000 people as part of the Inauguration Day events.

Hugelier said he's excited to be in Washington and hopes to meet the new president.

The excitement of events leading up to swearing in was filled with the dreams of Democrats unfulfilled for the past 12 years.

Almost 700 Michiganians attended an early morning breakfast Tuesday hosted by Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara and his wife, Lucille at the Cafe Milano in Georgetown.

HUDSON'S

Cleanups get easier as Rouge stays cleaner

BY SUSAN ROSIEK STAFF WRITER

Less litter is being collected from, in and around the Rouge River and that's a good sign, said Jim Graham, the new executive director of Friends of the Rouge.

We're taking out less and less litter because people are beginning to realize the important urban resource the river is," explained Graham, who was recently, named head of the Livoniabased environmental group.

Since the first cleanup in 1986, some 16,000 volunteers have collected 22,000 cubic yards of debris and cleared 600 logjams.

This year's river rescue, set for Saturday, June 5, will include the cleanup but Graham wants to expand participation in other projects such as habitat enhancement and bank restoration.

"We don't just want to clean it up; we want to improve it," he

Graham praised the sweat

over the years. But the expansion he talks about will take more money and that's one reason the group hopes to develop membership and expand fund-raising.

Graham hopes communities and service groups will take an interest in the river project. He wants to develop an "Adopt-a Stream" program where community service groups take responsibility for a section of the river.

Graham is encouraged by the equity contributed by volunteers awareness and demonstrated concern for the environment he sees in the incoming Clinton-Gore Administration.

"The change in attitude and expression of concern will focus attention on the problem of the environment," said Graham.

Although best known for the annual cleanup, Friends of the Rouge sponsors an education program in some 40 area high schools and middle schools in which students learn about water quality monitoring through classroom study and field trips to the river.

Graham hopes to expand the program into elementary schools throughout the Rouge River network which spreads over 126 miles in Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw counties and includes 50 communities in the 467square-mile watershed.

In addition to the water quality program, Friends of the Rouge

The crowd was tightly packed into both the restaurant and at the outdoor tent. One of the highlights of the morning was Da-vid and Doreen Hermelin of Bingham Farms arriving with "Dr. Ruth" Westheimer.

McNamara breakfast

Among others at the breakfast were Secretary of State Richard Austin; Freeman Hendrix, manager for Clinton's Michigan camapign; Westland District Judge Gail McKnight and her husband Dick, a Livonia school board member; Richard Kaufman, chief judge of the Wayne County Circuit Court; Wayne County com-missioners Kay Beard and Bryan Amann; and U.S. Rep. William D.

Other area Dems at the McNamara breakfast included Gail Nolin, Paul and Carolyn Borman , Hank and Sue Marx and Denny and Marty Minano. The crowd buzzed with stories of inaugural activities.

cal fund-raiser ever held. The group having raised over $750,000 was enthusiastic as they saw a filmed chronicle of the progress women had made in the political world. County contingent

The crowd was brought to their feet applauding the five women senators and the 34 congresswomen that Emily's List helped elect. Wayne County area Democrats were well represented at inaugural festivitis this week.

At least 20 executive department officials half the county commissioners, the county clerk, the undersheriff and the sheriff's head spokeswoman attended.

Zina Kramer, a Bloomfield Hills resident who is active in the Democratic party and president of Tuesday had its own roster of Events Marketing in Bingham both current and former Michi- Farms, reported for this story:

Essay contest marks women's history month

Secondary school students can enter an essay contest to celebrate Women's History Month in March.

It is sponsored by the Michigan Women's Commission and the American Association of University Women.

Students in Michigan public and private middle school, junior high, and high schools will have the opportunity to write an essay about a woman, contemporary or historical, who has served as a role model in their lives.

The theme for the essay contest is "Dream Dreams: Reach for the Sky! Women in History have Achieved their Dreams . . . Who has Inspired You To Achieve

Due to the generosity of sponsors, the prizes have been expanded and now include the following: the top five winners in each grade category (6-8, 9-10, 11-12) will be honored at the Governor's residence and will receive savings bonds in the amounts of $1,000, $500, $200, and $50 (for fourth and fifth place winners). Lt. Gov. Connie Binsfeld and First Lady Michelle Engler will present the Application forms for the essay contest are available from the Women's Commission Office. Deadline for submitting an essay is Feb. 1, 1993.

The traditional classroom we once knew is a thing of the past.

In its place are classrooms without walls, where information from all over the globe is accessible at the touch of a finger.

Ameritech, partnering with educators, is proud to be leading the way in making learning more involving and interactive.

In Detroit's Mumford High School, for example, students learn math, science and English through computers, laser discs and other advanced systems in a special Technology Center, which is linked to classrooms, teachers' offices and the library by an Ameritech-designed network.

In the eastern Upper Peninsula, a distance learning network connects teachers and students in eight schools and colleges, allowing them to offer specialized courses that couldn't be justified individually.

Ameritech is committed to helping educators improve the quality of education while energizing students, teachers and parents alike.

These are truly exciting times for the field of education. And the best is yet to come.

Custom work called way to survive

Michigan's economy has long been tied to mass manufacturing, but that all has to change, according to Doug Ross, former state Commerce director. He contends that skilled work is the key to a healthy economy.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI STAFF WRITER

Sorry Henry, your way isn't working anymore.

"If we try to hold onto the old Henry Ford dream, we will d," Doug Ross, president be left behind," Doug Ross, president of Michigan Future Inc., told Canton Economic Club members and guests Wednesday.

The mass production system

The mass production system fathered by auto magnate Henry Ford carried the country, especially Michigan, throughout the past 75 years. But it's not working anymore and can't carry the state into the future, said Ross, former state Commerce Department director from 1984 to 1989.

But Ross believes there's a better

But Ross believes there's a better way. Michigan Future members — business, government and religious leaders — got together to consider Michigan's economy. They found out what is wrong with it and what can be changed.

"We are part of an economy that appears to be in permanent decline," Ross said. "This economy was built around a traditional way of producing goods and services."

Since 1970, 300,000 manufacturing jobs have been lost in Michigan. Of that, 180,000 have been lost to layoffs at the Big Three auto companies. A new economy is needed, Ross said.

In countries where a so-called new economy is taking over, the mass production system has been scrapped in favor of a new customized production system.

Looking to the year 2002 with the new system, skilled workers will be the rule and they will provide customized work using computers.

For example, you want to buy a new car. With the help of a skilled worker, you design what you want on a computer. That design is sent to a plant where another skilled worker programs it into a computer, which runs the assembly line. Three days later the new car is in your driveway.

The big difference between the current economy and new one is how things are manufactured and how companies are operated. Supervisors won't be needed in 2002. "Instead workers will make decisions as members of a self-directed work team," which controls production and is responsible for quality, Ross said.

Even manufacturing jobs will be housed in office buildings because skilled workers will do their jobs on computers. As automatic teller machines are replacing bank tellers today, in the year 2002, the demand will be for people who can fix those machines, Ross said.

In 2002, thinking and decision-making will be demanded of workers. People will control machines, not the other way around. More than a high school diploma will be necessary for the new jobs, but not all will require college. Computer skills will reign supreme in the new economy.

"Workers will no longer be asked to check their brains at the door," Ross

To create a new economy, everything will have to change, including education and the family. Schools in 2002 will stress learning by working together. A teacher's role will be similar to that of a coach.

To reach the new economy, "a broad-based consensus" is necessary. Michigan's economy will center on smaller companies and not the Big Three. Schools must achieve a world standard, not a state standard if Michigan is to become a world economic leader.

"What do state averages mean — nothing," Ross added.

Man faces two charges in rape of Canton boy

A 32-year-old Belleville man faces felony charges in connection with the rape of a 9-year-old Canton boy Jan. 10.

Pleas of not guilty were entered for Leonard J. Richey by Judge

Michael Ciungan of the outcounty branch of Wayne County Circuit Court. Richey is charged with one count of first-degree and one count of second-degree criminal sexual conduct. A $100,000 cash bond was set, which Richey did not post, according to Canton police information officer Colling.

Richey was arrested Jan. 15, two days after the boy and his mother made a complaint to the Canton police. "The subject be-friended the youngster. The boy related to his mother what had happened," Colling said. "The warrant is for the Jan. 10 inciif there were more incidents with the same child."

Police are continuing to investigate whether money was promised and whether there may be more dent. It's not yet been determined than one victim, Colling said.

A preliminary examination on the charges is scheduled for Jan. 29. Conviction on the first-degree charge carries a maximum penalty of life in prison, and 15 years for the second-degree charge.

Ice festival

Watts pumps new life in old event

ven if the final attendance tallies fall short of the 500,000 who were expected, the 1993 edition of the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular will go down as one of the best in recent years.

The weather cooperated, with chilly, but not arctic temperatures. However, it wasn't just Mother Nature who cooperated. Local business people put out the welcome mat for the public with many establishments offering hot drinks and restrooms.

The Box Bar was in the forefront of that movement, setting up a heated tent in the parking lot where frosty spectators could warm up a bit.

But while businesses cooperated, much of the credit for the successful event goes rightly to Mike Watts, the festival director. He's a Plymouth resident and professional music promoter who again this year pumped new life into the nue, corporate sponsorship is needed. And Watts has been able to obtain much of that money. This year local Cadillac dealer Don Massey, Pepsi and Bud Light were among the ublic higher education in the United States has been more successful than K-

As new Oakland University President Sandra Packard told a group of Oakland County leaders last week, "It has a halo that K-12 doesn't

In fact, students from all over the world asire to attend America's institutions of higher learning of which Michigan's rank among the

But if we're not careful here, in the state of Michigan, that halo will topple. Slowly, surely, like a hypodermic syringe withdrawing blood from an arm, the state is sucking funding from its public universities and community colleges. Here in our own region, Oakland University and Schoolcraft and Oakland community colleges are feeling the pinch as they compete for state funds along with 14 four-year schools and the rest of the state's community colleges.

In just five years, the state has gone from providing 60.5 percent of OU's budget, to 54 percent. In 1970, the state paid 47 percent of Schoolcraft's budget; two years ago it was 28 percent. As for OCC, the state paid 39.5 percent in 1970; last year it was 24 percent.

Both community colleges are also supported by a property tax millage, which Schoolcraft raised from .5 to 2.27 mills in 1986 and which has always been 1 mill for OCC. Fueling the millages has been residential, business and industrial growth.

While Schoolcraft has managed to hold the line on tuition by raising its tax rate, both OU and OCC have steadily increased student fees.

Many residents of affluent Oakland County can afford to pay the added amount. But many others can't. And what is happening is that the very schools which should be the most open to the most people are becoming less accessible.

Yes, more students are on federal financial aid or on scholarships than ever before. But those on financial aid must begin paying their loans back the minute they graduate, and that can be difficult in this depressed job market.

In addition, college staff positions are being eliminated, and expansion of programs and development of new ones are curtailed.

It is ironic that as we look for solutions to the funding and content of K-12 education, we are placing our success — higher education — at risk.

In no way can we afford to do that. OU President Packard sees the role of the college and university as graduating students to have "not just a job but a way to approach the world."

Smart move

Future threatened: Going to college, such as at Schoolcraft, is an important step for young men and women intent on a good future. That future, however, is threatened by state cuts in funding to higher education. For an editorial on the subject, see the lower left side of this page.

have grown to think the last few years that your newspaper was far to the left when it came to what are commonly called social issues, but are truly moral issues. However, your "Dark Age" editorial position that compares a picture of a pre-born baby to the fat deposit in a vein was one of the coldest and most hard hearted comparisons I have ever

It never ceases to amaze me how those who call themselves pro-choice can deny all the scientific evidence that human life begins at conception, yet you do. Even medical evidence shows conclusively that at 24 days the unborn's heart beats regularly and at 43 days his or her brain waves are measurable by an EEG device.

Your editorial was focused on "informed consent," something that if it were passed would tell women information that would help them make an informed decision about abortion. However, when it comes to abortion you prochoicers don't want women to know that 30 percent of all women who have abortions get pelvic inflammatory disease which could leave them infertile. You don't want them to know that af-

Parents want better schools

his year's MEAP test scores were released last week at school districts throughout Michigan.

As I've said before, the Michigan Education Assessment Program test is a time bomb ticking in every high school in the state that will explode in May 1994. Here's why:

By action of the Legislature and beginning with the graduating class of '94, Michigan children who do not get passing scores in MEAP tests of reading, math and science will not obtain a state endorsement on their diploma. And you can bet employers and college admissions officers will be looking for those endorsements before making any hiring or entry decisions.

MEAP is the first time the actual academic achievement of Michigan school children has been directly and regularly measured.

While many can quarrel with the specifics of this MEAP test or whether any one test should mean so much to a kid's future, it's clear that some assessment of learning performance is preferable to none.

The MEAP test is an important part of the school reform scenario. Publishing the MEAP results will make parents aware of just how their district's kids performed when measured against others. And this, in turn, will get parents in deficient districts to start putting on the pressure for improvement.

If parents in the usually sedate South Redford School District are any indication, this scenario is working.

Disturbed by the poor performance of South Redford's Thurston High School 10th graders on last year's MEAP math test, a parents' group has taken the unusual step of petitioning to beef up the school's curriculum.

Led by Roger Parlett, who has children in ninth and 12th grades, the group pointed out that Thurston's math and reading scores for 10th graders wound up in the lower quartile when compared with 73 schools in the Detroit tri-county area. "This performance of our schools is clearly unacceptable," Parlett told Thurston principal Stewart Schauder.

PHILIP POWER

■ MEAP is the first time the actual academic achievement of Michigan school children has been directly and regularly measured.

In a letter accompanying the petition, Parlett said kids with poor math skills leave school with a competitive disadvantage in a world where good skills are required for good jobs.

The kind of parental action now being taken in South Redford is exactly what school reformers are hoping for. It's good evidence that the strategy for school improvement is gradually working.

And it's coming from concentrating on the actual outcomes of schooling, measured by an objective test, rather than bashing teachers or principals.

"As parents, we are ready to work with our school to assure that these objectives are met," said Parlett's letter. "We do appreciate the hard work that has gone into our school by many excellent teachers, but we feel that what is needed is a commitment from everybody using goal orientation as a yardstick."

Congratulations to Roger Parlett and the South Redford parents who care enough for their kids, their schools and their community to get involved.

Together, you can watch how successful schools in suburbs and inner cities across our country deliver education. And plug for yours to do it, too.

The common theme of these schools, developed pretty much separately by each: It's not how smart you are but how you are smart.

It's recognizing seven different kinds of intelligence - not just verbal and mathematical.

It's changing the role of a teacher from lecturer to mentor and broker of information.

Secret society

n the Plymouth-Canton School Board meeting of January 11, the board has shown that they do not listen nor respond to the citizens who elect them. In voting for a fence around Miller Woods, the board has allowed a small group with illogical reasoning to prevail although over 100 neighbors of the woods are opposed to the plan.

In addition to the neighbors, the Plymouth Township Planning Commission stated they were not in favor of a fence around the woods but had no legal ability to stop it. Their last words were to go slow and try every other alternative first. In fact, the neighbors have suggested many alternatives and have a large force of citizens who are willing to work to police the woods and enforce the ordinance governing it. The Friends of Miller Woods is unwilling to consider this plan.

Chief Berry of the Plymouth Township Police Department has publicly stated that in his opinion a fence would not deter the type of problem the woods is alleged to have (people walking dogs, children riding bikes).

The school board has also ignored the Americans with Disabilities Act in approving a plan that requires the handicapped to go to a school for a key to a locked gate when others will have free access. The Friends say that they do not need to consider the needs of the handicapped since "they can't visit the woods anyway." I don't believe the law allows one group to make that judgment for another.

The school board has given control of this precious, publicly owned resource to a secret society that has refused to provide information on their bylaws or membership. They are very effective in blocking anyone from influencing their policy.

The Kiwanis is funding a questionable project from this secret group. (Think about that next time you are asked to buy popcorn or peanuts or attend their pancake breakfast!)

In fact, the extent of problems in the woods has been greatly exaggerated by a small group who do not live next to the woods and who complain that neighbors slamming their doors are bothering the birds. The neighbors feel they can control any problems but the Friends refuse even to share a list of the alleged problems with the neighbors.

In the next election we need some accountability. I urge everyone to remember the board's unwillingness to listen to a large group of concerned citizens in voting for a fringe group's plan for the fence. I also urge you to remember this when you get a solicitation from the Friends of Miller Woods or the Kiwanis.

Barbara Korte, Plymouth

Watch us in '93

"You can observe a lot by watching." - Yogi Berra, 1964.

ith his Wayne County quiz recently staff writer Ralph Echtinaw proved himself to be both an observer and an eccentric. I'm not writing to crab; if he can survive rush hour on Middlebelt, I can survive being compared to Yogi Berra Still, I hope that by the time Mr. Echtinaw puts fingers to keyboard for his next quiz, he'll have expanded his subject matter. The Wayne County Commission is dramatic, flamboyant theater, to be sure. But so is professional wrestling, and no one confuses it with real life.

You can observe a lot by watching, and in 1993, I suggest you watch for this: Recognizing that traffic congestion is a problem, county road engineers are planning an unprecedented series of improvements for local residents. In western Wayne County, this will mean improvements on Five Mile, Farmington,

Merriman, Cherry Hill and other roads. Local neighborhoods will become quieter in 1993, after noise abatement efforts led by the county persuaded the FAA to change Metro Airport flight paths in record time. Bond sales will make possible airport expansion that will keep our economy competitive.

From a community bank in Hamtramck to land development in Northville, aggressive economic development projects across all 43 Wayne County communities will help put an end to sour comparisons between our home and places like Lebanon and Sarajevo.

And of course, there is much more.

I bring all this up because, as my alter ego, Mr. Berra, has said, "Ninety percent of this game is half mental," and it's unfortunate if people form opinions of Wayne County based only on quizzes aimed at easy targets.

I hope Mr. Echtinaw will come along for the ride. His humor is welcome - and so is his observation of the hard work and good people that make our community a great place to live.

Edward H. McNamara,

Burger troubles

The Observer has run a number of articles with parents of 5-year-olds praising Burger Center. There are a wide variety of viewpoints among parents of children and adults with autism. Some parents would prefer institutionalization; some think segregated schools offer a safe haven while they wait for their child to be educated in neighborhood schools to live and learn with neighborhood children.

As a parent of an adolescent with autism, I have yet to see a successful 26-plus-year-old graduate who remained at Burger through years of age appropriate, cognitive functioning autistic classrooms. But putting aside differences in educational approaches however, what bothered me the most about your recent article of Dec. 31, 1992, was praising Mike Wilmot, superintendent of Garden City Public Schools, for the money "raised to keep Burger open."

We, Wayne County taxpayers, pay for the Burger Center through the Wayne County Special Education Millage. Burger is not funded through any private source or kind-hearted superintendent. Yearly, along with over three million in teacher salaries, we pay another half million in indirect costs for the maintenance and building expenses of the program.

While the salient educational "Burger Controversy" overshadowed the tax dollar issue, it was raised by the Wayne County Parent Special Education Advisory Committee. This committee requested an independent audit of the halfmillion for indirect costs paid each year to the district. The committee wanted the indirect costs investigated to see where, and how much money was needed to operate this building that Garden City neglected for years.

In response, the Wayne County Intermediate School District Board of Education refused to audit and instead awarded the school district over a million in repairs for their building and $90,000 a year in rent (to be used for repairs) in addition to the half million for maintenance and direct costs to continue the operation of the Burger Center.

Having a safe building is important for all children and has never been disputed. The unresolved issue is Wayne County taxpayers throwing money without knowing where and how it is actually being spent. In a recent Detroit newspaper article, the gym teacher at Burger was listed as one of the top 10 in teachers' salaries in the State of Michigan. He made $76,000 with a baccalaureate degree. I don't know who is paying for the trip to Paris as indicated in the Observer article of Dec. 31, 1992, but with all the budget cuts, I hope it is not tax

As a parent with a daughter in the system, I felt a need to say something about this Wayne County tax dollar issue before the county again requests another millage increase for a system they have not reformed. When the issue of tax spending was brought up, parents were accused of "trying to shut down the center." This strategy was successful in getting other parents upset and clouding how our tax dollars are spent.

Now that the building is to remain open for at least ten years, perhaps the focus can be on accountability of our tax dollars. It is in all children's interest, to have fiscal responsibility and accountability of outcome in educational pro-

Paving question

o Ms. Marilyn Massengill, Plymouth Township Clerk

Inasmuch as we will be out of town on Jan. 26 when the meeting is scheduled to make a decision on paving the roads on John Alden, Governor Bradford, Turkey Run and Priscilla Lane, we would like our negative vote to be registered. Repeat, we do not want these roads paved or blacktopped.

1100, Ext. 242.

We have been through this before. One of the main reasons for moving to this area was the unpaved, rural atmosphere of the community and we do not wish this to change. Not to mention the fact that we do not have the facts as to the cost of this project. As in all government projects, it is a little scary to read of "alternative cost estimates or a revision, correction, amendment or change thereto." To date the homeowners have not been advised as to the cost to each home nor has provision been made to withdraw their name if they do not agree to the cost before the work is approved and scheduled to be done.

Be this as it may, regardless of cost, we do not want the streets in the Plymouth Colony subdivision resurfaced.

INS requires new 'green card'

The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) will require permanent resident aliens in the United States who carry a "green card" issued before 1978 to obtain new cards by July 31, 1993.

The old cards known officially as the I-151, Alien Registration Receipt Card will expire on that date because the INS is replacing them with newer, more sophisticated cards (I551s) that may be read by machine, contain more identifying information and are more resistant to counterfeiting.

The new card will contain the photograph, fingerprint, and signature of the person to whom it is issued. The cards are proof of permanent resident immigration sta-

An application form for the now card may be obtained by calling 1-800-755-0777. When the form is completed and two photographs are obtained they must be brought to the INS office serving the area where the applicant lives. There is a $70 application fee. Resident aliens who have been traveling abroad may also file a completed application at a U.S. port of entry upon their return.

Officials say the replacement project, named "Operation Green Card," was developed to meet several objectives:

■ The President's Border Security Group recommended installation of automated inspection systems at U.S. ports of entry. Such systems require machine readable documents.

■ INS is committed to reducing document fraud by eliminating forms that are easily counterfeited. The old cards lack the fingerprints and the machine-readable data elements that are included on the new ones. More sophisticated laminates and printing methods also make the new cards more difficult to copy.

Outside organizations, such as the General Accounting Office (GAO), have urged INS to update and standardize the documents it issues in order to reduce confusion among employers and others over what constitutes valid proof of immigrant status.

Horton to transfer auren Horton, a sophomore center for the Plymouth Christian Academy girls basketball team, plans to transfer at the semester break to Lutheran Westland High School.

Horton was the most valuable player for the Eagles last season, averaging 11 points and 10 rebounds. She was in double figures for scoring and rebounding in 12 of 21 games. Horton was named to the All-Michigan Independent Athletic Conference first team.

As a result of her transfer, Dennis Horton, her father, has resigned as PCA girls basketball coach. He didn't want to coach against his daughter, and he wanted to be free to follow her career.

Lauren Horton decided to transfer for several reasons, according to her father. One was social a bigger school with twice the student population and Lutheran Westland also offers a drama program and has a choir. The Horton family lives in Westland.

EMU hockey in town

he Eastern Michigan University Hockey Club will play host to the University of Minnesota and Iowa State University club teams Friday and Saturday, respectively. Both games start at 7:30 p.m. at the Plymouth Cultural Center and Ice Arena, 525 Farmer St.

EMU is third (8-4, 14-10) in the eight-team Central States Collegiate Hockey League and Iowa State second (8-1, 11-6-1). EMU gave Iowa State, the defending national college club champion, its only league loss.

The Cyclones "are certainly beatable; we proved that in November on their ice," EMU coach Mike Donnelly said. "But if we think we can just put on the skates and win, we're wrong. (ISU) will be looking to even the score and, believe me, it's going to take everything we've got to pull this one

Nine of EMU's 28 players hail from Observerland: Matt Surowiec, Matt Gorski and Kevin Donnelly, Livonia; Mike O'Brien and Ben Hendricks, Plymouth; Bob Royston, Darrin Silvester and Ron Springer, Canton; and Scott Ruffing, Wayne.

Admission both nights is $4 for adults, $2 for students and $1 for senior citizens. Children 12 and under are admitted free.

Salem upsets No. 3 Spartans

Plymouth Salem volleyball players and coaches were celebrating Monday night after the Rocks defeated perennial Observerland and state power Livonia Steven-

Plymouth Salem's stock as a volleyball team and its confidence level went up Monday night when it achieved one of its biggest victories

The Rocks, coming off a championship effort in their own Plymouth Festival Tournament two days earlier, upset No. 3-ranked Livonia Stevenson in four games on the latter's Salem dominated the first two by 45-5 scores. The Rocks had a letdown in the third game and lost 2-15 but then rallied from a seven-point deficit in the fourth to win 16-14.

After going 2-8 in the Portage Invitational, "we started questioning our confidence level," Salem co-coach Al-lie Suffety said. "Then we won our tournament and (the players) started feeling better about themselves.

"I think the kids realize they can come back in a game and play with anybody. I think it will be a big confidence thing for us.'

The Rocks did everything right in the first two games and took advantage of the absence of two Stevenson starters (Karen Groulx and Kristen Drabicki), who were attending an honors program elsewhere in the school.

"(The Spartans) missed some key serves, which kept them out of the game, and our kids did some good things," Suffety said. "We were digging the ball early, and they gave us free balls off our attacks.

"We had to go at them aggressively and prevent their easy attacks. Our kids did what they had to do and forced them to make some errors. Our score tied at 14, Jenny Garvey served kids worked at holding the momentum once we got it."

The tables were turned in the third game in which the Spartans were able to neutralize Salem hitter Cyndi Platter, who had no kills in that game.

The Rocks were down 13-6 in the fourth when they "started passing again" and rallied to win. With the Platter finished with 12 kills and three blocks, and she also excelled on serve receive, according to Suffety.

Salem setter/hitter Caryn Tatterton had eight kills and 17 assists. Jamie Viau served 10 aces, and the Rocks had "great defensive play from everyone, especially Jenny Coleman and Karen Gundry," Suffety said.

The Rocks are 1-0 in the Western Lakes Activities Association and 11-8-3 overall. Stevenson drops to 15-4.

"Give Salem credit. They could have folded in the fourth game, and we left the door open," Stevenson coach Lee Cagle said. "They had the right server at the right time.

Krueger wins at CC Invite

Todd Lackey made his last appearance in the Redford Catholic Central Wrestling Invitational his most memorable.

CC finished 11th in Saturday's 29th annual invitational with 551/2 points but Lackey and fellow senior Jason Krueger managed to win their divisions. CC's 103pounder Bill Lamb took second place after being pinned in the final in 3:45 by Fowlerville's Jeremy Ferich. This was Krueger's second-straight championship at the CC Invitational and the first for Lackey.

Temperance-Bedford was the overall champion with 223 points. Westland John Glenn, the only other Observerland team in the 16-team field, placed 12th with 52 points. Mike Reeves, the state's No. 1-rated 160-pounder, was Glenn's only champion.

Lackey won the heavyweight division with an 11-2 decision over Howell's Kevin Matie, the No. 1

The championship was most memorable for Lackey since he hardly remembers last year's CC Invitational when he literally was knocked out after hitting his head on the mat and losing in the first round.

"I don't remember it too well," Lackey said. "I'm glad I'm doing the throwing around this year."

Lackey, now 21-4 overall, was confident heading into the final round against Matie, who pinned his first three opponents.

'He went through pretty quick with his pins but I knew all he had was the head lock," Lackey

"Head locks are obvious when they throw them. Right when he'd throw them, I'd duck. Since I'm shorter (5-foot-6), and I have no neck, I like people to throw head locks. A lot of the credit goes to coach 'Rod' (Mike Rodriguez). He believed in me and worked with me.

Krueger defeated Davison's Jeff Lewis, 6-5, in the final of the 171pound division. The two wrestlers split a pair of earlier meetings this season, with Krueger winning the first, 7-6, and Lewis taking the second, 7-6.

The two were tied 5-5 in the third period when Lewis was warned a second time for stalling. Krueger was awarded a point because of the infraction and he held on in the last 20 seconds for the one-point victory.

'The last time I wrestled him he was a real defensive wrestler you've got to be patient," said Krueger, 22-1 overall. "He makes mistakes, though, and I was able to capitalize on them.'

Lewis had Krueger over his shoulder as time expired but couldn't get a pin as time expired, Rodriguez said.

"The kid had a shot with about five seconds left - he showed how strong he is, walking with him a little bit," Rodriguez said. 'All he had to do was drop him but he didn't. It was a very exciting match, not for the coach or parents, but for the fans.

Krueger reached the final with a 1-0 overtime win over Clio's Chris Vance.

Reeves remained undefeated after not being tested in four matches. He won the 160-pound division by pinning Howell's Bob McKenzie at 5:16 of the final. Reeves had a pair of technical fall wins and a victory by pin to advance to the final.

"It was like a walk in the park for Mike," Glenn coach Dave Hill said. "I don't believe he'll have much of a problem (going undefeated this year). He's extremely dedicated and well focused, not anyone I'd like to go against.'

Both the Glenn and CC coaches said their teams could have fared better with a full complement of wrestlers. Glenn was missing 152pounder Chris Ponczek (shoulder injury) and 135-pounder Matt Graca (not fully-recovered from surgery) and Hill was pleased to finish above the bottom-two places.

Teams that finish in the bottom two places aren't invited back to the CC Invitational - a rule that Hill likes

"Any time you invite some of the finest teams in the state and you never invite the bottom two back, you're building quite a tour-nament," Hill said. "My objective is to get invited back every year.'

CC wrestled without 135-pounder Phil Bache (knee). Also absent were Steve Bork (130), Tom McDonald (145) and Joe Woochuk (125), who were disciplined after failing to make weight in the previous dual match against Warren Lincoln (a 36-35 loss).

"Kids are funny," Rodriguez said. "You have to wait for them (sometimes). They think the world is focused on them."

A third consecutive championship eluded the Plymouth Canton gymnastics team at the Rockford Invitational as the Chiefs settled for second place Saturday.

East Kentwood won the title by nearly three points over Canton, 134.65 to 131.75. East Lansing was third with 131.45.

CC routs Chargers in hockey

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

The puck was bouncing the right way Saturday night for Redford Catholic Central.

The host Shamrocks broke away from a scoreless first period to tally seven unanswered goals en route to a 7-0 victory over Livonia Churchill in a non-league hockey game at the Redford Ice Arena.

"When you work hard and hustle to the puck, you make things happen," said CC coach Jack Gumbleton, whose team is 8-1-2 overall. "I told them (after the first period) that they were not going in for rebounds, and that you have to hustle and skate."

Junior forward Jon Heady was the catalyst for state-ranked CC, breaking the ice with an unassisted goal at 2:32 of the second period. He finished the night with five points on a goal and four assists.

Before the period was concluded, CC tacked up three more goals on the board, two by junior linemate Frank Novock and one by Justin Ronayne on a power-play.

Novock also finished the evening with five points on two goals and three assists.

Mike Giordano added a pair of a goals, a backhand (power-play) and a tip-in during the final period. Ronayne, a senior forward, capped the scoring with 3:10 left.

Senior defenseman Brian Ronayne also figured prominently in the scoring, assisting on a pair of goals. Mark Holdridge also drew an assist.

"I thought we beat Churchill to the puck," Gumbleton said. "And we played it smart. I think we played less selfish than we have in the past.

"We had some good opportunities in the first period and I felt it was only a matter of time before we got on the board."

It was a dismal showing for the Chargers, who fell to 6-5-1 overall. They came in with high hopes after losing 3-2 to the Shamrocks on Jan. 6 at Livonia's Edgar Arena.

"CC played an excellent game and they played with purpose," Churchill first-year coach Jeff Hadley said. "They skated well and they skated hard."

The Chargers managed only 17 shots on goal against CC senior goal tender Jamie Ronayne, who went all the way to post the shut-

Meanwhile, Churchill senior coalie Dave Watson, who kept the Shamrocks off the board with some timely saves in the opening period, had little support during the final 30 minutes of action.

PLYMOUTH CANTON

Farmington Hills Harrison volleyball coach Ron Shortt was exhausted and stressed out but nonetheless enthusiastic about his team Monday night after the Hawks won a hard-fought match from Canton.

The host Chiefs won two of the first three games, 15-13 and 15-

12. Harrison prevailed in the second (15-12), fourth (15-11) and fifth (15-5).

"The kids have a lot of resolve," Shortt said. "They put themselves in some bad situations, but they manage to pull themselves out of it.

"When it's do or die, the majority of the time they've been able to turn it around. They don't give up on themselves, and I'm not about to give up on them."

Harrison had the lead in the first game, "but Canton played some great volleyball and took it away from us," Shortt said. "We struggled until the middle of the fourth game."

Senior hitter Julie Heist ignited the Hawks in the last two games, Shortt said. She had 10 of her 19 kills in those games and half of her spikes (16 of 32).

"Julie was having an OK night and really turned it on and had a great night," Shortt said.

Harrison trailed 11-7 in the fourth game before scoring the last eight points. The Hawks jumped in front 11-2 in the fifth game.

Heist also served eight aces and Maggie Chavez six, including four in the last game. Jenny Myslinski made "some phenomenal digs and chased the ball down to keep it in play several times," Shortt said.

Harrison is 2-1 in the Western Lakes Activities Association, 2-0 in the Western Division and 10-4-3 overall.

Rocks top Chiefs in Festival final

One down, one to go.

Plymouth Salem repeated as volleyball champion of its own Plymouth Festival Tournament Saturday and will try to win its second straight Plymouth Invitational title this weekend.

The Rocks defeated top-seeded Plymouth Canton in the festival final, 15-8 and 15-11.

"It's always a good rivalry between the two," Salem co-coach Allie Suffety said. "Canton is scrappy and flies around the floor. They don't let many things hit the floor. Our kids maintained their composure and did what they had to do."

The Rocks drew a first-round bye in the playoffs and avenged an earlier loss to Bloomfield Hills Lahser in the semifinals (6-8).

In pool play, Salem defeated Ann Arbor Huron (8-5) but lost to Lahser (9-4). The Rocks rebounded with victories over Dexter (12-12) and Ann Arbor Pioneer (5-6).

"We were down against Dexter and concerned about the kind of day we were going to have," Suffety said. "The kids came back and raised their confidence level.

"They play within themselves. When they lose, it doesn't bother them for long. They look for ways to get better, and that's been a real positive for us.

"We're real proud of our kids. We hope we can hold on to (the successful streak) and keep getting better."

Cyndi Platter had 43 kills in the tournament, including 12 against Canton, to lead the Caryn Tatterton, the setter who also plays front row and gets a lot of tips, had 18 kills. She had 64 assists out of 177 chances, and she had eight of her 31 aces in the final.

Jenny Garvey contributed 20 kills and 14 aces, Jenna Stanton 14 and 13, respectively.

Jamie Viau knocked down 14 kills, and Shellye Sills and Paula Dombrowski combined for 18 kills while platooning at the middle hitter position.

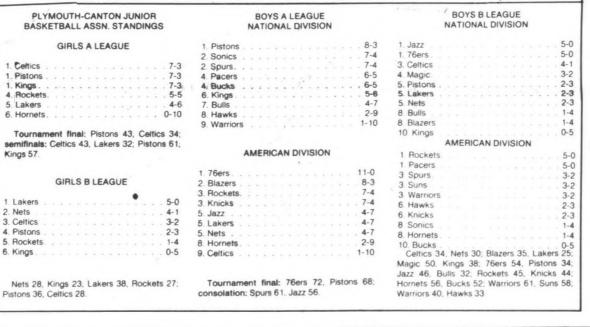

Suffety also cited the back-row play from Jenny Coleman and Karen Gundry and added Amy Ruthig came off the bench to jump start the Rocks with two aces against Pioneer.

"We have four seniors (Platter, Tatterton, Stanton and Garvey), and all of them are being great leaders," Suffety said. "They haven't let us down and they've been good examples to the other players."

The Rocks will try to repeat as invitational champions Saturday. Canton is a co-host, and matches will be played at both schools, beginning at 8 a.m. The final is scheduled for approximately 5 p.m.

The 12-team tournament field includes Garden City, Hazel Park, Dearborn Heights Crestwood, Farmington Hills Harrison, Farmington, North Farmington, Romulus, Livonia Franklin, Warren Cousino and Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard.

Then again, everything considered, Whitlow has earned his ap-

The Redford Catholic Central graduate from Farmington Hills is trying to pull his life back together after a trip far too close to the brink. And he's using basketball as his catalyst. Listen to Whitlow's coach at SC, Dave Bogstaj, and you find he's making the most of his op-portunity. Whitlow's been in the starting lineup most of the sea-son, although that's not saying much; the Ocelots only have seven players left on their roster.

But it's no exaggeration to say he's played well. According to Bogataj, the 6-5 forward is averaging about 10 points, five rebounds and five assists per game. More important, since the Eastern Conference season started, Whitlow has increased his numbers to nearly 12 points, six rebounds and six assists.

"He's so smart," Bogataj said after Whitlow helped ignite SC's second-half rally Monday in a comeback win over Adrian's junior varsity. "And he's very intense. He has a point guard's mentality, at 6-5."

Staying focused

There's no denying Bogataj has had trouble luring players with talent to SC. He's had even more trouble keeping them in school. Academics have waylaid more Still, when Whitlow showed up at informal team workouts last summer, Bogataj had to be wary. He knew Whitlow had talent. But he also heard of the problems that had engulfed him.

"I asked him one thing," Bogataj said. "I asked, 'Steve, do you want to play basketball?" He said yes. So I told him that, as far as I'm concerned, this is day one. We go from here.

For the past few months, that has been Whitlow's approach to

His problems date back further than his senior year at CC, but it was then that they first surfaced. Whitlow was kicked off CC's basketball team just prior to the Catholic League playoffs after skipping practice.

He was drinking. Heavily. And it was taking its toll.

"It really started during my junior year (at CC)," Whitlow said. "For a year there, I was playing but not making any progress. (Coach Bernie Holowicki) gave me a lot of chances.

"It was my own fault. I've never said anything bad about coach Holowicki."

Whitlow enrolled at Michigan State, giving some thought to walking on. But after one term, he dropped out of school. His prob-lem was escalating. More trouble was lurking, dead ahead.

Whitlow was arrested for stealing a car. He was drunk at the time. He served 30 days at the Dickerson Correctional Facility in Wayne County.

Going straight

It was then that Whitlow realized it was time to turn things around - before it was too late. Basketball became his tool.

Whitlow began attending Alcoholics Anonymous meetings. He still does, three times a week. Three days after his release from Dickerson, he started attending classes at SC.

Whitlow was never a poor student. He graduated from CC with a 3.6 grade point average. Still, it's not easy going to college and staying straight.

But he survived his first semester at SC, with a 3.2 GPA.

His life is beginning to get back in order. And the game is filling a

"I love to play," said Whitlow.
"I think I can make myself good enough to play (NCAA) Division

That isn't out of the question, certainly. Whitlow still has another year at SC. Against OCC he enjoyed his best game of the sea-son, pouring in 27 points. Afterwards, he made another decision that didn't come easily: He gave up cigarettes, telling himself he couldn't smoke if he was going to

His goals are precise — get a scholarship to a four-year school offering the curriculum he wants to pursue. Whitlow is interested in studying psychology.

"I want to help people who are going through what I've been through," he explained.

It won't be easy. He knows it He plans to embark on an "exten mer. His foot speed and ball handling capabilities can both be improved; Bogataj believes the only thing lacking in Whitlow's game is consistency, particularly in his outside shot. "And that's confidence in his about took in the confidence in his about not took in the confidence dence in his shot, not technique, Bogataj said.

But other hurdles are bound to appear. The credo for any recovering substance abuser is "one day at a time." Each and every day, Whitlow wages his own, internal, never-ending war.

"I just wake up and say, T didn't drink yesterday, I won't drink today, and I won't drink tomorrow," he said.

Fondren's rebound basket gives SC men win, 73-71

By C.J. RISAK STAFF WRITER

LaMonte Fondren did just what he was supposed to do.

His Schoolcraft College basketball teammate, Vince Turner, rolled toward the basket as the final seconds of Monday's game against Adrian College's junior varsity ticked away, the score tied at 71. Turner stopped at the baseline, 10 feet from the basket, and floated a soft jumper at the bas-

His aim was errant. The ball bounced over the basket - right into Fondren's eager hands. His positioning had been perfect; his putback was on target, too, providing SC with a stirring 73-71 come-from-behind victory.

Adrian had another chance. There were still 11 seconds remaining. But Chris Keller misfired from 18 feet, and Mike Abraham's follow was partially

The win improved SC's overall record to 5-11. Last Saturday, the Ocelots blew a three-point lead with 11 seconds remaining and ended up losing in overtime, 101-92 to visiting Henry Ford CC. That left SC at 1-5 in the Eastern

In both games, Mohammed Abdrabboh was outstanding. The sophomore forward from Dearborn burned Henry Ford CC for 36 points (and 11 rebounds) Saturday; against Adrian, he scored

But in beating Adrian, it took more than just Abdrabboh. The Ocelots trailed 42-31 at the half, and their center, Fondren, had three fouls. On a team featuring just six players — leading scorer and rebounder Jarvis Murray is currently sidelined by academic problems - both factors spelled trouble.

SC got off quickly in the second half with a 14-5 run. Shawn Branum and Steve Whitlow had five points apiece in the streak, and Abdrabboh added four, trimming the Bulldogs' lead to 47-45 with 16:11 left.

Adrian bumped its lead back up to seven before SC rallied again. Fondren capped a 10-2 run with his second straight basket, tying the score at 61 with 6:16 remaining.

It was tight the rest of the way. The Ocelots went up by three, 69-66, on a Branum basket with 2:50 to play, but Keller tied it 10 seconds later with one of Adrian's 10 three-pointers (SC had two). Fondren, who finished with 10 points, hit two free throws to put SC up 71-69 with 2:18 left, but Abraham tied it again with a basket at 1:46.

Abraham finished with 20 points. Keller had 15 and Brian Franey had 13. In addition to Abdrabboh and Fondren, SC got 13 om Branum and nine from both Turner and Whitlow. All nine of Whitlow's points came in the second half.

"The kids came in and kept it close so we could turn it into a two-minute game," said SC coach Dave Bogataj. "If we can stay close until the last two minutes, we can win."

The scenario was the same Saturday against Henry Ford, but not the outcome. SC played admirably, considering Murray was out and Whitlow went to the sidelines midway through the first half after getting slugged, an injury that knocked out a capped tooth and severely cut his mouth. He stayed out until the second half.

Still, the Ocelots were up by 11 with 11 minutes remaining. But Henry Ford kept slicing into the lead until it got within striking distance in the final seconds of regulation.

Whitlow made 1-of-2 free throws with 11 seconds left, giving SC an 83-80 lead. The Ocelots forced the Hawks to work the clock down, and Jason Miller had to launch a long, desperation heave as the buzzer sounded. It was Miller's first shot of the game, and his only basket. The triple put the game into OT, during which SC was outgunned. Joining Abdrabboh in double figures in scoring for SC were Fondren, with 18 points (and 11 rebounds); Turner, with 11 points (and seven assists); and Dan Stevenson, with 10 points. Despite his injury, Whitlow still managed to score eight points.

The Hawks (2-4 in the conference) got eight threes from Plymouth Canton graduate Derrick seven coming in OT. Chris Ireland netted 24 points, eight in

"I can't say anything negative about (this game)," said Bogataj. "It just wasn't in the cards. We outplayed them all the way, except in overtime."

SC's game against Delta CC last Wednesday (Jan. 13) was snowed out. It has been rescheduled for 7 p.m. Monday at

Borgess beats DePorres 59-54 behind play of Robinson, Smith

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

Redford Bishop Borgess won a boys basketball game Tuesday night thanks to the expansion of Mr. Robinson's neighborhood.

Perry Robinson, known for his inside strength, made a pair of three-point shots and scored 16 points off the bench to rally Borgess to a 59-54 Catholic-League crossover victory over host Detroit St. Martin DePorres.

With DePorres starting a lineup that included 6-foot-10 Notre Dame signee Marcus Hughes and 6-7 senior forward Robert Hooper, Robinson had to move his game to the outside.

Robinson saved his best move for the end when he received an in-bounds pass on the perimeter, dribbled past Hooper and drove the baseline for a layup over Hughes for a 58-54 lead with 41 seconds remaining. DePorres missed its last five shots and Borgess' Randy Whitfield split a pair of free throws with :19 left to provide the final

"I'm used to playing inside but I love playing the two or three (positions)," said Robinson, a 6-foot-4 junior. "I always thought I had a few guard skills, maybe not a let, but it's a challenge.'

Borgess, 6-2 overall, actually was lucky to even have Robinson in the lineup. Robinson missed the team bus because his friend's car blew a tire on the way to Borgess, so Spartans' coach Glen Donahue decided to have Robinson spend the first four minutes on the bench.

Whitfield, the Spartans tallest player at 6-7, also sat the entire first half after missing a team practice and DePorres took advantage, jumping ahead 14-3. Junior guard Charles Smith was the steadiest Spartan throughout and scored 10 of his game-high 18 points before halftime.

Smith kept Borgess close early and Robinson entered the game and made a three-point shot to put Borgess behind 18-16 after one quarter. The Spartans outscored the Eagles 15-10 in the second quarter for a 31-28 halftime lead despite being outrebounded 27-14 in the first 16 min-

Robinson said it was "like hell," trying to play the Eagles' frontline without Whitfield in the first half.

Donahue told his players afterward, "the best discipline is selfdiscipline," and slowly, the Spartans are learning.

"Coach goes by a ladder system

- if you're late, you drop down one level," Robinson said. "The system keeps everyone in track."

DePorres, which fell to 4-3 overall, outrebounded Borgess 41-21 but made only 25-of-71 shots. Hughes benefited without Robinson and Whitfield in the Spartans' lineup, scoring eight of his team-high 13 points in the first

Hughes had only two of his team-high 11 rebounds after halftime but Hooper was a second-half terror with eight points in the first four minutes of the third quarter as DePorres went ahead 42-37. Borgess then scored nine straight points, including a threepoint play in the paint by Whitfield and a three-point basket by Robinson, to go ahead 46-42. DePorres led 47-46 after three quarters but consecutive baskets by Whitfield and Smith gave the Spartans the lead for good, 54-50, in the fourth quarter.

Emory Burns, Robinson and Brian Clark took turns guarding Hughes. Donahue also credited the play of freshman Richard Paige (seven points) and junior DeMierius Flowers.

"I think we got good performance from our young kids," Donahue said. "Flowers played his best game."

Michigan loaded with turkeys

Michigan's turkey flock continues to flourish which should result in an exceptional spring hunt.

The eastern wild turkey was abundant in Michigan in the late 1800s, but as the state's population grew the turkey population declined. As land was cleared for development much of the turkey's habitat was destroyed. By the early 1900s the turkey was all but extinct in Michigan.

In an effort to re-establish a flock in Michigan, the Depart-ment of Natural Resources began a stocking program in 1954. Using wild turkeys trapped from established flocks in Pennsylvania, the DNR released 50 turkeys in the Allegan State Game Area.

Over the next 10 years, additional releases were made and by 1964 the flock had grown to 2,000 birds. The reintroduction effort was intensified in 1983 and the results were impressive. By 1986 there were an estimated 18,000 birds. The number doubled to nearly 36,000 birds by 1988. Last year there was a record 75,000 turkeys in Michigan. The eastern wild turkey now populates nearly 28,000 square miles of hunting land in 33 Michigan counties.

"The problem now is that there are so many turkeys it is much more difficult to keep track of them," said DNR gamebird specialist John Urbain. "We're right in the middle of our winter counts, but I would suspect the flock to be in the area of 85,000 birds.

Turkeys feed primarily on agriculture, waste grain and mast crops (especially acorns) through the winter. An abnormally cold spring decimated most of last year's mast crop. But, as deer hunters know all too well, much of last fall's corn crop was left standing which is great for the turkeys.

"Since there is no mast crop they're probably pretty dependent on corn this winter," Urbain said. The good thing is that there is still a lot of standing corn and that should help the turkeys get through the winter. I think we have a record number of birds going into the winter. There is still a lot of winter left, but I think they'll come out of it pretty well, especially with all the standing corn.'

Harvest results from last fall's hunt revealed a healthy flock with about a 50-50 mix of adult and juvenile birds.

Three new areas will be open to hunting in the southwest area of the state this spring and seven others have been expanded. There will also be a record 50,625 permits available for the spring hunt, up more than 12,000 from last year's total of 37,880.

For all you day dreamers out there, the largest turkey ever tak-en in Michigan was a 27.1 pound Tom, killed in 1990 in Menominee County.

Triple crown

Garden City's Dan Biegazski accomplished what few hunters ever achieve during the 1992 hunting season — a rare triple

The 32-year old hunter shot a 14-pound turkey with a four-inch beard during the spring season then killed a 185-pound black bear on Sept. 11. He completed the "hat trick" on opening day of the firearms deer season when he dropped a 180-pound, six-point buck in a swamp in Mackinac

"There's Rosie,"

shouted an enthusiastic crowd who applauded Rosemary Clooney stepped on stage with Michael Feinstein, opening night of "Say It With Music," at the George Burns Theatre for the Performing Arts. They were accompanied by a seven-piece orchestra. In "Say It With Music," Feinstein and Clooney together, and separately sing works by such greats as the Gershwins, Cole Porter, Irving Berlin and Jule Styne.

After singing a duet with Feinstein, Clooney took the audience on a "Sentimental Journey to renew old memories," singing many of the songs that made her famous including, "Hey There," and "I'll Be Seeing You."

Clooney who began her career in 1945 singing duets with her sister surprised everyone by playing part of an audition record she made with her sister, and then sang the rest of the

She also sang songs from her newest albumn "Girl Singer," a big band album released in February that is nominated for a Grammy.

Toward the end of her performance, just when some people were beginning to fear she wouldn't sing "Come On-a My House," the song which made her a star, she did, and everyone cheered. It wasn't always one of

According to program notes, Clooney thought the song which she recorded in 1951, was silly and demeaning. One of the lines is "I'm-a gonna bring you Easter egg." Years ago when she sang the song at a concert in Detroit, someone in the audience thought she said "East side beer," and cheered. Clooney joked, and wanted to know if there was such a thing as "East side beer."

Before leaving the audience who gave her a standing ovation, Clooney introduced Feinstein as "the keeper of the flame.

For those not familiar with Feinstein and his work, he has captivated audiences worldwide by breathing new life into what he calls "our national treasures.

mounts the rudimentary scenery as they deftly handle the Rodgers and Hammerstein songs and create a real audience-pleaser.

Based on the history of the Trapp Family singers, the musical is set in a small Austrian village on the threshold of World War II. Maria (Jeanne Kolinski DeLong) is a postulant at Nonnberg Abbey, but the nuns are uncertain whether her ebullient spirits are suited to the cloistered life. She is sent to be a governess to the seven children of Baron von Trapp (Ronald Otulakowski), a widower.

Maria uses songs to win the children over and bring warmth and tenderness back into their lives. In

"People don't go into casinos primarily for the salary they're working on. It's tips," he said.

At a minimum, dealers must know how to handle two games and all variations of a game to get a job, Buoncompagno said. Figure on paying $1,100 for a

'We're going to train the whole complete way, all varieties of a game itself." he said. "We would call and set up appointments, set up auditions. They (students) have to be able to perform a game.

Toni Taylor, director of International Dealers School in Las Vegas, said out-of-towners should carefully weigh a decision to

"We found in the past that expectations of students relocating is not very realistic," Taylor said. 'You have to be able to toe a line to make it here - show restraint in gambling and party time."

But job opportunities are available, she confirmed.

"We have a lot of turnover in town and we're also expanding," Taylor said. "In the next year or two, five more casinos will open.

Buoncompagno said he's developed contacts with 20 years experience as a dealer, pit boss and shift boss in Vegas, a couple of years managing cruise ship gambling operations in the Far East and a stint at International Dealers School in Las Vegas.

You don't have to be a glamorous person to get a dealing job, Buoncompagno said. But, then, the life isn't for everyone - especially "someone with a real strong attitude toward criticism, who can't take instruction, can't stand abuse," he said.

SUZANNE STEHLIK bought a Saturn coupe because she didn't have enough excitement in her life.

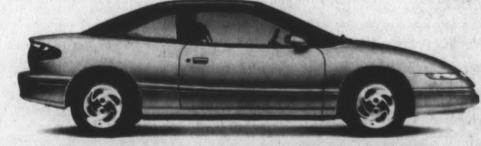

Suzanne wanted a car that felt more like her weekend and less like her week. Because Monday through Friday, she's a property tax analyst.

Come Saturday, though, it's playtime. She skydives. She skis..

She'd like to learn to sail, but she gets SATURN: seasick. Oh, and she takes care of her two Rottweilers and her cockatiel, which can whistle half of the Flintstones' theme.

Well, she ended up with a car that fits her whole calendar. An exceedingly fun to drive, affordable Saturn coupe.

The Saturn SC2 delights some with its 124 horsepower 16-valve engine. For others, it's the coupe's sport-tuned suspension. But for you, all we can say is "here's the key." And you can keep that key for $12,795. M.S.R.P. of the 1993 SC2 including retailer preparation. Tax, license, transportation and options additional.

Entrepreneur rolls dice on new school for casino dealers

■ The possibility of casino gambling in Detroit and the expansion of the gaming industry in the rest of country has prompted a local entrepreneur to ready a school for future dealers.

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

Unemployed? Underemployed? Working but looking for a job change? Then Vic Buoncompagno has a business opportunity for you.

Buoncompagno, a Detroit native, is bringing his MGI Gasino Dealer School to Livonia. He wants to teach would-be croupiers how to run gaming tables and get jobs in Las Vegas, Atlantic City and on cruise boats plying the Mississippi River.

'So many people are out of work here and the gaming industry now is expanding throughout the country, Buoncompagno said. "There's a shortage of experienced dealers."

The unemployment rate - plus the possibility of legalized gambling coming to this area - drew him home, Buoncompagno said. He spent the last year and a half opening and serving as operations director at a casino owned by the Oneidas Indian tribe in Green Bay, Wisc.

Buoncompagno said that he and his partner, Robert Zaschak, a Livonia police officer, have pumped more than $50,000 of their savings into this

In addition to providing dealer classes, Buoncompagno intends to offer seminars to people who want to broaden their gambling horizons before taking trips. He also hopes to supply gaming equipment to casinos and non-profit organizations.

"It's a risk, a real risk," he said. "The potential is there. "Where are people going to work in this town when everyone is leaving?

"I think we can do OK. It won't be anything great the first year at all. Hopefully, we can break even and pay the bills," he said.

Spinoff business

His odds for business success increase tremendously if gambling comes to Detroit, Buoncompagno conceded. But if not, he figures that people are willing to train here and relocate to where the jobs are.

MGI Casino Dealer School has received a state lottery license to sell gaming equipment and is awaiting approval from the state board of education to open a school, Buoncompagno said. He's also talking with area

Inflation whittles surplus

"The end of progress occurs when you stand still and think of what you've done in the past."

This month's profiled couple, Glen and Joyce Carson, are planning for their retirement in 10-15 years. They are on track toward meeting that goal; yet they still have significant work to do.

Glen, 46, is a bartender at a loca'l hotel. Joyce, 54, is the human resources director at a small office supply firm. He earns $25,000 per year including tips and plans to work for 15 more years. Joyce's annual salary is $33,000; she plans to retire in 10 years.

With their two children through school and on their own, the Carsons are turning their focus toward retirement.

"My primary goal is to find out what I will need to save and then follow through on that information," Glen said.

The Carsons sold their home on land contract three years ago when their children became independent. They are living in a Southfield apartment. The land contract has a balloon note payable to them in July 1995, when they intend to buy a condomini-

They are also thinking about buying a retirement home, but they plan to wait until after they retire to make this decision. They will buy only if the cash is available without jeopardizing their standard of living.

The Carsons estimate they will need $2,500 of monthly income in current dollars at retirement. If inflation is averaging 4 percent, the cost of living will double in 15 years. This means that they will need about $5,000 of income by the time Glen reaches age 65.

Lacking pensions

Neither of their employers maintains a pension plan, so they are left with only Social Security and their own savings to provide for their retirement needs. Social Security should provide about half of their monthly income needs, assuming continued cost of living increases in Social Security benefits. This may be an optimistic assumption, given the magnitude of the federal budget problems and possible future caps on entitlement programs. In any case, they must plan to meet at least half of their monthly needs with income from their invested Excluding the land contract, they have accumulated about $150,000 in investments. They are adding $500 per month to their retirement savings. One hundred dollars of each paycheck is placed into U.S. Savings bonds each month; the remainder of the savings is placed into Joyce's 401(k) plan at work.

Given reasonable assumptions, we expect their nest egg to grow to about $415,000 at this rate by the time Joyce retires in 10 years. Assuming they don't need to draw on this nest egg for the five years that Glen continues working (Joyce will also be drawing Social Security during that time), the amount should grow to about $600,000 by the time Glen retires.

Inflation's toll

While $600,000 sounds like a lot of money, remember that in 15 years that amount will not buy what it does today. If inflation averages 4 percent, the $600,000 will be "worth" only $300,000 in current (1993) dollars.

Also, inflation will continue to chip away at their purchasing power throughout retirement. So that $600,000 will not provide them with a huge surplus income. We expect that it will allow them to continue their comfortable, but not lavish, standard of living.

This nest egg does not provide for major future purchases, including such items as a second home in retirement. If this is a high priority, they should increase their savings rate by $300-$500 per month. Since they have

EARTHA DEYAMPERT

Home alone: Keeping kids safe, sound

Last week's column focused on children in self care and the readiness aspect of a child's physical, intellectual, social and emotional development to consider before allowing them to take on such a big responsibility.

If you're a parent or guardian who has explored all other child care arrangements or options and contacts (information and referral agencies, PTA, church groups, friends, relatives, licensed family child care homes, as well as centers offering after school care) AND have done this with great persistency plus a willingness to be educated about those options, AND still choose self care for you child, then consider some safety tips.

(1) Develop a plan: Routines are very important in a child's development and lifestyle. As it relates to safe self care, establish guidlines on routes taken home from school everyday. That way knowledge of the time it takes to walk home from school is agreed upon. Also, by having a routine walking route between the two points gives parents a mental picture, if necessary, of the surroundings, streets, houses, people and other familiar details.

Once the child arrives home, have him or her check in with you or another responsible adult. A reminder can be made to check on locked doors, windows, etc. A child should be clearly taught that if, upon arriving home, they find a door or window unlocked, they shouldn't go in but immediately tell a neighbor or use a nearby phone and call for help. This established procedure is warranted to avoid going in when an unidentified person or persons may be inside. (2) Emergencies and phone numbers: Post by each phone inside your home all emergency numbers, including work numbers or information where you can be reached. Also list emergency numbers such as police, fire department, 911, doctors, hospital, poison control and other key con-

When answering the telephone, teach your child not to give strangers information, indicating he or she as being alone or your whereabouts. This would include giving information on where you live, address or street, and/or revealing any details that might put a child or the family at risk of being harmed.

Practice role playing with potential situation phone calls. This will give you a good sense of how the child might handle such calls.

Also, if your child is allowed to talk with friends on the phone, impress on him or her the importance of not making it a habit of discussing family business or the home alone situation to reduce the possiblity of others listening to your child's conversation on the other end.

The vulnerability factor here becomes prevalent since your child has no way or controlling or monitoring what takes place at their friend's house. The likelihood of your child's friend not being aware or equally unable to control or monitor certain activities in their home may to be a concern.

(3)Other emergencies: Keep a first aid kit accessible, complete with various sized bandages, ice bag, first aid cream, soap, rubbing alcohol, etc., in case of minor scraps and cuts. It's a good idea to enroll your child in a basic first aid and/or introductory CPR class, especially if care of a younger sibling is expected.

(4) Fire and tornado safety: Practice fire escape and tornado procedures with children before leaving them alone. A designated plan of action should be outlined and understood. Fire drills are a common practice in child care centers and in most, family day care homes.

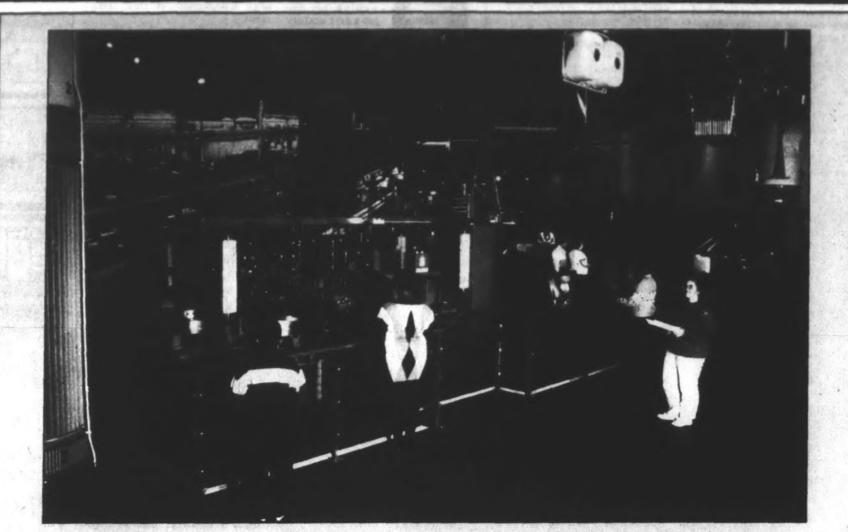

(5) Snacks and TV: Snacks should be simple and easy to prepare, preferably without turning on the stove, opening cans or cutting up foods. If a microwave is available, teach your child to use it safely and as instructed. Guidelines on what and how much to eat should be given, and choices for healthy snacks.

Limit TV watching, or together plan to choose programs that are constructive, age appropriate, entertaining and meaningful. Remember, too, that time for homework should be designated, and strategies used to complete homework assign-

Limiting time spent wandering or procrastinating is important, and expectations on homework, snacks and TV activity should be clear.

(6)Opening the door: Parents and authorities agree to never tell a stranger at the door you're home alone, whether a child or an adult. Never unlock or open the door to strangers, talk through

Again, role playing with your child is essential. Give them examples on what to say, and what not

Modern methods: A "dry-running" Bodine automated assembly system is one of five operating machines in Henry Ford Museum's "Made in America" exhibition.

MADE IN AMERICA

At one time, it resembled a large warehouse filled with antiquated machinery. Now, Henry Ford Museum has organized its collection into a display that makes the Industrial Revolution interesting for more than just the machinery buff.

verhead a monorail conveyor carries the brightly colored products of industrialization from plastic toys to airplane parts to the kitchen sink. The conveyor charts a course backward in time, taking us from nuclear power, computers and robotic arms to the first assembly lines, the birth of electricity, steam and water power and the simple tools of handcrafts.

Using the technology of modern communications and state-of-the art design, Henry Ford Museum's "Made in America" takes a giant step forward in making the museum's outstanding industrial collection exciting and understandable to the public.

"Made in America," which opened Dec. 5, follows the successful redesign of the Dearborn museum's automobile collection in 1987.

"We knew that we couldn't just stick with the machinery," said William Pretzer, chief project curator. "We had to make an exhibit that appealed to women and children."

The museum did extensive surveying to find out what would appeal to women. The surveys found that men and women both were interested in how machines work and how people fit in.

"Women are interested in the effects of industrialization on environment and the workers. So we talk about the environment and workers. Women also want to know about the results of industry, the creation of consumer goods," Pretzer said.

A new approach

The exhibit offers a panoramic and inclusive history of industrialzation and puts objects in historical context. This is a far cry from the museum that Henry Ford began in 1929. Ford's idea was to just place everything out on the floor with a simple identifying label and let the visitors make their own interpreta-

For more than 60 years that was the basic design of the museum, augmented with special exhibits to give some cohesion to the collection.

The Automobile in American Life" in 1987 and now "Made in America" are the first attempts under president Harold Skramstad to reorganize the collection in a modern way. The museum's goal is to continue this reorganizing process. Pretzer said he is astounded that anyone thinks the museum should be bound by Henry Ford's methods or

"This is not Henry Ford's museum anymore. Henry Ford established the mission to organize the museum that we still adhere to - to educate the youth in the American genius and help everyone become change makers," Pretzer said.

Change making and choice are but two of many themes that work through this exhibit. Pretzer and a seven-person team devised the basic intellectual outline and script and worked with Albert Woods Design Associates, who also did the automobile redesign, to create a stimu-

Radebaugh, 32, replaces Julie Brown, who has assumed a full-time copy editing position. He joined The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers in 1989 as staff writer for the West Bloomfield Eccentric. He moved to the copy desk in 1991, where he did page layout for the Wayne County newspapers.

He has a bachelor's degree in journalism from Michigan State University and a bachelor's degree in English from Wayne State University.

His task will be to explore the Plymouth-Canton communities, looking at the people, the trends and happenings that make up life in western Wayne He'll also coordinate the church page and take care of birth and anniversary announcements. And he'll work with the Farmington office in the publication of wedding and engagement announcements in the monthly bridal album.

"I'm looking forward to working with Jim on the Suburban Life beat," said Sue Mason, Wayne County Suburban Life editor. "He is capable and enthusiastic and brings a fresh new perspective to covering life in the Plymouth and Canton commun-

lating display that is both educational and entertaining

Hands-on

The overhead Unibilt Inverted Monorail Conveyor is one of many moving, whirring, chugging and talking parts of the exhibit. The presentation begins with today. Visitors can look into a sealed-room environment where workers are dressed in anti-contamination suits. The thick gloves used by the workers hang from simulated lockers and visitors are invited to try them on. Adults and children are also invited to operate a robotic arm and a

'The intended goal in the beginning is to stress that modern industry relies on science and technology but does not diminish human skills," Pretzer said. "We start with the present, with images that people are familiar with rather than with the exotic, and second we wanted to work against the idea of historical inevita-

Here as elsewhere in the exhibit, the hardware is put into perspective. A display booth houses pulp sci-fi novels and comic books on robots showing the reasons for some of our adverse reactions to robots and other unknown technologies.

To explain complex technical ideas, the museum and the outside design staff hit on the idea of special cartoon graphics. These 27 labels are set off in their own multi-armed mounts and feature a cast of cartoon kids drawn by children's illustrator Sarah Kurtz. Each label dissects and explains the artifacts in such a way that children can explain them to their parents.

Interactive television cubicles allow visitors to sit at a television and call up videos images of the 1930s, '50s and '70s and then call up different topics within the time period.

A film "America in the Making" illustrates how decisions are made. Another film takes into account the workers' stories using a superb collection of photos and spoken diary entries, letters and testimonies.

"We are trying to use a lot of ways to engage people. For instance in the cooper shop, you can coop a barrel. Touch screens using computers and laser discs are used where there is a depth of information not easily relayed by labels or that not everyone wants. Visitors get to make choices Pretzer said.

Wide ranging

Choice is a major theme. "We want people to understand choice is not preordained," Pretzer said. "People have different levels of power and make different choices. With each choice there is a tradeoff that has to be accepted or rejected." The exhibit covers all aspects of manufacturing choices from the business office, advertising and sales to the factory floor. Cadillac has loaned its Baldridge Award, given by the Commerce Department to honor corporate innovation and shows the Cadillac display that helped win the award. Advertising campaigns, sales projects, business innovations and failures (a display on New Coke and the Edsel) are all part of the story.

Most striking is a giant mural of the Ford Highland Park plant and film of the plant in operation. The mural of the plant exterior is a doorway to a display of factory machines and artifacts. This was the first time mass assembly was used on so complex an object as an automobile. The wonders of mass production are offset by the dehumanization of the plant.

The exhibit contains a letter from a worker's wife to Henry Ford on his $5 a day pay increase: "The chain system you have is a slave driver. That $5 a day is a blessing - a bigger one than you know - but, oh, they earn it."

The artifacts are still the most important things. They are as simple and telling as the Kiss of Death shuttle, used by early textile workers and socalled because to thread it the worker had to suck the thread through the shuttle along with deadly cotton dust. And they are as complex as a Bodine automated assembly machine used to assemble electrical switches and cassettes and a recently acquired hydro-electric turbine and generator cut out to show how it works. Visitors are able to generate electricity, sit at a nuclear power control panel and make a bar-

The exhibit ends with Henry Ford's outstanding collection of British steam engines, notably the Newcomen engine of 1750, the oldest existing steam engine, which was used to pump water out of mines. These huge, immovable objects were already in place and for years had been in the back of the museum drawing only steam engine fans. Now they serve as the perfect coda to the exhibit, a reminder that the British Industrial Revolution gave birth to our own and set in motion new and ever more amazing ways to harness power to our own needs

Our writer appears to be influenced by some unresolved anger over some deprivation he perceives from his early life. Consciously or unconsciously, he may be trying to escape a person or situation which continues to influence him adversely. This is creating tension and a lack of fulfillment in his life.

This man is a practical thinker with no frills or showy mental gymnastics. He reasons with solid logic. Even details receive assiduous attention.

Although he can vacillate at times, once he has made up his mind he can be firmly based. When pressed to the wall, he can stiffen his back, dig in his heels and remain immovable. Recently, I read some sage advice that may be applicable here. "The true test of maturity is the ability to admit you are wrong and accept criticism constructively." Perhaps many of us could benefit from an open assessment of this state-

Mental efficiency characterizes this handwriting. In a position with flex time, I believe this man would function most effectively. He is an independent person and a self-starter. His is the ability to strip away non-essential aspects of the job or situation and get to the bottom line. He is idealistic about many things with an interest in the abstract, probably enjoys stimulating people.

The main area of interest, however, appears to be in the physical aspects of his being. He requires freedom of movement. Determination is strong and long! On the job, he will probably be uncomfortable if he has to sit still for very extended periods.

In dealing with people he can be tactful, even charming, saying what the other person wants to hear. In direct contrast, he can also call a spade a spade and let the chips fall where they may.

With a new year on the horizon, it might be an ideal time to come to grips with the discouragement and inferior feelings with which he currently grapples. These traits seem to be blocking his potential to bring his goals to fru-to say. Encourage children not to say too much or engage in long conversations giving strangers any clues as to whatever information they may need, suggesting your child is alone or unsupervised.

Always keep in mind adults and older teens have been around longer than your 12-year-old and can easily, as well as smoothly, pick or drill your child for just the right info by getting them to talk too much.

(7) Passwords: Perhaps coming up with a password or secret code is in order, if a parent forgets to take their key and is locked out. Parents shouldn't expect their child to remember code words that are too hard or not used often. Passwords should be used only in cases specified, and not shared with others not in the identified circle or family. (Remember the boy who cried wolf?)

All of the above safety precautions indicated are indeed ways by which self child care arrangements may be made in a more organized fashion, but the first step to this alternative is recognizing your child's readiness.

Woman's Club celebrates 100th with trip back in time

BY JULIE BROWN STAFF WRITER

Members of the Woman's Club of Plymouth are celebrating their 100th anniversary this year, so a trip to the Plymouth Historical Museum seemed in order.

We thought we would celebrate our 100th anniversary there," said Grace Rix, club presideht. "We're doing different things throughout the year.

Club members will celebrate their 100th anniversary with a special luncheon Thursday, March 4, at Plymouth Manor. Former U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell is scheduled to speak.

"That's the exact date it started 100 years ago, on March 4, 1893," Rix said.

Members held their regular monthly meeting the afternoon of Friday, Jan. 8, at the museum, with about 70 attending. They saw an exhibit on "The First Ladies of Fashion," featuring inaugural ball gown reproductions, and heard a presentation by museum director Beth Stewart.

Beth Stewart gave a very nice talk explaining a lot of different things," Rix said. Stewart explained how large aprons could be used for a variety of chores, such as collecting eggs, carrying wood and shooing away animals.

More generally, she talked about the growth of women's clubs in the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

"I thought it was very appropriate that they came for their first meeting of 1993 at the museum,' said Stewart. Those who missed the meeting will have another opportunity to see the exhibit of inaugural ball gowns, which will continue through Sunday, Jan.

Seminar takes look at dental implants

Missing teeth?

Dr. Gregory J. Young, a dental surgeon, will conduct a free seminar on dental implants, a modern method for replacing missing teeth, 6:30-7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 1, at the Livonia Marriott, I-275 and Six Mile Road.

Young will explain the benefits of dental implants, which solve many problems associated with removable dentures. Implants - small metal anchors placed in the jawbone during a simple, in-office procedure represent a revolutionary breakthrough in dental treatment. After three to six months, the implants literally become part of the bone through a process known as Osseointegration. Posts are then attached to the implants to support permanent bridges.

Implants can also provide aesthetic replacement of a single missing tooth, thus eliminating both partial and complete den-

While conventional dentistry enables some people to wear dentures comfortably, research has shown 85 percent of the estimated 32 million in this country (with dentures) experience some discomfort and difficulty.

Patients with implants have reported restored confidence and improved quality of life.

What do you do when 28 years after becoming a rabbi, you're left without a congregation. That's what Richard Weiss of Farmington Hills faced two years ago when Temple Beth Jacob in ontiac closed down.

For Weiss that proved to be no problem. Using the same skills he called upon as a rabbi in counseling members of his Reform Jewish congregation, he has switched over to offering individual, group and bereavement counseling for the general public.

"Everybody says, "This is a new career for you," but it's mere-ly a logical evolution of what I've been doing," he said.

After the temple closed, due to changing demographics - members of his congregation moved to other communities and nearby temples - Weiss completed a master's degree in social work last May at Wayne State University. He is now completing his certification as a couples and family therapist.

Weiss conducts his counseling sessions in a comfortable, small room of the home where he lives with wife Susan, manager of the Metro News Bookstore in Bloomfield Township. Books and records fill shelves along one cates and diplomas hang on the same wall.

When he's working, he sits in a rocking chair that has "historical significance," and the people he counsels sit on a sofa across from Explaining the chair's history, Weiss said, "In the rabbinate, I'd have meetings or appointments every night. I'd give my daughter her bottle on this rock-er. Now, she's a grown woman."

Psychology buff

Becoming a therapist was natural for Weiss, who pointed out, "Over the years, I read psychology the way most people read mysteries, for my own pleasure." He said he has attended hundreds of seminars and other sessions on psychology.

When introducing himself, he says, "Dick Weiss," but when asked about his title explains that he can be called either rabbi or doctor.

Some people who leave the rabbinate would not use the title 'rabbi,'" he said, but he still does because he continues to conduct religious ceremonies including weddings and funerals.

He has conducted weddings for Jewish couples and officiated with Christian clergy at interfaith weddings. Weiss even has married a couple who are not of the Jewish faith.

"In Pontiac, we sponsored two Vietnamese kids to come to this country," he said. "When the teen-aged girl married a Vietnamese man she met here, she insisted I perform the ceremo-

Time spent

Weiss spends a minimum of six hours with each couple in premarital counseling.

"We talk about goals, constructive forms of communication, financial planning and sexual aspects of marriage," he said. "If it's an interfaith marriage, we talk about difference in religious background, and for children, and specifics of the ceremony."

Weiss also has conducted 1,200 funerals in his lifetime.

'Everybody says, This is a new career for you,' but it's merely a logical evolution of what I've been doing.'

Richard Weiss

"I don't just show up there, he said. "Instead of going into the little office they have for the rabbi, I sit with the family. I put my arms around them and escort them out when the service is over. In all of his work, the kindly, bearded counselor concentrates on helping people promote their self esteem

"A lot of people have a poor self image, due to negative experiences in their childhood," he said. He recommends a book called "Feeling Good" by Dr. David Burns.

"Our feelings are not caused by external events but what we tell ourselves," Weiss said. "Listen to yourself and try to create a more constructive way of talking to yourself."

He also suggests relaxation techniques, such as deep breathng exercises.

Weiss likes to do work in the area of humor, showing how to use humor as a way of dealing with different situations. He told sick jokes at "Jest for the Health of It," a conference at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Pontiac.

A favorite story is about going to a doctor for his back problem of many years. The doctor said, "I don't want to scare you, but something is pressing on your neck, and unless the tumor is removed, you may become a paraplegic.

Weiss' response: "What do you say to people when you do want Helpful: Richard Weiss is a rabbi, but he is turning to an expanded career in couples and family therapy from an office in his home. He also enjoys giving talks on related subjects to community organizations.

such a commitis from pop and beer cans. This is because we have a state law that makes them valuable.

In contrast, within two years, Germany will be recycling more than 30 percent of its household waste. This is all done by a profitmaking company. It is already an ongoing program throughout the

I am happy that Michigan recycles its pop and beer cans. It is time to go farther. I wish that I could participate in a plan like that which is working in Germany. In this program almost everyone participates and almost everyone wins. More important, it is a plan that gives hope to the future generations.

The plan began with the idea that packaging materials that pollute the environment should be returned to their manufacturer. Since they produced it, they are responsible to plan for the disposal problem. The consumer packaging industry came up with their own solution. Just one cent a packaged item is added to the cost to insure that all recyclable materials are collected and reused. Items are marked for recycling. Householders sort the items. A private company collects and recycles the items.

Most of the citizens are convinced of the value of the program. They play their own part in the process. The genius of this system is that everyone participates, everyone invests in the plan.

There is a profit motive. Those who produce the materials are made to be partly responsible for

A group within their eventual destination, and our church sug- the system is leading toward cregested that we ating new uses for recycled mate-collect newspa- rials. A further result of this plan is that manufacturers and packaging companies are evaluating and changing their packaging to more environmentally friendly designs.

The religious dimension is clear. We witness an entire country conserving God's gifts of creation. We see a generation taking seriously the problems of resources and pollution that the next generations will face.

Even more, we see community building in the fact that many groups and individuals are working together for the common good. It is a goal which gives hope to the Recycling is just one of many problems which must be addressed by the whole community. Recycling cannot be solved by simple individual action. Governments and communities and individuals must work together toward this goal to make it truly a success.

The same is true of other more difficult issues such as population control, reduced energy use and the preservation and restoration of buildings and communities. We cannot continue to live in throw-away, individualistic world

The country of Haiti is a nation whose future is doomed. Population growth continues to expand in a nation without sewers, without clean water, without trees, with its soil eroded, with practically no resources. It is a very tragic situation.

What we see as hundreds of thousands of people seek to flee that nation is what the earth will be like if we do not act regarding these very difficult issues. The most important value regarding recycling is the importance of lifting up hope for future gererations.

Pockets of evergreens can be seen in the hardwood regions, and pockets of hardwoods can be seen in the dominant evergreen forests. But a day's worth of driving will enable you to see this biological transition. Traveling north from southeastern Michigan you will begin to see a true symbol of the northern coniferous forest around

On US-127, near Houghton Lake, the towering spires of the black spruce create a saw-toothed skyline. Their dark green color almost makes them look black, like their name. That pointed, narrow taper to the top of the tree is an adaptation to the snowy cold climate of the northern hemisphere.

A pointed tip that reaches above other trees will not resist the fierce wind of the north. There is much less resistance than that of a broad profile tree. Black spruce have very shallow roots in their typical habitats that are often nutrient poor, acidic and frozen a few feet below the surface.

Tapered tops to spruce also reduce the chance for snow to accumulate and cause damage to the branches. However, if snow should cause the lower branches of a young spruce to become imbedded in the soil of the forest floor, new sprouts will arise. It can result in one parent tree surrounded by several smaller trees that grew from its branches.

Though lumberman never cut black spruce for any commercial purpose, they did use it for other reasons. In the days of the lumberjack in the late 1800s, men would scrape the spruce gum from the trees and use it as a chewing gum. Thoreau also touts the virtues of black spruce in making beer, "We sucked at the very teats of Nature's pine-clad bosom in these parts. . . the top most, most fantastic, and spiciest sprays of the primitive wood.

Native Americans would also shape spruce trees by cutting branches and creating different patterns to serve as sign posts or markers of where to turn in the remote wilderness of the north. In lower Michigan, if you turn in the direction of the black spruce you know you are turning north.

BOB SKLAR

Westland artist plans 1-day fine art seminar or Saundra Weed, the tougher the artistic challenge, the better.

"I'm always looking for new ways to experiment," says the Westland artist, lecturer, instructor and writer who has exhibited her work through galleries and street fairs for the past 15

"I'm intrigued by how far I can push it. The minute I find out you're not supposed to do something, I immediately try to see if I can make it

Within this spirit, Weed has taken on the challenge of organizing a fine art seminar Saturday, March 20, at Schoolcraft College in Livonia, where she's on the continuing education art faculty.

The painting and marketing seminar is designed for emerging artists to sample a variety of art forms and learn new techniques. It'll encourage them to join an art group, where they can share insights and exhibit their work.

"I'm a very high-energy person," said Weed, who operates Artistic Images from a home studio and teaches watercolor at The Art Store in Canton. "I really enjoy sharing my knowledge."

Calling on 45 years as an artist now working in watercolor, oil, mixed media, acrylic, colored pencil and fabric painting, Weed has lined up a topflight teaching corps for the seminar. To register, call Melissa Maples of Schoolcraft's Continuing Education Services: 462-4448.

Instructors include Leslie Masters (abstract art), Bill Borden (building the basics with watercolor), Rusty Fenton (colored pencil wildlife), Edythe Newbourne (Chinese brush painting), Johanna Bielecki (water scenes with watercolor), Lilly Dudgeon (monoprints), Edee Joppich (what judges look for in juried shows), Eleanor Ford (marketing fine art), Jennifer Helner (matting and framing) and Claudia Shepard (portraits). Weed will teach three sessions: 1) using gouache and acrylics as watercolor, 2) painting seascapes in oil, 3) textile design (painting on fabric).

The instructional palette for the seminar will include slides, demonstrations, lecture and artwork shown in different stages of development. 'This will be a great opportunity for artists in our area to meet people making a living as artists." Weed said. "That should be very inspiring in itself. The fact you get to learn from these people is an added bonus.

Weed hopes to team up with Schoolcraft College for a subsequent three-day fine art workshop.

"It's so exciting to be an artist and make a living at it - and to watch other people grow and realize their dreams as well," Weed said. "I'm trying to do what I wish someone had done for me 25 years ago, on my way to becoming an artist. There's a lot of steps but nowhere did anyone outline the steps. Our group is going to do just that."

'I'm excited about it. It's an excellent opportunity for Schoolcraft to reach out to the community in the arts," said Melissa Maples, a continuing ed

At Schoolcraft, Weed teaches painting, jewelry design, and marketing your arts and crafts. She and her students showcase their work in changing monthly exhibits in the continuing ed offices.

Exhibit at Scarab Club

Meanwhile, "Celebration '93," an exhibit of 30 Weed portraits and landscapes, continues to Feb. 6 in the Lounge Gallery at the Scarab Club in Detroit. Her mixed media paintings and works on paper celebrate the joy of creativity and the sharing of friendships.

'Over the years," Weed said, "I've collected thousands of dollars in art supplies. When I try something new, I incorporate it into my paintings. I've painted on canvas, wood, masonite, paper, cloth, clothing.

"One portrait at the Scarab Club is done on cheesecloth over masonite. It gives a very similar appearance to old frescos painted right into the wet plaster on church walls.'

Weed, who earned a bachelor of fine arts from Eastern Michigan University, was student teaching in art by 19. "As a teenager, I became hooked on designing jewelry and the clothing to show off that jewelry. My dream was to run away to New York to become a famous dress designer.

Instead, the National School of Dress Design graduate wound up designing wedding gowns in Detroit. Today, she teaches bridal gown and headpiece design, as well as textile design and how to start a sewing business, for the American Sewing Weed and Eleanor Ford of Novi co-wrote "Dollars, Sales & Cents," a workbook for her "Marketing Your Arts and Crafts" workshops at Schoolcraft College and Oakland Community College. Weed writes regularly for Wearable Wonders, a how-to magazine for clothing and jewelry designs.

The entire creative process is what drives Weed: "It's the whole circle: from creating a piece of art to completing it, then looking at it afterwards. It's never just done. It always continues to give me

■ Bigger and better is the way co-chairwoman Lyn Eckerty describes the Plymouth Symphony League's winter antique show Jan. 29-30 to benefit the Plymouth Symphony Orches-

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

When wondering what life was like 100 years ago, imagine yourself at the Plymouth Symphony League's seventh annual winter antique show Friday-Saturday, Jan. 29-30, in the Mayflower Meeting House, 455 S. Main, Plymouth.

Thirty-four dealers from Michigan and Ohio will display hundreds of handmade antiquities. Use them as your looking glass to the past. Admission is $3. Proceeds will benefit the Plymouth Symphony

Orchestra, now in its 46th season. We're moving from the Plymouth Cultural Center to the Mayflower Meeting House. There's an excitement in the air to see what the big move will bring," co-chairwoman

Lyn Eckerty said. We're really excited this year about the diversity of dealers and the increase in space. We've wanted a larger space a long time, to see if we could bring in more dealers.'

Last year's winter antique show hosted 25 dealers.

Victorian, American country, English, primitive, prints, maps, jewelry, silver, clocks, china, linens, glass, children's toys, books and accessories, as well as demonstrations in chair caning by Ron Altaffer of Livonia, will offer show visitors a potpourri of antiques.

Altaffer and his wife Evie own "The Chair Shop," a chair-seat weaving business they've operated from their home the past 25 years. he duo, who exhibit at 15 sl year in Michigan, Ohio and Illinois, will offer antique pine, walnut and oak chairs with cane, rush and splint seating for adults and children, along with clocks, linens and Royal Doulton Toby jugs.

"Caning goes back to the pre-Egyptians. They found caned chairs in some of the sealed tombs," Altaffer said in an interview at the couple's Livonia home. "It's difficult to trace the exact history, though, being cane and rush are vegetable fibers and highly perishable.

Altaffer has taught caning at Greenfield Village in Dearborn and the Village Club in Birmingham.

While demonstrating this ancient art, he explains the differences in weaving materials, also handweaving as opposed to machine woven:

'Cane is a plant. Real rush is cattails and can only be done in summer when it's pliable. A lot of the rush you see today is imitation rush:

"Caning goes back to the pre-Egyptians. They some of the sealed tombs."

twisted paper. Caning is work but it's fun.

The Altaffers will answer questions and offer tips on caring for chairs with woven seating.

"We tell people who have a chair, if it starts to sag, to turn it upside down, then place a wet towel on the cane," Altaffer said. "Let the towel dry thoroughly before removing. The cane will shrink back into place.

A self-taught weaver, Altaffer works the cane as Evie prepares the chairs and cleans the brass. They work as a team.

M AFRICAN AMERICAN ART

Diversity and Style: African American Artists," an art exhibition of original paintings and sculpture presented by the University of Michigan-Dearborn Fine Art Associates, will open Friday, Feb. 5 in the Mardigian Library.

An opening recepetion will run 7:30-10 p.m. African American artist Ed Clark, who gained prominence in New York and Paris in the 1950s. will be guest speaker. He operates out of a keen awareness of painting as high art in the modernist tradition. He's one of the first American painters who experimented with the abstract 'shaped canvas.'

The exhibition of works, featuring nine artists, is on loan from the G.R. N'Namdi Gallery in Birmingham. It runs to March 7.

The age of the chairs the Altaffers will bring to the show range from the 1860s to 1900s. "A lot of the earlier chairs are smaller, more delicate," Altaffer said, "because people were smaller then.'

A chorus of tick-tocks resound throughout the Altaffer home. Collections of antique clocks decorate shelves wherever the eye turns. Three grand old clocks line the mantle.

"We'll have all American clocks. All have original tablets or pictures," Evie said.

"We want people to come to the show, but also to take advantage of the shopping in Plymouth. Several merchants are making coupons available that will be handed out with every paid admission.'

> Lyn Eckerty co-chairwoman

The Altaffers' antiques range in price from $6 for linens to $400 for a set of four caned chairs from the 1860s. Clocks range from $75 to $425 for a turn-of-the-century oak wall clock by New Haven.

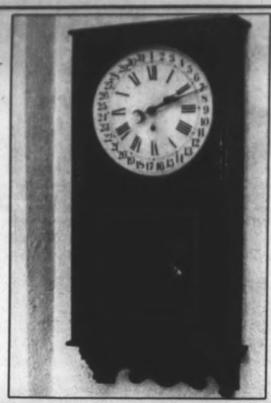

During the winter antique show, visitors may buy raffle tickets for a 1920s Michigan quilt in a star pattern of deep blue, pink, cream and light green that'll be given away Saturday evening. Tickets are $1 apiece, or six

The Mayflower Hotel will provide a mini deli for show shoppers, serving sandwiches, salads, soup and dessert. Coffee and soft drinks will be available. With each admission, patrons will receive a coupon for use in the hotel dining room.

"We want people to come to the show, but also to take advantage of the shopping in Plymouth," Eckerty said. "Several merchants are making coupons available that will be handed out with every paid admission."

Show hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 29, and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Jan.

Turn of the century: The Altaffers will offer this oak New Haven time and date wall clock at the winter antique show.

Office decorum:

This antique swivel office chair employs machine-woven cane as seating. The Altaffers also will sell dining, rocking and children's chairs with woven seats.

Lansing, Midland and Monroe, add more than a touch of whimsy to the gallery.

On a recent visit, not a person passed by whose curiosity remained unruffled. Even Sister Angeline from the art department stopped by to sneak a peek, marveling at all the patiently folded pieces.

"Because it is an art you can create and because there are no boundaries, it is an art," said Jorge Pezzat of West Bloomfield in an interview at the gallery.

A folder since 1965, Pezzat mainly folds modulars, or a geometric form of origami.

"Ninety percent of them are my creations,' he said. "I do a lot of animals, but for some reason, it's the modular. Modulars transcend art and science. They're two ideas that can merge together.

"I like using the metallic paper. It gives it more of a metal look. It seems to catch your eye more.'

Brought to Japan in the sixth century by Buddhist monks from China, origami originated as representations of animals and people, folded for ceremonial purposes. In the West, origami has inspired magicians like Houdini to write books, drawing amateurs and professionals, young and old alike, to its magic.

"That's such a myth that when people get older, they can't be creative. By repeating the same thing over and over, you begin to see variations on that," Pezzat said.

"In origami, a mistake is a creation. I consider them puzzles in origami. I like to say, 'They're in my mind. They just haven't come through my fingers yet.'

Deadly serious is the way Ann Arbor artist Robin Wilt sees her origami assemblage, "War Games.

"The idea is there are two people; they're making war games. They're making more guns and it accumulates into bodies," Wilt said. "There's a scary thing going on all over the world - in Sarajevo, Bosnia, Kuwait. I think a lot of this war stuff is games."

Origami hooks people from all walks of life. In AASO, there are doctors, teachers, artists as well as blue-collar workers.

Hayes says the group encourages people to learn about the art of origami by joining their meetings on the third Thursday of the month at Slausson Intermediate School at Washington and Nine in Ann Arbor.

crunch is still on, so let's celebrate National Book Week this year (Jan. 17-23) by taking a look at what's on the paperback shelves. In my opinion, you can't miss with any of the following: "Possession," by A.S. Byatt (555 pp., $12, Vintage Books). This serpentine novel by Britisher Byatt was one of the bestselling books of 1991. It also won England's coveted Booker Prize the same year and the Irish Times/ Aer Lingus International Fiction Prize. The New York Times Book Review called it "dazzling" when it was released in the United States in hardcover. The New York Review of Books said it was "brilliant.

Reading "Possession" is a little like winding your way through a strange and wonderful literary museum. Somehow, you know you're not seeing everything, no matter how careful you are, because there's simply so much to see and, even as you look, everything seems to change shape just slightly, anyway. (Or is it you who is changing and so perceiving it differently?)

On its surface, "Possession" is the story of two modern scholars who attempt to unravel a mystery involving two 19th-Century poets. Within this story, though, lie other stories, myths within myths, mysteries within myster-

Like a literary wizard, Byatt weaves her sinuous plot and delightfully filigreed structure together with luscious prose.

"Double Down," by Tom Ka-konis (400 pp., Onyx, $5.95). In 1988, when Kakonis' first crime novel, "Michigan Roll," appeared on bookshelves, it was applauded such writing luminaries as R.V. Cassill, Tony Hillerman and Donald Westlake. "Double ■ "Angle of Repose," by Wallace Stegner (512 pp., $12, Penguin). The Old West has rarely seemed as fresh and new as it does in "Angle of Repose." (The title is from a geological term referring to Not an action-adventure, shoot-'em-up, this is a deeply affecting tale with some unusual, bling (the stakes are life and beautifully wrought characters at its center. Oliver Ward is a mining engineer set on bringing his own brand of civilization to the frontier. His wife, Susan, is an Eastern-bred artist who finds the frontier an often-inhospitable land. Their story is told movingly by their grandson, Lyman Ward, who, approaching the end of his life, discovers some new links among his ancestors, himself and his own children. Stegner's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel was first published in 1971 and has been newly released in paperback. "Love and Other Infectious Diseases," by Molly Haskell (304 pp., $12.95, Carol/Citadel). If you've ever been seriously ill, or ever been close to someone who was, you'll feel as if this memoir was created just for you. In this intriguing, informing, disturbing, sometimes-amusing, highly readable book, noted film critic Molly Haskell relates, from her bedside viewpoint, the nightmare experience of her husband Andrew Sarris' mysterious illness several vears ago.

Consumer confidence missing sales ingredient

Median home sales prices increased last year in all seven Observer & Eccentric communities serviced by the Western Wayne Oakland Country Association of Realtors.

Westland, where the median price (half selling for less and half for more) was $72,500 compared to $68,000 in 1991, showed the largest increase at 61/2 percent.

Comparable numbers in Farmington/Farmington Hills were $137,250 versus $137,000, a nudge up of two-tenths of 1 percent.

The figures were provided by the Western Wayne Oakland board.

Overall, the association reported 14,227 sales last year at a median price of $87,500 compared to 13,372 sales in 1991 at a median price of $82,000.

Following are other figures pro-vided by Western Wayne Oak-

■ Livonia — 1,542 sales in 1992 at a median price of $99,000 compared to 1,451 sales in 1991 at a median of $97,000.

■ Redford — 951 sales in 1992 at $64,500 compared to 928 in 1991 at $62,000.

■ Canton — 876 sales at $115,000 compared to 807 at $110,900.

Plymouth/Plymouth Township 546 sales at $114,700 compared to 553 at $114,000. ■ Garden City — 410 sales at $67,900 compared to 424 at

"No question it was a good year," said Bill Deacon, a broker and president of the Western Wayne Oakland board. "We saw pretty good numbers. Every one of our communities seemed to do

Deacon expects another good year, especially if potential buyers interested in the upscale end of the housing spectrum have the confidence to follow through and

"Everything has been in place all along," he said. "Interest rates are still attractive, there's great product at attractive prices. The ingredient lacking in the market is consumer confidence.

The South Oakland County Board of Realtors, which includes Southfield, Troy and Lathrup Village, reported slightly fewer home sales in 1992, but at a slightly higher median price.

Last year, 5,274 sales were reported at a median price of $81,500 compared to 5,486 sales in 1991 at a median price of $80,000.

"Our market wasn't bad, but it wasn't brisk as far as sales are concerned," said Maurice Richards, executive vice president for the South Oakland board.

"Nineteen ninety two was more geared to first-time buyers and the top of the market. In between sort of went along. I guess that's reflected in the numbers.

"The rise in median price shows confidence," Richards said. 'If the median price goes down, it shows people are desperate in

The South Oakland board last year reported 935 sales in Southfield at a median price of $86,750, 746 sales in Troy at a median price of $123,000, 221 sales in Beverly Hills at $142,000 and 100 in Lathrup Village at $110,450.

Home sales jumped nearly 13 percent last year - to 2,998 units from 2,656 in 1991 — in the jurisdiction of the Rochester Area Association of Realtors.

Houses last year sold at an average price (aggregate selling prices divided by total sales) of $141,311, condominiums at an average price of $88,093. During 1991, houses carried an average selling price of $134,929, condos

The Birmingham-Bloomfield Board of Realtors reported 1,773 sales through November of 1992 at a median price of $170,000.

Key to successful condo ownership lies in management are the pros and cons of buying a condominium? And do we need a lawyer to represent us if we buy?

ROBERT M. MEISNER

retired and live

but are looking for a condominium, not a house. What

A condominium can provide

We are both and if it has resolved any problems it may have had with the developer. It can provide increased security, a reduction in fixed expenses for amenities, social events and delegation of maintenance responsibilities.

If improperly managed, it can result in a decreased investment opportunity, unhappy association members who do not live by the rules and a generally unpleasant environment.

You are advised to consult with an attorney to thoroughly examine the condominium documents many advantages if it is properly and learn as much as you can managed by the association board about condominium living as well you have in mind before you sign a purchase agreement.

Our management company and lawyer are involved with each other in a number of condominiums. I now understand that they have not leveled with us in regard to their involvement with one another. It appears that the lawyer has been representing the management company on personal matters and has used the management company as a basis to get into a number of condominium associations. We are upset because as the particulars of the project the management agreement responsibility to have undivided provides certain clauses that are harmful to the association, which the lawyer never pointed out. We are also upset with the accounting practices of the management company and the fact that the management company is apparently getting contractors to discount contract bids and keeping the difference for itself. Do we have a valid claim against the lawyer and the management company?

As agents of the association, the lawyer and the management company owe fiduciary duties to their clients. That includes their loyalty to their client and not to involve themselves in any self dealing or conflicts of interest that would inhibit their ability to represent the best interests of the client, namely the condominium

If your allegations are true, it would appear that both the management company and the lawyer have breached their fiduciary duties to the association. To the extent that the association has been harmed by such breach, the association should consider its legal alternatives, including retaining an attorney independent of the management company to provide the board with a legal opinion regarding the activities and the right of the association.

Design theft haunts building industry

■ The uniqueness of a house's design is important to more than just the architect and builder; the owner stands to lose in the resale market if its uniquensss diminishes because of unauthorized copying of the

BY GERALD FRAWLEY STAFF WRITER

To most people, a house is someplace to live; to architects and builders, it's a livelihood.

So when people copy a house design, architects and builders are naturally upset - and it happens more than people think.

Robert R. Jones, president of the residential custom building firm Robert R. Jones Associates in West Bloomfield, said the stealing of home designs puts the integrity of the building industry at stake. "What we're really talking about is professionalism," Jones said. "Most builders think they can't do anything about it (plan stealing).

One thing builders and architects should do, Jones suggested, is vigorously prosecute any instances of design stealing.

Jones was involved in a precedent setting legal battle during the 1980s that went all the way to the 6th District U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and redefined case law.

"The plans stolen from our model were market proven (as good sellers),' Jones said.

"In our case, we showed and proved that we should be able to make up for lost profits (when someone other than he builds and sells a home based on his plans).

In that instance, Jones was able to to recover almost 40 percent of the sale of a home built from one of his

"It should be serious," he said, adding that penalizing the guilty party to the point where they gain no profit - and penalize them to the point where they lose money - may discourage further instances of plan stealing. Ron Mayotte, president of Ronald

E. Mayotte & Associates in Troy, said he has had several of his house designs - those he thinks are particularly unusual - copyrighted to protect them from being stolen.

Since he became an architect in 1958, Mayotte said he has had many of his ideas stolen. Mayotte said he doesn't copyright every design - some aren't distinctive enough. Designs can be copyrighted for a variety of reasons; some obvious, some not so obvious, Mayotte said.

Some of the more common features found in today's homes - things like great rooms, elaborate kitchens and opulent bathrooms - started in Mayotte's designs.

In fact, it wasn't until the copyright laws were recently changed in 1990 that architects began enjoying real According to Steve Scharf, an associate and patent attorney with the Detroit law firm of Dykema Gossett, copyrights protect only the way ideas are expressed, not the ideas themselves. There are two tests the courts use in copyright cases involving architectural works, Scharf said. "Strikingly similar refers to an exact duplicate, like if someone were to photocopy a plan," he said.

"The second is substantially simi- as well. lar, which means a knockoff from a plan with some changes," he said.

A copyright also protects outgrowths of a design from being stolen, Scharf said. Minor changes to an original design do not invalidate an architect's or designer's claim to copyright infringement if it can be proven the alleged copyright violator has access to the original design.

Copyright law protects a design where there are recognizable elements of expression unique to the original work that can be reasonably recognized in the derivative work, and the copyrighted expression is sufficiently unique to be copyrightable and appropriate steps were taken to do so. Jones said stealing home designs harms everyone. The builder, architect or designer lose because they lose out on profit they are entitled to. "We get very frustrated because we commit a lot of time and energy to a new plan and then a prospective buyer or other builder just takes it.'

Allowing home designs to be stolen removes the incentive to create new home designs, he said. The buyer loses as well, he said.

Whether people think of it or not, part of a home's value is in its resale. If there are many similar homes. those homes lose individuality and are worth less to prospective buyers. Jones said this applies not only to custom homes but production homes Mayotte said designs are stolen in a variety of ways by a variety of people. Sometimes, it may be other architects; sometimes, it may be designers; sometimes, it may be builders and sometimes, it may be the

Sometimes, someone walking through a model will do a rendering from notes, pictures or memory.

Sometimes, plans will be stolen from job sites, copied and then presented as originals, he said.

"Sometimes, finding out about it is just luck," he said.

One time, a colleague called him to tell him a builder had been in his office asking him to copy a drawing of his, Mayotte said.

Carl Levin offers economic hope to builders

BY MARY RODRIQUE STAFF WRITER

Guarded optimism best describes the tone Michigan veteran U.S. Senator Carl Levin offered local builders last week as Bill Clinton readied to move into the White House.

The inauguration should be a new beginning for our country," Levin told 130 members attending the Engineering Society of Detroit's Constructioon Activities Committee luncheon.

There's an optimism in the nation's capitol that hasn't been felt since the early years of the Reagan administration. Reagan represented a can-do spirit. It's very similar to what we feel now.

Unlike Reagan's philosophy of unlimited resources, Levin says the Clinton administration will emphasize less consumption and more investment. "We must invest in our future. Our debt went up dramatically. A trillion dollar debt which took a couple of hundred years to reach has quadrupled in the past 12 years.

"Our biggest challenge is the deficit," said Levin, a Democrat first elected to the Senate in 1978. "We have to do something serious, solve this as a people. We must cut entitlements, cut discretionary spending and raise revenues. We must do all

It's back to the drawing board for Observer & Eccentric readers interested in participating in Landmark Designs' Dream Home

After the results are tallied. Landmark will design a national 1993 Dream Home. Because area preferences vary widely, Landmark will also custom design a home to meet the exact specifications selected by Observer & Eccentric readers. Where response is high, plans for small, medium and large houses will be drawn.

The attached form includes the same types of questions architects, designers and real estate agents ask to determine their clients' housing needs and desires.

Readers are also encouraged to attach letters, sketches and any comments - the more details the better - that come to mind. In the 16 years that Landmark has been designing homes, readers have been one of the company's richest sources of new ideas.

Last year more than 100 readers participated in the survey, resulting in three model homes designed by Landmark that incorporated the features readers most requested. Those plans called for homes of 1,490 square feet, 2,185 square feet and 3,873 square feet.

Deadline for responding to the survey is Feb. 1. Mail forms to Landmark Designs, Dept. OE48, P.O. Box 2307. Eugene, Or. 97402. To reserve a copy of all the 1993 Dream Homes, send $3 to cover the cost of postage and printing and include your name and mailing address.

Making a prediction, Levin says the Clinton administration will propose a national health care system early on.

"We spend two times as much as any other country on health care and still have 37 million people uninsured.'

The direction of that system will depend on how 'we as a society decide to focus.

Levin says Michigan's congressional contingent has met with transition team officials pleading for a focus on manufacturing and industrial jobs.

"The U.S. has lost two and a half million jobs since 1979, and 10 percent in Michigan. The North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) will have a negative effect.

"We can't compete with the $1 their lack of safety regulations and environmental safeguards. If NAFTA goes through, we'll see a growing loss of manufacturing jobs, except in Texas."

Levin told the group a tougher trade policy is needed.

"The problem lies in Washington, not in Japan. It's the stupidity of allowing your competitor something the competitor doesn't allow you.

Levin expressed hope that the new administration would enforce a stricter trade policy.

"This is a particularly sensitive issue for Michigan.'

In a brief question period following his address, Levin stated his support for an investment tax credit "targeted to help companies be more competitive. We must focus on long term gain."

Asked if Congress will comply with Clinton, Levin claims Congress can't be a leader, but can be a partner "if the president uses the pulpit of the White House to create public support. Hopefully Clinton will be a strong leader. If he can sell it to the public, then an hour Mexican wages, with Congress will work with him."

Economic uncertainty troubling

They came from engineering and technical backgrounds to hear the economic forecast offered by Michigan political veteran Carl Levin.

The lunch sponsored by the Engineering Society of Detroit construction committee drew a wide cross section of business men and women from the tricounty area to the society's Detroit headquarters near Wayne State University.

"I don't know how the new administration will affect us," said David Lutz, of Morris & Berke, an office and industrial leasing firm in Birmingham.

Tenants are always willing to move from one building to another for a better deal. Personally I voted for Clinton because I felt it was time for a change."

Robert Gaines, president of Environmental Engineering Corp. of Livonia, came to hear the economic forecast.

'Senator Levin is a hard worker and he's honest, but we disagree philosophically. I'm very conservative," said Gaines, whose firm specializes in defense related engineering construction of manufacturing systems.

"I'm concerned about the amount of influence unions have on the Democratic party and their

YOU KNOW HOW GOOD YOU ARE NOW. WE'D LIKE TO FIND OUT

IN THE TOUGHEST TIMES, ONLY THE BEST THRIVE.

Unfortunately, even in today's "right-sized" climate, many companies don't adequately reward the best and brightest. Meager raises, inconsistent bonus policies and capped commission schedules only serve to "spread the wealth." Performance alone should determine your earnings.

At Morris & Berke, we want to meet those professionals who can do more and who want more. This includes top sales professionals, CPAs, bankers, attorneys and small business owners who want to double or triple their earnings in the commission-driven field of corporate tenant-representation, i.e. the renewal and relocation of an office lease as a vehicle to reduce occupancy cost.

We will provide you with the knowledge and training needed to fulfill your earnings goals. Your experience, motivation and talents will complete the formula for success. Morris)

> YOU KNOW HOW GOOD YOU ARE NOW. WE'D LIKE TO FIND OUT.

IN THE TOUGHEST TIMES, ONLY THE BEST THRIVE.

Unfortunately, even in today's "right-sized" climate, many companies don't adequately reward the best and brightest. Meager raises, inconsistent bonus policies and capped commission schedules only serve to "spread the wealth." Performance alone should determine your earnings.

At Morris & Berke, we want to meet those professionals who can do more and who want more. This includes top sales professionals, CPAs, bankers, attorneys and small business owners who want to double or triple their earnings in the commission-driven field of corporate tenant-representation, i.e. the renewal and relocation of an office lease as a vehicle to reduce occupancy cost.

We will provide you with the knowledge and training needed to fulfill your earnings goals. Your experience, motivation and talents will complete the formula for success. Morris)
