Schools find money to recall 16

The Plymouth Canton school board issued a hit list prior to the June 14 vote on a 4-mill property tax increase. But on Monday the board changed its mind about the list and put 10 teachers and six administrators back on the payroll.

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education on Monday recalled 10 teachers and six administrators who were pink slipped before voters rejected a 4-mill property tax increase.

Prior to the June 14 millage election, the district pink-slipped 85 teachers and 15 administrators. The school board, which on Monday set another millage election for Aug. 17, planned to lay off a total of 42 certified staff and nine administrators if the millage failed.

The recall of 10 teachers and six administrators was included in the Someone stumbling upon the high decibel happening at Plymouth Salem High School Monday night couldn't have been sure whether it was a political convention, a pep rally, or a school board meeting. It was all three.

On the Plymouth-Canton school board's agenda was approval of a special Aug. 17 election - a second attempt to obtain voter approval of a 4mill property tax increase.

In the wake of voters' defeat June 14 of a 4-mill tax hike, the school board canceled sports and other extracurricular activities for 1993-94.

The board voted Monday to again ask voters for 4 mills for two years to stave off $4.6 million in cuts.

Englers to march in July 4th parade

Plymouth's Fourth of July parade features Gov. John Engler, first lady Michelle Engler, Barney the dinosaur and local resident Chris Campbell, Bob Seger's bass player.

Kappler said Hulsing, longtime township clerk and former schools trustee, was first considered as grand marshal two years ago, but the Jaycees were able to get Engler.

Carl Pursell, who retired this year

as U.S. congressman from Plym-

Of Barney and Beauty and the Beast, Kappler said, "They're not just marching in the parade; they'll be mingling with the audience."

The parade theme is "God Bless America." To honor the theme, portions of the Declaration of Independence will be read before the parade, and there will be a "God Bless America" float.

"We're sprucing up the parade, try to do it a little bit better this year. We're adding vendors selling ice cream, toy and balloon vendors, Kappler said.

Canton OKs Mettetal contract, but seeks changes

By JOANNE MALISZEWSKI STAFF WRITER

Canton trustees gave their bless. ings to a contract with the state regarding the purchase of Mettetal Airport Tuesday night. But they are also asking for an amendment to nail down more safeguards, as requested by the Concerned Citizens

"I feel stupid because this could have easily been written into the contract," said township attorney

Andrea Fischer. Concerned Ciffizens, which included Plymouth, Plymouth Township and Canton residents, told trustees they wanted some items providing more definition and protection - added to the contract. Other residents wanted trustees to delay contract approval

"We determined early in the process that the state of Michigan could go ahead and do this without any involvement of this board," said Township Supervisor Tom Yack. "We are kind of pioneers in one respect, not that we want to be. The state could have told us to get lost."

At trustees' request, Fischer will ask the Michigan Department of Transportation for an amendment to the contract. Items to be included in the amendment are a definition of property - parcels 1-6 and air rights over parcel 12 - the state wants to buy, surrounding the air-

other way. Fischer tried to assure residents that even without specifics about land to be purchased, the state cannot expand the runway, as designated in the contract. "Legally, I feel you are protected on expansion,' she said.

That wasn't enough for residents.

Fischer also reminded them that the contract came from the state, not the township. It includes safeguards suggested by a citizens advisory committee, appointed by Canton Township Supervisor Tom Yack, at the request of MDOT director Pat Nowak.

"They are safeguards. It is a secondary enforcement of provisions on the purchase of the airport," Fischer said, referring to the memo of understanding.

The memo of understanding includes details such as maintainting the length of the runway at 2,556 feet, the number of aircraft to be housed, as well as maximum tiedowns. It also includes aircraft weight and reference to a local advisory board

New regulations keep cable talks in test pattern

Negotiations for a new cable television contract between Omnicom and the Plymouth Canton communities remain on hold

The 1992 federal Cable Act has put a damper on planned negotiations as Omnicom officials work their way through more than 500 pages of regulations, including rate rules that were expected to roll back prices nationwide.

Because of that, the entire Canton trustee and member of cable industry is coming apart at the seams trying to figure out

The cable committee had planned to begin negotiations in May but Omnicom asked for a delay. "We are continuing to work diligently on these regulations, said Lisa Boland, Omnicom general manager. "The regulations are extremely complex. It will be a challenge to make sure the communities understand them."

The local negotiations are only an example of what is happening around the country as government and cable officials wind their way through the regulations. The Federal Communication Commission delayed expected

If you or someone you know was involved in drafting men into military service during World War II. the U.S. Selective Service System wants to hear from you.

Selective Service is seeking to hear from volunteer draft board members, former employees, or those who worked for draft boards.

'This time it's not to serve, it's to say 'Thank you,' according to a communication from the Selective Service System.

In conjunction with official observances of the 50th anniversary of World War II, Selective Service seeks to honor those who served office workers, state directors, or on the home front.

"Our search does not include the 10 million men who were drafted during the war, because their distinguished service is being commemorated by the military and veterans groups," said retired Brig. Gen. Arthur Tesner,

You don't realize how great the need is. I was flabbergasted at the poverty that's out there," said Kiwanian Sue Clark, who's worked with the Salvation Army's Adopt-a-Family program. "You don't think of it, living in our community, but there is a lot of it within a couple miles of where we live. In areas where we have subsidized housing, children are running around not properly clothed or fed. It does sort of break your heart when you see it.

"It makes it real hard. They really could use the help.

The Kiwanians' project for young children was designed as part of a national Kiwanian effort. The Michigan Kiwanians are modeling their project after the local club's baby program. The Kiwanis Club is international.

McNamara defends Jeep buy, attacks auditor

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara has come out swinging at a recently released audit of the management of Wayne County's fleet of 447 vehi-

The audit, released June 14. said that management of the county fleet is decentralized and sloppy, which opens the door for abuse of county vehicle privileges.

Auditor General Ramona Henderson's chief recommendation is that the county should establish or designate an office that would be responsible for keeping track of all county vehicles. Currently, the report says, each department of the county has sole control over the operation and purchase of its own vehicles.

McNamara said "the auditor general is a political arm of the county commission. That particular audit was very unprofessional. I really am disappointed in Ramona Henderson. Things are not as bad as she made them out to be." Henderson was unavailable

McNamara singled out commissioner Susan Hubbard, D-Dearborn, who chairs the commission's audit committee. "Sue Hubbard, I really believe, is very disturbed and very vindictive," he Hubbard retorted by saying, McNamara is a bum who should be kicked out of office. He is abusing the taxpayers' money and he's an arrogant bum."

Despite his overall dislike of the audit, McNamara believes that parts of it are worthwhile. He has agreed to work with county commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, who has been given the job of writing an ordinance regulating county vehicle management.

One thing Henderson brought up in the audit report is that county department heads have

'great latitude" in deciding what kind of vehicles will be purchased, what options those vehicles will have and who gets to drive them. Henderson's concern is illustrated by almost three pages of the audit report that are dedicated to Metro Airport's purchase of 25 Jeep Grand Cherokee Larados and lease of five Jeep Grand Cherokee Limiteds last year. Larados sell for $23,000 and up, Limiteds for $28,500 and up. The report says that bid specifications were "designed around the Jeep Grand Cherokee Limited and Jeep Grand Cherokee Laredo (instead of) designed around the need and requirements of the division or department" that would use the vehicle.

Regarding the bid specifications, McNamara said that airport directors "may have stretched it a little bit to get the Jeep. Our objective was to purchase a Detroit-made vehicle." (The Jeep Grand Cherokee is built in Detroit.)

"If they did it that way it was wrong," McCotter said. "You should determine what your specifications are before you determine what product will meet

According to the audit report, bid specifications for the five leased vehicles included items like power seat adjustment, remote keyless entry system, automatic outside temperature reading system and automatic self dimming rear view mirror. "Many of the above specified items are not available as options on Ford Motor Co. or General Motors vehicles," the report said, but all but one are standard equipment on the Jeep Grand Cherokee

Limited. The audit report suggested that bid specifications for vehicle purchases be drawn up by a separate office of the county with input from the county agency that will ultimately use the vehicle.

Members of the Central, West, and East middle school choirs took part in the benefit for the homeless, dedicated "to kids who feel they have no hope" from "kids with hope to share.

Founded by nationally renowned choreographer John Jacobson, America Sings is a nonprofit organization dedicated to providing young performers with the chance to use their time and talents to help others.

Young people are encouraged through workshops, "singposiums" and newsletters to get involved in philanthropic service projects in their communities.

Central Middle School teacher Joy Large was among the staffers who accompanied the Plymouth-Canton sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders.

She's involved her students in community service by taking them to an Ann Arbor church that feeds the homeless and organizing her chorus classes' food drives.

'The idea is to open their eyes to the world because so many kids at this age can be wrapped up in their own little lives," said Large.

During their Chicago weekend, 75 choirs from across the country gave continuous half-hour concerts on four stages. All the performers learned ahead of time songs about hope entitled "We Are One," "America Sings!" "Seed to Sow" and "Hope is

When they weren't entertaining, students spent time in a "service tent" making peanut butterand-jelly sandwiches for the homeless, writing messages to President Clinton and visiting with Children's Defense Fund

"I learned that they are important people too and that they appreciate what we did. It's the little things we do that can make the biggest difference," said Diana Hanson.

Bill Corrigan said, "I learned that homeless kids are not as selfcentered as myself.

"I've learned that they really need our help, that we have helped them and that because of the 'America Sings' program, I think that more people are off the streets," said Kristin Gahude.

Craig Wickham said, "The homeless are really in need and until the whole world realizes that they need help from us, who are more fortunate, we will never be united.

Angela Lin said, "The homeless have great chances of living like us, but some people like us don't care. Their flame of hope needs rekindling from our hope.

"From 'America Sings' I learned that homeless need a lot of help, and we are just the people to do it," said Jessica Krasinski.

"Just doing a little thing like bringing a can of food helps a lot," said Elizabeth Jones

Area reaction to Young: Relief

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW STAFF WRITER

Local reaction to the decision of Detroit Mayor Coleman Young not to seek re-election runs the gamut from polite relief to parting shots to praise for a record of accomplishment.

"I was surprised that he didn't run, but I was pleased," said state Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville. "Coleman Young preached racism to his constituents while preaching brotherhood to the suburbs. We need a mayor down there who is more consistent, less confrontational and can see the broad pic-

Geake represents voters in Livonia, Redford, Plymouth and

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara, who has had his share of conflicts with Young. said he wasn't surprised by the mayor's retirement announcement. "What I look for now is someone who wants to build partnerships within and without the county," he said.

County commissioner Bryan Amann, D-Wayne, whose district includes Canton Township, said it was good of Young to leave voluntarily. "Unfortunately, too many times politicians are like professional boxers," he said.

"Coleman Young preached racism to his constituents while preaching brotherhood to the suburbs. We need a mayor down there who is more consistent, less confrontational and can see the broad picture.'

"They don't get out of the ring until they're carried out."

By not running, Amann said, Young is making a "magnanimous gesture." As for Young's record as mayor, Amann said, "Coleman deserves a lot of credit for things he did for Detroit.'

On the other hand, state Rep. Justine Barns, D-Westland, said she hasn't given much thought to the effect of Young's departure. "I guess I'm more worried now about money for schools. I'm sure one of those candidates running can be very effective in Detroit." She declined to say which candidate, though.

State Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Redford Township, who was born and raised in Detroit, said she's heard nothing better than vague perfunctory praise for Young. "We know he must have done some good things in the beginning, but we can't remember because Detroit has gone so bad," she said.

"I wish the man good health and a wonderful retirement.

Young's departure bodes well for the whole area, Bankes said, because whether we like it or not, Detroit is the primary component of southeast Michigan and something we're all identified with.

"Detroit doesn't mean a single city," said Bankes, whose district includes part of Livonia. "It's a region, the tri-county area. If we want to bring in business from the rest of the world, we have to build a new image. And now we can do that."

Wayne County Commission Vice Chairwoman Kay Beard, D-Westland, whose district includes Garden City, said she's glad Young left voluntarily. "That's the way a person should go out."

As for what the future holds "We can only hope that the people of Detroit elect a good politician who knows how to work with people," Beard said.

need to be sure that Detroit doesn't go down the drain.

State Rep. Jerry Vorva, R-Plymouth, said Young "probably served a very good function for a number of years," but it's important to get new people in the mayor's office because "whether we like it or not, how goes Detroit, so goes Michigan.'

County commissioner Thad-deus McCotter, R-Livonia, said, I'm glad he decided to retire. I think he was a political genius, but being a political genius doesn't always equate with serving the public."

Livonia Mayor Robert Bennett said he's pleased that Young is retiring. "In many areas he was good for the city," Bennett said. He overcame some of the problems with race relations in the city. But much of the time he was there he created a very hard line with the rest of the metropolitan area and Detroit on race rela-

County commissioner Michelle Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, whose district includes Redford Township said, "By Coleman Young retiring from the mayor's office, I am optimistic that opportunities for new and fresh ideas will be introduced, and more importantly, implemented in the

Engler finds flaw, vetoes 9 of 15 bills

Gov. John Engler has vetoed part of a 15-bill package allowing local governments to speed up ordinance enforcement.

Engler disapproved nine bills, telling Senate sponsors they had gone too far in allowing decriminalizing of some drug and morals

Purpose of the package was to allow criminal misdemeanor offenses to be reclassified as noneriminal municipal infractions. That would allow cities and townships to handle violations by tickets and without attorney representation. Sign ordinances, dog laws, building and zoning violations were among the offenses that could be reclassified.

Local man leads language institute

The English Language Institute in the English Department at Wayne State University has been accepted into the consortium of University and College Intensive English Programs (UCIEP). UCIEP promotes high standards of education and professionalism in intensive English language programs. Admission to the 25-year-old consortium signifies external verification of a program's commitment to high quality education in English as a second language.

Says Bruce Morgan of Canton, institute director, "Membership is like a certification. It puts our name in the academically select Yellow Pages.

UCIEP has 61 members nationwide. Wayne State is the third Michigan university to join. Michigan State University and Western Michigan University also are members.

The institute was evaluated during the past academic year before being accepted as the consortimm's newest member. Evaluation included a review of institute curricula; student recruitment methods; and application, promotion and graduation processes, followed by an on-site visit.

Since his arrival in 1990, Morgan has expanded the intensive English programs into more and varied levels, revised curricula and initiated new courses. He also established an in-service training program for institute faculty and designed and implemented the institute's first international advertising and student recruitment campaign.

In addition to the intensive five-day-per-week sessions available to students, new non-intensive afternoon and evening "English for Professionals" sessions are available to help professionals in the community develop their abilities.

Bruce Morgan

A supplemental course also was added that offers instruction to graduate teaching assistants who score below minimum on the Speaking Proficiency English Assessment. The course is for students with scores of less than 170 too low to qualify for ENG052, a preparatory course for international teaching assistants.

In response to a suggestion by President David Adamany, individual instruction for international faculty now is offered. The program provides writing, speaking and presentation development.

"This program is very successful," Morgan notes. "We are getting referrals from current and former participating faculty all the time.

A new institute function provides English proficiency testing support to the Admissions Office and other departments for incoming freshmen and transfer students whose first language is not English. When necessary, the institute also provides evaluation and follow-up instruction in English as a second language.

Recently, the institute published a student handbook as part of a QUEST project. The handbook includes information about the university, the community, culture, daily living, immigration, and even the weather. "The handbook will contribute significantly to the continuous orientation of international students," Morgan

Morgan was elected president of the professional association of Michigan Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages (MITESOL) and recently chaired its annual meeting in Grand Rapids. Its October conference will be at Wayne State.

MITESOL has more than 200 active members and is the state affiliate of TESOL, the international association with more than 23,000 members.

In February, MITESOL and the Association of Teachers of English of the Czech Republic completed an agreement to share an affiliate partnership and exchange newsletters, articles, news columns, manuals and educational materials.

The two groups will share additional informational and educational materials, and plan a 'pen pal' exchange between interested teachers and ultimately students." he savs.

Before coming to Wayne State in 1990, Morgan was associate director for academic affairs in the Office of International Programs at the State University of New York (SUNY) at Buffalo.

Morgan received four master's degrees from SUNY-Buffalo, two of them while employed there: master of arts in English, master of education in teaching English as a second language, master of science in student personnel administration and master of business administration. He also received a Ph.D. with a major in English and minor in linguistics from SUNY.

board's consent calendar, along with leaves and retirements and bills for payment. Items on the consent calendar are lumped together to be voted on as one.

Board President Roland Thomas said the recalls are being made now to save on unemployment Trustee Barbara Graham questioned why the administrative recalls were contained in the consent calendar. She requested that they be voted on separately.

"I realize the important role these administrators play. But with all of these teaching positions still eliminated, I'm not sure this is the best time to recall them," she said.

Superintendent John Hoben said, "All six of these (administrative jobs) are singular positions we feel should be called back.

"As you recall, we pink-slipped 85 certified staff. A total of 42 certified staff are needed to be cut.

Basically, it has been decided that of the 15 pink-slipped administrative staff, nine posiitons need to be cut. These cuts are based on a dollar amount need-

Trustee David Artley supported the removal from the consent calendar of the administrative callbacks but supported the recalls. "I don't have a problem recalling people," he said. "We agonized over the numbers of positions. We simply are agreeing to cut positions we did by number. I will support a motion that supports a previous motion.'

Errol Goldman, assistant superintendent for employee relations, explained the rationale for pink-slipping more employees than will be laid off.

'We want to match student requests (for classes) to the extent possible with the certification of the teachers that will be remaining," he said. "Because we have to give notice to teachers 60 days before the end of the school year, we need to provide flexibility to teachers to move around the district based on seniority and certification. We have to have the flexibility to call back teachers to staff classes students demand to

To save unemployment costs, 'we want to recall back as quickly as we can, still allowing flexibility for teachers. It's a real fine line we walk to work out all these things.

More recalls are set for July 12, 'still maintaining cuts of 42 positions the board has been required to implement," he said.

Administrators, who received a 5-percent salary increase this year, also will receive 5 percent in Administrators' collective bargaining agreement that granted yearly 7-percent raises for 1990-93, was modified in the spring of 1992. Administrators agreed to defer for a year 2 percent of their increase. A one-year extension was agreed to for 1993-94.

Lotsa dough:

Lotsa dough: Schoolcraft College raised almost $40,000 recently at its 10th annual golfing fund-raiser at Fox Hills Country Club. The reason so much money came in is that six professional golfers from the senior tour turned out to play with each team of amateurs and conduct a golf clinic. Above, pro Dave Hill teaches Larry Bennett how to putt right. Schoolcraft spokeswoman Saundra "Sam" Florek said that another pro, Tommy Aaron, got a hole in one on number six, a 168-yard, par three. The event's success, Florek said, is due to event chairman Tom Bohlander of Plymouth Township, who arranged for the pros to attend. Next year's golf fund-raiser will be on June 13. Plymouth Township resident Charles McIlhargey will be the chairman. McIlhargey's team also shot the low score, 14 under par.

Wedgewood keeps eye on builders

MaryKay Kellas is on patrol in Wedgewood Village condominiums in Plymouth Township, making sure that everything is up to specifications. Keeping the complex well-maintained is the key to property values, she said.

BY DIANE GALE STAFF WRITER

When MaryKay Kellas says she keeps a watchful eye on contractors she's not exaggerating.

Once she climbed a ladder, got onto a roof and learned all about chimney saddles before she approved work on Wedgewood Village condominiums.

"I spend sometimes 15 to 20 hours a week when I'm dealing with contractors," Kellas said, adding that she takes bids on most projects.

"If I don't like the way something is done, they do it over."

As president of the homeowners' association, Kellas has a constant task of making sure things are done right.

Pointing outside the French doors in her dining room, Kellas explains that a painting program is under way on the exterior wood of the units.

"We have a rigorous maintenance program here, and our goal is to continue that and maintain it the best we can so property values will continue to increase as they have been since they were built," Kellas said.

Property values have escalated on the 51 units west of Sheldon Road and north of Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth Township. In 1974, Wedgewood Village condos sold for $35,000 to $48,000. Today the four different-size units — from 1,100 to 1,300 square feet — range in price from $110,000 to $140,000.

The brown wood and brick condos were built in two phases — the west

The new clubhouse at Hilltop Golf Course should be ready to open soon after July 4th, says club pro John Jawor.

It replaces the longtime clubhouse condemned by the Plymouth Township building department in March, as the structure had seriously deteriorated.

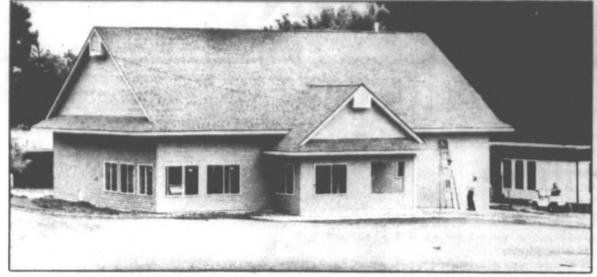

They didn't have to work too hard to demolish it," Jawor said. 'It fell right over.'

The golf course is north of Ann Arbor Trail and south of Beck

Last fall, township building director Charles McIlhargey found the structure was unsafe as the building was sagging, decayed and leaky.

In April, Jawor and the township board of trustees worked out a plan by which Jawor would pay to demolish the old building and install the new one, at an estimated cost of $125,000.

As part of the deal, the town-

So far this spring, Jawor has been operating out of a temporary trailer just south of the clubhouse. Because the trailer is far smaller than a clubhouse, food and drink business is down 20 percent, Jawor said.

Gone are features of the old clubhouse - holes in the bathroom tile, warped walls and ceil-

There are also bigger windows in the new clubhouse, providing more light and giving those inside a better view of the course.

The monthly maintenance fee ranges from $123 to $168 depending on the size of the unit. The cost covers yard care and everything from the front door out including water, sewer and pipe problems. Insurance on the outside of the structure is also included.

A built-in pool at the center of the complex is a strong attraction, along with large trees and open space that provide a country atmosphere. Yet only a block or so outside the entrance are strip shopping malls and restaurants.

"It's so close to Kroger you can walk there and to Arbor Drugs, yet we're so private," said Kellas. adding that about 70 percent of Wedgewood Village residents are senior citizens.

"It seems the majority are retired who are moving in now," she said. Twenty years ago there were a lot more younger people settling in the complex.

Condominium living, Kellas said, has a lot to offer someone who doesn't want to be kept busy by vard chores and outside maintenance.

"It's so nice to be able to lock your door and take off and know the lawn is being mowed and the snow is plowed," she said. "There's no concerns outside your condo. It's being taken care of for you. As people get older they want to get away from the maintenance

Firefighters

It's the season for sacrifices

t's time for the Plymouth Township firefighters to give something back to the township.

The 17 firefighters have rejected a 4 percent give back proposed by Supervisor Kathleen Keen-McCarthy. It was a bad decision on the part of firefighters.

First of all, nobody could be more sympathetic of firefighters than Keen-McCarthy. Her husband, David, is a retired fireman.

Giving back the 4 percent raise for one year would have eventually have helped the firefighters, giving them more credibility with the public by showing that they are willing to make sacrifices in times of need.

Chances are because they rejected the deal, there will be layoffs in the fire department. The township is trying to keep from raising taxes to provide fire, police and other services to residents

There is also the matter of the Beck Road fire station. Both firefighters and the township have egg on their faces for this one. The new station, built at a cost of nearly $1 million, is nearly in moth balls. One firefighter staffs the station on a part-time basis.

However, the township board isn't blameless. The firefighters union proposed a possible compromise, loaning the township part of the negotiated raise, then getting it back later with interest and the promise of putting a millage increase before voters in 1994.

While the union plan is unrealistic, it does indicate there is room to negotiate.

Firefighters should be more realistic about asking the township to increase taxes to pay for pay raises. A recent study done for the Plymouth library said there is no way a millage increase could be approved for the next several years by Plymouth area voters.

And if firefighters don't believe that, they should just go ask the Plymouth Canton schools which have lost two millage increase proposals, a 4 mill increase this year and a 1.5 mill hike last year.

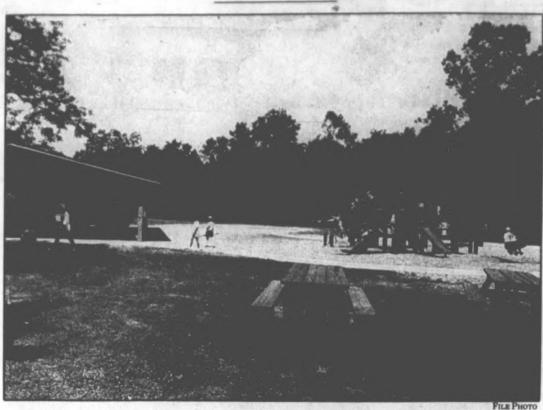

Add to that the frustration over lack of progress on merging the city of Plymouth and Plymouth Township fire departments, and the situation just isn't right for a township millage ques-

Voters in Plymouth Township aren't meanspirited. They want good schools, safe streets and fire protection, and are willing to pay for it.

However, they want things done as efficiently as possible. We don't blame them. The nearly moth balled fire station, the dead in the water merger talks and the refusal to budge on a wage give back make the firefighters appear much more mean-spirited than voters.

It's time for firefighters and other public employees to become part of the solution, not part of the problem.

Natural state

Safe haven: State parks could become endangered species themselves unless the Department of Natural Resources agrees to properly fund their existence. Support for the Pontiac State Recreation Area indicates that's the tack the DNR is now taking.

hat is the only election in America that is repeated if you don't like the results? You guessed it. Only one. The local millage. We don't get to repeat the election for governor or president do we? People really have only one way to express their dissatisfaction with the system — that's their vote. For the record this is how democracy works.

In the Plymouth-Canton school system our priority is not education; it is to employ as many adults as possible with exhorbitant salaries. We have far too many class offerings, too many teachers, too many administrators and salaries that are way out of line. These are the issues that voters are upset about. Not surprisingly, the board doesn't like the message and so we may very well get to voice our dissatisfaction again in a repeated millage vote. In my estimation this is un-American.

People that voted no on the 4 percent increase want the best for our children's education. But this isn't what the no vote is about. It's about financial mismanagement. The board and administration have spent far too much money - money that could have been used to keep current programs going.

In conclusion: Let's remember that as a result of the latest millage election our school board has chosen to sacrifice our children's education by reducing class hours and eliminating band and athletics to keep car allowances and exorbitant salaries intact.

Every millage election is an additional cost to the taxpayer. Let's not shoot the messenger. How many no votes is it going to take for the school board to get the message?

Dan Holton, Plymouth Township

he purpose of this letter is twofold. First, to extend a sincere apology and thanks to those neighbors who recently signed petitions concerning the long "overplayed" city's streetscape project. Those of us who circulated the petitions, which were invalidated by a mere seven signatures, did not intend in any way to be negative or divisive as some commissioners expressed themselves at Monday's commission meeting. Rather, we pleaded with the city fathers to demonstrate trust in the electorate since the bonds for the Downtown Development Authority project have to be guaranteed by the city's taxpayers even if a new tax may not be necessary.

Second, now that the commissioners have unanimously decided to go ahead with their original plan, regardless of how the voters feel, it is imperative that we continue to be on guard as to how our tax dollars are spent. It is amply clear that elected officials often choose to ignore the voters. Witness what our state governor has done. During his campaign he promised to travel by car only, but now he is traveling extravagantly by the same means that his predecessor used, a state helicopter.

Our city commissioners obviously do not have the opportunity to indulge in such matters, but waste and mismanagement in government are amply demonstrated at all levels. Two summers ago we circulated petitions and proved that your signatures and participation on election day reversed the commission's joint operating agreement on Mettetal by a three-to-one vote and elected three new commissioners. Citizens of the jewel town of Plymouth, be proud of your inherent right to have signed the petitions. You have let the city fathers know that we stand together.

Until the appeals court ruling a week ago, the matter was in limbo, caught between state legislation overturned in Wayne County Circuit Court and the start of a long process to resolve its constitutionality in the federal court system.

The appeals ruling should speed up the federal court route and also prevent the interpretation of legalized assisted suicide.

up the right to stay alive? What if the popular trend is to encourage those with serious diseases or conditions to die quietly because it's cheaper than paying health costs? What if elderly patients opt for assisted suicide solely to make sure they aren't burdens on their children?

Those who are in a weak condition or who are depressed may not do what they want but instead succumb - literally and figuratively - to external opinions.

The U.S. Supreme Court has never ruled on the issue of the right to die, so great uncertainty

Until that happens, Dr. Jack Kevorkian and other physicians who believe as he does will have to wait to continue their "practice."

DNR must fund parks system

owing to political reality, if not good policy, Gov. Engler's administration has backed away from its plan to give away the Pontiac State Recreation Area.

"We must intensify our efforts to secure a sufficient and stable funding source for our parks system," Department of Natural Resources director Roland Harmes said last weekend in Novi as he announced the state's decision to a gleeful Michigan United Conservation Clubs convention.

Harmes was correct. Restoring DNR funding is the answer. Engler's solution to budget woes has been to get rid of state recreational lands, like the Rochester-Utica Recreation Area; neglect small state-forest campgrounds to a weedchoked death; and let the rain erode a boat launch, like Moore Lake near Milford.

With urban sprawl eating up woods and meadows to serve a stagnant population, southeastern Michigan can ill afford to see recreation land put on the block.

The proposed receiver, Huron Clinton Metropolitan Authority, is an excellent operation, but its bag is day use — not camping or hunting. The 3,700-acred Pontiac Lake area has 176 campsites and a shooting range as well as the usual beach, trails and boat launch.

Michigan is lucky to have a state recreation area like Pontiac Lake, just seven miles from the Silverdome. We should hang onto it and all ow fortunate we are to live in a community which values quality leadership. Unlike the days of yesteryear when it was nothing for the local theater group to put on a play in someone's barn, the barns, as well as the qualified people have found other purposes for their talents in the salaried marketplace.

Today, volunteer means something very different. Today's volunteer organization leader must not only have a passion for the issue he or she supports, but in order to reach out to the community, they must also be educated in their field of interest.

This community is very fortunate to have people such as Christine Ilas, director for the Plymouth Community Arts Council and Beth Stewart, director of the Plymouth Historical Museum. These qualified people give unlimited hours of service for their "part-time" position pay, contributing twice, or three times as much, financially and energetically, back to the organizations by which they are employed, to the betterment of this community.

POINTS OF VIEW

Contrasting city images beg for a new attitude

his is a tale of two cities.

It is the best of times and the worst of times. In one city, thousands of people walk the streets at all hours of day and night, jostled and hustled but unmolested. In the other, a few derelicts and gangs of roving teenagers keep everyone else from venturing forth, and those who do venture forth are likely to wind up dead.

In one city, hotels, restaurants, taverns, theaters, museums, shopping centers, outdoor markets, sports stadiums are bustling in the downtown, the midtown and the uptown. In the other, the old shopping district is deserted and boarded up, the few hotels along the waterfront struggle to survive, two short blocks constitute the most active restaurant area, the baseball stadium is aging badly and within a hundred yards is an intolerable slum that forces most fans to hurry to their cars and the safety of the suburbs. A valiant attempt to create a theater district must struggle against the deterioration around every corner.

In one city, buses, streetcars, subways, trains and taxis move residents quickly to every area of town. In the other, buses are infrequent, unreliable and dangerous; a People Mover moves from one dying area of downtown to another; a trolley moves nowhere of significance and is only a pathetic reminder of the city's more prosperous past.

The city in light is Toronto. It is everything a big city should be. It is moving, exciting, active. It has its share of street hustlers, panhandlers and malcontent teenagers. But they don't own the city. They are a minority that adds a bit of dangerous color to an already dazzling kaleidoscope. The downtown has dozens of prospering hotels. The theaters in Toronto are second only to New York and are in considerably better condition and better located. The Sky Dome is just the most striking of numerous developments along a beautiful lakeshore. Restaurants of every variety are tucked into glittering new office buildings or carved out of old but elegant townhouses or warehouses. A shopping center occupies the center of the downtown and is packed at all hours of the day. Other stores line the streets. The city hall square plays host to free concerts. Bikers, walkers, skaters and rickshaws wind through the wonderfully crowded downtown streets.

But the downtown is only one area of this magnificent city. The midtown has a university and viable, beautifully maintained parks and the slick Yorkville shopping area. The uptown has the resort-like hotels, the Ontario Science Center, the fashionable shops. And all throughout the city are excellent and varied neighborhoods with townhouses, solid brick and frame bungalows and Victorians and modern apartments.

The city has strong ethnic neighborhoods — Chinese, Pakistani, West Indian, Portuguese, Italian. It smells as good as it looks.

Toronto is not a perfect place. It is expensive, it has a rising crime rate (at least by Canadian standards), it has its share of run-down areas and it shares the economic problems of Canada in general.

But the other city is Detroit, which is everything Toronto is not. It is shabby, violent, dangerous. Most of its neighborhoods are run down or totally burned out. Every attempt to pump life back into the city seems desperate. And even as we root for Mike Ilitch, we despair at how little and how late these efforts are.

Arriving back in Detroit from Toronto this weekend, we were unable to flow on to our freeway escape, so we had to drive down city streets. Most of the streets were empty, though a few men shared a bottle of fortified wine in the scarred doorway of a boarded-up building. Tiger Stadium looked handsome but the area around it was full of boarded-up and burned-out buildings. Up Michigan avenue we passed weeds, broken windows, abandoned cars, drunks staggering in the middle of a Sunday afternoon, and sensed an eerie, uncitylike quiet.

Meanwhile, Sharon McPhail has picked up from her mentor, Coleman Young, and questions whether Dennis Archer could be a good mayor if he is willing to talk with L. Brooks Patterson. Patterson is the elected executive of Oakland County and any mayor who doesn't work with him and others will see Detroit fall ever deeper into the cesspool.

Maybe Detroit isn't worth reviving. But wouldn't it be great to live in a real, vibrant city, like Toronto, again?

Opportunities unmet were root of Young's problems

e was an old-time Republican state representative back in the late 1960s and early '70s — bald, didn't smile much, rarely got his name in the wire service stories. I can see his face even if I can't recall his name.

John Bennett, Democratic state representative from Redford Township, was pushing his pet bill — a regional water board to replace the Detroit Water Board.

But the old-time Republican was from Sturgis or some small city that had its own water and sewer department. Like Detroit, his town sold services to surrounding suburbs. He didn't want to see his town's suburbs someday trying to take over the water and sewer department.

So the old guy cast a deciding "no" vote in committee against Bennett's bill. He voted with Detroit! This outstate, white, small-town Republican actually voted with Detroit!

It was an advantage that Coleman Young, as mayor of Detroit for nearly 20 years, failed to exploit. Items from a suburban newsman's scrapbook:

Young for 19½ years has been Detroit's delegate to the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. He has never shown his face at the SEMCOG General Assembly or Executive Committee — 234 meetings. SEMCOG is extremely important. Even when it doesn't do much, it's a place where local elected officials come to respect each other and get their rough edges sanded off. They don't talk ignorant rot like "Hit Eight Mile Road" to each other.

TIM RICHARD

Municipal League, an association of cities and villages. Municipalities — particularly Pontiac, Flint, Port Huron, Saginaw, Benton Harbor, Sturgis — have a lot in common with Detroit, particularly preserving older neighborhoods and downtowns and blocking urban sprawl. Appointed once to a committee, Young never showed up in two years.

Young was rarely visible with the Michigan delegation at the four Democratic national conventions I covered. Gov. Jim Blanchard, Sen. Carl Levin and the party chairs were accessible. Young was in a VIP box somewhere.

Young, the Wayne and Oakland

County executives and the chair of Macomb County started a series of "Big Four" confabs. It lapsed into uselessness. Guess why.

Every so often, usually at the beginning of a term, Young would talk about cooperation with neighboring communities. But he never lifted a finger or rode one mile in his armored limousine to follow through.

Young's tactic, in his own words, was never deal with the "house nigger," only with the main man — the president or governor.

Worse, his policy was to look out only for one city — not the towns of 200,000 or 50,000 or 5,000 that had the same problems. He helped shape the popular — but wrong-headed — notion that associates "urban" with blackdominated cities of more than 1 mil-

And so he squandered two decades, almost a generation, of opportunity to help all cities and villages, including Detroit. He ignored potential allies, like the old, bald Republican state rep-

A number of times, Young's people invited me and other outstate news people to his digs. I suggested we get together at a SEMCOG meeting. Fat chance.

Young is retiring. Dennis Archer will be the next mayor of Detroit. I wrote a column two years ago saying Archer had the same bad attitude toward "the (white) media" as Young. Archer replied by sending me one of his questionnaires on what I thought Detroit's problems were and how to resolve them.

I had only one basic suggestion. If Mayor Archer is serious, he'll show up at SEMCOG meetings. Not everybody may love Detroit and Detroiters, but the old city has a lot more potential allies than Young imagined.

Controlling violence on TV can help control behavior

y 11-year-old son Nathan was talking with my wife, Kathy, after dinner. I was reading a magazine and not following their conversation. Suddenly, a line:

"There are only two or three fights a week at school now."

I sat bolt upright. "What's that about fights again, Nathan?"
"Just what I said, Dad, only two or three fights a week."

Now, Nathan goes to a good public school.

It's not perfect, but the principal is tough and fair, and the kids look like the face of America:

hopeful, varied, mostly decent.

I remembered my own school in Ann Arbor, back in the '50s. I could recall only one fight in my entire school career.

I asked Kathy, who grew up in a little farming town in Wisconsin and then lived in Oklahoma. One or two in her entire schooling.

Of course, society has changed since Kathy and I were growing up. It's coarser, more varied, less restrictive, more open. And without doubt, much more violent. Nathan's two or three fights a week are a reflection of the times he is growing up in.

What's the major contributor? Television, of Hearings earlier this month in Washington featured the usual parade of self-serving industry mouthpieces arguing: 1) Violence is what people want to watch. 2) Violence on TV doesn't necessarily cause violent behavior. 3) Anyway, restricting violence on TV violates the First Rubbish.

For years, a growing band of researchers has been pointing to the link between kids exposed to violence on TV and their subsequent aggressive and violent behavior.

A recent summary article in "The Public Interest" by Brandon S. Centerwall, an epidemiologist at the University of Washington, concluded that no less than seven U.S. and Canadian studies show a correlation between prolonged childhood exposure to TV and a tendency to physical aggression that extends from before adolescence into adulthood.

PHILIP POWER

For years, a growing band of researchers has been pointing to the link between kids exposed to violence on TV and their subsequent aggressive and violent behavior.

What can be done?

Centerwall suggests requiring all television sets be manufactured with locking devices through which parents can control children's access to certain channels.

That's a good idea, although it presupposes the kinds of parents who are worried about their children's exposure to violence in the first place.

It also assumes that acts of violence are confined to certain channels at certain times.

Wrong. Most parents know perfectly well that even regular network prime time programs—including Saturday morning cartoons—are absolutely shot through with violence.

Following the example of the tobacco companies, we certainly can't depend on the television industry to regulate itself. Maybe we are at the point where decent people operating through the government have got to say there must be certain standards for TV and that's it.

Phil Power is chairman of the company that owns this newspaper. His Touch-Tone voice mail number is (313) 953-2047, Ext. 1880.

Quality ought to rule on fate of our teachers, politicians hy?

We send politicians to Lansing and as soon as they get there, they decide less government is the way to go, so under the guise of letting citizens directly control their own fate, the politicians shrug off the tough decisions by passing them to us in the form of elections.

That's contrary to my understanding of the system. I thought we elected politicians to make, not dodge, decisions. If we don't care for the decisions, then we cancel the politician's ticket. Right?

So, putting these two thoughts together: If we have to make the decisions anyway, because politicians won't, and if politicians are for less government, as they say they are, then let's oblige the indecisive by not sending them back to Lansing the next time around.

■ It seems that every year someone comes up with a new test students must pass to prove their proficiency, yet we have no way of measuring the skills of their teachers.

That doesn't seem fair, particularly when we spend so much time and so much money trying to figure out how to fund our public school systems.

Teachers who inspire, motivate and make a student want to learn cannot be paid enough. It would be nice to reward them, if we knew, with some certainty, who they were.

I started thinking about this when Bob Block, Southfield's city manager, said one of the reasons Proposal A should be defeated is that throwing more money at our public schools, without a system of evaluation, is no guarantee students will get a better education.

Block is correct. Before Gov. John Engler launches another incomplete plan to fund schools, we must decide exactly what we want our school systems to accomplish, and then devise a method to monetarily support our plan.

PHILIP SHERMAN

There's an understanding in the media that, more or less, it's OK to print the name of a person formally charged with a crime, but not the name of the accuser if the crime involves criminal sexual conduct, minors, or both.

Students and parents called to complain about a story we ran. The story said a 17-year-old male high school senior had been charged with varying degrees of criminal sexual conduct regarding two 15-year-old girls.

We named the 17-year-old in the story. His name became a matter of public record when his case was referred to circuit court from district court. We didn't name the 15-year-olds.

The 17-year-old was named because the community has a right, and a need, to know when its law enforcement network approves charges against one of its own.

We also named him because it's in his best interests. Not a week goes by without reading about someone, in some distant country, being charged with a crime and then dropping out of sight.

An arraignment in this country is designed to do several things. One of its most important functions is to show the public that the accused has not been "disappeared" into the system and forgotten. That's why the proceedings are public.

Suburbanites praise Archer's call for cooperation

By Susan Rosiek Staff Writer

"Let us join hands and work together to destroy the artificial barriers which separate city and

That's the message Dennis Archer, Detroit mayoral candidate delivered to some 65 suburbanites Tuesday at a breakfast meeting sponsored by the Westland, Canton, Garden City, Wayne and Dearborn Heights chambers of commerce.

Archer, 51, is a former justice of the Michigan Supreme Court and the early front-runner in a sixperson primary race for mayor in the city of Detroit.

Throughout his speech and a question and answer session, Archer repeatedly stressed the issues of crime, safe streets, economic development and job cre-

Archer said the city "can't turn the economic situation around unless streets are safe for everyone.

"The mayor must make sure the city is open for development. As mayor I will extend a hand of welcome to business,' said Archer.

Archer's vision

Archer envisions a city that is well-managed, well-run with more user-friendly parking downtown and the neighborhoods.

By the year 2001, Archer said he hopes the world will call De-troit "an urban miracle" — a city that has a "substantially reduced crime rate; one that has created jobs and opportunities for peo-

Archer also pledged to work with officials in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties to merge the Detroit and SMART bus systems. But he said any agreement must acknowledge that ridership in Detroit is nearly triple that of SMART and any merger would have to take into consideration the seniority and pension rights of DOT drivers.

Archer said he also supports placing a "modest - very, very modest - dedicated tax proposal" on the ballot next year.

On other issues Archer said he has no immediate agenda for waterfront development and that the 'agenda for Detroit will be set by Detroiters."

Opposes gambling

He opposes legalized gambling in the city of Detroit and "would resent it if the governor imposed casino gambling in a city which has turned it down four times."

When asked what Archer hoped to accomplish by addressing suburbanites he said that "most all candidates have accepted campaign funds from people outside the city." He pointed out that one-third of the city's population is below the poverty line and although people may vote and care about the city, they aren't always able to donate money to campaigns.

Archer made it clear he was in Westland Tuesday because he was invited.

He said that the city of Detroit has been generous to the suburbs by investing pension fund money in suburban development. He explained that in the 1950s Detroit gave up an economic base to develop a metro freeway system and it constructed water and sewer lines which eventually accommodated suburban development.

Archer also pointed out that

"Let us join hands and work together to destroy the artificial barriers which separate city and suburbs."

> Dennis Archer mayoral candidate

many suburbanites have "a strong love affair with the city." He said as mayor he will look to the suburbs for help in promoting a good image for Detroit.

Work together

"It would help if everyone in the region would "stop talking negatively," said Archer.

"It's imperative that we work together because nobody's going to invest in an area where people don't get along," said Archer.

Archer said the city and suburbs can learn from each and in the area of development have a lot

Archer said small downtowns such as Rochester, Plymouth and Fremont (in west Michigan) "are experiencing some of the same problems that Detroit has over the years with nearby supermalls luring businesses from a central

On the use of public funds for a new Tiger Stadium, Archer said he doesn't have an opinion because he hasn't examined any of

When asked how he could accomplish rebuilding neighbor-hoods Archer credited much of the work now to neighborhood associations. He pledged to work to fix-up and clean up the city, restructure the police department in an effort to attack crime and pro-vide options for children "take away the temptation to do some-thing illegal."

Message sticks

Archer's message of building bridges was a popular one with residents from throughout western Wayne County who attended the Tuesday meeting in Westland.

Ted Johnson of Plymouth said Archer's vision for the city "portrays a positive point of view.'

"You can't operate in a vacu-um," said Liz Johnson, an attorney in downtown Plymouth.

"I like the idea of Detoit working together with the suburbs," said Westland mayoral candidate Doug Noel. "I know the city of which you dream," Noel told Archer.

"He has extended the hand of welcome to the suburbe. I too have a love affair with the city of Detroit, and I don't like all the negativity about the area," said Joe Benyo, Westland City Coun-

Dennis LeMaitre, president of the Westland Chamber of Commerce, said he like Archer's pledge of support and cooperation with business

"You can't ignore the business community — that's where jobs come from," said LeMaitre

Charles Pickering, president of the Westland City Council and a mayoral candidate, said Archer's assessment of what's needed in the mayor's office in Detroit someone who is pro-business, pro-schools and pro-neighborhoods — also is important in Westland.

Plymouth City Commissioner Dennis Shrewsbury gives Archer high marks for wanting to "build coalitions instead of saying hit the road."

"As well off as some of the suburbs are we can't make it without the city," added Shrewsbury.

If you are ready to take that next step toward earning your four-year degree, we are ready for you.

Last year approximately 5,000 students transferred to WSU from some 500 community colleges and four-year schools across the country. They are taking classes at our main campus in the University Cultural Center in Detroit or on one of our satellite campuses while others go to our University Center at Macomb Community College.

Some of the reasons students come to Wayne State:

- Strength of our academic programs — international reputation
- Cost the only Michigan public university with a negative increase in tuition costs over the past decade based on inflation
- Financial aid During 1991-92 WSU awarded $50 million in aid to students

edford Catholic Central graduate Scott Kapla, of Canton, pitched two innings of relief and batted twice for the American Amateur Baseball Congress (AABC) team at last weekend's National Amateur All-Star Baseball Tournament in Battle Creek.

AABC finished 1-3 in the five-team all-star invitational that featured the top 100 18-under players in America. Many of the players were selected in last month's Major League draft.

Kapla allowed no runs, one hit and struck out two in two innings of relief in AABC's 6-5 loss against Pony. Kapla was hitless in two at-bats as a designated hitter.

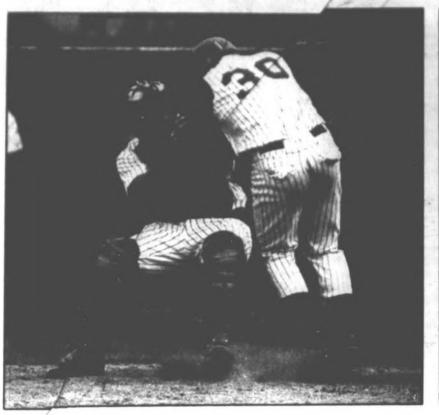

Kapla just finished his freshman year at Eastern Michigan University where he was the Mid-American Conference freshman of the year after going 6-3 on the mound with a .303 batting average. He is expected to be EMU's No. 1 pitcher next season with the departure of ace Sean Kenney, who signed with the New York Mets after being selected in the draft.

Hines Park win streak comes to halt

Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury had its 18-game winning streak snapped Monday in a double-header by Little Caesars. But the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League leaders still lead by a comfortable margin.

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

Hines Park went more than five weeks without suffering its first loss in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League.

But in the span of six hours Monday night, Hines Park lost twice.

Little Caesars swept a doubleheader, 7-4 and 10-6, at Ford Field to end Hines Park's 18-game unbeaten streak. Despite the pair of losses, Hines Park remained comfortably atop the LCBL standings at 17-2-1 with 35 points.

Del-Wal is in second place with 25 points (12-5-1) and Caesars is in third with 22 (11-8).

"We beat 'em good, it was no fluke," Caesars coach John Moraitis said.

The losses must have made a lot of coaches and players from the LCBL

"Maybe the helmets will fit back onto the Hines Park players' heads," said one coach who wanted to be anonymous. "They can't walk on water."

Caesars beat Hines Park's Jeff Paluk (Plymouth Salem) in the opener, knocking out the ace right-hander after 3% innings. Paluk, who fell to 6-1, allowed six runs on five hits and suffered control problems with seven walks and three hit batters.

Paluk's younger brother, Brian (Redford Catholic Central), allowed one run on three hits, one walk and a hit batter over the last 31/2 innings.

"I told Jeff we started the wrong Paluk today," Hines Park manager Ken Wandzel said. "From the start of the season, Jeff has been one of the top two pitchers in the league.'

Caesars' winning pitcher was Mark Van Ameyde, who went the distance and scattered six hits.

Andy Gagne was 2-for-3 with three runs scored and an RBI. Randy Gierczak had an RBI double and Dave Roman (Livonia Franklin) had a two-run single.

Marauders stumble

John Pettersson, team manager for the Marauders, was explicit in summing up the team's performance in a National Amateur Cup regional semifinal - terrible.

"They were bad," he said in describing the Marauders' oppo-nent, Fort Wayne (Ind.) Sport Club. Fort Wayne proved it in Sunday's regional championship match, getting thumped by Scott Gallagher of St. Louis 8-0.

But a day earlier, in a match played at Oakland University, Fort Wayne put three goals on the board before the Marauders could answer, then held on for a 3-2 victory in the semifinals league is better than the team we lost to," said Pettersson.

The Marauders were handicapped somewhat. Midfielders Mike Gentile and Paul Kaliszewski (both from Livonia Churchill) missed the match; Gentile was with the under-19 state team at a tournament in St. Louis, and Kaliszewski had to sit out due to the two yellow cards he received in the previous Cup match.

Also missing was Scott Weiger, who accompanied the Michigan men's team to the Donnelly Cup tournament in Indianapolis. And another midfielder, John Gentile (Churchill and OU), was hampered by a groin injury.

Still, Pettersson was convinced the Marauders were the better side. But Fort Wayne scored two unanswered goals in the first half and made it 3-0 10 minutes into the second.

Robbie Ludwig pulled the Marauders to within 3-2, scoring goals in the 60th and the 78th Everyone's gone. Maybe that's not so bad. After all, last season Schoolcraft College's men's basketball team managed just six wins in 27 games. The Ocelots had only two wins in 16 Eastern Conferance games.

"heir best player, 6-foot-7 cen', Jarvis Murray, has graduated and accepted a scholarship to be University of Massachusetta owell. Mohammed Abdrabboh, 6-5 forward, has completed his unior college eligibility and is saded to Mercyhurst College i Erie, Pa.

Others have deterted for a variety of reasons. The one for-sure returnee is Redfow Catholic Central grad Steve Whitlow. a 6-5 forward from Farmheton. Whitlow started and avenged nearly 15 points per game, ean. ing honorable mention all-co. ference honors.

It is Whitlow SC coach Dave Bogataj will construct his 1993-94 team around. Two other veterans, 6-6 forward Bryant Markowicz and 6-6 forward Jerome Carter, could be back, but both are questionable.

Markowicz went academically ineligible at mid-season last season; his status is still in doubt. Carter injured his knee and underwent reconstructive surgery; he is still in rehabilita-

Bogataj labels himself as a 'perpetual optimist," so it's not surprising to hear him laud his newcomers. But his optimism does have a basis - defense.

Hard workers, all

"I really believe we'll be better defensively," he insisted, with conviction. "These kids are all blue-collar workers."

Hard-nosed is another description Bogataj applied often to the nine players he has received commitments from. None are star-quality, he noted. "The big-name players you never get," he said.

BASKETBALL

But: "These kids all started and they're athletes. And they're multi-sport athletes, too. They played more than one sport in high school and more than one position in basketball. They have versatility.'

That is a necessary ingredient for any successful junior college program - more so at SC, where the roster never remains intact through an entire season.

Bogataj's recruiting goals are simple, really: get good athletes. Rebounders, runners and shooters, dribblers and passers. If a player possesses more than a couple of those traits, SC has a roster spot waiting for them.

First the rebounders. Adam Roy, at 6-6 and 215 pounds, qualifies as such. The Livonia Stevenson grad averaged double-figures in points and rebounds, with outside scoring potential. Bogataj described him as "aggressive.

Then there's Tim Burns, 6-5 from Romulus. "He did all the urty work," said Bogataj, averaging nearly nine rebounds a

And Tony Maciejewski, 6-5 from belleville, another doublefigure rhounder who played a lot of cetter as a senior and is "good around the boards."

Variety of alents

Part two - the in-betweeners. Bogata has picked up a pair of Oak Park grads who should help: Schavn Brown, a 6-4 forward, and Bernard Tynes, a 6-2 guard. Both can score - Tynes was one of the Redskins top point-producers - and both play tenacious defense. Brown usually covered their opponents' best forward, while Tynes defended the op guard.

The leader in this category, however, should be Mark Cady of New Boston Huron, a 6-3 bit of everything. As Bogataj described him: "This kid's a good ballplayer - he played power forward, guard, center and ran

He'll play off-guard for SC. 'He can shoot," assured Bogataj, "and he's a tough defensive

Another shooter: Milton Stoudemire, 6-1 from Huron Valley Lutheran, whom Bogataj labeled as a "great scorer." That's something no team can have enough of.

But the position that has seemed to cause SC the most trouble in the past two seasons is point guard. Bogataj has two possible solutions to that prob-

Help at the point

First is Ricky Mitchell, a 6foot graduate of East Catholic who wanted to play at SC last year but couldn't enroll due to transportation troubles. He enrolled for the spring semester and will be ready for the season.

Choice No. 2 at the point is a Whitlow-type: Bob Schneider, another 6-footer who graduated from, but did not play at, Plymouth Salem. Schneider attended Catholic Central (as did Whitlow) and played for two vears before transferring, after experiencing some problems (like Whitlow, who did not play his senior year at CC).

Those nine newcomers are not the end of Bogataj's recruiting. Other offers have been made, but commitments have not been obtained

And, even though this team may be better defensively, Bogataj makes no promises regarding improvement. "I just want us to play good ball all year," he said. "The wins will

Maybe not a lot of them, though, judging from the conference competition. As Bogataj noted, Highland Park CC has the conference's best two returning big men, Henry Ford CC has a strong returning backcourt, Mott CC has three starters back, and Oakland CC is well-stocked everywhere.

Which makes SC's road to respectability an uphill struggle -as usual.

Ex-Stevenson swimmer suffers serious accident

Family members, friends, teammates and coaches are keeping a close vigil with guarded optimism following a swimming accident involving former Livonia Stevenson High All-Stater Bryan Morrison.

The 19-year-old Morrison, an engineering major at Michigan State who earned a spot this spring in the Big Ten swim championships, is slowly recovering from serious neck, spine and back injuries while vacationing in Eu-

Morrison was injured in a diving accident on June 17 off the Mediterranean coast in Nice, France, near Monte Carlo.

French doctors performed surgery to repair a cracked fifth vertebra in Morrison's neck. He also suffered other undisclosed

'We hope within a week that he'll be back home," said Donna Damboise, Morrison's grandmother. "Everyone in the Livonia churches has been praying for Bryan and I think it's been helping. No, let me say this, I know it's been helping."

Mrs. Damboise was originally told that her grandson had suffered paralysis from the chest down, but in subsequent days he has slowly regained feeling in portions of his arms, logs and feet. Morrison, recently joined in France by his parents, Jay and Bonnie, was scheduled to be transported this week on a medical flight routed through Paris and London. He is expected to be flown to the University of Michigan's Rehabilitation Center.

"It's such a long and arduous flight; they're concerned about Mrs. Damboise said. "It's going to be a long haul. The language barrier has also been difficult, but the prognosis for recovery for Bryan, I've been told, is six months. We can't wait for him to get back."

Earlier this month, Morrison and Matt Purdy of West Bloomfield traveled to Germany where they visited fellow freshman Chris-Carol Bremer. The three were freshman teammates on MSU's swim team.

The two watched Bremer compete in the German Nationals in Berlin. (Bremer finished ninth in the 200-meter butterfly at 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona, Spain.)

After a week-long visit with Bremer, Morrison and Purdy went on to make stops in Amsterdam, Paris and Barcelona.

Purdy was on the beach when Morrison was injured. He helped administer CPR to his friend before emergency crews arrived on the scene.

"Things have been pretty rough, the whole week has been a blur," said Purdy, who returned home a few days after the accident. "But things are looking up and I understand Bryan is continually getting better. He's eating solid foods. He's a fighter and if he walks, I know he'll swim again."

Greg Phill, who coached Morrison in the AAU club ranks, as well as at Stevenson, is also encouraged by the recent news.

"The message from Bryan was to Expect me to be swimming again for you again in a year," Phill said. "I'm optimistic. Things are looking good.

At Stevenson, Morrison took fifth in the 500-yard freestyle and seventh in the 200-yard freestyle at the 1992 state Class A Championships. He also finished 24th at the Junior Nationals in both

"I'm always thinking of him and I pray to God he's OK," Stevenson coach Doug Buckler said. "It really shook me up.

"Bryan is one of the nicest kids and hardest workers I've ever had. If anyone can make it through rehab, it's Bryan.'

Michigan State coach Richard Bader has also expressed his con-

"At one time we were all thinking the worst, but praying for the best," Bader said. "He's just a great kid and you hate to have this happen to anybody.

"He not only has potential as an athlete, but as a person, too. He did very well this year for us on the team, as well as in school.

"He's quiet, but strong in his own way. He's his own person. Everyone enjoys him tremendously and I enjoy having him around.

"Both the Michigan State men's and women's teams support him and we'll be there for him when he returns.

LCBL champ must attend regional

BY STEVE KOWALSKI STAFF WRITER

The Livonia Collegiate Baseball League playoff champion will travel to Pennsylvania, but it's not known if the final destination is Johnstown, Pa., site of the All-American Amateur Baseball Association national championship.

The LCBL playoff champion (to be determined in late July) won't receive an automatic bid to Johnstown, officials said. To reach Johnstown, the LCBL playoff champion has to win or take second-place at the eightteam AAABA regional, held in Altoona, Pa.

LCBL director Gary Gray said he wasn't able to attend a AAA-BA preseason meeting in Boca Raton, Fla., because of budget restrictions in the Livonia Parks & Recreation Department and the absence probably hurt the chances for an automatic bid to Johnstown. This was the secondstraight meeting the LCBL missed attending, Gray said.

The last LCBL champion that had to attend a regional was Walter's Appliance in 1990, but most teams were counting on an automatic bid this year.

"The rule states if you don't attend two meetings in a row, you have to attend a regional," Gray said. "We didn't attend a very important meeting due to financial difficulties and we knew the consequences.'

Ron Reinke, superintendent of Livonia Parks and Recreation, said his budget was trimmed this year by $300,000.

A trip to Florida, covering hotel and air fare would have been about $400, according to Reinke.

'We do not have out-of-state travel money - it's sad but that's what happened," Reinke said. "If someone wanted to go we would have let them go at their own ex-pense. I offered Mr. Gray that."

Gray said LCBL coaches were told of the financial difficulties and that a coach could attend the meeting to represent the LCBL but "no one came forward."

Entry fee for each team is about $600. The teams could have collected an additional $60 from the seven clubs to send a representative to the meeting or just ask Ken Wandzel, a coach and player in the league the last several years, to go.

Wandzel works for Northwest Airlanes and can fly for $15.

"All those people had a chance to do something about it," Gray said. "Any coach who wanted to attend we would have had to write a letter seeding them. Some of the guys didn't feel they could get the money from their sponsors.

Wandzel, who joined Hines Park as a manager just before the season, said he didn't know about the March 1 meeting or he would have attended.

Everyone is always talking about making the league better, Wandzel said. "For them not to attend the meeting, something like that shouldn't happen."

Walter's Appliance assistant coach Harvey Weingarden said going to the regional means more money out of the sponsor's pockets if the team reaches Johnstown.

"It could cost an additional $700 to 800 and that's more than the cost of the meeting," he said.

Joe Vondracek, coach of firstyear LCBL member Westland Federation, said having to go to the regional is no big deal.

"I imagine people from (firstplace) Hines Park are unhappy,' Vondracek said. "But most of the quality national tournaments you have to win a regional to get there. It doesn't seem out of line to me.

concert selections will consist of the popular and familiar, there will be some rare items as well. Each concert will be preceded by a pre-concert feature. Among these will be a performance by the St. Clair Trio 7:30 p.m. Saturday, July 10.

Formed nearly four years ago, the trio is gaining in prominence. It consists of pianist, Pauline Martin of West Bloomfield; cellist, Marcy Chanteaux; and violinist, Emanuelle Boivert. Chanteaux is the assistant principal cellist of the DSO and Boivert is its concertmaster.

Martin brings with her a rich pianistic heritage inspired by her teachers including Menahem Pressler, pianist of the Beaux Arts Trio which is universally considered among the best of its kind.

For the past few years Martin has successfully balanced her musical career with raising a family. In addition to her many local performances, she has also concertized in Canada and Europe, including Iceland, the native country of her husband.

On July 10, the St. Clair Trio will perform Tchaikovsky's "Trio in A minor" a seldom heard landmark work.

The Trio was inspired by the death of Nicholas Rubinstein, founder of the Moscow Conservatory and brother of famed pianist and composer Anton Rubinstein (no relation to Artur Rubinstein).

The piano part of "The Trio in A minor" is demanding, as are all of Tchaikovsky's piano writings. But the significant musical content of this work, according to Martin, shifts the focus of concentration to the music, rather than technical showmanship and virtuosity which more shallow pieces tend to evoke.

Martin also pointed out some of the other positive aspects of the Tchaikoysky Festival.

Another pre-concert feature will be an onstage conversation 7 p.m. Friday, July 16, between DSO artistic administrator Willa Rouder and DSO librarian Elkhonon Yoffe.

While we all take for granted Tchaikovsky's role as a major Russian composer, few are aware of his visit to America.

Yoffe, a native of Latvia who lives in Birmingham, authored a book on the subject titled "Tchaikovsky in America." His firsthand experience of the repressive atmosphere in his native country, which was part of the former Soviet Union, and otherwise

While still in his native land, Yoffe formed a close acquaintance with DSO music director Neeme Jarvi who was from neighboring Estonia.

Jarvi, will conduct concerts on July 16, 17 and 18. Jerzy Semkov will conduct concerts July 9 and 10. Semkov is among the most acclaimed guest conductors, and has been appearing with the DSO almost every season for several years.

Many aspects of Tchaikovsky's music will be featured during the festival including orchestral suites, music from his ballets and "Eugene Onegin," one of Tchaikovsky's operas that is still occasionally performed. The task of creating music to tell the story was a great undertaking, and by the time the film was completed, Disney Music staffers Frank Churchill and Larry Morey had written 25 songs. Only eight of these songs ended up in the film.

In 1938, "The Hit Parade" featured an unprecedented six songs from the film — "Someday My Prince Will Come," "Whistle While You Work," "Heigh Ho,"
"One Song," "With A Smile and a

Chanting their way through "Heigh Ho" as the dwarfs are vaudeville comic Roy Atwell as Doc, comedian Billy Gilbert as Sneezy, Scott Mattraw as Bashful, Otis Harlan as Happy and Pinto Colvig as both Grumpy and Sleepy. Little Leaguer buoys Chicago Cubs in 'Rookie of the Year' heir apparent owner of the team.

Comedy: Thomas Ian Nicholas stars as Henry Rowengartner in "Rookie of the Year," a comedy opening July

Twelve-year-old Henry Rowengartner dreams the dreams of most Little League players his age: Hitting the game-winning homer in the ninth, pitching a shutout or making a diving catch. Sadly, Henry's reality is that he is an enthusiastic yet somewhat clumsy ballplayer. It's those two qualities that lead Rowengartner to suffer a serious break to the arm. When he heals four months later, something very unusual happens in 'Rookie of the Year," a comedy directed by actor Daniel Stern ("Home Alone") opening Wednesday, July 7 in suburban movie theaters.

Rowengartner makes the leap from Little League to major leagues when the accident endows him with a magical pitching arm that may just bring a pennant to his beloved, long-suffering Chicazo Cubs.

"Rookie of the Year" stars Nicholas as young Henry Rowengartner and Gary Busey as aging Chicago Cubs pitcher Chet Steadman, who teaches Henry about life on and off the field.

Amy Morton co-stars as Henry's well-intentioned mother, and Bruce Altman plays her boyfriend, who hopes to ride Henry's coattails to wealth. Director Stern plays Phil Brickma, the Cubs pitching coach who never quite recovered from being hit in the head by a baseball in the minor friends, Clark and George. Beyond the fantasy of Henry trying to pitch the Cubs into the World Series, "Rookie of the Year" also touches on the proposition that every child is special and in some way touched by a bit of genius or even magic.

Robert Gorman and Patrick La-Brecque are cast as Henry's best

Production of "Rookie of the Year" took place entirely in Chicago. Wrigley Field was used for 20 days of filming and Chicago's Comiskey Park doubled for Dodger Stadium.

The movie is rated PG (parental guidance suggested).

The intent of Music Under the Stars is to entertain the community, so they can come as a family, a couple or by themselves. They can drive or ride their bikes, bring their strollers, their children, relax and enjoy the music," said arts commission president, Betty Newton.

'Seniors and the physically impaired come and sit in their cars with the windows down. It's so accessible to everyone. It's not like an auditorium. You can drop in or out anytime. If you work late or don't finish supper until 7:30 p.m., you can still come.

"I just remind agents that this is the time of year people really come out of the woodwork," said Tenza, president and founder of Question Master Inc. in Ann Arbor. "The kids are out of school and families want to move into larger homes before classes start up again in September."

Tenza is also partial to dressing up like a troll to play out agent fears, waving a staff like Moses to separate serious buyers from lookers and throwing fire from his hands to consume bad habits.

"The most important thing that I can get across in a sales training seminar is that professional selling is questioning and not telling," said Tenza, a former real estate owner and broker for

"If you question your client about their needs and desires, and then work toward those goals, the client will always know that you're working on their behalf. If you try to tell clients what to do, you've lost them.'

To drive home his point, Tenza will use bricks during the course of a seminar to demonstrate how trust between an agent and client is built up one block at a time. During a break, he'll switch the stone brick with one made of foam and wait for the class to return.

When someone asks a question, Tenza will hurl the foam brick across the room. Why?

"It keeps people on their toes and gives them a great reference point for recalling the lesson, said Tenza, who belongs to a handful of magician clubs.

calls "high-tech, high-touch seminars" has fueled incredible growth for Question Master, This year, Tenza said he is booked for 165 programs, his best output since he opened the firm in November, 1988.

Most recently, Tenza developed a unique biweekly training program for the Remerica Real Estate Corp. in Plymouth. Remerica, which specializes in residential properties, opened a month after Tenza and currently has 13 outlets in western Wayne and northern Oakland counties.

"John had been providing sem-inars for us off and on, and finally in February we signed him to do a seminar for our agents every two weeks, for a three-hour session," said Jim Courtney, Remerica's president. "Our feeling is you can never have enough training.

"There's always something you need to work on or refine and the market's always changing. The topics change every session so he might do one on prospecting, or selling the seller, or how to handle cold calls or handling objections.

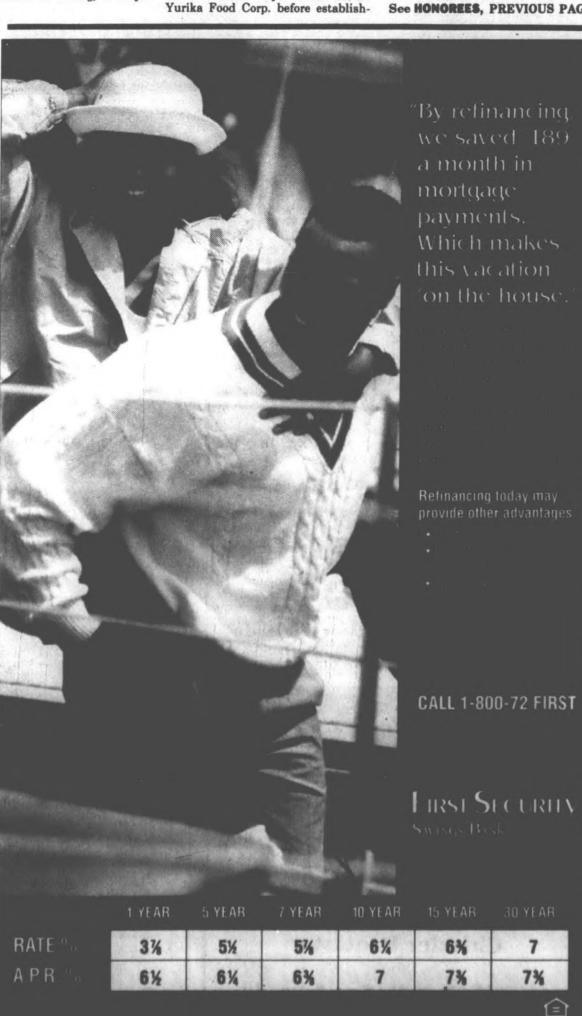

John has been a great asset in our success."

Courtney said between 50 and 70 agents attend each seminar. There is $10 charge for materials for each program.

Success at Remerica and Question Master appear to go hand in hand. Remerica is on target to open 25 branch offices in Michigan by the end of 1994. Franchises, which run $2,995 apiece as compared to $20,000 or more other real estate firms charge, will be expanded to surrounding states in early 1995.

Meanwhile, Tenza will conduct two seminars before the Michigan Association of Realtors in October. His rates are $1,000 for a onehour session, $1,500 for three hours and $2,500 for an all-day af-

"The real estate companies just eat me up," said Tenza. "They know I was out on the street just like them. I've door-knocked over 20,000 homes so I know what it's like to cold-sell. The best advice is to always listen to the client."

EARTHA DEYAMPERT

Is behavior constructive, destructive?

find themselves playing referee to a fighting match between their children or someone else's. It's so easy to start yelling and screaming out of frustration and disappointment.

Sometimes a parent or adult chooses to tune out all explanations as to who started it or how it started - who hit who and so on - and punish all parties involved. If a lamp or perhaps a favorite vase breaks as kids duke it out, that adds more fuel to a fiery situation.

"Look what happened. You kids tear up every-

Whether it's breaking up a fight, cleaning up a child's big mess or pulling or piecing together something smashed or broken, dealing with destructive behavior is annoying and can be exhausting for most parents and caregivers.

Children go through a process of learning to control their actions and dealing with the world around them at an early age. Mobile baby soon learns that teething rings are for sucking and telephone and electrical appliance cords are not. During the early exploration periods, young children will break, rip, chew, bang, take apart and totally destroy a household item.

This behavior may also be displayed by older children, 4, 5, even 7 years or older. For example, a 6-year-old takes apart your toaster or clock. Is this destructive or curiosity at work? Because safety often becomes a factor, first use "red-light" intervention techniques. Remind children of possible electrical shocks. Channel what could be perceived as destructive behavior or actions to a more appropriate use of energy. Give a child something he or she can take apart, explore and put together. An old clock, broken toy or perhaps a variety of junk items you have stashed.

The child who breaks windows playing ball may be labeled destructive when in fact his or her coordination is not quite developed. Patience and understanding helps while children struggle through

Climbing on and breaking items that won't support a child's weight — a weak footrest, wobbly small table or baby bassinet — again should not be viewed automatically as bad or destructive. Children often feel if they gently climb on something it's OK, it will support their weight regardless. Sometimes weight isn't a concern at all.

What about the 9-year-old who frequently knocks things over or slides down stairway railings, weakening and eventually breaking them. No sliding down the rail is a good and reasonable rule. More importantly, if the child breaks the railing, look at ways to involve him or her in repairing or replacing whatever they were responsible for damaging or destroying.

Once in a while destruction is deliberate and usually involves more that one child. Children in a group will do things they wouldn't dream of doing on their own. Together, they will break windows, raid a house under construction and generally cause trouble in the neighborhood. Why?

Blame it on youthful energy when there's nothing better to do, and on every child's desire at some point to be part of "the gang."

You can help him or her face the results of such actions by stressing the rights of others and the cost of repairs (which he or she should help pay

If there's a lot of damage in your community, talk over the problem with other parents, Scoutmasters, youth workers or public health nurses. A destructive gang can often become a constructive group with a little help. Make use of the resources in your community. A parent-teacher association, department of parks and recreation, or school principal can help to organize group trips. Visits to a bakery, fire station, factory, soft drink plant, etc., can be fun and educational.

Help is available if you need it. The first step is to find out why willfully destructive actions are displayed. Problems may start with jealousy of a sibling, unhappiness at school or worry about family conflicts.

Don't hesitate to seek professional help. Talk to your public health nurse, family doctor, clergyman, social worker, guidance counselor at school or community youth worker or advocate. Punishment is not only the answer.

You can also get more information in a series of leaflets about family life with young children from the National Mental Health Association, 1021 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. 22314.

■ When summer comes, people head for the fun, but the American Red Cross hopes that they'll make a slight detour to donate blood. Vacations and holidays take their toll on the blood supply, leaving little room to deal with emergencies.

BY SUE MASON STAFF WRITER

Ah, summer, when everyone's fancy turns to fun in the sun - weekends up north, hot afternoons at the beach, picnics in the park.

But before you head out, take time to help someone in need - the American Red Cross. Every pint counts at the Red Cross, especially during the summer when donations fade as quickly as day lilys bloom.

"What we would like to collect is 5,500 units (pints) of blood per week," said Mark Cornillie of American Red Cross's Blood Services for the Southeast Michigan Region. "We need to be self-sufficient to meet the needs of 58 hospitals. A good week would be 5,000 units, but the number gets closer to 4,000."

The Southeast Michigan Region takes in five counties - Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Washtenaw and St. Clair - that include 4.2 million people. And when those potential blood donors head for the fun, the Red Cross's blood supply takes a nose

As a result, the agency is a net importer of blood. Last year, 15 percent of the blood supply was imported from other regions; At the height of summer, the region was importing 25

Michigan has three Red Cross blood regions, with distribution centers in Detroit, Lansing and Flint. (The western portion of the Upper Penninsula is a part of a Wisconsin blood region.) And while the less-urban areas tend to be better blood donors, it is the heavily populated centration of hospitals that perform surgical procedures requiring a lot of blood.

"A hospital won't do a liver transplant unless they have 50 units of compatible blood on the shelf." Cornîllie said.

In the distribution center, at the agency's regional office in Detroit, bags of red cells, labeled by blood types such as OPOS (O positive) and ABNEG (AB negative), fill bins behind cooler doors. It's early in the summer so the supply is still good, but by the Fourth of July, the bins will be more empty than full, Cornil-

"At that time, it's not a question of if we need to import, but how much," he said."During the summer, we collect a lot less blood so we have a lower inventory. Then if you add in the Fourth of July, when we have almost no collection . . . the shelves are almost dry."

Supply and demand

Part of the problem is the shelf life of the blood. Ninty-nine percent of the blood donated is broken down into components — plasma, platelets and red cells — that have shelf lives ranging from five days to 10 years, depending on how they are stored.

Blood collected in the five-county region winds up at the agency's offices in Detroit for processing. From the receiving dock, the containers head for the component lab, where a centrisoutheast region that has a high con- fuge is used to first separate the plasma and platelets from the red cells, then the plasma from the platelets.

At one time, the demand was for red cells, but with a variety of new treatments, especially for cancer, platelets are the most-sought-after component. But platelets are the most fickle. They prefer to be stored at room temperature in a state of constant of agitation. And even with that they're good for just five days.

10 minutes can be time well spent

The cover to the 1991-92 annual report for the American Red Cross Southeast Michigan Blood Services Region may offer the most telling reason why blood donation is so important: "1991-92 . . . When 237,378 ten minutes meant one million life-

Giving blood is easy and takes just over an hour to do and the reward is knowing that your donation may save

The process includes registering, giving a brief medical history and having your temperature, blood pressure and hemoglobin checked. The actual donation takes less than 10 minutes and is relatively painless. Afterwards, donors are given juice and cookies to help restore blood fluid levels.

Most healthy people 17 years and older who meet basic donor criteria can donate blood every eight weeks. However, those older than age 71 may need a letter from their doctor.

Blood donation can be arranged by calling 494-2800 or (800) 582-4383 for the Detroit area, 971-1500 in Ann Arbor and 985-7117 in Port Huron for an appointment at one of 10 donor centers in the metropolitan area:

She is friendly and wants to communicate with others, so it is easy to understand how difficult it must be for her to make the move to an unfamiliar area away from family and friends. However, I feel this will only be a temporary condition as she has the tools to develop new friends and to become involved in activities with them. She wants her relationships to flow as smoothly as her handwriting does. And she has a sense of humor to add fun and laughter.

Family and security are a most meaningful part of her. She was raised in a home where the mores of society were stressed. She tends to monitor her outer behavior to reflect this training.

She does not play the waiting game too well. She wants immediate gratification of her needs. She is occupied with her own ego and seeks room for the expression of her personality.

She is probably happiest doing things on a grand scale and can sparkle in a group. Large issues are of much interest to her. Details are much less important. Let someone else handle them, she probably feels.

2 Livonia teenagers receive girl scouting's Gold Award

Two Livonia high school students have been awarded the highest honor in girl scouting, the organization's Gold Award.

Rosemary Hamel, an 11th grader at Churchill High School and Brenda Williams, an 11th grader at Stevenson High School, received the award at a recent honors reception. To receive the award, the teens had to learn about themselves, explore careers, build on their talents and skills, develop leadership and conduct a service project in the community.

The Gold Award reflects the personal commitment and dedication to oneself, the community, the world and the future. Only 20 girls in the Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council received the Gold Award this year.

Rosemary is 16 years old and a member of Senior Girl Scout Troop 248. As a service project, she arranged a mother-daughter banquet for her neighborhood.

Plasma may be the most enduring. Once separated from the red cells and platelets, it heads for the freezer, where it's kept until needed. Some plasma is slotted to be sent to a factory where it is broken down into fractions - albumin used to treat certain kidney and liver diseases, or gamma globulin, which contains antibodies and Factor VII used to treat patients with classic hemophilia.

There's two reasons for breaking down blood into its components," Cornillie said. "One is it's more efficient. If you have a cancer patient who needs only platelets, he can get that rather than getting plasma which he doesn't need. And one donation can end up treating several people.'

Careful process

But before the bags even make it to the centrifuges, Red Cross employees weigh them to make sure each one weighs between 520 and 620 grams. Too little blood in the bag is indication of a lack of proper anticoagulants and nutrients and vice versa, if the bag's too full.

Once the blood has been processed, the finished product is placed in a quarantine refrigerator where it is kept until tests are completed on the pilot tubes of blood that were collected during the initial blood donation.

First stop is the Enzyme-Immuno Assay Lab, where most of the tests are done for infectious diseases - HIV-1 and HIV-2, which cause AIDS, ALT (an enzyme that's an indicator of an inflammation of the liver), hepatitis B and C and human T-cell viruses. Blood samples are incubated for each of the tests.

"Actusally, hepatitis was more of a problem for the blood supply than HIV," said Cornillie. "There's a one in 225,000 chance of of getting HIV, and that's a conservative estimate. Up until 10-15 years ago, the chance of getting hepatitis from a transfusion was 10-15 percent. They've come up with a test now to detect it, and that figure is now down to 0.03 percent.

"When you hear that the blood supply is safer than it's ever been, it's because of all the tests being done for things that can be passed on through the blood."

Down the hall in the automated lab, the blood is typed and tested for syphillis. Next door, in the Reference and Consultation Lab. rare types are tracked, with the information shared with blood regions across the country. The lab also maintains a rare blood donor registry, started in December for

African-Americans. "We screen ethnically because rare bloods tend to fall within ethnic groups," Cornillie said. "The factors we test for are genetically transmitted, so that's why we test by racial group."

Final processing

Once the testing is done and the blood found safe, the bags are moved from the quarantine refrigerator to the labeling lab, where the whole blood number, a bar code assigned it when it was donated, is scanned by computer. It tells the worker several things that the testing is complete, the blood is acceptable and which type label should be placed on the bag. Once this is done, it is scanned again to verify proper la-

The last stop is distribution, where orders for blood are handled. As in the labeling lab, the bags are scanned one last time to make sure the right type is being packed for shipment before being put into a insulated box filled with dry ice.

The turn-around time for the donated blood, if all goes well, is 17 hours.

That much time is needed until the blood is ready for distribution, under the best circumstances, Cornillie said. "So it's really essential to have adequate supplies in case of an emergency. It's one of those dangers we face, especially during the summer."

The transformation

To address that problem, the National Red Cross is moving to a national hub system as parts of its "transformation," a reorganization plan instituted by Red Cross president Elizabeth Dole in May 1991. The idea is to make the process of collecting, testing and distributing blood the same across the country.

"Blood collection came out of World War II, and up until 1983, the only tests done were for hepatitis and syphillis," Cornillie said. "Blood wasn't processed into components, so patients were get-

The transformation includes a centralized computer system with the country's 47 blood regions connected to it to share information, standard operating procedures to better regulate the quality of the blood, 14 centralized testing labs, a re-emphasis on training and recertification of employees and a combining of blood chapters and blood regions.

The regions will report daily their needs for various blood types and what they have on hand. The hub, based in St. Louis, Mo., will ship out what's needed within 24 hours.

But even with a lab so close at hand, it won't resolve the summer blood shortage.

"Platelet usage has increased steadily with their use for the treatment of cancer and in bone marrow transplants where patients need transfusions over a period of weeks," Cornille said.

We could potentially have enough red cells but not enough platelets, so do you have a shortage if you have a lack of one component? The answer's yes, if you're the person who may get less of a treatment because of a lack of platelets.

Kids Take Note wows youngsters at park concert

What do purple and green have to do with downtown Plymouth?

One answer is the striped shopping bags offered by the Chamber of Commerce for Plymouth Preferred Customers, the other is a large huggable Barnisaurous dinosaur which was seen greeting small children in Kellogg Park just before the Plymouth Community Arts Council's Wednesday noontime "Music in the Park."

Last week's concert, spon-sored by the Curious Child Shop and Pathways to Learning child day care, featured a newly formed group called, "Kids Take Note.

Anne Shaheen, a mother of four, who is crazy about kids, hooked up with two other moms, Lauren Erickson and Lisa Daley, who love music and decided to form a quality children's musical show which wouldn't cost the price of a nationally known name concert ticket.

"I really didn't want to pay $25 a ticket for my children to enjoy expressive, professional entertainment. 'Kids Take Note' offers them a quality show right here in their own community, for only a few dollars a person," she said. "This was our first time to perform in Kellogg Park. It was like a big family having fun together. The children's eyes were so excited."

This very large, legible handwriting tells us the writer is a social person. She is friendly and wants to communicate with others, so it is easy to understand how difficult it must be for her to make the move to an unfamiliar area away from family and friends. However, I feel this will only be a temporary condition as she has the tools to develop new friends and to become involved in activities with them.

She wants her relationships to flow as smoothly as her handwriting does. And she has a sense of humor to add fun and laughter.

Family and security are a most meaningful part of her. She was raised in a home where the mores of society were stressed. She tends to monitor her outer behavior to reflect this training.

Don't look for this woman behind the scenes. She will be out and about. She has an inner desire to be outstanding and a need for recognition and acceptance.

She does not play the waiting game too well. She wants immediate gratification of her needs. She is occupied with her own ego and seeks room for the expression of her personality.

She is probably happiest doing things on a grand scale and can sparkle in a group. Large issues are of much interest to her. Details are much less important. Let someone else handle them, she probably feels.

Intuition weaves throughout her handwriting. It should be beneficial when meeting new people and situations as well as in her new business venture.

At the risk of sounding paradoxical, I want to mention her optimistic nature first as I feel it is her most natural way of viewing life. However, there is evidence of some down feelings at this particular time. I suspect they may be the result of her recent move. Leaving family and friends behind and facing the problems and challenges of getting settled in a new environment can take its toll.

Although she is open-minded, she is not gullible. Her mind is always working ahead, often finding viable solutions to problems or situations.

Reticence is pervasive throughout her handwriting. This tends to maker her extremely careful about the things she is willing to share with others. Often a quick retort lies in wait when she feels pressured by another person.

A love of beauty, especially the beauty of nature, can be seen here. The gorgeous summer flowers bursting on the scene at this time should provide a measure of pleasure for her.

What do purple and green have to do with downtown Plymouth?

One answer is the striped shopping bags offered by the Chamber of Commerce for Plymouth Preferred Customers, the other is a large huggable Barnisaurous dinosaur which was seen greeting small children in Kellogg Park just before the Plymouth Community Arts Council's Wednesday noontime "Music in the Park."

Last week's concert, sponsored by the Curious Child Shop and Pathways to Learning child day care, featured a newly formed group called, "Kids Take Note."

Anne Shaheen, a mother of four, who is crazy about kids, hooked up with two other moms, Lauren Erickson and Lisa Daley, who love music and decided to form a quality children's musical show which wouldn't cost the price of a nationally known name concert ticket.

"I really didn't want to pay $25 a ticket for my children to enjoy expressive, professional entertainment. 'Kids Take Note' offers them a quality show right here in their own community, for only a few dollars a person," she said. "This was our first time to perform in Kellogg Park. Red cells, with the addition of nutrients (to feed the cells), are kept refrigerated and can be stored for 37-42 days. But by washing the liquid until just the red cells remain and mixing in glycerin, they can be frozen without damaged to the cells for up to 10 years. Plasma may be the most enduring. Once separated from the red cells and platelets, it heads for the freezer, where it's kept until needed. Some plasma is slotted to be sent to a factory where it is broken down into fractions - albumin used to treat certain kidney and liver diseases, or gamma globulin, which contains antibodies and Factor VII used to treat patients with classic hemophilia.

"There's two reasons for breaking down blood into its components," Cornillie said. "One is it's more efficient. If you have a cancer patient who needs only platelets, he can get that rather than getting plasma which he doesn't need. And one donation can end up treating several people."

But before the bags even make it to the centrifuges, Red Cross employees weigh them to make sure each one weighs between 520 and 620 grams. Too little blood in the bag is indication of a lack of proper anticoagulants and nutrients and vice versa, if the bag's too full.

Once the blood has been processed, the finished product is placed in a quarantine refrigerator where it is kept until tests are completed on the pilot tubes of blood that were collected during the initial blood donation.

First stop is the Enzyme-Immuno Assay Lab, where most of the tests are done for infectious diseases - HIV-1 and HIV-2, which cause AIDS, ALT (an enzyme that's an indicator of an inflammation of the liver), hepatitis B and C and human T-cell viruses. Blood samples are incubated for each of the tests.

"Actusally, hepatitis was more of a problem for the blood supply than HIV," said Cornillie. 'There's a one in 225,000 chance of of getting HIV, and that's a conservative estimate. Up until 10-15 years ago, the chance of getting hepatitis from a transfusion was 10-15 percent. They've come up with a test now to detect it, and that figure is now down to 0.03 percent.

"When you hear that the blood supply is safer than it's ever been, it's because of all the tests being done for things that can be passed on through the blood."

Down the hall in the automated lab, the blood is typed and tested for syphillis. Next door, in the Reference and Consultation Lab, rare types are tracked, with the information shared with blood regions across the country. The lab also maintains a rare blood donor registry, started in December for African-Americans.

"The factors we test for are genetically transmitted, so that's why we test by racial group." Final processing

Once the testing is done and the blood found safe, the bags are moved from the quarantine refrigerator to the labeling lab, where the whole blood number, a bar code assigned it when it was donated, is scanned by computer. It tells the worker several things that the testing is complete, the blood is acceptable and which type label should be placed on the bag. Once this is done, it is scanned again to verify proper labeling.

The last stop is distribution, where orders for blood are handled. As in the labeling lab, the bags are scanned one last time to make sure the right type is being packed for shipment before being put into a insulated box filled with dry ice.

The turn-around time for the donated blood, if all goes well, is

The transformation

To address that problem, the National Red Cross is moving to a national hub system as parts of its "transformation," a reorganization plan instituted by Red Cross president Elizabeth Dole in May 1991. The idea is to make the process of collecting, testing and distributing blood the same across the country.

"Blood collection came out of World War II, and up until 1983, the only tests done were for hepa-titis and syphillis," Cornillie said. "Blood wasn't processed into components, so patients were get-ting more whole blood.

"But with the evolution of HIV and blood screening, we realized our process would have to be set up more like a pharmaceutical company with standard procedures so that testing would be uniform throughout the United States.

The transformation includes a centralized computer system with the country's 47 blood regions connected to it to share information, standard operating procedures to better regulate the quality of the blood, 14 centralized testing labs, a re-emphasis on training and recertification of employees and a combining of blood chapters and blood regions.

The regions will report daily their needs for various blood types and what they have on hand. The hub, based in St. Louis, Mo., will ship out what's needed within 24 hours.

"Before it was kind of like feeling around in the dark to find the needed blood products," Cornillie

One of the new blood labs will built adjacent to the Southeast Region's offices in Detroit and process blood for the Lansing, Flint, Toledo, Ohio, and Fort Wayne, Ind., regions. The labs will set up so that blood products can be released in 17 hours.

But even with a lab so close at hand, it won't resolve the summer blood shortage.

'Platelet usage has increased steadily with their use for the treatment of cancer and in bone marrow transplants where patients need transfusions over a period of weeks," Cornille said.

"We could potentially have enough red cells but not enough platelets, so do you have a shortage if you have a lack of one component? The answer's yes, if you're the person who may get less of a treatment because of a lack of platelets.

"People want what they need; they're not worried about our collection problems.'

Kids Take Note wows youngsters at park concert

What do purple and green have to do with downtown Plymouth?

One answer is the striped shopping bags offered by the Chamber of Commerce for Plymouth Preferred Customers, the other is a large huggable Barnisaurous dinosaur which was seen greeting small children in Kellogg Park just before the Plymouth Community Arts Council's Wednesday noontime "Music in the Park."

Last week's concert, sponsored by the Curious Child Shop and Pathways to Learning child day care, featured a newly formed group called, "Kids Take Note."

Anne Shaheen, a mother of four, who is crazy about kids, hooked up with two other moms, Lauren Erickson and Lisa Daley, who love music and decided to form a quality children's musical show which wouldn't cost the price of a nationally known name concert

"I really didn't want to pay $25 a ticket for my children to enjoy expressive, professional entertainment. 'Kids Take Note' offers them a quality show right here in their own community, for only a few dollars a person," she said. "This was our first time to perform in Kellogg Park. It was like a big family having fun together. The children's eyes were so excited."

Shaheen, also a day care pro-

"The album took two, almost three months to produce, and Lauren and Lisa were a big help in putting it together," said Shaheen. The three women have been performing as the group known as "Expressive Interlude" which offers a wide repertoire of easy listening dinner and dancing music for family celebrations and weddings.

This week's concert featured the mellow sounds of the Edinborough Quartet, sponsored by Greg Goodman, owner of Bon Homme restaurant.

"We have such a jewel in Kellogg Park, why not make use of it to enhance the cultural quality of the community," said Goodman. "There was a time when everyone used to sit out on the front porch and watch the town. Today, everyone's on their own private backyard decks, and we miss out on that sense of communihandwriting tells us the writer is a social person. She is friendly am and wants to communicate with others, so it is easy to understand how difficult it must be for her to make the move to an unfamiliar area away from family and friends. However, I feel this will only be a temporary condition as she has the tools to develop new friends and to become involved in activities with them.

She wants her relationships to flow as smoothly as her handwriting does. And she has a sense of humor to add fun and laughter.

Family and security are a most meaningful part of her. She was raised in a home where the mores society were stressed. She tends to monitor her outer behavior to reflect this training.

Don't look for this woman behind the scenes. She will be out and about. She has an inner desire to be outstanding and a need for recognition and acceptance.

She does not play the waiting game too well. She wants immediate gratification of her needs. She is occupied with her own ego and seeks room for the expression of her personality.

She is probably happiest doing things on a grand scale and can sparkle in a group. Large issues are of much interest to her. Details are much less important. Let someone else handle them, she probably feels.

Intuition weaves throughout her handwriting. It should be beneficial when meeting new people and situations as well as in her new business venture.

At the risk of sounding paradoxical, I want to mention her optimistic nature first as I feel it is her most natural way of viewing life. However, there is evidence of some down feelings at this particular time. I suspect they may be the result of her recent move. Leaving family and friends be-

Peace Pastoral

Changing world calls for update

BY DIANE HANSON SPECIAL WRITER

Ten years ago, in May 1983, the U.S. bishops voted to accept the pastoral letter on war and peace by a margin of 236-9. Playing a major role in the drafting of the letter was the Rev. Thomas Gumbleton, auxiliary bishop of the Archdiocese Detroit and pastor of St. Leo Church in Detroit.

Gumbleton was one of the five members of the drafting committee who helped to establish, explore and explain moral and religious teachings of the Catholic Church with regards to such things as the threat of nuclear war, arms control and promoting peace and peaceful interdependence.

But a lot has change in the last decade. "Obviously, we do not live in a world of peace," Gumbleton said during a recent talk at St. Alexander Church in Farmington Hills. "It is a world torn by war but also by violence of many other kinds, not permeated by violence. The Peace Pastoral must be updated. We have to find out how to apply the Peace

Pastoral to where we are in the world now.' The St. Alexander Peace and Justice Committee sponsored the speech by Gumbleton, past president and founding member of Dread for the World and Pax Christie U.S.A. The focus was the updating of the pastoral letter which will be addressed when the National Conference of Catholic Bishops meets later this year.

Gumbleton would would like to see the bishops "make it a very strong statement," and pointed to areas he feels need more emphasis. One relates to the teaching on nuclear weapons, their use and possession as a strategy of deterrent that was originally set forth in Gumbleton said that while many people feel the threat of nuclear war is diminished or eliminated, they have been lulled into a false sense of security as a result of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaties and the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaties.

"Right now there are 48,000 nuclear war heads in the world, poised and ready to be used," Gumbleton warned, adding that even after full implementation of the treaties by the year 2003, there would still be more than 20,000 nuclear war heads deployed in the world, including 9,500 in the U.S. alone.

"That still leaves us with more weapons deployed and ready to be used than we had at the beginning of the Cold War back in the 1960s. We have not come even close to the goal of eliminating nuclear weapons from our planet. They continue to be a threat."

A judgment

In the in the Peace Pastoral, the bishops made judgments. One of the judgments was that there would never be a morally justified use of nuclear weapons. Gumbleton believes that that needs to be emphasized even more

According to the bishop, computer models are being built and tested to enable the president to aim nuclear weapons at Third World nations that threaten the interests of the United States or its allies.

Changing times: Detroit Auxiliary Bishop Thomas Gumbleton believes the American bishops' Peace Pastoral of 1983 is in need of updating with the rapid change in the world during the last decade.

We want to guarantee that we will be able to protect that way of life by protecting what we call our vital resources that are all over the world but and for some reasons we think of as ours and that we have a right to them like the oil in the Persian Gulf," he said. "It seems now even more than in 1983, how could you justify the use of nuclear weapons against Third World nations in order to protect our way of life. It is evil, horrendously evil."

Moral justification

U.S. national policy justifies the possession of nuclear weapons for the purpose of waging war. The Peace Pastoral ruled that out as a moral justification, but justified their possession as a "strategy of deterrent." The threat of mutual destruction was viewed as a mutual deterrent

While the letter said that a strategy of deterrents would be deemed morally acceptable only if part of a process of progressive disarmament, Gumbleton wasn't comfortable with it although he "accepted it as a valid way to try to approach this huge problem."

But even with the implementation of the arms reduction treaties, we will still have the destructive capability of 200,000 Hiroshimas. And with no intent to further reduce the arsenals and no longer a process of progressive disarmament, Gumbleton firmly believes that the strong justification for the strategy no longer exists. Thus, it is immoral and must rejected.

odds with public policy, but he believe there is no other direction. If President Bill Clinton ends the moratorium on nuclear testing with the dissolution of the non-proliferation treaty, established in 1970 and signed by 157 nations, "there will be an open effort on the part of many, many nations, large and small to develop nuclear weapons because they will all feel that that is the only way that they will have a chance if war breaks outs," he said.

"The moral problems are greater now than they were in 1983 and the danger to our planet is even greater than it was in 1983 because of the danger of proliferation and the use of these weapons by many nations in a short time," he added.

'Just war'

Another point of contention for Gumbleton is the theology of "just war." The theology of non-violence was developed in the fifth century and has continued in the Christian community for 1500 years. Based on the fact that Jesus rejected violence, the "just war" theology contends that because we live in a world where we can't always control what happens around us, if very strict conditions are met, the presumption against violence may be overridden and killing can be justified.

The theology also contends that only com-batants should be the targets, not non-combatants, which no longer is the case. Referring to the Persian Gulf War, Gumbleton quoted Pope John Paul II: "I myself, on the occasion of the recent tragic war in the Persian Gulf, repeatedly cried, 'Never again, war. No, never again, war,' which destroys the lives of innocent people, teaches how to kill, throws into upheaval even the lives of those who do the killing, and leaves behind a trail of resentment and hatred, thus, making it all the more difficult to find a just solution to the very problem that provoked the war."

There are presently 3.5 billion people inhabiting this planet and nearly 2 billion live in desperate, dehumanizing conditions. Of those, 1 billion do not have even the barest necessities for human life and are dying at an alarming rate, Gumbleton pointed out.

People are literally starving to death "and yet this is a world where we grow more than enough food to feed 6 billion people," he said. 'Something is drastically wrong when we have enough resources in the world so every person on this planet could live a fully human life and yet, the majority of the people are living in dehumanizing or violent poverty that is killing them."

Gumbleton threw a challenge out to the church: "What if the Catholic bishops committed themselves to a hunger and water fast? If each diecese across the country, if the bishop of the diocese would call his people and lead them in that kind of a fast for seven days, no food, only water, what a dramatic way of helping all of us to realize and to experience, to some extent what is happening to the poor in our country and the world

And possibly Pope John Paul summed it up in his Peace Day statement of Jan. 1: "If you want peace, reach out to the poor."

What freedom and justice are all about

How many remember the red, white and blue crepe paper woven through the wheels of a bicycle on the Fourth of July? In the neighborhood where I rode my twowheeler, this decoration was

REV. ROBERT SCHADEN as much a part of Independence Day as a tree with lights was a part of Christmas. The crepe paper treatment has not graced the mountain bike that I use today — perhaps I could consider it this year for old time's Another thing has also changed as the Independence Days have come and gone over the years. I have come to realize that although the trappings, the decorations and the fireworks all have their place, they were never meant to take the place of the meaning of at all.

What is this day called The Fourth all about anyway? What is freedom about and what does it mean to be American? In time of war, the answers to such questions come with gusto, even if at times missing the mark. But in relative peace time the question is sometimes not reflected on often enough.

When the fireworks lighted up the sky in New York Harbor a few years ago at the birthday celebration of that magnificent lady known as the Statue of Liberty, I wondered if perhaps the hoopla had taken over for an appreciation of what she is all about. That thought returned to mind when I recently read Marianne Williamson's observation ("A Woman's Worth"). She suggested that the Statue on Ellis Island is like many women. Too many Americans are more fond of looking at her or of showing her off than they are of listening to her.

The message is engraved at the base of the Lady of the Torch, words from the pen of another woman by the name of Emma Lazarus. The words are as challenging as they are inviting: "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to be free

Shortly before he was killed Robert Kennedy wrote about these huddled masses: "Our idealof America is a nation in which justice is done, and therefore, the continued existence of injustice - of unnecessary, inexcusable poverty in this favored of nations this knowledge erodes our ideal of America, our basic sense of who and what we are. It is, in the deepest sense of the word, demoralizing to all of us."

Anyone who agrees with Kennedy on this matter understands the meaning of that poem, which speaks its message from the Lady on the Isle. Poverty is not only something that pains the life of the poor, it is something that diminishes the identity of all Americans. Freedom is about a whole lot more than firecrackers or parades or even crepe paper on bicycle wheels.

Real freedom is only partially personal, because as long as someone around me is not free then my nation is not free, and in so far as my nation is not free. I am at least somewhat enslaved.

Justice denied to even one person in a society is a threat to the illusion of justice enjoyed by anyone in that society. Being a brave and loyal American is about more than a willingness to join the parade and cheer about going abroad to fight for freedom. It is also joining a parade that marches for the freedom of those among us who do not have it because they do not have what we sing about and what we wave flags

Whether we wave a flag or watch the fireworks may not be nearly as important as whether we take the time to reflect within ourselves and share with our children on the collective reality of what freedom and justice are really all about.

Perhaps if they grow up more aware of who the huddled masses are and how important it is to welcome them into the circle of freedom and the taste of justice, they may help to create a nation in which more people have reason to put red, white and blue crepe papers in the spokes of their bicy-full month of summer, is upon us. Hot. Humid. Oppressive. These are just a few of the adjectives used to describe the seventh month of the year; the month Julius Caesar modestly named after himself. Another thought should also cross the mind of the prudent: sunscreen.

July, the first

In reality, sunscreen should have crossed your mind two months ago, for the May sun has as much potential for producing a severe sunburn as the July sun. The higher the altitude, the more direct the sunlight and the greater damage the sun can produce.

Consider: the altitude of the sun on July 15 at "noon" (actually 1:40 p.m. EDT) will be 69 degrees above the horizon. This will be 24 days after June 21, which was the longest day of the year and the official start of summer, when the sun was at its highest.

Well, 24 days before the start of summer, on May 28, the sun's altitude at "noon" was also 69 degrees. The difference is in May the sun was gaining altitude, while in July it is losing it.

The culprit in producing sunburn is ultraviolet (UV) light; light that is invisible to the eye, but very efficient at cooking exposed flesh. Scientists have identified two kinds of ultraviolet light, unimaginatively known as UV-A and UV-B.

New studies seem to indicate that UV-A light is a more severe hazard than its UV-B cousin; UV-A seems to be present year-round, and its intensity does not depend on the sun's altitude or the victim's latitude. Consequently some scientists are beginning to think that it would be a good idea to wear sunscreen all the time! (On the other hand, other scientists claim sunscreen inhibits the body's internal self-defense mechanism; the release of pigment that shows up on the skin as a sun

Lest you think that the hazards of the sun are greatly exaggerated, consider Australia, the Land Down Under. This continent, which spreads across the Tropic of Capricorn, has earned the dubious distinction as the "Skin Cancer Capital" of the world. The "sun worshippers" of Australia are coming down with melanoma at an alarming rate.

Meanwhile, back in Michigan, the night sky in July will offer a variety of celestial sights: all five of the naked-eye planets will be visible; the moon, Venus, Aldebaran and the Pleiades star cluster will form a beautiful grouping in mid-month, and there will be a meteor shower, albeit a weak one. Mercury, Venus and Saturn will be morning planets; Mars and Ju-piter will be visible after sunset.

The bright orange-red star nine degrees to the right of the moon on the evening of July 1 will be Antares, the "heart" of Scorpius the scorpion. By the end of the month the moon will be passing this star for a second time.

Full Moon officially will occur at 7:45 p.m. on July 3. The moon will be located opposite the sun, will rise in the southeast shortly before the sun sets in the northwest, and will be visible all night.

The moon reflects the light of the sun, and when it is opposite the sun it is fully lighted.

The July full moon was often called the Thunder Moon or Hay Moon by Native American Indians. The full moon is often blamed for a variety of maladies, however causing melanoma is not one of them.

The earth will be at aphelion (maximum distance from the sun) on July 4. We will be separated by 152,091,000 kilometers (94,504,966 miles). It is surprising to some people to learn that the northern hemisphere has its warmest weather when we are at our greatest distance from the sun. (We are at our closest in January, which is when the southern hemisphere has summer.) It is the tilt of the earth's axis, not its distance from the sun, that is responsible for the seasons and temperature.

Doll magazine tracks a booming form of art

f you think dolls are just kid stuff these days, think again.

Most still are manufactured simply to delight a child, of course. But a fast-growing number are considered world-class works of art - and are often accompanied by price tags equally classy.

But — tony price tags or no — it appears that the number of serious doll art collectors throughout the world is growing like Topsy.

Not surprisingly, numerous books, magazines and other periodicals have sprung up to reflect and support this far-flung interest.

One of the leaders in the field, Contemporary Doll Magazine, is headquartered at Scott Publications in Livonia. Originally founded by Ernie and Lois Scott more than 30 years ago, the company was bought by Muskegon educator Robert Keeson in 1983; CDM debuted seven years later, with 3,000 subscribers. Today, the subscription list runs to approximately 15,000, with overall readership estimated at more than 35,000.

Wide-ranging content

"At CDM, our mission is to promote and discuss the contemporary doll market and what is being made today on every level," says managing editor Barbara Campbell.

"Our readers are doll collectors and dollmakers everywhere. Generally, they're well-educated, with a fair amount of disposable income. They're mostly women - although there are some men who read CDM - and most readers are between 35

A great amount of interest in dolls and doll collecting is evident throughout Michigan, says Campbell. (Reflecting this marked interest, at least four doll shows already are scheduled for July in Michigan.)

"Riki Schaffer, whose doll shop is in West Bloomfield, is responsible for starting and supporting much of the interest in original dolls in Michigan," Campbell says, adding that one intensely committed individual often "gets the ball rolling" in a given area and provides a support system for interest there. (The Riki Schaffer Gal lery, dealing in one-of-a-kind dolls, is at The Boardwalk, 6897 Orchard Lake Road.)

According to Campbell, the ball got rolling in the U.S. about 15 years ago when Chicagoan Tom Boland, an artist's representative, discovered the unique dolls of Israeli dollmaker Anna Avigail Brahms in a Paris gallery. Encouraged by Boland, Brahms brought her work to the U.S. in 1980 and set up a studio near Boston. A kind of "doll mania" developed rather quickly here for her finely detailed, dreamy-eyed "ladies," and the doll art industry in America was on its way.

'Joy to behold'

Even if you think you have little or no interest in dolls, an issue of CDM can be a joy to behold and a kind of work of art in itself. For other artists, photographers, crafters, designers or popular culture buffs, it can hold special appeal.

The colorful, glossy monthly contains a lively mix of artists, profiles, photo stories on recent conventions and shows all over the world, an upcoming events calendar, a money management column, plus information on new products and ser-

But the artwork and outstanding photography form the real heart of CDM. A black-and-white photo section called "Debut" is devoted to the work of up-and-coming doll artists. Each issue also offers a full-sized, pull-out color poster of a contemporary doll-of-the-month. CDM's "Gallery of Contemporary Dolls" is the publication's centerpiece, spotlighting the artistry of today's foremost dollmakers. Highlights of the upcoming August issue include a profile on world-renowned artist, Lisa Lichtenfels, whose stunningly lifelike work once caused her to be pulled over by police after an unnerved bystander reported she had stuffed a "dead body" into her car trunk. Her cloth dolls, priced at $1,200 to $5,000 and collected by such rich-and-famous types as actress Demi Moore, are highly labor-intensive, sometimes requiring as much as 18 hours to complete a single, carefullyconcealed seam.

Another highlight: A story on Pennsylvania artist Linda Horn, who creates vividly costumed, Victorian dolls from cornhusks. (While the dolls from her family's cornfield don't cost an arm and a leg, they do go for as much as $3,000.)

The Gallery" features a bespectacled porcelain doll named "Alvin," crafted in a limited edition by Jackson artist Melissa McCroy.

The issue goes on sale at selected newsstands early next week. For back issues or subscription information, call 1-800-458-8237.

Seasons sway Garden City painter

Winter, spring, summer and autumn bloom on the canvases of Norma McQueen in a retrospective of works continuing through July 30 in Livonia City Hall.

The Garden City artist exhibits 45 works in a "Retrospective." The Livonia Arts Commission-spon sored show continues through July 30 in the Livonia City Hall lobby, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

"Just before spring, I start to get fidgety.' McQueen said. "In fall, I like to do fall colors, the fall leaves."

Acrylic dominates the show, which spans a period of 14 years. But oil, watercolor, pastel and colored pencil also are represented. Landscape, floral, still life and animals cheer the viewer in this colorful display focusing on nature.

"I'm appreciating nature more as I mature. I'm looking at the veins on the leaves like on the caladium: the colors, the values, shapes and tex-tures," McQueen said. "You kind of take things for granted when you're young. As you mature, you begin to appreciate God's creation."

McQueen's garden serves as a major influence on her painting. Tiger lilies, white petunias, pansies, willows and money trees offer a summer full of inspiration. "It takes me a long time, all summer to paint them," McQueen said, "but it doesn't matter. It's the end result that counts."

Large, lush leaves found in the rain forests of Martinique dominate "Caribbean," a 36- by 48-inch acrylic on canvas. On a cruise last winter, McQueen snapped dozens of reference photographs, which she then clipped around the canvas to study while painting.

"I'm impressed by background colors and contrast," McQueen said. "When something catches my eyes, I study it and make notes, sometimes on the back of a business card or whatever I have with me."

McQueen took her first oil painting class 14 years ago. Not until 1990, however, could she pursue painting seriously. It was then she decided to take an early retirement after working 37 years in the administrative offices of Henry Ford Hospital in Troy.

Initially, McQueen studied the basics of painting and drawing with Westland artist Saundra Weed, an art instructor at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. Since then, she has taken workshops in life drawing with Howard Weingarden of Farmington Hills, all painting with Dove Hills, oil painting with Doug McCrumb of Livonia and portraits in pastel with Laurel Raisanen of

It started more than a century ago when an amateur entomologist brought the gypsy moth from Europe to America. His grand scheme - cross the silk moth with the gypsy moth to create a new silk fiber. That plan went awry, but not before gypsy moths escaped his laboratory and a new scourge was born the defoliation of American forests by the gypsy moth caterpillar. "We can't eradicate the gypsy moth

- it's here to stay. We have to learn to manage it and live with it," said Dr. Debbie McCullough, assistant professor of entomology at Michigan State University.

"We're on the western leading edge of infestation. It will probably spread north and west - areas like Cadillac, Baldwin, Traverse City and Presque Isle. It's not just a forest pest. It's also flaring in southeastern Michigan urban areas.

Many Oakland County communities have infestation problems and the moths are winging their way into Wayne County.

Wood carvings on display at the Livonia Civic Center Library will give spectators a glimpse of what the Livonia Wood Carvers Club has to offer later this summer.

The exhibit, in the first- and second-floor showcases, includes more than 50 handcrafted pieces made by 22 of the club's 250 members. It runs Friday, July 2, to Friday, July 30, during regular library hours. The library is on Five Mile, east of Farmington Road.

After the display, carvers will take their wares to the 18th annual Livonia Wood Carving Show, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 7-8, at Eddie Edgar Sports Arena, 33841 Lyndon at Farmington Road, Livonia. The free show, sponsored by Livonia Parks and Recreation, will draw 140 local and outof-state carvers. It's the club's biggest yearly event, with 46 categories of wood art, demonstrations and awards.

"The library show's just a preview of what will be at the big show. We want people to see both," said Ron Morin, a club director and instructor.

Library visitors will get a look at rough-cut carvings fash-ioned in traditional folk-art style and "finished" pieces that are sanded, stained or painted.

The display, arranged by the Livonia Arts Commission and the Livonia Civic Center Library, includes lifelike animals, miniatures, figures, children's toys, wildlife, birds and abstracts. Pieces are carved or whittled in mahogany, walnut, butternut, white pine, basswood and other woods.

Observerland exhibitors include Pat Howell, Tom Centofanti, Conrad Schwab, Louis Moretto, Jim Beresford, Ron Hill, Tom Roucoli, Nick Zlonkevich, Barney Robinson, Pat Lea and Ron Morin, all of Livonia; Gerald Grusendorf. Bob Donakowski, Grace Dennis and Bob Brooks, all of Redford Township; and Dave Geistler of Garden City.

The quality of the woodworking is excellent, said Livonia arts commissioner Lee Alanskas. "The work represents Farmington Road. various carving styles. It illustrates the carver's ability and artistic interpretation.'

Morin, a retired toolmaker, started wood carving "in a big way" in 1982 after buying a pocket knife from a friend.

"He gave me a blank piece of white pine and I carved a dog with dimension. I kept on going from there. It's a real turn-on," said Morin, who makes his own carving instruments and teaches other carvers how to sharpen tools.

He carves mostly realistic wildlife and miniatures (some from peach pits) and an occasional abstract. His carved robin is on permanent display in the Livonia Civic Center

Using a chainsaw, he recently carved a two-foot bow ornament for his great-nephew's sailboat/treehouse. The adults liked it so much, they brought the piece inside to use as a home accessory.

'There's no end to creativity and what you can carve," he Morin's wife, Rita, said many showgoers can't keep their hands off the realistic work: "In an open show, people need to touch the animals because they can't believe the painted wood isn't fur or feathers.'

Bob Brooks, Livonia Wood Carvers Club president, took up carving 12 years ago when his television broke. Today, he belongs to six carving clubs. He's also president of the newly founded Michigan Wood Carvers Association, which is trying to change the term "wood carving" to "wood sculpture." He'd also like to see woodworking nationally recognized as fine art.

With my group work and paperwork, I hardly have time for carving," said Brooks, who's best known his wood-burning art and carved dogs and songbirds.

Livonia Wood Carvers Club formed about 20 years ago after a handful of male carvers and whittlers got together at the Livonia Senior Citizen Center. Today, its diverse membership includes youths, senior citizens, families and husband-wife carvers from around the area.

The group meets at 7 p.m. Tuesdays and 9 a.m. Thursdays at the Livonia Senior Citizen Center, Five Mile and Said Brooks: "We're a social, artistic and informative group. We're a tight-knit bunch, but we want people to stop in and sit down. We'll show you how to carve. We're one group that likes sharing secrets.'

"Caterpillar hair can cause skin irritation," McCullough said. "Insect droppings can get real messy. (Healthy) trees can take some defoliation, but people panic when they see it."

Thirty-one counties are involved in the Michigan Department of Agriculture's suppresion program. Others do biological control. Cool weather slows down the cycle. Warmer weather makes the blue and red dotted caterpillars thrive.

"More damage occurs later in the summer," McCullough said.

Low-level populations are starting to appear in the Upper Peninsula. "People transport the egg masses on their vehicles. They take the egg masses home on their cars or campers," she said.

Specialists try to determine the leading edge of the infestation and the transition zone. In the transition zone, extensive trapping and surveying occurs.

"One new option includes reproducing the female sex chemical (which attracts males for mating) into beads and flakes to distribute everywhere with the idea of disrupting the male," McCullough said.

Another option is introducing a tiny wasp parasite into the gypsy moth egg masses, with the end result being the host caterpillar im-plodes. "Like the movie 'Alien',"

McCullough said. Predatory beetles are a natural enemy, but they can't keep pace with the resilient gypsy moth.

"The gypsy moth is going to be here," McCullough said. "I don't think there's going to be a silver bullet. Making and keeping our forests healthy will mean less likelihood of infestation.

Gypsy moths can affect local environmental balances. The forest makeup of New England is not the same now as it was when gypsy moths first invaded a century ago. All of New England and the mid-Atlantic states have been affected. Moths have been found on recreational vehicles and in campgrounds as far west and south as Wisconsin, Washington, Iowa, California, Alabama, Georgia and Missouri.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture and the affected states are using several techniques to fight the infestation:

■ the use of sex lure traps to keep track of pest population buildups and spread.

Tiny caterpillars: A one-inch measure from a standard ruler shows how tiny gypsy moth caterpillars are just after the eggs hatch in early May. They linger around the egg cluster for several days, then climb trees or other objects, trailing silken threads as they move. When the larvae reach the top of a tree, they don't feed but drop on silken threads and are dispersed by wind.

Livonia crafter hooked on rug-related art

BY JANICE TIGAR-KRAMER SPECIAL WRITER

His recent undertaking is a 12-color hooked rug of the United States that measures 4by-7 feet. It hangs beside another of Hooker's finished proj-- a 5,045-piece jigsaw puzzle of a German castle.

Hooker finished the U.S. map in about three months. It's mostly done in primary colors and includes an inset of Alaska and Hawaii. He made a pattern from an enlarged National Geographic map, then started hooking from West to East.

"I just have to keep busy," said Hooker, 75, who's surprisingly dexterous in spite of arthritis in his right hand. "Rugmaking is a winter hobby. When the gardening season's over, this is what I do inside." Though Hooker's well . .

hooked on the rug art, he insists his interest in the craft has nothing to do with his Welsh surname.

The 29-year Livonia resident started rugmaking 15 years ago when his wife, Alice, made her first rug. Since then, he's made several rugs for their home and has given many hooked crafts as gifts. He has even finished projects for hobbyists who run out of patience.

"He tackles every rug like an assembly project," said Alice Hooker. "I hook one row at a time. Cliff takes four or five at

Faith and passion: Hometowners sell it better

BY GERALD FRAWLEY

Hometown Realtors - can they sell a home better than a Realtor who lives elsewhere?

Owner/broker Joanne Scott of Century 21 J. Scott Inc. in Garden City thinks the hometown Realtor has a decided advantage over an imported counterpart.

The big reason? Faith and passion for the community.

"I really do believe (it's better to be a Realtor in one's own community)," she said.

Realtors don't just sell houses, they sell homes and communities, Scott said. In order to sell a community, a Realtor really needs to

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't have a lot of faith in Garden City.

A realtor should be a booster for a community, Scott said, and a person who lives in an area is better equipped to know a region.

Scott said it's not impossible for an outsider to know a region, but the hometown realtor has a decided advantage.

"If someone asks how are the schools, I can say I have four children and they all went through Garden City schools and they are all working and productive." Scott added she also has grandchildren in Garden City Schools.

"(Hometown realtors) know the nuances of their own area.

"House values change from one block to the next; there are little areas within an area that command more money than others,"

A hometown realtor also has an advantage when it comes to listing a particular house. Through social connections and word of mouth, a hometown realtor is much more likely to know when a homeowner is considering selling.

A lot of real estate listings are based on referrals, Hannett add-

Betsy Lassanske, Prudential Great Lakes Realty vice president of corporate and associate services, said when she holds orientation for people considering real estate as a career, she tells them out front it's best to work near your home.

That doesn't necessarily mean in your own city," she added. A "community" may span city borders to encompass areas where similar people live.

The reason for this is simple: A person who is just starting in the real estate business is learning a new career and can't afford the additional worry of learning a new community.

"It's easier to translate your enthusiasm for a community if you live there," she said.

Prospective buyers constantly probe realtors for information on businesses, entertainment, recreational opportunities and other points of interest to help them decide if they want to buy a certain house.

A hometown Realtor can more readily answer such questions, she said.

Lassanske said not being a hometown Realtor is not neces sarily bad, however.

"I wouldn't say you shouldn't list your house with a Realtor because they don't live there."

The passion and boosterism that a hometown Realtor brings to a job is always good, but it can be duplicated by a Realtor from another town, she said.

"If a home buyer is sold on a person's professionalism, where the realtor lives will not matter as

Our condomithe operation of the associanium association is in a bind because the developer has sold enough just units to keep him in control of our hotel/ condo. Thus, we the purhave? chasers have no effective administrative

Apparently this is a widespead abuse among developers of hotel and other resort condos in northern Michigan. You have to assess the legal and political aspects of the condo project and find out why the developer has been able to maintain control of the associa-

The developer may be abusing his contractual obligations to the co-owners, which, presumably, were to sell the condominium out to purchasers who were not controlled by the developer. There may be other management companies prepared to lease out units at the condo for a smaller fee.

The developer's threat to seek reprisals against co-owners who do not use him are both illegal and unconscionable. The co-owners who are being affected by the developer's abuses should band together, retain counsel and, if necessary, pursue the developer with all legal and administrative remedies available.

Someone in our subdivision wants to open a garage business within the sub. The member claims that our restrictions are not enforceable because other residents have similar businesses. Can we legally stop this person?

Chances are you can stop the garage business even though other businesses are being conducted in the sub, as long as the other businesses are service-related and not noticeable to passersby. Courts don't seem to have a problem with businesses that are conducted from within the confines of the condo or home without any detriment to the rest of the sub.

It would be a good idea to amend your documents to specifically define the kinds of servicerelated businesses that can be conducted from the home without breaching the single-family residence requirement.

Building a business park

Plymouth-based R.A. DeMattia Company, along with Morgan-Mitsubishi Development and Signature Associates, is developing a 393-acre Washtenaw Business Park in Ypsilanti, located off I-94 at Huron Street. Already in place on the site are a McDonald's, the Radisson Hotel and a golf course. The park will feature lots on both sides of Huron. There are currently 23 platted acres with three available lots on the east side zoned commercial. There are 72 platted acres on the west side (12 lots) zoned light industrial, with some retail near the entrance. More than 100 Realtors showed up last Tuesday for re-introduction

Remodelers certified

Robert Budman of Budman's Home Improvements in Southfield, John Glister of A-1 Construction and Remodeling in Warren and Gary Burtka of Burtka Brothers in Allen Park have gained Certified Remodeler status from the National Association of Remodeling Industry. To gain certification, the trio passed an eight-hour written exam covering 18 different technical and business man-Budman agement areas. They also have to have served the industry for a minimum of five

Building Trade School

Dennis Green Advertising of Farmington Hills has been appointed by the American Building Trade School (ABT) to handle its public relations. ABT operates four schools in the metro Detroit area that train unemployed and homeless inner city men and women in building skills such as painting, roofing, dry walling, masonry and rough carpentry skills. Dennis Green's initial assignment will be to prepare television spots and collateral materials.

Home building workshops

Builder Jim Nawrot from Livonia will be presenting two free introductory home building seminars in the area. He will be in Bloomfield Hills on July 8 and in Livonia on July 11. He also has scheduled seminars in Flint (July 10) and Ann Arbor (July 13). These workshops are four-hour consumer-based educational programs designed to answer all relative home building questions and teach new and experienced home purchasers how to effectively deal with subdivision builders and contractors. For times and locations, call Nawrot at 313-462-0944, or mail to 16380 Aldrich Ct., Livonia, 48154

What a view: Luxury condominiums at Woodlands at Deer Creek in Plymouth Township back up to a 17-acre wooded nature preserve. Said builder Bill Steiner: "Take a look out there. That, in essence, is a virgin strand of timber. It would have been a crime to go in there and tear it out."

A 'View-tiful' concept

■ A Plymouth Township couple the couple concluded. has succeeded with a rather novel condominium development concept: Less is more more attractive and more marketable.

By Doug Funke

Bill Steiner and Carol Bond, owners of Deercreek Building Co. in Plymouth Township, found that with their condominium development -Woodlands at Deer Creek - fewer is better

The husband-and-wife team plans to build 20 luxury units on just over seven acres abutting a wooded nature preserve at the north end of the subdivision off Powell Road.

They're building only 20 units even though the zoning code allows up to

Fewer upscale detached condos would better fit the existing neighborhood of some 100 large, single-family homes priced at $300,000 to $400,000,

"We felt what went in here was very important for the overall sub and caliber of houses," Steiner said. "We went backward, so to speak, but we feel we improved.

"These lots all stayed vacant until they saw what we were going to be doing," Bond said of nearby single family houses. "We felt it (32 condos) would hurt single family.

Condominium prices start at $275,000. There's a $25,000 premium for lots that back directly to the woods. The 17-acre woods was another consideration in the decision to actually build fewer condos than was al-"The amount of stripping for 32 required that we'd have to take a great number of trees out," Steiner said.

In retrospect, the developer is pleased with how the condos turned out even though Deercreek wasn't the first choice to build them.

Builders stay optimistic despite flat 1st quarter

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

Home building activity through the first three months of this year remained relatively flat, but there were signs of a pick-up in early

Single-family housing permits issued January through March in southeastern Michigan almost mirrored the activity level during the first quarter of 1992.

Some 2,610 units were permitted in Oakland, Wayne, Macomb, Washtenaw (Ann Arbor), Monroe, St. Clair, Lapeer, Lenawee, Livingston and Genesee (Flint) counties compared to 2,580 units last year, an increase of 1.1 percent.

The three-month figure for 1993 ranked southeast Michigan 15th nationally just behind Riverside-San Bernardino, Calif. (2,662 permits), and just ahead of San Francisco (2,543).

The numbers were compiled by U.S. Housing Markets, a Livoniabased research publication of Lomas Mortgage USA, a national servicer of residential mortgages.

First-quarter activity here also almost mirrored the national trend, U.S. Housing Markets re-

Builders throughout the United States pulled some 201,800 single family permits during the first three months, a 1.5 percent gain over the comparable period in

However, the pace quickened in April, the publication reported.

Buyers swarmed out of the their winter hibernation and pushed new home sales to a monthly rate not experienced since July of 1989," said Gary H. Kell, executive vice president for Lomas Mortgage.

"It was the best April sales rate since 1987," Kell said. "The buying explosion suggested that consumers may be dropping their defensive posture.

"Much of housing's resurgence in the past year and a half has come from the pent up aspirations of first-time buyers who were frustrated during the late 1980s by double-digit interest rates and inflated housing prices.

"That backlog of entry-level demand has been largely satisfied, and continued progress in the housing market depends on strength in the job market - new jobs being created and existing jobs made more secure by an expanding economy," Kell said.

Fred Capaldi, a Rochester Hills builder and president of the Builders Association Southeastern Michigan, said he also noticed an increase in building activity here in April.

"I think what really hurt us this year was bad weather - cold, snowy then rain," he said.

Bolder looks on home fronts

Exterior colors don't dart in and out of fashion like those on the inside, but there's definitely something new in the way homeowners are mixing paint for their homes. The key word is more — more color and more adventurous combinations.

2F(F) *

"It used to be that an exterior color scheme was two colors: a body color and a trim," says Patricia Verlodt, president of Color Marketing Group, an association that forecasts color trends. "Then we started seeing people using three colors and now it's four.

"If there are 20 houses on the street that look just like yours," says Verlodt, "you can set yourself apart by tasteful use of color. You want to be unusual without being outlandish, different without being garish."

Even a color novice can put together a distinctive color scheme. To avoid a garish look, remember that a livelier palette doesn't necessarily mean a brighter one.

"Neutrals will always be the heart of the palette for the exterior," she says, "because direct sunlight has the obvious effect of making colors look brighter." Even accent colors need to be slightly muddied so they don't become neon when the sun shines.

Louis Aubert, a New Orleans designer and colorist and a member of the American Society of Interior Designers, who describes himself as "a rabid color fan," has made a specialty of helping homeowners become more adventurous with color. He agrees homeowners are getting bolder with their use of exterior colors.

"People are becoming much more aware of their homes, and they are beginning to embrace color," says Aubert. "In older neighborhoods, especially in the inner city, it's a badge of honor to paint your home with several colors. It shows your commitment to your home."

Create the illusion of more space in your kitchen

If you would like to squeeze a little more living and working space out of your kitchen, here are some ideas from Country Kitchen Ideas magazine that may work:

■ Let your table do double duty as an island work surface and as a spot for eating.

A monochromatic color scheme makes a kitchen look bigger.

■ Keep the color palette light (pastels, ecru, and white) and limited (two or three tones). The space-expanding effect is enhanced if the cabinets, counters and walls are all the same color.

■ Direct the eye upward with vertical lines in the cabinets and wall treatments, or create interest on top of the cabinets. Vaulted ceilings also pull the eye upward.

■ Eliminate clutter from countertops, walls and floors. Select simple patterns for surface materials.

■ Use elements that make the most of space: window treatments that don't extend beyond the window frame, recessed lighting fixtures and appliances that align flush with cabinets.

Create an illusion of space with open shelves instead of upper cabinets or use glass-front doors. Be careful not to clutter these shelves.

■ Replace an interior wall with a peninsula and overhead cabinets. The peninsula adds storage and counter space, plus it opens up the room.

■ Annex nearby space gone to waste. A pantry can fit inside a cleaning closet. An appliance niche can bump out into an attached garage.

Reflective surfaces, such as metal and mirrors, make a space seem larger.

TATE BUILDERS

If you're interested in trying out new colors for your home, Aubert shares advice on how to get started.

"Look at your house objectively," he says.
"What are its best features and its worst features?"

Too many homeowners, he says, accent mechanical features such as rain gutters and downspouts. "Those are things you want to lose," he says. Gutters, service entries, even an unattractive garage door will seem to disappear if you paint them the same background color as the house.

On the other hand, attractive details like nice moldings over the window— will come alive if you paint them a contrasting color, even if the contrast is subdued.

Before choosing colors, Aubert suggests that you study photos of your house from all sides, including detail shots of the front door, dormer windows, gables and other special-interest areas.

"Photos make you focus," he says. "Look at them carefully. Look at the givens — exposed stone or brickwork and the colors in those materials."

It's a matter of personal preference, he says, whether you go for a monochromatic look, with subtle changes in color or high contrast. Both can be exciting. For example, on one shotgun-style cottage, Aubert achieved a subtle, playful effect with gray body color, white trim and shutters painted a grayed mauve. The porch decking was striped in two shades of gray with mauve undertones. On another small cottage of similar character, he went for a more high-energy scheme, counterpointing pink body color against white trim and lavender and teal accents.

Aubert recommends painting samples directly on the house — not on plywood — and putting a patch on each side to see how it is affected by light from different directions.

Capaldi predicted in January that housing starts this year would approach 13,000 in an area more compact than that surveyed by U.S. Housing Markets.

It's still do-able, he said, even though some would-be buyers are hedging their bets.

"It seems to me to be a little bit of cautiousness," Capaldi said. "Maybe they're concerned about what the tax law might do, what the direction of the economy might be. People are very interested. They're getting all their numbers together, thinking.
