PROPERTY TAX AX?

Legislation passed this week by the state Senate and House would eliminate property tax as a source of revenue for the schools. Michigan schools spend nearly $9 billion a year on their operations. $5.6 billion comes from property taxes while $3.5 billion is provided through state aid. The legislation would not affect county, city, township, village, community college, special assessment or school bond property taxes.

$3.5 billion in state aid maintained.

Schools say '93 millage still needed

In a surprise move, state legislators voted to eliminate local property taxes as the chief means of operating public schools.

They didn't decide how the lost $5.6 billion in local revenue would be replaced. Most likely candidates: an income tax increase, a voter-approved sales tax increase, liquor and cigarette tax increases.

"All of this is just pie in the sky," said Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, after the Senate's 11 p.m. vote Tuesday. Faxon predicted "incredible harm" to suburban districts because some lost revenue wouldn't be made up.

"We promised too much," agreed Sen. William Faust, D-Westland. "It's too large a bite without telling how the revenue would be made up."

The state House on Wednesday approved the measure 69 to 35 with six representatives not voting. State Rep. Jerry Vorva, R-Plymouth, who voted for the legislation, said, "This was a complete surprise."

"I've been critical of the school financing system, which allowed them to not be as responsible and accountable as they could be," Vorva said.

The legislation would end the use of property taxes to support education effective July 1, 1994.

"We have about 4 or 5 months to sit down and really do a first-class job to change the ways schools are financed, setting certain priorities about what's important," Vorva said. "Everything's on the table, so you can pick and choose what is going to be best," he said.

Plymouth-Canton school officials, including Superintendent John Hoben, stressed that the plan will not affect the district's 4-mill property tax increase request that is scheduled to appear on the ballot Aug. 17.

"It is certainly laudable to have a cut in property taxes," said district spokesman Richard Egli. "Everybody is in favor of such a cut. At the same time, we must be aware that, if passed, this cut would not take effect until 1994, so the needs in Plymouth-Canton for next year are still here and still real."

"It is easy and popular to pass a bill to cut property taxes, but responsible legislation must also address educational funding. There must also be a plan to properly fund education in this state. This bill simply cuts property taxes. It doesn't address that issue in any way."

Egli said he's concerned about any legislative action that "comes in a single day without much deliberation and without the time or request for input from the groups that will be most deeply affected."

"The train was on the tracks, and it's running without brakes," said Sen. Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham. "Everybody believes the property tax needs to be removed as the sole source of funding. But I'm going to be one loud voice we do not destroy good districts and begin the largest Robin Hood plan we've ever seen."

"If the House passes it in its present form," said Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, before Wednesday's vote, "then the Legislature looks for replacement money. School aid is unaffected. Most legislators have found their constituents want massive property tax relief."

Senate Bill 1 was approved 33 to 4 with one absent.

Voting yes from the Observer & Eccentric area: Republicans Bouchard, Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion, Geake, David Honigman of West Bloomfield and Democrat George Z. Hart of Dearborn.

Voting no: Democrats Faxon and Faust. The other two no votes came from outstate Republicans Harry Gast of St. Joseph and John Schwarz of Battle Creek.

The House Wednesday approved the bill 69-35, with six absent. The bill went back to the Senate for concurrence in two amendments, and then to Gov. John Engler, who is expected to sign it.

All Observer & Eccentric representatives voted yes except Democrats Justine Barns of Westland and William Keith of Garden City. Maxine Bertram, D-Southfield, was out of town and missed the vote. Voting yes were 52 Republicans and 17 Democrats. Opposed were two Republicans and 33 Democrats.

It's official: State owns Mettetal

The public purchase of Mettetal Airport has caused a long simmering controversy in the Canton and Plymouth communities for nearly three years. But all that ended when the state wrote a check for about $4 million to the owners.

Mettetal Airport now belongs to the state of Michigan.

The Michigan Department of Transportation and the Michigan Aeronautics Commission signed on the dotted line July 14, officially buying the airport from Desert Sands Inc.

for $4,075,000, said Jerry Edwards, assistant administrator for MDOT's executive division and the Bureau of Aeronautics.

"We will be working with Desert Sands in managing the airport during this transition period until we get a private operator," Edwards said.

The public purchase closes the door on the years-long controversy over Mettetal Airport. Though some area residents remain opposed to the state purchase, local officials are content that safeguards are in place, based on a contract between the township and the state.

"For some of us, the work has only just begun," Edwards said. "We want to make sure it is a well-run airport."

Edwards said state officials are sincere about their intentions to live by the contract with Canton Township, in which certain provisions, such as the length of the runway, will be followed.

Now that Mettetal is in state hands, officials are developing proposals to send out to companies who specialize in managing airports. "That's a priority for us," Edwards added. The companies will be expected to bid for the job.

State officials also plan to begin coordinating the airport advisory board, a provision included in the township's contract. Township officials will have a say in appointing members to the board, which will review improvements and operational changes at Mettetal.

Research firm opens in township

By KEVIN BROWN

Gov. John Engler was among officials heralding the opening of a research facility Monday in a Plymouth Township industrial park.

The new Diversey Corporate Technology Center opened to remarks from Engler, township Supervisor Kathleen Keen-McCarthy, and to remarks from an official of the parent company, Molson Companies of Canada.

The facility, just east of Beck and north of M-14, now houses 57 chemists, engineers and microbiologists and is "built to handle about 120 people," said Ernie Berends, center director and Diversey vice president of corporate technology.

The center will house research to develop new cleaning and sanitizing products.

"We're delighted Diversey Corp. has made this investment in Plymouth," Engler said Monday.

"It's a testament to the resources of our great state that we can attract world-class, high technology companies like Diversey — and the jobs that come with them — to spark economic development in southeastern Michigan," said Engler.

He and other officials made their remarks to 100 guests and Diversey employees at the outdoor event. The entrance to the new facility was decorated with an arch of white balloons; officials joined in a ribbon cutting after the remarks.

The site was selected after a search of 30 properties to provide good living and education opportunities for employees and easy access to an international airport. The firm is also getting a property tax break.

Diversey official Derek Cornthwaite described Plymouth Township as "a community that has successfully attracted the world class facilities of other R and D (research and development) companies."

Among Diversey's clients are Hyatt, McDonald's and Coca-Cola.

"We have assembled under one roof scientists who can solve virtually any problem a customer brings — from developing new sanitation

Schools dispute Vorva education claims

By M.B. DILLON

State Rep. Jerry Vorva, R-Plymouth, says response is running two-to-one in favor of his recently proposed legislation to save education costs. One Vorva-sponsored bill would require school employees' insurance to be bid out. His second proposal would tax the retirement earnings of state employees, including teachers, who currently are exempted. Vorva estimates as much as $1,000 per teacher could be saved by seeking insurance bids.

Thus far, Vorva has Gov. John Engler's backing on one of the bills.

"We definitely support competitive bidding," said Engler spokesman John Truscott. "The governor has talked about it for couple years. It's a necessity to help reduce costs for districts."

"Right now, the Michigan Education Association has a monopoly, being their own prime insurance provider. By saying districts could competitively bid, we're not saying the MEA couldn't bid. But they'd have to be competitive."

Engler has not yet taken a position on taxing state employees' retirement earnings.

Said Vorva: "I'm getting a lot of flak from the education industry. But every day, hardworking taxpaying people are calling me with overwhelming support."

"The school industry wants to make like they are completely immune to what goes on with the rest of us in the real world," said Vorva. "That should not be the case, no matter how important education is, and it is important. I want to promote education. I want it to survive."

"Teachers have a tough job. But you can't keep taking," he added. "You can't go to the goose that lays the golden eggs and keep saying,

City streetscape bonds approved, 5-0

By KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Nearly four years in the making, the downtown street-sidewalk improvement plan on Monday finally got the green light from city commissioners.

The commission voted 5-0 to approve the sale of bonds to pay for the $2.4 million project. Construction is scheduled to begin in mid-September and wrap up sometime next year.

While commissioners in recent weeks had debated certain aspects of the plan, the motion to approve a bond sale passed without much comment from commissioners, excepting Bill McAninch.

McAninch, who earlier offered guarded approval for the project, last week voted against advertising for bids on the project. The commissioner said he supported the concept, but was concerned about "heavy pressure by the commercial sector" for passage of the project.

That followed a concern stated by Commissioner Dennis Shrewsbury. At that July 12 meeting, he raised the question of whether Commissioner James Jabara should vote on the project when he owns property downtown.

Jabara settled the matter Monday by asking other commissioners to let him abstain from voting on the project. Jabara said he didn't think there was a conflict of interest, but wanted to avoid any appearance of a conflict.

When the commission voted to let Jabara abstain, that cleared the way for a vote on approving a bond sale to pay for the project.

'Lay.' You'll kill it. That's what happened to the UAW and the auto industry."

School and union officials are disputing Vorva's claims. "Jerry Vorva should come to the board meetings and tell them what his ideas are," said Chuck Portelli, president of the Plymouth-Canton teachers' union. "I think it's easy to throw stones at the school board and administration when you are on the outside."

Vorva said he's tried unsuccessfully for several weeks to reach Portelli, and has been trying to set up a meeting with Plymouth-Canton Superintendent John Hoben.

Portelli questioned whether Vorva is proposing taxing the retirement earnings of government employees including legislators, the governor, firefighters and police. "Are we talking about anyone who gets money from a governmental agency? That would be my concern."

Portelli said the PCEA was calculating what it would have cost to place teachers' health, dental and vision plans under a single carrier when an early contract settlement was reached with the district.

"It's our belief we would have saved money, because we would have been under one umbrella," he said. The intended carrier is the Michigan Education Association-affiliated agency that insures about 65 percent of the state's 550 school districts.

School board president Roland Thomas said the district's insurance policies are cost effective. "We pay actual costs, plus an administrative fee of 10 percent," said Thomas, adding that Plymouth-Canton's rates are 33 percent below the MEA's.

Costs have amounted to a little more than $4,000 per employee, Thomas said.

"You can't seek bids on actual costs. You can seek bids on services; that's a separate issue. We could look at health maintenance organizations and we have, but it's more expensive to provide the same services," said Thomas. "Most large companies have gone to the same program we have to save money."

Beverly Wolkow, executive director for the MEA, says Vorva's figures are wrong.

"You're not going to save those kinds of dollars if you're bidding for the same benefits. The only way you can save those kinds of dollars is to lower benefits," she said.

Bidding out coverage to new insurers isn't cost effective because those companies have to build up their claim reserves with premiums, added Wolkow.

The MEA carrier is cost effective, she added. Its costs have gone up just 6 percent each of the past four years, compared to the industry standard of 16 percent, she said.

Health insurance will cost Plymouth-Canton a little less than 20 percent more for 1993-94 than it did last year, according to associate superintendent for business Ray Hoedel.

Wolkow said the MEA has achieved cost containment by pooling smaller districts, actively managing cases, and holding accounting and data processing costs to 1 1/2 percent of premiums.

Fireworks near graves 'disrespectful'

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

To shoot off July 4 fireworks near graves at Riverside Cemetery is disrespectful to the dead, a Plymouth Township woman told city officials on Monday.

Georgia Hill said she was visiting her son's grave on the afternoon of July 4 when she saw men setting up tubes for fireworks "25-30 feet from my son's grave."

"I discovered the fireworks would be shot here," she said. Hill said she'd always thought fireworks were shot off from the nearby softball field.

A few days later, "I went to different people, I stood in front of Danny's (supermarket) and I got 100 signatures from people who want to change the location," Hill said.

"I just wanted you to know my feelings," she told commissioners. "I think it's a desecration of our cemetery."

With Mayor Robert Jones absent, mayor pro-tem Doug Miller responded, "Please understand that our intent was not to show disrespect."

Miller said the commission would review the matter with the city administration by next July 4.

In a report to city manager Steve Walters, Fire Chief Al Matthews said the current site is ideal.

He cited a lack of overhead obstructions and the ability to provide "a safe fallout zone for fireworks debris."

Matthews said that in most years, fireworks debris "has always fallen in the area to the north and east of the launch site. In very few instances have I ever noted debris to fall within the actual grave site area."

Walters said that shooting fireworks from the cemetery rather than the baseball field allows people viewing the show from the Unisys property to stand right up to the street.

He added that moving the location to the baseball field would reduce parking capacity, and cause officials to erect temporary fencing where none is needed now.

Jones absent, all remaining commissioners voted to approve the bond sale.

Before voting, McAninch explained why he would vote to approve the bond sale.

McAninch said that in the past week he raised questions with City Manager Steve Walters and downtown marketing consultant Doyle Hyett.

"I asked if the traditional look of the city would be hurt by the streetscape project that is proposed," McAninch said. "He (Hyett) assured me that that when the streetscape was re-designed this proposal would not conflict with the traditional nature of the city."

"I asked if it was overdone," McAninch continued. "He assured me that in his eyes, it was not."

McAninch had also said he was concerned with fire truck accessibility in a revamped downtown. He said he talked with Fire Chief Al Matthews, who said he'd look at the design to make sure there are no problems.

The project, once tagged at $5 million, was developed by design consultants Shervish, Vogel and Merz and the downtown development authority.

Taxes captured from downtown businesses will pay for the project, which provides for new downtown sidewalks, lighting and street improvements.

"We haven't heard one thing about the committee," said Township Supervisor Tom Yack, who signed the township's contract with the state last week. Before closing on the airport, state and federal money was transferred for the purchase. The state used 90 percent federal funds from the Aviation Trust Fund and 10 percent state funds from the state Aeronautics Fund.

PLYMOUTH CITY COMMISSION ELECTION - TUESDAY, AUG. 3
4 SEATS OPEN: 3 FOUR-YEAR TERMS AND 1 TWO-YEAR TERM

Candidate: STELLA GREENE, Plymouth resident for 13 years
Employment/Education: Former records administrator for U. S. Dept. of Labor. Bachelor of education degree from Wayne State University.
Activities: Plymouth city commissioner, former downtown development authority co-chairwoman, serves on several community boards including Plymouth Community Arts Council and Drug Abuse Resistance Education, former Girl Scout leader.

► "I have experience in community affairs and background in financial matters, I thought I had something to contribute and that I'd take an active role."

Q Will raising taxes be necessary, and if not, where will you cut?

► "Raising taxes would be a worst-case scenario. There are a lot of avenues available to the city commission such as establishing a solid budget plan of a five-year nature. There should be constant prioritizing of those funds that are available and looking at the quality of services, looking at a balancing act of those two issues is a high priority. Joint services offers us a good opportunity toward trimming our costs."

Candidate: RON LOISELLE, Plymouth resident for 17 years
Employment/Education: Partner in Plymouth public accounting and condo property management firm Loiselle & Herriman. Bachelor's degree in accounting from Wayne State University.
Activities: Former city commissioner for 10 years, former planning commissioner, member of Plymouth Rotary Club, Plymouth Marching Band boosters, Plymouth Fire & Drum Corps parent and chairman of uniform fund drive, appointed by state Sen. Robert Geake to Michigan Council for Small Business.

► "In serving on the city commission, I believe I've been able to make a difference in the daily lives of people in the community. As a city commissioner, my objective has been and will be to maintain the highest level of services at the lowest possible costs. My financial background and experience as a property manager have given me the knowledge and ability to best serve citizens' interests."

► "We should look at joint services and police command. With police, fire and DPW, you're probably looking at three-quarters of the budget. These services need to be looked at and see if they can be provided on a shared basis. The city should look at privatizing services to save money."

Candidate: GLEN MACKIE, Plymouth resident for 4 years
Employment/Education: Product planner for Ford Motor Co. and owner of Plymouth Home Inspection Co. Master's degree in business from the University of Michigan and an electrical engineering from the University of Cincinnati.
Activities: Volunteer for Habitat for Humanity and Paint the Town.

► "I look at the city commission and it seems it's time for some change. We need some representation for some younger families who are now making Plymouth their home."

► "I don't think raising taxes is necessary at this point. There are still additional areas to look at in terms of efficiencies. You could look at shared services with other communities."

Candidate: DAVID McDONALD, Plymouth resident for 5 years
Employment/Education: Director of Junior Army ROTC at Redford Union High School, retired Army lieutenant colonel. Master's degree in military arts and sciences from U. S. Army Command Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kan.; diploma of advanced graduate studies, U. S. Army War College, Carlisle, Pa.; bachelor's degree in law, LaSalle University, Philadelphia, Pa.
Activities: Active in Partners in Parenting program in Plymouth-Canton schools, as former Canton resident was chairman of Canton-Plymouth study committee, former Plymouth district court volunteer probation officer.

► "I'm seeking to run for city commission because I've spent 28 years serving the people of America and I'm dedicated to public service."

► "I don't think at this time the answer for Plymouth is to raise taxes, that's one of the hot button issues I've heard in going door to door. We're taxed too high already. The city commission is exploring shared services, I would continue to pursue that route. In these tough economic times you have to do things cheaper and smarter."

Candidate: DOUGLAS MILLER, Plymouth resident for 15 years
Employment/Education: Assistant director of department of pharmacy services at Henry Ford Hospital, professor of pharmacy at Wayne State University. Doctorate degree from Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science, bachelor's degree from Ohio State University.
Activities: Plymouth city commissioner, former planning commission chairman, chairman of historic district study commission.

► "Although I think we've accomplished a lot in my first year and a half on the city commission, I think there's still a lot to be done. I'd like another term to see some of the projects through completion."

► "We've cut taxes in the city in fiscal years 1992-1993 and 1993-1994, the total tax is less now than when I took office at the end of 1991. We've achieved that primarily with belt tightening, but there's only so much you can do with belt tightening. We have to improve our commercial and industrial tax base. Shared services would reduce the costs of city services."

Candidate: TOM PROSE, Plymouth resident for 7 years
Employment/Education: Plymouth medical doctor. Doctor of medicine degree and master's of public health degree from University of Michigan.
Activities: Vice chairman of city planning commission, deacon of First Presbyterian Church.

► "It is a natural evolution, I've been involved with the planning commission, I'm fundamentally concerned with the community. It's an excellent town; it's got a great future. This is a time of fairly substantial turnover with the city commission, some experienced hands are getting off because of the limits on the terms."

► "I think that in the near future, raising taxes is not necessary. Frankly we need to look at some amenities we have. I've used curb and leaf cleanup, but there's a cost involved. Should we have city residents pay for that or those that desire to use it? We should be looking at user fees for some of the amenities we have. In the police department, do we need the level of service we have?"

Candidate: ROSITA SMITH, Plymouth resident for 22 years
Employment/Education: Retired from Michigan Bell. Attended classes at Madonna University in Livonia and Fullerton College, Calif.
Activities: Plymouth planning commissioner, member of parking study committee, environmental activities, member of Women's Club of Plymouth, Plymouth Historical Society and Daughters of the American Revolution.

► "I see many important issues that are going to be decided in the near future and I would like to be part of the decision making process and represent the voters of this community."

► "They (the current commission) looked for alternative things they could do to cut the budget, I would look at the budget to see if there are more things that could be cut. I would ask department heads for suggestions and see where there could be economy cuts, we need to keep taxes down. Also we'll need to explore sharing costs with other communities if it's beneficial to the city only."

Candidate: JOHN VOS, Plymouth resident for 42 years
Employment/Education: Senior partner of law firm Sommers, Schwartz, Silver & Schwartz. Graduate of Detroit College of Law and Golden Gate University College of Law, San Francisco, Calif.
Activities: Plymouth City Commissioner, past president of the Rotary Club, member of several law organizations including Michigan Trial Lawyers Association and Association of Trial Lawyers of America and community service activities including Plymouth Community Junior Baseball League and troop leader for Boy Scouts of America.

► "I think I represent all the residents. Experience counts, it really does. I didn't appreciate all the time you put in on the city commission until I was elected. Important issues facing us now include revitalizing the downtown area, cleaning it up and necessary maintenance which is long overdue. With the experience I have now I probably will be an even better commissioner the next four years."

► "I'd like to keep the lid on raising taxes as much as possible, our voters have told us they want that. Problems have come from Lansing in reduced funding. There's probably some more fat that can be cut, (city manager) Steve Walters has done a terrific job. We can save some more in administration. We want to give non-residents an equal opportunity to share in the expenses of the cultural center like we do. Shared services is something that has to come."

Area residents again demonstrated their generosity by donating $1,500 in a single day to help flood victims in the South.

And those were just the walk-ins Friday at the Plymouth Salvation Army's Main Street building south of Ann Arbor Road. The office serves the Plymouth, Northville and Canton communities.

"We got donations from $5 to quite a large donation," said Linda Spilos, Salvation Army office manager.

"That's just the way people responded. That's the way they are here."

People who called first were told to donate directly to the national relief fund.

The Salvation Army is also accepting new and unused household paper goods, baby food, disposable diapers, cleaning supplies, first aid supplies and store bottled water.

"We're not shipping down clothing," Spilos said. "With the hurricane in Homestead, people

All of the goods collected in Plymouth will go to flood victims in Missouri, Spilos added.

Cash donations are the best way to help flood victims, according to Ed DeWhitt, public support officer for the southeastern Michigan chapter of the American Red Cross.

The Red Cross buys supplies as close to the relief sight as possible to avoid shipping costs. Volunteers also interview victims about what they lost. Checks are written to merchants of the victims' choice.

"It's a lot more cost effective to give people cash vouchers," DeWhitt said. "They get what they need and it helps the local economy which has been devastated by the flood."

The Salvation Army in Plymouth is open 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The Salvation Army's eastern Michigan division is accepting donations for Operation Noah. Make checks payable to the Salvation Army, 16130 Northland Drive, Southfield 48075. Indicate the money is for Operation Noah.

Flood donations also are being accepted at American Red Cross Public Support, P.O. Box 33351, Detroit, 48232-5351. Make the check payable to the American Red Cross and earmark it for the National Disaster Relief Fund. Or call toll free, 1-800-842-2200 for credit donations only.

Man grabs cash from Kmart store

An employee of Kmart, 40855 Ann Arbor Road, saw a man running through the store Saturday, then found that cash had been taken from a register in the sporting goods department.

According to a report filed with Plymouth Township police, the thief used a crowbar taken from the store auto department to pry open the register. Because the tool was oily, no fingerprints could be taken from it for identification, police said.

■ COP CALLS

After running through the store, the man ran east through a parking lot. He was described as black, about 38 years old, 6 feet 2 inches and 170 pounds with glasses, a black Raiders cap, black jeans and black shoes.

The incident happened at 9:50 p.m., the report continued.

Car break-in

reported items worth around $300 were stolen Friday from his locked car parked on Meadow Court.

The theft happened between 1-7:30 p.m. Upon returning to the car, he found the door unlocked and a window rolled halfway down. A radar detector and two pairs of sunglasses were missing, according to the report filed with township police.

There were no witnesses or suspects, the report concluded.

TO UNDERSTAND WHY WE HAD TO MOVE, PHOTOCOPY THIS 50,000 TIMES.

You've never seen 50,000 music titles in one place before. Of course, before Borders*, you'd never seen 100,000 different books in one store. Now both are at the new Borders Books & Music.

At the risk of harping, just think about what you'll find. 14,000 classical titles, including twenty-five recordings of Beethoven's 9th. 17,000 not-so-classical rock and pop titles. (The Velvet Underground? Eleven albums.) Enjoy Frank Sinatra? Use moderation when you see seventy-five titles. Jazz? 9,000. Of course, another reason for moving is to improve on what you've always had at Borders. Enough space to relax and sit down with a good book—even with a cup of cappuccino at our espresso bar. We've gone so far as to put in a children's section with storytime area, music listening lounge, and a video section that includes classic films.

As for the music section, there'll be no bebop hip-hop musical irritation urging you out the door. The staff appreciates books and music and appreciates that you do, too.

Maybe you should take some time to come see the new Borders Books and Music at our Grand Reopening.

Summer activities will keep kids busy

By ANNE SULLIVAN
STAFF WRITER

Summer vacation. Kids love it but parents are often in a quandary about what to do with the kids in the summer. Some need all day care, while others want their children in some organized activities while school is not in session.

Some parents look for babysitters or summer day care, while others want to find a more active alternative for their children.

By this time, some kids are asking: "What's there to do?" Mom and dad can answer: "Lots."

Many programs are offered through community parks and recreation departments, continuing education and area YMCAs. Some programs require residency or membership, others do not.

The key is finding out what your child likes to do, and finding a program that matches his/her needs.

Parents searching for full-time day care have fewer options than those looking for periodic organized activities.

Many choices

Most parks and recreation departments in Observerland offer summer programs for youths, including Plymouth, Canton, Westland, Garden City and Wayne. Most offer supervised playground activities, field trips with hours similar to school. None offer day care before or after the program.

Livonia Parks and Recreation dropped its day camp program because of budget cuts.

Most parks and recreation programs have a residency requirement.

In Plymouth, the program which began the week of July 5 runs seven weeks. It is open and free to city residents, public school-age students. For more information, call 455-6620.

Plymouth is also offering art camp, a movie star camp and pom pon camp.

Each has a fee.

Art camp is offered in conjunction with D&M Studio and is open to children preschool age and older. Sessions are divided by age and student work in various mediums, including drawing, painting and papier mache. Cost varies, depending on the age and residency status of the participant.

Movie camp

Movie star camp is new and features a three-day session filled with teaching youngsters how to become a star. Participants should bring a bag lunch. Cost is $96 for city residents, $101 for non-residents.

Pom pon camp will be offered with the high school. Cost is $34 for city residents; $39 for non-residents.

Canton is also offering golf lessons in three-week sessions. Classes are planned for those aged 16 and older or 15 and younger. For information, call 397-5110.

Garden City's supervised playground for residents continues now through Aug. 6. Cost is $12 for a variety of activities and field trips. Times are 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., with a lunch break at 12:45. Call 261-3491.

The city of Westland is offering "supervised fun" at five parks - Sam Carrado, Central City, Rotary, East Caylay and Stottelmyer.

The program is free to Westland residents 5-12 years old and runs through Aug. 20. Call 722-7620.

School programs

Several school districts provide academic summer school and various recreation programs, including swim instruction.

Livonia's Jackson Center offers summer school, day camp, field trips and swimming. Day camp operates now through Aug. 31 for students in grades 1-6. There is no residency requirement. Cost is $105 per week per child, or $25 a day.

The weeks are filled with activities and field trips. Enrollment is limited to 200, and a wait list is started.

Special programs include Totsville, a one-week safety program for 3- and 4-year-olds, Science Discovery and Art Magic.

Plymouth-Canton schools offer tutorials for elementary and middle school students in reading.

Baby boomers rediscover youth in museum

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

If you're a baby boomer and haven't started feeling old yet, get ready.

Toys and other items associated with the baby boom generation are featured in a new Plymouth Historical Museum exhibit, titled "Rock and Roll — Toys of the Baby Boomers 1945-1965."

The exhibit features toys of the first era affected by TV. Toys dealing with the Campbell Soup Kids, Coca-Cola, Mr. Peanut, Disney items and even Beatles records are featured in the exhibit, which runs through Oct. 31.

The museum is open Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday 1-4 p.m. and Sunday 2-5 p.m. at 155 S. Main. Admission is $1.50 for adults, 50 cents for students 5-17. Kids younger than 5 enter free, and there is a family rate of $4.

■ 'We've just been taking apart my dad's house — there were a lot of these toy trucks.'

Frances Ignagni

The centerpiece of the exhibit is a re-creation of a 1950s living room, complete with blond furniture, a TV set, and yellow, black and red can of New Era potato chips.

The exhibit opened July 3. Museum volunteer Nancy Remick said adults have commented, "Oh, it brings back memories," and kids say, "That's neat."

Taking in the exhibit on a recent weekday was Frances Ignagni of Westland, with her two young grandchildren. "We've just been taking apart my dad's house — there were a lot of these toy trucks," she said.

One exhibit case features metal replicas of gasoline delivery trucks, with "Shell" or "Mobil" emblazoned on the sides.

Most display cases devoted to the exhibit are lined on the bottom with red-and-white-checked cloth, evoking a Beaver Cleaver or Ozzie and Harriet theme.

One case shows a Davy Crockett Indian Target Set, showing that political correctness had yet to be invented in the '50s. Also displayed are small plastic replicas of Roy Rogers and his horse Trigger, and Dale Evans and her horse Buttermilk.

A Hopalong Cassidy plastic cap pistol and metal thermos, and a small accordion and a "Lawrence Welk Accordion Hit Parade" music book are also displayed.

A shelf above displays Beatles dolls and a 45 RPM automatic record player, along with early Beatles albums.

Most items are from the Lawrence Scripps-Wilkinson collection loaned by the Detroit Historical Museum.

"We thought it would be fun for parents to bring kids, to show toys they played with or wanted to play with," said Donna Keough, museum exhibits chairwoman.

Metro makeover more than just cosmetic change

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

It's easy to see why Metro Airport employees need a herd of Jeep Grand Cherokees to tool around the 6,500-acre field when one tours all the construction sights (or sites).

Driver Denise Lah put it in layman's terms: "There are areas where there's a lot of mud and a lot of goop that we need to access," she said while piloting one of the airport's 25 Detroit-built Jeeps.

While bumping around in the dirt over precipices and small mountains, it soon becomes obvious that no ordinary car could hack it. Photographer Jim Jagdfeld grabbed the overhead strap and lifted himself off the seat because the four-wheeling action was doing a number on his ailing back.

The Jeep, with 19,000 miles on the odometer already, was purchased just last year. Lah, a Westland resident, usually drives it around, checking remote equipment, patrolling certain areas and inspecting the airport's four runways.

Occasionally, she said, wild animals are reported on the runway, and it's her duty to run them off. Pointing to the Jeep's siren controls, she said, "I use this a lot to scare the groundhogs off the runway."

With a $930-million expansion and renovation project under way, the biggest in the history of Metro, construction sites abound around the airport lately.

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara believes the new-and-improved airport will bring 20,000 new jobs to the area by 2000, mostly because an increase in the number of Metro's international gates from six to at least 15 will be a boon to companies that ship goods overseas.

The new terminal, a $368-million item, is not one of the projects currently under construction, but international travelers should benefit from shorter waits when it's done.

During the recent tour, a Boeing 747 arriving nonstop from Tokyo was compelled to wait several minutes behind several little DC-9s were queued up for take-off. The tiny jets blocked the 747's way to the taxiway that would take it to the international terminal, where the aircraft would block three gates while unloading its cargo of humanity.

Once the new terminal is complete, passengers will likely not stew on the tarmac in aviation gridlock after a 16-hour flight from Japan. And the planes won't burn so much expensive fuel in getting to their parking places.

Later, Lah chauffeured the tour, in four-wheel drive no doubt, over a mammoth patch of lumpy ground to the subversive quarter-mile tunnel beneath a runway under construction.

Herein will lie the "south access road," providing ingress and egress to the airport from its southern boundary. With a cost of $128 million, you'd think the south access road would be paved with gold, but alas, most of the money is tied up in the existing tunnel and a second one yet to be created.

JIM JAGDFELD/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Open wide: The south access road tunnel looms menacingly as a lone tree and golf-tee control tower rise in the background. Once the crosswind runway and the road under it are completed, aircraft will occasionally take off and land right over the cars passing through the tunnel.

They're also planning to build yet another runway (for $92 million), this one just a tad west of and parallel to the current main runway.

On the more mundane side, an equipment maintenance building is rising on the airport's north edge, and a snow-plow garage, fire station and control tower have already been christened.

The new tower, sticking up in the air like a 230-foot-tall arm and fist, is the highest in the Midwest. The Federal Aviation Administration shelled out $13 million for the tower's construction last year.

Inside you'll find 10 ASR-9 radar repeaters that tell air traffic controllers everything about every aircraft within 56 miles, except when the last oil change occurred.

Up in the top of the tower, or cab in airport lingo, one can see for miles around in every direction. Marty White, who works in the tower, said that the tallest ride at Cedar Point is just barely visible over the horizon when the air is clear.

There is no truth to the rumor, however, that one may see forever on a clear day.

JIM JAGDFELD/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Take The Next Step At Wayne State University...

If you are ready to take that next step toward earning your four-year degree, we are ready for you.

Last year approximately 5,000 students transferred to WSU from some 500 community colleges and four-year schools across the country. They are taking classes at our main campus in the University Cultural Center in Detroit or on one of our satellite campuses while others go to our University Center at Macomb Community College.

Some of the reasons students come to Wayne State:

- Strength of our academic programs — international reputation
- Cost — the only Michigan public university with a negative increase in tuition costs over the past decade based on inflation
- Financial aid — During 1991-92 WSU awarded $50 million in aid to students

So go ahead and take the next step. Simply clip and mail the attached coupon and we will send you more information about transferring to Wayne State.

Environmental group plans in-line skate event

The 2nd Annual Fresh Start In-Line Skating event will run on Aug. 8 in downtown Birmingham. This year's event expands on last year's success, while moving the event from a west Birmingham neighborhood to the center of town. The Fresh Start event features five hours of in-line skating and related activities, with a focus on families and newer skaters. Proceeds from the event will go to EMEAC'S environmental education program in area high schools.

The Fresh Start will take place on closed streets in downtown Birmingham, including Maple, Pierce, Merrill and Henrietta. Skating begins at 8 a.m., with the start of the EarthSkate Marathon. The Marathon is a "pledge" event, designed for skaters of all abilities, with the simple course allowing participants to skate as long and as fast as they want.

"We want local residents, EMEAC members and serious skaters to all join us for a fun skate that morning," explains executive director Elizabeth Harris. "The Marathon allows anyone to skate as they like while raising funds for a good cause."

EMEAC is working to make the Marathon a skating and financial success, by trying to involve every category of skater. Harris and Race Director Kurt Martin have both pledged to skate the Marathon regardless of weather, and have offered themselves as "surrogate" skaters for people interested in collecting pledges but unable to skate the event themselves.

"What's great about the Marathon format is that it allows people to skate at their own pace for as long as they like and, collectively, to significantly support local groups like EMEAC," explained Harris.

A 10 kilometer race follows the Marathon at high noon, split into different categories by age and ability. "This year people skating the 10k will find themselves with more people of similar speed. It should make for exciting racing and some close finishes," Martin pointed out.

The Fresh Start winds up with 100 and 400 meter sprints to crown the Fastest Skaters in Michigan. After the sprints, the event center switches to Shain Park, where the Awards Ceremony will crown the 10k and sprints winners.

Designed to be an environmentally friendly athletic event, the Fresh Start will focus on giving the maximum number of people possible a positive impression of the joys and value of in-line skating. Free demonstration equipment and certified instructors will give people who have never skated before a chance to get a good start.

"In fact, someone could show up on the day of the event and skate all day, without owning or buying any equipment or even knowing how to skate," Martin said. "We'll have skilled instructors and plenty of skates, helmets and protective gear. So anyone can come enjoy the day on wheels."

In addition, merchants will offer healthful food, skate accessories and athletic clothing throughout the day. Emphasis will be placed on keeping garbage to a minimum throughout, with composting and recycling of the event's waste a priority.

EMEAC put together its first in-line event, the first annual Fresh Start, on the same weekend last summer. That Fresh Start circled residential streets not far from the EMEAC office and was a grand success. With that experience under its belt, EMEAC felt it could go forward with more such events this year, working for better events that also raise more money for EMEAC'S education activities.

The Fresh Start is the third event of the EarthSkate series. The two previous events, the Trenton Trials on May 23 and Rolling on the River on June 19, set the tone for the EarthSkate with well-organized races on excellent courses. Unfortunately, rain interfered with both events, but couldn't keep the skaters and volunteers from enjoying the day.

The last EarthSkate '93 event will be the KidSkate at Waterford Oaks Park in Waterford on Sept. 12.

The September 12 KidSkate offers children 12 and under a full day of hockey, races and skating instruction, with an eye toward teaching them safe skating as a mode of transportation. Other organizations helping with the EarthSkate series are the River-town Business Association and the Oakland County Parks and Recreation Commission.

For more information on any of these events, call the EMEAC office at 258-5188.

Bills penalize parents for missed support

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Michigan would lift the drivers' and occupational licenses of parents who miss three months of child support under a set of House-passed bills.

The bills, passed by 62 to 33 and 62 to 35 votes, deeply split both parties and cut across ideological lines. They were sent to the Senate, where action is unlikely before fall.

"These bills are about kids and the welfare of children in our state," said Rep. Sharon Gire, D-Mount Clemens, sponsor of the key bill.

"It will cause irreparable damage to many unemployed and underemployed fathers," said Travis Ballard, president of the Royal Oak-based Michigan chapter of the National Congress for Men and Children.

LANSING

"How many fathers will commit suicide and how many will improperly and unjustly face financial ruin before enough people recognize that our system must treat fathers with the concern and respect they deserve?" Ballard said.

"Absolutely anti-male," said Leigh Travis, an Ann Arbor attorney and director of the same group.

Parents, mostly fathers, are behind in child support payments by $1 billion (Department of Social Services estimate) to $2 billion (House staff analysis).

State law allows use of criminal contempt of court proceedings, interception of tax refunds and income withholding. But income withholding cannot be used against the self-employed.

Chief objection to the bills was that they have nothing to do with professional ability or driving record, but would damage a parent's ability to pay any support.

Another objection was that the bills overlook attorneys, who are not licensed by state regulators. Attorneys are governed by the State Bar and Supreme Court.

Gire's key bill would amend the Support and Visitation Enforcement Act to authorize the friend of the court to institute license suspension action for failure to pay support. The order could be started only if an income withholding order were unavailable or unsuccessful.

Here is how Observer & Eccentric area lawmakers voted on that bill:

Yes (62) — Republicans Lyn Bankes of Redford, Penny Crissman of Rochester, Barbara Dobb of Union Lake, Jan Dolan of Farmington Hills, Shirley Johnson of Royal Oak and Jerry Vorva of Plymouth; Democrats Justine Barns of Westland, William Keith of Garden City and Richard Young of Dearborn Heights.

No (35) — Republicans John Jamian of Bloomfield Township, Greg Kaza of Rochester Hills and Deborah Whyman of Canton.

Volunteers show world of art

■ The first 'Picture Lady' trooped the schools in Plymouth and Canton about 20 years ago. And since then numerous volunteers have helped bring the arts to children.

BY JILL HALPIN
SPECIAL WRITER

If Donatello, Leonardo, Michealangelo and Raphael mean more to your child than just a bunch of mutant ninja turtles, you may want to thank Mary Mack and her band of "Picture Ladies."

Plymouth resident Mack heads the group of 175 volunteer art parents, and grandparents, who visit elementary schools in Canton and Plymouth.

The volunteers carry portfolios of replicas of art masterpieces, hoping to instill art appreciation in young minds.

"These people are at the grass roots with the kids. We want to reach them at a young age. They are the front-runners for art appreciation," said Mack, the mother of two.

She has been involved with Plymouth Community Arts Council for several years, and took over the "picture lady" program two years ago.

Sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council, the program has grown in the 20 years since it was started.

It has even outgrown its name, said Mack, who does not like the name "picture lady."

"It's misleading. We have a variety of volunteers from the community: some men, senior citizens, teenagers . . . it's not just women. I prefer to use the term 'volunteer art appreciation person,'" said Mack.

The program has grown in other ways, too. It isn't just pictures any more. Volunteers are also able to present sculpture replicas, "culture boxes" and music. There are 13 sculpture units available for presentation, from as far away as Asia and Ancient Egypt.

"It is important for us to bring these sculpture replicas into the classroom and allow children to handle them. When you go into a museum, you can't touch. It's a tremendous feeling for them," Mack said.

Volunteers are also able to bring "culture boxes" containing various items gathered from different cultures around the world. A Hawaiian culture box features grass skirts and flowered "leis," an Indian culture box contains pieces of fur and items made by American Indians. Mack noted that some teachers often incorporate the volunteer's presentation of a culture box into their lesson plans.

Music is now also a part of the art appreciation program, said Mack. Volunteers are able to choose 15 minute selections with a unifying theme to enhance their presentations. The selections were written by local music professionals and incorporate the themes of the different portfolios.

As head of the program, Mack is responsible for coordinating volunteer efforts with the schools as well as training the volunteers. The training session includes a visit to the arts council to watch a presentation, along with a demonstration on how to present the portfolios to differing age levels. All of the portfolios come with their own information including biography of the artist as well as a critical review of the work, said Mack.

The intensity of the presentation often depends on the volunteer and how enthusiastic they are, Mack said.

"We have a fabulous group of volunteers. One lady scoured garage sales and found velet dresses, which she put together in a Renaissance costume. She wore this while presenting Renaissance portfolios. It really depends on the ability, background and enthusiasm," Mack said. Mack has been known for her own enthusiasm for the program, said Theresa Gall. Gall joined the arts council in 1978 and is co-chairman of the art rental gallery.

vamping and new information. She did the research and did a very fine job. She is very appreciative of her volunteers," said Gall.

Mack recently completed a two-year project which included the restructuring of many of the portfolios and adding fresh information to them. To make the art reproductions more appealing to young minds, she arranged some unique groupings. Picture portfolio selections now include titles such as "Red" featuring Piere Bonnard's "The Rose Road" and Paul Klee's "La Belle Jardiniere."

Other portfolio selections include "Emotions," "Strange Women," "Friends" and of course, "Teen-age Mutant Ninja Turtles."

Area man joins Community Leadership board

John S. Lore, a leader in the Detroit area, has been elected to serve on the board of directors of the National Association for Community Leadership. The association, headquartered in Indianapolis, is a coalition of organizations and individuals dedicated to transforming communities through leadership development.

Members of Community Leadership include organizations at the local, state and national levels in the United States. International representation includes members in Australia, Canada and Great Britain.

Lore is senior vice president of the St. John Health Corporation and St. John Hospital and Medical Center. As of Oct. 4, 1993, he will accept the position of president and chief executive officer of the Sisters of St. Joseph Health System. He is a 1989 graduate of Leadership Detroit and serves as their selection committee chair.

"Committed volunteer leadership is perhaps the most important resource to insure the future of our respective communities," says Wendell J. Walls, executive director for Community Leadership. "It is no less important to Community Leadership. No group of volunteers is more important to the future of our organization than the board of directors," Walls continues.

As a community volunteer, Lore is chair-elect of the National Society of Fund Raising Executives in Washington, D.C. and serves on the board of directors for many statewide as well as national organizations. A few of those include the Michigan Non-profit Forum, Starr Commonwealth Schools, Western Michigan University's Foundation and National Philanthropy Day.

Lore and his wife Judy live in Plymouth. He received his bachelor's, master's and doctor of education degrees from Western Michigan University. His honorary degrees include doctor of humane letters, Nazareth College, and college fellow, Spring Arbor College.

Board must face mistrust issue

The manner in which the Plymouth Canton school board recently glossed over a survey of "no" voters in the June 14 millage election is a sign the board didn't get the message.

The message in the survey was: We didn't vote for the millage because we don't trust you.

Instead of addressing the concerns expressed by the "no" voters, the board instead indulged itself in fantasy, talking about what it will do with $4.1 million in additional funds, if voters approve the 4-mill tax increase proposal that's back on the ballot Aug. 17.

If the school board and administration are serious about winning voter approval, they would have better served their cause by addressing the reasons people voted against the millage.

By talking about the $4.1 million wish list, the board continues to treat the public in an arrogant manner.

The school board just can't face the facts. The survey of voters who rejected the 4-mill increase said there is little trust in the schools, property taxes are too high and teachers are making too much money.

The irony here is that the survey was done by the schools.

We doubt the board is serious. If the board were, it would take steps to address the concerns of "no" voters.

The survey numbers were high. Seventy-two percent said lack of trust in the school board persuaded them to vote against the millage; 80 percent said the millage failed because property taxes are too high; 51 percent said teachers' wages are too high; and nearly 50 percent said the school board poorly communicated the need for the millage.

The survey begs the question: Does the board need to be hit over the head with a baseball bat to get the point?

If the board and administration are serious about the the upcoming millage election, here are a few suggestions:

- Scrap the 5 percent pay hike slated for administrators this fall.
- Seriously negotiate with teachers to seek concessions.
- Scale back the 4-mill request to 3.5 mills.

Such actions would show voters the board is paying attention to them.

It's time for the schools to get the point, deal with the "no" voters and get on with the business of education. School officials and teachers accuse the public of not caring about the kids. They're right sometimes, but not this time.

It's time for schools to quit being arrogant and address the concerns of the public.

Rule out abortion intervention

There ought to be a law:

Women — when deciding whether to abort a pregnancy or have a child — should be shown pictures of families living in abject poverty, of the deformities that can develop in a fetus subjected to nine months of drug or alcohol abuse.

The state should distribute pamphlets at county health clinics providing the latest statistics on how many children from poor, single-parent families wind up in juvenile detention centers, and eventually jail.

Ridiculous, right?

An unacceptable intrusion of government into private life. The state, after all, has no business influencing what should be the most personal and moral of decisions in such a heavy-handed, one-sided way.

But that's exactly what will happen when Gov. John Engler signs the "informed consent" bill, which has already won approval from both houses of the Michigan Legislature.

The bill, passed by the state Senate last week after a year-long debate, puts into place a 24-hour waiting period for women seeking abortions. Among other things, it requires doctors to:

- Provide a list of physical and psychological complications that may result from abortion
- Inform patients of available prenatal and adoption services should they choose to carry the pregnancy to term
- Provide a pamphlet containing drawings of fetuses and showing fetal development.

The law is expected to cost as much as $500,000 yearly to enforce, primarily for printing and distribution of material.

While advocates of the law disguise it as public "education," the law, which would likely take effect next spring, is simply the next step

■ The state has no business influencing what should be the most personal and moral of decisions in such a heavy-handed, one-sided way. But that's exactly what will happen when Gov. in the pro-life march toward banning abortion in Michigan.

Yes, poor and uneducated women don't always make the best decisions or have the most complete information before seeking abortions, which, despite 20 years of legality, are still sometimes handled in an almost back-alley fashion. But shoving a pamphlet in someone's face and asking them to "come back tomorrow" surely isn't going to solve that problem.

And a 24-hour waiting period — a requirement for no other medical procedure in Michigan — goes against accepted medical practice and impinges on the doctor-patient relationship.

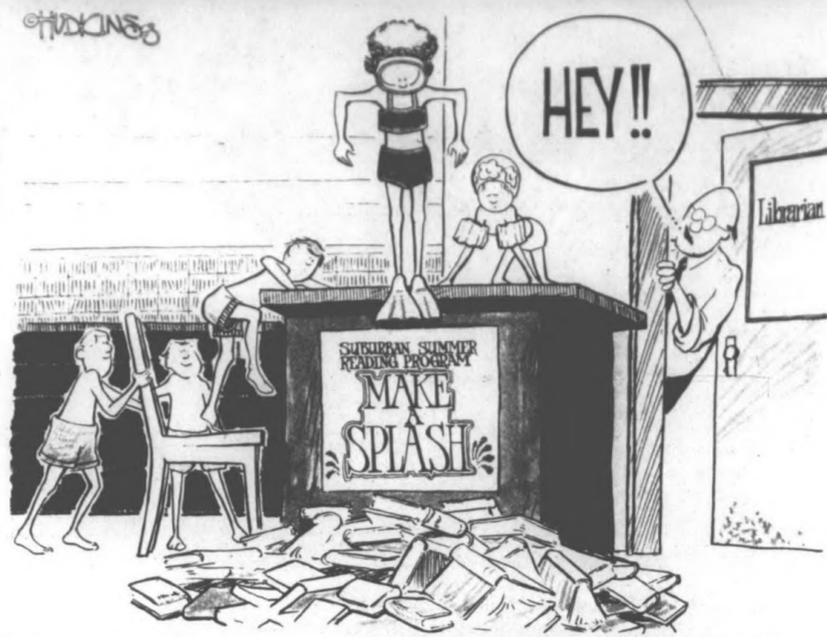

While Medicaid-financed abortions have already been outlawed in Michigan, this law applies to people seeking a medical procedure from a private doctor or clinic.

Similar laws in other states have been struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court.

It is surprising that Engler, who consistently advocates reducing government's role — and its cost — in people's lives, would back this effort.

His signature should be met by a challenge both to its constitutionality and practicality.

Political pandering

State Rep. Vorva recently labeled the school board "cowards" in a front page story in your paper. The true coward is Vorva. Rather than take what he thought might be an unpopular stand, he waited to see how the wind blew in the first election, before publicly taking the stand noted in your recent article.

The public should know that I personally witnessed Vorva enthusiastically attend a meeting of booster groups hoping to get the millage back on the ballot. Apparently, this was simply political pandering.

Hopefully, when Rep. Vorva's anti-education governor is replaced, true and fair education funding reform can be accomplished. In the interim, Vorva should back off.

Baby goose hit

Boy, I had a great Fourth of July weekend. I choose a nice relaxing bicycle ride on Monday evening to finish off the holiday. Riding along Northville Road next to Phoenix Lake, I always look forward to seeing the flock of geese in this area. I focused my attention on the goslings nearly able to fly.

I noticed that a car was slowing for something. It turned out to be a row of goslings, following their mother. The babies were already quite tall, but they still had that pronounced fuzziness to their feathers that young ones have. Suddenly, the driver of a car behind the slowed vehicle accelerated quickly and went around the line of traffic, hitting one of the goslings. This arrogant and selfish person just kept driving. I was disturbed that no one else stopped, for that matter, as there was plenty of traffic in both directions that could see what happened.

To the impatient and inhumane driver of the red car: I moved the flailing baby goose off the road and stayed with her as she suffered and took several minutes to die, while you completed your holiday weekend. To the other dozen witnesses: Please take the few extra seconds it requires each day to show compassion toward other living creatures.

Michael Chiado, Plymouth

Teachers the problem

I'd like to discuss the ongoing farce that seems constantly to be orchestrated by the teachers and their union leaders in the Plymouth Education Association.

Specifically, how is it that demonstrators; members of the band and various other student groups and their parents, and even Michigan football coach Gary Moeller, have decided that it is the voters who are at fault for not approving Proposal A, and the added four-mill assessment. Don't the demonstrators realize that 85-90 percent of every school tax dollar winds up as teacher compensation?

Don't the demonstrators realize that the taxpayers, in the Plymouth Canton School District, during the last three years, footed the bill for teacher raises amounting to an irresponsibly high 7 percent, 6 percent and 7 percent respectively.

These raises were roughly 200 percent of the inflation rate in each of these years. This is the reason the district's and the state's educational financing problem is so serious. It is nothing more than poor judgment on the part of the Plymouth Canton school board and administration and avarice on the part of the teachers union.

I would never have written this letter if it hadn't been for a comment made by the executive director of the Michigan Education Association, quoted in the Plymouth Observer July 5, 1993, stating that the 3 percent raise negotiated for this year is a fair one, in line with the rate of inflation.

My question for the executive director is this: If the increase this year was fair, from the standpoint of inflation, does it not mean that the three prior years raises, from the standpoint of double the rate of inflation, were unfair to the taxpayers? If the teachers were really interested in fairness, they would have left the taxpayers alone for the next three years.

I also have a question for all the student demonstrators and their parents. How long is it going to take you to realize that the problem isn't the voters but, rather, the teachers and their excessive financial demands?

T. F. O'Connell, Plymouth

Clean up act

How do the Plymouth-Canton school administrators "find" the money to recall 16 employees? The voters were told there was no money. Where was this money hiding?

I welcome back the 10 teachers. This is what the district should do — teach. I really question the recall of six administrators. I can't understand a ratio of six administrators to 10 teachers. If this is not over administration (6-10) what in the world is?

Voters should send the message (again). Vote no — until the schools clean up their act.

Brian Kolka, Canton

Why say no?

To all "no" millage voters: We desperately need your help here in the Plymouth/Canton community. I want to understand why our millage was defeated so that we may fix our problems and help our wonderful children. How can we allow the cost of $5.38 per week to hurt our precious kids? I don't understand and I really need and want to.

Our students have no counseling services, no specialized art, music, physical ed., no sports, band, extracurricular activities, no after-school functions (such as Girl Scouts, science fair . . . ) due to this "no millage."

I am heartbroken for these kids. Please tell me how we can gain your support to help them.

We can change things if we know what you want and why you voted this tiny cost down. Our children should not suffer.

"No to millage voters" please write to me: Diane Yanke, 46342 Litchfield Drive, Plymouth, Mich. 48170.

Diane Yanke, Bird School parent

Congressman's vote on arts lacks realism

Picture this. A congressman from one of the most arts-oriented areas of the country votes to abolish the National Endowment for the Arts.

It's an image that is hard to comprehend.

New U.S. Rep. Joe Knollenberg has cast many votes which, as a liberal Democrat living and working in his 17th Congressional District, make me unhappy.

But I understand that we stand on opposite sides of the political spectrum.

However his conservative Republican stance is no excuse for casting a vote to abolish all funding for the National Council for the Arts.

It is a vote that is difficult to stomach by a representative of any community. But it is particularly upsetting when you consider the area he represents — Birmingham, the Bloomfields, Southfield, the Farmingtons, Livonia, Redford — where residents pride themselves on their appreciation, cultivation and devotion to the arts.

Just off the top of my head: Birmingham is home to more art galleries than any single community between Chicago and New York; the Birmingham-Bloomfield Art Association is a regional community center offering programs in visual arts education; Cranbrook has an internationally renowned arts academy and art institute; Birmingham-Bloomfield and Livonia have major civic symphony orchestras; Southfield has a whole city division devoted to cultural arts and is in the process of purchasing a community arts center. . . .

Nonetheless, Knollenberg is one of just three Michigan congresspersons to vote to wipe off the canvas $175 million in funding, virtually eliminating the NEA. The measure failed by a 3-to-1 margin. He was then part of a majority who prevailed to reduce NEA funds by 5 percent. That bill must still travel to the Senate and, if passed, to House/Senate conferees.

Our other area congressmen, Dale Kildee representing Rochester, Sander Levin, representing Troy and Southfield, and Bill Ford representing Plymouth, Canton, Garden City and Westland, Democrats to be sure, all voted to keep funding at current levels.

With the tremendous cutbacks in public arts funding in the state of Michigan, a vote to terminate national arts funding is more than a budget-cutting priority.

The National Endowment for the Arts was created by Congress in 1965 to encourage and support American art and artists. In many cases, the NEA money is the seed that generates matching — or more — funds from private contributors.

Last year alone in just our part of Michigan, it directly granted:

- $8,000 to Oakland Community College to help publish the only national literary magazine put out by a community college;
- $17,500 to Pewabic Society to sponsor a summer apprenticeship for eight low-income high school students;
- $75,000 to the Detroit Institute of Arts;
- $4,000 for the Detroit Chamber Winds to perform six concerts, some of which exposed their work to the suburbs.
- $40,000 to Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall to fund the recording of three African-American composers for distribution to six continents.
- $20,000 to Detroit Focus Gallery for artist-designed billboards to depict the evils of drugs in high-risk school areas.

In addition, it provides funds to the Michigan Council for the Arts and Cultural Affairs to divvy up among deserving artists, art organizations and the public.

"I think he (Knollenberg) misunderstands his constituency," said Kathy Walgren, president of the Birmingham-Bloomfield Cultural Council. "A whole heck of a lot of us who are arts supporters are Republicans. He may regret it."

"If he did indeed vote for abolishing it, he was uninformed on what the arts mean to the country," said Ken Kelsey, president of the Livonia Symphony. "It's one of the bases for so many things people do."

"I just called him and wrote him a little note saying how important the NEA is to institutions in his Oakland County area," says Sandy Duncan, another Birmingham Republican, who is treasurer of Michigan Opera Theatre among other arts projects.

Knollenberg says, "The arts will continue, with or without a $175 million federal subsidy. . . . On the other hand, we are facing national debt that is one of the most daunting, most dangerous problems that our country has ever confronted. I believe that real and substantial cuts should be made, and they should include all nonessential programs."

But one of his votes wasn't a cut, it was an obliteration. Color him mistaken.

Humor highlights weathercaster's career for all

DAN DEAN/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Sellot: Sonny Eliot learned to offer a little entertainment along with the weather.

BY SONNY ELIOT
GUEST COLUMNIST

It was old friend, Jack Douglas, who said it best. He wrote it, but it happened to me. In the summer, when the thunder thundered, the old timers used to sidle up to me and say, "You know what that is, Sonny?" and when I'd say, "Yes, it's the little men bowling with Rip Van Winkle," they'd laugh like loons and roar, "No, you damn fool. . . that's thunder!"

The night I was born the little men were bowling with old Rip and it was thundering, too. Mother didn't make it to the hospital. I was born on the bus. Mother was furious when she had to open her pocketbook the second time!

If you believe any of the above, I've got 80 acres of ocean-front property for sale . . . in Montana.

The truth of the matter is that I was born at a very early urge, on the east side of Detroit, and soon learned not to take myself — or the weather — too seriously. Weather, as my beloved father used to say, is nothing more than climate that's worked itself loose from the atmosphere, which is why I laugh at myself, the weather and the solemnity which most people bring to the subject.

I started in weathercasting on old WWJ-TV, back when the world was young, after an interesting career in the United States Air Force as a pilot, which is where I received my training in meteorology. Television was really new back then, only 3,000 sets were in use in the entire state, and no one knew the difference between rabbit ears and horizontal holds. The fact that a picture showed up at all surprised more people than glass kilts.

Back then I took the weather show quite seriously, using technical terms like "Adiabatic lapse rates, 500 millibar pressure levels, isobars, isotherms, convergence regions," and it literally bored me to indigestion. A couple of months of seriousness and I started lightening and loosening. Of course, there are times when weather is serious, but those times are like bow-legs, few and far between. When it's serious, treat it seriously, but it was, and is, my feeling that if the information, when it's not grave, is presented in a more humorous and carefree fashion, then it's more effective than giving dull facts in a pedantic manner.

Whether you admit it or not, TV is primarily an entertainment medium, and secondarily an informational device. Why not combine the two? Sure, tell them it's hot, but put a little spin on it, like "It's so hot that the Jolly Green giant had to put Noxema on his niblets." Or — highlight the temperature in the state in a town where "a fellow got a dog for his mother-in-law . . . wishes he could make a trade like that everyday!" Or — personalize a high pressure center by saying that it's "happier than a lawnmower in a roomful of hula dancers." In weather presentations, my philosophy is entertain, then inform.

Ah well, weather forecasts are still six hours behind arthritis, and, as we facetiously say, most forecasts are 90 percent correct — 10 percent of the time, so live, love, laugh and be happy, for tomorrow you may lose your credit card. And tomorrow you may see a weather show that dares to be different once again, but I doubt it. You may even see a weathercaster somewhere in the country who doesn't do the "weather-show two step."

Two steps to the right, uncover the western half of the map, then two steps to the left and expose the eastern half of the map, and when those exciting maneuvers are through, take two steps toward the camera and bore in with a plethora of numbers followed by a much too unimaginative forecast for the next five days, which is still 90 percent correct, about 10 percent of the time. . . .

Just smile and remember. Weather forecasting is really witchcraft by bureaucracy!

Sonny Eliot, a Farmington Hills resident, is reigning king of area weather forecasting and can be heard on WWJ radio. To leave a message for him, call 901-2575.

Readers want to limit violence on television

A couple of weeks ago, I wrote a column on what all the violence on television shows does to our kids. It tends to make them violent, maybe criminal in turn.

After various huffings and puffings, our vigilant representatives in Congress got the industry to adopt the mildest possible measure — a self-policed warning at the beginning of some shows: "Due to some violent content, parental discretion is advised."

OK. Now tell me how this is going to affect:

a) The kids of working parents who are left to watch TV unsupervised?

b) The 50 percent of kids between six and 17 who own their own bedroom sets? (I hope my 11-year-old son Nathan doesn't read this. He doesn't have a set in his bedroom, and he won't.)

c) The kids who are channel surfing and who find the advisories a convenient guide to the good stuff?

d) The promotions for shows (unaffected by the warnings) usually feature the most violent part?

This column brought the biggest reader response of anything I've written in the past year. Here are samples:

"I totally agree with you. I have an 11-year-old son also, and I'm appalled by the level of violence exhibited by kids and the amount of violence they watch on TV. I do believe that TV has to answer for it. I believe they are responsible for a lot of the crime that occurs in society by glamorizing it."

A Westland mother pointed out that "in our family, we found the best solution is to restrict TV to the point where there is absolutely no television allowed on school nights, and the end result has been improved behavior at home and better grades in school."

An article in last week's Newsweek magazine reported two striking studies:

One showed children's programming for the 1991-92 TV season actually contained far more violence than prime time shows.

The other collected the body count between 6 a.m. and midnight on April 2, 1992, for programs on ABC, CBS, NBC, PBS, Turner, USA, MTV and HBO combined:

- Serious assaults without guns, 389 scenes, 20 percent of total.

PHILIP POWER

- Gunplay, 362 scenes, 18 percent.
- Isolated punches, 273 scenes, 14 percent.
- Pushing, dragging, 272 scenes, 14 percent.
- Menacing threat with a weapon, 226 scenes, 11 percent.
- Slaps, 128 scenes, 11 percent.
- Deliberate destruction of property, 95 scenes, 5 percent.
- Simple assault, 73 scenes, 4 percent.
- All other types, 28 scenes, 1 percent.

Fortunately, there is something people can do about the way violent TV poisons our kids' minds: Call the National Coalition on Television Violence, one of the oldest and most respected organizations in the country. It has an office in Farmington Hills at (313) 489-3177.

Marilyn Droz, who runs the office, points out something useful: "We're doing work to prove that children would really rather watch action and NOT violence."

There is also a lobbying organization called Americans for Responsible Television, founded by a Bloomfield Hills woman, Terry Rakolta, at (313) 636-2428.

I'm still not sure there is a perfect solution to this problem. Governmental rules probably will always be lickapittle and ineffective. The TV industry never will regulate itself. And the First Amendment absolutists in my industry surely will attack anything that looks like censorship.

But if you think it's bad now, just wait a few years until we have cable TV with 500 channels.

Phil Power is chairman of the company that owns this newspaper. His touch-tone voice mail number is (313) 953-2047 ext. 1880.

YWCA award to honor women achievers

The YWCA of Western Wayne County is seeking nominees for its second annual Women of Achievement awards luncheon to be held in November.

"We want to honor women who have demonstrated outstanding leadership and excellence in their professional and personal endeavors for the betterment of the community," said Corinne Vincent, executive director of the YWCA of Western Wayne County.

The Women of Achievement program recognizes women who have distinguished themselves in the following categories:

- Arts/communications — a woman who has excelled in the arts, media or public relations. Fields include visual, literary and performing arts, journalist, television/radio.
- Business/industry — a woman who has exhibited outstanding abilities and accomplishments as an entrepreneur or at the technical/professional, management or executive level.

PLYMOUTH SPORTS SCENE

Angler 6th in tourney

Linda Bennett of Canton finished sixth in the Michigan B.A.S.S. Chapter Federation Open Classic July 17-18 on Lake St. Clair. Bennett, one of only four women competing in the tournament, and partner Cecil Cole of Ypsilanti had mechanical troubles on both days but enough luck to finish in the money.

"It seemed as if anything that could go wrong did," Bennett said. "We lost our trolling motor on Saturday, and the boat motor went out on Sunday. We got into enough fish, however, to land more than 18 pounds of smallmouth.

"I was hoping to do much better in this tournament, but I am pleased with our Sunday finish. The next time we'll put it all together and finish first."

Bennett tied for second place in the largest-bass competition with a 4.18-pound lunger.

She will compete in the Michigan B.A.S.S. tournament Aug. 21-22 on the Detroit River and the National Bass 'N Gal Invitational Aug. 5-6 in Cookson, Okla.

If she finishes among the top 50 in Oklahoma, Bennett will qualify for the Bass 'N Gal Classic Star Championship Sept. 27 to Oct. 2 in Gadsden, Ala.

Region soccer picks

Michigan's under-18 Olympic Development Soccer Program placed three players from Region II Pool to compete later this year in inter-regional matches in Boca Raton, Fla. The selections include Livonia Stevenson High product Ragen Coyne (Notre Dame), Julie Johnson (Ann Arbor) and Rebecca Ketola (Brighton).

In the under-16 bracket, Michigan representatives include Livonia Stevenson's Laura Fedrigo, Plymouth Salem's Mari Hoff, Brighton's Amber Berendowsky and Sobrero.

Kristah Mantfeuffel of Redford and Rochester's Jaclyn Clark were Michigan picks recently from the under-14 Region II pool at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside. They will travel next week to Erie, Pa. for competition against Region I.

Playoffs present challenge

Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury won the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League regular-season title but enters the post-season playoffs struggling to maintain its advantage.

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

A month ago, Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury couldn't wait for the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League playoffs to begin.

But now that the four-team playoffs are one day away, members of the regular season league champion probably aren't too sure about their chances.

Consider:

- After going undefeated in its first 18 regular-season games, Hines Park finished 5-6-1 in its last 12 games.
- Hines Park (22-6-2 overall, 46 points) will be without its most versatile athlete/pitcher Scott Kapla and starting center fielder Jason Riggs, both of whom are out with injuries.
- The playoff games are nine innings long as opposed to seven, making pitching depth a premium.

The playoffs begin Friday with a double-header starting at 5:30 p.m. at Ford Field.

Hines Park meets fourth-place Westland Federation (14-14-1 before Wednesday) in the first game, followed by second-place Little Caesars (21-9) against third-place Del-Wal

Finesse earns tourney title

The Finesse Under-16 girls softball team won last weekend's United States Slo-pitch Softball Association championship at Liberty Park in Sterling Heights.

Finesse will be making a return trip to the World Tournament, held Aug. 6, 7 and 8 in Hutchinson, Kan. Finesse placed fifth at last year's tournament.

Mandee Horosko was the winning pitcher.

"Our hitting is better than last year's," Finesse manager Bill Martin said. "Last year we played good defense and our hitting was timely. The core players from last year are better and the players we've added have added to the attack. We have at least six long-ball hitters."

Finesse, 30-7 overall, went undefeated in four games to win the USSSA title.

Finesse beat the Mid-America Mustangs 13-2 to win the championship.

Christine Boguslawski was 3-3 with four RBI and two runs scored. Kelli Knight (Plymouth Salem) was 2-3 with two RBI and two runs scored; Vonne Jenks (Garden City) and Teresa Reese each went 2-for-3; Stacey Phillips was 2-2 with an RBI and three runs scored and Kelly Klene (Westland John Glenn) was 2-3 with two runs scored.

Finesse advanced to the final with an 11-6 win over South Farmington. Sherry Foster keyed the victory with two hits, two RBI and two runs scored and Phillips was 2-3 with two RBI and a run.

Finesse's toughest game came against the Mid-America Mustangs. Finesse managed to pull out a 12-11 win after Carah Best (Salem) hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth inning to score Boguslawski with the winning run.

Boguslawski was 3-3 with three RBI and two runs scored. Wutke was 3-4 with three RBI and two runs scored and Reese, Phillips, Klene and Horosko had two hits each.

Finesse started the tournament with a 21-1 win over Clinton Valley.

Knight was 3-for-3 with a home run, triple, three RBI and three runs scored. Colleen Wutke (Garden City) was 2-3 with a homer and triple, one RBI and three runs scored.

Reese went 2-2 with a homer and triple, two RBI and three runs scored. Phillips was 2-3 with a triple, three RBI and two runs scored; Jenks was 2-4 with a homer and two RBI with two runs scored and Sarah Rowe (Canton) was 2-3 with two RBI and one run.

The Mustangs, who were three-time defending state champions, finished 5-2.

They beat Southgate 24-13; Sterling Heights, 19-0 and 16-6; Southgate, 17-3; and South Farmington, 4-3.

The team hit .459 and pitcher Stacy Sinke (Canton) pitched all seven games, allowing four walks.

Susan Huber was the leading hitter (.625 with one double, three triples, two homers and 15 RBI). Leadoff hitter Lisa Rozum batted .424 with one triple and 10 runs scored.

Other leading hitters included Heidi Wahl (.464, two doubles, two homers, 10 RBI); Lauren Wright (.478, two homers, 13 RBI); Amanda Boston (.476); Jessica Johnson (.416) and Amy Yocum (.380). Other team members were Julie Jones, Jennifer Jacek, Trish Kesner and Amanda Kesler.

Roadrunner race on new course

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

The Redford Roadrunner Classic will commemorate its 10th running Saturday, with a new, scenic course which starts at Northville Downs and winds eight kilometers through hilly, picturesque Northville.

Action kicks off with the Classic Junior (children 12 and under) at 5:30 p.m. The mile fun run/walk is set for 6 p.m. Entry for both races is $8.

The main event, the 8K, begins at 6:30 p.m. Late registration is $13, plus $5 if you'd like a tank top.

The Classic features a post-race party, complete with food, beverages and entertainment.

Applications are available at Running Fit stores in Novi and Ann Arbor, as well as other area running stores. Entry forms can also be found in Michigan Runner Magazine.

Race day check-in is from 3:30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

A couple of old buddies from Redford Catholic Central High School will enter the Classic together for the first time Saturday night. Jim Keskeny, competing in his third Classic, has multiple sclerosis. He'll be doing the race with help from fellow Shamrock Mickey Farkas of Livonia. Volunteers from the People Who Run Downtown who take turns pushing the 49-year-old, who recently was selected as the U.S. representative to the Persons with MS International Committee.

Farkas and Keskeny, who played varsity football together at CC, renewed their friendship last year after Farkas heard Keskeny was going to do the Detroit Free Press/Mazda International Marathon with help from the CC cross country team. They helped push Keskeny the full 26.2 miles. Farkas was so impressed with Keskeny's indomitable spirit, that he stood out in the cold, rainy weather for four hours at the Free Press marathon with a personalized sign cheering Keskeny.

"This is kind of like a special opportunity," said Keskeny, a former Birmingham resident, who is soliciting pledges for the M.S. Society toward research. "In the last nine months, they've come up with some encouraging leads. It's definitely a positive sign."

Keskeny also has a new motto: "Stuff (not his actual word) happens, so make fertilizer."

Keskeny is having T-shirts printed with that motto to give to runners who push him, while raising pledges to fight the debilitating disease of the central nervous system.

If you're interested in running and/or pledging in Keskeny's name, give him a call at 878-2760.

For more information on the race, call 347-4949.

Defending champ misses playoffs

Walter's Appliance will be watching the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League playoffs from the sidelines.

Walter's split a double-header on Sunday against Wendy's at Ford Field to finish the season with a 12-18 record (24 points) and out of the four-team post season playoffs.

Last season, Walter's won the LCBL playoffs and placed second in the All-American Amateur Baseball Association national tournament in Johnstown, Pa. Westland Federation claimed the final playoff spot with a 14-14 record, five points ahead of fifth place Walter's.

"We still had a chance mathematically but knew Westland Federation would beat Tecumseh at least one of two games (Sunday)," Walter's coach Mike Keller said. "It's going to be different sitting on the hill (watching the playoffs at Ford Field) this year. We were young but still competitive, losing seven games by one run."

Walter's beat Wendy's 3-2 in Sunday's first game, which was called in the third inning because Wendy's player John Collins was ejected for throwing his bat, leaving the team with only eight players.

Wendy's won the second game 9-1 as Walter's Chuck Coleman suffered the pitching loss, allowing four runs in four innings.

Lance Sparks, the winning pitcher, struck out seven.

Brandon Herrin was Wendy's offensive hero on the day, going 6-for-6. He had a double, triple and two RBI in the nightcap.

Hines Park falls

The last-place Tecumseh Green Giants scored five runs off Hines Park Lincoln Mercury reliever Steve Ross (Redford Catholic Central) in the sixth inning Tuesday to win the season finale for both teams, 6-5, at Canton High School.

Ross, who replaced starter Tom Davey after five innings, allowed five hits and lasted only 1/3 of an inning before ace Jeff Paluk came on to quiet the Tecumseh bats.

Gary Pierce led Hines Park with two hits, two runs scored and an RBI. Davey was 1-for-3 with a run scored; Heath Fowler and Tracey Ewald each had a hit and an RBI and Ed Gundry had a sacrifice fly for an RBI.

Caesars sweeps

Little Caesars ended its regular season Sunday with a sweep over Del-Wal, 10-2, 5-2, at Ford Field.

Mark Van Ameyde won the first game with a complete game five hitter. Lawrence Scheffer had three hits and four RBI and Jerry Shippe contributed three hits and three RBI. Dave Roman had two hits and Chris Hollman drove in two runs.

Scheffer also keyed the 5-2 victory with two hits and three RBI in a game that was rain-shortened after five innings. Mark D'Antonio was the winning pitcher, throwing a five hitter. Roman and Randy Gierczak delivered a pair of hits each.

Caesars on Friday defeated Westland Federation, 5-1, at Ford Field.

Adam Marano pitched a complete-game four-hitter and Roman and Matt Patterson added two hits and two RBI apiece.

Del-Wal wins in 8

Del-Wal scored two runs in the top of the eighth inning Friday to break a 1-1 tie and beat Walter's Appliance 3-1 at Ford Field.

Del-Wal forced extra innings after scoring once in the top of the seventh inning with two outs to tie the score at 1-1.

Todd Boike threw a two-hitter with eight strikeouts and two walks to earn the win.

After Walter's got the first two outs in the seventh, Noah Bremen singled. Three straight walks on full-counts forced Bremen home with the tying run.

Del-Wal scored twice in the eighth, also with two outs. John VanDenBrink, Cliff Murray, Bremen and Tom Grigg had consecutive singles to score two runs.

Mike Zielinski pitched the first seven innings for Walter's. Dave Koch suffered the loss.

(16-11-1). The double-elimination format features two games Saturday (2:30 p.m. and 5 p.m.) and two more Sunday (2:30 p.m., followed by the 5 p.m. championship).

The champion goes to the National American Baseball Federation regional in Altoona, Pa.

"It's going to be tough to get out of it," Hines Park coach Ken Wandzel said. "There's nothing more that Westland would like to do but beat us."

Kapla, 6-0 with a 1.47 earned run average, has arm trouble and can't throw or bat for at least two weeks, according to Wandzel. Riggs broke his leg at work and is out the rest of the season.

Hines Park still has pitching ace Jeff Paluk, 7-1 with a 1.29 ERA, to go with Steve Ross (6-1, 3.04 ERA), Andrew Margolick and Brian Paluk (Hines Park property who has pitched mostly in Connie Mack).

"Little Paluk might have to come with his game face on," Wandzel said.

Westland lost four of the five meetings with Hines Park during the season but coach Joe Vondracek points out three of the four losses were by a total of three runs.

Friday's second game pits a perennial challenger for the post-season title, Little Caesars, against Del-Wal, one that is hoping to win its first crown.

Caesars closed the regular season with a sweep over Del-Wal on Sunday. Caesars has two of the hottest hitters in the league, Lawrence Scheffer (.397) and Dave Roman (.410), to go with the LCBL's top hitter Matt Patterson (.448). Caesars would benefit even more if leadoff man Andy Krueger is able to show.

"We've got as good a chance as anybody," Caesars coach John Moraitis said. "The boys are hitting pretty good now and we've also got (Jerry) Shippe back."

Del-Wal has a strong four-man pitching rotation, led by North Farmington graduate Mark Temple. Pitcher/infielder Jay Danek and catcher Brian Proctor, who batted .350, were the most improved players, according to Rumberger. Proctor has all the tools to be an outstanding catcher, he added.

In the season finale, Danek and Eric Kida had two hits each, plus two and one RBI, respectively.

Diamonds win 2 from Cobras

The Farmington Hills Diamonds remained undefeated in the Incredible Girls Fast-Pitch Softball League, sweeping a doubleheader Tuesday from the Canton Cobras 7-4 and 11-3.

The Diamonds (10-0) trailed 3-0 after five innings of the first game but scored four runs to take the lead.

The Cobras (7-5) tied in the bottom of the sixth (and final inning because of a time limit), and the teams went to the international tiebreaker in extra innings.

Connie Mack team looks ahead

Plymouth Salem finished the Connie Mack baseball season Monday with a 6-4 loss to Tecumseh (Ontario) and an 8-9 overall record.

But the Rocks still accomplished their greater goal of preparing players for the next varsity season, according to coach Dale Rumberger.

Mike Marsella suffered the loss on the mound, but that he worked six innings and threw 93 pitches mattered more to Rumberger.

"Summer is a little different than school," he said. "We were working on different pitches and location."

"We do a lot of experimenting in the summer. We use it as an instructional league, so we're ready when the school season is on."

Rumberger added his players were no doubt a little tired of baseball, having started with weight conditioning in January and continuing into July.

"That's seven straight months. I'm sure they're looking forward to a few weeks off before school starts," he said.

Salem had only four seniors (Brandon Walton, Charlie Winstel, Jamie Owen and Bryan Zarosely) from its last varsity team playing Connie Mack baseball. The rest were juniors.

"That's one reason we're successful in the school season year in and year out, because we develop these kids," Rumberger said.

Dave Knight, who had 22 doubles in the summer, Alan Moran and Marsella were impressive at the plate.

"They'll be breaking some windows next year," Rumberger said. "I'm looking forward to next season to see what damage they do."

Pitcher/infielder Jay Danek and catcher Brian Proctor, who batted .350, were the most improved players, according to Rumberger. Proctor has all the tools to be an outstanding catcher, he added.

In the season finale, Danek and Eric Kida had two hits each, plus two and one RBI, respectively.

Top players enter local tourney

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

Some of the Midwest's top-ranked Men's 35 singles and doubles players will compete for prize money Aug. 6-8 in the Livonia YMCA Grand Slam Tennis Club's Senior Open.

"We're trying to bring tennis back to Livonia," said Ben Tasich, owner of Racquets Unlimited and one of the tournament sponsors. "Our goal is to bring in high-caliber tennis, something this area hasn't seen in 10 years."

"This is a good tennis area, and I think it would be good for junior players to come down and watch, at no charge, and pick up some pointers."

Admission is free to the three-day tourney, which begins at 6 p.m. Friday, Aug. 6. Action continues Saturday with the finals set through Sunday, Aug. 8.

"We have the facilities, and I believe the Livonia Y is a wonderful setting for tennis," Tasich said. "We also have prizes and a raffle for the fans."

Several players who appear in the Western Tennis Association rankings have committed to the tournament.

"We not only hope to draw the area's top teaching pros, but also the top players in the surrounding states," Tasich said.

The entry deadline is Saturday, July 31. The cost is $20 for singles and $30 for doubles team. Awards will go to the winners and runners-up in each division.

Dunlop will provide balls for the tournament.

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

It's the ultimate bow hunting video game. It's the archer's answer to virtual reality.

Officially, it's the Dart System and it's revolutionizing archery target shooting. The Dart System is an interactive video indoor archery hunting simulation system. That translates into target practicing with your own equipment on big game animals which are projected across a video screen. Archers stand 20 yards from the screen — a nylon/cotton tarp suspended by springs which resembles a large sideways trampoline — and wait patiently for the perfect shot. Sixty-eight potential targets cross the screen over the course of an hour.

Through a complex system of bar codes (lasers) and wiring, each shot is pin pointed on the screen. A computer then interprets the shot in relationship to the position of the animal and points are awarded based on shot selection and shot placement.

With an authentic audio system to go with the video the archer gets a feel of hunting in the wild.

Call of the wild

A bull elk bugles, turns broadside, then ambles off down a hill. A trophy whitetail in velvet rises from an afternoon resting place on the edge of a hill and wanders through the surrounding field. A bull moose thrashes a nearby tree with his enormous rack. A group of tom turkeys gobble boisterously from the side of a shaded pine ridge. The scenarios go on and on and include bear, coyote, buffalo, even partridge, all in their natural habitat. Some shots simulate elevated shots, others are up hill. Some stand still while others are on the move. The challenge never fades.

Tom Herron is an avid bow hunter, but admits target shooting sometimes becomes somewhat of a chore. "Personally, I think target shooting is pretty boring," he said. "The Dart System adds some excitement and takes archers to a new level in terms of hunting. The animals are moving and they're usually angling toward you or away from you. You have to decide when you can and when you can't shoot."

To take the "boredom" out of target shooting, Herron and his partner, Steve Schell, installed the Dart System in their business, Overridge Archery in Waterford.

The system has been in operation only a month but already has become a hit with the public.

"We're pretty much packed evenings and weekends," Herron said. "We only have the one range so it's a good idea to have a reservation. We have a league starting next week."

An educational tool

The Dart System provides quality practice in life-like hunting situations for the experienced archer, but it can also be used as a learning tool for the beginner.

A shot taken too early or too late does not receive points, even if it is a well placed shot. The archer must wait for the optimum shot then take it.

"I'm a hunter and more than anything else I just want to see it help other hunters develop better skills," Herron said. "Plus it's a lot more fun than shooting at a stationary target. We've had a lot of women and children come in too because it's so much fun."

Since all shots are taken from 20-yards the compensation for a 30- or 40-yard simulated shot is a smaller vital zone.

The reality of the situations is outstanding and the audio/visual combination adds a titillating thrill to target practice.

If someone could just drop the temperature on the range into the low 30's and drizzle water from the ceiling throughout the shoot they'd really have simulated a fall hunt in Michigan.

(Anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to: Outdoors, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, Mi. 48009 or by fax to 644-1314. Call Bill Parker Monday evenings at 901-2573.)

Costumes enhance 'Charlotte's Web'

Shirley Fager's costumes turn children performing in the Stagecrafter's Youth Theatre production of "Charlotte's Web," into realistic spiders, rats and other creatures. Find out how she did it.

BY SANDRA DALKA-PRYSBY
SPECIAL WRITER

Each summer youth theater directors spend countless hours turning hundreds of children into actresses and actors.

Barbara Lyon, of Bloomfield Hills, director of the Royal Oak Stagecrafters Youth Theatre, had an added challenge this year. She also needed to turn most of the cast of "Charlotte's Web" into animals and other creatures.

Lyon sought the assistance of experienced costumer Shirley Fager, also of Stagecrafters, and the result is realistic pigs, sheep, geese, a lamb, owl, bat and a rat. The biggest challenge, according to Fager, was "Charlotte."

The lead of this musical adaptation of the popular children's story is a spider, played by 11-year-old Melissa Harrison of Livonia.

"After checking pictures; and books on spiders, I made sketches of the type of eight-legged creature I wanted to create. It had to be a classy spider so I came up with the idea of using a black satin tuxedo jacket as the basis for the costume," said Fager. "Then I sewed it, stuffed it, pushed it and showed it to get it into the shape I wanted. Once I was satisfied with the body, I made stuffed satin legs with wire down the center."

Fager's work with arachnids wasn't finished with the completion of the "Charlotte" costume. She made three more spider outfits for the babies.

Fager uses a number of sources for inspiration when creating costumes, she said. A children's book, "My Little Book of Farm Animals," was one of her best aids for creating the animal costumes for "Charlotte's Web." She turned to a bisque figurine of an owl to create another of the creatures in the production.

"I not only want the costumes to look realistic, but I want the kids to feel good in them. I will add something here and there, or remove something to accomplish these goals."

Libby Prysby of Birmingham appreciates how accommodating Fager is to the children's concerns. "I felt uncomfortable in the dress I wear in the country fair scene because it is low cut in back," said the 12-year-old. "Mrs. Fager added a big red bow to eliminate the problem."

Another thankful cast member is 10-year-old Mike Kopera of Troy, who plays Templeton, a rat. Instead of having to wear a full costume of fur, which would be uncomfortable and hot, Fager made him a lightweight body suit with fur pieces added to the hood and the leggings. He also wears a tunic made of fur-like fabric.

"Even though our rat isn't exactly like the real thing, Templeton looks quite natural, only meaner and rattier," Fager said.

Fager, who has been making costumes for 18 years, she began by making Halloween costumes for her children, is responsible for outfitting all 30 members of the "Charlotte's Web" cast, which includes Megan and Stephanie Kapera of West Bloomfield and Steve Rundell of Troy.

"I never stick to a pattern because I usually can't get the size I need or the look I want to achieve with a ready-made pattern," she said. For example, this production calls for a bat, played by Michelle Perez, 16, of Troy.

"The only pattern I could find in the stores was for Batman, and that would never do. I have to design costumes based on the director's wants and needs."

According to Lyon, she couldn't be more pleased with the costumes. "Shirley's vision and mine have been right in sync. The costumes truly enhance the overall performance."

Restaurants pitch in to promote festival

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

Norm LePage, owner of Eton Street Station and president of the Birmingham Restaurant Collection is excited about Jazzfest '93.

"We loved the thought of it and think it will get bigger and better," said LePage, one of the Birmingham restaurant owners participating in Jazzfest '93 a three-day jazz festival in downtown Birmingham, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 29-31.

When we talked, LePage was busy working out the final details of a special New Orleans menu that will be offered at the restaurant during the event. Miller Lite will be filming a commercial at Eton Street on Friday, July 30.

"We're all doing different things to promote the festival," LePage said.

Jazzfest '93

BIRMINGHAM

"We're doing things to help create a festival atmosphere."

Jazzfest '93, an indoor/outdoor jazz festival is being presented by the Community House in Birmingham in cooperation with the Birmingham Restaurant Collection. Proceeds will benefit the Community House. During the festival, jazz musicians will be performing in downtown Birmingham, at the Community House, Shain Park, City Hall Square, and 15 of the restaurants making up the Birmingham Restaurant Collection.

A Jazzfest '93 hot line has been set up for ticket and schedule information, call 433-Fest.

Participating restaurants are — Alban's, The Birmingham Tavern, The Bates Street Cafe, Machus 160, Machus Sly-Fox, Max and Erma's, Midtown Cafe, Norman's Eton Street Station, Ocean Grille, Old Woodward Grill, Peabody's, Phoenicia, Punchedello's, The Townsend Hotel, and 220 Merrill Street Restaurant.

The Birmingham Theatre, also a collection member, will present "Godspell" during this time.

Most Jazzfest venues are clustered around the downtown area and the best way to get around is by walking. A shuttle will be available to help festival-goers get to outlying restaurants.

Festival passes are $20 each, available at Ticketmaster outlets or by calling 433-FEST. The pass admits its holder into any Jazzfest site and entitles the person to a 20 percent discount on meals at Restaurant Collection restaurants.

"It gives you unlimited access to Restaurant Collection restaurants without cover charge," said Helen Smith who is helping the Restaurant Collection coordinate festival activities. "You can also get $2 off 'Godspell' performance tickets during Jazzfest. When you go to the show you'll get a $5 off coupon for any 1993-94 week night subscription show at the Birmingham Theatre."

Janet Jackson, as Justice, finds solace in poetry

"Poetic Justice," opening at suburban theaters Friday, marks superstar Janet Jackson's motion picture debut as Justice, a reclusive young woman who works as a hairdresser and writes poetry to cope with heartbreak.

Abandoned and alone, Justice masks her shyness with a tough-talking exterior.

Her life intersects on a chance road trip from south-central Los Angeles to Oakland, Calif., with Lucky (Tupac Shakur), a mailman who resists temptations of an easier life on the street for a steady job. The trip is destined to open their eyes to lives they never imagined.

"Nobody, but nobody can make it out here alone" is the renowned poet Maya Angelou's telling anthem underscoring the lives of the south-central Los Angeles inhabitants who people "Poetic Justice," writer/director John Singleton's modern-day street romance.

PREVIEW

In "Poetic Justice," director John Singleton takes audiences back to the hood of south-central Los Angeles — back to the neighborhood where he made his motion picture debut, "Boyz n the Hood." His second film explores the lives of two working class survivors — giving them voice, in part, through the poetry of Maya Angelou.

The director decidedly moves his subject matter away from that of guys who pack guns to women armed with words.

"This movie is a graduation for me," said Singleton. "It's an attempt to make a more mature film. For 'Boyz . . .', I wanted to make a teenage film, an 'American Graffiti' set in my neighborhood. When I started thinking about what I would do next, I began to wonder how all these brothers getting shot is affecting their girlfriends and their sisters and brothers.

"So I came up with this character named Justice, who is in love with this guy and the dude ends up getting killed right in front of her eyes. It sets her life on a whole different track. Instead of going to college, she goes to cosmetology school and starts doing hair.

"Then I thought about the term

'poetic justice,' which is how everything that happens is, ironically, appropriate. I then made Justice a poet who uses poetry as a creative catharsis for all this hurt that's happening in her life."

Singleton based his film on actual events and researched his main character by speaking with several female friends to develop a strong feminine perspective.

"Most girls I knew growing up had a lot to deal with in life and their only outlet was to write poetry," said Singleton. "That was their only right of passage — some of it good and some bad, but every woman used poetry as an outlet. That's when I decided it was time for a woman's story to be told."

Leading man Tupac Shakur sees it this way: "This movie is fresh. It's about people who don't accept the status quo, but don't turn to crime as the answer to getting ahead. It's about African-Americans who can exist without violence. It is time to get the word out that brothers can solve the problems of their lives without using a gun."

"Poetic Justice" was filmed mostly on location in the streets of south-central Los Angeles and up the California coastline in Cambria, San Mateo and Oakland.

"Poetic Justice" opens Friday at these suburban movie theaters — AMC Old Orchard, AMC Hills, United Artists Oakland, Star Rochester, United Artists 12 Wonderland, Showcase Auburn AMC Southfield City, Quo Vadis, Oaks and GCC Canton Cinema.

Street romance: Janet Jackson stars as Justice, a reclusive young woman who discovers a world she had never imagined on a road trip from south-central Los Angeles to Oakland in "Poetic Justice," a Columbia Pictures release.

'Free Willy': a bit corny but still good family fare

JOHN MONAGHAN

An abandoned boy at odds with his foster family. A killer whale who can't be trained. It doesn't take a genius to figure out exactly how "Free Willy" will turn out.

And that's precisely what audiences were clapping about. Don't want your kids traumatized by "Jurassic Park" dinosaurs? Take them instead to this corny, harmless boy-meets-whale movie.

Willy and Jesse (Jason James Richter) are just strangers in the night when they first set eyes on each other. The troubled 12-year-old spray-paints graffiti on tanks at the faded North West Adventure Park when Willy, eerily lit through the transparent tank, scares him half to death.

Captured by police, Jesse must clean up his mess and, in doing so, grows more and more fascinated by the killer whale, or orca. He discovers that Willy refuses to take commands and, as a result, won't have an appropriate-size tank built for him.

"Unfortunately, the people who run this place treat Willy like he's a commodity," says Rae (Lori Petty), the frustrated animal trainer.

Playing his harmonica by the tank one day, Jesse begins communicating with the whale. Soon he has Willy doing your standard Shamu-style stupid pet tricks — rolling over, catching fish in his cavernous mouth and waving goodbye with his tail.

Jesse also is a boy transformed. Still bitter about the mother who dumped him six years ago, he's warming up slightly to his infinitely patient foster parents played by Jayne Atkinson and Michael Madsen.

The droopy-eyed Madsen is a real surprise here. The Stephenwolf Theater grad, best-known for offbeat performances in "Thelma and Louise" and "Reservoir Dogs," brings depth to what should be a boring role.

He's got one especially good scene when he asks Jesse what he thinks the house rules should be. "I've always been better at breaking rules than making them," the foster father admits.

For his part, 12-year-old Richter registers appropriate levels of bitterness and wonder, even though he's a bit laughable when trying to act street-tough.

Atkinson and Petty, on the other hand, deliver their lines to the boy in the patronizing and patient tone that kids loathe. August Schellenberg, as the park handyman and philosopher, conjures up a bit of Native-American mysticism that makes the fantastical end of the movie a bit more plausible.

That conclusion almost brings an audience to its feet. As silly and predictable as it often becomes, "Free Willy" has already made a splash at the box office by providing safe summer family entertainment.

"Free Willy" is showing at these

na West, GCC Canton, Showcase Pontiac, Showcase Westland, Star Rochester Hills and United Artists West River.

Musical puts adult spin on fairy tales

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

You'll hear a slightly different version of the fairy tales you grew up with when the Actor's Company presents Stephen Sondheim's "Into the Woods" at the Village Players playhouse in Birmingham weekends July 23-31.

A portion of the proceeds will benefit the Village Players renovation fund.

The award-winning musical puts an adult spin on such popular Brother's Grimm tales as Cinderella, Jack and Beanstalk, and Little Red Riding Hood.

"The woods represents the world, in order to get what you want, you have to go into the woods to get it," said director Michael Gravame, 28, who founded the Actor's Company in 1985.

"If you want the pleasantness of life, you've got to encounter wolves. You can't have the good without the bad. Cinderella wants to wed the prince, she thinks he's perfect, but she finds out he's not." Gravame said he picked this show because the music and story are incredible.

"It's not that well-known. A lot of people haven't heard it," he said. "It's ingenious the way the fairy tales are entwined in the story. The characters become real people."

Besides directing, Gravame plays the part of the Baker, one of 15 characters in the show.

Nancy Potts of Rochester Hills portrays the witch. "She's a pivotal character. She has a selfish wish. She lost the magic beans and becomes ugly and old. She convinces the baker to steal the beans to become young and beautiful, but then she loses her magic powers."

Potts said she likes the two-sided nature of her character — "I get to be old and ugly and young and beautiful on stage," she said.

"INTO THE WOODS"

Theater: The Actor's Company in cooperation with Village Players of Birmingham, at the Village Players playhouse on the corner of Chestnut and Hunter, two blocks south of Maple in Birmingham.

Curtain time: 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, July 23-24, 2 p.m. Sunday, July 25, and 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, July 29-31.

Tickets: $12, call 644-2075.

said Velinsky. During the play you'll find out what happens to Jack's mother after Jack accumulates wealth.

"In fairy tales everything is black and white," said Velinsky. "There are good people and bad people. In this show, the characters learn that nothing is all bad or all good. In real life there's a lot of gray."

Velinsky said "Into the Woods" is enjoyable because there are a lot of talented people in the cast, a lot of interesting music, a lot of pageantry, and some very funny parts for adults.

"Everyone changes at the end of the show," said Gravame. Everyone is wiser, they'll be more cautious when they go into the woods. Here's an example of how one character changes, she says — "A slotted spoon can't hold much soup, but it can catch the potato."

PREVIEW

Tania Velinsky of Rochester portrays Jack's mother. "She's a single mother with a son and no money. She tells her son to sell their last possession a dry cow, and he comes back with beans,"

DSO to perform at Kensington Metropark

If life's a beach, then there will be plenty of life when the Detroit Symphony Orchestra presents a free summer concert at Kensington Metropark near Milford, 8 p.m. Saturday, July 24.

The concert under the stars will feature music by "The Waltz King," Johann Strauss Jr., Gershwin's delightful "An American in Paris," Weber's "Invitation to the Dance," and Ponchielli's "Dance of the Hours," which was immortalized in Disney's masterpiece film Fantasia.

Bluegrass festival offers entertainment for all ages

Make plans to attend Northville's 17th annual Folk and Bluegrass Festival 1-8 p.m. Sunday, July 25, at Ford Field, one block north of Main Street, one block east of Sheldon (Center) Street.

Tickets are $8 in advance, $10 at the gate. Children under 12, $3, infants free. Advance tickets available at Ticketmaster outlets, 645-6666 or Gitfiddler Music, 302 E. Main, Northville, 349-9420. Bring lawn chairs or blankets to sit on.

Event proceeds will benefit medical research for Huntington's Disease. The disease claimed the life of Donna Jarski, festival founder Tom Rice's sister in 1974. Rice held his first Folk and Bluegrass Festival outside his Gitfiddler music store in 1977 to raise money for the fight against Huntington's Disease.

Here's a schedule of entertainment at the main stage.

Comical lines, performances in melodrama

SALLY DUBATS

The Troy Players' production of Sharkey & Stein's musical melodrama "The Saloonkeeper's Daughter" is garden variety theater without much creativity employed. Melodramas have an intentionally flimsy script for the purpose of broad farce comedy and audience participation, but the Troy Players do not use this device to their advantage.

Director Roseanna Scobie neglects to tell her actors to have fun with this device as well. Prior to the show, Scobie instructs the audience to boo, hiss, cheer, or throw popcorn at the actors (standard melodrama ploys), and this is part of the show when repeated by an actor at the show's beginning.

But as the audience does as they are told, the actors don't "play" with this device. As paper hits an actor, rather than sneer at the audience, he forgets his lines.

Accessories to "The Saloonkeeper's Daughter," set in the Old West, include an evil villain named Manny Raach, played moderately well by Joseph LoGuidice, his simple-minded assistant Seedy Shlepper (Donna Kussad), a hero named Rusty Witts (Robert Tome), and various ladies in distress and dance hall girls.

The basic premise of "The Saloonkeeper's Daughter" is a greedy evil villain vying for the hand of the innocent parson's daughter or the pure saloonkeeper's daughter — both for money. The lines are comical, including the villain's exit to the kitchen while saying, "As I always say about women; get 'em while they're hot!"

LoGuidice (the evil villain) has contorted his face into hilarious configurations in past shows, and is funny in this show. Regrettably (with the exception of one song, none of which are listed in the program), the director does not use LoGuidice's funny-face talent to its fullest in this production when broad comedic styling is needed most.

Donna Kussad as Seedy Shlepper does use her face to its fullest with crossed eyes and a funny goofy stare, and always stays in character.

The Saloonkeeper, Red Whiter is played by Bill Hellebuyck (who stepped into rehearsals during the last week). Hellebuyck is functional as Red White, and likable.

Lily White, the title actress, is played with a mere modicum of effort by Stephanie Garza. Garza never implements standard melodrama gags to illuminate her character's humor. Corisa Leaser as Charity Kindly, the parson's daughter, also fails in this respect.

Bob Zawideh and Robert Tome as Blacky White and Rusty Witts give hum-drum performances as well.

Melodrama music is not noted for its originality nor listening pleasure, but is just a backdrop for fun and theatrical frivolity and harmlessly pokes fun at the music industry as a whole. Music director Margaret Wunsch doesn't make the most of this device, but rather allows the singers to sing on as if these were ordinary songs.

Troy Players' production of "The Saloonkeeper's Daughter" was produced with limited knowledge of true melodrama, notwithstanding blocking problems and pace problems due to missed lines cues and lack of preparedness.

Sally Dubats of Madison Heights is an actress, director and teacher, who teaches at community theaters in the metropolitan area. She is artistic director of West End Productions headquartered in Livonia.

Big band, folk band to present concerts

The Southfield Parks and Recreation Cultural Arts Division will be presenting the Johnny Trudell Big Band in the Southfield Concert in the Park Series 7 p.m. Sunday, July 25, and the Balduck Mountain Ramblers 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 28, in the Summer Concert Series.

The Johnny Trudell Big Band concert on July 25 at the Prudential Sunbowl, behind the 3000 Prudential Town Center, off Civic Center Drive, Southfield, will feature a free celebration of music from the 1940s and 1950s Swing era. Concert-goers should bring lawn chairs or blankets. In case of rain, the concert will be moved to the Atrium of the 3000 Prudential Building.

On July 28, the Balduck Mountain Ramblers will present a free concert at the historic Burgh Gazebo at Berg Road and Civic Center Drive in Southfield. A picnic supper will be available for purchase 6-7:30 p.m. Concert-goers should bring lawn chairs or blankets to sit on.

The Balduck Mountain Ramblers is a Detroit-based acoustic ensemble dedicated to playing American string-band music ranging from bluegrass and folk to sea chanteys and drinking songs.

Metro Detroit: the newspaper readership story

Detroit is a "city of suburbs." As the graph shows, suburbanites comprise more than 72% of Detroit's metro population. In fact, the suburbs account for 85% of metro Detroit's Effective Buying Income (EBI). And, in Detroit's suburbs, the leading newspapers are not The Detroit News or Free Press—The leading suburban newspaper medium is SPRING, the net-work of suburban newspapers. SPRING delivers more than twice the audited suburban circulation (707,214) of the daily Detroit News (274,510) or Free Press (348,698). And the 1991 Belden newspaper survey proves that suburbanites read their SPRING newspapers. SPRING delivers more total suburban readers (927,400) than the daily edition of The News (743,000) or Free Press (856,000). SPRING delivers more suburban buyers of women's fashions, men's fashions, new cars & trucks, boats, jewelry, and airline tickets.

The same research study shows that 416,000 (56%) of 35% of the people reached by the DNA daily "combo" read both The Detroit News' suburban readers also read the Free Press. So Free Press advertisers add only 17% more reach by buying the News-Free Press daily "combo." Would you like to know more? Why not call 1-800-382-8878, and ask for a SPRING media kit. SPRING delivers 152,700 more buyers of women's fashions than The News, 78,600 more than the Free Press

Summer school heats up at Bentley

BY MARIE CHESTNEY
STAFF WRITER

For most students, the school year ends sometime in mid-June. But for some students — 267 at the Bentley Center to be exact — school continues into the lazy, hazy days of summer, offering a second chance to earn credits missed during the regular school year.

Nearly all districts in western

Wayne County offer summer academic classes for high school students. But not all districts offer a full slate of classes, so students sometimes leave their own district to take a class not offered locally.

While Bentley's program caters mainly to students in Livonia's three high schools, it also attracts public and private school students from such surrounding districts as Plymouth-Canton, Westland, Redford, Garden City and Northville.

Summer school may be more informal, with students wearing shorts and sipping Coke while the teacher lectures. But it's definitely not easier.

"In some ways it's more difficult," said Cliff LaHo, supervisor of the summer program at Bentley Center, Five Mile at Hubbard. "They're here for three hours per class and have to cover basically the same material in five weeks that they do in 18 weeks during the regular school year."

What makes the task a little easier is that many students are retaking a class already taken but failed for either poor grades or poor attendance.

"For many, it's the second attempt at passing, so the material is not entirely new," LaHo said.

Classes offered at Bentley this summer include fundamentals of art, speech, mythology, algebra, plane geometry, health, earth science, American government, psychology, and reading and math skills to pass the MEAP tests. Successfully passing each class earns the student one-half credit.

Each weekday, the first class starts at 7:35 a.m. and ends at 10:15 a.m. The second class starts at 10:30 a.m. and ends at 1:10 p.m.

Eighty percent of the students take two classes, LaHo said.

Not every student attending summer school is retaking a failed class. Some take classes to learn more about a subject; others want to boost their grade point average, LaHo said.

"For many, though, the goal is to earn a credit to graduate. If they have less than one credit to make up, the districts allow them to graduate and go to summer school to get the credit they need. Their diploma is held at their high school."

Former students who need more than one credit to graduate can take additional classes at Bentley in the fall.

Bentley's program pays for itself through the fees paid by students to attend.

"We educate our employees how important dealer service philosophy is to customers."

Leasing, fairly uncommon a decade ago, is the wave of the future, Blair said.

"Our goal is 60 percent," he said. "The first two years of ownership are the happiest of ownership. People are shopping payment. We can offer a plan where people can lease with no money down and never be in a negative equity position at trade in."

Ford is devising a program that will enable dealers to lease leased cars to secondary users when they're returned, Dean E. said.

"Leasing also provides our used car department with a nice inventory," Liz said.

"The (leasing) benefit is repeat, more renewal," Blair said. "That's where the customer and dealer benefit. The lease program is a good front-end tool. It makes the service experience more positive. Things are less likely to break and when they do, they're covered under warranty."

In the beginning

Dean L., now 87 and retired in California, had worked for General Motors and as an assistant general sales manager for Ford before buying a dealership.

He said he was more interested in going into business for himself than climbing further up the corporate ladder.

"They asked me, 'What's your program?'" Dean L. said. "I told them, 'I have three young men I want to educate in the industrial world and see them grow and develop.'"

Ford promised him the first option on any dealership transfer in the country, Dean L. said. He made his choice in 1948, using $30,000 of his own money "and a pretty good loan from a finance company."

The loan was paid off within 60 days.

Two of the sons, Tom and Bob, who owns a Pontiac-GMC Truck dealership in Farmington Hills, stayed in the business.

Tom took over the Ford operation in the early 1970s.

"I like dealing with happy people," Tom said. "You're happy when you come in and buy new, and happy when you get cars looked after and serviced in a good manner. If you keep customers happy, you'll have business."

Keeping things current

All aspects of his dealership — new cars sales, used cars, service, parts and body shop — are profitable, Tom said. "New car/new truck sales are our highest volume. Naturally, that would produce our greatest profit area."

Tom is ambivalent about no-dicker sticker prices.

"That's a tough question," he said. "I think it really puts you in a weaker competitive position to have one price. People want to work you down to the very, very lowest price."

"I think it goes over better where there are fewer competitors. We have so many competitors, it's awfully difficult to entertain a one-price situation."

Regular Saturday hours don't fly for a lot of reasons, the Sellers said, although they host some special weekend promotions throughout the year.

"Banks, Ford Credit, aren't open," Liz said. "Employees have families, too."

Buyers stopped coming in on a regular basis on Saturdays years ago, Tom said. "People went to the cottage, worked in their yards. Dealers finally closed due to costs."

"We've met people here on Saturday," Dean E. added.

There from Day 1

Mort LaPierre has been parts manager at Sellers Ford for 40 years.

"Overall, the biggest change has been the quality of cars," he said. "No question cars built today are much superior to anything we've ever seen. Also, today, customers' expectations are much superior."

"We have a lot of people who have been here a long time," LaPierre said. "It's a very steady organization, very conscientious about employees. We don't have a big turnover."

Tom, 59, figures to turn the dealership to his children some day. The kids say they'll be glad to take the reins.

"My greatest satisfaction now is having three children become part of this and their positive effect on employees," Tom said.

"We started off sweeping floors and polishing the grounds part time," Blair said. "Then we started selling between summers in college."

Approximately 10 to 15% of the adult population or more than 20 million people in the United States have Gallstones. It is estimated that there are about one million newly diagnosed patients annually. The prevalence is higher in women, twice as high compared to men. The prevalence is also higher with multiple pregnancy, obesity and rapid weight loss, as well as older patients and in certain ethnic groups. Most patients with Gallstones remain asymptomatic for many years and may in fact never develop symptoms. However, the consequences of Gallstones may be severe. Pregnancy is a significant risk factor and some smaller stones could dissolve spontaneously sometime after delivery. Pregnancy associated with obesity adds even further risk and the Gallstones tend to remain after delivery, most likely the patient begins to notice symptoms especially if its larger than 1 cm.

The Sellers clan: Thriving, surviving

Grandpa Sellers' kids and grandkids are keeping the Fords rolling off his 45-year-old lot in Troy.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Not many auto dealerships in metro Detroit have been around for 45 years under the same family ownership and the same name plate.

Dean Sellers Ford in Troy is one. Purchased by Dean L. Sellers in northwest Detroit in 1948, the dealership, relocated to Troy, is now run by son, Tom, with his three adult children — Blair, leasing manager, Dean E., truck manager, and Liz, dealer commitment/customer service coordinator.

Gross sales from all operations now approach $59 million annually, Tom said. The dealership moves some 3,600 vehicles per year. About 2,600 of those are new, with 46 percent of those leased rather than purchased outright.

Sellers provides 102 jobs and pays an aggregate $76,700 in property taxes to the Troy School District, city of Troy and Oakland County.

It's about people

The family is proud of the Ford product line, but attributes its longevity in business to pleasing the customer.

"It's a people business," Tom said. "We like people."

"Our number one goal is devotion to the customer," Liz said. "When my grandfather started the business, his philosophy was, 'Take care of the customer.' My father carried over that philosophy. Now, Blair, Dean and I have applied it.

"Four of us are here every day during hours of operation to be accessible to customers," Liz continued. "A lot of Sellers are in the environs and customers are made aware of that."

Local business leaders hit streets for NAFTA pact

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Wilhelm C. Kast, chairman of DPCS International in Livonia, and Paul Boudreau, who works for Allied Signal Automotive in Southfield, don't have to be sold on the value of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA).

The two are serving as co-chairmen of the Michigan International Trade Coalition and doing the selling themselves.

Some 150 large and small companies with roots around the state are pushing for Congressional ratification of the pact which they maintain will improve the business environment in Mexico.

Boudreau and Kast spend time contacting federal lawmakers, colleagues in the business world and the media to preach the good word.

Opportunity is that word. "It (NAFTA) will allow us to bring more product into Mexico without tariffs," said Boudreau, director of government and community relations for Allied Signal. "Mexico has content requirements. It will give us more ability to make sourcing (plant location) decisions."

"We can go to a much broader base and do business down there," Kast added.

The two agree that they have an uphill task, not the least of which is connecting the issue to the lives of a lot of people who don't readily see a connection.

'As you take tariffs off, costs go down. Our business becomes stronger. I think that's pretty important. When the company is healthy, people get raises, we hire people.'

Boudreau

"We say to our employees, one in 16 Mexicans today owns a vehicle and 50 percent of the vehicles on the road in Mexico today are over 10 years old," Boudreau said.

"One projection shows that the Mexican auto industry will double to 2 million vehicles," he said. "If true, that will be very beneficial to us."

Allied Signal manufactures auto parts including braking and air bag safety systems.

"As you take tariffs off, costs go down," Boudreau said. "Our business become stronger. I think that's pretty important. When the company is healthy, people get raises, we hire people."

"I'm not going to move to Mexico, but I can sell services," said Kast, who provides computer and marketing advice.

A free trade agreement would provide copyright protections he presently doesn't have, Kast said. Also, more American companies doing business in Mexico provide more spin-off opportunities for service providers like himself there and here. "We can expand our services," Kast said.

Two major objections have arisen to NAFTA: job losses due to plant relocations and environmental contamination with rapid growth.

Boudreau and Kast downplay both.

"Mexico is a very protective country," Boudreau said. "Now, we have to pay tariffs and locate facilities there. If NAFTA were in place today, we wouldn't have to locate facilities there to supply. If anything, the current system forces jobs to Mexico."

"We have been exporting jobs to Mexico for the last 30 years, probably fewer today than 10 years ago," Kast said.

And what about environmental considerations? "Our argument is as Mexico becomes wealthier, it will have more opportunity to solve problems," Boudreau said. "If we keep Mexico poor, I assure you it will become an environmental disaster."

Allied Signal

Businesses like Detroit Diesel, headquartered in Redford, and Federal Mogul, headquartered in Southfield, have contributed financially to the Michigan International Trade Coalition lobbying effort, Boudreau said.

Other MITC members identified by that organization include Kenneth Way, chairman of Lear Seating in Southfield; Ronald L. Roudebush, automotive division president, Rockwell International, Troy; and James McGraw, executive vice president, Fruehauf International, Southfield.

Boudreau concedes, however, that NAFTA ratification is in trouble. Support of federal lawmakers generally shakes out along party lines, he said, with Democrats opposing and Republicans supporting.

Even if NAFTA were to fly, it would take years to fully take effect and trade wouldn't be totally free, Kast and Boudreau said. As now proposed, some businesses like glass manufacturers wouldn't benefit much.

Still, the consortium plugs away.

"The bottom line is a more open market in Mexico for Michigan products," Boudreau said. "Our products will be more competitive there and we'll have more flexibility to source provide."

"I cut my mortgage from 30 years to 15 years with no increase in payments."

FAMILY LIFE

EARTHA DEYAMPERT

Kids' books open doors to the world

Books and children go together. It's a combination that parents and educators should continue to promote as well as help children develop an appreciation for different ethnic and cultural books.

Children's literature opens a world of information. It not only builds vocabulary, it increases imagination. Children should read or be read to often. And it is important that the books selected include multicultural experiences.

Multicultural literature can introduce children to different people of the world. Children can explore different languages and dialects with such books, but foremost, such literature provides opportunities to help them develop social sensitivity and see similarities between cultures.

Check your own personal library of children's books. Do the books include children and adults from a variety of racial and ethnic groups? How are the people depicted or characterized? Does the information provided support children's increase in self-concept and cultural identity?

Check your child's school library for the same and ask your child's day care provider or professional about the books being read to the children on a daily basis.

There are so many interesting and good books appropriate for preschool through elementary school-aged children that both children and adults can choose. Don't limit children as it relates to enjoying books that are beautifully illustrated, have a delightful story content and rhythmic language and dialects.

While children are out of school for the summer, make reading a part of their daily routine. There's nothing like sitting under a shady tree, sipping lemonade and soaking up a good book. Invite a child on a "vacation" to a far-away land through the pages of a book.

Here are some multicultural books to consider. Check your local library or the Olive Press in West Bloomfield for a variety of quality multicultural books for children of all ages.

■ "Black Is Brown Is Tan" by Arnold Adoff — The everyday events in the life of a happy, affectionate, biracial family are sensitively portrayed for preschool and elementary-aged children.

■ "Baby Animals" by Margaret Wise Brown — A lost classic, it has been reissued with warm illustrations by Susan Jeffers. The lyrical story follows baby animals and their mothers throughout the day. Culturally, it's African American and for preschool children.

■ "Banam" by Jeanne M. Lee — Based on her childhood experiences in Vietnam, Lee tells the story of Nan and the special holiday of Thanh-Minh. Meaning pure and bright, this holiday is reserved for honoring one's ancestors and presenting them offerings. However, Nan learns an important lesson that day from Banam, the keeper. The book is geared for elementary-aged children.

■ "Elijah the Slave" by I.B. Singer — A Hebrew legend that is told with simplicity and spirit and illustrated with richly colored pictures reminiscent of medieval art, it is for elementary-aged children.

■ "The Empty Pot" by Demi — The Emperor of China is getting old. He summons the children of the kingdom to his palace and gives each one a flower seed. "In a year's time show me what you have grown," he declares, "and the flower will choose my successor." For preschool and elementary-aged children.

■ "The Enchanted Books: A Tale from Krakow" by Janina Porazinska — This engaging picture book relates the traditional Polish folktale of a miller's daughter who is taught to read by an old beggar woman and because of her reading ability is able to outwit an evil enchanter. For elementary-aged children.

■ "Family Pictures" by Carmen L. Garza — Going to the fair. Making tamales. Picking cactus. Dreaming of the future. The day-to-day experiences of a young girl in a traditional Hispanic community are the basis of this lovingly told, beautifully illustrated book. For elementary-aged children.

■ "Hats, Hats, Hats" by Anne Morris — This photographic look at hats from all over the world also provides a look at the faces of the people who wear them, the places they live, how they work and play. An index at the back of the book goes into more detail. For elementary-aged children.

■ "Here Are My Hands" by Bill Martin Jr. — This book does more than teach the parts of the body. By featuring children of different races, it celebrates the universality of people around the world. For preschoolers.

A beginning: Gloria Walker of Plymouth still has the magazine she found in a doctor's office that gave her the answer 19 physicians couldn't — her ongoing illness was the result of disease caused by her silicone breast implants.

Experience is basis for business

Gloria Walker has seen more doctors than she cares to count, but it was a magazine article that explained her bizarre maladies. Now she's using her experiences to help other women deal with their feelings about silicone disease.

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Gloria Walker knows what it means to hurt. It has been more years than she'd care to remember since she's had a pain-free moment.

She wears braces on her hands to keep her thumbs from dislocating. A short stroll to her front door can leave her short of breath. She's even had memory lapses and anxiety attacks.

Walker has been to 19 doctors, specialists in everything from neurology and rheumatology to cardiology and psychiatry, none of whom could explain her ailments. She's had every test there is with negative results.

The doctors couldn't come up with an explanation. But what they couldn't tell her an article in a magazine did.

Walker is among the growing number of women being diagnosed with silicone disease caused by silicone breast implants.

"You never know how you're going to feel when you get up in the morning," Walker said. "It's like your immune system is conducting a civil war within your body. It can't send out enough of its little armies to attack the tissue."

Walker understands what women like herself are going through. She understands the feelings of anger, of not being told the truth about the implants. She understands the feelings of helplessness, of not being able to find someone who will believe the pain is real.

Sounding board

That's why she has come up with the idea for S.B.I.C. (Silicone Breast Implant Counseling), a consulting business meant strictly for women who have had implants. The idea is to be a sounding board for women, providing them with the latest information on the implant problem and showing them how to "get counted."

"I'm not here to tell them what doctor to go to or what medication to take," Walker said. "I'm not a doctor; I don't claim to be a doctor. I'm not a psychiatrist; I don't claim to be a psychiatrist. That's the not the point of this."

"These women need to relate with someone who knows what they're going through, they need to talk to someone who will give them positive feelings, not negative ones. A lot of women are still in denial. They shouldn't feel guilty about what they did; everyone wants to look good."

Walker is running her business out of her Plymouth apartment. She has a private telephone line and for a small fee, about $40, she will spend as long as necessary with women.

She got the idea after reading a newspaper column that basically said that people with handicaps are the best experts about their conditions — and after a visit to a psychiatrist who "was more interested in whether I had a red wagon as a child than the anger I had about the implants."

"I'm here to listen and compare notes," she said. "I'm here to listen and sympathize with them. They need to know someone cares; they need to know that they don't need to be humiliated, scared or feel guilty."

Diagnosed as having fibrocystic breast disease, Walker had several benign lumps removed while in her 20s. It was her doctor who suggested she have reconstructive surgery. He showed her a silicone breast implant and assured her that it was safe.

Within a year of the surgery, her good health turned bad. She was in and out of the hospital, suffering from kidney infections and joint pains. By 1978, the implants had begun to encapsulate and by 1978 they had turned into "two hardballs."

Walker had the implants replaced and had another tumor removed. A year later, one implant began creeping up her chest. Her breast sagged, leaving an indentation where the implant should have been.

She had a third operation in 1983 to correct the problem. It wasn't until she saw her records almost a decade later did she discover the doctor had re-used the implants during the corrective surgery.

Shortly after the operation and still feeling poorly, Walker awoke one night, screaming for no apparent reason. She was rushed to the hospital and diagnosed as having a nervous breakdown.

"I don't know why it happened or what came over me," she said. "Now I think it was the toxic chemicals in my system."

Living in pain

By 1989, she discovered yet another lump in a breast. She also was suffering from extreme pain in her joints, arms, hands and hips. It was the beginning of her many visits to doctors.

She was checked for such maladies as arthritis and lupus. She also saw a dermatologist to try and diagnose the

Bird watching: At bird markets in China, native wild birds, finches, parrots, parakeets and canaries along with bamboo cages in all shapes and sizes are for sale.

A new parakeet brings a bit of home to China

LETTERS FROM CHINA

We are now the proud owners of an as yet unnamed Chinese parakeet. The apartment seemed so quiet after nearly 30 years of four children, three grandchildren, and a succession of parakeets. Something that I always dreamed of having, peace and quiet, suddenly became less appealing.

After my husband's interpreter agreed to care for the bird when we travel and to adopt him when we return home, we ventured to the bird market.

In China, elderly men are very fond of birds. These men can be seen everywhere riding three-wheeled bicycles or walking while carrying their birds in beautiful, hand-carved bamboo cages. Decorative brass handles for carrying and painted porcelain cups for food and water adorn these cages. Most have blue covers which zip over them for all-weather protection. The proud owners walk along, even in mid-winter, swinging the cages so that the birds flap their wings, thereby getting their daily exercise.

We have found four bird markets which we visit often. Native wild birds, finches, parrots, parakeets and canaries are sold throughout the markets from various stalls. Bamboo cages in all shapes and sizes, some even decorated with carved ivory designs, hang in other stalls. All types of seeds, worms and crickets are sold at the market. The children especially like the crickets and cherish lovely little cricket boxes in which to keep them.

The Chinese people love these markets and congregate there, comparing their pets and watching others buy. We drew quite a crowd as we picked out a young gray and turquoise bird and an elaborate cage. The merchants were quite dismayed that we only wanted one bird, as they usually sell in pairs. Because we are hoping to teach him English, we only wanted one young male.

After we brought him home and hung him in a perfect spot, we found that we had made one big mistake. Suddenly, this horrible gnawing sound echoed through the apartment as our bird chewed his way through his expensive new cage. We had forgotten that parakeets have a different type of beak than songbirds and love to chew on anything. Now the bird is relegated to a plain metal cage, but he can look at his former home which still looks wonderful hanging in the living room.

It is heartwarming to see how the small pleasures in life, such as owning a little bird, can mean so much to one culture. And to my husband and me, being so far away from our family and friends,

■ "Martin Luther King Jr." by C. Schlank and B. Metzger — This book was created in hopes of realizing the vision Martin Luther King Jr. stated in the civil rights march in 1963, that someday little African American boys and girls will be able to join hands with their white counterparts and walk together. The book explores King's commonality with all children and shares his special talents and dream. For preschoolers and elementary-aged children.

■ "Mirandy and Brother Wind" by Patricia McKissack — Tomorrow night is Mirandy's first cakewalk dance and she'll be kicking up her heels with Brother Wind. But catching Brother Wind is difficult. With each strategy, Friend Ezel laughs. But Mirandy is determined to catch Brother Wind and win the cakewalk. Culturally, it's African American and for elementary-aged children.

■ "The Monkey and the Crocodile" retold by Paul Galdone — The Jakatas are Indian fables relating the former births of Budha in various animal disguises. In this retelling, he is a clever little monkey who twice foils the attempts of the crocodile to capture him. For preschool and elementary-aged children.

■ "Moonsong Lullaby" by Jamake Highwater — As the moon moves across the sky, it observes the activities of an Indian camp and of the natural phenomena surrounding it. Full color illustrations grace this book. For preschool and elementary-aged children.

■ "Molly's Pilgrim" by Barbara Cohen — The girls in the third grade laugh at Molly and make fun of her imperfect English and old country clothes. Molly thinks she will never belong until the day she brings Mama's Pilgrim doll to school for the class Thanksgiving project. It is then that she realizes that it takes "all kinds of Pilgrims to make a Thanksgiving." For elementary-aged children.

Writer has compassion, tenderness

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Lorene, I have been intrigued by your response to people regarding their handwriting. I just had my Big One — my 65th birthday. I am left handed and through the years I have noticed my penmanship has changed many times. I think for the better.

I am also aware if I become anxious or stressed my writing becomes larger or I sometimes print certain words. Anxiously awaiting your response. Thank you.

Garden City

Happy belated birthday! Besides his phenomenal baseball skills, Satchel Paige is fondly remembered for saying "Age is a matter of mind. If you don't mind, it doesn't matter."

Our writer today is a genteel lady endowed with compassion, empathy and tenderness. Her kind heart responds to the needs of others. I can almost visualize her simmering chicken soup in her kitchen right after hearing of a friend's illness. She is especially caring and gentle with small children and older folks.

When everything is running smoothly, she is happy. Friction is upsetting and she tries to avoid it whenever possible. She will compromise or give in, whatever is necessary to keep the peace. At times she may act more friendly than she actually feels.

This writer is not inclined to take big risks. She plays her cards close to her chest. The need for security and her strong ties to the past cannot be missed.

It is quite possible she may have had a traumatic experience in the past. She seems to carry inferior feelings as a result.

I think she would appreciate a little pat on the back and some encouraging words. She was feeling a little tired or discouraged at the time she wrote her letter.

Possibly the most salient part of her handwriting is the long inflated lower loops. In graphology, this area represents the material/physical side of the writer. Among other things a strong interest in money and/or what it represents is suggested.

A need to be busy and involved is also hinted at. She may already have too many interests to pursue them effectively. Her emotional energy is not being released.

Freedom to move around is important to our writer. She does not like to sit still and concentrate on mental projects for long periods of time.

She finds people from all walks of life interesting. A vivid imagination may tend to make her prone to dramatize reality. She probably gets carried away with her stories at times without even realizing it.

Her signature has a period after it. While this is not often seen, it infers the importance the writer places on being thorough.

those small pleasures seem to brighten each day by bringing us a tiny piece of home.

And for us, the first two weeks of March were very exciting in Beijing. The Olympic Selection Committee was here to evaluate the city. Beijing hopes to host the 2000 Olympic Games.

The entire city worked extremely hard, building new roads and preparing the city for what could be an enormous event. Flags, banners and billboards hung throughout the streets. Bands even played on the street corners to welcome the committee.

In addition to all of the fanfare for the Olympic Committee, the China Art Gallery was exhibiting Rodin's sculptures. This was the first time that "The Thinker" has left France since its completion. It was a beautiful display, including "The Kiss," "The Gates of Hell" and "The Age of Bronze."

On Monday, March 8, the Chinese people celebrated International Women's Labor Day. All of the foreign women in Beijing received invitations to a celebration in honor of us at the Great Hall of the People.

The Great Hall is immense; one room can seat 5,000 people for dinner. Built in only 10 months by one million workers, the hall has a separate room for each of the provinces in China.

Four of us — Linda Giglio of Bloomfield Hills, Kathi Tomaszewski of Detroit, Ione Head from Daytona, Fla., and myself — were allowed to drive directly up to the front of the Great Hall. We were videotaped by the Chinese, climbing the stairs and entering the Great Hall.

It was a beautiful spring day and across the street in Tiananmen Square, the flags were flying in honor of the Olympic Committee, while huge dragon and bird kites drifted in the sky.

Madame Chin Muhun, president of the All-China Women's Foundation, gave a speech and selections from the Peking and Italian operas were presented. Several round tables were arranged around the hall, loaded with an assortment of fruits, nuts, small cakes, spring rolls (like egg rolls) and jiazi (dumplings). The Chinese always serve a large assortment of foods, each painstakingly prepared and decorated.

The Chinese prove to be very gracious hosts. Celebrating International Women's Day with them was a very exciting experience. If the Olympic Committee chooses Beijing, people from the entire world will get a taste of Chinese hospitality.

rahes she was developing, and two urologists because of constant kidney and bladder infections and traces of blood in her urine.

"I was sent to three or four neurologists; I was sent to a pain clinic, a rehab center for therapy, even an orthopedic surgeon," Walker said. "My family doctor sent me to one neurologist who said the pain I was having was all in my mind."

A secretary by profession, her growing list of medical problems made working difficult. She "had a wonderful job" as secretary to the vice president of operations of a company but in August of 1991 had to give it up.

"I loved my job," she said. "I had worked hard for it all my life. I tried to work for so long. I worked a year in pain and then I couldn't handle it anymore."

Starting point

The Glamour magazine article Walker found while sitting in a doctor's office gave her a starting point. The magazine put her in touch with the Command Trust Network, which keeps women informed on the latest information about the implants.

It was through CNT that she found two doctors in Cleveland, Ohio — a rheumatologist who treats the symptoms of her disease and a plastic surgeon who replaced the silicone implants with saline ones in 1991. The plastic surgeon had recommended against the replacements, and Walker plans to have them removed later this year. She discovered that the bags are made of silicone.

Walker wants women to know they don't have to go through what she did. As part of her consulting work, she will provide women with the who, what and how about different implant-related organizations that keep members up to date on the implant problem.

CTN is one such group. There also is the Breast Implant Information Network. Walker has registered with Medic Alert, which also provides information about implants.

"I try to stay up with latest findings and I want them to have their voices heard," she said. "I feel this is something I have to do. It's got to be done. Women out there are being terrified. I want them to know what's going on in their body and why."

"I don't want them sitting in a corner and crying to themselves. There was a time I felt like that, then I got angry."

Women interested in more information about S.B.I.C. can call Gloria Walker at 416-0875.

Do you know how a person is born again? Most Christians think that the new birth occurs as a result of a person's will, decision, or action. However, the Bible teaches that the new birth is not based on the will of man but on the will of God alone (John 1:13 & 12:21). Only by carefully studying the Bible can we avoid the errors that are often taught about being born again. If you are anxious to know the truth, come learn with us.

When it's hot Churches cool it for the summer

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

There was a time when church on a hot Sunday morning meant the whirring of electric fans and shaping any available piece of paper into a hand fan. If you were lucky you got a seat by the window, but the luck only applied if there was a breeze.

The fans would circulate a breath of warm air across the worshippers, offering a bit of a respite from that sticky, clammy feeling. But come time for the sermon and the sanctuary took on the semblance of Hades. The fans usually were shut off, lest you miss a word of the sermon because of their noisy whirring.

The Sunday morning game plan was to dress as coolly as possible, but shunning such items as stockings for the ladies and suits and ties for the men was akin to a sin. There was no room in the category of Sunday best for shorts, T-shirts and the like.

Times have changed and so has church dress. Casual now is acceptable Sunday dress in the summertime . . . but not too casual. You might catch a chill. Most churches have air conditioning, leaving the fire and brimstone to the sermon.

Going casual

"If anything, our members dress warmer," said Pastor Mark Moore of the Agape Christian Center in Plymouth. "The sanctuary is air conditioned and we tend to keep it cool. If a woman wore a sundress, she'd probably freeze."

■ 'Sometimes the men don't dress in suits or they don't wear ties, but there really isn't a change during the summer.'

Pastor John Allen
Garden City

The more casual dress tends to show up at the Wednesday evening service, where men are more apt to wear sports shirts and slacks.

But very casual is the style for the children's ministry held in the center's gymnasium, according to Moore. The children show up in shorts and with good reason.

"That's not air-conditioned, so I don't blame them for wearing shorts," Moore said. "I would, too."

As Pastor Bufford Coe of Aldersgate United Methodist Church in Redford Township sees it, "adults seem to have limits on how far they'll go" in dressing casual for church during the summer months. Suit jackets and ties are a rarity at the church these days and even Coe and fellow Pastor Clement Parr go casual.

"During the school year we wear robes, but during the summer we'll wear a shirt and tie, but with the weather we had recently, we have forgotten the ties and gone with open collars."

But that's not to say, they don't dress for the occasion. Coe recalls a wedding ceremony on a hot summer's day where he donned his robes.

"Everyone was in a tuxedo, and I felt I couldn't show up in shirt sleeves and open collar," he said. "I sweated my head off, but I felt I had to do it for such a formal occasion."

An oddity

One place bermuda shorts did make an appearance was at Christ Our Savior Lutheran Church in Livonia for services July 12. A few men played it cool, so to speak, after the sanctuary air conditioning went on the fritz.

"I can understand why," said Pastor Luther Werth. "The air conditioning wasn't working for a few weeks. I was a bit taken back, but I'd rather have them come to church like that than not come at all."

Attendance tends to be split between the two Sunday morning services, but, surprisingly, the number is increasing at the late service. Werth credits it with a growth spurt.

"Our attendance has been increasing a lot, so the newer people may be going to the second service," he said. There hasn't been much of a change in style at Community Baptist Church in Garden City. Air conditioning has "made sitting in church more tolerable in hot weather." In fact, in some cases members bring sweaters, ac-ording to Pastor John Allen. "Sometimes the men don't dress in suits or they don't wear ties, but there really isn't a change during the summer," Allen said. "We've had it a long time — 25 years — so we're spoiled."

Attendance, measured by those at Sunday School, has stayed steady during the summer. There's the usual vacation absenteeism, but for the most part 120 people are at the Sunday morning and evening services, Allen explained.

But one place where very casual dress is acceptable is at summer camp. Allen is in charge of junior camp and will be accompanying youth to facilities in the Miami Valley near Dayton, Ohio, this summer.

"I've seen people come out of a meeting (at camp) covered in sweat, so we usually wear camp clothes," Allen said.

St. Hilary Roman Catholic Church in Redford Township doesn't have air conditioning in the church but that's not a problem. Church services are moved to the social hall for warm weather. And at St. John Neumann Roman Catholic Church in Canton Township, shorts did make a showing even. "And we have air conditioning!" an officer worker said.

So while country singer Jerry Reed crooned that "when you're hot, you're hot," most churches try to subscribe to the other half of the jingle — "when you're not, you're not."

Our concern for the city of Detroit

RABBI IRWIN GRONER

In the relationship between the cities and the suburbs, some assumptions are misleading and untrue.

It is often assumed that the compelling reasons why all suburbanites should be committed to the welfare of Detroit, and to the point of making real personal sacrifices on its behalf, is because all suburbanites came from the city originally.

Therefore, the argument proceeds, all suburbanites have a debt to repay for the city's parks in which they played as children, for the schools in which they were educated, and for the churches and synagogues in which they were raised in faith.

The fact of the matter is that a very large percentage of families in the newer suburbs never lived in the city but were born and raised in the older suburbs.

Of the population of the metropolitan area, we wonder how many people count Royal Oak, or Ferndale, or Southfield, or Lincoln Park, or any of the dozen or so nearer suburbs around Detroit as their hometown?

Or in an area whose chief industry employs a national work force, how many people move here from other parts of the country? Thus, if there were an attachment to a city, it might as likely as not be for Cleveland, or Philadelphia, or Chicago and Detroit being a place one heard about but never actually visited.

Those of us concerned for the city's social and economical plight should hope to involve others in these concerns but not for sentimental reasons.

It is a dangerous and blissful assumption that sympathy, compassion and concern for our troubled city and its people can be generated by nostalgia. But there are far better reasons than that for hoping that Detroit will once again be as fine a city to live in or near as some of us remember.

We need to restore the economic and social strength of Detroit because the city alone can provide the vital center for what could otherwise be a group of disparate communities.

Detroit has institutions of art, learning, culture and entertainment which provide for the life of the spirit. Sports activities and ethnic festivals similarly enrich and diversify the experiences of those who live in a large area around Detroit.

Without a strong center, the spokes of the wheel cannot hold. In much the same way, the legal, professional, commercial and financial establishments of downtown Detroit need to be nurtured, encouraged and enhanced for the benefit of all.

We who live in the suburbs should share in this commitment not because of nostalgia for the past, but rather because the renaissance we bring to Detroit will serve to bless us and our children.

GARDENING

MARTY FIGLEY

Clematis: no wonder this vine's so popular

One of the most spectacular flowering vines, and a favorite of many people, is the clematis.

The name comes from the Greek word "klematis." Klematis was Dioscorides' name for a vine with slender branches. In early days, the roots were dried and used as shampoo. American Indians used the bark to treat fevers.

Joan Denton of Birmingham loves her clematis plants. She advises that one of the most important things in order to grow them successfully is to dig a big, generous hole, at least 12 to 15 inches deep and wide. Space the plants 24 inches apart to give them plenty of room to grow; keep them 18 inches away from the supporting structure.

Mix plenty of Canadian peat into the moist soil when planting; water well. If it hasn't rained, Denton waters every other day; when there's sun and no rain, every day. She fertilizes at least once every six weeks with a water soluble 15-30-15 formula by using a hose-end sprayer.

Skip Forrest of Harold Thomas Nursery in Livonia concurs with Denton: these plants like moist and cool, but not soggy, soil. Some clematis like alkaline soil; he advises to read the labels.

Forrest recommends the following plants for first-time clematis growers: for late spring to summer bloom, "Beauty of Worcester," violet blue; summer bloom, "Jackmanii," purple; late summer, "Vitalba (Old Man's Beard)," greenish white. "Henryi," with white blooms, will flower twice each season. Spring blooms need to be cut off Henryi so that it will have energy to rebloom in fall.

Control sunlight

"The trick to clematis is the roots should be without the sun, but the blooms need to be towards the sun," Denton said. "The reason I love clematis is because you can plant all kinds of other things around them to shade the bottom."

She uses evergreen shrubs, roses and other foliage plants. She likes annuals for color, such as pansies — "cause I love their faces" — and has found that impatiens do well in an area that receives only afternoon sun and is shady the rest of the day.

A large Jackmanii is supported by a lamp post beside the driveway and is splendid with large, saucer-size (7- to 9-inch) deep purple blooms. Beside the front porch is another Jackmanii with smaller blooms, which echo the same color.

New this year is a Bees Jubilee with a lavender flower brushed with purple stripes and a yellow center; nearby is Ville de Lyon, a later summer bloomer in a soft fuchsia color.

In the rear of the house, facing east, another large Jackmanii has blooms that will continue until late September. It has grown to the top of the 10-foot trellis. By the end of summer, it will have climbed up the twine supports that Denton's husband, Ron, has affixed to the roof gutter.

Nearby is the hard-to-grow Nelly Mosher, with light green foliage. Its bloom will be soft-white with lavender stripes.

Some authorities advise that all newly planted clematis should be pruned to about six inches, but Denton lets the vines stay as they are for the first two or three years until they are well established.

After the first year of bloom, timely pruning is necessary. Early spring bloomers need to be pruned back in late winter to a height of about 24 to 36 inches after flowering.

Late-spring or early-summer flowering plants, which also produce flowers on new wood, need to be cut back to 24 inches the following spring. Denton's goal is May 1. Then, the late-blooming types, which are produced on the current year's growth, need to be pruned right to ground level at the start of each season.

Supporting roles

Denton has found that plants bought locally do better than the mail-ordered ones. She likes to buy them when they are about three feet high, in bud or already blooming.

She doesn't remove the support stake that the plant is growing on, but lets the vine continue to climb on the trellis, pole or other support provided. Wire mesh also gives good support. These tenacious plants can be easily patterned by tying them to a support until they are established.

There are more than 250 species and at least 5,000 cultivars in this family, so this wide selection should please the most discriminating gardener. Our season begins in May and continues until the first frost. The feathery seeds that develop after bloom time add another facet to this favorite plant.

Marty Figley is an advanced master gardener based in Birmingham. You can leave her a message by dialing 953-2047 on a Touch-Tone phone, then her mailbox number, 1859. Her fax number is 644-1314.

Chihuly glass art sparkles

Eleven galleries of glass installations by legendary artist Dale Chihuly create a mysterious, mythical world for suburban and urban viewers alike at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

An unforgettable experience awaits families upon entering the mysterious world of glass artist Dale Chihuly, whose work is on view through Aug. 15 in the Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward at Farnsworth.

"Glass Environments-Dale Chihuly: Installations 1964-1992" plays on the imagination with 11 galleries of abstract blown-glass forms serving as props to create a mythical land where creatures seemingly lurk, hidden from sight. Many Observerland residents are among the volunteers staffing DIA galleries (See related story, 2D).

From Chihuly's colossal chandelier that cradles cherubs while shooting gold and blue glass flames, to a towering forest scene created for a Claude DeBussy opera, the Oz-like environment, including a yellow balloon chandelier composed of 280 individual balloons blown from glass, astounds the viewer with its inherent whimsical nature showcased in a total of 7,000 square feet.

"To see this exhibition is to understand that art is something that directly enters into your system through the eyes," said Jan van der Marck, DIA curator of 20th century art. "The glass is so immediate, so direct, it doesn't need explanation. You get thrown in there and you're thrilled."

Organized by the DIA in cooperation with the Seattle Art Museum where it originated, the exhibition, while not a retrospective, loosely documents the development of Chihuly's art.

Van der Marck curated the exhibition for Detroit after seeing it in Seattle. Major changes in staging occurred between there and Detroit.

For the first time, the DIA exhibits Chihuly's work in separate rooms thanks to a concept originated by DIA resident architect Louis Gauci to show each series individually. Also, while strong lighting and a white background greeted visitors in Seattle, Detroit's exhibition awakens the imagination via an eerie nighttime atmosphere.

"We didn't have a space with windows. With the darkened interiors and illuminating light, it's even more magical," van der Marck said.

"Persian Pergola": A glass ceiling tunnel created by world-renowned artist Dale Chihuly dazzles DIA viewers with a rainbow of reflections.

Livonian demonstrates marbling in Ann Arbor

SPECIAL WRITER

Ann Arbor Art Fairs, 3D

Susan Argiroff casts color on the surface of a tank filled with a solution of carrageen moss (Irish seaweed) to create marbled patterns passed down for centuries.

She brings traditional and contemporary marbled fabrics and papers to the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair as part of Michigan Surface Design Association (MSDA) through July 24.

Argiroff will demonstrate the ancient version as well as free-form marbling today, July 22, in MSDA booths 186 and 188 at the fair.

Marbling is the creation of designs that look similar to marble in a tank holding a solution of carrageen or methyl cellulose, then transferring those designs to other surfaces such as paper or fabric.

"It's the true historical form of marbling, one that's been around since the eighth century in Japan," Argiroff said. "The Turkish people have long been famous for their marbling."

Standing in front of a 30-by-60-inch tank built and prepared 24 hours beforehand with the carrageen by husband Carl, Argiroff drops permanent inks onto the surface of the solution: first antelope, then green and finally, red earth.

This time the ancient craft she demonstrates is Suminagashi, a Japanese form of marbling with ink. At other times, she will use permanent dyes to cast abstract shapes and forms.

As alternating colors form like bull's eyes on the surface of the tank, Argiroff performs one last task before she begins to draw. Recycling newspaper, she skims contaminants from the tank.

Artists Sandra Weed of Westland and Edythe Newbourne of Dearborn will teach an "East Meets West" watercolor workshop Aug. 16-29 in Traverse City.

On Saturday, Aug. 21, two special workshops are planned: "Marketing Your Arts and Crafts" taught by Weed and "Textured Paper Painting" taught by Newbourne.

DIA volunteers a backbone of special exhibits

SPECIAL WRITER

Without the core of 204 volunteers in the Detroit Institute of Arts Gallery Service program, special exhibitions like "Glass Environments-Dale Chihuly: Installations 1964-1992" possibly would die in the planning stages.

In October 1991, doubt existed whether the DIA would remain in operation after Gov. John Engler slashed nearly $7 million in state appropriations from the museum's budget as part of decreased state arts support. The volunteer Gallery Service program was initiated as a response to the DIA's funding woes.

By January 1992, the state cutback had forced the museum to shorten hours and eliminate half the personnel as well as many of its programs. Facing this loss of staff, from security guards to assistant curators, a rotating schedule was instituted where half the galleries would close for the morning, the other half for the afternoon. This plan ensured at least half of the DIA's collection would remain open to the public for viewing.

"The volunteers are keeping the museum open," said Gloria Parker, Auxiliary Services Department volunteer coordinator. "Gallery Service is new but we're joining a 30-year tradition (of volunteers assisting the museum)."

Whether they work shifts once a week or once a month, volunteers like Ilene Intihar of Redford Township and husband and wife Jim Wilson and Cathy Wallace of Westland help keep the artworks in the DIA's 101 galleries available for viewing.

"We're the greeters, the direction givers," Wallace said. "We're the friendly presence in the gallery and we serve as extra eyes and ears for the guards."

Wallace and Wilson began volunteering time every other Saturday to the museum in March. Wilson feels this is necessary to keep the exhibits open.

Intihar concurs. That's why she volunteered to join the ranks of Gallery Service more than a year ago. She works the Sunday-morning shifts anywhere from two to four times a month for a variety of reasons.

"You feel you're doing something important for the galleries to stay open, so if people come from this area, another state or a foreign country and want to see the 'Wedding Dance' by Bruegel, they won't find, 'Too bad, it's closed,'" Intihar said.

Experiences like watching visitors walk beneath the Persian Pergola (glass ceiling) by Chihuly make volunteer work rewarding for Intihar.

Another benefit from being near the art, she says, is its spurred her on to travel extensively to view exhibitions like the Henri Matisse retrospective that ran through January at The Museum of Modern Art in New York City.

"It's been a delightful experience for me, personally very satisfying. I would encourage anyone interested in learning more about Gallery Service to contact Gloria Parker because she adds quality to the volunteer experience. She's so approachable, such an upbeat person."

This summer, with the Chihuly exhibition delighting DIA visitors, "would be a good time to try on the volunteer gallery service to see if they would enjoy it, to see if it would be fulfilling to them," Intihar said.

Gallery Service volunteers work three hour shifts at least once a month. To be considered an active volunteer, 50 hours a year are required. To orient volunteers with the museum and their duties, applicants receive two hours of training in a special session.

If you would like to spend a few hours on a fairly regular basis surrounded by paintings, sculpture and decorative arts by Monet, Michelangelo, Warhol and Chihuly, call Gloria Parker in the Auxiliary Services Department at 833-0247.

men used on their nets when Chihuly roamed the shores of the Pacific coast as a child, Nijima Floats glow in a rainbow of iridescent colors on a bed of glittering glass.

"Chihuly is the world's greatest artist working in glass, a phenomena. He's so potent," van der Marck said. "There's a glow that radiates from the man."

Born and raised in Washington, Chihuly in 1965 blew his first crude pieces from melted flat glass in his Seattle basement.

While a student at the University of Washington, he studied architecture, earning a bachelor of art degree in interior design.

Upon hearing about a glass program at the University of Wisconsin run by Harvey Littleton, who many consider the father of the American studio glass movement, Chihuly chose to study glass there, earning a master's degree in sculpture. Afterwards, it was on to the Rhode Island School of Design (RISD), eventually to earn a master's of fine art degree in sculpture.

Chihuly interrupted RISD curriculum long enough to study with the masters of Murano at the Venini Fabrica glassblowing factory on a Fulbright Fellowship.

Chihuly initiated glass programs at RISD and Pilchuk Glass School in Stanwood, Wash. Around the world, he has shown his art in solo exhibitions at museums and galleries from New York to The Netherlands as well as Israel and Brazil.

The Detroit exhibition came about when van der Marck saw Chihuly in Aspen, Colo., last year. The two had known each other since the 1970s, when both lived and worked on the West Coast.

"Chihuly told me I should come out to the Seattle Art Museum to see the exhibition if I had time. I made the time," van der Marck said. "It's a knock-out exhibit."

However, it was one that almost didn't come about due to the cost. That's what prompted Ferdinand Hampson, president of Habatat Galleries in Boca Raton, Aspen and Farmington Hills to become involved.

Hampson worked to encourage recognition of the studio glass movement and the medium as an art form through the International Class Invitational Exhibition he's produced for the last 21 years.

"Jan came to me and said he would have to pass," Hampson said.

It was at that point Habatat

Galleries contributed financially to the exhibition as Hampson sought ways to raise more money.

Funding was provided by the DIA Founders Junior Council, DIA Founders Society Partnership for Renewal, Friends of Modern Art, Modern Decorative Arts Groups, private donors, the City of Detroit and the state of Michigan.

"It's extraordinary," Hampson said. "The exhibit will give visual images to people that they'll carry the rest of their lives."

Admission is free on Wednesdays; it's $4 for adults and $1 for children and students Thursday to Sunday. Hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday-Friday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Call the DIA at 833-7900.

Scour antique bottle collections at Livonia show

BY SUE BUCK
STAFF WRITER

There's no limit to the depths some members of the Metropolitan Detroit Antique Bottle Club will go to unearth or retrieve their precious cargo.

Some antique bottles have been in the family, it's true. But others are found in out-of-the-way places, like attics as well as house crawl spaces, dumps, even old out-house holes.

People weren't particular about where they threw their old bottles. "Old out-houses are a treasure trove," said Richard Roosen, club president. "The artifacts remain. They're like a time capsule."

Out-houses are usually so old and unused by the time bottle hunters arrive and start digging that remnants of the original use are long gone, Roosen said.

Other bottle collectors dive into bodies of water for their prized possessions. Whether by dumps or dives, 70 dealers from six states and Canada will display their cache at the Metropolitan Detroit Antique Bottle Club's 20th annual show and sale, running from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, July 25, in the Livonia East Holiday Inn, at I-275 and Six Mile.

Admission is $2. Collectible old glass will range in shapes, colors and sizes. Prices will range from 50 cents to $5,000. Free appraisals will be available.

"This is not a flea market," said Roosen, a Troy attorney. He refers to his club role as "the chief cook and bottle washer."

"I'm the bottle Buddha," he jokes.

Old American glass is American history retold in a handmade mixture of sand and heat that is beautiful, utilitarian and unique. "Early American glass dates back to early colonial days and continues through our presidents and the introduction of railroads, the patent medicine era, the home canning period and the many early breweries and dairies," Roosen said.

Before labeling restrictions, medicine bottles often touted the words "cure" or "tonic" right on the label, Roosen said. Medicine bottles are his favorite type of collector bottles.

Some 4,000 different kinds of fruit jars depicting the home canning period. Many early breweries and dairies used pottery beer bottles and tin-topped milk bottles. As early as 1609, the city of Jamestown boasted a glass house.

Pirate bottles found in south Florida date back to the 1700s. Then bottles found there date skip 200 years to the 1900s.

The reason: South Florida was mere uninhabited swamp land until the turn of this century, Roosen said. "Collecting early American glass is a hobby which gives an appreciation for history and geography, affords a network of friends from coast to coast and produces shelves filled with interest," Roosen said.

Steve and Sherrie Williams of Redford Township have been club members since mid-1992.

They collect fruit jars dating back to the 1800s, milk bottles dating back to the 1930s and medicine bottles dating back to the 1900s. Their 300 bottles come in a variety of colors, including green and purple.

An excavator, Steve started finding bottles about 10 years ago and turned it into a hobby. "I became interested the last couple of years because I like country and old bottles kind of fit into that theme," said Sherrie, who also collects green Depression glass.

The Williams acquired many of their bottles from antique stores and flea markets. "But all of our milk bottles, about 100 of them, we dug out of a dairy dump in Novi last August," Sherrie said.

Their milk bottles are clear in color although some have color or dairy names embossed on them. About 30 different styles are included. Dairies around Michigan are represented, including the old Bodker's Dairy in Redford.

"We fell upon the site during one of my husband's excavations," Sherrie said. "One of the bottles, a cream-top baby face milk bottle, is worth about $180."

"An old bottle (prior to early 1900) is a genuine work of art," Roosen said.

Metropolitan Detroit Antique Bottle Club annual dues are $15. For membership information, call Roosen at 885-0912.

Ancient art: Sue Argiroff dips a scarf into a tank of carageenan (seaweed) for marbling.

All elements in a state of readiness, Argiroff prepares to create the design. Using a stick, she swirls colors together ever so gently in the tank. Once the solution stills, Argiroff takes a marbling comb or rake to the red, green and yellow, fashioning a design.

For the final step, she places a yellow scarf on the surface, transferring the swirls of autumn colors. Once the fabric dries, she will heat seal the permanent inks and dyes by pressing.

Ideally, Argiroff says, she likes to marble with the room temperature at 62 degrees.

"Marbling is an exact science," she said. "The temperature, humidity and atmosphere must all be controlled for the best results."

Argiroff has a bachelor of science degree from Wayne State University. She learned the decorative art of marbling from Polly Fox in New Mexico three years ago. Fox, Argiroff said, is one of the top marbling artists in the country.

From a single marbled canvas panel that forms a mobile when two or more panels are added, to fabric by the yard, jackets, pillows and tabletop sculpture, Argiroff will offer them all in her booth at the fair.

Initially, Argiroff worked in decorative marbling. About a year ago, she decided to take the ancient craft to a finer artistic plane.

"Marbling in three dimensions is more exciting," Argiroff said. "I mentally like working with fabric, to see the developing of the fabric's design, but it's what you can do with it artistically after it's done."

Argiroff has exhibited marbling at The Art Gallery in Garden City, Liberty Festival in Canton Township, Plymouth Fall Festival, Novi Town Center Gallery and Inklings, a gallery/boutique in Asheville, N.C.

Other Observerland artists exhibiting as part of MSDA include quilt artist Nancy Meyer of Plymouth.

Ann Arbor Art Fairs run through Saturday

SPECIAL WRITER

Forget the sizzling dog days of summer. Celebrate the arts at one of the top 10 fine arts and contemporary crafts festivals in the country. Visit the Ann Arbor Art Fairs through Saturday, July 24.

So grab a pair of comfortable shoes, sunglasses and sunscreen. Artists from 45 states, Canada and Mexico will offer cutting edge as well as traditional paintings, drawings, ceramics, sculpture, printmaking, glass, photography, 2-D and 3-D mixed media, metal, jewelry, wood and fiber.

Three separate juried art fairs line the sidewalks of Ann Arbor, annually drawing more than 500,000 visitors, the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair, State Street Area Art Fair and Summer Art Fair.

Since 1960, the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair has offered innovative art of quality. This year, 221 artists will exhibit wares on South University, East University and Church Street.

The 33-year-old original juried fair offers ongoing demonstrations in painting, pottery, weaving and even basketry by 16 artists.

From 10 a.m. to noon today in booths 186 and 188 of the Michigan Surface Design Association, Susan Argiroff of Livonia will illustrate the ins and outs of transfer processes used in the ancient craft of marbling.

From 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, Nancy Meyer of Plymouth will showcase the finer points of quilting. In booth 130, the Ann Arbor Potter's Guild will offer wheel throwing techniques at 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. throughout the length of the fair.

Art activities for children organized by the Michigan Art Education Association will take place in a Church Street location just north of South University. Although activities are free, donations help support art education in Michigan. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

Wood scrap sculptures will keep children's hands and minds busy today from 10 a.m. to noon. Torn-paper stencil drawings take over from noon to 2 p.m. and Calder mobiles 2-4 p.m. On Friday, young artists will create scrimshaw plaster carvings from 10 a.m. to noon, quilt patterns from noon to 2 p.m. and torn-paper stencil drawings 2-4 p.m.

Organized in 1968 by a group of State Street merchants, the State Street Area Art Fair features 235 artists exhibiting on North University, Liberty, Maynard and William streets. The State Street Area Art Fair also hosts the Ann Arbor Fiber Guild booth at the corner of William and State streets.

For the 23rd year, the Summer Art Fair will feature 540 booths filled with art along Main, Liberty and State streets. Sponsored by the Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans, the fair will feature an "Imagination Station" where families can create art together. The activities are free at the U.S. Post Office Plaza on Liberty Street.

At the corner of Main and Liberty, Plymouth artist Tom LeGault demonstrates palette knife and brush techniques (wet on dry). LeGault, well known for creating paintings in an hour and a half, brings his latest abstracts and a brighter palette to the fair this year along with his traditional northern Michigan landscapes. LeGault's palette swings from misty pastels to deeper plums, teals and reds.

The Ann Arbor Transportation Authority will provide shuttle and trolley service during the fair 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Thursday and Friday and 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday. Art fair visitors are encouraged to park free at Briarwood Mall on State Street off I-94 or Pioneer High School, Stadium at Main. Shuttle bus fare is $2 for adults (round trip). Children younger than age 7 ride free.

The art fair trolley will operate between the three fairs charging 50 cents per passenger or free with shuttle ticket. For AATA information, call 996-0400.

Hours for the Ann Arbor Art Fairs are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

Sculptural note: Livonia artist Sue Argiroff created this marbled panel to install singly or with two others to form a mobile.

Realtors, consumers applaud disclosure bills

BY CHRIS MCCOSKY
STAFF WRITER

Every once in a while, government works like it's supposed to: By the people, for the people.

Such was the case two weeks ago when Gov. John Engler signed into law a series of bills that should strengthen truth-in-selling practices in real estate transactions.

"This was special because it was put together using guidelines from both the National Consumers Federation and from the National Board of Realtors," said Dave Wygonik, spokesman for State Senator George Z. Hart (D-Dearborn) one of the bill's sponsors. "This is the way government is supposed to work."

The bills do two things: They force real estate agents to disclose whose interest they represent to potential home buyers and they force the seller of the house to disclose any and all known defects in the house.

"This is something that we have been working on getting through for two years," said Bill Deacon, president of the Western Wayne Oakland County Association of Realtors. "We are very much in support of it and we will work hard to educate our members about it. It is good for both the consumers and for our industry. It puts everybody on the same playing field."

Said Hart: "Too many consumers assume that real estate agents are working for the buyer when, in fact, they are committed to getting the best deal for the seller of the home," Hart said.

"My bill will clear up this matter when the buyer and agent first meet."

There are three types of agent relationships: agent for the seller, agent for the buyer and agent for both parties. If disclosure is not made, agents are subject to limitation or suspension of their license or certificate of registration, a fine not exceeding $10,000 and/or probation.

"The seller's disclosure of defects is something we've been doing for five years," said Dan Elsea, president of the northeast division (Farmington Hills) of Real Estate One. "We were the first in the state to do it and we actually caught some flak for it."

Real Estate One heard the same objections that held up the bill for two years. Attorneys and others skeptical of the Realtors' objectives didn't like the extra paper work.

"It's only a couple of extra pieces of paper that actually make things simpler," Elsea said. "And it increases the level of understanding and clarity. It's really the fairest way. It puts all the cards on the table."

Elsea added that the buyer-seller relationship was adversarial by nature, and the disclosure bills help take the edge off.

Deacon agrees: "It takes everybody off the hook and puts everybody where they should be. Just because the seller doesn't disclose a defect doesn't mean it's going to go away. It'll just end up in court. You are better off getting it out in front."

Which is right where this legislation puts things.

"These bills are a reaction to market action in other states and they address what is going on today," Wygonik said. "They make real estate legislation more pertinent to what's going on and it also offers consumer protection."

Condo associations have power to ban cable television

CONDO QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Our local cable company is insisting that it provide service to the residents of the condominium. The cable company claims that construction of the system is OK over the public right of way and through easements. We don't want cable television. Do we have a chance to resist the cable company?

Chances are your association will be successful in keeping the cable system out. At least four separate Federal Courts of Appeals have upheld the right of a condo association to stop a cable company.

Legislative history regarding cable companies shows that Congress intended to limit cable companies' access to developments. The original statute included a section that would have specifically allowed access to residential units even if the owner of the surrounding areas objected, but that section was deleted.

I am thinking about developing a condo project under a Michigan Limited Partnership Agreement. I have heard about a new type of corporate entity with limited liability.

Can you give me any information on this?

Effective June 1, Michigan adopted a new form of business entity called the Michigan Limited Liability Company (LLC). This new entity combines most of the favorable characteristics of a corporation with attributes of a partnership.

An LLC provides limited liability protection and allows for the flexibility and flow through taxation like a partnership. Its application may be beneficial to many types of businesses with particular emphasis on real estate rental or development, oil and gas extraction and professional and venture capital firms.

BUILDING SCENE'S NAMES & PLACES

Chairman Renwick

Putnam Renwick, vice president in charge of vinyl building products for Livonia-based Wolverine Technologies, will chair the National Association of the Remodeling Industry's convention committee.

Renwick, with 15 years in the building materials industry, has been with Wolverine since 1985. He serves on NARI's board of directors and is a member of the National Member Committee and Manufacturers Council. The convention will be entitled, "America's Remodeling Marketplace."

Rossetti on judge panel

Louis A. Rossetti, president and CEO of Birmingham-based Rossetti Associates Architects, will serve on the jury for the IAKS International Association for Sports and Leisure Facilities design awards in Cologne, Germany, this month. Rossetti won an IAKS award in 1991 for their design of The Palace of Auburn Hills.

ABSC board in place

John J. McManus, organizer of the new Affiliated Building Services Contractors in Michigan association, has put together a board of directors that includes two local building contractors.

Steve Ray of Livonia-based Distinctive Maintenance Inc. and Lewis Small of West Bloomfield, president of Standard Building Maintenance Corp., were named to the 10-member board.

The association was set up to educate its members on matters of mutual importance, communicate concerns and foster the professionalism of the industry.

Information for inclusion in this column should be sent to Marilyn Fitchett, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

Viva la France: Home buyers are getting tired of the neo-classical architecture commonly found in southeastern Michigan and are turning toward classical-influenced plans like this elaborate Country French designed by Bryce and Palazzola.

Country French: quiet civility

BY GERALD FRAWLEY
STAFF WRITER

It's stately elegance with a touch of rural ambiance.

It's sophisticated, yet casual.

It's urbane, not urban.

It's Country French style architecture and it's gaining a foothold among area home buyers.

Bob Bryce, a partner at the West Bloomfield architectural firm of Bryce and Palazzola, said the demand for Country French architecture is keeping his firm plenty busy.

"We're doing about 300 homes right now and the largest single category is what we call Country French."

Country French influenced styles are predominantly found in the upper strata of houses — custom residential homes built for affluent clients — but Bryce said some hints of the Country styles is beginning to creep down into more moderate houses.

He has had so many requests for Country French that he recently spent several weeks in France studying actual examples of homes along the fringe of Paris.

Truth to tell, he is not designing what an architect would call a pure Country French home.

No one, he said, has asked him to design a stucco-walled, thatch roofed house. "What we're really talking about is the influence (of Country French)."

Country French influenced architecture is a more relaxed, less formal type of housing, he said. "It's really a state of mind."

When clients come in and inquire about Country French, it usually begins a discussion along the lines of "Just what do you mean by that?"

Practical and affordable home control systems on display in area sub

If you want to get a glimpse of the future of home control systems, check out the new Mystic Pines community development in Brighton.

These homes, built by Old Town Builders, are the first in the area to feature Honeywell's TotalHome system, a system that integrates a home's controls — security, temperature, lighting and appliances, in a single, easy-to-operate panel.

Old Town Builders are offering the system as an option in 29 homes in Mystic Pines, which is located off Brighton Road across from the Oak Point Country Club. The luxury homes start at $300,000.

Old Town will be showing off the system at its model home, 5151 Pinewood Drive, from 1-5 p.m. on weekends and from 6-9 p.m. on Tuesdays through August. You can make an appointment by calling 227-7400.

Here's a typical TotalHome scenario: A family wakes up to a warm house, coffee already brewing and the hallway leading to the bathroom already lit. When leaving for work, the home owner selects a new mode called, "At work." This ignites the security system, shuts off appliances for safety, adjusts the temperature and turns the lights on and off to give the house a lived-in look.

The system can be activated from outside the home via touch-tone phone.

A typical TotalHome system featuring 10 points of security control, 10 points of lighting and appliance control, and remote phone access is around $4,000.

Endowment to HFCC

Henry Ford Community College recently received a $20,000 donation from the Michigan Metal Fabricators Association to establish an endowed scholarship fund to support students studying steel detailing in HFCC's Architectural Tech program.

Two scholarships will be awarded each year. Preference will be given to steel detailing majors. Applicants must have high grade point averages and show financial need.

Promotion winners

Farmington Hills-based Creative House Advertising was three-time winner in the 1992 Drummer Awards Competition, a 31-year-old contest sponsored by Building Supply Home Centers that recognize the best in point-of-purchase merchandising and selling aids.

Creative House won a gold in the audio-visual category for their creation of the Aristokraft frameless cabinetry installation video and in the materials category for the Aristokraft Kitchen Planning Kit.

Creative House won a silver for best individual selling aid for its design of the Therma-Tru product catalog.

Wood basements

West Bloomfield Architect Robert Bryce of Bryce and Palazzola Architects and Associates has called wood basements one of the hottest home building trends of the 1990s.

If you want to know more about it, you might want to tune in Glenn Haege's Handyman Show 10 a.m. Saturday on WXYT Radio (AM-1270).

Haege's guest will be Warren Koch, a wood basement designer, and Livonia builder Jim Nawrot who will answer all your questions.

Do you need to build a light shaft for your skylight?

Home repair questions answered by Popular Mechanics Magazine.

skylight in my living room and I'm a little confused about whether I need a light shaft, and how to go about constructing one. Can you shed some light on this?

A. When you are dealing with a ceiling other than a cathedral, you will have a space between the skylight unit and the ceiling below. The size and shape of this light well or shaft depends on various factors — the construction of the roof and ceiling, the desired amount of light to enter the room, and the appearance of the entire area.

If you want a light shaft, simply frame out the area between the roof rafters and the ceiling joists with appropriate lumber. Keep in mind that this shaft can be designed to extend straight down into the room or be aligned perpendicular to the roof opening so it comes into the room at an angle.

Box in the shaft with plywood, drywall or paneling. Finishing off with white paint will better help reflect exterior light into the room.

Q. My brick house is about 20 years old. It has a concrete porch about 5 feet square with steps going down to the back yard. The steps and the porch have settled and pulled away from the house leaving about an 8-inch gap at the top. Even if I could find a house jack big enough, I couldn't fill in under the porch foundation. There's no opening under the porch slab and steps to build a form.

A. If you are certain the porch is not still settling (if the gap is not getting wider year by year), you can fill in the gap between the steps and the house foundation wall starting at the bottom where the gap is narrowest. Wedge a 2-by-8 board vertically against each end of the steps to hold the repair concrete in place until it sets. Carefully fill the space between the house and the porch with concrete and compact it by poking or rodding it with a hoe handle to make certain it has completely filled the gap.

Country French from page 1F

designs reflect Country French architecture depends mainly on the client.

"I had one client recently that (upon seeing a preliminary design) said, 'That's too French.'"

Some of the more distinct features of the architecture include shutters (long absent from much of the architecture in the region), private balconies (often embellished with decorative metal railings), brick but in a different variety of colors, recessed windows with decorative arches and pediments (many with leaded glass and metal frames), bands of different colored brick or stone along the top, stucco walls, small courtyards and terraces.

Bryce said many of the clients interested in Country French architecture are older.

"They're people that we did a contemporary for five or six years ago and they want something a bit more traditional."

Traditional, he said, can mean a lot of things of course, but what attracts people to Country French is its casual feeling. "It's not formal, yet it's still detailed — it's comfortable."

Ken Evangelista, president of Evangelista Architects in Birmingham said that while he hasn't noted any unusual increase in demand for Country French architecture, he has noticed clients are leaning towards more relaxed architectural styles.

"We do a lot of country clubs and the dining rooms are making a complete turnaround," he said. Where once the country clubs demanded formal dining rooms with seating for 200.

"Now we see formal seating for 60 people maximum; the 250 seating dining rooms are much more formal," Evangelista said.

Country French certainly fits in the "relax category" while at the same time maintaining a high level of sophistication.

Mark Farlow, a project manager at Victor Saroki and Associates Architects P.C. in Birmingham said his firm has also noted an increase in request for Country French and similar forms like French Provincial and English Country style homes.

Farlow said many of the projects in this vein are challenging because they are done in excruciating detail, and yet the overall affect is somewhat relaxing and informal. "They have a quiet civility, but a formality that is not pretentious," Farlow said.

Doing the job well requires a certain amount of sophistication on the part of the architect, which is partly the reason why there hasn't been a large number of homes built in this area.

Whether the style can be duplicated at the production housing level is debatable, Farlow said. "One of the advantages we have here is that over the years we have been able to identify the best contractors who have, in turn, identified the best subcontractors."

sociated styles also necessitates the use of special artisans and craftsmen.

"(Interested clients) have an awareness of this type of architecture," Farlow said. They aren't interested in impressing people or satisfying egos — they're interested because they have an appreciation for the architectural style.

"As people travel more, they aggregate more and tastes become more refined," he said.

People buying into Country French and associated styles are past keeping up with the Joneses and have evolved to the point of doing things for the satisfaction.

"It's less competition and more enlightenment."

Money is being lost out older windows

It's not surprising that Americans are beginning to become more energy efficient.

The American Council for an Energy Economy estimates that the average household spends more than $1,000 per year to heat and cool their home and operate household appliances. This kind of expense during tough economic times can quickly catch a person's attention.

So what can people do to become more energy efficient?

"Replacing outdated windows and doors with energy efficient models will help retain heat in the winter and reflect heat in the summer," said Chris Allen, general sales manager for Pella Window and Door in West Bloomfield. "This will mean savings in energy and monthly energy bills."

"Recent technologies have brought energy efficiency to a new level," Allen said. "For instance, one recent development relating to windows is the low emissivity (low-E) coating."

"This clear coating changes the way a window reflects radiant heat into a room. High quality windows are available with low-E surface coatings," Allen said.

When shopping for energy efficient doors, a person may want to consider a wood entry door.

Seeking the right sink

Before you begin your search for the perfect sink, Decorating magazine suggest you consider the following options:

■ Vitreous china is probably the most common type of bathroom sink. Available in a variety of styles and colors, this material is easy to clean and has a lustrous surface. It can, however, crack or chip when struck.

■ Porcelainized or enameled cast-iron sinks are both durable and able to resist stains, scratches, chips and dents. They're also heavy and require a sturdy support system.

■ Enameled steel does not wear as well as porcelainized cast iron, but has the advantage of being light enough to move into place easily.

■ Stainless steel is also lighter than cast iron. It is durable and unaffected by household chemicals, but tends to show spots from hard water and soap.

■ If you like the look of a metal sink, you might also consider solid cast-brass models as well as vitreous-china styles with metallic finishes.

■ Solid-surface materials sinks are an integral part of the counter surface, so they create a sleek, seamless effect. Some blend quartz and acrylic; other synthetics mimic granite and marble. All are stain and chip-resistant, but are also more expensive than other materials.

■ Lavatory-styles fit into three general categories: pedestal sinks, wall-hung sinks and sinks that rest in vanities. Pedestal and wall-hung sinks are good space savers in small baths.

■ If you have the room, however, sinks designed for vanities are the most practical option. Self-rimming sinks, for instance, feature a ridge that fits over the countertop to form a tight seal and help keep water from splashing onto the counter. Flush-mounted sinks are recessed into a vanity's countertop with tight-fitting metal rims. Integral one-piece sink-and-countertop units are also available for vanities.

Vanities are usually 31 to 34 inches high, but they're also available in lower and higher versions. For comfort, you may want to install a 36-inch-high vanity in a bath used only by adults. If you install two sinks in one vanity, allow 12 inches between them and 8 inches at each end.
