17 teachers go back to school

The Plymouth-Canton school board made final its decision on hiring teachers with an additional $2.3 million in state aid. There will be 17 more hired back. Others in the district sought the rehiring of 25 to 30 teachers.

BY M.B. DILLON STAFF WRITER

Plymouth-Canton teachers and many parents hoped the district would take $2.3 million in anticipated state aid and hire 25-30 teachers. They didn't get their wish.

The board Monday night adopted Superintendent John Hoben's plan to hire 17 teachers.

Both the Plymouth-Canton Education Association and the Class-size Action Partnership, a parents' group, urged school officials to hire enough teachers to lower class sizes, which exceed 30 students in classrooms throughout the district.

Chuck Portelli, president of the dent Roland Thomas.

PCEA, characterized hiring 17 teachers as "trying to put out a forest fire with a bucket of water."

The majority of the teachers will be assigned to elementary schools. The hirings will cost the district $680,000.

The board also agreed to spend up to $100,000 for textbooks, as well as $35,000 to restore busing for the Talented and Gifted program and an associated schedule change.

"I would presume we can continue to look at these items (further hiring and other restorations) in the next few weeks," said school board president Roland Thomas "I would ask administration to keep assessing where would be a logical place to add the next 10 teachers," said trustee Dean Swartzwelter, board treasurer. "Let's look at where you would add 10, based on student counts and space available."

Jane Taylor-Liston of Plymouth asked the board what it did with the research presented by the Class-size Action Partnership, which studied the effects of class size on education.

Thomas said their input was received at the finance subcommittee's last meeting.

Engler hints at school reform plans

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI STAFF WRITER

Gov. John Engler opened the curtains in Canton on Tuesday without exposing a complete view of his plans for public school and property tax reform.

"Education is where the auto industry was 20 years ago when competition was just arriving," Engler said, as he gave only glimpses into the plan he will reveal before the state Legislature next Tuesday.

The message received a positive response from Bruce Patterson of Canton, who said: "I'm excited; it's an opportunity for change."

Steve Ragan of Plymouth, a Schoolcraft Community College trustee, welcomed Engler's challenge to have public schools work with community colleges to offer students more.

"We're going to be meeting with Plymouth-Canton school officials to determine if we can offer college classes at the high schools," Ragan said.

The governor criticized the current public education system both financially and educationally. He told the crowd of approximately 300 Canton and Plymouth residents at the Canton Economic Club that there's been a disproportionate return on educational performance for the $74 billion — a 91-percent increase since 1983 — spent on K-12 education. In that time there's been a 7-percent decrease in the number of pupils.

"The problem is getting the money's worth for the spending that's going on," Engler said. "We've had incremental change (in educational performance) at exponential costs."

Educational reforms will involve choice and competition. The annual foundation grant for each student will follow the student. "That's how you get a system that's more responsive and flexible for parents and kids," Engler said.

But he did not reveal how reforms will be financed or how the $6 billion in property tax cuts would be replaced. "Something has to go on the ballot unless we go back to property taxes and I'm unwilling to do that," he said.

School talk: Gov. John Engler on Tuesday gave Canton and Plymouth residents a preview of the school financing plan that he will unveil next week.

Ten years of consciousness-raising since the debut of the "Nation at Risk" report in 1983, as well as attempted reform and billions of dollars spent, has had little effect on improving the quality of education for students, he said.

"We have not grappled really with the central issues," Engler said. Offering bits of what he's planned, Engler spoke of creating competition between individual schools. Choices would be provided to students by allowing them to pick the schools they wish to attend. "We do it today. We call it tuition," Engler said.

He spoke of creating educational bank accounts for students to use at the schools — and even college if there is money left — of their choice. For example, if an average $5,000 is spent on a student annually that makes a savings account of $62,500 for 12 years of education. If the student completes graduation requirements at the end of 11th grade, there's money remaining to use for college.

On the other hand, parents would use that average $5,000 to send their child to whatever public school they

Residents question raises in township

BY KEVIN BROWN STAFF WRITER

Plymouth Township residents questioned the 3- and 4-percent pay increases offered to some township employees as part of the 1994 $6.81-million budget approved by trustees Tuesday.

Among the pay raises are 4 percent for police officers and firefighters.

"Was that justified?," asked resident Mike Stankov.

"I have a big concern; public employees always feel they're entitled to more," said another resident, Martha Suchanski, adding some people have lost their jobs or gotten no increases.

Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen-McCarthy said that during contract negotiations with police and fire employees, it was determined that going to arbitration could have cost the township more.

"Looking at wage awards handed down by arbitration; firefighters got 6, 5 and 6 (percent over a three-year contract) in Canton," she said, adding the arbitrator either selects the administration's proposal or the Stankov said, "So it would be up to the Legislature to do something about that insane, archaic system."

Jim Harr, president of the union representing township firefighters, chided some elected officials for saying they would staff the third town-

Influential judge from Plymouth dies in California

George Bowles

BY KEVIN BROW STAFF WRITER

Judge George Bowles wrote the Michigan statute for enforcing child support payments, a measure adopted by most other states.

The longtime Plymouth resident, 78, died Sept. 20 in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Calif.

When Bowles announced his retirement from Wayne Circuit Court in 1975, presiding Judge James Canham called him the court's "most articulate, sharpest and hardest working jurist."

Plymouth Lawyer Joe Dillon, who shared an office with Bowles in the late 1970s, said Bowles "wrote as clear an opinion as anybody."

"I remember what a hard working guy he was and what a straight arrow he was," Dillon said. "He was an old country lawyer, that's what he described himself as," Dillon recalled.

Legal observers say Bowles' legal opinions helped shape the course of Michigan law.

In 1962, before state law supported him, Bowles awarded child custody to a father in a divorce action. He called it "in the best interests of the child."

He also wrote the law that enables courts to attach pay of parents who are late in making child support payments

"From a social standpoint I consider this one of my greatest achievements," he said.

Bowles was born July 25, 1915, in Grove City, Penn. After graduating from the University of Michigan Law School in 1941, Bowles began working with the National Labor Relations Board in Milwaukee, to be near his future wife, Catherine.

He returned to Michigan — after marrying Catherine Janes Aug. 29, 1941 — to serve as an aide in 1943 to Louis Miriani, who later became Detroit mayor.

Nearby Canton Township has long been known for pheasant hunting, but township officials there want to put an end to all hunting.

With all the residential growth in Canton, a request has been made to the state Department of Natural Resources to close more areas to hunting and firearms use.

"I have no fear of schools of choice, or competition. How they handle transportation is going to make a big difference. I think we have a program that is going to attract people," said Hoben. "Our technology for one thing, and the quality of our programs are such that we will compete with the best of them.

The jury is out with Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business, until Engler reveals his financing plan.

Said Hoedel: "We didn't get much of a peak at what's coming next Tuesday," when media from across the country is expected to descend upon Lansing to hear Engler as he unveils his program.

'It sounds pretty good. The big question I have is the transition period (to implement schools of choice)," Hoedel said. "The transition period is rather short. Certainly our board and the superintendent believe in putting kids first. I hope there's enough of a transition period so there are no disruptions.

Hoedel said schools of choice would take effect July 1. "If it's a local option, that doesn't give us much time.

ship fire station when campaign ing last fall - yet the budget does not call for such staffing.

While the township has spent more than $1 million to build the station and $700,000 to equip it, "It is not the fire station or equipment that puts fires out, you continue to put citizens in jeopardy," Harr said.

Another resident, Pat Houle, told trustees, "I'm very impressed by the board; you seem to have your act all together." Still, he said, "I'd like to see fire station No. 3 manned

"I wouldn't mind a 1 mill increase to make up the deficits,'

Deficits are projected for 1995 if the revenue trend continues.

Parnell Johnson, another resident, asked trustees, "Are you going to continue to give tax abatements (to businesses)?

Trustee Ron Griffith responded, "I'd like to remind everybody that this is a two-sided coin, adding that when businesses come in, they provide jobs and ease residents' tax burden

Trustee Charles Curmi asked the township finance director to review abatements granted by the board over several years to determine what the township might have gained if no abatements were granted.

For the township resident with a house that could sell for $150,000, yearly taxes could increase by about $38 next year - if assessments continue an average 8 percent annual increase combined with the total township millage increasing from 3.6 mills this year to 3.81 next year.

The $6.81-million township budget calls for using $663,612 from the township's budget surplus, leaving a projected $205,782 surplus at the end of 1994.

Projected 1994 property tax revenue to the township administration is estimated at $2.79 million, up from $2.69 million this year.

The increase is due to new construction and because the millage rate is adjusted for 3-percent inflation. State shared revenue to the township is also up slightly, from $1.49 million this year to $1.57 million in 1994.

In 1994, elected officials are getting no pay raises. Non-union employees and communications operators are getting 3-percent pay increases.

The cost of medical fringe benefits is increasing an average of 15 percent and the cost of utilities is up by 5 percent, according to the budget report. After her election last November, McCarthy instituted a hiring freeze. In 1994, employment levels will stay the same in general administration. Two unfilled police patrol officer positions will be filled. One full-time clerical position will be filled, while one fulltime and one part-time police clerical position will remain unfilled

The Bowleses moved to Plymouth in 1947, and he opened his own law office specializing in labor arbitration

A leader of the local Democratic party, he ran unsuccessfully for state senator in 1950. Gov. G. Mennen Williams appointed Bowles to the Wayne Circuit bench in 1956.

His decisions - including a dispute about taxing out-of-state corporations, smoke pollution by boats on the Detroit River and fluoridation of Detroit water were upheld by the Michigan Supreme Court 90 percent of the

In 1967-68, Bowles served as a one-man grand jury investigating allegations of wrongdoing in city, suburban and county government. When the grand jury's investigation involved the mob, some were afraid to talk, Bowles son Franklin recalled.

'The lawyer for one witness, in a private session with the judge, referred to the Fifth Amendment as 'the freedom not to be found dead in the trunk of a car.

Following his investigation, 10 Detroit police officers were indicted on charges of perjury and some Garden City officials were indicted on corruption charges.

Plymouth District Judge James Garber remembered Bowles as "a very soft-spoken guy.

At one point he moved to Grosse Pointe, but he didn't like it over there and came back to Plymouth," Garber said.

Bowles moved in 1982 to California to be nearer his three children and continued working as an arbitrator in labor disputes.

His wife, Catherine, died April 12, 1988. Survivors include three children: Gloria Bowles of Berkeley, Calif.; Franklin Bowles of San Francisco; and Stephen Bowles of Santa Barbara.

A memorial service for Bowles was at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at the First Presbyterian Church of Santa Barbara.

Not since 1968, when John Gruener dove 437 feet off Freeport, Grand Bahama, has a deeper dive been recorded.*

Teachers, administrators, trustees and students stoutly defend ed local public schools when a state House Democratic task force held a town hall meeting in Wayne.

They warned state Rep. Justine Barns, D-Westland, against expecting big money savings in any school reform proposal coming out of the State Capitol.

"It's not acceptable to fund education with fewer dollars," said Emmett Holmes, a Livonia resident representing the Michigan PTA Council. "The overall tax burden can't be reduced.

Eighteen of 20 speakers in Wayne Memorial High Monday evening directly represented school communities. Many lashed out against talk of a "voucher" plan, a constitutional amendment that would allow state aid to go to private and church-related schools

Walter Warren, Westland member of the Taxpayers Union, inserted one note of dissent: "Just do it cheaper. Good luck.

Bud Winters, Wayne-Westland board president and a former principal, deplored "bashing" of education. "How can public education be held responsible for all social ills - crime, violence, social diseases, etc.?"

"It's not education's fault that industry ignored quality in the 1970s," added Larry Thomas, Wayne-Westland superintendent. "Schools are not the cause of problems but are the place where they become evident.'

Students hurt

Wayne Memorial High senior Kelly Chorbagian said that she already has seen evidence that schools are being short-changed when she had to pay $167 for marching band, had to pay $167 for cheerleading and had to drop orchestra after eight years. "When and where is it going to stop? We can't throw away education to save a few dollars," she said.

Bankes tries to bolster law on innoculations

The state Senate is taking up Rep. Lyn Bankes' bill to limit the reasons why parent may say "no" to having their children immu-

The House gave the bill 92 to 14 approval last week.

Current state law says parents may oppose inoculations for medical, religious or "other" reasons. Her bill would eliminate "other" reasons.

"It's time to close this loophole," Bankes said. "Some diseases could have been eradicated long ago if public participation had been universal.'

The state Department of Public Health said letting 5 percent of children into school unvaccinated can trigger an outbreak of measles, whooping cough or polio.

Area representatives supporting the bill were: Republicans Bankes, Penny Crissman of Rochester, Barbara Dobb of Union Lake, Jan Dolan of Farmington Hills, John Jamian of Bloomfield Township, Shirley Johnson of Royal Oak and Jerry Vorva of Plymouth; and Democrats Justine Barns of Westland, Maxine Berman of Southfield and liam Keith of Garden City.

Opposed were Republicans Greg Kaza of Rochester Hills and Deborah Whyman of Canton.

"Once again, you listen to no one," Taylor-Liston said.

The district, which employs 745 teachers with an enrollment of 15,000, has 51 fewer teaching positions than it did in 1991-92.

Sue Feiten, co-chair of the class-size partnership, was asked by the board for her opinion.

"My observation is that fiscally, the board has always been extremely conservative. Our coalition asked the board to be a little less conservative on the issue of class size. I'm disappointed there wasn't compromise between the two proposals. On the other hand, it's encouraging to be asked for input. It's a new step for the board.'

Portelli challenged trustees to "match dollars for dollars." The teachers recently deferred their 3percent pay raise, saving the district $1.1 million. "That brought back 30 teachers, but it didn't impact class size. (Recalls were largely counselors, media specialists, social workers and the like.) I would like to see you be less fiscally conservative.'

Asked by Thomas where 13 teachers conceivably should be placed, Portelli said, "We are open to sitting down with the district to decide that.'

"Your point is well taken," said Swartzwelter. "We aren't back to where the district was in 1991-

High court backs public interviews

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

School boards, college boards and city councils must continue to interview candidates for chief executive in public, in the wake of a major state Supreme Court de-

The high court ruled the University of Michigan Board of Regents violated both the Open Meetings Act and Freedom of Information Act in 1987-88 when it hired James Duderstadt as presi-

U-M's massive double defeat is significant because the state's oldest university was created by the constitution, not statute, and claims co-equal status with the governor.

University spokesman Walter Harrison was preparing a state-ment that was unavailable at this newspaper's deadline.

OMA says: "All meetings of a public body shall be open to the public and shall be held in a place available to the general public.

OMA allows a body to meet in closed session "To review the specific contents of an application for employment or appointment to a public office if the candidate requests that the application re-main confidential. However, all interviews by a public body for employment or appointment to a public office shall be held in an open meeting pursuant to this

Duderstadt was hired secretly, and regents afterwards staged an open interview on June 10, 1988,

Justice Patricia Boyle's dissent aid she would have held that OMA and FOIA do not compel relesse of as much information as the papers sought. She would have withheld the regents' destinations on travel expense forms.

Justices Dorothy Comstock Riley and Robert Griffin dissented, saying the regents are protected "from the Legislature's over-U-M's legal brief revealed the regents sought to beat OMA by giving different names to their activities as they cut the list from ■ They didn't "vote" and "deliberate" but used an informal process called "argle bargle." ■ They had no "applications" but looked at "nominations,"

"recommendations," "resumes, "writings" and "speeches." ■ They didn't "interview" candidates but "visited" them.

OMA allows public bodies to review applications in closed session where the applicant requests confidentiality. U-M regents insisted candidates sign a typed form demanding confidentiality prior to any conversation.

Legal briefs also revealed that regent Neil Nielsen of Brighton admitted there were "interviews, not mere visitations; regent Nellie Varner recalled candidate rating sheets, which other regents denied existed; and that "a sense developed" that two candidates were outstanding when four regents met on May 24, 1988.

Regent Thomas Roach of Ann Arbor did not seek a third term in 1992, saying that the use of electronic communications to avoid the OMA consumed "as much as 100 to 200 hours a year.'

of CLARTIN Tables.

Brug Interactions: Drugs known to inhibit hepatic metabolism should be coadministered with caution until definitive interaction studies can be completed. The number of subjects who concombantly received macrolide antibiotics, ledoconazole, cimetidine, rankine, or theophyline along with CLARTINI Tablets in controlled clinical trials is too small to rule out possible drug-drug interactions. There does not appear to be an increase in adverse events in subjects who received oral contraceptives and CLARTINI Tablets compared to placebo. Carcinagenesis, Miningenesis, and Imperiment of Fintifity; in an 18-month oncogenicity study in mice and a 2-year study in rats, ionato-drine was administered in the diet at doses up to 40 mg/kg (mice) and 25 mg/kg (rats). In the carcinogenicity studies, phase income was administered in the diet at doses up to 40 mg/kg (mice) and 25 mg/kg (rats). In the carcinogenicity studies, phase income year of ince given 40 mg/kg of ionatatine was 2.6 (lonatatine) and 18 (active metabolite) times higher than a human given 10 mg/kgv, lable mice given 40 mg/kg had a significantly higher incidence of hepatocellular tumors (combined adenomas and carcinomas) than concurrent control in rats, a significantly higher incidence of hepatocellular tumors (combined adenomas and carcinomas) was observed in make given 10 mg/kg and males and females given 25 mg/kg. The clinical significance of these findings during long-term use of CLARTINI Tablets is not known.

In malagnaticky studies, have was no evidence of mulagenic potential in reverse (AMES) or forward point mutation (CHO-HSPRT) assays, or in the assay for ONA damage (Rat Primary Hepatocyte Unschoduled DNA Assay) or in two assays for chromosomal aberrations (Human Peripheral Blood Lymphonoyte Castogenesis Assay and the Mouse Bone Marrow Envitrocyte Microsucleus Assay). In the Mouse Lymphoma Assay, a positive force was a evidence of microsomal enzyme induction in the mouse at 40 mg/kg and rat at 25 mg/kg, but not at lower doses.

- Low occurrence of side effects. Side effects occurred about as often as they did with placebo (sugar pills). Most common were headache, occurring with 12% of people; drowsing fatigue, 4%; and dry mouth, 3%.
- No reports to date of the serious he rregularities reported with r nondrow

Decreased fertility in male rats, shown by lower female conception rates, occurred at approximately 64 mg/kg and was reversible with cessation of desirin, Loratadine had no effect on male or female fertility or reproduction in the rat at doses of approximately 24 mg/kg. Prepanery Category it. There was no evidence of animal terratogenicity in studies performed in rats and rabbits. There are, however, no adequate and well-controlled studies in pregnant women. Because animal reproduction studies are not always predictive of human response, CLARTINI Tablets should be used during pregnancy only if clearly needed.

Nersing illustrates: Loratadine and its metabolite, descarboethoxyloratadine, pass easily into breast milk and achieve concentrations that are equivalent to plasma levels with an AUC<sub>max</sub>AUC<sub>comax</sub> ratio of 1,77 and 0.85 for the parent and achiev metabolite, respectively, Following a single oral dose of 40 mg, a small amount of loratadine and metabolite was excreted into the breast milk (approximately 0.03% of 40 mg over 48 hours). A decision should be made whether to discontinue aursing or to discontinue the drug, taking into account the importance of the drug to the mother. Caution should be exercised when CLARTINI Tablets are administered to a nursing woman.

Pretitate line: Safety and effectivenesis in children below the age of 12 years have not been established.

ADVERSE REACTIONIS

Approximately 90,000 patients received CLARTINI Tablets 10 mg once a day varied from 2 weeks* to 6 months* duration. The rate of premature withdrawal from these trials was approximately 2% in both the treated and piacebo groups.

REPORTED ADVERSE EVENTS WITH AN INCIDENCE OF MORE THAN 2% IN MORCATIONS AND USAGE CLARITIN Tablets are indicated for the relief of nasal and non-nasal symptoms of seasonal allergic rhinitis

REPORTED ADVERSE EVENTS WITH AN INCIDENCE OF MORE THAN 2% IN

PERCENT OF PATIENTS REPORTING TERFENADINE 60 mg BID n = 684

Adverse event rates did not appear to differ significantly based on age, sex, or race, although the number of non-white subjects was elatively small.

In addition to those adverse events reported above, the following adverse events have been reported in 2% or fewer patients.

Rutonomic Reviews System Attend salivation, increased sweating, altered lacrimation, hypoesthesia, impotence, thirst, flushing.

Body As A Whole Conjunctivitis, blurred vision, earache, eye pain, timithis, asthenia, weight gain, back pain, leg cramps, malaise, chest pain, rigors, fever, aggravated allergy, upper respiratory infection, angioneurotic edema.

Sizin and Appendages: Dermatilis, dry lair, dry skin, urticaria, rash, prurtus, photosensitivity reaction, purpuru.

Urinary System: Urinary discoloration, altered michurition.

In addition, the following spontaneous adverse events have been reported rarely during the marketing of locatation: peripheral edema, abnormal hepatic function including jaundice, hepatilis, and hepatic necrosis; alopocia; seizures; breast enlargement; erythema multiforme.

OVERDOSAGE

Somnolence, tachycardia, and headache have been reported with overdoses greater than 10 mg (40 to 180 mg). In the event of overdosage, general symptomatic and supportive measures should be instituted promptly and maintained for as long as necessary.

Treatment of overdosage would reasonably consist of emesis (specac syrup), except in patients with impaired consciousness, followed by the administration of activated charcoal to absorb any remaining drug, if vounding is unsuccessful, or contraindicated, gastric lavage should be performed with normal saline. Saline catheritics may also be of value for rapid dilution of bowel contents. Loratadine is not eliminated by hemodialysis. It is not known if loratadine is eliminated by peritoneal dialysis.

Oral LD<sub>0</sub> values for loratadine were greater than 5000 mg/kg in rats and mice. Doses as high as 10 times the recommended clinical dioses showed no effects in rats, mice, and monkeys.

Ready for future

Schools have sites, wait for more kids

The Plymouth-Canton schools are holding onto to property for future expansion. The parcels are scattered around the district and include a 27-acre site that officials say would be good for a middle school.

BY M.B. DILLON STAFF WRITER

The Plymouth-Canton school district has half the vacant school sites it did a year ago. Two have been built upon; and two have been sold. The others remain as possible locations for future schools and are not for sale.

Sites the district would look to buy, depending upon the amount of housing built and population density, are to the south and west of the district. said Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business.

Sold by the district for $450,000 to the Selective Group was 17 acres adjacent to Plymouth Township Park off McClumpha and Ann Arbor Trail. Eighteen single-family homes will be constructed on seven acres. The remaining 10 acres, which contain a climax beech and maple forest, was deeded to Plymouth Township.

The Miller Woods site is 40 acres and zoned for a potential school site. Ten acres of the parcel is restricted as a nature preserve.

The district also owns 27 acres off Joy west of Beck. "It's a good piece of school property because it's on the border of Plymouth and Canton," said Hoedel. "You could pick up growth on both sides. It's almost big enough to build a middle school, and Tonda Elementary was recently built on 16 acres on the south side of Warren between Canton Center and Beck. The school is completed, but didn't open this fall because of the millage failure.

What's known as the Bartlett site, 21 acres on the east side of Canton Center between Warren and Ford, could possibly serve as an elementary school site. Hanford Road, which terminates just shy of the site, is scheduled to be extended, which will make the parcel smaller.

Bentley Elementary was built on Sheldon near Proctor. That school also was not opened due to financial constraints.

Sold to Grand/Sakwa Properties for $1.1 million is a 49-acre parcel north of Palmer and east of Lilley. Single family homes on 141 lots are proposed for the parcel, which is wooded and traversed by a creek. Canton Supervisor Tom Yack and others had urged the district to retain the land as open space and a passive park for nearby residents.

"That (the development) will be nice for that area; homes are fairly modest with attached two-care garages," said Hoedel. Lots will have a minimum of 60 feet of frontage.

Hoedel said proceeds from the land sales will go into the capital improvement fund, with the exception of about $400,000 that the capital improvement fund owes the general op-

Carl Pursell, who retired in January from his U.S. House seat after serving eight terms, said Wednesday he's exploring a possible run for the Republican nomination for Senate.

The decision comes in the wake of U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle's surprise decision Tuesday not to seek re-election next year.

Pursell, 60, of Plymouth Township said he planned to travel around the state to weigh support, before making a decision on whether to run "probably sometime before the holidays.'

'I've represented seven major counties in this state," he said, adding, "No other state legislator can make that statement.

He also said he has talked to Gov. John Engler and other state Republican leaders about a possible bid for the U.S. Senate seat that has long eluded the Republi-

When asked why he wanted to return to Washington after such a brief retirement, he said: "The Senate attracts me because of the long range type of work they do. In the House, you're always dealing with day to day crisis.'

On the number of terms he would serve, if elected, he said he would look at serving more than

Prior to being elected to congress in 1977, he served on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners from 1969-70, was a member of the Michigan Senate from 1971-76. In Congress, Pursell had a leadership role on the House Committee on Appropriations. His district included the Livonia and Plymouth areas.

"I think my credentials, when it's all out on the table, will be unmatched by either party," Pur-

Democrats and Republicans are trying to change political gears quickly in the wake of the decision by Riegle

Democrats are looking for a new candidate — with the name of fomer governor James Blanchard surfacing most frequently.

While Republicans are looking for new campaign ammunition.

'We've lost the savings and loan scandal as an issue," said Oakland GOP chairman James Alexander.

The scandal, of course, is the lingering allegation that Riegle improperly solicited campaign contributions from savings and loan kingpin Charles Keating.

Riegle said he would not seek re-election because of personal concerns, namely he wanted to spend more time with his family.

"I know how he feels," said for-mer U.S. Rep. William M. Brodhead who represented parts of Redford, Southfield and the Farmington area for eight years before stepping down in 1982. "That was a big part of why I re-Donald L. Tucker, Oakland County Democratic chairman, said he has known Riegle for about 25 years. "He's always been a dedicated and responsive public servant, and I believe he was unjustly tarnished by the savings and loan scandal.

Amy Juntunen, a Democratic precinct delegate in Livonia, said she likes Riegle. Nonetheless, she said his decision to step aside was a good one.

"It was time for Don to go," she

"I say this as someone who has supported Don for a long time,' Juntunen said. "But the savings and loan scandal was too much. Don did some good things for Michigan, but he had feet of clay.'

As for a possible successor,

Democrats and Republicans agree on one thing: The field is wide

The list of potential candidates seems to be growing by the hour, according to Brodhead who now lives in Bingham Farms. "Rumors are flying all over."

Among Democrats, he said State Sen. Lana Pollack of Ann Arbor has to be considered a strong candidate. "But you can't rule out Jim Blanchard and Ed McNamara.

"For a senate race a candidate needs three things," he continued, "a record, the ability to raise money and an ability to deal with the issues. Blanchard and McNamara have proven records in all three areas. So does Senator Pollack.

U.S. Rep. Sander Levin, D-12th District, said it's much too early to speculate about who the Democratic candidate will likely be, with one exception: "I'm not interested.

Birmingham businessman Marvin Meltzer, however, insists there's only one logical choice, James Blanchard. "He had a good record as governor and he has a good relationship with President

The field may be wide open but Blanchard would obviously be a good candidate."

Ronald Thayer, a key Blanchard fund-raiser who lives in Bloomfield Hills and works in Wayne County government, agrees that his long-time friend would be a good candidate. "But he certainly enjoys being an am-bassador," he said.

Thayer said he had not talked with Blanchard since Riegle made his announcement. "So I really don't know about his plans." A statement released by his office in Ottawa, Canada, quotes Blanchard as being "shocked and saddened" that Riegle is stepping down. The former governor praised Riegle for his 28 years in government and wished him and his family well.

But the statement made no mention of Blanchard's plans.

Another possible frontrunner, Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara, was also out of the country. "He's in Ireland for a family vacation. I don't even know if he knows about Riegle's decision," said an office spokesperson.

Animal-abuse crackdown eyed

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

People who torture, neglect or maltreat an animal face tighter laws and stiffer penalties - including mental health treatment under two bills before the state

"The thrust of my bill is an animal in a neglected state," said Sen. Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham, sponsor of one mea-

"There is a correlation between extreme cases of animal abuse and human abuse," said an aide to Sen. Virgil Smith, D-Detroit, sponsor of the second. "Ownership (of an animal) is not a factor. Both (animal and human abusers) come from dysfunctional families.'

The Judiciary Committee last week sent both bills to the Senate floor after hearing heartbreaking testimony from humane society and county animal control offi-

"Leslie Williams is a striking example of what animal abusers are capable of," said Gary Tiscornia of the Michigan Humane Society. Tiscornia said he is a resident of Milford, where Williams performed one of his four 1991-2 serial killings.

Tiscornia told of dogs and cats starved to death, with owners put on probation; puppies whose collars became embedded in their necks as they grew to adulthood; a neglected cocker spaniel whose leg rotted off; a dog shotgunned to death for "chewing up a few things" in a house; a cat named Chico set on fire whose owner escaped with a misdemeanor charge; and a German shepherd struck by 20 blows from a hatchet and thrown down a sewer whose assailant got only 30 days in jail.

Walter Rodabaugh, Lapeer County animal control officer, told of a woman who was paid to care for six horses but neglected all and let two starve to death. "We supplied $5,000 of treatment at county expense. The woman got the horses back at no cost," he Rodabaugh told of an owner who let an 88-pound Doberman pinscher waste away to 28 pounds. After the county spent $1,000 restoring the dog to health, the owner was neither fined nor required to make restitution, Rodabaugh said.

A man who used a baseball bat on a 15-pound dog was later sent to prison for child abuse. "SB 605 would have let us give that man some treatment. That's what he needed," Rodabaugh said.

Bouchard's bill would amend the penal code to prohibit a person from wilfully and cruelly killing, maiming, mutilating or sexually assaulting an animal.

A violator could get a year in prison, be fined $1,000, ordered to perform 240 hours of community service and be prohibited from owning an animal Bouchard noted his bill also covers transporting an animal with its feet tied together (except for taking it for medical care); failing to provide a rack so the animal could stand or lie down; abandoning an animal; and allowing an old, diseased or disabled animal to suffer unnecessary torture or pain.

Smith's bill would expand the list of animal cruelty violations. Exposing an animal to poison would be covered. The bill would apply to "an animal" and owners. Current law covers "any horses, cattle, or other beasts of another. The bill would not apply to lawful hunting or farming.

Smith's bill would provide for minimum sentences of 90 day days in jail and $2,000 fine, along with mental health treatment. The maximum four-year prison sentence would be unchanged.

When writing to your legislator, refer to Senate Bills 189 (Bouchard) and 604 (Smith).

Court backs drug companies

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

Two women unable to bear children are unable to collect damages from drug companies because they waited more than three years to sue, the Michigan Supreme Court has ruled.

The high court upheld, 4-3, the legal ruling of Wayne Cir-cuit Judge James Mies, of Livonia, in favor of Abbott Laboratories, E.R. Squibb & Sons and Eli Lilly & Co.

"The applicable period of limitation for a products liability action is three years," wrote Chief Justice Michael Cavanagh. "We hold that the statute of limitation bars Judith Harrington's and Jean Moll's law-

The high court majority said the women should have "consult(ed) with the legal and medical community in order to ascertain the full extent of (their) damages and to file suit" within three years of learning they were damaged and unable to bear children.

The women's attorney, Charles A. Barr of Detroit, was disappointed that Cavanagh, with his liberal reputation, sided with the drug companies. Cavanagh's opinion was joined by Justices James Brickley, Dorothy Comstock Riley and Robert Griffin, all Republican nominees to the court.

The apparent culprit: a drug called DES, a synthetic estro-gen taken by the women's mothers in the 1950s. Doctors prescribed it for pregnant women who had a history of miscarriages. But DES's damage to their daughters' reproductive organs did not become apparent until the daughters reached their 20s and wanted to have children of their own. Thus, the time when the young women discovered their abnormalities became all-important to Judge Mies.

Jean Moll, a Roseville resident born in Highland Park, became aware of her problem in April of 1975 but didn't file suit against Eli Lilly until Dec. 30, 1986. In 1988, Mies granted the company's motion for summary judgment (no trial).

Judith Harrington, now a Virginia resident, was born in Detroit in 1955 and became aware of her exposure to DES late in 1974. She became preg-nant in 1984 but miscarried. On Dec. 30, 1986, she too filed a suit, which Mies summarily

"Good education can't be bought on the cheap," said Me-morial math teacher Walter C. Hunt, a 31-year veteran. The U.S. economy can't absorb all the graduating scientists, the U.S. has a top high school completion rate, test scores are improving, but state funding of schools has fallen from 70 percent to 40 percent of the total. "We spend 30 percent less than Japan," Hunt said.

Hunt said Republican presidents have advocated vouchers, "but private school teachers are no better than ours, and private schools don't have the equipment.

"Private institutions don't take children like my son," added Denise Thomas, a school bus driver from Inkster with a son in special education. "There's no place for him but in public education.

■ Wayne-Westland school board member Laurel Raisanen faulted the local property tax system and bilstering 'miliage elections that turn into hate campaigns against public education.'

John Glenn High in Westland was warmly praised by Beatrice Gwizdak, a mother. She lauded the state for eliminating the property tax as the chief source of school funding because: "When your back is against the wall, that's when you do something creative.

Urging "educator and parental involvement in teaching decisions" was Dennis Kubas, a Michigan Education Association representative who lives in Novi and teaches in Woodhaven. Kubas said educators favor teaching 'critical thinking, problem solving and communication - free of cultural, racial and gender bias."

Asked by Barns if he favored extending Michigan's 180-day school year to a Japanese-length 240, Kubas said "180 days are adequate. But we will follow the legislative mandate if we are given the resources.'

Defending public schools' claim on state taxes, Rick Hamrick asked lawmakers to remember the "fixed costs, job training technol-ogy, trained instructors and community good will" at 56 public school vocational centers across the state. The Westland resident is assistant principal of the William D. Ford Vocational-Technical Center.

Hamrick praised Ford and du-Pont, among other industrial firms, for giving students plant tours, allowing them to do "job shadowing," serving on advisory committees and providing co-op programs.

Sports hype hit

The only confessed Republican to speak, Paul Reznick, a graphic artist who works in Troy, said there's "too much complaining and whining about public education." Reznick, who serves on a vocational advisory committee, said, "Business doesn't think with their brains. They think with their wallets.

Reznick criticized Wayne-Westland schools, which he at tended, for broadcasting athletic accomplishments in student an nouncements but neglecting the prizes won by students in filmmaking and culinary arts. This brought a retort from Jake Henry, a John Glenn athlete: 'Don't overlook extracurricular activities, including athletics.' Henry credited athletics for teaching "responsibility, hard work, teamwork and leadership.

Jane Kuckel, assistant superintendent for instruction in Wayne-Westland, cautioned lawmakers against mandating any more curriculum material. "We can't do an excellent job with everything, every day, with fewer resources" if schools must teach environmentalism, cultural awareness, foreign languages, portfolio preparation, the work ethic, AIDS and self-concepts in addition to the three R's.

City politics

Party labels getting out of hand

t's with a bit of amusement that we watch the city of Plymouth's commission race, traditionally non-partisan, become what some observers are calling partisan.

With five weeks to go until election day, charges are being made by various camps. City commissioners Bill McAninch and Dennis Shrewsbury are complaining that because former Republican U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell is backing a city commission candidate, Tom Prose, the race is becoming partisan.

What seems to bother McAninch and Shrewsbury most is that Pursell lives in Plymouth Township, not the city.

Pursell contends he's trying to get the Republican Party back to its grass roots by working on a local campaign.

To us, McAninch and Shrewsbury are over reacting. Let's face it, Plymouth Township and the city are about as Republican as you can get. And just because Pursell is a well-known Republican doesn't really mean that the city commission race is getting partisan.

McAninch would have us believe Pursell is trying to become the lord over some evil Republican empire based in Plymouth Township that is trying to take over Plymouth.

Actually, Pursell is an asset to the Plymouth community. With nearly 20 years in Congress, he can pass on his political experience to younger people who have an interest in politics.

It's what's called being a mentor. And there's nothing wrong with that.

However, in defense of McAninch and Shrewsbury, the city of Plymouth has benefited from having non-partisan members on the city commission. Few, if any, decisions on the local level have anything to do with party politics. The situation, not politics gets the attention.

But while McAninch and Shrewsbury contend that Pursell is making the city commission race partisan, they are doing the same themselves. McAninch claimed in a story that Prose and incumbent John Vos would be controlled by Pursell.

Such a contention is not only silly, it's an insult to Vos who has done a fine job as a city

Elections are sometimes called the silly season, and this one in the city of Plymouth is one for the record books.

Let's just hope the voters can see past the posturing by those in the Pursell camp and the Shrewsbury/McAninch faction. There are good candidates vying for election, and they should be heard on the issues, not their political party.

Funding plan: On Tuesday Gov. John Engler will announce his new plan for funding education, which is said to no longer include a voucher plan. But recent events left him besieged by reporters and guests at this week's Canton Economic Club meeting. For our view of voucher systems, see our editorial on this page.

LETTERS

Pompon debate

his is a response to the letter written by Thomas C. and Veronica S. Bowling of Plymouth.

I would like to clarify misgivings anyone would have after reading that particular letter, "Pompon Debate."

I agree with Mr. and Mrs. Bowling on one point. I don't understand how the East Middle School band was able to participate in the Plymouth 4th of July Parade . . . after that, the letter contained a series of questions that were very misleading.

I am the "laid-off coach" of the pompon auad. After June 30, the activity worked with since 1987 ended. After July 1 the district didn't have in place an interim package to cover school groups that were cut with liability insurance to perform or places to practice. This would be addressed at the next school board meeting later in July, well after the date of the parade.

I have since learned in a conversation I had with Mr. Bowling that he did not even attend the parade this year and he was dead wrong about the other school groups participating. I only saw the East band and, as for cheerleaders, the Plymouth Steelers.

As far as me not doing "a better job of budgeting allotted funds," I ask, what allotted funds? The pompon squad members are responsible for all of their own equipment, uniforms and travel expenses. On top of that, they have each paid a yearly pay-to-participate fee. What the school district does provide is liability coverage and a place to practice. Yes, I am paid a yearly stipend. Believe me, it doesn't even begin to cover the cost of my gas to and from daily practice, and other expenses such as my camp fees, hotel rooms for out of town competitions, etc. In short, it costs me money to coach. Why do I do it then? As a lifelong resident of this community and an alumni of Plymouth High I feel it is important to give back to my community and this is one way of doing so.

Even though the Bowlings said they didn't mean to "belittle the Rockettes in any way," they accomplished just that. To insinuate that the squad would blow off the parade due to vacations or because "it doesn't cost a group such as the Rockettes anything but their time" was way off base. These are trained and dedicated young ladies in your community. They and their families rearrange their schedules to fit the year long Rockette calendar.

I find it interesting that Tom Bowling did not even attend the parade this year and yet he became incensed at my plea for the community to back groups such as the Rockettes and to attempt to explain our absence in an event that we did not want to miss. Bowling said he had been given information on which to base his letter from "reliable sources that didn't want their names given out." I won't hide behind anonymity and I think the Bowlings owe me and the Plymouth-Salem Rockettes an apology.

Coverage debate

hen reading the Plymouth Observer, I am continually discouraged by the lack of equal coverage for co-curricular activities at the high school level. I feel there is an unequal balance between sports and non-sports oriented co-curriculars (i.e., science olympiad, debate, choir, quiz bowl, etc.).

For example, there is an entire section dedicated basically to high school sports, yet the non-sports activities get only a blurb every once

I understand that sports are an important part of the community, and I'm not advocating a decrease in sports coverage; however, the nonsports co-curriculars deserve at least equal representation and recognition.

There are achievements in these activities that deserve our pride and attention. I'm sure these other activities would generate as much interest as sports, once introduced to the com-

Not a sacrifice

our Sept. 2 editorial seems to portray the Plymouth-Canton teachers as noble martyrs. The 3-percent deferral must have been welcome news for the teachers whose jobs were saved; however, before marking down dates and making comparisons with Mother Teresa, it should be noted that the teachers were the people who skimmed off a 22-percent increase (approximately $9 million) during a three-year period when the people paying their salaries were probably averaging less than half of 22 percent and many retirees were experiencing a substantial drop in income due to constant pensions and the sharp reduction in short-term in-

My pension amount in 1993 is the same as it was in 1988 and, if I'm lucky, it will be the same in 1998. I would be pleased to have a 3-percent increase that I could defer.

Special groups seek vouchers leaving the problem cases to public schools.

he worst school reform idea floating around Michigan these days is called "voucher." Under it, state school aid would "follow the pupil" to his or her choice of school - local public, neighboring public, priwate or church-related school.

The voucher plan is not to be confused with "schools of choice," a concept limited to public schools. The voucher plan would mean a breakthrough for special interests who long have lusted to get their hands on taxpayer dollars.

Michigan voters in 1970 said no to the voucher plan, then called "parochiaid," by a firm 3-2 margin. At that time, voters amended the constitution, flatly prohibiting state aid to nonpublic schools. The voucher interests tried again in 1978 and were gunned down by a more emphatic 3-1 margin.

They're at it again with a new theme. Instead of a raid on our tax dollars, they're calling it "competition" - that is, making public schools compete for students with private schools.

The chief tactic is a non-stop, vitriolic attack on public education - state curriculum laws, superintendents and especially the teachers.

There are many other reasons the babble about "voucher" ought to be halted:

- Voucher is a Trojan horse for any zany cult that wants to indoctrinate kids with an ethnocentric curriculum or bigoted idea about relig-
- Under a voucher system, we'll see an explosion of spending on colorful brochures. TV ads and billboards to lure kids from one school to another. They call it "marketing," but we call it wasteful hype.
- Private schools always can demonstrate good results by skimming off the best applicants and

Private schools can admit the affluent who are able to supplement state vouchers with private bankrolls. Poorer kids can be left out and will have fewer dollars in their public

The high pressure for a voucher system comes at a bad time for Michigan schools just as they are making breakthroughs in accountability (annual reports), state-endorsed diplomas, testing in problem-solving rather than multiple-choice guesswork, better tenure

Moreover, the state has adopted the goal for high school graduates of employability. Whether one is bound for an elite profession or housekeeping, every graduate is to have job skills. It's a plan designed by corporate hiring officers - not teachers unionists, as some voucher backers have erroneously asserted.

There always will be a place for private and church-related schools. Michigan protects their right to exist, their free speech, their tax-free status, their building safety and their zoning

"Leave the matter of religion to the family altar, the church and the private school, supported entirely by private contributions." President Ulysses S. Grant's speech in 1875 is sound principle today.

Michigan was 26th of the 50 states to be admitted to the Union but first to declare a free education as a right and to make providing that education a legislative responsibility. Ours is a proud, practical and patriotic tradition. Those who use slick code words like "voucher" and "competition" would do education more harm than good.

That's the attitude in many Michigan school districts. It's the wrong time for secrecy. Among many state residents, teachers unions are as popular as a skunk at a picnic.

You know the litany by now: In real dollars (after inflation), spending on public schools has risen 25 percent while school enrollments and test scores have declined. We're paying more for education and getting less.

Many folks would like to comment on tentative agreements before the school board ratifies and turns it into a contract. No such luck, in most communities — despite the Freedom of Information Act, despite the Open Meetings Act.

"At the time of the Sept. 8 (Northville school board) meeting, details of the tentative agreeement were known only to teachers, administrators and the school board . . . Some residents at the meeting asked questions about the proposed settlement and suggested that the board wait before ratifying the pact to give taxpayers an opportunity to examine the details. Needless to say, the rational suggestion didn't get very far."

So wrote colleague Phil Jerome when his local board kept everything secret "until it was too late."

The landmark court case occurred in Traverse City in 1987 when the teachers union ratified on Aug. 28. The Record Eagle sought to publish the details — of high interest because of a local millage election. No, said the school board — not until the board ratifies. The Record Eagle sued under the Freedom of Information Act. The circuit and appellate courts upheld the school board. Reports of the contract's cost didn't get out until the board ratified on Sept. 21.

My fishin' buddy, Dennis Pajot, ran into a worse situation in the Lake

TIM RICHARD

Huron town of Oscoda. The school board voted in open session to reject the tentative agreements but refused to let the people see what it was voting on.

Pajot, a resourceful former editor of the South Lyon Herald and Redford Observer and former Oakland County Road Commission publicist, got the details of the teachers' proposal anyway. But the arrogance of the Oscoda board still is mind-boggling. Let us look at Art. VII sec. 32 of the Michigan Constitution:

"Any county, township, city, village, authority or school district empowered by the legislature or by this constitution to prepare budgets of estimated expenditures and revenues shall adopt such budgets only after a public hearing in a manner prescribed by law."

Phil Jerome argues, logically, that 80 to 90 percent of a school district's budget is labor costs, and 80 percent of that is teachers. What's the sense of holding a hearing on a budget whose main component is contracts that are ratified with no public notice?

I would argue the school board should make public a fiscal impact statement of the tentative agreement a week before the board votes. People could examine a display copy of the T.A. and fiscal impact statement in the school office. The paper could publish it. People could comment at the meeting prior to the board's vote.

Jerome would go a step further and require, by law, a public hearing on the tentative agreement "after a suitable period for public review and com-

High school do a little for everybody, but miss mark

he debate and negotiations to reinstate athletics and extracurricular activities misses by a long way the landmark significance of the crisis facing Michigan schools and Plymouth/Canton schools today.

Of course people who are struggling to provide students with these experiences have good intentions. The bigger picture, however, suggests something more fundamental is at stake. High schools, especially, have been intensely studied for many years and, unequivocally, it has been found that there is a deterioration of test scores and a lowering of intellectual competence. International comparisons reveal an embarrassing erosion of higher order cognitive and reasoning skills among adolescents.

Repeatedly we have been told that high school graduates lack the necessary skills and knowledge to be productive workers, consumers and citizens. These claims are real and factual and I would be happy to supply any interested reader with sources.

High schools today have a structure based on a model created in the 1920s that came to full bloom in the 1940s. The current factory model comprehensive high school has remained in existence because it has satisfied all demands made on it. It offered something for everyone and the money flowed. It has served every faction but none extremely well. We have always had an upper "track" of academic studies that mimicked elite education but generally high schools very early in our history lowered academic standards in the hopes of creating universal attendance.

High schools are a great cultural edifice that Americans have purchased to give their young people a place to grow up in. It was believed that adolescents went through immutable developmental stages and that some were GUEST COLUMNIST suited for academics and others vocational studies and so forth. But most importantly was the great proliferation of extracurricular activities (sports, band, drama, debate, chess and photography) that was designed to help young people "adjust" to adult life.

Today the world economy has made that approach ineffective. We literally can no longer afford this old system. We once believed (the idea of "The Great Society") that we could take care of anyone in America who needed it. We could feed, house, clothe, provide medical care and raise the children of absent parents. Today we need a smart population that can compete on a world scale. We need a population with broad factual knowledge, higher order cognitive and analytic skills, and problem-solving ability.

The debate over extracurricular activities and sports misses the more relevant and pressing issue. What we really need to debate is how we are going to transform schools into effective institutions that will help all of our young people meet the demands of reality and the 21st century. It is not going to be easy to give up some of the best of the old. But at the same time, it would be immoral for us not to take every measure to insure our kids' survival and success.

If teachers and administrators are going to take cutbacks, and if citizens are going to raise money, let's at least do the hard work of putting these resources where we know they belong: We need to bring back laid off teachers and create a focused and restructured school system that corrects the inadequacies of the old system and gives our kids a chance to succeed in the new economy.

Reinstating sports and extracurricular activities should wait until we solve our larger crisis.

Special interests put lock on changes in education

ou people in Michigan deserve a lot of credit," said the man at the resort, putting down his gin and tonic with an admiring smile. "You blew away the entire property tax! Now you can get something serious done!"

Ever since the Legislature this summer obliterated the property tax supporting public schools, virtually every non-Michiganian I have met has said much the same thing.

In part, it's people looking for a subject to start a conversation. But behind their slightly surprised admiration lurks an important public perception about our politics.

Most people now believe it takes a full-blown crisis to force our paralyzed political system to Why? Evidence, for one.

In Michigan, for example, our politicians have been dithering about school financing for a quarter of a century.

During this period, property taxes have soared, per-pupil funding differences between districts have grown, total spending has shot up and our kids still leave school largely unprepared for the competitive world of work.

And what have we received from our political leaders? Wringing of hands and flapping of gums; that's about all.

Why is this so? Blame the system.

Because they regard holding office as their life's profession, our politicians are terrified of doing anything that might make anybody mad — which means they're scared of doing nearly anything.

More to the point, the political system is infested throughout by special interests acting through lobbyists who grease the permanent relection campaigns with contributions. In return, they demand a veto when something comes up that affects their turfs.

In the case of the schools, the interlock of the special interests is so total as to earn the nickname "the Iron Quadrilateral." It works like this:

PHILIP POWER

In one corner are the teachers unions, whose interest in the status quo is matched by the school superintendents and their organization in the second corner.

Both these corners are connected to the third, solidly dominated by more than 500 locally elected school boards in the state. And all three of these corners are linked to the publishers of school books and other instructional materials, whose profits are most effectively safeguarded by resisting change (and the costs of putting out new editions).

To move any one point in this closely interlinked system requires moving all. That's why the political outcome in matters regarding education, school finance and student performance has been nothing more than a kind of grudging incrementalism.

From this analysis arises the hope of today. With the entire basis of school financing eliminated, the political system will be forced to take some definitive action or face chaos.

We will hear Oct. 5 Gov. John Engler's initial proposals for school reform. As the debate kicks off, let's hope that the "action in the face of crisis" theory holds true.

Otherwise, all of us — especially our children — will be in deep trouble.

Anxiety, the mind's reaction to real or imagined danger, is a normal, necessary emotion. It is essential to existence; if we can't perceive and react to something dangerous or threatening, we won't be prepared to defend ourselves, or to run.

Anxiety disorders

Anxiety becomes a "disorder" when it interferes with life resulting in disrupted sleep, nightmares, constant nervousness or unwarranted fears. There are several types of anxiety disorders, all with a variety of treatments.

· Panic disorders. Experiencing high levels of anxiety for no apparent reason is called a panic disorder. This condition can be terrifying -- people who experi-ence panic disorders say they feel like they're going to die or have a heart attack. Panic disorders may be genetic, since they tend to run in families. Sometimes, attacks are triggered by subconscious thought processes or an unusually high level of stress.

Conditioned anxiety. Some anxiety disorders can stem from a traumatic event. If a person has some sort of trauma, and later is put in a similar situation, he or she may experience an anxiety attack.

Generalized anxiety disorders are characterized by chronic, moderately high levels of anxiety. People with this condition are always very nervous and fidgety. Adjustment disorder, one of the mildest forms of anxiety disorders, is a direct result of a stressful situation or change in the environment. Characterized by a persistent, anxious mood, it generally is lymouth Salem, enjoying it best season of boys golf in 20 years, won its 10th consecutive match without a loss Tuesday, 198-214 over Northville.

The team score was Salem's best of the year despite windy and cold conditions at Tanglewood Golf Course.

"I had no idea we'd score that well because of the weather," coach Rick Wilson said. "Before we got off the bus, I reminded (the players) to block out the weather conditions, and I told them good players play well in any conditions.

"We've had some windy days, but we haven't encountered anything quite so cold. I was concerned how we'd handle it, and here we ended up shooting our best score."

The Rocks were led by junior Mark Wesner, who broke 40 for the fifth time in six matches with a one-under-par 35. It was his best round in three years of varsity golf.

Mike Hjelmstad shot 38, Jeremy Fox 40, Brian Covington 41, Bryan Proctor and Ryan Andrzejewski 44 apiece.

Junior Kathleen Landelius placed third (19:53), junior Laura McWilliams fourth (20:05), freshman Becky Wolfrom sixth (20:20), freshman Beth Knight ninth (20:32), junior Meghan Barresi 17th (21:30) and junior Tracey Cavin 35th (22:59).

Canton made a sweep of the first-place trophies as the boys also won a championship. The Chiefs scored 45 points in the 12-team meet to finish ahead of Amherst (Ohio) Steele (86).

Dates 2nd in O&E 1st flight

The weather turned overnight, and so did the results, at last weekend's Observer & Eccentric/Whispering Willows golf tournament in Livonia. Joe Borkowski of Troy waded through the sloppy conditions Sunday to post the day's best score.

By C.J. RISAK STAFF WRITER

Joe Borkowski was certain. Sure, he had managed a creditable round Sunday, posting a 75 in extremely trying conditions. But he was convinced it wouldn't be good enough.

Borkowski was so sure his two-day total of 151 would come up short, he didn't even bother hanging around the 18th green to see the leaders finish. Instead he took his "leader in the clubhouse" designation into the clubhouse to await the final results.

Fifteen minutes later, it was over — and Borkowski was the winner. When informed of this, the 50-year-old Troy resident was truly surprised. "Really?" he said. "Well, miracles do happen."

It wasn't a miracle that won it for Borkowski, it was consistency. No one adjusted better to the soggy conditions, the result of an all-night rainstorm, than he. Indeed, he seemed to thrive in it: On the front nine Sunday, he shot 38; on the back nine, he shot 37. His 75 was one stroke better than his Saturday score.

The win was Borkowski's first at the O&E in, by his estimate, six tries. "I finish in the top 10 usually," he said, then noted a total on Karl Nagy's scoreline. "Whoever had an eight on No. 12 — I've done that before."

Nagy, from Livonia, was the leader after Saturday's opening round with a 73. But that eight was part of a 44 on the back nine Sunday; combined with his 40 on the front nine, Nagy dropped out of contention with an 84.

The only one to challenge Borkowski was Alex McLuckie, also of Livonia. McLuckie trailed Nagy by a stroke after Saturday's round, shooting a 74—two shots better than Borkowski. He had a chance to win it Sunday, but he bogeyed the last three holes to finish with a 78 for a 152 total.

"I thought it would take 148, 149 to win," said Borkowski. He acknowledged his consistency was his greatest ally: "I hit a lot of fairways. If your irons are on, you can make some nice putts here."

The title topped an impressive year for Borkowski, who usually plays at Sylvan Glen in Troy and competed for the Atlas Cup on the Publinx Tour. "I've had a consistent year," he said. "I've been shooting 75s.

"This caps a good year for me."

Borkowski's victory earned him $275 in first-place prize money. McLuckie's second-place 152 was worth $190. Alan Menzies of Farmington Hills, Kirk Osler of Livonia and Paul Rys of Redford tied for third at 154. Roger Springsteen of Livonia collected low-net honors with a 139.

In first flight, Jeff Truax of Livonia was the champion with a 154 (worth $225), followed by Bob Dates of Canton at 158. Vincent Albany of Westland earned the low-net award with a 136.

In second flight, the winner was Thom Gillis of Livonia with a 169 ($150). Paul Simpson of West Bloomfield was second at 172. Michael Zammitt of Livonia took low-net with a 142.

Plymouth Salem coach Fred Thomann had been waiting for his team to close out a victory in girls basketball, and the Rocks finally did Tuesday.

But they did it the hard way, ending a four-game losing streak with a 40-38 victory over host Ann Arbor Huron.

Salem let a six-point halftime lead slip away in the third quarter, and the Rocks had to come from behind late in the fourth period to take the win.

The Rocks (3-5) led 22-16 at halftime but were outscored 15-5 in the third period.

Alera Simons scored 15 points and Jasmine Smith 10 for the River Rats (2-5).

Craven scored 19 points Saturday in a 50-46 loss to Adrian. Sills and Gundry added six points each. Sills pulled down eight rebounds, and Gundry had five assists, four steals and five rebounds.

"(Craven) has been playing well for us," Thomann said. "She's playing good defense and has led us in scoring for the most part all the year. She's really maximizing her ability and becoming a leader on the team."

Amy Wetherbee scored 11 points for Adrian (6-1).

Archery deer season on horizon

BIL

Heck, forget that the grass needs mowing, the garage needs cleaning and the car needs a tuneup. The day archers across the state have been waiting for is less than 24 hours away. The 1993 archery deer season begins tomorrow morning one-half hour before

Despite a lot of grumbling about a lack of deer last year, 330,730 archery hunters combined to take 99,980 whitetails according to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. (That's slightly better than a 30-percent success rate.) The '93 outlook also appears bright with the whitetail herd estimated at between 1.4 and 1.6 million animals.

But it wasn't always this way. The popularity of archery deer hunting has exploded over the past 20 years.

Wheels of fortune Around 1965 a new type of bow — the compound — hit the market. Prior to that time, recurves and long bows were the only available weapons for archers. In the mid-60's wheels, or cams, were added to the end of the limbs of the recurves allowing for a great reduction in pull weight. These new bows made the sport much more attractive for those who had never previously hunted with a bow and arrow.

Compounds drastically improved arrow speed and flight. These new wheels also made it much easier to draw the bow and hold the bow at full draw while waiting for the optimum shot. It took about five years before the impact was felt in Michigan.

DNR statistics indicate 68,540 licensed archery hunters took 3,180 deer in Michigan in 1970 (4.6-percent success rate). By 1975 that figure had nearly doubled with 120,700 licensed archers bagging 8,760 deer (7.3-percent success rate).

Going through changes

The popularity of the sport took another huge leap in 1977 when the DNR passed the two-deer law. This law allowed hunters to take one deer with a bow and one deer with a gun. Prior to that time hunters could only take one deer, either with a gun or a bow.

By 1980 the number of licensed archery hunters in Michigan had ballooned to a whopping 204,550.

They harvest was 28,110 (13.7-percent success rate).

In 1986, 226,970 hunters took 57,960 deer (25.5-percent succes rate).

The DNR expects 350,000 archers to hunt this fall with an anticipated harvest of 88,000 deer.

Archers are now allowed to harvest two deer per year, one of which must be a buck with three-inch antlers or more. Antlerless deer permits not filled during the Nov. 15-30 firearms season allow an archer to take a third deer, but it must be used during the second archery season which runs Dec. 1-Jan. 1.

Practice time is over. If you're not ready by now, wait until next year to break into the sport. Don't try to hunt with a weapon you are not proficient with.

Remember, when the moment of truth finally arrives stay calm. Take a deep breath and concentrate on a good shot. Pick a spot and make a smooth release. And keep in mind that it's not how far you can shoot an arrow, it's how close you can get to the game.

(Hunters and anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information by mail to: Outdoors, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, Mi. 48009. Information may be faxed to 644-1314 or call Bill Parker at 901-2573.)

road challenges

They're halfway there.

The Schoolcraft College Ocelots made their second tough road trip of the men's soccer regular season Saturday, visiting Cuyahoga CC in Cleveland. A year ago, Cuyahoga finished second in the Region 12

This year, it wasn't much of a match: The Ocelots won easily, 3-1.

The victory kept SC unbeaten thus far this season: 8-0-1 overall and 6-0 in regional games. The region season is half over, and the Ocelots have already visited, and beaten, their toughest opponents -Macomb and Cuyahoga. They play both again, but at home.

At Cuyahoga Saturday, SC led nearly from the start to the finish. It took the Ocelots just five minutes to find the net, and it was Matt Lividini who found it. A Cuyahoga turnover deep in its own end ended up with Lividini, and he made no mistake, burying his shot from the right side in the lower left

Five minutes later, Fadi Bazzi unleashed a shot that hit a defender, changed directions and ended up in the goal, increasing SC's lead to 2-0.

The Ocelots' final goal came in the 60th minute. Vince Troiani threaded a through pass nicely to Lividini near midfield, and he beat the defense to the goal to score his second of the match

Cuyahoga's only goal came in the final minute on a penalty kick, awarded when SC sweeper Billy Joker was called for taking down a player in the

SC passes tough Ineligibility leads to forfeits

BY C.J. RISAK STAFF WRITER

To call it a bad week for Schoolcraft College's volleyball team isn't nearly enough.

Considering the Lady Ocelots had lost just one Eastern Conference match in the previous eight years that Tom Teeters coached them helps convey how surprising it was to lose to visiting Delta College Tuesday, 13-15, 15-5, 16-

That made it two conference losses in matches played this season. And yet, as shocking as that is, it isn't the worst of the news.

Danielle Pfeffer, one of two transfers from Henry Ford CC (Kristin Barnes is the other), was ruled ineligible earlier this week. Pfeffer, one of the Ocelots' best players, did not play against Delta; her status remains uncertain.

Because Pfeffer was ineligible, all matches she appeared in were 0-11 overall, 0-3 in the conference.

The reason for Pfeffer's ineligibility, according to sources, was believed to be a problem in obtaining her release from Henry Ford CC. She and Barnes played for the Lady Hawks last season, but, according to what Teeters said prior to the season, both had obtained releases from Henry Ford coach Gary Gray.

Teeters would not comment on the situation. SC athletic director forfeited. Which means SC is now Marty Nowak was unavailable.

There were few superlatives in the loss to Delta. Danielle Sheehy led the team with 17 kills (.209 kill average), Shannon Capstick had 16 digs, Tricia Kazyaka got eight blocks and Tracia Clendenen totaled 37 assists to kills.

But it wasn't enough - not nearly. SC hosts a much tougher foe, Mott CC, at 7 p.m. tonight and then has their own tournament Friday and Saturday.

Madonna climbs NAIA national volleyball charts

The news just keeps on getting better for the Madonna University women's volleyball team.

On Monday, the Lady Crusaders achieved their highest ranking ever (No. 7) in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. (Hawaii-Hilo is No. 1 in the NAIA coaches poll.)

On Tuesday, Madonna ran its overall record to 20-2 with a 15-4, 15-13, 15-9 victory at Hillsdale College. It was the Lady Crusaders' fourth straight win over an parade with 12 kills apiece. Van Deusen, a Waterford Mott product who played at Schoolcraft College, also added 13 digs.

Other contributions came from Kelly McCausland (Redford Union), six kills and seven digs; Maureen Paulin (Farmington Hills Mercy), six kills and 12 digs; Julie Wood (Schoolcraft), five kills and 12 digs; Tiffany Joseph and Laura Fisher (Wayne Memorial), five digs apiece.

Senior setter Mazie Pilut (Redford Bishop Borgess) collected 33

"Going on the road after a week layoff made me leery about how we'd play," Madonna coach Jerry Abraham said. "But we passed and served very well.

"We were down 9-4 in the second game, but stuck in there and pulled it out.

"We also hit very well as a team (.340 percentage).

PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Her team is struggling, sort of, but Kathy O'Connor is doing her

A senior middle hitter for Ferris State from Redford (Dearborn Divine Child), O'Connor enjoyed an outstanding, record-setting week. Against Oakland University, she set a school-record with 41 kills (old record: 33 by Stephanie Chaffin, 1992) with a .538 kill average. Her 41 kills was the fourth-highest total for a single match in NCAA II history.

In nine games last week, O'Connor had 59 kills (6.56 per game) with a .432 kill average. She also had nine blocks, 25 digs and two service aces.

No wonder she was named Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference player of the week. For the season, O'Connor leads the conference in kills per game (5.65), ranks fifth in digs per game (3.09) and is ninth in kill percentage (.326).

Unfortunately, the Bulldogs haven't performed as ably. They lost in five games to OU; through last weekend, they were 5-8 overall, 3-3 in the GLIAC.

SPARTAN STARS

Michigan State exploded for 13 goals in a pair of women's soccer wins in the last week, which helped the Spartans pull close to .500, and a handful of former Observer athletes did their part. In a 10-1 win over Lovola University Sept. 22, freshman Leah Hutko (from Plymouth Canton) scored a goal and added two assists, her first points as a collegi

Michelle Minton (Plymouth Salem) also had a goal in the win over Loyola, with an assist from Tracy Morrell (Livonia Stevenson). Morrell gained her second assist of the season on a goal scored by Kathryn Dudley (Farmington Hills Mercy) in Sunday's 3-0 win over Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

MSU was 4-5 going into Friday's match at Cincinnati. BIG GUNN

Liz Gunn, a freshman outside hitter from Livonia (Ladywood), was instrumental in Western Michigan University's first Mid-American Conference win of the season, 15-2, 15-13, 10-15, 6-15, 15-13 over Toledo Friday.

Gunn had 15 kills in the win, the Broncos first in four MAC matches. On Saturday against Bowling Green, WMU lost in five games 10-15, 15-9, 15-9, 10-15, 15-

SOCCER STANDOUTS

Junior defender Greg Smith of Livonia earned an assist in Western Michigan's 2-0 victory over Eastern Michigan Saturday. It was Smith's second assist of the season, and it helped the Broncos improve to 6-2.

On Sept. 22 against Illinois-Chicago, junior defender Jason Ries of Livonia and junior midfielder Matt Gold of Plymouth each earned assists in WMU's 3-1 overtime loss. It was the second assist of the season for both.

FAST FINISHER

Senior Michelle Gayney (Redford Bishop Borgess) placed third overall, second for Western Michigan, at the Kent Tri-meet in Kent, Ohio, Saturday.

Gayney negotiated the 5,000meter course in 18:28 as the Broncos won the meet with 26 points. Ohio University was second with 30 and Kent State took third with ing Fridays and a few lanes are available on Tuesday nights. These are just a few of many houses in the area where bowlers can find weekday evening lanes. ■ The Pro Tour Qualifier is coming.

The PTQ, in connection with the PBA Greater Detroit Open, will be held Sunday, Oct. 3 and 17 at Taylor Lanes. This is different from the Pro-Am as the PTQ presents an opportunity for five qualifying local amateurs to bowl in the PBA Tour for the $140,000 prize money. The five top qualifiers in the PTQ will receive a paid entry to the tournament and bowl as an amateur in competition with the pros.

Entry fee is $30 and there are the usual large jackpots. Spots are limited so those interested should make their reservations as soon as possible. Walk-ins will also be accepted if there are any openings.

This Sunday, the bowlers will compete in one six-game block with the two highest scratch scores taking the entries. The Oct. 17 PTQ will consist of eight games with the top three qualifiers gaining the spots.

This squad will start at noon. Call Taylor Lanes at 946-9092.

Blazers top rival Marlins

BY NEAL ZIPSER STAFF WRITER

After a 10-day layoff, Livonia Ladywood released some of its bottled up energy Tuesday while running past girls basketball rival Farmington Hills Mercy, 61-53.

The visiting Blazers improved to 5-1 overall and 1-0 in the Catholic League Central Division, while handing the Marlins another frustrating defeat.

It was Mercy's fourth straight loss and fifth in the last six games. The Marlins are 3-6 overall and 0-2 in the division.

"We've played two real tough Central Division teams (Ladywood and Birmingham Marian) and have given them all they want for the better part of a half, but we have to become a 32-minute team," Mercy coach Larry Baker said. "We have a young group and there are some real positives. But we have to learn no one in the division is going to give us anything."

Ladywood controlled the first half in front of a capacity crowd that forced Mercy to close its entrances just prior to the game.

The Marlins rallied and tied the score at 28 after scoring the first four points of the second half. But the Blazers gained some breathing room by going on a 17-0

The Marlins had trouble stopping junior forward Tara Overaitis, who scored a game-high 27 points and accounted for 17 of the Blazers' 28 first-half points. Overaitis scored most of her points on wide-open driving baseline jumpers.

"We didn't have the greatest awareness of where Tara was on the court," Baker said. "If we just had some more help on her, it would have made some of her shots harder."

Even with Overaitis' scoring, the gritty play of Campeau gave Mercy more fits. The junior was tenacious on defense, added 10 points and was the person responsible for finding Overaitis near the basket.

"Melissa worked her butt off tonight and went after all the loose balls," Kavanaugh said. She did a good job of getting the ball to Tara, who did a good job of getting open.'

Ladywood's run featured some of everything including a Cam-peau 19-footer, three-pointers by Kerry and Maura Duggan, a dou-ble-pump layup by Overaitis and a 12-foot jumper by 6-foot-4 Anne Mercy fought back in the fourth but it proved too little, too late. Triples by Carrie Schwagle and Glenda Lee closed it to 58-53 with :29 left, but the Marlins could get no closer as Ladywood converted five of its final six free throws.

"We talked about how many times we had the chance to put the game away and then relaxed," Kavanaugh said. "Our decision making was not that good tonight. We showed that we can do things real well and real badly."

"We got a little cocky at times in the game, and we have to learn to keep our heads in the game,' Campeau said.

Junior Holly Taylor came off the bench to play her second strong game in a row and lead Mercy with 15 points.

"I had a goal of keeping the game within the 50-point range," Baker said. "The third quarter really distorted everything. They got too many easy baskets. We had some damaging mental lapses tonight."

Plymouth Salem rallied to score three late goals Monday and defeat host Livonia Franklin 3-2 in boys soccer.

Following a scoreless first half, Franklin scored first when Jason Buelow converted a penalty kick with 15 minutes left in the game. But the Rocks scored three goals within a five-minute span, beginning with eight minutes remaining. Mark MacInnis had two goals and Kevin Little the other. Little, Matt Simons and Andy Makins also had one assist each. Victor Rodopoulos scored the second goal for the Patriots, who entered the week as the No. 8ranked team in Class A. Franklin is 3-2-1 in the league and 6-3-1 overall, Salem 4-2 and 5-4-1. "Salem certainly controlled the tempo of the game much better than we did," Franklin coach Mary Kay Hussey said, also citing the muddy playing field.

They were much better at playing in the mud than we were. They did a better job of adapting to the field conditions than we Tony Cosenza played the entire game in goal for the Rocks, who stretched their winning streak to three. He and senior Paul Dood rotate games in goal. Salem coach Ken Johnson attributed the win in part to a lineup change made possible by the full-time status after suffering a bruised kidney.

Jaskolski played his first full game at stopper. Trevor Pruett remains at sweeper, but Johnson moved Ronny Mashni and Mike Kley to marking backs and sent Little and Phil Shipley to the midfield. Johnson cited the play of Kley, who was assigned to mark Rodopoulos.

CHURCHILL 3, CANTON 0: Livonia Churchill gained the early advantage and maintained it Monday night for a 3-0 boys occer victory over the host Chiefs.

Pete Owens scored for the Chargers in the first minute, and Mark Harper made it 2-0 several minutes later. Vince DeMassa finished the scoring as Churchill took a threegoal lead into halftime.

The Chargers are 1-0-1 in the Western Division and 6-2-2 overall. Canton slipped to 2-2 in the Western Lakes Activities Association and 4-6 overall. "This was a big game for us," Churchill

George Tomasso did an outstanding job for them; we could have had four or five." Brian Stramecki, a sophomore up from the JV team, played in goal for the Chargers and coach John Boots said. "(Canton goalie) got his first shutout. Justin Monson, Charlie Roberts and Owens assisted on the Churchill goals.

Boots had praise for the play of Brian O'Beirne, who rotated between stopper and center-halfback but was active all over the field for Churchill. "They really came to play hard," Canton coach Don Smith said. "They jumped on us and got two quick ones. They put us out of it early. We played our best, but we didn't have much to give them.

Canton facing must-win game against Northville

BY DAN O'MEARA STAFF WRITER

One of the big games in Ob-serverland football circles this week has Westland John Glenn playing at Livonia Stevenson on Friday night. Both teams are 4-0.

Glenn is the perennial power in the Lakes Division and is accustomed to such high-profile con-

The Spartans haven't had a start this good since former University of Michigan quarterback Dave Hall played there in the late 1970s. Stevenson last defeated the Rockets in 1987 when the two shared the Lakes title with North Farmington.

Other big games: Redford Thurston at Allen Park on Friday; Detroit DePorres vs. Redford Catholic Central on Saturday at Clarenceville.

On another front, it appears there will be a contest among the Observer guys afterall. The race between Editors Brad Emons and Dan O'Meara got a little tighter last week.

Emons remains the leader at 47-12 overall, but O'Meara gained a game. Danny Boy (44-15) was 12-2 last week while The Big E was 11-3.

FRIDAY GAMES (all times 7:30 p.m. unless noted)

Clarenceville at Lutheran Northwest, 7 p.m.: The Trojans (1-2, 1-3) gave firstplace Cranbrook a battle last week in the Metro West but lost 12-7. Lutheran Northwest remains winless (0-1, 0-4). PICK: Clarenceville keeps the Crusaders win-

Dearborn at Redford Union, 7 p.m.: The Panthers (0-1, 0-4) are last in the Mega White Division after losing 40-14 to Taylor Kennedy last week. The Pioneers (2-1, 3-1) are in contention with four others for the division title. PICK: Dearborn

Wsld. Glenn at Liv. Stevenson: The No. 2-ranked Rockets have another powerhouse team and rate the favorite role based on their tradition and past success. The Spartans won two games on the last play and who knows what might happen in this one? Both are 2-0 in the Lakes Division. PICK: Glenn stays un-

Plv. Canton at Northville: This is a must win for both teams. Canton (2-0, 3-

GRID PICKS

1) is unbeaten in the Western Division, needs to keep pace with Farmington Har rison and has a three-game winning streak. Northville (1-1, 3-1) must beat the Chiefs and hope Canton can beat the Hawks down the road if it wants a share of the division title. Harrison showed the Mustangs can be vulnerable to the pass, but the Chiefs could have trouble running the ball on Northville. PICK: Northville has the edge with the home field.

N. Farmington at Pty. Salem: The Rocks (1-1, 2-2) will celebrate homecoming following a 14-0 road victory over Walled Lake Central. The Raiders (1-1, 1-3) were ahead of Livonia Stevenson 10-9 last week but lost 24-10. PICK: The Rocks are solid.

Farm. Harrison at W.L. Western: The Hawks, rated No. 5 in Class A, will try to avenge last year's 21-7 loss to Western - its first. The Hawks (2-0, 3-1) got a battle from Livonia Franklin, but that's no surprise since the Patriots have been a near-miss team. Western (1-1, 2-2) coach Chuck Apap was concerned about his pass defense after Canton passed for nearly 200 yards and three touchdowns in a 27-10 win. The Harrison coaches were in the stands, and Apap was well aware of that. PICK: The Hawks have a Western-

Garden City at Belleville: The Cougars (2-1, 3-1) gave Dearborn its first loss last week when they scored the winning touchdown with 14 minutes left. Coach Bob Eisiminger is building a program at Garden City, which shared the Northwest Suburban League title last year, and has the Cougars on track again. Belleville (2-1, 2-2) defeated Lincoln Park 23-12 to reach .500. PICKS: O'Meara says Garden City keeps it rolling, but Emons likes the Red. Thurston at Allen Park: This is another of the big games, and one the Eagles (2-1, 3-1) dearly want to win. Thurston trails the Jaguars (3-0, 3-1) by one game in the new Mega Blue Division. Allen Park was the perennial power in the old Tri-River League and defeated the Eagles 12-0 last year. Thurston is led by senior receiver Jeff Lance, who has caught 10 passes for 245 yards and four touchdowns. PICK: The Eagles soar.

Woodneven at Wayne Memorial: The host Zeh as (2-0, 3-1) are tied for the lead in the Mega Red Division with Dear born Fordson. Wayne has been a surprise team this year with few regulars back from last year's playoff team and freshman Lorenzo Guess at quarterback. Woodhaven (0-2, 2-2) is last in the division. SATURDAY GAMES (all games 1 p.m. unless noted)

Liv. Churchill at Liv. Franklin: This edition of the intra-city rivalry features a battie between winless teams. Both are 0-2 in the Western Division and 0-4 overall. The Patriots have been in nearly every game but have found it hard to score key points. The Chargers lost their 31st in a row last week to Northville, 43-8. PICK: Franklin finally gets a win.

W.L. Central at Farmington: The visiting Vikings (0-2, 2-2) were 2-0 before running into Westland Glenn and Ptymouth Salem. Farmington was competitive in its first three games and will try to re-bound from a 49-7 loss to Glenn. PICKS: Central wins a squeaker, according to O'Meara, but Emons sees it the other Cranbrook at Luth. Westland: The host Warriors (0-2, 1-3) will have their hands full in this Metro West contest. Cranbrook leads the division with a 3-0 record and is 3-1 overall. The Warriors lost 18-6 to Lutheran West, and the Cranes edged Clarenceville 12-7. PICK: Cranbrook reels in a win.

Bishop Borgess at Riverview Richard. 7:30 p.m.: The Spartans (0-1, 0-4) in the Catholic League Tri-Sectional suffered a 48-6 loss to first-place Orchard Lake St. Mary, the No. 1-ranked team in Class CC. Richard (1-0, 3-1) is tied for the lead lwth OLSM and is having a good season, also. PICK: Borgess keeps looking for a win.

St. Agatha vs. Royal Oak Shrine, 7:30 p.m. at RU's Kraft Field: The Aggies (1-0, 3-1) fooled the Observer guys and beat Ann Arbor Richard last week to share the early lead with East Catholic and Waterford Lakes in the Catholic C Section. Shrine (0-1, 0-4) and St. Agatha have had some good-battles in recent years, but the Knights appear to be down this year. PICK: The Aggles win their

Redford CC vs. Detroit DePorres, 7:30 p.m. at Clarenceville: This game should be the classic matchup once again: CC's strength against DePorres' speed. Although each has some of the other, too. The Shamrocks (3-1) can spring speedy tailback Freddie Taylor behind a huge line, and the Eagles (4-0) always have size to go with their blazing speed. CC should hope for another rainy night like they had last week against De-LaSalle on the same field. The Shamrocks won 15-6 in the regular season and 17-6 in the Catholic League championship game a year ago. PICK: CC finds a way

LSO to feature talented young pianist

Livonia Symphony Orchestra opens its 20th anniversary season Oct. 2 with a concert showcasing awardwinning pianist Anthony Bonamici, a 1993 graduate of Stevenson High School in Livonia, performing Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

The 19th century romanticism of Schumann and Wagner, as well as, dramatic melodies from "The Phantom of the Opera" take center stage to open the 20th anniversary concert season of the Livoinia Symphony Orchestra 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 2, at Churchill High School Auditorium, 8900 Newburgh, Livonia.

Guest artist Anthony Bonamici, a national award-winning pianist and composer will perform "Piano Concerto in A minor" by German composer Robert Schumann.

Tickets are $12, ($8 seniors, $6 students, $3 children under age 12) and available at the Livonia Civic Center Library, Farmington Road at Five Mile, Madonna University, Schoolcraft and Levan, Hammell Music, 15630 Middlebelt and at the door the night of the concert. For information, call the symphony office 421-1111, or the 24-hour hot-line 458-6575.

"Anthony is probably one of the best talents I've ever heard. He's an outstanding pianist," said LSO music director/ conductor, Francesco Di-Blasi.

"Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor, of all the piano concertos, it's the most accessible. If you've never been to a concert don't miss this one because Schumann will jump right up and grab you."

A 1993 graduate of Stevenson High School in Livonia, Bonamici per-formed with the LSO in February after winning second place - instrumental category in the 15th annual Young Artist Competition at Madon-

PREVIEW

"I was very happy about being asked back. I enjoyed playing with the Livonia Symphony last time," Bonamici said. "It's nice to come back home and perform. I like achieving recognition in my hometown."

Bonamici, who practices three to four hours a day seven days a week, began piano studies at age five. Originally, he was fascinated with learning to play organ, but his parents insisted, piano lessons would come first.

Dreams come true in drama, comedy

Two remark-able films about people overcoming incredible odds to make their dreams

"The Joy Luck Club," and "Cool Runnings" are opening at movie theaters in metro Detroit Friday.

Hollywood Pictures presents "The Joy Luck Club" the story of four remarkable women whose extraordinary lives are filled with love and tragedy, richness and magic, and who are sustained by the hopes and dreams they have for their daughters.

Based upon the best-selling novel by Amy Tan, the story begins when June (Ming-Na Wen) is invited to join the Joy Luck - the weekly mah-jongg group of her recently deceased mother Suyuan (Kieu Chinh). As a portrait of the club's three "Aunties" — unfolds, it reveals a mosaic of the startling events and conditions that have shaped their lives, and the lives of their precious daughters.

The mothers impart their wisdom and pain, experience and love to their daughters who in turn come to better understand PREVIEW and value their parents. Tsai Chin is Lindo, the self-pro-claimed leader of the Aunties.

"She's very bossy and quite opinionated. And her daughter, Waverly, is very much like her,' said Chin. "As in real life, these conflicts can be very funny and sometimes quite sad. It's a classic mother-daughter relationship."

"The Joy Luck Club" is rated R (Restricted, requires an accompanying parent or guardian) and opens Friday at these suburban movie theaters: AMC Maple, AMC Woods and AMC Laurel Park.

"Cool Runnings" also is opening Friday, is based on the true story of four Jamaican athletes going to extremes to compete as bobsled racers at the Winter Olympics. Walt Disney Pictures presents this comedy about four athletes with few resources, and virtually no clue about winter sports, who are sliding on thin ice as they go for the gold in Calgary, Canada.

It's an uphill course for this troupe from the tropics - including Derice Bannock (Leon), Sanka Coffie (Doug E. Doug), Yul Brenner (Malik Yoba) and Junior Bevil (Rawle D. Lewis).

Refusing to let anything stand in their way, they enlist the help of a down-and-out, ex-champion American slider named Irv (John Candy). Unavoidably drawn back to a sport he has come to loath, Irv is faced with coaching a team of complete novices. But once committed, he determines to turn them around, and to somehow right the wrongs of his own failed career.

It's a bumpy ride, but with pride, determination and dignity, they make their impossible dreams come true in this live-action comedy for the whole family.

"Cool Runnings," is rated PG (Parental Guidance suggested, some material may be inappropriate for pre-teenagers) and opens Friday at these suburban movie theaters: AMC Abbey, AMC Laurel Park, AMC Old Orchard, AMC Southfield City, AMC Sterling Center, General Cinema Canton, Showcase Auburn Hills, Showcase Dearborn, Showcase Pontiac, Showcase Sterling Heights, Showcase Westland, Star Rochester, United Artists 12 Oaks.

to Tokyo to close a big business deal which will set them for life.

Enter Henry (Culkin), Mark's same-age cousin, whose rambunctiousness and bad table manners are chocked up as symptoms of his age. The boys are in constant motion on their first couple of days together, smashing windows in an old warehouse, outrunning the steel jaws of a pit bull and climbing into an obscenely tall tree house.

When Mr. Highway arrives, Mark begins to have second thoughts. Henry constructs a lifesized dummy out of old clothes and cons Mark into lugging it out into the country. When they stop to rest Mr. Highway atop a freeway overpass, Henry pushes it into oncoming traffic, causing a massive pileup.

Why the ensuing TV news report doesn't mention anything about the pre-teen perpetrators or even the dummy is unclear, but it could have added another element to stretch out some pretty thin material. Their success only makes Henry bolder as he sets his sights on his little sister, with Mark running defense. This update of the old "Bad ■ This update of the old "Bad Seed" movie would be even hokier if it weren't for director Joseph Ruben, who made his name early on with a clever little thriller called "The Stepfather."

Seed" movie would be even hokier if it weren't for director Joseph Ruben, who made his name early on with a clever little thriller called "The Stepfather." He knows how to put the screws to you in the false comfort of family. He makes Henry's home, a Maine island village, first idyllic and then foreboding and shadow-filled when Henry gets involved. He's no Hitchcock, but Ruben does have a flair for suspense, little set pieces that play upon fairly universal fears — heights and pit bulls. One of the best scenes is Henry and Mark's first ascension into the tree house, which requires the climbing skills of Stallone in "Cliffhanger.

One of the boards breaks loose and Mark almost falls, saved by the frighteningly calm Henry, who dangles him over the ground by one hand, asking, "If I let you go, do you think you could fly?

Culkin mumbles most of his lines in an extremely low-key portrayal. His cryptic comments are supposed to send chills down your spine, but he doesn't speak like a regular 12-year-old so you never see him as intended: as the bratty kid next door whose games take a deadly turn.

As Mark, Wood has the kind of piercing blue eyes that would usually make him the villain of the piece. We do sympathize with him, especially in his vain attempts to make people listen about Henry and in the scenes with his aunt, warmly played by Wendy Crewson.

Audiences ate this stuff up over the weekend, including a matinee at the AMC Old Orchard, where Marie Stahl of Farmington took her young sons to see it. "I'll never hear the end of it," Stahl said. The next time they act up they'll say at least they're not & bad as Henry."

"The Good Son" is now showing at these suburban movie theaters AMC Southfield City, Quo Vadis, Showcase Pontiac, United Artists Fairlane, AMC Abbey, AMC Laurel Park, AMC Wonderland, Star Rochester, AMC Old Orchard. Showcase Auburn Hills and United Artists Twelve Oaks.

"Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," the season opener at the Birmingham Theatre, is disappointing and lackluster despite Jule Syne music, perky Stella Parton as its star, and some good supporting talent. This is a revival of the 1949 hit musical, adapted from Anita Loes's popular 1925 novel about two chorus girls who set out for Paris in the Roaring 1920s hoping to find rich husbands and acquire lots of jewels. The current production is the first stop on a national delivery, but on opening night nearly all ended up as throwaways that garnered only an occasional isolated chuckle.

As Lorelei Lee, the gold-digging "little girl from Little Rock," Parton wisely chose not to imitate her famous predecessors - Carol Channing, who originated the stage role, and Marilyn Monroe, who starred in the 1953 film version. Parton stresses Lorelei's origins as a country girl. This works to good advantage in "Just a Little Girl from Little Rock," when Lorelei reminisces about her roots, but does nothing to enhance Lorelei's characterization the rest of the time.

Lorelei Lee is one of the great creations in musical-comedy history, a larger-than-life character whose enduring fame surpassed that of the show from which she came. Parton is cute and spunky and can belt out a rousing "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend"

The second leads, Catherine Hart as Lorelei's pal Dorothy, and James Kampf as Henry Spofford her adoring swain, do a very pleasing duet of "You Say You Care."

Hart's rich, booming voice adds zest to all her numbers even though her character's personality comes across as way too bland.

Directed by Barbara J. Underwood, the production comes through with flying colors in many respects.

The story revolves essentially around two "Stepford Marines," Lance Cpl. Harold Dawson and Pfc. Louden Downey, accused of murdering a fellow Marine, Pfc. William Santiago. Serving as counsel for the accused men are three young Naval officers: Lt. j.g.

As Dawson and Downey, Dave Springer and Jay Peterson have some impressive moments, not the least of which occurs in the highly-arresting opening scene. Standing at attention and speaking out like well-drilled Marines, their characters seeem almost machine-like. We will soon see, of course, just how far from machines they really are.

Steve Tadevic is appropriately off-handed and brash as Kaffee, the clever young Navy reservist who couldn't care less about the cudes - "Unit! Corps! God! Country!" sacred to the diehard Marines he is appointed to defend. Although Mark Carley as sidekick Weinberg seems occasionally confused about his character's definition, he is ultimately likable as a guy whose family

Christine Tobia, looking fresh and neat as a newly painted wooden soldier, is Joanne Galloway, a rather rigid attorney with a passion for justice, and a relentless respect for rules.

As the cunning, cigar-chomping, tough-talking Col. Jessep, Tom D'Agostino does a good job, especially in a climactic courtroom scene.

Although some fare better than others, generally the supporting cast turns in able performances. Ryan Martin's Santiago, appearing in just a few, shadowy flashbacks, seems heartbreakingly vulnerable and, most of all, alone.

served as an Indian trading post, inn, tavern and residence on the old mud road running to Pontiac.

We decided to recreate some of the area's history by naming our new restaurant Trader's Bar and Grille, and offer a traditional casual and warm dining ambience at popular prices which includes a large-screen TV for sports events," said Zawideh.

The menu starts with a traditional assortment of appetizers ranging from blue corn chips and salsa for $1.75 to escargot in puff pastry sauteed in garlic butter for $6.50 to wok seared scallops on rice noodles for $5.95.

Salad assortments include the Saginaw trail salad - stacks of sliced turkey, ham, bacon, Swiss and Cheddar cheese on fresh greens and garnishes, $7.95; and Philly steak salad - grilled sliced London broil atop romaine, assorted greens and sliced fresh vegetables, $7.95.

Sandwiches start with the burger platter at $5.95, up to a filet steak sandwich for $8.95. Trader's Bar & Grille patrons can also enjoy all the other Kingsley amenities such as a collection of fine California and European wines, and local and domestic

Main selections feature sauteed center-cut pork chops with an apple onion chutney, $7.95; wok-seared Oriental chicken with vegetables served over rice noodle $6.50; and barbecue spare ribs with a teriyaki glaze. Patrons can also order the renowned sauteed Michigan lake perch and other entrees at competitive prices which are among the specialties of the house at the Kingsley Inn.

"The Kingsley has been a traditional center of excellence in food and beverage with its restaurants and banquet facilities where for many years people have come to enjoy our hospitality in a formal

Planner succeeds as 'financial' older sister

■ A self-defense approach to financial planning has paved the way for a local woman to be named tops in her field.

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

Phyllis J. Wordhouse considers herself to be a good listener, a good analyst, a good communicator. In short, a good teacher.

Wordhouse also happens to be a successful businesswoman.

She's owner of Wordhouse Financial Planning & Education in Plymouth and recently was selected financial planner of the year by Mariner Financial Services, her broker/dealer.

Proof is in performance. Wordhouse personally sold mutual funds, stocks, annuities, and limited partnerships totaling just under $6 million last

"In this business, there's no such thing as a glass ceiling," she said. "You don't need a lot of capital. You need licenses, training and the philosophy of client first, client first, client first."

Wordhouse, 50, a Plymouth Township resident, declined to reveal her income other than to say that she averages about 5 percent commission on her

"My dad was a Reformed Christian minister, my mother a teacher," Wordhouse said. "They did a lot of marriage and spiritual counseling.

'I found that I was comfortable spending hours listening, asking a question and letting clients pour out answers."

Wordhouse started working as a financial planner out of her home in 1982.

Her jumping off point was getting pink-slipped as a special education teacher in the Wayne/West-

Wordhouse's curiosity had been aroused a few years earlier when a fund representative made a presentation on retirement planning to her and her don't have time for you. Go to the Plymouth Library.'

She did and developed a general understanding of the field.

"Invariably, people talk about the most common topic in the world - money," Wordhouse said. When I was laid off, the staff said they hoped I couldn't find a job in special ed. They thought I should teach money in adult ed."

Wordhouse trained with IDS, then went independent. She's a certified financial planner and a Wordhouse simultaneously started teaching selfdefense financial planning for women through the Plymouth-Canton, Wayne/Westland and Livonia schools.

'I work my business during the day and teach during the evening," she said. "High school and college teach you how to do jobs. No one tells you what to do with the rewards of jobs."

Now, her business has grown to the point where she teaches only at Schoolcraft College.

Our own worst enemy when it comes to finances

There are two basic ways to get ahead financially increase income or reduce expenses, said Phyllis J. Wordhouse, a financial planner, teacher and Success stories arise from planning, she said. "People go with the flow . . . and when you go with the flow, money flows through your hands,"

Other common mistakes seen by Wordhouse: "They procrastinate. They have a problem with inertia. They think they need a lot of money to

"If you can save $50 a month, $12 a week, $2 a day and put it in a growth/income investment, you will have a nice nest egg. If you do it for 30 years, you'll have a lot nicer nest egg than if you do it for

"They purchase the wrong type of insurance. Even today, they get sold something that probably

"People don't understand the tax law and how it." affects them.

"People don't use time and inflation to their benefit. The average female my age, 50, has approximately $2,600 saved for retirement. That's why they have to start with the first paycheck out of

Val Pak reaches milestone as bartering changes functions

In 1976, Val Pak was the only coupon book delivered by ZIP dode mailings to selected homewners in Michigan. Today, Val Pak is the state's largest direct diail company. Much of its growth attributed to acquiring $1 milon worth of goods and services barter through the Trade Exange of America.

"Trade dollars consistently wer our operating costs," said ak, the Michigan franchise of al Pak Marketing Systems.

'We barter for advertising, inentive programs and business upplies.

The Trade Exchange of America sends Val Pak customers to help pay back the revolving credit. Over the last decade, numerous Trade Exchange members have bartered for inclusion in Val Pak's micromarketing home mailers.

The Trade Exchange counts 4,000 members and 15,000 card holders participating in the barter. Its annual trading volume exceeds $20 million.

The $1 million milestone puts barter in a whole new context, according to Fred Detwiler, founder and president of the Oak Parkbased Trade Exchange. "Barter once was used to rescue companies from mistakes in excess inventory. Now it is employed as a catalyst for business improvement," Detwiler said.

Detwiler and Duncan have enjoyed a long relationship through value-priced services. Detwiler personally sold Duncan on the advantages of barter to build his business sales. Val Pak became one of the trade exchange's first and steadiest customers.

"We've grown together and worked well together," Detwiler said. "Through barter, we've both become tops in our field.'

new automotive liaison office in Southfield, an event of some significance to the local automotive community, although the Australians themselves were just making a stop en route to Sao Paulo, Brazil, then on to Chili — two other cities where they are setting up similar offices.

In the backwaters of international trade, Australia is sometimes difficult to take seriously. Partly, of course, because they have a tendency not to take themselves seriously, hence the guy in the kangaroo suit.

Still, Australia was where Edsel Ford II first launched himself into obscurity at Ford Motor Co. Australia is also where they make the Capri, Lincoln-Mercury's roadster, and where the Ford Falcon is still a big deal.

Australia is also one of those countries where they drive on the wrong side of the road, making it a potentially hot market for vehicles originally built for the U.S. Postal Service. The latter is one of the legacies of belonging to the British Commonwealth, although it's worth noting that Japan also drives on the wrong side, a fact that hasn't slowed them up much.

Needless to say, Australia isn't a big player in any other country, although until recently, a reasonably viable local auto industry produced cars for the locals. For the past decade or so, the borders have been open a bit, which means that Japanese cars do not dominate.

The U.S. still exports more to Australia than it imports, but not anywhere near the trade imbalance Australia has with the Japanese. Putting the new trade office in the Town Center in Southfield, home office to about a half dozen Japanese trading companies, kills two birds with one stone.

Does this mean we will soon be overrun with Australian cars? Unlikely, since a few auto compo nents are the bulk of Australia's current exports. It's a nice, safe country, that Americans identify with. Sort of like Canada.

Canada, of course, has the worst auto imbalance of any country, but somehow that doesn't seem as threatening as the Japanese or Mexicans, both of which seem to have a public rela-tions problem lately.

Maybe they should try a kapp

garoo suit.

August jobless rates drop here

August unemployment rates fell in all but one of Michigan's 12 major labor market areas, according to estimates prepared by the Michigan Employment Security Commission and not adjusted for seasonal fluctuations.

In August, unemployment rates dropped by nearly a percentage point or more in all major labor markets, except Lansing where auto industry layoffs pushed the rate up, MESC Director F. Robert Edwards said.

Most area jobless rates have also fallen since August 1992 and fallen substantially. Edwards noted that since last year, local rates fell anywhere from 1.4 percentage points in Battle Creek to more than 4.0 points in Flint. Lansing was the lone exception, with a rate increase.

"Over the year, the number of unemployed statewide has dropped by 25 percent," Edwards said. "The state drop and the year-to-date declines in area jobless totals confirm that the Michigan and local economies are continuing to improve."

From July to August, many major labor markets reported work force reductions, but most also had employment gains. "Employment in Michigan's tourism and related industries normally peaks in August," Edwards said, "and this August was no exception. Employment climbed throughout the state in the recreational and amusement industries, among eating and drinking establishments and at hotel and lodging facilities."

Job levels also grew in the construction, retail trade and food processing sectors, while falling in state and local education as school enrollments declined for the summer. Among the major labor markets, Ann Arbor had the lowest August unemployment rate at 3.7 percent, while the Flint area had the highest rate at 9.2 percent.

The greatest month-to-month change occurred in the Detroit and Flint labor markets as their rates dropped by 1.9 percentage points in August. The Detroit area rate fell to 6.4 percent, down from 8.3 percent. The Flint rate dropped from 11.1 percent.

Lansing, the only area with an unemployment rate increase, had production adjustment layoffs at local automotive plants, which pushed the August jobless rate up to 6.5 percent from 5.3 percent in July.

Metro Detroit economy humming

The Detroit Area Business Activity Index compiled by Comerica Bank rose 7 points in August to a level of 162, compared with 155 in July. This places the metropolitan Detroit economy 9.7 percent ahead of August a year ago.

Year-to-date, the first eight months of 1993 averaged 9.2 percent stronger than last year. "This is a magnificent example of how a stronger auto industry can lift a cyclically sensitive region relative to the national averages," said David L. Littmann, first vice president and senior economist with Comerica Bank in Detroit.

'The resurgence in August stemmed from better motor vehicle output and auto sales. In this case, Michigan's auto industry specialization is reinforced by a more competitive dollar vis-a-vis the yen," said Littmann.

"Big Three sales and production continue to gain market share, and Michigan's motor vehicle output in 1993 is running more than 16 percent above the comparable period from last year."

HEALTH CARE REFORM IS COMING. ARE YOU PREPARED?

A MESSAGE TO MICHIGAN'S SMALL BUSINESSES:

IF YOU'RE A BLUE CROSS BLUE SHIELD OF MICHIGAN CUSTOMER, YOU'RE PREPARED FOR REFORM.

We cover thousands of small businesses. And we're doing everything we can to make change easier for all of them. In fact, when you look at how we already do business, the proposed federal reforms may not seem so overwhelming.

Washington wants states to stop insurance companies from cutting people off or refusing them coverage because they're sick. Our job has always been to extend benefits to more people.

There's a lot of talk about managed health care. We already cover Michigan with the Blue Care HMO Network and a large and growing PPO. And our Traditional plans have so many managed care features, they're hardly traditional any more.

Washington wants to lower administrative costs by switching from paper claims, which are expensive to process, to electronic claims, which are cheaper. Sixty percent of our claims are already electronic, and we're encouraging more physicians to switch from paper claims every day.

Financially, we're strong. Our reserves are solid, and we're among the strongest Blues plans in the country.

IF YOU'RE NOT A BLUES CUSTOMER, THIS IS A GOOD TIME TO BECOME ONE.

All told, we cover 4.3 million people and expect to continue playing a major role in health care under a reformed system.

We saw change coming and we prepared for it. That's the kind of value you get only as a Blues customer.

For more information about options from Blue Cross Blue Shield and Blue Care Network of Michigan, call your local independent insurance agent or a Blue Cross Blue Shield sales representative.

"Think of the Blues as a safe harbor when change blows in."

How to makebedtime blues a golden time

Getting a child of five to go to bed at bedtime can be a routine battle of wills - a tug of war, with parents sometimes holding the short end of the rope.

Parents expect an infant to be up at night, but with older children it can be a hassle and down right tiresome. It seems like the more tired a child is, the more they battle not giving into sleep, which gives parents the blues.

Children have a repertoire of oldies but goodies stalling tactics. The more-familiar tactics are wanting a drink of water, forgetting to put away the bike and needing to go to the potty "real bad. too." There's also "Can I get my favorite blanket out the closet?" or the real clincher, one most parents fall for, "Remember when we did this and that . . . and how we had so much fun?"

At that point, parents are supposed to be drawn into the remember-when stories. There's a host of creative, and not-so-creative, stall tactics. Perhaps the latter strategy just might hold the lights on and your attention . . . 15 minutes. Child development expert and author Dr. Terry Brazelton says that instituting a firm, predictable bedtime ritual is the single most-helpful action you can take. I'm inclined to agree with Brazelton that the bedtime-ritual approach helps avoid the "midnight madness" of a having to struggle with a child who insists on not getting into bed and staying Brazelton suggests you never use a TV as a getto-sleep tool for a child. So, if you've tried this approach and found your little tyke wide-eyed and as perky as ever, it's because it's too stimulating. For adults, maybe not, because most of us are too exhausted at the end of the day to really get into a TV program, while in bed. If your bedtime habits are similar to mine, TV has the direct opposite effect than it does on most children. It relaxes and isn't stimulating. In fact, before the news anchors can give a complete summary of the day's current events, sleep zooms in.

Children should be made ready for bedtime in advance. How much in advance? At least one hour. This should cut down on the stalling, whining and begging at actual bedtime. Ample warning or advance notice gives children preparation/transition time. Preparation time works not only for bedtime purposes, but is used in the classroom setting as well. Children adjust to changes better if warning

Try to maintain a regular schedule. If there's two parents involved, agree to alternating nights or weeks might work better, offering a steady pattern. Get into a ritual leading up to actual bedtime. For example, undressing, bathing, brushing teeth, Include other rituals unique to your own family's preparation pattern. Whether it consists of two stories, a short review of the day's activities, song, fingerplays, whatever, remember to do what's agreed upon. This means advance planning rituals between parents and children.

It may be necessary to occasionally remind your child of the agreed-upon bedtime rituals. It is a give-and-take situation at first, but getting a 5year-old to meet you halfway takes some consistency and a little firmness. It's not a good idea to allow a child to bargain with you to let him or her sleep on the couch, parent's bed then having you put them in their bed later, once the child has fallen asleep.

Do allow a child to get used to staying and sleeping in their bed. A night light is fine, if the child is afraid of the dark, or monsters under the bed. I can remember as a child, being terrified at night once the lights were out, and Mama said, "Good night Eartha." I would imagine my Chatty Cathy walking right out the closet, where I would place her after play. Once I was assured that the doll was plastic, not real, and only a play toy for my pleasure, I discontinued my short trips to my parent's room.

Once you've finished to bedtime ritual, leave the room. Don't dawdle, or hang around for a second heaping. Child development experts suggest that if your child calls out in one more desperate attempt to get you in the room, it's OK to answer them but don't go back into the room. Assure the child that you're nearby should they really need you. Allow your child to cuddle with a security blanket or soft toy, if desired.

When a child follows through getting in bed and staying there, praise them in the morning. Children will occasionally have nightmares and can't go back to sleep without your being there to hold them. Encourage your child to talk about their dream. Reassure them it's OK. Try to comfort your child in his or her room, keeping in mind that it's easier to condition the little one into finding favor and getting used to staying in their room . . . in

Carlisle: Home shopping in style

The age of cable TV has brought home shopping to the forefront, but Jill Scypta of Plymouth has found the New York-based company has been offering in home shopping for more than a decade.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

Women who are tired of purchasing clothes one year and tossing it in the back of the closet the next, would be pleased with the Carlisle Collection.

The New York-based company prides itself on "wardrobe building. What's in one year, can be updated the next with specially designed acces-

"There's a lot of wardrobe building," said Jill Scypta, a Plymouth resident who serves as area consultant. "They send me a lot of information like how the bronze jacket of 1992 can easily be updated with (another accessory).

The Carlisle Collection is only available through private consultants who display the clothes in their home. Scypta is one of a handful of southeastern Michigan consultants.

The 165-piece winter/holiday collection will be shown in her home Oct. 10-15. Customers can stop by and view the clothing. The desired pieces are ordered and take approximately two weeks to come in.

Scypta shows the clothes in her finished basement specially designed so customers can experience the trademark rich colors

"I had considered laying the clothes throughoutmyhomebutthelightingis not as good as you think," she said. "I had extra lighting put in so you could see that the tones match, you don't have any questions."

It also proves comfortable for customers - and her family

'It's very comfortable. They (customers) won't be disturbed by phones, husbands or children," she said.

Carlisle clothing are made of firstclass fabrics hand chosen by CEO Bill Rondina, who started the company 13 years ago. Rondina travels the world for the fabrics - wool is imported from England, silk is found in Italy, and American-grown cotton is woven in Switzerland. Customers, Scypta said, find the fine fabrics irrestible.

"It's the kind of show where people come in and touch the fabric."

Scypta said her clients are also touched by the accessories - especially the scarves hand-painted by Nancy Colorful display: Private consultant Jill Scypta has found a use for her basement. It's where she displays the different seasonal offerings of the New York-based Carlisle Collection for her clients.

"People are taken by the accessories. For the prices, it's less than half of a (designer) scarf," she said.

Scypta sees her clients four times a year. In March, the spring collection is shipped in, followed in April by the summer line. In July or August, she displayed the fall clothes and in October, the winter/holiday clothes ar-

"It's four weeks of very intense work. The work continues though between showings," she said.

When the clothing arrives, Scypta steams and thoroughly inspects each piece. Afterward, she studies her clients' files and determines what clothing they would be most interested

In Scypta's home, clients can purchase blouses, skirts, pants and some accessories. Carlisle has personal shoppers, coordinated by Sue Weston, in New York who shops for shoes, hosiery and other final touches.

"They'll have no questions when they leave; when you leave you're done," she said.

Carlisle customers include those in the Clinton adminstration and Texas Gov. Ann Richards. A suit averages in price at $500.

Scypta, the president of the Plymouth Symphony League, has been involved with the company since early this year. Already she's been named the best new consultant in her eight-state region.

Reflecting on her lifestyle, Scypta said it's no surprise she's done well at this profession.

"I've always been a very big clothes horse. I helped in a boutique in Plymouth and I often toyed with the idea of a boutique."

She heard about Carlisle from the regional manager, who like Scypta belongs to the Detroit Golf Club.

"She kept dropping things in the mail to get my attention. After a year, I bit the hook. I was very interested."

Scypta, a former microbiologist, travelled to Dallas to see the opening of the line, she liked the quality of the There's a lot of pattern on pattern.

Screening helps identify depression

BY DIANE HANSON SPECIAL WRITER

Clinical depression is a serious medical illness that strikes more than 12 million adults every year. It's estimated that 30 million adults will experience at least one episode of major depression during their lifetime making depression nearly as common as it is misunderstood

Believed to be caused by biochemical changes or chemical imbalances in the brain, major depression can be effectively treated in 90 percent of cases by medication, often in combination with psychotherapy.

"I don't think people really, truly understand what psychiatric treatment is, how it works," said Ken Deighton, director of the day treatment program at St. Mary Hospital in Livonis.

That may be part of the reason that, while one out of four women and one out of 10 men will suffer from depression during their lifetime, less than 30 percent will seek professional help.

To clear up the misunderstanding, combat the stigma, and encourage those who need help to seek it, St. Mary Hospital will once again participate in the third annual National Depression Screening Day. Set for Thursday, Oct. 7, this is the second year St.

Mary has participated. Of the 113 people who participated in the screening at the hospital last year, 33 were found to have minimal depression; 27 were classified with moderate to marked depression; and 33 ranked in the se-ere to extreme category Nationally, 435 facilities in all 50 states participated in 1992. More than 20,000 people were screened and 50 percent scored positive for depression and were referred for outpatient treatment or

This year more then 20 hospitals and clinics in the Detroit metropolitan area alone will be participating. Along with St. Mary, they include Annapolis Hospital in Wayne and its Westland Center in Westland, Centerfor Behavior and Medicine No. 3in Canton and Margaret W. Montgomery Hospital in Westland.

St. Mary will offer two screening sessions at 2 and 6 p.m. They will begin with a slide presentation, then participants will fill out a depression screening form which will be scored by clinicians and reviewed with a psychiatrist, psychologist, social worker or psychiatric nurse. Recommendations will be made on an individual basis.

The standardized format will be used at other participating facilities, but times may vary. Sponsored by a number of mental health organizations and with an educational grant from Eli Lilly and Co., the screening is being offered free of charge.

A family dinner at the Botsford Inn in Farmington Hills was part of the celebration of the 50th wedding anniversary of Edward and Gertrude Wynsberge of Livonia.

Analyzing the handwriting of a skeptic is always a challenge which I enjoy, but would prefer doing it in person. I no longer teach graphology classes, but call Oakland Community College to obtain information on a class.

Writer likes investigating information

Persistence is the most salient trait in this handwriting. Does she ever give up? This amount would probably have her persisting in both the positive and the negative areas of her life.

Augmenting this is a tad of stubbornness. Once her mind is made up she is disinclined to change it.

This is the handwriting of a woman of intelligence that is well above the average. Her thinking is curious, questioning and analytical. She enjoys investigating new information. A good mind for financial matters is a possibility. She accepts very little on faith, but needs facts and figures to back up her conclusions.

This is an observant woman. She applies intense scrutiny to all things in which she is interested.

By nature she is direct in word and work. She has a need for getting right down to the essentials and can cut through the extraneous details. Wise use of her time suggests a productive worker.

Rarely does she allow obstacles to stand in her way. She has been blessed with vigorous vitality. When she wants something she goes after it.

She is independent and wants to express her individuality. She does not allow herself to be held back by conventional standards nor past roots.

Our writer seeks admiration and has a desire to lead. Taking charge may come naturally.

Her experiences, good or bad, remain with her for long periods. Forgiving and forgetting do not come easily.

Some resentment is seen here. She is cautious and often on guard to prevent being taken advantage of by others.

Some impatience is also noted. When crossed she can come up with a quick retort.

Social relationships may not always flow smoothly. Some people may perceive her as defensive with a tendency to behave in socially challenging ways. She also needs time by herself.

On the day she wrote this letter optimism soared on the lines of her writing. However, without seeing samples done at other times I cannot be certain that this is always the case.

If you would like to have your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful and feedback is always welcomed.

Many people say they hate grammar But it is very important as I hope to show you. "Whosoever BELIEVETH that Jesus is the Christ IS BORN of God" (I John 5:1). The verb "believeth" is present tense, showing what is taking place now. The verb "is born" is perfect tense, pointing out action which was complete in the past, before the person believed. Thank God He gives life by new birth so we can believe!

Teens learn books of the Bible through quizzing

BY SUE MASON STAFF WRITER

Consider this: The question is fill-in-the blanks; the only words given is "He went." World championship is hanging on the an-

A team of four teens are hoping to come up with the right response before the 30-second buzzer. You can almost hear the "nana-na-na" music of final "Jeop-

This isn't a prime-time game show. No fancy sets, no stylishly dressed emcees, no expensive prizes. It's just teenagers testing their knowledge of the Bible, specifically the 641 verses of the Gos-

This is Bible quizzing. And that was the final question of the championship round, correctly answered by Lee Ann Gray who helped bring home the first ever championship crown to the Detroit metropolitan area.

"Bible quizzing is one program that has stuck because it's a successful program," said Mike Miller of Detroit Metro Youth for Christ. "It's a constant; you get something out of it every year."

Bible quizzing has been around long than television game shows. It was started by Youth for Christ in 1948. That group's involvement has dropped off over the years, but church involvement has kept it going, especially in the Detroit area which fielded 40 teams in varsity and junior varsity.

Miller works with Rich Kifer work on Bible quizzing, visiting area churches during August and September to demonstrate the activity, generally before Sunday classes. Kifer is the DMYC church network coordinator and Bible quizzing fits in with his job of bringing churches together, Miller said.

An interdenominational activity, it's safer to say that participation in Bible quizzing is an international thing around here. Teams come from as close as Calvary Baptist in Canton, Westside in Redford and St. Michael's in Plymouth to Emanuel Baptist in Chatham, Ont., Cornerstone Presbyterian in Brighton and even churches in Benton Harbor on the westside of the state.

The quiz season runs from October through early March and things tend to run in threes. Each team has three members and the monthly quiz session, hosted by one of the participating churches, involves three teams. However, when teams head for the world championship, they add a fourth

Each month the teams learn a portion of the book. Starting off the 1993-94 season will be Chapters 1-4 of I Corinthians, 91 verses in all. The teams earn points for each correct answer and those points eventually determine ranking at the Day of Champions.

Hot seat

The teams sit on chairs in a row during the competition. Each chair is equipped with an electric pad that's hooked to the scoreboard. If the player knows the answer, they need only stand up. They have 30 seconds to give the correct answer, and a player who gives three right answers ends up in a frozen chair, kept out of the competition unless the opposing team gives an incorrect answer.

The Day of Champions comes in early March. By then the quizzers will have mastered 241 verses. It's a round robin tournament with the final three teams quizzing for the championship.

The tournament helps in selecting the quizzers that will go on to the regionals in Chicago in late March where the quizzing covers a total of 478 verses.

At the regionals, the church teams are broken up into All-Star teams and given a church coach. How well the teens work together is used to determine who goes on to the world championships in there. "It all depends on their performance," Miller said. "If they work really hard at the regionals, which is two-thirds of the book, you get invited to the world championship. But between March and July (when the world championship is held) without forgetting what you have already memorized, you have to memorize 216 verses more. So it's a commitment.

Just ask the world championship team of Sean Kifer and Amanda Lancaster of Brighton Wesleyan Church in Brighton, Lee Ann Gray of Cornerstone Presbyterian Church in Brighton, and Pete Goldsmith of Emmanuel Baptist Church in Chatham, Ont., and their coach Andy Hack-

Lee Ann Gray also proved she had what it took, walking away with top spot on the All-Star team, a heady accomplishment for a teen competing her first world championship.

The Detroit area also had a second team placing fairly high in the competition. Coming in seventh was the team of Dave Willick and Ken Leslie of Fellowship Baptist Church in Sterling Heights, Tim Simon of Calvary Baptist Church in Canton and Graham Wloch and Darcy Saffar of Highland Park Baptist Church in Southfield. Darcy also was tapped for the All-Star team, with her 14th place individual finish.

Churches can field as many teams as they like. Junior varsity is for quizzers in the sixththrough eighth grades; varsity is for quizzers in ninth grade up to the age of 20.

"But some of the churches that have been in since Bible quizzing started in the Detroit have threefour teams," said Miller. "They almost have a farm system with kids following in their brothers' and sisters' footsteps. Once they learn how to play the game, they start turning out excellent quizzers.

Churches can join after the season has started and some have joined at mid-year. They miss out on the tournaments but have the opportunity to use the tail end of the season to get a feel for the quizzing.

More benefits

But there can be more to Bible quizzing than learning to play the game. DMYC has set up a scholarship program so quizzers can earn scholarships to either William Tindale College in Farmington Hills or Spring Arbor College. Each quizzer who can quote the verses word perfect monthly earns some scholarship money.

The money was garnered from former quizzers and supporters.

"People want to see this hapen because it is a solid thing, Miller said. "they got hooked on the competition and it affected them in many different ways. People know the value of it."

Another benefit is that many of the quizzers have gone on to ministerial careers.

Miller, who was a quizzer for four years and a coach for three years, discovered he wanted to do God's work while quizzing.

"I started with it because I enjoyed the competition, but while I was studying I felt a calling to do God's work , to do a youth ministry," he said, adding that he also met his wife through quizzing. They receive a lot of direction in their lives. There are a lot of decisions to be made and it's nice to see these kids turn to God and receive direction. And it's not like they get a letter or see a message

Violence: Being afraid won't end it

agony or death of one we love. We are living in a time when we want to keep violence at a distance. We distance ourselves from violence by saying that we can just turn the television off. We distance ourselves from violence by moving further away from where more of it exists. We decide to stay home. Yet violence is a reflection fear. It will not go away as long as we are afraid. Violence replaces positive action when positive action seems fruitless. Violence is a thing of the heart.

A friend of mine is very angry with another person. She believes that this anger is justified by what the other person is doing. Yet, my friend must realize that the anger is in her heart. It is eating her life away. Her anger is taking her energy and her love. She must realize that her anger must be changed or it will destroy her.

Violence ultimately destroys the one who expresses it. There is an interesting saying. If one does not solve a problem, it will ultimately end either in homicide or suicide. The two are very close.

We do not want to hear this truth. When you destroy anotherperson, you begin to destroy yourself. At a family level, spouse or child abuse destroys the person abused and the person who does the abuse.

Is this not what hell is all about? Hell is the refusal to receive and to give love. Why does this happen? We are taught the wrong things. We miss the positive influences in life. We fail to discern with both our heart and mind what is good and what is bad. We choose what we think will be the easy way out of a prob-

Recent reports of the killing of foreign tourists in Miami suggest that the victims were "gunned down like animals!" Some of the violence we hear about in this metro area as well as in Miami is worse than animal behavior. God has created human beings to love with a capacity for great compassion and sacrifice. We must not forget this. We must not allow this potential of the human condition to be overwhelmed by the darkness of violence.

If we claim to be more more than animals we will bring God into the equation. We will work to find ways where love can transform violence and the conditions that lead to violence. There is no more holy task for us today.

We must not become weary of solving the violence problem in America. We also need to pray for and seek for new voices, new prophets. These will be people ho will address the nation in effective ways. Among the many things which will solve this problem of violence must be a spiritual renewal. We must raise up reconcilers among our people. We must raise up persons who have the spiritual heart to address the conditions that lead to violence.

Bringing God into the issue of solving violence also means that we have a resiliency on our side. We will not give up or seek to escape the issue of violence because we know that God is on the side of peace. We say, "How bad does it have to get before people wake up?" But we continue to believe that people will wake up. People will choose the good over the bad.

We do need to raise up leaders from this generation and the new generation to work against violence. I have seen this potential in the faces of young children at the Thursday noon witness against gun violence in front of the City County Building. I have heard witnesses against violence in the voices of family members whose brothers or sisters have been gunned down. We work and we wait for the time that will be opened to us to reverse and remove this violence in our midst

Students repair U.P. trails

"There's no other experience like working with Madonna University's environmental enthusiasts," said Canton resident Kim Gyuran, director of campus activities at the Livonia school.

Gyuran and 12 university students traveled to Michgan's Upper Peninsula in August to repair and maintain hiking trails along the Pictured Rocks National Lakeshore near Munising.

Known as the Madonna University Trailblazers, the group spent more than a week backpacking through the trails. They removed and relocated several backcountry campsites, built five trails, two 24-foot bridges and six sets of stairs each measuring 6foot in length.

"The students learned that there are raccoons big enough to carry away backpacks and porcupines that will prohibit anyone from passing on the trail," Gyuyears ago with a one-time state grant explained Gyuran.

"After the grant, students wanted to keep the program alive. So, we raise money for the project," she said.

Cost for the project is about $2,000 and students raise the money by selling environmental T-shirts, setting up food binds and soliciting corporate donations like the Ford van that was used this year.

Students who participated in this year's program included Livonia residents Banaszak, sophomore; Karen McCarthy, senior and Tom Moloney, junior; Westland resident Anne Mondro, sophomore;

Also participating were Detroit residents Tiffany Lutes, sophomore and Demetrice Power, junior; Lincoln Park resident Steve Dorobek, junior; Michael Issacs, a sophomore from Taylor, James Walling, a sophomore from Jack-son and Dave Bos, the national park service trail supervisor who lives in Marquette.

"Overall, the experience taught students that being deaf, black, Hispanic or Caucasian was not as important as working together to make a difference, said Gyuran.

Ford accepts applications to U.S. service academies

Ford invites interested students to call one of his three district offices: Wayne office 722-1411, Ypsilanti office 482-6636, Ann Arbor office 741-4210.

Applicants must be: 17-22 years old, single and not pregnant and a U.S. citizen and resident of Ford's district.

High school students living in Canton and Plymouth townships, Plymouth, Westland, Garden City and the southeast quadrant of Livonia who want to attend one of the U.S. military academies must deliver applications to U.S. Rep. William Ford, D-Taylor, by votes in the week ending Sept.

Here's how Observer & Eccentric-area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call

S&L Bailout: By a vote of 214 for and 208 against, the House

a bill (HR 1340) providing $18.3 billion for completing the savingsand-loan bailout. The Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC) would use the money to dispose of 80 bankrupt thrifts it is now keeping open. This brings to about $105 billion the appropriations approved by Congress since 1989 to reimburse lost deposits at more than 700 failed thrifts. Congress also has granted the RTC authority to borrow more than $100 billion for working capital that the agency is expected to repay by selling off S&L assets.

Supporter Marge Roukema, R-N.J., said: "I hope we will all summon the courage to do the right thing and pass this legislation. Bring an end to this sad chapter in the history of our financial institu-

Opponent Rod Grams, R-Minn., complained that the S&L bailout is exempted from the pay-as-you-go discipline of the 1990 Budget Enforcement Act. "Congress has already used over $100 billion in deficit spending for the RTC, without a single spending offset," he said.

A yes vote was to pass the bill. Area representatives voting yes were: Sander Levin, D-southfield, William Ford, D-Ypslianti. Voting no: Bob Carr, D-Pontiac, Dale Kijdee, D-Flint and JosephKnollenberg, R-Birmingham.

defeated, 180 for and 242 against, the Republican alternative to the Democratic-drafted S&L ballout bill (HR 1340). The GOP measure sought to strip the bill of its $18.3 lion expenditure on grounds that the Resolution Trust Corp. already has ample resources - $12 billion to resolve its backlog of failed thrifts. The measure also deleted language writing contract setasides for minorities and women into law. And it opposed a longer

"We do not need to be giving away $18 billion of taxpayer mon-ey," said sponsor Bill McCollum, R-Fla., or approving "the mandated quotas that are in this bill for minority- and women-owned busi-statute of limitations for fraud and negligence suits against S&L exec-

Opponent Henry Gonzalez, D-Tex., called the GOP alternative a "reprehensible" return to the time when "Congress sat on its hands, did nothing, while the losses mounted astronomically. A yes vote supported the GOP alternative. Area representatives voting yes were: Bob Carr, Jo-seph Knollenberg. Voting no: Dale Kildee, Sander Levin, Willlam Ford.

Soviet Nuclear Weapons: By a vote of 149 for and 263 against, the House refused to cut $300 million from a program to dismantle nuclear weapons in the former Soviet Union (FSU) and prevent their global spread. The $300 million was to have been shifted to accounts for repairing U.S. military equipment. The vote occurred during debate on the fiscal 1994 defense budget (HR 2401) that later was sent to conference with the

Sponsor Duncan Hunter, C-Calif., said the account for dismantling Soviet weapons is overfunded at the same time money has run short to keep aircraft and other weaponry in good repair

Opponent John Spratt, D-S.C., said "it makes eminent sense to spend a few hundred million dollars to get rid of the Soviet weapons that we spent $4 to $5 trillion countering over the last 45 years."

A yes vote supported the amendment. Area representatives voting yes were: Knollenberg. Voting no: Carr, Kildee, Levin, Ford.

SENATE

Grazing Fees: By a vote of 59 for and 40 against, the Senate killed an administration plan to more than double livestock grazing fees on public land in the West. The vote retained the existing system in which some 23,600 ranchers pay $1.86 per Animal Unit Month (AUM) to graze their livestock on Bureau of Land Manage ment or Forest Service land. By executive order, Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt wants to gradua raise the rate to $4.28 per AUM, a level still below private rates. The vote occurred during debate on the Interior Department's fiscal 1994 appropriations bill (HR 2520).

Sponsor Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said Babbitt's plan threatens to 'destroy the lifestyule of the West, in particular the western ranching community.

Opponent Howard Metzenbaum,

D-Ohio, said "we lose money every year running a federal grazing program on lands that belong to each and every taxpayer in the country.'
Michigan Senators Carl Levin,

D and Donald Riegle, D, voted

NEA Funding: By a vote of 65 for and 30 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment prohibiting National Endowment for the Arts grants to individuals, thus allowing them only for non-profit arts organizations. The amendment was proposed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to a fiscal 1994 appropriations bill (HR 2520) providing about $170 million for NEA grants and administration.

Take a color tour of nighttime sky

RAYMOND E. BULLOCK

Roman calendar, October was the eighth month of the year, hence the prefix "octo." Julius Caesar's calendar reform resulted in October becoming the 10th month, but the prefix was not changed because there already was a December with which to contend, and one December in a year is more than enough!

There will be very slim pickings among the planets in October; only Venus and Saturn will be visible, the former in the predawn sky, and the latter after sunset. Mercury, Mars and Jupiter will be too close to the sun to be seen

There is one thing upon which we can depend every October: when it comes to the colors of our autumn foliage, this month is never a disappointment. Just as there are a variety of colors in the leaves, there is a great variety of color in the sky, and this month is a great time to take a celestial color tour

Consider the color of the sky itself. The sky is not blue, nor, contrary to what your eyes tell you at dawn and dusk, is it red. Depending on how sunlight is scattered by our atmosphere, the sky just "appears" to take on different colors. Were it not for the atmosphere scattering sunlight, the sky would be black.

If you face due east about 30 minutes before sunrise this month, you will see an extremely bright "star." This will be Venus, the brightest planet in the sky. There will be a fairly bright star above and to the right of Venus; this is Regulus, and it represents the "heart" of Leo the lion. As the month progresses, Regulus will climb higher in the morning sky, and Venus will get lower as it approaches the sun. This will result in the apparent distance between Venus and Regulus nearly quadrupling. (An extremely rare event occurred more than a generation ago when Venus occulted (covered) Regulus on July 7,

This is a good place to begin our color tour of the sky. The best way to compare the color differences between Venus and Regulus will be with binoculars; adjust the binoculars so they are slightly out of focus. This will spread out the light and make their color more apparent. Venus is bright because its thick atmosphere reflects the light of the sun, so that planet's color appears much the same as sunlight.

Regulus, however, is a star, so it produces its own light. The color of the light tells us something about the star: a blue- white star, like Regulus, is young (as far as stellar ages go) and very hot; the surface temperature of Regulus is about 13,000 degrees Kelvin. (The sun's surface temperature is a mere 5,800 degrees Kelvin.) Regulus is 160 times more luminous than the sun and five times larger, but it's only the 21st brightest star in the sky. It doesn't look very impressive because is about 85 light-years away from us. (The light we see this morning left Regulus in 1908.)

Face the southwest around 6:45 a.m. on Oct. 5 and find the moon. It will be located between the Pleiades (PLEE a dees) star cluster and Aldebaran (al DEB a ran). The Pleiades, to the right of the moon, looks like a tiny dipper and represents the "shoulder" of Taurus the bull. Aldebaran, located to the left of the moon, is the bull's "eye."

Aldebaran is a star like Regulus, but that's where the similarity ends. Even without using out-of-focus binoculars, Aldebaran's red color is very obvious. Red stars are ancient and fairly cool (by stellar standards). Aldebaran's surface temperature is around 3,400 degrees Kelvin. That's much cooler than the sun, but Aldebaran is still 125 times more luminous. The brightness is due to Aldebaran's size; it is a giant star, 40 times the diameter of the sun. Aldebaran, the 13 brightest star, is about 68 light-years the "club" of Orion (oh RYE an) the hunter. Drop a line from the moon to the southern horizon and you'll go right past another bright orange-red star. The star is named Betelgeuse ("Beetlejuice"), and its name means 'armpit of the giant;" a rather unromantic name for one of the largest stars in the sky! (The name refers to Orion's right arm pi . . . er, shoulder.)

Betelgeuse is the 11th brightest star in the sky and is around 520 light-years away. It is 14,000 times more luminous than the sun and about 920 times larger. (If placed where the sun is, the outer layers of this supergiant star would extend as far as the orbit of Jupiter!) The surface temperature is quite low; estimated at 3,100 degrees Kelvin, Betelgeuse's brightness can only be attributed to its great size.

The moon will be in Gemini on the morning of the 8th. It officially will be at first quarter phase at 3:35 p.m. On the following morning, the moon will be located below the star Castor. Castor marks a "head" of one of the twins. The other twin, Pollux, will be above and to the right of Castor. Although these stars are called "twins," some observers report Castor is bright white in color while Pollux has a golden tint. Mercury is officially at maximum eastern elongation on the 14th. It will be 25 degrees to the east (left) of the sun, but will not be visible after sunset because it will be too close to the horizon.

Homeowners pool resources in yards

anton resident Laura O'Neill Messer started a backvard pond when she began digging a hole to "keep my frustration level down" through a divorce.

When it was six feet deep, she decided to build a pond. She calls it a "floating pond" because it heaves with the ground in the winter, thus little winter damage.

She filled the hole with "any piece of junk I could find" - broken concrete, etc. - then packed it with builders sand and let it set for two months. The sand settled and made a solid base. Wolmanized wood forms the back. After setting the boards in holes, she cemented between each one, added wire mesh to the "wall" front and back, then painted it.

She cemented the sides and bottom of the pond, using a trowel and sometimes her hands, to get the cement smooth.

The seashell-shaped pond contains a figure of a girl standing on a tall pedestal and serves as a water fountain while providing sound as well as visual interest.

A hose directs water to provide oxygen and a filter also is used. Plants are artistically arranged and are growing in pots that are weighted with rocks. The pots are stuffed into the foot of old nylon hose so that the nylon covers the outside of the pot up to the rim. This keeps the dirt level at a minimum and is unobstrusive.

Boston ferns, papyrus grass, caladium, ribbon grass and an umbrella plant are removed in the fall and taken indoors, along with a water hyacinth. The hyacinth spreads rapidly and Messer buys a new one each year. She advises this as a first plant for beginners.

Waterlilies and an arrowhead are set in three inches of water into a large, deep bucket, mulched heavily up to the rim of the bucket and set in a protected area of the yard to overwinter.

When fresh water is necessary, it sets 24 hours before the Koi are returned.

Last summer, Laura and Jack Messer were married at this lovely site.

wildlife haven

When Lydia Wallace and her family moved into their home in Birmingham 13 years ago, they inherited a large pond, approximately 80 by 50 feet.

The bottom and sides are clay, which had absorbed any chemicals put on the lawn and flower beds by previous owners, who had also used many chemicals to maintain the pond.

She didn't want to use chemicals, preferring a natural area to encourage wildlife. Now, twothirds of the surface of the water is covered with aquatic plants that reduce algae and weeds. An aerator runs automatically three hours each day to keep movement and prevent the water from becoming stagnant.

It has taken four or five years for the chemicals to dissipate and for Wallace to get the lilies, floating hearts, marginal plants, emergents (those half in and half out of the water) and other plants growing.

Sculptor focuses on society and politics

orking with a torch cutter at a bench in his Redford Township studio, Todd Erickson incorporates found materials from industry and nature into sculptures that document social and political issues for posterity.

Erickson's primarily abstract work focuses on the decline of the automobile industry, the importance of shelter and family, the Gulf War, American Indian culture and the demise of the church as we know it. The wheel appears and reappears throughout the large- and smallscale sculpture.

Erickson exhibits his latest work as part of a group show through Thursday, Oct. 7 at Lemberg Gallery in Birmingham.

"I hope my work sends a variety of messages on different levels the emotion, the flow, the design, peace, turmoil or beauty. It's the poetry of different volumes next to each other, the different textures then break it down into symbols. The wheel talks about turning and changing and going someplace. It's almost the spirit of change," Erickson said.

The assistant professor of sculpture at Center for Creative Studies in Detroit most recently used the symbol of the wheel and scrap metal to speak to the decline of the golden age of Detroit's automobile industry in "Memory Vehicle." The threepiece, large-scale work is exhibited in "Michigan Outdoor Sculpture IV" to Oct. 15 at the Southfield Civic Center Plaza, Evergreen at 101/2

"The scrap iron gives it a history. Iron is indigenous to Michigan. It's still indigenous to Detroit's auto industry. It's tough. It's raw. It's gut-tural," Erickson said. "The wheel symbolizes hope, change, life in general. It's a live, vibrant symbol of the auto industry.

The largest of the three pieces was originally created as public art for a specific site on Oakland Avenue in downtown Birmingham. Set up to look like a mother duck and two ducklings, the sculpture speaks of the automobile industry and its effect on all who live here.

Growing up in the Detroit area, most specifically Birmingham, left a definite imprint on Erickson's sculpture. It was at Seaholm High School where he first became interested in art while working in stage design.

"I thought about what Birmingham meant to me and remembered that it had once been an industrial area full of factories. All that has changed now and Birmingham is a bedroom community to the industrial center of Detroit. This piece is a direct symbol of this change as well as a metaphor for transportation or travel. At a higher level, it also represents the way the human spirit travels through learning, imagination and cultural experience.

Erickson works from a drawing to produce the large-scale sculptures but prefers to let the process of evolution invent the smaller works.

"I really believe in the spontaneous process, the poetry and beauty of that, the excitement of the investigation.'

"Nomad," a smaller sculpture from the Wheel and Shelter Series, speaks about home and family and the basic need for such an institution.

"The idea of shelter is very important to my work," Erickson said. "The wheel is a metaphor for the flight of the spirit. We're all caught with wanting to be somewhere else.

Cutting with a torch, flame cutting, cutting on a bandsaw, grinding, filing and polishing, all subtract from the work before the point of construction or assembly. On the bench rests his latest work, "Paddle Transportation and wheel remain key. Erickson makes sure that each sculpture incorporating a wheel as such will actually move and roll.

Earlier figurative work takes from nature. Honey locust pods, birch bark and pine needles provide structure behind bronze. "It ties back into my love of nature, the growing of plants," Erickson said.

"I bird watch and I garden. That's part of who I am.

Erickson earned a bachelor of arts degree from Hope College in Holland, Mich., and a master of fine art degree from Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills.

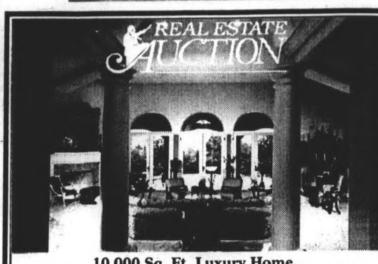

He has received numerous grants and awards, including the Michigan Council for the Arts grant, Michigan Foundation for the Arts grant and scholarship, and the Tannahill faculty grant. His work is in the collections of Ex-Cello Corp., Albert Kahn president Edgar Parks and state Sen. Jack Faxon of Farmington Hills. Erickson is represented in Michigan by Lemberg Gal-

"Todd has unique vision. His work is like no one elses. His combination of cast materials and found objects creates a visual paradox," said Corrine Lemberg, gallery owner. Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m Tuesday to Friday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Delicate balance: Todd Erickson's "Hood Winked," a bronze figure with tail, incoporates honey locust pods, white pine needles, bark, twigs and a nail.

'The Japanese couldn't understand why I wanted to learn about something meant for children. Origami's a class for parents and children to take together and a great thing to know how to do with kids on a rainy afternoon." said Martin, who earned her master's degree in recreation therapy at California State University in Sacramento.

By day, Martin works with the disabled, coordinating the therapeutic recreation programs at the Bailey Center in Westland. She has taught art in Pennsylvania, Colorado and Switzerland.

play," Martin said.

Last semester, one of Martin's students who had suffered a severe head trauma took origami to practice his eye-hand coordination skills. Although he has been recovered for some time, the ancient art enabled him to have fun and therapy all at the same time.

"It's very, very therapeutic. It helped him to focus and improve his manual dexterity," Martin said. "It's this creative process, taking a piece of paper and making a bird out of it or a flower or frog."

Martin's tie-dyeing in one two-more you practice, the better you hour workshop (Oct. 12 at $8) teaches two basic techniques: stripes and spirals. During the evening, two to three shirts will be colored with special textile dyes provided by Martin for $3.

'What kid from the '60s doesn't know about tie-dyeing? This also is a good one for kids to come with their parents," Martin said. From silk screen printing to candlemaking and counted cross stitch, leisure classes will teach you the skills necessary to handcraft gifts straight from the heart in time for the holidays. Print your greeting cards this season in seconds or sew a quilt by machine

"People seem to really appreciate getting something handmade from someone," Martin said.

In one night (Oct. 19 at $9), Martin's broomstick crochet class will show you how to create a baby afghan in one weekend.

"It's very, very quick. It's a uge knitting needle that looks like a broomstick. The advantage is it only involves four stitches. The frustration with a beginner is a project takes too long. With broomstick crochet, it's extremely fast," Martin said.

Leisure Program classes range in price from $27 for watercolor painting (eight weeks beginning Sept. 27) to $39 for furniture construction (eight weeks beginning Sept. 29) and $160 for "How to Build Your Own Home" (four weeks beginning Nov. 1).

Gardens bloom at remodeling show

BY MARTY FIGLEY STAFF WRITER Display gardens, created by members of the Metropolitan Detroit Landscape Association, as well as nursery stock available for purchase, will be a big part of the Fall Remodeling Show, sponsored by the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan. The show will take place Thursday, Sept. 30, to Sunday, Oct. 3, at the Novi Expo Center, I-96 and Novi Road.

Hours are 2-10 p.m. Thursday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for children 6-12 and seniors, free for children younger than 6.

Family tickets (two adults and children) are available at Farmer Jack/A&P for $8. A two-for-one admission coupon for today, opening day, and other discount coupons are available at all Frank's Nursery & Craft stores

Jeff Ball, nationally recognized yard and garden authority, author and garden expert for NBC-TV's "Today" show, will conduct lawn care workshops 4 and 7:30 p.m. Thursday-Friday; noon, 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Saturday; and noon and 4 p.m. Sunday.

Ball has been researching yard and landscape care issues for 10 years and has written numerous magazine articles and several books about the subject. Ball is also the host of a line of videotapes called "Yardening With Jeff Ball."

The schedule of topics and other speakers is as follows: 'Compost: A Wasted Resource," Robert Bricault, Wayne County-Michigan State University Extension horticulture agent, 5:30 p.m. Thursday and 3:30 p.m. Saturday; "Herbs in the Garden," advanced master gardener Marty Figley, 3 p.m. Friday; "Selection and Care of Trees," MDLA consumer affairs director Vera Sullivan, 6 p.m. Friday; "The Pleasure of Roses, advanced master gardener and Rose Society past president George Hartley, 11 a.m. Saturday; and "Landscape Design Renovation," Ed Eaton, owner of Eaton Nursery in West Bloomfield, 11 a.m. Sunday.

A special area has been set aside for educational exhibits that will help homeowners better understand the whys and hows of lawn care. They include displays on eight-step lawn renovation, drip irrigation and hydroponics, set up in clear plastic so the process can be better understood.

It is in this area where Ball will serve as headmaster of his "Yardening Academy," spon-sored by Frank's Nursery & Crafts. He will answer questions about specific yard care and home landscape concerns and give the most up-to-date, safe and effective solutions to these problems.

Featured topics will be water conservation in the landscape and hydroculture (growing houseplants in water). The water conservation topic will involve audience participation.

Prizes will be awarded each day. Fifty-dollar gift certificates from the Gardens Alive mail order company will be won by people who correctly guess the number of live ladybugs exhibited. Visitors will also learn why preconditioned ladybugs, beneficial bugs that eat aphids, won't "fly away home.

In addition, gardening tools from Jung Seeds, a prestigious seed company, and a Power Grower donated by Garden Party will be won by lucky visitors. Ball's books and videos will be available during the

Symphony showhouse unveils designer ideas

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

Imagine yourself stepping into the courtyard of a French chateau hundreds of years old where a carriage and horses may thunder through the arched iron gate at any moment.

Welcome to Villa Baronna, the 1993 Detroit Symphony Designer Showhouse in Bloomfield Hills.

Sponsored by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall Volunteer Council, the seventh biannual showhouse, Oct. 2-24, enlists the talents of 24 interior designers to embellish the storybook setting. The architectural splendor of Europe synchronizes with crystal chandeliers, tapestries, rich fabrics, fine carpets and the tranquility of Lower Long Lake to create a dream world of ideas.

The three-level, $2.875 million mansion, designed and constructed by Gurka & Siler Builders Inc. and Erlich Development Co. of Bloomfield Hills, charms the simplest of souls with its 13,000 square feet of sophisticated beauty and unbridled romance. Six bedrooms, each with private bath, range from quietly elegant to blooming with spring florals.

"The Detroit Symphony Designer's

Showhouse is the major fund-raiser for the volunteer council. This is the kind of project that draws the general public in and makes them aware of the symphony," said Bonnie Lockwood, publicity cochair with Julie Stackpoole.

"We think the showhouse will provide a lot of inspiration and give a lot of ideas for dreaming.'

Tickets are $10 in advance (until Oct. or $12 at the door; groups of 20 or more, $8. Tickets are available by calling the DSOH Volunteer Council Office at

A gala opening reception catered by Fox and Hounds of Bloomfield Hills will take place 6:30-8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 1, at Villa Baronna, with a party 7-10 p.m. at First Security Savings Bank. Tickets are $50 per person, $100 for patrons.

"The symphony house gives people a taste of different looks. I would hate not to see Detroit have a symphony. This is a fun way to donate to the symphony and keep it alive," said Linda Bruce of the Curiosity Shoppe in Franklin, one of the designers taking part in the showcase of local talent.

Bruce and partner Laura Burt's concept for the chateau's music room sets the stage for fantasy, a chamber concert sounding through a room from long ago. Needlepoint featuring lyre plays off a full-size harp, violins and old-fashioned wooden music stands. Trompe l'oeil harps and lyre harmonize window corners. A soft teal green wallpaper echoes color charted in the needlepoint.

"We'll have romantic classical music playing," Bruce said. "If you were Mozart, you'd feel right at home.

Amethyst, green and gold accentuate the pleasures found in the master bedroom by Neal Jay Herman Designs of Southfield. Herman bases the room around a French Normandie armoire. Draped with a canopy of silk, the bed revels in the elegance of an upholstered headboard slipcovered in green damask with gold braiding that runs through grommets tying the slipcover together.

Flanking the bed on the right, an antique concrete pedestal table serves as a writing surface. Focused in front of the fireplace, a pair of French chairs and breakfast table await the dawn. Gold leaf paper with a hint of amethyst covers the

"It's opulent," said builder Joe Gurka. "For some it's too decorative in America not in France or Europe. It's a typical French villa for an aristocrat living in a town such as Barbentane near Avignon

When the volunteer council approached Gurka & Siler in May about creating a showhouse to benefit the symphony, 50 designers were invited to sub-mit proposals. Vlasta Siler, the project's design coordinator, narrowed the decorating down to 24.

"There was no theme. Designers were left wild," Siler said.

Since the first showhouse was produced in 1981, the volunteer council has contributed well over half a million dollars to the DSO. The council is hoping for 10,000 to 15,000 visitors this year, with proceeds to benefit the general operating budget for the DSO's 1993-94 sea-

Hours will be 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday, and 2-6 p.m. Sunday. The house is at 3376 Franklin Road between Long Lake and Square Lake Roads. "I equate 'odd' with uniqueness and difference," said event chair Tina Parfitt of Birmingham.

The Odd Ball, which is black tie optional, will take place Saturday, Oct. 16, at the Birmingham Country Club. It begins at 7 p.m. with hors d'oeuvres and entertainment, with dinner at 8 p.m. Tickets are $100 (Friend), $150 (Patron) or $200 (Benefactor) each. Call the BBAA at 644-0866 for tickets and information.

Most of the artists "instantly knew which mannequin body piece they wanted," Parfitt said. Hands are very popular, she said.

DeGiusti is one of the artists lending a hand or two to the event. DeGiusti is working on two wall reliefs for the Odd Ball. Each of the wall reliefs features a slender hand, fingers bent as if gently holding something or gesturing.

"I thought the hands were kind of interesting," said DeGiusti, who also has work in Michigan Outdoor Sculpture IV at the Southfield Civic Center, on Evergreen between 10 and 11 Mile, through Oct. 15.

Each wall relief is about 24 inches in size and bears DeGiusti's classical style. The hands look like they were from Greek statues. They are placed in clay, the material flowing and filling around them like a draped gown. The men's faces carved into the clay resemble those of Roman or Greek figures.

DeGiusti is thinking of calling one "The Hand of Beatrice," after the guide in Dante Alighieri's "The Divine Comedy." The mannequin hand in this work rests on the head of Dante, shown in profile. Various shapes around the hand and the profile can represent mountains, forests or other landscape features.

In the other wall relief, the hand clutches the long hair of a man's head, also in profile. This depicts Salome with the head of John the Baptist, DeGiusti said.

When the works are finished, they will be covered with a rubber mold, from which a plaster cast will be made.

"I thought, all the years I've been at the BBAA, I want to do something, I'll do something kind of interesting for them," said De-Giusti, who started teaching there

Among the other artists taking part in the Odd Ball are Danielle Bodine, Helen Febbo, Rosemary Gratch, Millie Janka, Diane Postula Levine, Jean McKnight, Michael Mahoney, Leslie Masters, Hope Palmer, Joan Schwartz, Patricia Senecoff, Julie Seregny, Linda Soberman, Patti Tapper, John Tormey, Karen Wydra, Gail Yurasek and Paula Zaks. All but two of the artists are BBAA faculty members.

Campus spotlights 21st-century poets

The Schoolcraft College Committee to Promote the Arts will sponsor Keith Taylor in a presentation "Poets for the 21st Century" 1-2:15 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 6 in F-530 (in the Forum Building on the Livonia campus).

Admission is free.

Audience members will receive an annotated bibliography of 30 "younger" poets - poets who will likely continue to write, publish, and be read well into the next century. Taylor will read poems of some of them as well as his own.

Taylor's position gives him special qualifications for the presentation. For 14 years, he has not only unpacked and shelved many hundreds of poetry books but read most of them - as an employee of Ulrich's Book Shop, Borders Book Shop and now Shaman Drum Book Shop, all in Ann Ar-

Taylor has published three volumes of his own poetry with a fourth scheduled to appear in October. He has contributed poems to scores of magazines, journals, broadsides and anthologies.

Two years ago, he received a Fellowship in Creative Writing from the National Endowment for the Arts. He was recently an adjunct lecturer in creative writing at the University of Michigan.

In 1992, Taylor appeared on more than 30 public television stations as one of four artists featured in the short documentary film "Isle Royale Reflections," produced by On-Cue Productions

Taylor holds degrees from Bethel College in Indiana and Central Michigan University. He has studied at the Cranbrook Institute, Indiana University at South Bend, the Sorbonne, and St. Peter's College, Oxford.

The Schoolcraft College Committee to Promote the Arts was formed in 1988. Members are Dr. Louis Reibling, academic dean; Professor Donald Morelock, music; and Professor Joanne Stein,

Yoko Ono shares personal 'Glimpse' in area visit

BY MARY KLEMIC STAFF WRITER

Yoko Ono's current exhibit at the Cranbrook Academy of Art Museum in Bloomfield Hills is a blend of the past, present and fu-

It's the past in that the show highlights One as an avant-garde artist and marks her return to Cranbrook after four years. It's the present in that it features primarily work Ono created during the 1990s. And it's the future in its suggestions of what lies ahead.

"I still believe that ideas can create reality," Ono said Monday, before she was to give a lecture to Cranbrook students. "Ideas are very strong; thoughts are very strong. We could rely on that . . . (and) create a better world."

The exhibit, "Glimpee: Works by Yoko Ono at Cranbrook," continues through Oct. 31 at 1221 Woodward.

Ono, now 60, was renowned as an artist during the early and mid 1960s. She was associated with the Fluxus art movement, which challenged materialism. Fluxus artists made inexpensive works that could be reproduced easily. Ono's marriage to John Lennon brought her a celebrity status that overshadowed her status as an

"Glimpse" features conceptual "Instructions for Paintings" from the 1960s that have never been exhibited outside Japan, 10 recent paintings, five "Weight Pieces (Mind/Scales)," a large version of "Play It By Trust," 17 objects from the "Family Album (Blood Objects)" series, a large installa-tion called "Endangered Species: 2319-2322," an installation of 81 Egyptian bronze cats with glow-ing eyes that is called "Bastet," a participatory work called "Patches of Blue" and Ono's newest work, "Hiroshima."

"It's a very, very special moment for Cranbrook and a very, very special moment for Yoko,' said Roy Slade, museum director.

"She's never seen this body of work together." "I think it's great. It's really exciting," said associate curator David D.J. Rau, who curated the exhibit with Jon Hendricks. "This work is so different from what she showed in 1989 . . . '90s issues of politics and social awareness and where the world is going.

One had spoken to students at her previous show at Cranbrook in 1989. Meeting with students and the beauty of the place are among the pleasures Cranbrook holds for her.

The first thing I thought of was the students . . . . I really came back here to say hello to the students again," she said.

Slade saw an Ono performance at Leeds in the mid-'60s and a small show of her bronzes in the late '80s. He talked with collector Gil Silverman, who knew of Ono through her work with Fluxus and said she might be interested in a showing at Cranbrook.

Slade met with the artist, and her 1989 Cranbrook presentation was arranged. Since that show, Ono has had solo exhibits in museums and galleries in Denmark, England, Finland, Germany, Hungary, Iceland, Italy, Japan,

The pieces in "Glimpse" seem right at home in the museum. A work with a vine reaching out of a stretched linen canvas is placed next to a window through which leafy bushes can be seen. The effect is as though part of the out-side greenery is coming through the wall. Another work, a butterfly in a wood-and-glass box, had been placed on a wall near the floor. One had it moved near the ceiling, saying "A butterfly must

"Patches of Blue" (1993) consists of blue cardstock pieces, looking like parts of a jigsaw puzzle in a helmet. Visitors may take a piece of the "sky" from the

Ono's "Smoke Painting" (1961-93) had asked viewers to light the canvas with a cigarette and watch the movement of smoke as the canvas burned. The painting would be completed when the whole canvas was gone. "Instructions for Paintings," words with-out illustrations, included one for "Painting to See the Sky": Drill two holes into a canvas. Hang it where you can see the sky. (Change the place of hanging. Try both the front and the rear windows, to see if the skies are differ-

Among the "Blood Objects" (1993) are a bronze mirror, hairbrush, place setting and clock splattered with red paint. Red shading also seeps in some of the photos in "Endangered Species" (1992) — over a doorway or a building. Faces of children appear in the building.

"Endangered Species" also includes a bronze family on a bench, their heads bowed. Boxes around the room contain plaster parts of bodies that relate to dif-

parts of bodies that relate to dif-ferent members of the family. "Weight Pieces" (1990) consist of old-fashioned scales weighing such items as a family photo-graph and a gun. "Play It By Trust" (1991) is a long table set with chess games; the board, pieces, table and chair all the same

If it works once, why not try it again?

That's the thinking of Coldwell Banker Schweitzer Real Estate offices, which again this year will co-sponsor a series of community events relating to Fire Prevention

'We sell houses. This is a way for us to tell people how to protect their houses and themselves,' said Betty Barbour, manager of the Bloomfield Hills office. "It works hand in hand."

"We do it because we believe in community service," said Jackie Steuer, manager of the West Bloomfield office. "If we can help and educate the public on fire safety, that's wonderful."

The West Bloomfield office on Northwestern Highway will be involved in several activities the week of Oct. 3.

Sales associates will distribute fire safety educational materials and promotional items to children 1-4 p.m. Sunday at the Farmington Hills fire station on Drake between 12 and 13 Mile roads.

The fire department will offer educational training including how to escape from a controlled Smoke House.

I in a position to make a legal argument under the circumstances?

To the extent that representations were made to you by the seller or the Realtor, and to the extent that you relied on those representations to your detriment in deciding to buy the house, you do have a cause of action for damages.

But I would suggest that the representations could have been avoided by your obtaining an inspection of the premises before your purchase although I cannot tell from the question whether that was part of the agreement.

If you had an attorney representing you, the attorney may have suggested that you confirm the validity of these material representations before you closed. You apparently are paying the price for buying a very expensive property but perhaps not carefully following through with the details although the seller may well be responsible for your loss.

You apparently are paying the price for buying a very expensive property but perhaps not carefully following through with the details although the seller may well be responsible for your loss.'

Our board has hired a management company that has many sites and has promoted itself as a company that can better contract with sub-contractors because of its size. The problem is that we are in the middle of the contract with the management company, but we cannot get them to perform their duties because they are too busy. We talked to the principal of the management company who has all kinds of excuses. How can be extricate ourselves from the contract?

There should be a provision in your management aagreement that allows you to terminate your contract for cause which can be substantiated in regard to the management company's alleged unwillingness or inability to perform its duties under the management contract. If you have made reasonable efforts to get the management company to discharge its contractual duties, consult with your association at-

You should also know that many management agreements are negotiated or have a clause that provides the association with an "out" of the agreement even if there is not cause. Check your contract; you may have a legal basis to terminate the contract and if necessary, seek damages for the lack of performance by the management company. But it may be more cost effective for you to try to negotiate with the management company to try to resolve the problem or peacefully terminate the agreement as of a specified date.

Joint effort to benefit Lighthouse

The Birmingham-Bloomfield Board of Realtors and Standard Federal Bank, headquartered in Troy, are combining to promote a benefit for Lighthouse of Oakland County, a human services agency.

A social evening including a private preview and shopping of Neiman Marcus fall and winter collections, hors d'oeuvres, drinks and raffle, will be held Wednesday, Oct. 13, at the store in the Somerset Collection. Tickets, at $30, are available by calling Kerry R. Schreiber, chairwoman of the realty board's community service committee and Realtor associate for Max Broock, at 646-1400.

Lighthouse is a non-profit agency that concentrates on homelessness and hunger prevention. Lighthouse currently is involved in an ambitious neighborhood revitalization program in

"One reason we've chosen this to be our charity is it ties in with what we do," Schreiber said. "It's also an excellently run organiza-

Redstone appointment

Daniel Redstone, president of Redstone Architects, West Bloomfield, has been named to the 1994 Professional Conduct Committee of the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards. The committee studies the state boards' responsibilities that relate to the conduct and professional development of registered architects.

A former grader for the Architectural Registration Exam, Redstone is the vice chairman of the Michigan Bureau of Occupational and Professional Regulation. He has also served in leadership positions as the Michigan AIA liaison to the national chapter of the American Institute of Architects. A member of the Detroit AIA chapter, he has been president vice president, treasurer and chair of the Public Relations Committee. He currently serves on the board of directors of the Detroit chapter and the Michigan Society of Archi-

Redstone has also been active in the Southfield and Livonia chambers of commerce and the Bloomfield Hills School District.

Campbell/Manix on the

Campbell/Manix, a Southfield firm that designs, engineers and constructs industrial and commercial buildings, has begun three new projects and completed two others.

The largest is a 53,500-square-foot retail facility at Ford and Southfield roads in Detroit. The $2.2 million building is shared by Office Depot and CompUSA. Owned by Etkin Equities, it was a design and construction project for Campbell/ Manix.

The company has also designed and is now building a 36,000-square-foot electronic retail store in Dearborn scenduled to be occupied by Best Buy in November.

Construction is also scheduled to be completed in November on a $1.4 million addition to the Schenck Pegasus Corp. manufacturing and office facility in Troy. Other projects include construction of a $1.8 million emissions lab for Mercedes Benz of North America in Ann Arbor. The building was designed by Harley, Ellington, Pierce, Yee Associates of Bloomfield Hills and is scheduled for completion in December. Both companies also combined talents on a renovation of an office and engineering facility for Toyota in Ann Arbor Technology Park

Science & structures

Structures, a traveling exhibit on loan from the Association of Science-Technology Centers, will allow visitors to explore engineering principles of the building profession. It will open Oct. 2 and close Jan. 3 at Cranbrook Institute of Science.

The exhibit features 12 work stations where visitors experiment with do-it-vourself models and devices. By pushing and pulling various materials, visitors discover how tension, compression and sheer force affect architectural form.

Experimenting with triangular supports, visitors rearrange the trusses on a model bridge to discover what combinations form the strongest bridges. They may also use a polariscope to examine the changing forces a bridge is subjected to when a vehicle crosses. The younger set can create their own structures with building blocks under a tent in the shape of a Gothic ribbed vault.

Hours at Cranbrook, 1221 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills, are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sundays. Admission is $5 for adults, $4 for children 3-17 and those over 65.

Architectural punchline tickles design funny bone

■ Laugh and the world laughs with you. But you have a better chance of hearing the laughter when you build a performance theater for comics that seats about 350.

BY DOUG FUNKE STAFF WRITER

The Second City - Detroit Comedy Theatre and Risata restaurant have given second life to an abandoned clothing store in downtown Detroit.

Victor Saroki, a Birmingham architect, and Lucy Earl, a Bloomfield Hills resident who serves as executive creative director for Little Caesar Enterprises, played key roles in the transformation.

And a complete renovation it was, inside and out.

The 65,000-square-foot building next to the Fox Theatre, former flagship of the Hughes & Hatcher chain. was completely gutted to concrete slabs and beams.

In its place rose an intimate club completely painted black with black carpeting seating 350 cabaret style with gently sloping sight lines.

The restaurant seats about 400 on several levels and features a mix of slate, wood floors, brick walls, steel girders and exposed mechanical sys-

"We wanted to have a sense of presence," Saroki said. "We didn't want it to look like a new building on the horizon.'

It would have been easier to knock everything down and start from scratch, Earl conceded, "but not as interesting.'

"It was (originally) built in the 1920s," Saroki said. "Understanding the structure was very complex. One of the difficulties was there were no documents, old plans. It was kind of search and discovery. It was a slow process.' Study began in the fall of 1992, demolition in March. The facilities opened earlier this month.

The project was still being developed as demolition went on," Saroki said. "We were reacting to different situations. We did find out that the building had four additions. With four additions, there was no consistency."

But that factor turned out to be a blessing in disguise, Earl said.

"That old structure gave us nuances," she said. "You get all these wonderful dining areas separate so you don't feel like you're in one big

"Second City's humor fundamentally is raw, kind of grass roots, simple," Saroki said. "The reason the room is all black is we didn't want to detract from the show and humor. Part of the atmosphere of the Fox is opulence. Here, it's totally opposite.

'The stage is forward, a semi-circular format, platforms on every level. That's what makes it a great experience. There's never anyone in front of you. The idea is to sit together and laugh with friends," he said.

There's no bad seat in the theater," Earl said. "It's very intimate."

The open lobby of the theater and restaurant is highlighted by a circular bar and a large, custom-made, galvanized steel, stained glass chandelier upwards of 15 feet in length.

'The bar becomes the focal point of the building corner," Saroki said. "A lot of emphasis was put on that corner so when people walk by, they get an idea of energy.

"Drinking rails and bar stools are at the windows," Earl added. "We want people to drive by and see some-

Bathroom plumbing fixtures generally cannot be moved around the room freely, making careful planning essential. Sketching a precise layout is important and attention must be given to details such as clearances between the various fixtures and location of existing pipes and plumbing.

The addition of a new bathroom with only one or 11/2 baths can yield a 95-percent return on investment, according to the Remodeling report. U.S. Housing Markets reported.

"The metro (Detroit) area's one-fam (single-family) activity has been remarkably consistent during the past nine years, especially for a market so tied to a cyclical industry like autos," U.S. Housing Markets reported.

"One-fam permits have been between 11,700 and 15,500 every year since 1985, and will fall in that range in 1993." Last year, some 14,700 units were permitted.

Demand here is weaker for new upscale houses costing $300,000 and up, while units priced at $175,000 and lower especially in the $80,000-$135,000 range sell best, U.S. Housing Markets reported.

"The metro area has enjoyed a 1.5-percent growth in employment during the last four quarters, including a small gain in manufacturing.

The auto industry is regaining some strength, but the effects of plant closings are far from over," the report continued. "GM is about to shut its big Willow Run plant after winning a court fight with local officials."

Existing home sales, often a prelude to buying new, are strongest in Rochester Hills in the north central part of the metro area and Canton in the west, U.S. Housing Markets

Residential builders nationally are expected to pull permits for some 950,000 single-family units this year, their best showing in five years.

New home sales nationally this year are expected to approach 675,000, 10 percent higher than last year and nearly one third higher than the 1991 low point of the housing cycle, the publication indicated.

Remodeling show opens at Expo Center

Building keeps steady pace

The first Fall Remodeling Show sponsored by the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan runs today through Sunday at the Novi Expo Center, I-96 at Novi Road.

Show hours are 2-10 p.m. Thursday and Friday, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday.

Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for adults 65 years and older and children ages 6-12. Kids under 6 are admitted free. Family tickets for two adults and accompanying children are available at Farmer Jack/A&P stores for $8.

Some 200 exhibitors are expected to show their goods.

"The Fall Remodeling Show offers homeowners a onestop shopping opportunity for their home and garden," said Fred Capaldi, BASM president. "They can compare products, prices. They don't have to go to 15 different

The exhibits include new technologies, products and services for kitchens, baths, doors, windows, appliances, mechanical systems and decorative accessories. Yard care, furnishings and craft items also will be displayed.

Some of the exhibitors will have show specials for the

"Basic building areas were left exposed," Saroki said. No efforts were made to hide or disguise updated heating, lighting and plumbing systems.

"It has a warehouse, light, bricky look," Earl said.

"You get a nice view of the city at different levels," Saroki said. "You see different details at different lev-

That's what urban architecture is all about - openness, energy, vitality inside and out, he said.

Next year when the weather warms, drinks, dining and dancing will be available on a rooftop terrace, Earl said.

"Atanas Ilitch, executive producer of The Second City, has been the driving force of energy," she said. "He wanted upbeat, fun, comfortable. I can't think of how many times he used the word comfortable.' Saroki pegged construction costs at several million dollars.

WRIE HAND REAP

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

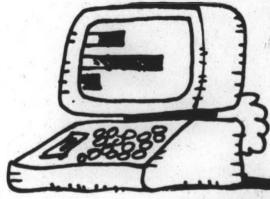

l. Include the price. Don't vaste your time or a potential ouyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond o your ad will be those who are renuinely interested. Surveys how that readers are more nterested in those items and ervices they know are within heir price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.

4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!

5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

Fall home improvement tips from the expert

by Glenn Haege America's Master Handyman Special Writer

all is an ideal time to look at the outside of your home like a real estate appraiser to find everything that could cause trouble during the winter. It is cool and comfortable, perfect weather conditions for painting. Most important, all these outside projects will save you money. because things can only get worse during the harsh winter months

•First of all, let's look down. Is the slope of the ground always running away from the house? Are there any holes or gullies, sort of like birdbaths, that will become miniature lakes near your house? How about the sidewalk and drive way? Have they begun to sink and direct water toward your house? Are they cracked and pitted, or are there signs of erosion that need to be filled in.

. Now lets look at the home. What is the condition of your home's siding and trim? Do the masonry joints need to be retuck pointed because the old mortar is cracked? Is the paint weathered, and cracking and peeling, or showing signs of wrinkling? How about the windows? Do they need reglazing? What about the caulking around windows, doors and corners of the house? Is the caulk hard? It should be spongy. Caulk that's hard no longer has the resiliency necessary to do the job. It should be replaced.

Do you have extensions on the down spouts? Extensions are necessary to move the water away from the foundation of the house. Think of it as putting your basement on a diet. No more water. Work at it, work towards it. Now is the time to be success-

•Now we're going to look up. Don't sclimb up on the roof unless you are in excellent physical condition and are not bothered by heights.

Most of us are better off just walking around the house and garage and looking up at the roof from a distance of 15 or 20 feet. Now, what you can see is the over-all appearance of the shingles. Are they showing wear by curling up around the edges. or "eye browing", kind of a lumpy appearance, or major discoloration? What about the valleys? Do they show excessive signs of discoloration or cracking? These are all signs that the roof needs patching or

How about the eaves troughs? Are there signs of pulling away? The best sign we have that the wood behind the eaves troughs, what we call the fascia board, is soft and needs replacing, is that the long spike type nails are pulling away from the eaves troughs. It is a great indication that water is working itself behind the eaves troughs, curtailing down the side of the house and causing tremendous erosion problems. Fall is the time to tighten that up.

Following are some more quick tips for getting geared-up for the cold months that are inevitably ahead of us ·Windows: Let's try to prepare your windows for winter. If you are planning on replacing windows, if they are more than 30 years old. if they are single-pane windows now is the time to get the window companies out there to give you an estimate. Make sure they give a completion date right on the contract, not a start date; you don't care when they start, you want a completion date (when they will be finished and out of your house).

If you don't have the money for replacing your windows, and want See Tips, 4

HOME IMPROVEMENT 1993

Fall is traditionally a time of change. The leaves turn to rich, vibrant hues, the air is crisp and cool. Days are shorter, and you'll start spending more time indoors--maybe you'll want to start those projects you've been putting off all summer.

In this issue of Fall Home Improvement, which appears today, Thursday, September 30, 1993 in all Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, you'll find unique ideas for saving and creating a sense of space, along with helpful tips from local expert, Glenn years, let's see what we can do to give them more winter weather protection.

First of all, check the putty around the window that sticks to the wood frame or against the brick or aluminum siding. Take your thumb and push in on that caulking material. If it is like a rock, it is not doing anybody any good. You can remove it with one of the putty removers on the market that heat and soften the putty to make that job a lot easier. Now is the ideal time to replace it. Check the glazing that holds the glass against the window surface. If that is cracked and split, it's not holding back any water. You guessed it, replace it now.

Inside storm windows work very well. If you do not like the look of the plastic "shrink wrap" type of interior storm windows, consider magnetic polycarbonate interior storms. They are fastened with magnets and do a really good job of sealing out the cold air and make a big thermal break on the inside, much better than exterior storm windows

If you already have thermal windows and you are starting to get a clouding filling between the panes, the seal is broken. The window frame does not have to be replaced, just the window, at a fraction of what you'd pay for new windows.

·Paintable Exterior Surfaces: If the exterior paint job is starting to look worn. weathered, cracked, crazed, crumbly, now is the perfect time to paint. Remember.

60% of the job is pre-paint preparation. Scrapping, washing with TSP, and rinsing thoroughly, are very vital to the success of your paint job.

The other part is the paint, itself. Don't skimp on the paint. Don't buy by price, buy by features, by reputation. Buy by performance. Ladle the paint on like you are icing a cake. Don't try to stretch the paint. The paint must be at least five mills thick when it is dry for the paint to do its job. so you can stay off the ladder. Most importantly, so you can brag about the results.

·Caulking: All those irritating drafts are due to had windows or dried up caulking joints. If the windows are fine, it is the caulking. Remember, if an ant can get in your house, the wind and cold can get in big time. Acrylic caulks. Urethane caulks. High Performance caulks work best. Read the instructions. Remember, any crack over a half-inch wide is considered an architectural gap and a backer rod must be used first before you caulk it. That will make that caulking last a long time.

•Concrete Cracks: You can fill in the small cracks (smaller than 1/2" wide) with a product called Gray Crack Seal by Ouikrete. It's like putty to use, it extrudes like mustard, and dries rapidly but stays firm and flexible. One of the great things about it is that it's gray and does not look like new concrete, but blends in very well.

What about the expansion joints between the cement slabs? If they have weathered away, now is the time to fix them. Use an ice scrapper blade or the toe of a shovel, to clean them out as best you can, then back till with sweeping sand or masonry sand. Pack it down to leave about 1 1/2" from the surface of the concrete slab. Lay a backer rod on top of the sand. then pour a very special compound called Alco Guard. It is ready to use, apply two

If the opening is very large, you can replace it with a new expansion joint that you can purchase at any masonry supply thin coats. This will give you a nice

•Cement and Concrete Surface Protection: Winter is the worst time for cement wear because of the freeze and thaw cycling of the water and the air temperatures, the snow and the ice. You can seal all concrete areas, walkways, driveways, etc., with a water seal.

•Garage Floors: This is also a great time to thoroughly scrub and clean a raw. unpainted garage floor. Use a water base acrylic cement sealer on the garage floor. Rolling on two coats will give your garage floor great protection from all those road salts, rust and oil stains your car tracks in during the winter.

·Calcium Chloride: Winter is coming. so is ice. You know that you are going to need to melt the ice on sidewalks, stairs and driveways. Go to the store and pick up Calcium Chloride in flake or pellet form.

The pellet gives more traction, but the flake is a lot less expensive; both work a lot better than rock salt.

·Locks and Hinges: Clean and lubricate all door locks and hinges with nowdered graphite. Do it now, not when the first freezing rain happens. While you're at it. how about the locks and hinges on the cars?

•Thresholds: Door thresholds have gotten out of adjustment over the summer and will let in a tremendous amount of cold drafts this winter. Most threshold plates are adjustable, simply loosen the screws at the top of the threshold to realign for a perfect fit. If not adjustable, there are vinyl and brush type sweeps that can be attached to the door to give it that tight weather proof seal. Be sure you do this to all exterior doors, not just the front.

·Household Pests: If birds, squirrels or chipmunks have taken up residency in your attic, get them out NOW! They can do a lot of damage during the winter.

An easy way to drive most pests away is to take a shallow pan, two quarts of ammonia, and a rell of toilet paper up to the attic. Pour the ammonia inside the pan The ammonia will soak into the toilet paper and send that beautiful odor throughout the attic. No self-respecting critter will put up with a smell like that.

When your premises have been vacated, seal any holes with an insulating foam. like Great Stuff®, and re-screen vents with fiberglass screening. See Tips, 8

Making the most of limited space

by Joan Boram Special Writer

place for everything and everything in its place," used to be on the escutcheon of every homeowner. The trouble is, everything has multiplied, and places have remained basically the same. Often enough, it isn't really more space that we need, we just need to take another look at what we're doing with the space we have

Emmy Murphy, hostess of Detroit's Channel 56 "The Emily Murphy Show," for years had her home office on the floor of her basement. "I had file cabinets." says Murphy, "but I didn't have a desk. When I wanted to look up something in a file, I just spread the contents all over the floor. Of course, it was carpeted, but underneath it was cold, unyielding concrete!"

Murphy had a lovely "guest" bedroom on the second floor of her West Bloomfield home. Everything a guest room should have, it had - a crystal decanter and glass for water, a couple of good books, comfy pillows - everything but guests! But if a guest showed up, the room was ready.

"One day I was complaining to a friend about how uncomfortable it was working on the basement floor," says Murphy, "she asked me why I didn't use the guest room as an office. How often did I have guests? When I thought about it, I had exactly two overnight guests the previ-

After the appropriate mental adjustments (really the hardest part of converting a traditional room to a non-traditional use). Murphy bought a slab door and two twodrawer filing cabinets, thus creating a simple desk. She brought up files from the basement as needed, and moved her computer from the kitchen. With her trusty portable phone by her side, she's ready for business - and off of the basement floor!

Laura Kaminsky, American Society of Interior Designers (A.S.I.D.), was asked to carve out a space somewhere in a client's house for a home office. The client's business required a lot of storage space, so it was more of a challenge than merely converting a closet into a home office.

"After interviewing the client," says the Livonia-based designer, "I found that she only used her formal dining room once a year, for Thanksgiving, and even then-it wasn't big enough for the 20+ guests. Furthermore, she and her husband never used the living room; they relaxed in the more informal family room

"The answer was obvious: turn the dining room into an office, and the living room into a dining room. It took my client a couple of days to get used to the idea, but it's been very successful.'

The dining room/office is a gracious space, so it can easily be recruited for buf fet service when the living room/dining room is in use. The color scheme in the office is black, white and taupe, with faux marble wall paper. The desk is a slab of glass on a black pedestal, so it can also double as a buffet

What makes the conversion successful however is the modular wall system that Kaminsky designed and had custom-built for the room. The units have shelves and drawers, so everything can be stored away quickly and neatly

Some of the units have glass doors to display personal decorative items, offering a softness to the hard-edge office look.

"In this case, the client has a stunning collection of antique-beaded evening bags," says Kaminsky. "They're low key, but they add a touch of refinement to the entire

"The advantage of modular storage is that the configuration can be changed as needed. If the client moves, she can take them with her.

One of Kaminsky's favorite tricks is to turn a second-floor closet into a laundry room. "After all, the second floor is where most laundry originates," she says. "Think of all the time and energy we spend carrying laundry downstairs and back up again after it's been washed and dried. The new washers with dryers stacked on top are only 27 inches wide - just right for a closet."

Not every conversion is a good idea. Just ask Gene Galley, A.S.I.D., of Joseph Productions, Southfield.

"A client bought a home in Birmingham, whose previous owners had obviously been desperate for an extra bathroom," says Galley. "They converted a bedroom closet into a shower stall, and put a sink and toilet in the corner of the bedroom! One of the first things we did was convert the shower stall back into a closet."

What if you have too much space, in the wrong place? "A client bought an old house that had been enlarged several times," says Galley. "One of the bedrooms was like a bowling alley, it was so big. We installed a 5-foot wall across the width of the 12 x 14 ft. bedroom, and created an exercise room on one side of the wall and an office on the other side.

"The client had teak shelving from the previous home, and we built shelving units into the 5 ft. half-wall. The two rooms get a lot of use, and the wall can easily be removed if these, or subsequent owners. want to use the entire space."

According to Galley, many people are giving up dining rooms altogether. "Several clients who are book collectors have converted the dining room into a library with a dining room/library table in it," says Galley. "and one client is building a new home with a billiard table in the dining room. 'We just don't entertain formal' says the owner, 'and it's a perfect spot for a billiard table.

Living in the past

The romance of ghosts, peeling plaster, and old houses

by Cynthia G. La Ferle Special Writer

I'm often asked if I have any practical advice for people who are about to buy an older home that needs work. But I know enough to keep my mouth shut. The word practical has nothing to do with an old house, and besides, you can't talk sense into anyone who's smitten with

You could point out the peeling plaster and creaky floorboards. Or preach a sermon about the terrors of high heating bills and budget deficits. You might even try praising the virtues of new construction techniques and the seamless flow of contemporary floor plans. But you might just as well talk to the walls.

It's perfectly useless to stand between a man and a woman and the crumbling palace they are about to mortgage. This kind of love is ignited by the wicked gleam of leaded glass windows, sealed at first sight by the flirtatious quirk of a nook or cranny.

I speak from years of experience. Throughout our 13 married years together, my husband and I have always purchased houses that are much older than we are. We've searched, begged, and borrowed to get them. We've tolerated musty basements, cracked ceilings, antique toilets, and funny old bathrooms that even Bob Vila wouldn't touch.

For the past three years we've lived in a 1920s Tudor, a brooding bastion with thick oak woodwork and a leaky dungeon of a basement. On winter nights we listen family was young. to a mournful symphony of steam pipes clanking and moaning like Marley's ghost. Our house commands the corner of a narrow street lined with ancient maple trees, and we wouldn't trade the place for a dozen new houses in an upscale subdivision.

I'm not quite sure how to explain my passion for houses with a past. But I can trace its beginnings to the vacations of my youth, when my parents drove me to Mt. Vernon, Colonial Williamsburg, and Salem Village. While other kids screeched on the thrill rides in Disneyland, I snooped around George Washington's bedroom. I learned at an early age that buildings, like people, acquire character as they mature. And curiously - despite the "space age" in which I grew up - I decided that anything that's been around for a while is infinitely more interesting than a future we can only imagine.

New houses are, without a doubt much more convenient than old ones. If you get a new house that's really well constructed, you probably won't see much of your tool kit. But Jacuzzi or no Jacuzzi, there's always something missing in these contemporary castles.

For one thing, you can't build history into a new house. Time works an inexplicable magic; you can sense it the moment you step inside a home in which someone else has lived. In a collective voice the rooms seem to whisper, "This house has seen some things that you haven't." I'm always moved by the everyday romance of people and events that have become part of a building's mortar and plaster. And romance, after all, is what gets the old-house lover through the toughest renovation projects.

Even a place with the humblest history can wend its way into our hearts, especially if we've spent some time there.

I'll never forget our first old house, a tiny English cottage of a place that was built in the 1940s. Married just two years, my husband and I bought it on a land contract from Mrs. Morris, an endearing elderly woman whose late husband had left a legacy of sweet peas and wild groundcover in the backyard. Whenever I worked in that garden. I could almost picture old Mr. Morris turning the earth with his hand trowel, or perhaps leaning on his rake while surveying his botanical empire.

After selling her home to us, Mrs. Morris moved to a nursing home. But not long before she died, her daughter brought her back to visit the house. She was anxious to see how we had decorated it; I was nervous about showing her the changes we'd made. Making her way ever so slowly through the rooms, Mrs. Morris graciously admired our paint and wallpaper selections, then told me how she had decorated years before, when her

During that visit that I began to understand, on a much deeper level, the inevitable passage of time and how buildings connect us to the people who have lived in them before us. It's that knowledge that makes it so difficult to leave an old house when it's time to move on.

Saying good-bye to my parents home when it was sold this year was one of the hardest things I've ever done. Mom just couldn't keep the house after my father had died of a heart attack in the driveway. It was too large, too much work; and there were too many memories hovering in the corners.

Just before we packed my mother's last box of china and loaded it into my car. I took one final tour of the last place my father had loved and called his home. Walking past his study upstairs, I paused for a moment, half expecting to see his familiar gray head leaning over his roll top desk. Completely empty, the room looked so much smaller than it had seemed when it was cluttered with his books and furniture.

But I sensed the years of Dad's benevolent presence in the very walls of the little study, and I knew that he would, in his usual quiet way, always haunt the

With the swish of a brush you can defy the laws of gravity - you can lift a ceiling, push out walls and even make unsightly features like oddly placed windows disappear. Outside, gutters and down spouts will simply melt into the facade. Once you have mastered color and paint, you can move onto applying the same formula for expanding visual space with your furniture and furnish-

As frivolous as color may seem, it is everywhere. Color comes in all sizes, shapes and forms and at no extra cost, unless vou make a mistake! from, no wonder decisions are difficult and mistakes easily made. Whether you live in a cottage or a castle, or somewhere in between, on a champagne or shoestring budget, there's no "cutting corners" when it comes to color. It's not the cost, but rather what colors you select and where you place them, that matters most.

Creating The Illusion Of Space

Here are some tips for expanding space with color. The secret is illusion!

As with any color combination, to increase visual space is to minimize the effect of contrast. You should select colors carefully from the largest samples you can find. Next, make your final color decisions in the environment they will other, so you may want to lighten your wall color.

Reds, yellows and oranges can perk up and warm rooms that face north, while greens, purples and blues can visually cool down rooms with a southern exposure. Color can actually alter space, depending on the tint or shade you select.

Tints are colors which contain white, and shades are colors to which black has been added. Shades can visually decrease space; in contrast, tints visually expand

For balance and interest, always use an unequal amount of color, patterns and textures in a room

Monochromatic color schemes with various tints and shades, along with wall to wall carpeting to blend with wall color add the illusion of space to smaller rooms. Light colored woods with white or natural wicker furniture, accented by mirrors to double the space, are also helpful for cramped quarters.

Midwest Door & Window is in the business of distributing these products. We acquired another company on July 1 and "inherited" an overstock of some products. For example, we have about 145 Weather Shield insulated storm doors in brown and tan. Normal retail is over $200.00. Until they're gone, we're selling them for $125.00 + tax.

We also have a variety of steel entry doors (including some with leaded glass) that retail between $225.00 and $900.00. We're cutting those prices in half, + tax.

For example, a full oval leaded design that lists for $881.00 will go for $440.50.

In addition to our overstocked materials we're very competitive on all of our window and door products. Call us or visit our showroom for a personal consultation on your window requirements.

•Furnace: You haven't done a thing to the furnace all summer long. Now is the time to clean around the furnace. Make it really immaculate. Remember, any dirt around the furnace will be sucked into the furnace air intake within the first few days of operation. Replace all furnace filters, or clean electronic filters, NOW.

Completely clean the humidifiers. Use vinegar and hot water. Drum model sponges should be soft and supple. If not, replace. Make sure the valve works, if the buoy is corroded, replaced.

•Hot Water Heater: You are going to be using a lot more hot water soon. Drain at least 20 gallons of water from the tank. Try to get rid of some of the sediment build-up at the bottom. If your hot water tank is over 10 years old, it needs to be

Buy yourself some peace of mind now, rather than wait until it breaks down right when you are getting ready for work.

•Smoke and Carbon Monoxide Detectors: Go around the house and replace the batteries in all the smoke detectors, NOW. Do this at the same time every year. If your smoke detectors are hot wired, test them. Make sure you have at least one smoke detector on every floor.

Carbon monoxide detectors are also necessary. You can get inexpensive button detectors at all hardware stores. Put them in your bedroom. Or, you can buy the new electronic carbon monoxide detectors, by First Alert and other companies, which are just coming out in the market place as you are reading this article. Carbon monoxide detectors are very necessary because, as we make our homes tighter, we breath in the same air over and over again, making us somewhat susceptible to traces of carbon monoxide in the air. Carbon monoxide is odorless, tasteless, but very deadly. Be prepared, look for a carbon monoxide detectors at your hardware stores and home

Now I guess that all there is to say is "Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow." These are some of the best tips we can give. I call them "bragging rights."

There are four ways to heat and cool your house. Only Geothermal Energy can save you up to 60%.

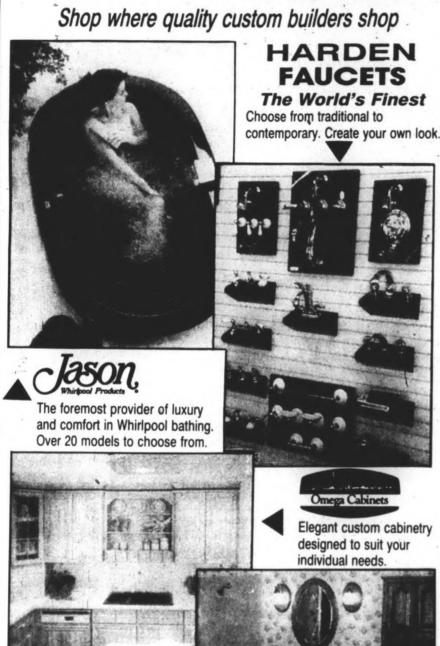

Geothermal Energy is your answer to saving money. When you compare the annual operating costs for heating, cooling and hot water for a 2400-square-foot home, Geothermal Energy is your least expensive alternative. It costs up to 30% less than natural gas and up to 60% less than fuel oil or propane. Plus, it's environmentally friendly. Find out more from

When you're faced with cramped quarters work with small spaces!

s there a room in your home that you have designated as "storage," which essentially means throwing things into losing the door and walking away? Is re a "little voice" in your head, every e you open the door, that says, "You lly should do something with this

For many people, that "little voice" es them to do something with a space they might have already deemed "too all." It seems the smaller the space, the gger the job becomes to turn it into a ctional, attractive room.

Not true, says owner/designer Karen lmering of Livonia's About Interiors, . "It's a common misconception that ere is nothing interesting you can do if e space is small. It takes creativity and nning, but any space can be made useul and pleasing.

Many people believe that light colors eate space while richer, darker colors reate coziness. It would seem that the wo methods cannot be used together in a

Linda Yates, an award-winning designer with Decorating Den of Farmington Hills, agrees that intelligent use of color can create the illusion of space. Yates suggests that lighter floors open up a room, allowing for richer hues to be employed on the walls and in fur-

Wilmering states that the focus on horizontal lines in a room will also visually expand the space. A 4' x 5' powder room can be made to seem twice its size, by extending the counter top the length of the wall and placing a full mirror

To prevent the space from breaking up and making a small space seem smaller, Wilmering recommends that the vertical lines around windows and doors blend with other colors used rather than contrasting with them.

The colors that Yates has been using most recently are deep, hunter greens, navy and vibrant cranberry in furnishings and accents, which she says lends a plush. welcoming look to confining spaces. Wilmering uses hues of blues and greens to open up small areas and avoids reds and yelfows, because she believes that those colors are too strong and cause the walls to appear closed-in.

Both of the designers agree that proportion is the key to furnishing small spaces. "Especially when space is at a premium, several appropriate-sized pieces work better than clusters of miniatures," Wilmering says, "Many people believe they should use miniprints and groups of small pictures."

In Yates' experience, some people move in the other direction, filling limit-

"It's a common misconception that there is nothing interesting you can do if the space is small. It takes creativity and planning, but any space can be made useful and pleasing."

ed space with overstuffed, large furniture that crowds a room. The consensus is to avoid pieces that are too large or too small, but go for well-proportioned, functional furnishings that do not overwhelm the room with quantity or size.

While color and flooring can create the illusion of space, it is possible to make a small room truly functional and not simply create illusions that do not lend themselves to usefulness.

Both Yates and Wilmering have recently worked on spaces that must be useful. "I recently did the lounge of a dental office that was 10' by 10'," Yates says. "It was important to create as many seats as possible in an attractive space. Instead of using couches and crowding the room, I went with two wing chairs, an ottoman and a desk with a chair beside it, creating five seats. This not only worked on a visual level, but allowed dental clients to maintain their personal space."

Wilmering often works to convert small rooms into home offices. To accommodate the needs of a home office, she often recommends custom wall units, built to the exact specifications demanded by the space she's working in. The wall units provide neat, efficient placement of tools, such as fax machines, personal computers and copiers, while retaining the floor space available in the room.

Both designers stress that the owner must be comfortable with whatever colors and furnishings are selected.

As Wilmering puts it, "My design firm believes our function is to help our clients find their own style. Trends will come and go, but if clients remain true to themselves, they will continue to love their interiors for years to come.

Kitchen organization

by Joan Boram Special Writer

raditionally, a kitchen was a simple room, devoted to a single task: food preparation. Equipped with certain basic appliances, one cooked something to render it edible, optimally delicious, and then one (or more) satdown and ate.

Social and technological changes. however, have conspired to impose new disciplines on the traditional kitchen. For one thing, everybody seems to need a home office, even if it's just a nook for the computer.

For another, we have been blessed with enough high-tech toys and tools to make The Jetsons cringe. Unless you're going to leave your microwave, coffee maker, toaster oven, food processor, electric can opener, and slow cooker on the countertop, you need more space.

and don't forget green! Today's kitchen is also energy-efficient, and a recycling center.

"Everybody needs more kitchen space," says Dan DeGiulio, owner of DeGiulio Kitchen and Bath Centers, in Livonia. "But the average consumer has no idea that in the past five years, the number of space-saving devices has increased 10-fold.

"It's a matter of educating the con-umer. The first thing we do when dis cussing a kitchen remodeling is go to the client's house and look at the old kitchen. We find out what they like and dislike. Often the problem is accessibility - they can't easily get at things once they've been put away.'

DeGiulio often begins by recommending frameless cabinets: there are no bulky frames to take up space. Doubletiered silverware drawers afford twice as much space as a traditional drawer: When you pull the drawer out, a tray in the drawer slides back, placing the bottom tray in full view.

One of the handiest features has to be the roll-out shelves that pull out when a cabinet door below the countertop is opened. You can see the entire contents of the shelf. No more wondering what happened to your rubber gloves, or the marble polish.

"One of the most popular items are 'garages' for appliances," says DeGiulio. 'They provide a space for all those appliances such as toasters that you might use only once or twice a day. Just open a little door, and slide out the appliance. When you're finished, just slide it back in again, and close the door."

Closet organizers double storage space

Special Writer

Does it feel like you're always short on storage? Cowed by clutter? Drowning in disorder'.

Before you do something drastic, like putting up a "For Sale" sign, or donating half your possessions to the Salvation Army, consider how to make the most of your existing storage space. The first place to look is behind closed doors...into your own closets.

As you probably suspected, the typical closet arrangement—an eye-level pole, topped by a solitary shelf-is not very pragmatic. In fact, from an organizational point of view, it's an invitation to disaster. Look at all that dead space between hanging garments and the floor. Even with shoes in tidy rows under the clothes, there's still a couple feet of vacant real estate crying out to be used. Ditto for the awkward overhead shelf. Just how many sweaters can you stack up there before they all start toppling over-

Because of its linear layout, the traditional closet utilizes less than half of its total available space. To increase efficiency, you need a configuration that takes advantage of volume, every cubic

Organizer systems don't just tame the clutter jungle inside the closet. By providing drawers and containers for personal items like socks, lingerie, and jewelry, they can give back floor space in the bed-

When you've already converted the spare bedroom into a luxurious master bath and walk-in closet, that's an important contribution to living space.

Given their efficiency, it's not surprising that organizer systems are now moving out of the closet. With upgrades like Formica surfaces and rounded drawer edges, the latest components are meant to be seen in work areas throughout the house.

The in-home office, for example, is one of our focuses for future," says Ray Markham, owner of the West Bloomfield franchise of the California Closet Company, the West Coast firm that pioneered the organizing concept. A new product line called CalSpace includes work surfaces, shelves, drawers and file cabinets to make the home office look as professional as any executive suite.

CalSpace storage is especially suitable for the part-time office that has to accommodate other functions, according to Markham. When out-of-town friends come for a weekend visit, you can stow the computer keyboard in a sliding drawer, stash work paraphernalia in convenient cubbyholes, putt a double bed out of the wall cabinet, and voila-an instant guest room.

Another place where organizing systems work wonders is the garage, the tra-

Tool Box Tips

Similar to a well-stocked medicine cabinet, a basic tool kit is a must-have for every home. You'll be glad you have it when those inevitable repair projects come along. Your basic tool kit should contain:

•Needle-nose pliers with a built-in wire cutter.
