"I think people are interested in when the project is going to be finished," Overy said.

Under an administrative order guidelines for the cleanup of the site where 3M workers some 30 years ago dumped old paint and adhesives in an old channel of the Rouge River the company was expected to be completed with the excavation phase by Oct.

We're relatively pleased, content with the progress to date. It is somewhat behind schedule. said Ralph Dollhopf, EPA onscene coordinator. "We've agreed to extend it for a couple months.

Crews with Roy Weston Inc., which was hired to cleanup the site, have excavated about 3,500 tons of hazardous materials, which have been transported to a landfill out-of-state. Original estimates of excavation topped 5,000 tons. "We're about 60-70 percent complete. The important thing is that all the waste material located along the bank (of the Rouge) that whole area has been completed. That was one of the prime reasons for getting to the site," said Bob Paschke, 3M environmental engineering manager. When the excavation or phase 1 of the project is completed, the second phase, which includes determining how the soil, sediment and ground water, for example, have been affected, will kick in.

We have to see what else needs to be done," Dollhopf said. "All in all we feel comfortable with the way things are going.'

Jerry Macek has been trying to offer some free help for almost a year - to no avail.

"We're trying to help art ists," said Macek, owner of The Art Store in the Canton Corners shopping center on Ford Road, between Lilley and Morton Taylor roads. "We have an art gallery where we exhibit unknowns.

What Macek wants to do is offer free art classes - any medium - to children and adults who may not otherwise be able to afford the classes. "I'm really interested in helping them," he said. "I'm trying to make this work and give back to the community.

The sales tax hike would raise a third of the $6.5 billion, estimates Geake. "That leaves a substantial shortfall. I think we need a statewide property tax on all property other than homesteads. No question about it. We can never raise the money we need for operating millage for schools without going to statewide property tax. In addition, we may have to go to taxing homes at a lesser rate, where one mill would raise $100 million."

These and other taxes such as the single business tax or income tax could be used in combination with each other at varying rates in order to raise replacement revenue, added Geake.

"Chaos reigns.

In two words, a school lobbyist summed up four months of work on 30 school reform bills by 148 legislators, scores of staff, the governor and the top brass of the Treasury Department.

The lobbyist asked to remain anonymous so he wouldn't irritate lawmakers. But few of them would disagree. After repealing $6.7 billion in school property taxes in two days in July, the Legislature has neither put together a package of replacement taxes nor agreed on how to improve public education.

Take the Senate special committee on school finance, which last week almost broke down as its eight members split in three directions

■ Three Republicans — chair Joanne Emmons of Big Rapids. Harry Gast of St. Joseph and Robert Geake of Northville were ready to vote on one of Gov. John Engler's proposals, a 16 mill statewide business property tax.

■ Two Republicans Honigman of West Bloomfield and Doug Carl of Utica - offered different plans on state spending cuts and replacement taxes

■ Three Democrats - John Kelly of Grosse Pointe, Joe Conroy of Flint and Virgil Smith of Detroit wouldn't vote for any tax increases until Republicans backed off some of the school reform proposals such as charter schools. Honigman pushed his own plan: $1 billion in state general government cuts, half going to help "at risk" pupils, the other half going back to taxpayers; a five-year freeze on government spending at 1993-94 levels except for education; and half of all growth in state tax revenues going into education.

"I think this committee has come to the end of its productivity," said Emmons, who has En-

Middle ground

The House Education Committee, on the other hand, was moving toward compromise. The two Bills who co-chair the panel -Democrat Keith of Garden City and Republican Bryant of Grosse Pointe - dumped Engler's "charter schools" idea in favor of a less radical "academy" system.

Result: Conservative Republicans and labor-oriented Democrats jumped off the wagon as it headed down the middle of the

A House plan to give more school districts local tax opportunities pleased suburban districts. Engler wants to give only 35 topspending districts local-option taxes, insisting he wants to get administrators and school boards out of the millage campaign busi-

Suburban school people also are concerned about cuts in state aid for adult education. Currently state aid for adult ed is $285 million a year, but there is a move to cut it entirely. A Senate bill puts adult-ed aid at $150 million -"better than nothing," said the

MEA fights back

At Schoolcraft College in Livonia last week, teachers union and PTA leaders rallied in support of public schools and against Engler's charter and voucher plans.

Julius Maddox, Michigan Education Association president, said Engler's "overwhelming concern is how cheaply we can educate children, not how well." Maddox said the best thing Engler and lawmakers can do is "mandate a high-quality core curriculum for every child," fully funded by the state and implemented by "sitebased decision-making involving teachers and parents.

If a charter-schools law were passed, the state or a school district could charter a group of teachers or a non-profit company but not a church-affiliated group - to set up a specialized school in a union-free environment with many state regulations removed.

The teachers' unions denounced Engler's proposal to "privatize" non-teaching functions such as transportation. Engler sees "competition" from business as leading to lower costs.

Abe A. Munfakh, president of Ayres, Lewis, Norris & May, Inc., the authority's consulting engiheers, presented a paper to the worldwide organization of water environment professionals. The paper outlined the effects of the WTUA project on the Huron and Rouge rivers, and was written by Munfakh and Phil Loud.

One of every six papers submitted is chosen to be presented at the WEF annual conference. The paper was presented during a technical session on surface water

Karen Baja, Northville Township supervisor and WTUA vice chairwoman, represented the Board of Commissioners.

"The acceptance of the paper was an honor for WTUA," said Baja. "The response from water quality professionals was very interesting. The same problems that our three townships faced are being faced by people around the world. The questions asked following the paper presentation showed that people were very interested in how three townships were solving an environmental problem that affects not only the townships, but all of southeastern Michigan. The solution arrived at through WTUA can have world-

Munfakh said a representative of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency had requested a copy of the paper. "The EPA has been looking at the over-burdened sewer system in Wayne County, particularly as it affects the Great Lakes, the Detroit River and the Rouge River. I think they were impressed that someone is doing their part to help ease the problem," said Munfakh.

WTUA was established by the townships of Canton, Northville and Plymouth in 1986 to construct and operate a sewage disposal system, a solid waste management system and/or a water supply system. Construction on the project began in 1991.

New phone service introduced in community

Ameritech will bring Caller ID and two other advanced Custom Calling options to more than 30,000 customers in the Plymouth area. Nov. 1 was the starting date for the service.

Caller ID service delivers the telephone number of an incoming call to a display screen that users purchase separately.

"With Caller ID, you have information you need to decide how you want to handle your incoming calls," said Marcia Sayles, Ameritech public relations director.

"So if you're waiting for a call from your spouse, your boss or the family doctor, you can know immediately who's calling," Sayles

Caller ID service also can drastically reduce obscene, harassing and prank phone calls. "Requests to trace the source of unwanted calls have dropped by one-fourth since we introduced Caller ID to the Detroit metropolitan area," she said.

Ameritech annually receives more than 150,000 customer com-

Automatic Callback and Repeat Dialing also will be offered to Plymouth-area residents for the

■ Automatic Callback lets customers return a missed call, even if they don't know the phone number - for example, when they miss a call while mowing the lawn or when the phone rings as they're coming in the door with an armful of groceries; and

Repeat Dialing dials a busy number for up to 30 minutes, freeing the caller to wash the car, do the laundry - even talk on the phone to someone else until the other number if available.

Sayles said Caller ID, Automatic Callback and Repeat Dialing will be available to customers whose phone numbers begin with 416, 451, 453, 454, 455 and 459.

"We've been able to bring these services to customers faster than ever before - and at competitive prices - thanks to Michigan's new telecommunications law,"

Caller ID will be available for $6.50 a month. Automatic Callback and Repeat Dialing are $4 each. A one-time start-up charge of $7.50 per service is being waived for the first 60 days the service is available.

Ameritech can refer customers to a supplier of the display devices at the time they order the service; or customers can purchase the units at area retail stores. Purchase prices range from about $40 to $135. Units are modular and can be connected easily.

Aric Channing Trotter, 30, is serving his term in Jackson State Prison after being sentenced for trying to rape the 27-year-old woman in a field near Palmer and Venoy.

The woman had testified in a pretrial hearing that she was "beaten to a pulp" by Trotter and that he not only tried to rape her, but warned her not to worry about AIDS because she "was going to die anyway.

The badly bruised woman said she fought off Trotter by kicking him, biting his hand, scratching his face and screaming. The 1:30 a.m. attack on Aug. 8 came after they left a party, on the pretense that Trotter would give her a ride to a nearby store.

Trustees say WRC serves men too

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW STAFF WRITER

Should Schoolcraft College's Women's Resource Center be more properly named the Student Resource Center?

College trustees Harry Greenleaf and Steve Ragan think that perhaps the center should be renamed to reflect the fact that its mission includes men, too.

"We should not discriminate," Greenleaf said at a board meeting last week. "There are a lot of people out there who find themselves displaced."

Greenleaf said he still supports the center but believes it should eventually grow beyond tailoring services to women only.

Center director Nancy Swanborg, who made a presentation to the board of trustees at its last meeting, said that changing the center's name would drive women

"There would be many women who would feel this isn't a place for them," she said. "Many women would eliminate themselves from this kind of resource."

Ragan, who chairs the Schoolcraft board of trustees, said the name Women's Resource Center gives the impression that "this is kind of a place where men aren't

The center provides emotional and financial support to women who unexpectedly find themselves on their own again in middle age and must earn a living.

The center has a paid staff of seven, 45 active volunteers and an annual budget of $256,000. Since 1987, 158 women who used the center's "Displaced Homemaker Program" have gotten jobs.

Greenleaf and Ragan argue that, even though the need to provide women with help in college remains, there are now a lot of men who could use help, too.

"There are so many displaced workers now," Ragan said, "people who never expected to find themselves out of work. Maybe the college needs to have a more expansive vision.'

Trustees Mary Breen and Patricia Watson agreed that Greenleaf has a good point, but they're not ready to change the center's name, either.

"I don't know what the answer is," Breen said. "For many years women had the problem of being displaced and having no place to go. Maybe we need an outlet for men as well.'

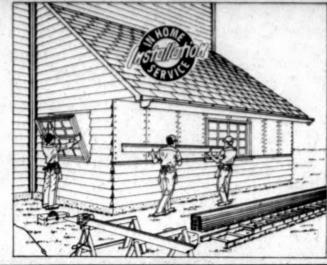

Watson said Greenleaf has "a good point, (but) I would be concerned if we lose some of the women we service now. You wouldn't want to alienate the

It might be a good idea, Watson said, for the center to add some programs that would appeal almost exclusively to men.

Trustee Richard DeVries said everybody should have a resource center of his own. "I guess I'd like to have a men's resource center, retirees resource center and students resource center (in addition to the Women's Resource Center)," he said.

But DeVries concedes there's probably not enough money to have that many centers

Wayne County Park System will present a Festival of Lights on Hines Drive, the longest drivethrough light show in Michigan, Monday, Nov. 22 to Sunday, Jan.

The four-mile drive will feature gigantic displays of animated toys, a North Pole village, snowmen, larger-than life skiers and ice skaters, a Loch Ness monster and many other winter and holiday items.

The event is a fund-raiser for the parks system. A donation of $5 per car is requested.

The light show will be on display 7-10 p.m. seven nights a week (closed on Dec. 25).

At 6:30 p.m. Hines Drive will be closed to through traffic. Festival of Lights traffic will enter Hines Drive at Merriman Road and proceed one-way past displays to exit at Outer Drive or Warren Avenue.

"This premier holiday light show will be the biggest and most brilliant in the Detroit metro area," said Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara. "It also marks the beginning of several exciting events that will celebrate the 75th anniversary of our unique and historic Wayne County Park System."

Local community groups will share in the fund-raising by helping with traffic control, staffing a refreshment stand, a small Christmas store and a Christmas tree lot.

Holiday decorations

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1993

wo local branches of the Women's National Farm and Garden Association are creating their annual holiday decorations and planning other holiday-related activities

The Lake Pointe Village and Trailwood branches of the association are creating authentic Victorian Christmas decorations this week at the Plymouth Historic Museum to serve as a backdrop to the display of Dr. Weldon Petz's Santa Claus col-

Also this holiday season, garden club members will show how they create Christmas decorations at a holiday tea Saturday, Nov. 20.

On Thursday, Dec. 9, the clubs hold an annual evening potluck dinner and fund-raiser for the Plymouth Salvation Army. The dinner is followed by a silent auction and canned good collection.

For more information, call Lake Pointe Village branch president Sarah Overs at 420-2912.

Post office plan gets Ford's vote

■ The move to get a full service post office for Canton gained strength this week when U.S. Rep. Bill Ford, who represents the district, took up the cause. Post office supporters say one is needed because Canton is growning.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI STAFF WRITER

U.S. Rep. Bill Ford says he's doing what he can to help bring a full-service post office to Canton Township.

"I've been doing what I can on my end for several years," said Ford, D-Ypsilanti, who met recently with Canton trustee Bob Shefferly and Township Supervisor Tom Yack, as well as Vernita Martin, district manager, Detroit postal district, and Lloyd Wesley, manager of postal operations, Detroit district.

Shefferly, co-chairman of the township's Essential Services Committee, and Yack, also a committee co-chairman, have spearheaded an effort over the past few months to get a post office in the township - replacing the current finance branch in the Harvard Square shopping center at Ford and Sheldon roads.

Wesley, former Westland-Wayne-Canton postmaster, said postal officials are studying the issue.

The desire for a full-service post office in Canton is not new, Wesley said. "In 1986-87-88 and 1989, we were sending in letters asking for studies. Now that I'm on this end, we are initiating letters a little quicker."

Ford said he told the committee to begin looking for township-owned land on which a post office could be

'We're nudging them in a direction that seems most practical," Ford said, referring to postal officials.

While study of the request continues, Essential Services Committee members are continuing with their petitioning effort. More than 1,700 signatures have been gathered from residents supporting a full-service facility in Canton. The effort will continue through the end of November, at which time the petitions will be forwarded to Ford. Residents may sign the petition by stopping at the receptionist's desk on the first floor of Canton Township hall, 1150 S. Canton Center Road.

The committee, which is working to get what it considers essential services into Canton Township, also has received letters of support from U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle, state Sen. Robert Geake, and state Rep. Deborah Why-

The postal service, like a corporation, will look to expand an existing facility rather than build a new one, Ford said.

Meanwhile, the committee is still working to have the finance branch in Harvard Square moved to another location within the shopping center, where more room and more accessible parking could be provided.

Committee members have argued that the township needs a full-service facility to serve a growing population.

Committee members have argued that the finance center doesn't provide enough service to keep pace with growing demands.

Ford predicts victory for health care plan

BY LEONARD POGER STAFF WRITER

U.S. Rep. William Ford, D-Taylor, in Congress for nearly 29 years, made a big hit with local high school government students Saturday morning.

As a class assignment, students from Livonia Churchill and Garden City high schools were among 150 people who attended the first local "Breakfast with Bill" program, being held throughout Ford's congressional district, which includes the Plymouth-Canton community. A Ford staffer said the sessions are held in each of the communities in Ford's district.

Jennifer Pastula, a Garden City High student in Richard Popp's political science class, said she got a lot out of the 90-minute program, held at Garden City's Maplewood Community Center.

'I agreed with most of what he said," but there were some issues that were unclear.

Pastula added that she enjoyed the program "even though I had to get up early" to attend. Accompanying her were Popp

Christine Novak, Mike Fisher and Dana Walker, as well as juniors Rhonda Pietrekya and Kelly

Echoing Pastula's comments in general were Churchill students of government teacher Richard Zyzinsky. They were seniors Jeanine Niemiec, Jennifer Jenkins, Melissa Sochacki, Carol Karoub and Mary Beeton, and junior Jennifer Paczas.

The program was hosted by the Garden City Democratic Club.

Of the current debate on national health-care legislation, Ford said the issue is equivalent to the "World Series of a political career.

Ford predicted that President Clinton's proposals will be adopted by Congress "because they are so complicated.'

He pointed out that in the early 1970s, then-President Nixon proposed a simple health-insurance plan, which would have had employers pay 75 percent of the cost, but "not even Nixon could sell it to business.'

Ford added that he is chairman lowed a public school education.

of the one of the three House committees (labor-education) which will review the president's healthcare proposals.

Clinton insists that any healthcare legislation have universal coverage or he won't sign it, Ford

Ford talked about other issues facing Congress.

He reiterated past positions as being opposed to the North Amercan Free Trade Agreement, being in favor of universal health coverage, and being opposed to the government getting into the abortion controversy.

He also took issue with a question about Congress mandating that local governments and school districts take certain actions but not providing the money to pay for the mandates.

Ford defended the mandates, citing the health problems of asbestos in public schools and lead in drinking water, and legislation covering civil rights and minimum wages

Ford said the state constitution requires that all students be alBut handicapped pupils were not included until federal legislation was enacted in the 1970s, he said.

On NAFTA, Ford said the "supreme insult" is that the president of Mexico threatened to flood the U.S. with illegal immigrants.

He predicted that if the agreement now before Congress is approved, General Motors may move production work to Mexico, but he doesn't expect Ford Motor Co. to follow suit.

He also questioned if there would be any major benefit for the U.S. under the agreement since American workers generally earn 10 times as much as their Mexican counterparts.

Ford noted the changing demographics of his congressional district, saying that there were no colleges or universities within its boundaries when he joined the House in early 1965. Now, his district includes eight institutions of higher education, including the University of Michigan, Eastern Michigan University and several community colleges.

School battle

Vorva, schools should seek truce

he Plymouth Canton school board is headed in the wrong direction in asking local residents to call and complain to Gov. John Engler about his school financing plan.

The tack is naive at best, and could eventually backfire on the schools. At issue is the $6 million in funding that the Plymouth Canton schools stands to lose under Engler's plan.

School board members must understand that Engler and the state Legislature have a mandate to cut property taxes in the state. And standing up to complain merely labels them as malcontents.

If board members are serious about their mission of getting enough money to educate children, they should work within the system instead of against it.

The board should work with local legislators to be on the inside of the process, not on the outside shouting threats. But that's difficult these days, especially with the breach between the educational community and State Rep. Jerry Vorva, R-Plymouth.

Vorva's opposition to a 40-mill property tax on the August ballot, its defeat and confrontations with teachers made him less than popular with local school people. Also, Vorva recently told one school type in Lansing that the educator reminded Vorva of the rear end of a horse.

Such comments sum up the antagonistic relationship between the schools and Vorva.

But while Vorva has been less than temperate with his comments, the school board has done little to establish a relationship with him or state Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton.

■ The board should work with local legislators to be on the inside of the process, not on the outside shouting threats. But that's difficult these days, especially with the breach between the educational community and State Rep. Jerry Vorva, R-Plymouth.

Nearly one year after Vorva was in office, school officials barely knew the man and were asking reporters to describe Vorva. That indicates the school board has done little to work

It's time to remedy this stand off. The school board should learn to work with both Vorva and Whyman so that the schools can have some impact on the new Engler package.

And it's time for Vorya to tone down his confrontational style with the schools. Vorva makes some good points when it comes to school spending and funding, and they shouldn't be lost in the battle.

The Plymouth Canton schools should get involved in the process instead of sitting on the sidelines and shouting at Engler. The district has two Republican state representatives who should have some clout with a Republican gov-son, you must now do so as well. There's more - and it won't be easy.

The ongoing battle for greater suburban control over the city's water system rages on. And the new mayor has more than enough other issues to keep him occupied with safe streets and new business and job opportunities at the top of the list.

Yet the hardest issues will be decided not across the conference table but in our homes, our schools, our shops.

Archer's election, coupled with and the already blooming renaissance of Detroit's entertainment district, should bring more suburbanites downtown.

But are we ready to really welcome Detroiters into our communities, our shopping malls, our parks and our downtowns?

As a member in the Fiegel PTO, and one of many parents and staff that strongly support this idea - I felt you used a very negative slant in your headline and intro.

How can you ignore the fact that the kids are still just as excited about making scarecrows, playing games and having fun as they will also be when they still get to dress up on Sunday for Halloween?

A school and principal that steers my child in the direction of peacemaker certainly gets my vote for "angel" rather than "witch.

Debbie Kopacz, Canton

Community decision

n regard to the Fiegel School Harvest Festival situation, this decision was not made by our principal, Mrs. Young, alone. It was a community decision endorsed by parents, teachers and the principal. For the five years we have been a part of Fiegel, non-gory, non-violent, wholesome costumes have been requested for Halloween. Inevitably, some did not comply. Not wanting to condone violent costumes, nor to condemn those who may choose to wear them, the dressup part of the party was simply dropped. Plenty of "party" still went on at Fiegel, with pumpkin painting, pizza making and straw scarecrow creations, just to name a few activities. And yes, there were lots of goodies to enjoy. In short, a busy, fun-filled party day at school.

POINTS OF VIEW

Engler shifts taxes, responsibility for schools

hat," asked the TV interviewer, "does Gov. John Engler really want to accomplish with his school reform program?"

It was unusual for a newsman like me to be answering questions for a half-hour. But the property tax cut, replacement taxes and school reform have been occupying my daytime working hours, my evening reading hours and my dreams (nightmares) for four months. I was prepared.

First, Engler wants to cut the cost of government.

In his campaign, he argued in effect that Michigan has Chivas Regal tastes and beer income. He sees high governmental costs as a burden on business. Like dear ol' daddy's whiskers, government is always in the way. His view is similar to classical economist Adam Smith ("Wealth of Nations").

He is diametrically opposed to Alexander Hamilton and former Gov. Jim Blanchard, who saw government as a tool for economic growth, not an impediment.

On paper, Engler's method of school finance would cost $300 million less than the current system. "Promises made, promises kept."

Second, Engler wants to shift the cost of paying for schools from local districts to the state.

He is 100 percent correct in pursuing this goal. Michigan's Constitution, a document too few of us read, makes a free public education a constitutional right. It also says establishing and paying for public schools are duties of the Legislature. There is no such thing as "local control" over schools — local districts are mere creatures of the state. There is no such thing as "parental control" — that's an invention by ideological right-wingers.

TIM RICHARD

Along the way, Engler set up another goal that was entirely within Michigan's constitutional tradition. He sought to wean counties, cities, townships and villages from the $1 billion nipple of revenue sharing. He proposed to give them new taxing tools that they would wield themselves.

Politics being politics, Engler, alas, had to modify the idea drastically. Third, Engler wants to trim the power of the Michigan Education Association and other unions.

In my interview with him last winter, he accused our suburban school boards of being entirely too lavish with double-digit pay increases. He wants a union-free environment for charter schools. He wants teachers' union membership to be voluntary. He wants school boards to be free to buy healthcare benefits from someone other than Personally, I think the MEA has been getting a dirty rap from Forbes magazine, Mackinac Center (which reprinted the Forbes attack and circulated it to every paper in the state) and many critics. But MEA leaders are an integral part of the Democratic Party. MEA is no friend of John Engler's, even though a hefty minority of MEA members vote Republican. So MEA must be prepared to take its knocks.

Fourth, Engler wants to placate the religious right within the Michigan GOP.

That's where his public school bashing comes in. The religious right's candidates got 45 percent of the vote against Engler's picks at the 1992 state GOP convention. It now controls many county and district organizations. Engler would rather deal than fight 'em.

es, it is about time we have a principal with some ability to be different. I think it is wonderful that Barbara Young has changed a day that is nothing more than the glorification of all the disgusting characters out today. How sad it was when I first went to a school Halloween parade only to see kindergartners and grade schoolers dressed up as Freddy Kruger, Jason and other sick characters.

Thank you Barbara for standing up for something good.

We just didn't know where or what it was. She was tested left and right in public school and obviously they couldn't pinpoint it either.

Knowing that our niece had a learning disability, we decided to have our daughter re-evaluated outside of school. She had difficulty with letters and reading. She has been in speech and language since she was 2½ years old.

We took our daughter to the Michigan Dyslexia Institute of Metro Detroit (in West Bloomfield). She went through five hours of testing, and that's how we found out that she was dyslexic. We started with remediation right away. This was started last year, in 1992. Her tutor's name is Liz Lakritz. Our daughter was very receptive with Liz. If it weren't for Liz, our daughter would be further into her shell.

If you could see our daughter today, you would be amazed. She is now reading and understanding much better. Her self-esteem has greatly improved. She has more confidence in herself. Liz has done a fantastic job.

Our daughter has received an award in second grade for the most books read (25). She has no trouble with numbers at all. She definitely has come a long way.

We do have our daughter on Ritalin. She has been on it for one year and tremendous results have occurred. She has even noticed it in herself. It helps her keep focused on just about everything she does. She takes it twice a day. There has been no adverse reaction to this medication at all. She is under medical care with her pediatrician, Dr. Obudzinski.

Legislators opt for chaos over revising school plan

hen the state Legislature passed and Gov. John Engler signed the famous Senate Bill 1 eliminating property taxes as the 1994 funding base for Michigan schools, most folks reacted with a mixture of hope and alarm.

They hoped the political establishment, facing financial meltdown at the certain loss of nearly $7 billion in revenue, would be forced at long last to do something far-reaching about both finance (inequitable) and quality (poor).

They were alarmed that a combination of special interests, ideological bickering and partisan positioning would make it impossible to get anything sensible and coherent adopted before chaos sets in.

Chaos in this case is scheduled to descend near year end. In order to put a sales tax proposal on the ballot in February 1994, legislative agreement must be reached some time this December. Otherwise, school districts will begin running out of money next March because they can't borrow against the July 1994 property tax revenue that SB 1 eliminated.

With fewer than 60 days to go before the Dec. 31 deadline, alarm is gaining ground on hope.

Best evidence: Last week the special Senate committee working on school finances threw up its hands and adjourned, unable to agree on anything.

Conservative Republicans, infuriated that Engler's plan doesn't include a big tax cut—their reflexive cure for whatever ails the body politic, are sitting on their hands.

Legislative Democrats, under pressure from the teachers unions, are pretending — against overwhelming evidence that spending on schools has increased enormously with little corresponding gain in achievement — that nothing's basically wrong with the system.

The two people most responsible for bringing things to this situation — Gov. Engler and Debbie Stabenow, a Democratic senator and candidate for governor — have produced nearly identical funding proposals.

PHILIP POWER

Both would provide all school districts with an identical per-pupil base grant, to be funded by a mix of property, sales, income and nuisance taxes. Perversely, the governor's proposal would most increase funding for rural school districts whose students are doing relatively well in the MEAP test and shortchange urban districts where children are performing poorly.

To top it off, there are signs that Engler's reelection team has polling data showing voters in wealthy districts in Oakland County — Birmingham, West Bloomfield, Troy — don't much like what the governor proposes to do to their locally supported schools.

Readers with long memories will recollect that Proposal A, the 2 percent sales tax rate hike, was defeated last June by precisely such suburban voters. They also will remember that it was by running well in precisely such suburban districts that Engler won his upset victory for governor three years ago.

These voters are the folks who for years have been willing to pay the taxes required to sustain the quality of their schools. They don't understand why their schools and their children now should be put at risk by the political system.

And I don't blame them one bit.

Engler's charter school plan in peril

BY TIM RICHARD STAFF WRITER

Gov. John Engler and state Senate Republicans are in deep trouble with their "charter" and 'choice" school reform plans.

Trouble spots: ■ Two Republican senators Tuesday refused to support the bills, and a third tugged at the party reins for hours.

■ Democrats won't give the GOP any votes toward the two-thirds majority (26) needed to put any tax reform plan on the ballot unless the GOP tones down the "charter" and "choice" plans.

"There will come a time when you'll need us, but the wheels will be off the buggy," Democrat Jack Faxon of Farmington Hills warned Republicans, who hold a 22 to 16 paper majority.

'We're not going to vote to fund something we don't agree with," said Sen. Debbie Stabenow of Lansing, a Democratic gubernatorial candidate. "You want to dismantle public education.

"I asked a bipartisan working group that would sit down quietly and not observe the Open Meetings Act to discuss what direction we'd go," said Democrat Lana Pollack of Ann Arbor. She praised David Honigman of West Bloomfield as the only Republican willing to negotiate.

Union tactic

Republicans barely got the 20 votes they needed to pass the charter schools, schools of choice, teacher tenure and teacher bargaining bills Engler wants.

Two Republicans jumped ship maverick Fred Dillingham of Fowlerville, who said the charter school plan should be tried first on a pilot basis, and arch conservative Doug Carl of Utica, who didn't want charter schools to be covered by "outcomes-based education." Both voted no. In addition, freshman Sen. Phil Hoffman, R-Jackson, voted against the "choice" plan, sending it to defeat on the first try. Embarrassed GOP leaders called a caucus late in the afternoon and worked on him for two hours before Hoffman, known to be friendly to unions, switched to a yes

Meanwhile, Senate Democrats are using a union collective bargaining tactic - nothing, not even minor bills, will be agreed to until the entire package of school bills is agreed to.

Republicans can pass the quality bills Engler wants in the Senate by using party muscle. But placing on the ballot a constitutional amendment raising the state tax limit and sales tax rate will require 26 votes. So at least four Democrats - and maybe six or seven - must support that measure (Senate Joint Resolution

"If you want to do the quality votes by yourself, you're going to have to do the tax votes by yourself." warned Senate Democratic floor leader John Cherry of Clio.

The Democrats' message: No 26 votes for the finance package unless the "charter" and "choice"

"Ultimately," Cherry continued, "we're going to turn over the process to the House by (Republicans) jamming this package through because they (House leaders) are going to reach a compromise.

He referred to last week's deal between the co-chairmen of the House Education Committee -Democrat William Keith of Garden City and Republican William Bryant of Grosse Pointe - to junk the charter school idea in favor of less radical public school "academies.

Tie bar rejected

On a straight party line vote, Democrats lost an effort to "tie bar" the quality bills to SJR S, the constitutional amendment.

The most controversial measure (Senate Bill 896) would allow charter schools - special schools chartered by public agencies, receiving state money but not subject to the teacher tenure and collective bargaining laws.

All local senators voted with their parties.

Republican Dillingham, who has repeatedly broken party lines this year, said he favors the charter idea, "but it should be tried on a limited, pilot project basis. We run the risk of increasing the cost of public education dramatically" if many of the 200,000 pupils in private schools shift to public charter schools.

Gubernatorial hopeful Stabenow called charter schools "a Committee, which is working on backdoor way to fund private its own versions.

schools. It allows any state agency or person to set up something called a charter school. It treats students as customers.

A second bill (SB 872) would exempt charter schools from teacher tenure laws. Faxon called it "clothing for the corpse," predicting charter schools never will become law. Dillingham ob-jected that the bill "sets up a twotiered system" for teachers.

SB 878 prescribes separate collective bargaining units for charter school teachers.

Faxon fired a long list of objections at the choice bill, a lengthy amendment to the 1976 school

"I'm appalled at the suddenness and immediacy of the changes.

 His suburban districts will be saddled with new administrative costs but get just 1 percent more revenue.

■ Teacher certification rules are eased. "For the first time since we started certifying teachers at the normal schools in the 19th Century, we're permitting decertification — unprofessionalizing. It's a cynical approach to education." The role of school building committees is unclear - "a profusion of confusion. Who represents the people? The elected school board? The committee? Who knows?"

The five Senate bills will be referred to the House Education

Stevenson's late goal beats Salem

BY DAN O'MEARA STAFF WRITER

Nick Deren is a big-play forward for the Livonia Stevenson soccer team, but his game-winning goal Wednesday will be hard for even him

With the score tied 2-2, Deren's header with a minute remaining gave the Spartans a 3-2 win over Plymouth Salem in a Class A regional game at Ann Arbor Pioneer.

Stevenson (16-1-3) will play Pioneer (16-1-2) for the championship at 7 p.m. Saturday. Salem finishes with a 12-7-2 record.

The Spartans moved the ball up the left side on the counter attack, and Craig Wimmer crossed it to Deren from the corner. Deren touched the ball lightly and tapped it over the head of Salem keeper Paul Dood. "I've been slumping; I needed that," said Deren, who was scoreless in the last two games. "I've never played so bad and been so lucky. I knew I couldn't be stopped three games in a row.

"I've been setting guys up instead of finishing. I got a chance to finish tonight, and I banged it home. I tried to finesse it because (Dood) saw the cross and was out of position.'

Stevenson took a 2-1 lead at 14:01 in the second half when Scott Sersen converted a penalty kick after Steve Williford was taken down in the far left side of the box. "I thought they got all the breaks,"

Salem coach Ken Johnson said, adding he thinks Stevenson will get to the state final. "I thought the penalty was a bad call. The boys said he was outside, and he wasn't going to shoot.

"If they don't have the penalty, we would have been leading 2-1 in the last minute. It's a shame one like that is going to cost you the game.

Salem tied 2-2 when Doug Herriman scored his second goal with another assist from Scot Buczek. Herriman drilled the rebound after Stevenson keeper Mo Lanspeary failed to hold Buczek's shot at 7:10. "Salem played a very tough game," Deren said. "We expected that because we beat them the last time and knew they wanted revenge. We pulled it out in the nick of time. This was our toughest game all year.'

Deren assisted on the first Stevenson goal, centering the ball for Artie Knack nine minutes into the game. Herriman's header off a corner kick tied it at 17:05 in the first half.

"In the first half, we were overanxious, kicked the ball and didn't play under control," Stevenson coach Walt Barrett said. "By not being under control, that gave Salem the edge.

"In the second half, we loaded the field with skilled players and, amazingly despite a strong wind at our back, carried most of the play.

'We used nearly our entire bench, and it really helped the morale of the team and sparked us emotionally. This was a classic Stevenson victory, because it took everyone we had, it was done with a lot of heart and we never quit."

Canton girls win regional, ready for run at state title

Plymouth Canton hopes to prove the pollsters right and support its No. 1 ranking with a state championship in girls cross country Saturday

The Chiefs, who won the Class A regional at Marshbank Park last week, will attempt to win their first state title at Saskatoon Golf Course in Ada. The girls race begins at 12:30 p.m.

Canton makes its first trip to the state meet since 1989 when it finished 12th. The Chiefs were ninth in '88 and 11th in '87.

'To win the state, everybody is going to have to contribute and run their best race of the year," Canton coach George Przygodski

"Our kids feel like they've been backs, but they've been doing that all year and they're pretty much accustomed to that role

"We're just looking forward to getting the race here; we've been doing that for a number of weeks now. I think they feel the pressure of being rated No. 1 and now is the time to finally prove it.'

Canton's top runner in the re-

Junior Kathleen Landelius placed 14th (20:28), freshman Becky Wolfrom 24th (20:51), freshman Beth Knight 29th (21:14), junior Meghan Barresi 74th (22:45) and junior Tracey Cavin 75th (22:46).

"I think due to the (cold) weather and conditions of the course (wet and muddy), fast times weren't going to be an issue," Przygodski said. "It would be a matter of getting down to racing. On that account, our girls raced very well.

"It was a typical late fall race running with a bullseye on their day, and everybody was running to continue their seasons. We were in a no-win situation. Everybody else was coming out to qualify, and we were expected to win. Our kids came through and did

While McWilliams ran a fine race to lead the Chiefs, Przygodski emphasized the team victory and the contributions of Wolfrom gional Saturday was junior Laura and Knight in the Nos. 4 and 5

"They did a good job of running n their spots and securing the victory for us," he said. "It seems the kids up front get all the glory, but you're only as good as your fourth and fifth runners, and we're fortunate to have two talented runners like Becky and Beth.

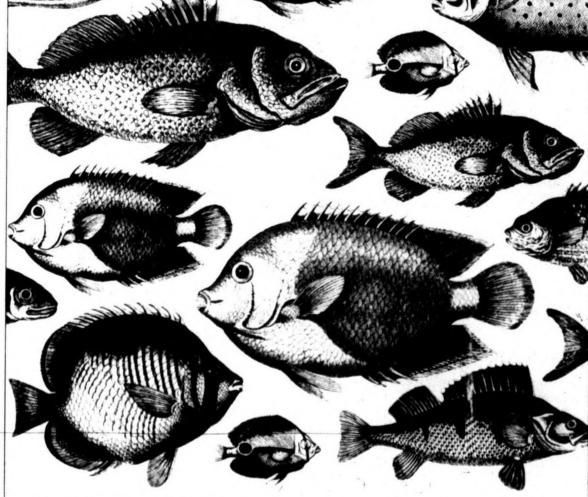

The Chiefs, with the best team the school has ever had, won all six invitationals and the Western Lakes Activities Association championship. Now the ultimate goal awaits them.

"To be successful, our frontrunners are going to have to be that in this race," Przygodski said. "We'll have to be solid in the middle, and our fourth and fifth runners will have to come through and finish it up. I think we've got five people who can do

SC goal: 7th title in region

Tom Teeters is known for being a bit paranoid, so hearing him speak disparagingly of his Schoolcraft College volleyball team's chances to capture a sixth-consecutive NJCAA Region 12 title is expected.

Unfortunately for the Lady Ocelots, it may also be accu-

SC hosts the 17-team regional tournament, which starts at 5 p.m. today and continues through Saturday. That, and their past history of success. may be the Ocelots only advantages.

They enter the tournament as the No. 8 seed. Top billing goes to Southwestern College; Henry Ford CC is No. 2, followed by Muskegon, Mott, Vincennes (Ind.), Lakeland (Ohio), Kellogg and SC. Other participants: Sinclair (Ohio), Cuyahoga (Ohio), Lake Michigan, Macomb, Kalamazoo Valley, Lansing, Oakland CC, Clark State (Ohio) and Delta.

The Ocelots open their defense at 6 p.m. today against Lake Michigan. Should they win, their second-round match (11 a.m. Friday) would probably be against top-seeded Southwestern.

The opening match of the double-elimination tournament is at 5 p.m. today, between Cuyahoga and Sinclair. The winner advances to play Southwestern at 7:30 p.m.

For SC to succeed, Teeters said "our defense has to be much more consistent. That word - consistent - keeps coming up. That's the key. For us to win, we have to be consistent.

S'craft men optimistic about title chances

If there was ever a time to be optimistic regarding Schoolcraft College's men's soccer team, this

The Ocelots boast their best team ever, at least since Van Dimitriou was named head coach in 1983. They take an unbeaten record (18-0-1) and a No. 5-ranking in the NJCAA with them to this weekend's Inter-regional Tournament, hosted by McHenry County College in Crystal Lake, SC also has the easiest draw in the four-team tourney. College of DuPage (Chicago), ranked eighth in the NJCAA, takes on 10thranked Lewis and Clark (St. Louis) at 11 a.m. (CST) Saturday. The Ocelots play unranked Bethany Lutheran College (Minneapolis), a team that has never beaten them in three tries, at 1 p.m. (CST) Saturday.

The championship match will be at noon (CST) Sunday.

Everything points favorably to a trip to the NJCAA Tournament Nov. 18-21 in Trenton, N.J. But not so fast - the Ocelots have been in this position (although not so strongly) before and disappointed.

Reasons for prior failures vary, from poor offensive performances to poor officiating. Such excuses cannot psychologically affect the Ocelots if they are to succeed, but they should not be ignored, either.

"I told the boys, 'In big games, how many goals did we score?' warned Dimitriou. "There's no question we score a lot of goals, but we miss a lot of opportunities, too. In games like this, you won't get as many good opportunities, so we have to take advantage of them.

SC will be aided by its offensive diversity, however; Dimitriou could not recall any of his previous players scoring 20 goals in a season. This year he had two -Fadi Bazzi (27) and Matt Lividini (25), and another, Vince Troiani, netted 17.

But as any playoff-bound team will attest, defense makes the difference, and in the past that is where SC has been lacking. Dimitriou's attacking, pressure-style of play can leave defensive holes that opponents can exploit. SC's top marking defenders, Bill Lanspeary and Tim McCarley, as well as stopper Matt Lee and sweeper Billy Joker, will be tested.

Dimitriou is confident in his defense. "I know for a fact that our defense will keep us in the game," he said, noting his team's 102-6 scoring advantage this season. "How well we finish our opportunities will be the key factor.'

SC hosted DuPage earlier this eason and posted a 2-1 victory. What interested Dimitriou as much as his own team's win was DuPage's tie against Macomb the next day; DuPage's performance was much worse. If the Ocelots face DuPage in Sunday's final, Dimitriou is convinced his team's superior depth will be a factor.

Experience could help SC, too. Several starters — Lanspeary, Lividini, keeper Matt Stabile, midfielders Tim Lampi and Andy Cosenza - played in the Inter-regional last year. More importantly, Joker was part of the '90 team that won and made the only trip a Dimitriou-coached SC team ever made to the NJCAA Tournament. Lampi has an ankle injury which could keep him out. Joe Perron has proved to be a suitable replacement, however.

"The guys are absolutely focused," said Dimitriou. "No ifs, ands or buts about it. Our opponent better be at full strength or we'll find their weakness and exploit it."

Ocelots maintain hope entering women's tourney

BY C.J. RISAK STAFF WRITER

There's just one goal Schoolcraft College women's soccer coach Nick O'Shea would like for his team to accomplish this season: Finish with a record better than .500.

Do that, and all the other problems would melt away. Of course. should the Lady Ocelots manage it, they would be NJCAA champi-

It may sound far-fetched, considering SC's 4-6-3 final regularseason record. But O'Shea doesn't believe a four-game winning streak - which would have to start at 1 p.m. Saturday, when the Ocelots host Central College of Kansas in an inter-regional match - is unthinkable.

"The junior college competition is not that awesome this year," said O'Shea, whose 1987 team captured the NJCAA title. "It's less than average, strengthwise.

"I don't know if we're that far away. We played the best teams evenly.

The teams expected to contend for the title are Monroe (N.Y.) CC, which SC tied in the first weekend of the season, and Florissant Valley (St. Louis) CC, which defeated the Ocelots 2-0 at midseason.

Of course, the road must start against Central College Saturday. SC has played Central twice and won both: 3-0 in an inter-regional playoff two years ago and 4-1 in a regular-season match last season. O'Shea is confident of success once again.

But his own team concerns him as much as the opponent. The Ocelots' inability to play with the confidence of a winner has been a major flaw.

"I still don't have any leaders," said O'Shea. "There's still no take-charge person on the field. When I tell them what the problem is, it creates doubt in them.'

And that shows in their performance. It also makes it easy to define what the Ocelots need to succeed.

"We need two things to do well," said O'Shea. "Get one and we could still do well.

"We need a leader, a takecharge person or group of people. If we get that, it could make a difference. Then if things start to go wrong on the field, there would be someone to help maintain (our poise).

drive, get a bit selfish. Ask any good coach and he'll tell you any good goal-scorer is selfish. We've got a team of Miss Congenialities up there.'

O'Shea has attempted to address the confidence problem by simplifying his practices. "All season, I've been trying to get them to think better," he said. "If you think better and faster, you'll play better. "But we're getting away from that now. We're simplifying things, doing some straightforward stuff in practices - more running and less scrimmaging."

The hope is that some of what was learned in the earlier "thinkbetter" sessions will be retained and have a positive effect. That could make a difference, if the Ocelots can make O'Shea's theories work.

NOTES:One bit of welcome news for the Ocelots - starting keeper Jenny Emmett has resumed practicing and will start against Central College. Emmatt suffered a cracked collarbone Oct. 3 in the loss to Florissant Valley CC.

Glenn linemen to play key role against Adrian

BY BRAD EMONS STAFF WRITER

It's time the guys in the trenches stand up and take a bow at Westland John Glenn.

Where would the Rockets be without their front seven?

Probably not in the Class AA-Region II playoffs, which begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Glenn. The Rockets (8-1), making their sixth post-season appearance under coach Chuck Gordon, take on Adrian (7-2) in a pre-regional matchup.

"It all starts there," said Gordon of his seven blockers. "It's a special group that doesn't get much recognition.'

"We're going to have to run the ball at times and give protection for our quarterback (Brian Morrison). If this group has a great game, I think we have a chance to beat them.

The Rockets average 215 pounds per man on the line.

Seniors Bryan Besco (6-1, 195) and Mike Bint (6-3, 210) give Glenn a tough combination at tight end. Both also start at linebacker on defense.

"Mike's always been a big guy, and we look for big things from him," Gordon said. "He's starting to be a dominant blocker and is really coming only like a threeyear varsity player ought to be. He's also excelled at linebacker. He just makes things happen.

Bryan can play wherever you put him. He can run the counters and reverses and is an excellent receiver. He can do just about everything. He's a guy with excellent feet and a good blocker.'

Matt Schwartz (6-0, 240), a second-year starter, and Tom North (5-11, 240), have given Glenn solid play at the tackle slots. Both are seniors.

"Matt has been outstanding this year," Gordon said. "You can count on him every week. He's a good practice player.

"Tom has been a pleasant surprise. He's a competitor. He's a guy who plays hard and has a bit of a mean streak to go with it."

Glenn features a Mutt-and-Jeff combination at guard.

The team's biggest offensive lineman is senior Geoff Midowski (6-5, 250), while the smallest is junior Jim Lock (5-7, 175). "Geoff has been a solid player," Gordon said. "He's always been a big kid with tools, and now he's begun to get confidence.

Lock is very steady. We saw in the spring that he was a tough kid with good feet and balance.'

The key, however, is center Tony Tabone, a 5-11, 200-pound

"He's the biggest surprise of the group," said the Glenn coach. At one time he wasn't in the plans, but he's developed good work habits and made himself a player. He's the key. He's the one who gets the group going.'

Adrian scouting report

The Maples, who qualified as the fourth-place team in Region II, lost twice during the regular season (to Ann Arbor Huron and Pioneer).

Coach Al Romano features a wide-open offensive attack, led by quarterback Dave Ritz, a 6-1, 185pound senior.

"I'm impressed with him," Gordon said. "He's a veteran and an excellent passer. He can also run the option, but he's had an ankle problem and I think it slowed him. When he's healthy, he's quite a talent.'

Slot-backs Chad Bilkey (5-8, 160) and Jared Timko (5-9, 160) give Adrian a speedy combination. Fullback William Henagan, a 6-foot, 215-pound junior, provides hard-nosed running and blocking.

"They spread you all over the field and that creates a problem,' Gordon said.

On defense, Gordon said the Maples will give Glenn a number of different looks out of the 5-2 and 6-2 alignments. Senior linebacker Adam Lige (6-1, 220) is the team's standout.

What can Farmington Hills Harrison expect from the Dearborn Edsel Ford offense Saturday in a Class A regional football game? Just about anything.

The Thunderbirds use multiple offensive formations and ignore the conventional wisdom when it comes to calling plays. "We'll do anything from any set at any time from anywhere on the field," Edsel Ford coach Jack Bridges said. "We'll run a spread formation at the goal line; we'll throw a pass on fourth down from our own 20.

"People say 'What are you doing?' Why not throw the ball if you have confidence you can do it? 'That's not sound football.' If it gets the first down, it

The Hawks haven't faced a team that does so many different things since playing Allen Park two years ago in the Class BB playoffs.

"Split backs, unbalanced, slide formation, offset - you name it, they have it," Harrison coach John Herrington said. 'They use many sets and hope to confuse you.'

Edsel Ford is led by senior quarterback Brian Stone (6-0, 170). He has rushed and passed for 500 yards each, scored 11 touchdowns and passed for four more. Senior Mike Hazimeh (5-11, 198) is the top rusher with 613 yards and eight TDs.

We like to have the ball in his hands to run or throw," said Bridges of Stone. "Those two have been doing it most of the year for us, and I see no reason to change things now.

Junior Kevin Stone (6-2, 160) is the younger brother of the quarterback and the leading receiver with eight catches and four TDs. Senior tailback Ala Khoury (5-8, 162) is another running threat.

The T'birds are comparable with Harrison in size, averaging 204 on the offensive line instead of 250 like Birmingham Brother Rice. Senior tackle John Kemp (6-2, 243) is the top lineman.

"We've played a lot of teams that have been much bigger than us." Bridges said. "By comparison, Harrison isn't as big as teams we've played, but they're much quicker."

Rice used its size and strength to open holes for tailback Marcus Harvey, who had 190 yards and two TDs in Rice's 35-0 win.

"(Coach) Bob (Sutter) felt the defensive line played pretty well," Herrington said. "They did a decent job neutralizing backers were getting blocked, and we couldn't hang on to Marcus Harvey.

"Their size was a problem, but it wasn't just that. Marcus was running so hard, when we had people on him, we couldn't stop him.

What did Bridges tell his players Monday about Harrison in the wake of that defeat?

"I told them 'They're Farmington Harrison and they've won five state championships," he Edsel Ford has seven two-way players, including the Stones and Hazimeh in the defensive secondary. The others are linemen Tom Horvat (5-10, 170), Jim Muscat (5-9, 205) and Jake Gering (6-1, 180) and monster back Lee Grizzell (6-0, 172). The top tackler is linebacker Rob Mackenzie (5-9, 165).

"Sometimes you have to sell yourself out on defense, and our smaller kids have been doing that," Bridges said, adding Edsel Ford has not allowed more than 80 total yards in its past three games. "We have a lot of defensive backfield speed and sometimes that compensates for errors made up front.' Despite a long history of success, the T'birds are playing only their second playoff game. They lost to Detroit Henry Ford

9-7 in the first round in 1986. The T'birds won the Mega Conference White Division with a 6-0 record. Like the Hawks, they are 7-2 overall with both losses to playoff teams - Class AA Howell and Fordson.

"There were a lot of times we were 8-1 and 7-2 and didn't get in," said Bridges, who is 85-41 in 14 years. The T'birds used to play Fordson in the last game and a loss usually meant elimination. "That was before anyone realized there was a little disparity and decided to make AA and

"The fact we're in the playoffs I hope is satisfaction to the teams we had in the past and they come and enjoy it. I think we're playing for more than just this year's team.

Harrison fullback/linebacker Nick Williams, who didn't play against Rice because of an ankle injury, is expected to play. Twoway tackle Evan Jefferson suffered minor injuries in an auto accident and will miss one game.

In the past two games, Jason Granger was held to 54 yards and Joe Pesci completed 15 of 43 passes for 148 yards. Pesci attempted 21 passes against Rice and not 64 as reported Monday.

"We hope to establish the running game, so we can set up the passing game and not have to throw all the time," Herring-

Good deer hunters use rut to their advantage

weeks as the whitetail rut gets into full swing. Mature bucks have been leaving rubs and scrapes throughout the woods in recent weeks in anticipation of the annual mating season - referred to by hunters as "the rut." During this mating season both bucks and does will be excessively active as they roam the forests and woodlands in search of a prospective mate.

Smart hunters will use the rut to their advantage and spend as much time as possible in the woods.

The Michigan whitetail mates in the fall of the year so that fawns will be born in the spring when the weather is warm and food abundant. A mature whitetail doe goes into estrus - a cycle in which an egg is available for fertilization - for a 26-30 hour period. If the egg isn't fertilized during this period, the doe will go back into estrus in another 28 days - or early to mid-December. Some young does (last spring's fawns) will also go into estrus in December adding to this minirut.

Estrus, just like antler growth, bear hibernation, bird migration and most everything that occurs annually in nature, is triggered by diminishing or increasing hours of daylight. In Michigan, the rut occurs predictably in mid-November as the days grow shorter and the nights longer. The rut lasts, for the most part, about two to three weeks although bucks will display rutting-like antics in the weeks preceding the actual

Bucks become very aggressive during the rut. They will mark their territory and defend it against any intruding bucks. The biggest most mature bucks will do most of the mating. Fresh rubs and scrapes are sure signs that an eager buck is pres-

A rub is a very visible sign. Bucks remove the velvet from their antlers in late summer and early fall by rubbing them against branches and saplings. "Mating" or "sparring" rubs are made the same way prior to or during the rut, but usually in a much more aggressive manner.

These rubs act as a visible signs to alert other deer that a buck is tending an area. This activity also helps strengthen the buck incase he has an encounter with another mature male.

When this rubbing occurs the trees and branches are left scarred and bare of bark. Rubs are usually found one to three feet off the ground, depending on the size of the deer. Bigger bucks rub on big-

Scrapes are created when a buck paws an area of earth free of grass, leaves and sticks all the way down to the dirt. Scrapes are usually made beneath an overhanging branch, or lickingstick, which will be nipped or broken off near the end. Scrapes range in size from one to eight feet in diameter. An active scrape will have a strong odor and the dirt will be moist with urine. A fresh scrapes will also have a hoof print in the middle of it and tine (antler) marks scrapped through it which can help indicate the size of the buck using the scrape.

When an estrus doe finds a hot scrape she too will urinate in the scrape then hang around the area until the buck returns. Bucks will often leave a number of scrapes throughout a two to four mile range, depending on the number of deer in the area. He'll check these scrapes on a daily basis, usually approaching from downwind so he can tell with his nose if a doe is present.

If a savvy hunter can set-up, undetected, 20 to 30 yards downwind from an active scrape and sit tight he'll stand a good chance of intercepting a buck

The rut is under way. If you hunt with a bow and arrow get out of the house and into the woods. If you're waiting for the start of the Nov. 15 firearms season take a day out to scout now so you'll be ready for that rutting buck on opening day.

(Hunters and anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to: Outdoors, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, Mi. 48009. Fax information to 644-1314 or call Bill Parker Monday evenings at 901-2573.)

Leo leads CC runners into state meet

Sophomore Joe Leo finished third in the individual race Saturday as Redford Catholic Central qualified for the Class A state meet with a third-place finish at the Marshbank Park regional. Ann Arbor Pioneer and Huron took one-two with 27 and 87, respectively. CC had 95. Leo finished the course in 16:30 and his brother Mark Leo was 11th (17:04). Phil Camilleri was 24th (17:27), Matt Sroczynski took 26th (17:27), Jeremy Short, 31st (17:39), Brian Smith, 49th (18:08) and Mike Danic, 51st (18:12).

The Class A state meet is Saturday at Saskatoon Golf Course in Ada

'We qualified and that's the CC coach Tony main thing Magni said. "You've got to get there first. It's nicer to be second but our first goal was to qualify. Now we've got to focus on what to do Saturday.'

Smith was usually CC's third through fifth runner during the dual-meet season but he hasn't been able to shake a lingering cold and run at 100 percent the past few weeks, according to Mag-

"He should be running with Phil and Matt and hopefully by this Saturday he'll be 100 percent," Magni said. "He's one of our co-captains, and he's working hard to get better." Monroe and Ann Arbor Pioneer are the favorites to win the state

"Everyone says it'll be a twoteam race but you can't count out Milford Lakeland, Traverse City or Brighton," Magni said. "For us to be in that class we'd have to run our best meet, all five kids. ### Give Hawks credit

Harrison deserves a pat on the back and some sort of medal for doing what few public schools will do: Play Catholic League teams in the regular season.

In a ninth-week crossover the last two years, the Hawks have played the third-place team in the Central Division: DeLaSalle and Rice. By the way, why did Class AA Dearborn Fordson get the fourth-place team - Class BB Notre Dame this year - and Harrison the bigger schools?

Ironically, Harrison has much in common here with the parochial powers, especially Redford Catholic Central, which is why the Hawks had to take the crossover agreement.

All are victims of their own success. They're perceived as too powerful and too good, with the odds stacked in their favor. So nobody wants to schedule them.

Rice and CC are seen as having an unfair advantage, being able to draw players from wide areas. But Harrison? The Hawks have imposed limits even with open enrollment.

As strange as it seems, Harrison is a public school with a parochial image in football. Twelve playoff appearances and five state titles have a lot to do with it.

Southfield and West Bloomfield wanted off the schedule in the late '80s. That led to playing DePorres and Divine Child in season openers the last three vears.

Another suburban school asked to be let out of a contract, which forced Harrison to schedule Divine Child instead.

On the other hand, a ninth game with Standish-Sterling showed the Hawks playing just anybody was no good either. The result was Toledo Central Catholic (Hawks won 33-7 in 1991) and the Central Division teams in the season finale.

"Some years, you can beat teams like CC and Rice, but year in and year out it's going to be difficult." Herrington said. "In '91 we had the big team and were able to compete (winning 32-0 over Rice).

New, old opponent

ninth game next year, which will champs Divine Child and Debe a rematch of the 1990 state semifinal won by the Wildcats. Oxford has been a Class BB power ever since.

"We wanted to get into a stable situation, so we knew who we were going to play and could scout them right from the start," Herrington said. "We spent time scouting Notre Dame and De-LaSalle, because we thought Rice would be in the Catholic League playoffs.

"We like to play comparable schools - Class A schools of about 1,000 kids. Oxford is BB but they have an excellent program. We definitely want to play good teams."

Harrison has no first-game opponent for next year but has made overtures to Class AA Brighton, and Herrington would like to play teams from A schools like Lahser, Groves or Seaholm.

I'd like to see a North Farmington-Harrison game more often. They've played just once in the last seven years, but it's a natural rivalry waiting to happen. But the events of 1986 have prevented it. That year, both played for the WLAA championship and again the next week in the season finale.

CC deserved chance

Nobody is feeling sorry for Redford Catholic Central this week because the Shamrocks aren't in the Class AA playoffs. But let it be said here they should be playing another game.

For those who say 'Give someone else a chance; CC is in the playoffs all the time,' I say consider this: It's the same teams every year, not just CC.

Look at the first-round pairings. I see Fordson, Arthur Hill, Eisenhower, Muskegon, Troy, Brighton, Stevenson, John Glenn, Henry Ford and Adrian. Those schools have been in plenty.

The irony, of course, is that Henry Ford made it at 8-1 after losing 24-0 to CC in the first game and the Shamrocks didn't despite one loss.

Here's another strange twist of fate. Playing Class C Bishop Gallagher with four wins in the Prep Bowl hurt CC. The Lancers were in the game because they won a Harrison will play Oxford in the tiebreaker with AA Bracket triPorres. But 'Class BB Divine Child with four wins would have given CC the needed points.

CC has been in the playoffs five of the last six years, so it's not as if the deck is completely stacked against it. The Shamrocks did make it with a 7-2 record in 1990 (and won the state title).

But the situation this year does point up the problem CC faces: trouble getting games with suitable opponents (right class and good competition) and the state of the Catholic League.

Too big for league

It's my observation CC and Rice have outgrown the league in terms of their enrollment and quality of football talent.

They're big schools in a Class B-C league. Only DeLaSalle, Orchard Lake St. Mary's and De-Porres are any competition for them, but two of those schools don't provide the necessary and now all-important playoff points.

The Central Division and Double A aren't what they once were. Notre Dame and Detroit-Jesuit are B schools, and that affects the playoff situation, too.

Here's another stat: In the last 18 years (1976-93), the Central Division has won 16 league titles - 15 by either Rice or CC. In the preceding 17 years (1959-75), excluding 1971-72 when the league declared co-champions, the AA won 11 times with one tie.

There's no easy solution, except what one person suggested: Don't lose. I don't think either wants to leave the league and, if getting games is hard, try getting into a new league with comparable public schools.

A six-team league with Rice, CC, DeLaSalle and three Catholic schools in Toledo has been discussed. But that still leaves four open dates.

All three have scheduled public schools more aggressively and made the playoffs in years when they should have. But, for the above reasons, there's always a chance what happened this year will happen again.

The strength of its schedule combined with some lower-class opponents has made getting into the playoffs more difficult for CC than actually winning the playoffs.

Author ready to hit bookstores

Shelly Thacker of Redford will publish her latest novel, "Forever His," next month and will be making the rounds of bookstores during the holiday season to promote the book.

"Forever His," a historical romance novel with a science-fiction twist, is about a modern woman caught between centuries and captured by love when she's sent back in time to the Middle Ages.

The book will be published Nov. 15 and among the booksigning appearances will be:

11 a.m. to noon Saturday, Nov. 13, at The Books Connection, 19043 Middlebelt, Livonia, and 1-2 p.m. at The Books Connection, 29211 Southfield Road, Southfield; and,

■ 1-3 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 27, at B. Dalton, Westland Center, Warren at Wayne Road in West-

The heroine of the story, Celine Fontaine, is stunned to awaken on New Year's Day in the year 1300 and appalled to find herself married to a tall, dark, irksome knight by the name of Sir Gaston de Var-Gaston is equally annoyed as he wanted a docile bride who would fit into his plans for vengeance and justice, not this headstrong lady who turns his castle, his life, and his heart upside down. Celine at first feels infuriated by Gaston's macho medieval attitude and tyrannical ways but gradually discovers the gentle heart beneath his not-so-shiny armor and finds herself falling

Will Celine and Gaston be torn apart after only a few bitconquer mistrust, treachery and time itself to discover a love that spans the centuries? The answer is between the covers of "Forever His."

"A bookseller in Livonia said she loved it so much she wants to be buried with it when she dies," said Thacker. "Which has to be about the most unusual quote I've ever received."

Thacker's publisher, Avon Books, is so impressed with "Forever His" that it is moving Thacker up to its Romantic Treasure line next year where she will be published in the company of such romance writers as Anne Stuart and Stella Cameron. Thacker will make her Treasure debut with her fifth book, "Silver and Shadows," in September 1994. Thacker's first romance was

"Falcon on the Wind" in 1991. "Midnight Rider," published in 1992, was one of eight finalists for the Romance Writers of America award for best historical romance of the year.

A fulltime freelancer since 1986, Thacker has written articles for Country Living, Entrepreneur, Writer's Digest, American Bookseller, and Romance Writers' Report among other magazines.

When not at her computer, Thacker can be found quilting, knitting, collecting antiques or visiting country inns. She lives in Redford with husband Mark and cat Arrow. Readers can write her at P.O. Box 1022 Novi MI 48376. Include a self-addressed stamped envelope if a reply is desired.

incredibly active

One of the highlights of November will be a month-long dance between two of the brightest objects in the sky: Venus and Jupiter. During November, a bright star, the moon and the planet Mercury will get into the act.

On Nov. 5 the moon will be located midway between Castor, the head of one of the twins (above and to the right of the moon), and Procyon (below and to the left of the moon). Procyon (PRO see on) is the brightest star in the constellation of Canis Minor, the Little Dog, and the eighth brightest star in the entire sky.

Notice also the distance between Venus and Jupiter on the morning of the 5th. A mere five mornings ago they were eight degrees apart, and Jupiter was very close to the horizon. Now the two objects will be just three degrees apart, and, on the morning of the sixth, will be two degrees apart.

Mercury will be at inferior conjunction with the sun on Nov. 6. Mercury will be located between the earth and the sun and will not be seen. In fact, Mercury will be nearly exactly between the earth and the sun and a transit of Mercury will occur.

A transit is the passage of a smaller body across the face of a larger one. Of the major planets, only Venus and Mercury can transit the sun. The smaller body is seen as a silhouette on the face of the sun. Transits of Mercury are fairly rare; on average there are 13 transits of that planet per century. (The last was in 1986, and the next will be in 1999.) Unfortunately this transit will occur at 10:06 p.m., at which time the sun will be nowhere to be found in the Michigan sky. To see the transit, you'll have to be in India, Southeast Asia, China, Australia or New Zealand. (When the moon "transits" the sun, a solar eclipse

The moon will be at last quarter phase at 1:36 a.m. on Nov. 7. It will be starting the last-quarter of its orbit around the earth and will be visible high in the southsoutheast at dawn. The bright star to the left of the moon will be Regulus, the "heart" of Leo the their close conjunction ("grouping") on the morning of the 8th. The two bright objects will be only one-half of a degree apart (about one full moon diameter). Venus will be passing to the left of Jupiter. The next morning they will be three-quarters of a degree apart, and the distance will increase rapidly during the rest of the month.

Notice Spica, above and to the left of the two planets. At the beginning of the month the three objects formed a triangle. Now they will be in a nearly straight

The moon joins the Venus-Jupiter-Spica grouping on the morning of Nov. 11. The moon will be above and to the right of Spica, and that star will be midway between the moon and Jupiter. On the next morning the waning crescent moon will form a triangle with Yenus and Jupiter.

Mercury officially will be in the morning sky by this time; a line drawn from Jupiter through Venus will bring you to Mercury, but that illusive planet will be only two degrees above the horizon. It will be better placed for viewing in just a few more days.

New moon will be at 4:34 a.m. on Nov. 13. The moon will be located between the earth and the sun and will not be visible. As in the case of the transit of Mercury, the moon will be located nearly exactly between the earth and the sun and there will be a partial solar eclipse. The bad news is this eclipse, just like the transit of Mercury, will not be visible from our area, but the view from Antarctica could be nice.

Mercury will be one degree to the left of Venus before sunrise on Nov. 14. Venus, which will be much brighter than Mercury, will dazzle the eye. Mercury has been zipping between the earth and the sun during the month, but on the 14th it will appear to be stationary then will begin to draw closer to the sun. The waxing crescent moon will be visible in the evening sky on the 15th. Look toward the southwest horizon around 5:50 p.m. On the 16th the moon will be higher in the sky, within the constellation of Sagittarius the archer.

Long-respected names in the area received special honors Oct. 28 at the ninth annual Governors' Arts Awards

Marshall Fredericks, Louis Redstone and Jacobson Stores Inc. were presented with awards in a ceremony at the Detroit Institute of Arts. The event celebrated those who made a significant contribution to the arts in Michigan, and reinforced the importance of the arts as well.

'Art is everywhere," said Judy Dow Alexander, chairwoman of Concerned Citizens for the Arts in Michigan. "It is our job to keep the recognition of art alive for everyone. Each of us needs to take the gospel of the arts everywhere we go. Keep arts alive.

Fredericks, a Birmingham resident whose art career spans 60 years, was accompanied by actor James Earl Jones to receive the International Achievement Award. Jones was given the award in 1989. Mort Crim of WDIV-TV, master of ceremonies, referred to Fredericks and Jones as "two very classy gentlemen.

Among the sculptor's works are the "Spirit of Detroit" in front of the City County building as well as pieces at Oakland University in Rochester Hills and in many communities, including Birmingham, Bloomfield Hills, Farmington, Rochester Hills and Southfield. Other sculptures by Fredericks are displayed around Michigan, the United States and abroad. He was knighted by the kings of Denmark and Norway.

'I'm a little bit overwhelmed in as much as I did not anticipate this honor until it happened," Fredericks said. "I want to thank those people who made it possible to receive it. It will . . . inspire me from now on.

"I believe an artist should be a part of his community as much as possible. It's very necessary in one's life to aspire to more than the local scene . . . That's what I've tried to do with my work."

Louis Redstone, an artist and author, received the Civic Leader Award. He is founder and chairman of Redstone Architects Inc. of Southfield, which used to have offices in Livonia. Redstone is cochair of Michigan Outdoor Sculpture IV, an exhibit taking place in Southfield every two years, and in 1980 was the impetus for the ongoing outdoor sculpture project at

He has made brick reliefs in buildings in Troy and West Bloomfield. People attending Thursday's ceremony could see a display of some of Redstone's paintings. Redstone is represented in permanent collections at the Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills and the Long Beach Art Museum in California.

In his architectural career of more than 55 years, Redstone was one of the leading architects in suburban mall design in the 1960s. The Westland and original Somerset malls were among those created by his firm. Redstone has lectured in the United States, Africa, Israel, Japan and South Redstone spoke of the importance of art in all its forms, including architecture, in daily life. He thanked his wife Ruth and sons Daniel and Eliel for their love and support.

Jacobson Stores Inc., marking its 125th anniversary this year, was presented with the Business Honor Roll Award. It was accepted by Mark Rosenfeld, Jacobson chairman and CEO. The company has stores in Birmingham, Livonia and other communities, and helps a variety of cultural organizations, including the Livonia Symphony

"(We) help people express their own individuality in how they dress, how they dress their homes," Rosenfeld said. "Arts play an important role in creating individual expression and for that reason we think it's very important to play a very active role in all our (communities) in developing the arts.'

Gov. John Engler distributed the awards and was keynote speaker for the evening.

"Partnerships between industry and the arts are a win-win strategy," Engler said.

Actress has 'curious' role in children's play

f you're curious about whatever happened to Roberta Willison, daughter of David and Mildred W. of Bloomfield Hills who moved to New York to pursue an acting career, you'll find out Nov. 6. Willison stars as Marie, the girlfriend of the "man in the yellow hat" in a musical version of the beloved children's tale, "Curious George," 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 6 and 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 7 at Youtheatre at the Music Hall Center, 350 Madison Avenue, Detroit.

For ticket information, call 963-2366. Tickets go on sale the day of the performance, one hour before curtain time.

Willison has been on tour with the Theaterworks/USA production since Oct. 6, and just rolled into town from Alabama when we talked on the phone. "Curious George" fans won't recognize Marie as she was written into the show. "She's a very talented composer," said Willison. "This is the very first tour of 'Curious George.' It's a very playful show. George is a gymnast, he does a lot of tumbling and walking on his hands. I think everybody is attracted to the curiosity George manifests.

"It's also a very good story about family reconciliation. There's a scene where George runs away from home, and anger is expressed. Then there's forgiveness at the end of the play when the family comes together again, and this reaches the children strongly.

Cranbrook Music Guild continues its season 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 9 in the library of Cranbrook House with a recital by pianist Leszek Bartkiewicz. A native of Poland, Bartkiewicz is now based in the metropolitan Detroit area. A gold medalist in the 1980 Lugano International Master Players Competition, Bartkiewicz was a winner in his mid-teens, of the 1978 Young Polish Pianist Prize and was the youngest faculty member of the Polish National Music Conservatory. He is active as a teacher and presenter of master classes and made his Orchestra Hall debut

The Meadow Brook Theatre production of the 1931 "Black Coffee" never quite takes us to the library of a rich, eccentric English scientist. It has some fine acting, a properly cascading final act and a pleasant set, but it lacks that crucial atmosphere.

Christie's famous detective with "the little gray cells," Hecule Poirot, is called to a country estate to investigate the theft of scientific papers on building an atomic bomb.

Before Poirot and his faithful companion Capt. Hastings arrive, the scientist dies. Has he been poisoned? If so, who did the deed? Was it his playboy son, his mysterious daughter-in-law, his irreverent niece, his talkative sister, his meticulous secretary, the butler or the Italian doctor.

As always the number of likely suspects is large enough and credible enough to keep the audience guessing and Dame Agatha follows the example of Conan Doyle by having Hastings stand in for the rest of us while Poirot soars ahead.

The first, necessarily expository act dragged as the actors seemed to struggle to get into character. The second and third acts moved with more authority.

Eric Tavares goes lightly on the Belgian accent and a bit too heavily on the hesitant Poirot mannerisms. He succeeds in making Poirot a trustworthy confidante and does show the process of the mind at work.

James Anthony is excellent as the eager if bumbling Hastings. His futile attempts to out think his famous friend are the liveliest exchanges in the play.

It makes some interesting observations on British bigotry. It also deals with the atomic bomb many years before the bomb was perfected, when it was only the subject of so-called juvenile science fiction. presents an appetizer of sorts from 24 musicals, mixes in a little history with artful staging and, viola! they have a full-course epicurean theatrical delight.

Director, Francine Jo Hachem, is the maitre d' for the evening. Actually, she's a charming ageless hobo, representative of the time when Broadway was nothing more than a skid row. Our friendly, inept bum was there in the beginning and has some kind of mem-at least regarding gossip.

She introduces each musical number with a bit of trivia about the show from which it came. Before creating "Chorus Line," for example, Bob Fosse listened to over 40 hours of taped interviews from performers on why they wanted to be a dancer.

"That Broadway Feeling" celebrates mostly shows from the last 25 years - work such as that of Andrew Lloyd Weber rather than of Rogers and Hammerstein. Songs range from the cooly rau-"The Time Warp" (The Rocky Horror Picture Show) to the highly dramatic "All I Ask of You" (Phantom of the Opera) performed superbly by James Morisi and Cheryl Bubar. # 'Look Who's Talking Now' in comedy with "Look Who's Talking" returns with the third installment in the series, "Look Who's Talking Now," opening Friday at metropolitan Detroit movie theaters.

Mollie (Kirstie Alley) and James (John Travolta) first found each other when little Mikey (David Gallagher) was born. As an infant, Bruce Willis supplied Mikey's voice and then Roseanne Arnold came along to supply the voice of his little sister, Julie (Tabitha Lupien).

Now the kids are talking for themselves, but the dogs are getting a little restless.

The Tri-Star Pictures release is directed by Tom Ropelewski, who co-wrote the screenplay with his wife, Leslie Dixon.

In "Look Who's Talking Now", James has found success as the private pilot for Samantha D'Bonne (Lysette Anthony), the glamorous president of a cosmetics firm. While he's jetting around the world, however, Mollie is juggling the role of Mommy with her new position as an elf for a department store Santa.

It's not a good situation, especially when James and Samantha simultaneously leave two canines in her home.

Rocks (DeVito) is a streetsmart but house-dumb mutt that James rescued from the pound. Daphne (Keaton) is a pampered poodle belonging to Samantha and who is less than thrilled about living with the Ubriaccos.

The pooches share their opinions about each other eagerly snapping barbs and putdowns. The family bond is tested in this latest installment as Mikey tries to come to grips with the idea that maybe his parents haven't been telling him the truth about Santa, and Mollie is recovering from the blow that left her without a job and doubting her

Dogs speak up for contest

"Dogs say the darnest things." You know it and I know it, dogs have a way of letting us know what they want and how they're feeling. Send us a picture of your dog, with a caption of what your dog is saying to enter our "Dogs say the darnest things contest.'

The first 28 entries will receive a large youth size sweat shirt from the movie "Look Who's Talking Now." The grand prize winner will receive a package with two youth size sweat shirts and an assortment of "Look Who's Talking Now,"memorabilia.

To enter, send a snapshot of your dog, with a caption to: Keely Wygonik, Taste/Entertainment Editor, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers Inc., 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150. For more information, call 953-2105.

If you would like your photograph returned, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Deadline for entries is Monday, Nov. 15.

The entire plot is pulled together by the humor of Rocks and Daphne.

Olympia Dukakis returns to her role as Mollie's mom and George Segal, who played the louse who broke Mollie's heart and fathered her first child in the first movie, makes a cameo appearance in a dream sequence. Basketball star Charles Barkley also makes an appearance as himself.

The two dogs were selected from among 100-plus animals, according to Ropelewsi.

"We were looking for the Spencer Tracy-Katharine Hepburn Travolta said. "Because that's the

The immortality complex doesn't wear well with his family. Wife Laura, played by Isabella Rosellini, has infinite patience with his immortality complex and his withdrawal from her both physically and emotionally. She even tries to understand his often brutal honesty, including his expressed love for a fellow plane crash survivor (Rosie Perez).

Some have speculated that the heavily symbolic "Fearless" is actually a metaphor for midlife crisis. Take away the plane crash and replace it with a traumatic birthday or anniversary and a man like Max might act the same

Characters soar emotionally after crash in 'Fearless'

Max, feeling it his duty to save her, takes Carla out to a shopping mall and urges her to buy gifts for the dead child. He, meanwhile, buys a fancy tool set, tying up loose ends with the father he lost through a freak accident when Max was only 13.

Scenes like this shouldn't work in "Fearless," but they do, thanks in great part to director Peter Weir, who sets exactly the right tone. After a string of interesting and commercial films like "Witness" and "Green Card," Weir has finally gone back to the character-motivated drama that made his early Australian films ("The Last Wave," "Picnic at Hanging Rock") so exciting.

Events leading up to the crash are deftly handled in Max and Carla's recurring flashbacks: Max's business partner trying to call home one last time only to find an answering machine, Carla

Beekeepers meet at SC

The Schoolcraft College Beekeepers Club will sponsor a special Apitherapy Bee-Venom Workshop on Saturday, Nov. 13, at 1 p.m. in the west end of the College's Waterman Center. The workshop is free and open to the public.

The workshop, conducted by noted apitherapist Jim Higgins of Hillsboro, Ohio, will demonstrate and explain the use of bee stings for the treatment of arthritis, multiple sclerosis, and other related diseases. Other workshop topics include: securing bees from beekeepers, liability concerns for therapists and beekeepers, and the allergic reaction to bee venom. Higgins is a frequent presenter as the Midwest representative of the American Apitherapy Society. He recently made a presentation to the Worldwide Apitherapy Conference in China.

So what do authors feel are good reads?

his week, I thought it might provide a nice change of pace for all of you if I tracked down the opinions of other area writers in regard to the books they have been reading lately. So, Lasked a number of western Wayne County authors for their comments on recent literary "adventures.

Here's what they revealed:

■ Barbara Burgess, Livonia children's author ("Oren Bell"). She calls "Missing Joseph," by Elizabeth George, "a great read for mystery fans" and, ultimately, "a novel that transcends genre."

In the story, a sad and lonely Lancashire vicar meets with "misadventure" and a literary sleuthing game is afoot.

Says Burgess: "For those addicted to Agatha ('hristie, (or those who) have gone through the works of P.D. James, or sampled others who write English mysteries, I recommend Elizabeth George. (Her) characters are more English than all the rest George herself is an American writer from California. Fans familiar with her so-veddy-British hero, Inspector Lynley of Scotland Yard, and his plain-spoken, chain-smoking sidekick, Barbara Havers, may agree with Burgess that "the chemistry between these two is delightful.

Jim Burnstein, Plymouth screenwriter (his screenplay, "Renaissance Man," is now being filmed by Touchstone Pictures). Burnstein says he's recently re-read ("for about the 10th time") Anthony Burgess' dark, futuristic tale, "A Clockwork Orange." This time around, he read the original British version of the novel, which contains a controversial final chapter not included in the initial American publication brought out in 1963.

"The original last chapter definitely puts a different spin on things," says writer-teacher Burnstein of the story about a nightmarish world in which violent street gangs dominate society. "The book is about moral choice, and I've used it several times through the years in classes that I teach. I always find it amazing. The world Burgess wrote about is what seemed ultra-violent in the '60s and what we actually see in our headlines now - only we've added guns to the mix.'

■ Rob Kantner, Westland crime novelist ("The Red. White, and Blues"). The veteran fiction writer claims he rarely reads fiction.

"Frankly, the last few experiences I've had with fiction have been boring," he says. "Most of it leaves me cold."

Non-fiction is another matter for Kantner, however. Recently, he's found Alecia Swasy's "Soap Opera," a behind-the-scenes, up-close focus on Procter and Gamble ), "an interesting expose of corporate skullduggery.

Shelly Thacker, Redford romance writer ("Forever His"). Though she emphasizes she's not ordinarily into techno-thrillers, Thacker confesses one of her best reading experiences this year turned out to be Michael Crichton's dinosaur blockbuster. "Jurassic Park."

"I became interested in reading the book after I saw the movie," she says. "I liked it because it was so fast-paced — a real page-turner for me. It contains much scientific information, but never once bogs down.

Robert Wilson, Redford horrormeister ("The Second Fire"). "I read Dutch Leonard's 'Get Shorty' this summer and found it to be one of the best of his books that I've read. Leonard is frequently praised for his strong characters and dialogue, and certainly those are here, but this is also a great story. As a reader, that attracts me especially. I personally think Leonard is underrated in terms of his ability as a storyteller."

S.K. Wolf, Livonia suspense novelist ("MacKinnon's Machine"). Wolf highly recommends Brian Freemantle's mystery thriller, "The Button Man.

"The story is about serial killings in Moscow," she says, "with a Russian police officer and an FBI agent working together to solve the crimes. Freemantle is a British author who has written many books and I've read one or two others. But I like this book best. I found it to be very, very compelling.

Victoria Diaz of Livonia, a long-time member of Detroit Women Writers, tracks the books and literary industry for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. She says she "has a lifelong interest in reading, everything from great novels to cereal boxes. # Artist ties Surrealism to everyday life

■ Carl Angevine invokes the powers of ingenuity and cunning to conjure a colorful world of surrealistic images at Nelson's Gallery in Livonia.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

Award-winning artist Carl Angevine paints surrealist scenes dealing with issues relating to modern life. His reflective work leads the viewer to extraordinary new levels of seeing in "Evolving Concepts: A Decade of Surrealism," a one-person exhibition at Nelson's Gallery, 16376 Middlebelt, Livonia.

The surrealism extravaganza of 28 paintings by Angevine, an instructor at the Redford Senior Center, continues through Nov. 15.

Influenced early by Surrealists Paul Delvaux, Salvador Dali, Rene Magritte and Max Ernst, Angevine's work focuses on the turmoil of living in the late 20th century: wars, fear of crime, and man's influence on the landscape with manmade objects, architecture and debris. He conjures up imagery as if from a dream. One of his latest paintings, "Monetary Nightmare," focuses on

Fine arts to command limelight in Canton

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN SPECIAL WRITER

Mix together the energy and enthusiasm of a fledgling arts council, the best of works by area artists, and the generosity of many businesses and individuals, and what will you find? Success.

Canton Project Arts, the township's official arts organization, presents the first Juried Gallery Showing of Fine Arts '93, a definite success story, Saturday-Sunday, Nov. 6-7, in the Canton Administration Building, 1150 S. Canton Center Road.

The exhibition will feature 48 artists working in oil, acrylic, watercolor, ville, Williamston, Belleville and pastel, colored pencil, sculpture, photography, clay, collage, paper casting and mixed media.

"We'd like to invite the public to become a part of the first juried gallery showing of fine arts in Canton. It's always exciting to be part of the beginning," said Elaine Kirchgatter, Canton Township treasurer and honorary president of Canton Project

From a field of 115 entries, Ann Arbor juror Susan Froelich chose 88 pieces that showcase artists from Canton, Plymouth, Westland, North-

Livonia. Froelich, a University of Michigan graduate, is executive director of the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair and past director of the Plymouth Community Arts Council. She serves on the board of the Michigan Association of Community Arts Agencies and Citizens for Public Art.

An awards ceremony announcing the winners of the Juror's Choice Award ($250), Canton Project Arts Special Award ($175), President's Award ($125) and six Merit Awards ($50 each) will take place Friday at a by-invitation-only opening reception for artists, dignitaries and patrons.

Realism and abstract dominate the show with a dash of Expressionism and Impressionism thrown in for good measure. In a juror's statement, the highly respected Froelich notes that the exhibition "is an event of which Canton should be proud.

'The arts reveal a willingness to take risks, explore or question what is, look for new solutions and even celebrate the good things we share. A community that takes the time to appreciate their artists, and the crea-

the difficulty of surviving financially in today's economy. Money swirls through the air as rows of people leaning out their windows vie to capture it. The acrylic on canvas won Best of Show and first place in the 1993 Michigan State Fair Artists Competition-Professional Division.

"I like to paint things that people will stop and think about," said Angevine in an interview at the gallery. "Money is a big part of our lives. All the money is out there. They're reaching out and not grabbing the money.

"The Artist's World," a self-portrait, shows the world in which the artist lives. "I think an artist should reflect on what's going on at the Angevine thrives on the use of linear and aerial perspective, floating figures and forms as well as juxtaposing unrelated objects that create strong surrealist effects like the black crows hovering around the "Bus Stop."

"The crows stun the viewer. It has shocking elements. They stop you in your tracks. A bus stop can be very boring. I'm giving the viewer a little jolt by placing the crows there," Angevine said.

"Some artists don't want to take challenges. I want to. I'm trying to vary the themes, move in newer directions. I think Surrealism can be explored in new ways, reflecting the dreams, fantasies, imagination, symbolism and life experiences. The paintings are an accumulation of life's experiences, something I couldn't have done 20 years ago. I'm trying to be original, reach into my imagination to try and do something that hasn't been done before."

Employing the powers of imagination, Angevine creates the double self-portrait, "Instructor's Dream." One figure, a self-portrait, faces the viewer. Behind him, a mirror image faces a sea of students studying perspective, their sketches in hand.

Except for earlier abstracts, Angevine's paintings are largescale. "I like big paintings. It opens up my mind. I can think bigger. I like having all that open space in front of me. I'm using brighter colors to create a bigger impact than traditional "Unusual things are supposed to be together in Surrealism," he added. "There's no ironclad explanation for these sometimes. Sometimes, subconsciously things happen. It's very deep, a lot of fun. I get lost in these.

Angevine's latest paintings overpower viewers from the moment they enter the gallery. As they walk through, the work digresses back in time to Realism and Abstract.

Angevine started painting at 15. He's now 56. He spent 20 years working in the tradition of abstraction. A brief bout with realism precluded his entering the world of surrealism.

Angevine's Surrealist style evolved not only through 41 years of painting, but 51/2 decades of living. His works create windows to undiscovered dimensions of our minds.

"I like to think it will open up people's minds, also to serve as an inspiration to young artists and students, and for people to be a little more adventuresome when they buy art,' he said.

Angevine studied at Center for Creative Studies-College of Art and Design in Detroit from 1954 to 1958 under Sarkisian, Palazzola, Kozlow and Mi-

Angevine has taught painting and drawing through adult education classes for 18 years. His students include Tyree Guyton, nationally known for his Heidelberg Project in Detroit, and Mose McCann, a renowned folk artist.

"My training was very strict in the academics. When I went to school, you had to learn to draw before you paint," he said.

In 1992, Angevine won the Director's Award in Michigan Annual XX held at the Art Center in Mount Clemens. The show was jurored by nationally recognized artist Carol Wald.

His "Infinite Likenesses painting was one of 200 finalists out of 11,500 entries in the Artist's Magazine national art competition.

Nelson's Gallery owner Laura Hardy says of Angevine's exhibition: "Carl really has an impact on people - the intensity of each picture. People drag their friends back, saying, 'You have to see this.' His work is incredible."

Nelson's Gallery is at 16376 Middlebelt, between Five and Six Mile, in Terrence Corners, Livonia. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday to Friday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

tions of those artists, is one that shares the same positive qualities as those creating the art.

A few of the artists in the show chose to work large. A school of swimming dolphins seem ready to overtake the viewer in a work by Ilene Tarkington of Canton. The medium is cast paper; the palette, virgin white.

Belleville resident Ellen Moucoulis' floorstanding tryptych, focusing on three rabbits, could overwhelm based on size alone. However, it's the rabbits animated, almost human quality that makes this piece a standout.

Rabbits seem to be a popular subject this year as Canton artist Janice Sparks chose an upclose view of them in her whimsical painting.

Although the exhibition concentrates primarily on two-dimensional works, Kirchgatter hopes to expand upon the media next time around. "We were disappointed there wasn't any jewelry. We'll encourage jewelry entries another year.'

Initially, Kirchgatter, a past president of the Plymouth Community Arts Council, wondered if enough artists would enter to make the show successful.

"My excitement level rose with the quality of work being brought in for the jurying," she said.

Up until a year ago, the fine arts didn't thrive in Canton because a consistently functioning arts organization or council was not in force. For a brief time between 1989 and 1991, the Canton Community Foundation's arts council provided a handful of quality programs.

But it wasn't until earlier this year that Canton Township trustees budgeted $5,000 to institute, develop and encourage the arts in the community through Canton Project Arts.

The goals of this organization are to make the arts "visible and enjoyable for members of the community" and to afford local artists "the opportunity to display their talents in Canton.'

When Summit on the Park, a multipurpose recreational and arts center, opens in 1995, Canton Project Arts will provide art and cultural programming in a variety of areas, including dance, theater, music, writing, poetry, storytelling and crafts along with space specifically to be used as a fine arts gallery.

"We want to give Canton artists the opportunity to show their work in a gallery setting. When Summit on the Park is up and running, the arts can move forward with displays and art programs," Kirchgatter said.

"I think in this day and age when life is so hectic, we need to take time out for enjoying art and relaxation. Art is a form of relaxation. Art enriches our lives.

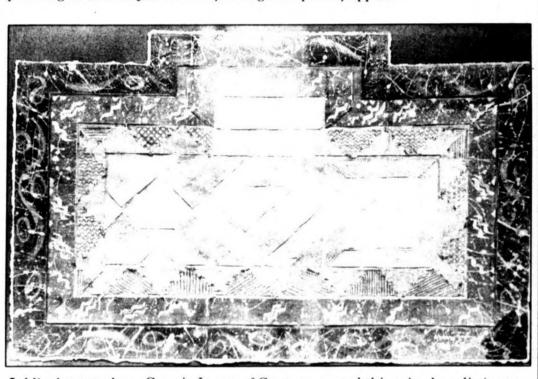

Local businesses and individuals who contributed to Fine Arts '93 include: AlphGraphics, Art Appeal, B.J.'s Bowery, Canton Waste Recycling, Civitans, Frame Works, Tim Haber, Mexican Fiesta, Mountain Jack's, The Olive Garden, Pogo's, Roman Forum, Miesel-Sysco Food Service and Ultimate Photo, all of Canton; D & M Art Studios, 3 Cities Art Club and The Community Crier, all of Plymouth; The Art Gallery and Garden City Fine Arts Association, both of Garden City; J. A commemorative print featuring the Canton Historical Museum will be sold. Every print will be numbered and signed by the artist, Canton resident Sharon Dillenbeck.

Show hours are noon to 7 p.m. Saturday and noon to 3 p.m. Sun-

Livonia artists show at library

Veteran Livonia artists Richard Culling and Ed Farhat will exhibit paintings and sculpture Nov. 13 to Dec. 18 in the Livonia Civic Center Library Art Gallery, Farmington Road and Five Mile.

A public reception for the artists will be held 7-9 p.m. Friday, Nov. 12.

Culling, a 1970 Livonia Stevenson High graduate, received his master of fine arts degree in painting from the University of Michigan. In 1985, he won a $19,000 John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation Award for painting. The previous year, he received a $4,000 grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts Creative Artists Program.

A painter, sculptor and illustrator, Farhat received a fine arts degree from Wayne State in 1951. In 1950, he exhibited in the Michigan Artists Show at the Detroit Institute of Arts, receiving an honorable mention award and seeing the DIA purchase a work.

In 1987, a watercolor was selected to tour the state in a Michigan sesquicentennial exhibition, "Vintage Artists of Michigan."

Culling has been showcased by Xochpilli Gallery in Birmingham. In 1998-89, he was the oil/acrylic painting instructor at Paint Creek Center for the Arts, Rochester.

Farhat has exhibited in the Michigan Watercolor Society and Detroit Scarab Club shows. His work is represented in the collections of the Livonia Civic Center Library, the Detroit Afro American Museum and St. Damian's Church, Westland.

Native West brings the ancient arts of sand painting and weaving to light with guest appearances by award-winning artists Chester Begay and Alberta Tsosie of New Mexico Friday-Sunday, Nov. 5-7, in the gallery, 863 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth.

Along with the Navajo husband and wife painting team will be American Indian art collector and trader Vince Ferrari of Farmington, N.M.

As Begay and Tsosie demonstrate techniques used to create the sand designs once restricted to religious, ceremonial and healing purposes, Ferrari will interpret the symbolism, stories and legends revealed in this dying art.

'On Friday, we'll be serving Southwestern hors d'ouevres, enticing customers to come in and see this traditional art form that's been around thousands of years. Alberta and Chester live on the Navajo reservation and will be able to share their culture with us," said Annette Horn, gallery co-owner with husband Ken.

Sand paintings are a permanent form of ceremonial paintings created with sands of sacred col ors. Navajo incorporate sand paintings, chants, herbs, prayers and songs into ceremonies to restore balance in the universe.

They believe that sky, earth, water, animals and man are connected in a certain context, and man is the mediator. When man upsets the balance, it causes illness or disaster. To restore the natural balance, a sand painting using sacred colors and symbols must be cast on the floor of the ailing or offending person's hogan by a Medicine Man or Shaman.

"An entire sand painting takes many, many hours to complete. They travel hundreds of miles to find the stones to grind to make the sand," Horn said.

The Guardians are important personages in Navajo legend and sand paintings. They appear in pairs at the entrance, or east edge. of the design to protect and guard the opening of the painting. Some of the most common symbols to appear as Guardians include the moon, sun, beaver, medicine pouch, bat, buffalo, bow, arrow, big snake and otter.

Another symbol frequently used in sand paintings is the bear, a sign of power.

Until recent years, the symbols were not recorded because paintings were destroyed immediately after the ceremony took place. Its secret powers were cast to the wind before the sun went down.

"The artists are using the sand paintings in art form, not in ceremonial form so it does not upset the spiritual Gods. Sand paintings originally were only used in secretly guarded ceremonies,' Horn said. "Up until 30 years ago, no one outside of the Indian tribe ever saw a sand painting. The first frontiersman who saw one on a rug liked it so well, he summoned the Native Americans to make them for him.

"It's not really commercializing sand paintings," said Native West assistant manager Lisa Mitchell. "Having it permanent saves the stories.'

Sand painting prices will range from $16.95 to $800.

Ferrari will bring American Indian weavings from traditional to contemporary designs, including old regional trading post patterns like Two Grey Hills, Wild Ruins, Burntwater, Ganado and Teec Nos Pos as well as pictorial weav-

Before weaving begins, many weeks of work go into raising and shearing sheep and gathering plants for dye as well as washing, spinning and carding the wool.

The dyes are made by the Na vajo from liatris, lupine, sunflower, choke and blackberries, prickly pear cactus fruit and alder bark. Plants gathered in summer and early fall yield rich, deep colors while plants harvested in winter and early spring produce light er shades. Prices for the weavings range from $150 to $6,000.

Framed charts with samples of the plants used as dyes will be available for sale as well.

Show hours are 6-9 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday, and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Symbolic Sands: "Corn and Yei," a sand painting by Navajo artists Chester Begay and Alberta Tsosie, features female supernatural beings (Yei) and sacred corn.

More tips to help you sell your house

Weir, Manuel, Snyder & Ranke, with real estate offices in Birmingham, Rochester, Troy, West Bloomfield and Plymouth, offers these helpful hints when selling your house:

■ Make a good first impression. The grounds should be properly maintained summer or winter. Have the lawn mowed and raked, shrubs trimmed, driveway and sidewalks swept or shoveled clean and all debris removed from property.

■ Arrange shade or drapes to give maximum amount of light in all rooms. Replace all burned-out light bulbs and repair faulty switches. Light colors add cheerfulness to dark rooms, especially kitchens.

■ Minor redecorating is recommended, if needed, such as painting, rug shampooing, etc. It will create a much more appealing appearance.

Minor redecorating is recommended, if needed, such as painting, rug shampooing, etc. It will create a much more appealing appearance.

 Cracks in plaster, loose door knobs, crooked or broken light fixtures are among the small items that can be easily repaired. Small things sometimes hinder a sale more than obvious larger repairs.

■ If you have pets, it's recommended

they be kept out of the way or out of the house, if possible. Also be sure there are no lingering pet odors.

 Your house should be comfortably warm in cold weather and moderately cool in hot weather, through air conditioning, or other alternative mea-

 Don't let dirty laundry pile up, do a little everyday or so. Make sure the beds are made, the bathrooms sparkle and the kitchen is neat and clean.

Don't cook odorous foods before a showing and simmer a tea kettle with a spice mixture.

 Buyers ask a great many questions of our sales associates when being shown through a house and most prefer to do this in privacy. The customer usually feels more relaxed when you are not present. Always be ready to show your house. A delayed prospect may go elsewhere and could cost you a sale. Your real estate person will always arrange appointments as far in advance as possible.

However, if the rabbits are running interest because there are certain

It would be, of course, important to review the particular documents of your condominium to determine what controls, if any, the assocation has over the rabbits under its "animal" clause set forth in the documents.

Moreover, I would suggest that the condominium seriously consider putting some limitation on the number of rabbits being maintained by a coowner, if in fact there is no specific limitation on the maintenance of rab-

However, if the advisory committee members of the respective associations ultimately become directors of each association and the two associations have conflicting interests, those directors may well be in conflict to serve on both boards.

The advisory committee of both associations should retain legal counsel to advise them individually as to the

Architecture links fine arts, high tech

■ Lawrence Tech offers an innovative program in architectural illustration. Graduates will be able to merge art skills with computer technology.

BY MARY RODRIQUE STAFF WRITER

Combining technology with fine arts, Lawrence Technological University is offering architecture students a major in illustration in a first of its kind in the nation degree program.

"This College of Architecture is unique in its ability to attract faculty with strong graphics backgrounds," said Harold Linton, professor and assistant dean of Lawrence Tech's College of Architecture and Design.

"Lawrence Tech has a strong group of registered architects who are practicing illustrators and architects who can draw. This program has grown naturally out of the talents of the faculty.'

Linton, who lives in Farmington Hills and has been on the faculty of the Southfield campus for 20 years, conceived the program with input from some of the nation's top architectural illustrators.

Converging on campus in spring 1992 were Sydney Mead, a Los Angeles entertainment industry mogul; Paul Stevenson Oles, co-founder of the American Society of Architecture Perspectivists (ASAP); William Mitchell, dean of the College of Architecture, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Frank Costantino, former ASAP president from Boston; Richard Rochon, a local illustrator with a national reputation; Bob Ferier, professor of architecture and illustration at the University of Texas; Harvey Ferrero, a cutting-edge local designer and illustrator with a national reputation; and Dick Howard, a major illustrator with Howard and Associates of Toledo.

"I presented our plan," said Linton, himself a fine arts graduate from Syracuse University. "It was reviewed and lead to coordination of technical skills and artistry mingling together early in the students' years.

National surveys of large and small architectural firms, public agencies and related industries were conducted to gauge the melding of technology and art.

"The field of illustration in architecture has grown with the leaps made each year in computer printing, ability and speed," Linton said. "I think architecture has a big role in helping the public understand the environment.

"The students having a very strong background in both design and illustration is an advantage too. When industry sags, they can be visualization specialists. They can switch gears in the field."

Virtual Services helps suppliers computerize

By Doug Funke Staff Writer

Virtual Services, headquartered in Rochester Hills, supplies computer add-ons for automotive suppliers The company, started in 1984, reported rev-

We provide a package of services. There are many spokes in a wheel. Only one is hardware. We supply the glue that puts it all together.

There's a thousand auto suppliers in southeast Michigan. We probably do business with 700 on an ongoing basis.

We hear about automotive suppliers getting squeezed by manufacturers to cut their costs. How expensive are your systems and can suppliers really afford your services? They have to. It's mandated. To quote a job, you almost have to have a (computed-aided design) system to read a tape to find out what a part looks like. Auto companies are trying to shorten the time from conceptual design to a car rolling off the line and the way to do that is standardize everybody on a common system.

Four CAD/CAM terminals three years ago was a half-million-dollar investment. Today, you can buy all four for under $100,000. You've had advancement in computer technology which has spurred competitive pricing. Now, people who couldn't afford it can.

Time to check your medicine

uch, I bumped my head." "Ouch, I scraped my knee." "Ouch, Mom, I hurt my finger. See." "Ouch, my stomach hurts . . . Ouch, ouch, ouch."

Minor injuries and illness are part of childhood like peanut butter and jelly. Children bumping, thumping, falling down, scrapes, rashes and sprains are combinations we come to expect. Since children are expected to incur minor injuries as such, it's become even somewhat fashionable to show off (or better yet cover up) the mighty scars of childhood frolic.

Common childhood boo-boos are no secret or shame when you wear fashionable character bandages. Such camaraderie built between kids sharing stories of little bumps and bruises as well as admiring the well known characters on their ban-

Just check the shelves at your nearby drug store for Bert and Ernie, Barney, Mickey and Minnie.

While fashionable bandages are "in," parents should make sure other important items are in stock on the shelves of medicine cabinets at home. Dr. Steven P. Shelov, professor of pediatrics at Albert Einstein College of Medicine and editor of "Caring for Your Baby and Young Children," suggests you have the following items on hand. Keep in mind that your pediatrician may recommend additional items if your child has special needs.

Rectal thermometer - For infants and toddlers who are unable to hold an oral thermometer in their mouths.

Oral thermometer - For children four years of age and older.

Petroleum jelly - For inserting a rectal thermometer (and any other tasks requiring lubrication).

Syrup of Ipecac - To induce vomiting when a child has swallowed harmful substances. In some instances, ipecac should not be given, for example, when caustics or corrosives such as cleaning. fluid or lye are ingested. To be sure, phone your regional poison control center (the telephone number should be prominently posted) before administering syrup of ipecac.

Cotton swabs - For cleaning the creases and folds in an infants skin or the outer ear. (Never insert anything into the child's ear canal-you may puncture the eardrum.)

Acetaminophen - Used instead of aspirin for reducing pain and fever. Sold under many brand names, it is available in drops for infants, in liquid form and as chewable tablets. Never give a child aspirin-it's been linked to Reye syndrome, a lifethreatening disorder in children and teenagers who have had chicken pox or influenza.

Crafters keep angels in stitches

■The Livonia Chapter of the American Needlepoint Guild has been hanging out with some lovely creatures. The group members used their talents with a needle to stitch up a "flock" of angels for patients at St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital.

BY SUE MASON STAFF WRITER

It's hard to tell if it's a case of overcrowding, but a flock of angels has been seen at the Livonia Senior Center lately

Forget the gossamer wings; these lovely creatures are of more common origins - muslim and perforated paper, to name a couple. And their stay has been shortlived, as they're packing up to head south for a very special reason.

The angels are headed for St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis. The creation of members of the Livonia Chapter of the American NeedlepointGuild, they'remeant for the young patients who visit the hospital.

Chapter members have been busy creating 70 angels in a variety of media that were sent to the Memphis hospital in late September. The summerlong effort was in response to a story a member saw in a craft magazine about the hospital's angel program. Children who are patients at the hospital get to select an angel to keep with

"A member saw the article and thought it would make a good community project," said chapter president Gayle Crowley. "We presented it to the group to see if they would make two angels each, and they thought it was a good idea

Each member picked the angel pattern they wanted to do and provided the materials. Most were done in different styles of needle point and started during the spring and early summer. Some angels were stitched on eanvas, others on perforated paper, plastic and regular needlepoint canvas

The group's oldest member, who is 83 and has poor eyesight, chose to crochet her angels

"I think they were surprised at the response," Crowley said. "The article was addressed to those people who wanted to be a part of the project and we had more than 20 ladies participate. I believe this is the first commu-

In fact, the project was so well-received that even though the angels have been sent to St. Jude's some members are continuing to make more.

"We're hoping to find out more about the project and the response of the kids," Crowley said.

The Livonia Chapter of the American Needlepoint Guild has been in existence for about 11 years. It's one of three chapters in the metropolitan area (the others are in the Troy Rochester area and Grosse Pointe and its members come from through out the area. Crowley is a Novi residents and rattles off members hometowns, like Brighton, Taylor Eastpointe and Detroit.

The guild emphasizes needlepoint on any counted or free stitchery, but some members are into other needlecrafts. The age range in the group is "neat," according to Crowley, ranging from 30 to 83, and the skill level is just as varied-from just beginning to many vears of experience

The Livonia chapter meets the third Wednesday of the month at the Livonia Senior Center, Five Mile and Farmington roads. Usually, the group works on a new project taught by a member or guest teacher. The projects generally are something small that can be completed in an evening or a few days, Crowley said.

The program chairman plans out the meetings, but members are under no pressure to do the new projects. Crowley said. "We also work on a cor respondence course from the national organization for six months to a year

But for now, members are looking around for another community project that involves a local hospital.

This group is a very giving group of people," Cr. wley said. "They're very outgoing and want to reach out

Lovely flock: Guild members provided a variety of angels to comfort St. Jude's young patients.

Holiday cards and favorite causes

BY ETHEL SIMMONS STAFF WRITER

These Christmas cards have an extra message. Besides the message of good cheer they send to the recipients, the cards also convey a message that they are helping a worthy cause. Proceeds from the sale of the cards go to the organizations that assist children and adults in special ways. The Rainbow Connection, headquartered in Rochester, grants wishes of children with life-threatening illnesses. This year, there are eight different cards from which to choose. The cards will be on display at offices of the Rainbow Connection, 527 N. Pine in downtown Rochester, and at the Livonia Civic Center Library, 32777 Five Mile Road, Livonia.

Cards submitted by this and other organizations also are being displayed at all five offices of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers through the holiday season. Readers may stop in at any O&E office to look through the Christmas card book, select cards and find out how to contact the organization for orders.

One day only, Wednesday, Nov. 10, the Observer & Eccentric, along with The Community House in Birmingham, is co-sponsoring a Holiday Card

Display and Sale Day at the community center, 380 S. Bates. Featured will be Christmas cards, wrapping paper, T-shirts and other gift items offered by more than 50 nonprofit organizations, to raise funds for their causes. The day-long sale runs 10:30 a.m. to Some organizations' cards are based on drawings from individuals who use their services. The Arc of Northwest Wayne County, with offices in Redford, offers two designs drawn by area residents with disabilities, Heidi VanEe of Plymouth and Donovan Clay of Detroit, who both work at STEP in Livonia. The Foundation for Mentally Ill Children, Inc., in Bloomfield Hills has chosen a card designed by a 13year-old student at Fairlawn Child/Adolescent Psychiatric Center.

The American Cancer Society's Oakland County Unit in Southfield has 12 different cards, including religious themes of adoration and of flight; contemporary, of a city scene and of birds and trees; and nostalgic, of a Currier & Ives design. The Michigan Cancer Foundation in Detroit has a range of eight designs, with everything from a polar bear to a mother and child.

Glittery first: When Carol Cassie decided to stage an extravaganza for Project SMILE, she had plenty of ideas. Ideas that came to fruition in a glittery way at "Hollywood Nights." There were plenty of Hollywood types in the gathering of more than 1,100 party goers at Laurel Manor, plenty of magic provided by Dudman, plenty of fashions by Elle Boutique and Manno Clothing (photos above), and plenty of hair styling (photo below) by Raphael of West Bloomfield. But what there was even more of was money Project SMILE raised for St. Mary Hospital's future

Writer has need to be busy

GRAPHOLOGY

Green: I would like to have my handwriting analyzed to help me get to know myself better. I am a right-handed female who refuses to tell her age to anyone who doesn't already know my age. It sometimes hurts people's feelings but since I look younger than my years (I think) I prefer that people presume that I am the age I appear to be. For your purposes, suffice it to

> D.W., Detroit

There is an old saying that goes something like this: "A woman who will tell her age will tell anything." Ostensibly, today's writer agrees with this. She mentioned she does not tell her age. Neither is she going to reveal anything else she does not want known.

This woman is gregarious and enjoys people of all persuasions. Augmenting this is her need to be busy and active.

She is aware of the impression she makes on other people and especially desires to create the big first impression. In relationships, she has a desire to lead and be admired. Occasionally, she needs to have her own way.

Strong empathy weaves throughout this handwriting. Compassion and caring influence her feelings toward others. She is not one to rock the boat because she prefers harmony to discord.

Her role in the business world would reflect a woman of action. She is an organizer and efficient. Many goals are placed high and she intends to see that they come to fruition. I think her interest in material acquisitions could be a motivating force.

A higher than average intelligence can be seen in this handwriting. Her mind is often working ahead, finding creative and viable solutions to problems.

Often our writer distorts what she sees or hears, possibly without realizing it. This distortion prevents her from basing her judgments on facts. It also suggests a fleeting interest in too many things. It can also interfere with her concentration on a prolonged endeavor.

She is inclined to exaggerate what she is doing or has done. She wants to accomplish things on a grand scale to call attention to herself. Being subjective, she is vulnerable to criticism or ridicule. Anything short of endless praise implies a lack of appreciation or approval in her estimation.

Our writer is articulate and expresses herself rather well. She can be dramatic, fluent, tactful or direct, depending upon how she perceives the need. Sarcasm is her defense when she feels threatened. A little humor is noted. Conversations that reach above the mundane have some appeal. The spiritual or metaphysical may have a special interest.

A chink in her armor appears to be the resentment she holds inside. This usually relates to past hurts and the inability to forgive. Holding a grudge can be selfdefeating. I think she would be happier if she could forgive and forget old hurts.

Novelists bring out the romance

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO STAFF WRITER

Book lovers will have a chance to learn that romance novelists are people too at an all-day party Saturday, Nov. 6, at Paperbacks n' Things in Westland.

Owner Joan Adis and "helper" Louise Watkins say many customers have come to their parties with preconceived notions about the writers.

'They're people with good hearts; it's not just sex and violence," Watkins said.

Even Watkins admits that she doesn't know what to expect when she meets authors. "I read Ruth Ryan Langan's

Cabaret benefits Hospice Services

The Western Wayne Hospice Foundation will present "Friday Night Live — A Gala Cabaret" Friday, Nov. 12, for the benefit of Hospice Services of Western Wayne County Inc.

The gala evening will be at the Holiday Inn, 10 Mile and Grand River, Farmington Hills. It will start with a reception at 7:30 p.m., followed by a buffet dinner at 8 p.m. There also will be a cash bar and door prizes.

After dinner, comedian Bruce Gerish will serve as master of ceremonies for a fun-filled variety show featuring talented local performers, directed by Pat Hutchison. Scheduled to appear in the show are Betsy Bronson, Nancy Delewsky Villeneuve, the Churchill High School Show Choir and Schoolcraft College Vocal Jazz Ensemble.

Bronson is a member of the Michigan Opera Theatre's touring company. She has performed lead roles in opera, operetta and musical theater. Bronson has also sung radio jingles and appeared in television commercials and industrial films.

Delewsky Villeneuve has appeared as a featured soloist with the Livonia Symphony and in performances with the Theatre Guild of Livonia and Michigan Opera Theatre.

According to Western Wayne Hospice Foundation board president Christopher Ziomek, the event commemorates National Hospice Month, which promotes awareness of the work done by hospice organizations. It also will raise money to help Hospice Services expand programs which are offered free to patients and the community.

Betsy Bronson

Hospice Services was established in 1981 to offer compassionate, skilled home care to people facing incurable illness. Hospice offers supportive care, promotes quality of life and provides comfort and emotional healing for the patient and family members.

"We provide services to patients and their families regardless of their ability to pay," said Maureen Butrico, executive director of Hospice Services. "While some costs for medication, nursing and doctor visits are covered by the patient's medical insur ance, some costs must be supplemented in other ways. The Western Wayne Hospice Foundation was created to fill the ongoing need to procure funds to meet patient and family needs which are not reimbursable."

With 20 full-time staff members and more than 130 volunteers, Hospice Services provides assistance to patients in western Wayne, southern Oakland and eastern Washtenaw counties. It also offers support to the patient's family and maintains contact with family members for 13 months after a patient dies. Services include adult grief relief group meetings, children grief support programs, mailings, telephone calls, visits and memorial services.

Tickets for the cabaret are $35 each and are available at the Hospice Services offices at 6701 Harrison, Garden City, (522-4244), and 127 S. Main, Plymouth (459-0548).

Tickets are also available from the Plymouth Township supervisor's office, Plymouth Township Hall, 42350 E. Ann Arbor Road, (453-3840), and from foundation board members.

Visit promotes understanding country, documentaries and the news provide information, but short of living in that country, the best way to learn about the locale, the people, the customs and the beliefs is to talk with someone who lives there.

That's what the Rev. Gareth D. Baker, pastor of Garden City Presbyterian Church, has discovered through the Ecumenical Parish Program, sponsored by the Synod of the Covenant of the Presbyterian Church (USA) in Michigan and Ohio.

"Our goal is that she share with us about back home and about her church back home," said Baker.

The denomination has done this for a number of years and tries to concentrate on different areas of the world. This year, the Middle East was the target area and 10 associates from there were sent to 11 different churches in the synod.

The last time Garden City Presbyterian hosted a visitor from Cuba — was five years ago and church members opened their homes to the visitor for six weeks.

The same was true for Adel, who was hosted first by John and Judy Santeiu of Garden City and then Betty Pritula of Livonia.

This was Adel's third trip to the United States, but her first as an ecumenical associate with the Presbyterian church. She found the people friendly and discovered that people, even those of different cultures, share a common

Much in common

"What I really think that I have learned and have enjoyed are the people," said Adel. "I found more similarities between people, in general, than there are differences. Humans have got more in common than they have different; the same hopes, concerns,

"It's mainly the same thing, only the style of life is different. The way that things are laid out is different. The way children are brought up is different. I think that's the big difference, how the children are brought up.

Adel, 24, recently moved into her own apartment in Cairo just 10 minutes away from her parents' home and her two younger sisters. She frequently goes back to her parents' home and will spend two or three days at a time

American children are given considerably more independence at an early age, according to Adel.

"Here they treat children as if they are grown-ups," she said. "Over there (in Egypt) they treat the children as children until they are ready to express themselves.

She was surprised when she witnessed a mother who picked up her first grader "very far away from the school" because he wanted to look independent to his friends.

"Family ties are very strong (in Egypt)," Adel said. "That's why there can be problems when a foreigner marries an Egyptian. They find out that they didn't get married to one person, they got married to the whole family.

She pointed out that is probably more the case in the smaller rural communities. "Cairo is more of a cosmopolitan city like any city in other places in the world.'

Adel graduated from Helwan University in Cairo with a major in Egyptology and works as a tour guide, which requires an extensive knowledge of Egypt's lengthy history.

Impressed with her excellent command of the English language, Baker pointed out that Adel began learning English at the age of 4.

Early learning

"My parents wanted to teach me English when I was a little girl, so they sent me to a private Catholic school in Cairo," Adel said. "We have a lot of private schools in Cairo that were first founded by missionaries when they came to Egypt."

All of Adel's classes were taught in English except social studies and religion.

"We had a couple of subjects that were taught in Arabic to emphasize our language and the use of it," she said. "Arabic was taken as a language class." Arabic was always spoken at home, on TV and everywhere else.

Because of the early introduction to English, "it come naturally to me," Adel said. "I can't remember any hardship or being forced to learn English." She can easily switch her thinking to either language. "Sometimes I dream in English; sometimes I dream in Arabic," she said with a laugh.

Since nearly 93 percent of Egyptians are Sunni Muslims, Adel finds herself in a distinct minority as a Coptic Christian in Cairo. "You have a mosque every few houses," she said. "Cairo is famous for being 'The City of a Thousand Minerettes.'" A minerette is the tall steeple on the mosque where prayer is nounced.

Adel is a member of a Presbyterian church there, but she has not encountered any discrimination because of her beliefs.

"Personally, I don't feel any problems," she said. "I feel closer to some Muslim Egyptians more than I do to some Christian foreigners. I don't feel related more by the religion. I feel related more by the culture.

According to Adel, those who may suffer discrimination are those who try to draw attention to themselves.

Before leaving the United States on Oct. 25, Adel spoke to her host congregation about peace, in particular peace in the Middle East.

"Concerning peace in the Middle East, every single individual has got a different point of view," she said. "This is the point, why they cannot get together. Every one, every few people, every group, they have their own point of view about how to accomplish peace in the Middle East. That's probably why they haven't accomplished it in so many years."

saint — if there ever was one

BY REV. DAVID BEVINGTON SPECIAL WRITER

For the past several years, during my pastorate at Grand River Baptist Church in Livonia, I have had the pleasure of knowing one of the most gentle, loving persons God ever created. Her name is Mary Given. Mary was born on Oct. 22, 1893, in Edinburgh, Scotland. That puts her age at 100.

Mary informed me that in the good old days, a fifth grade education in Scotland was "as good as you can get in any U.S.A. high school today." She was educated through the fifth grade, and at age 13 she went to work cleaning homes for royalty. Life wasn't easy in Scotland. She cleaned houses, made ammunition during the war (1914), and kept a good attitude about life.

Mary Leslie Hoog married Gavin Given in 1919. She came to the United States in 1923, settling in West Virginia. In those days, West Virginia was very primitive. She was of the opinion that "West Virginia was the most God-forsaken spot on earth.'

Mary's mother was active in The Salvation Army, so Mary had early training in helping the unfortunate. As her pastor, I can vouch for her generosity. As with many in the older generation, Mary tithes what little income she has to her church, supports Billy Graham and other worthy causes, prays for others, ministers where she is able, and puts in a good word for the Lord even when she doesn't feel like it.

The old biblical proverb, "Cast your bread upon the waters and it will return," applies to Mary. She has a Japanese friend who has kept her supplied in clothing for years, and her good friends Fidel and Quinita Cashero continue to be a blessing.

"So, Mary," I said, "how did you live so long?" Her reply was: "I love the Lord and work hard." She informed me that she got up early, straightened out her apartment at Baptist Manor, did some singing of the good old-fashioned hymns, walked the halls several times, and kept in touch with her friends. Not bad for 100.

Humility describes Mary Given. "Why are you going to this fuss, parson?" she said to me as I interviewed her. Then she smiled and reminded me of her prayers on my behalf. "I pray that God will guide you as you prepare for Sunday, and I pray that Grand River Baptist Church will grow and prosper.'

Her love and joy are like beams of sunshine as she shares her faith in her Lord and Savior, Je-
