Candidates face school board

The opening salvo of questions for prospective school superintendent candidates started on Tuesday as the school board began the task of selecting a replacement for John Hoben. There are six candidates, one of whom will be selected by May.

BY M.B. DILLON

The search for Superintendent John Hoben's replacement officially kicked off Tuesday when the Board of Education interviewed Louis Giannunzio, currently the superintendent of Marshall Public Schools.

Hoben, 71, will retire June 30 after serving as Plymouth-Canton superintendent for 23 years. He joined the district as a math teacher and high school football coach in 1955.

The board planned interviews this week with six candidates selected by Bickert, Prophet & Associates

Ltd., a Chicago, Ill., consultant.

There were seven candidates, but Reginald Nolin, superintendent of the Duluth schools, dropped out of the race, citing personal reasons, according to board member David Artley.

On Tuesday, school board members asked Giannunzio a series of questions. The same questions will be posed to the other finalists. None of the questions dealt with school finance.

Here are some of Giannunzio's answers:

■ On ensuring relevance of education into the next century. "You have to anticipate. To a great degree you're guessing." He said schools should work on teaching "skills that apply to many fields," and added that teaching students how to relate to other people is an important skill.

■ On his best accomplishment. He said that in the mid-1980s when a report came out that was critical of education he formed a committee in the Marshall schools to look at making improvements. The committee came up with a list and the public approved a 2.5-mill tax increase to make those improvements.

■ On communication skills. "Some people are better talkers than listeners," he said, adding that he made a point of listening to people in the community. He also said the public only wants to be informed when it's

City attempts to control ornery critters

BY SUE BUCK

Plymouth critters are acting like animals, say residents and city officials.

So, the city wants to control and curtail their behavior a bit by revising the city's animal ordinance.

Stray cats are a problem in the city's Old Village section, says Plymouth police Chief Robert Scoggins.

Skunks plague some residents who live near creek areas.

Owner responsibility is the key in this revision.

Licensing and vaccinating cats is also under discussion for the first time. Domestic animals and nuisance wildlife would also be covered.

The city of Plymouth doesn't have an animal control officer or facilities where animals can be kept until homes can be found for them, like the Michigan Humane Society, according to Scoggins.

"It's difficult to do the service correctly if you don't have an animal control officer," said Scoggins. "The problem is not vicious animals but animals behaving in a normal way which has an adverse effect on residents in our community.

The Department of Natural Resources spells out what the city can and can't do with wild animals.

The skunk problem also hit the Scoggins home recently when the chief's cockpoo was bitten on the

Walker

After serving two terms on the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education, trustee Lester Walker has decided not to seek re-election.

Voters will fill two four-year terms and a one-year term in the June 13 election.

"I think I've served my time

There's a time for everything," said Walker, a 20-year senior reliability engineer with Detroit Diesel Corp. "I'd like to see faces of new candidates, particularly with kids in school. There are a lot of people who've been very active on committees and school situations. It would be good for those people to have an opportunity to run."

Walker, who said he plans to devote more time to his work and home life, said the conclusion of the superintendent search will be good time to step down.

"I'm glad I was here to participate in that," he said. "I feel that with the selection of a new superintendent that it's the close of a cycle."

"With a new superintendent, three board positions up, and changes in school structure based on changes at the state level, I think there are new opportunities."

Walker, 57, said he's pleased that during his tenure on the board,

"We've really worked well together. There's been a lot of good team work. Even though we've had our differences of opinion, in each case when we did reach conclusion, we moved forward. The real strength of the situation has been managing the district through difficult financial times. Everyone has done a real excellent job."

Walker first ran for school board in 1984, successfully campaigning to

Boak

Plymouth attorney Stephen H. Boak became the seventh candidate to announce his candidacy for 35th District Court judge.

The court serves the Canton, Plymouth and Northville communities.

Boak is a former assistant Wayne County prosecutor and a partner in the Splinter, Thomas and Boak law firm in Plymouth.

Boak says that he is dedicated to continuing the excellent work that the past and current judges have contributed to the court.

"We have a fine tradition in the 35th District of maintaining a well-managed docket," Boak said. "Judge Dunbar Davis is remembered fondly in our community and the current bench is well-respected. Now that Judge (James) Garber has decided to retire, I believe that I can serve the community well and uphold the tradition of effectively administering justice at the local level."

Boak believes that his trial record and knowledge of legal procedure will permit him to move easily from his practice to the bench.

Boak cites his compassion and says he is comfortable in the courtroom as an experienced litigator.

Boak is a University of Michigan Law School graduate who has practiced law for more than 17 years, 12 of which were spent in the Wayne County Prosecutor's office, where he served as chief trial lawyer, the first director of the Prosecutor's Repeat Offenders Bureau and as chief of operations.

Reserves, Boak recently retired as a lieutenant colonel in the Judge Advocate General's Corps. He was awarded the Meritorious Service Medal for his service to the country, which included active duty during Operation Desert Shield/Storm.

Boak has lived in Plymouth Township for 21 years. He's married to Suzanne, a probation officer who is an educational leave from the 17th District Court completing her master's degree in social work. The couple has four daughters, Christine, Kathryn, Bethany and Jennifer.

"A judge must be well-versed in both the law and procedure and familiar with the community he serves," Boak said. "A judge must be independent and conduct himself in a manner that is beyond reproach. He must dispense justice tempered with appropriate mercy. When I measure myself against these standards, I know I have the ability to uphold the tradition of the 35th District Court in dispensing justice to all litigants in an efficient, yet caring manner."

Also running are Michael Gerou, Carol Levitte, Ron Lowe, Maria Petito, Dennis Shrewsbury and Karen Dunne Woodside. The position pays $98,500.

An Aug. 2 primary will narrow the field to two candidates. The winner will be elected Nov. 8 and take the bench Jan. 1.

nose. This required an additional vaccination, to which the dog was allergic, which then required an antidote, Scoggins said.

Plus, skunks have the advantage when they attack a leashed pet, he said.

Police priorities often place an animal control toward the bottom of the list.

Council members discussed the merits of a proposed ordinance at Monday's regular meeting. A first reading is expected in upcoming weeks.

Community sharing of animal control services by contract is one possibility, Scoggins said. "If you've ever tried to take a possum or raccoon, they are extremely vicious," he added.

Some years ago, the city lent traps to residents so they could take care of the skunk problem, but often the traps weren't returned, Scoggins said.

Rosita Smith, a Plymouth resident, argued against having cat owners who keep their cats in doors exclusively, having to pay for licensing and fees. She also urged common sense in removing strays, especially those that aren't vicious or dangerous.

"I can't picture a police officer walking down the street and blowing it away," she said.

Leonard Radionoff complained about the skunks who have completely torn up his lawn. Critter control, a nationwide company that relocates animals to wildlife areas, will charge $75 to set a trap, Radionoff said.

"I've lost my enthusiasm," he said.

The city will strive to warn animal owners first before ticketing.

Candidates' skills varied

By M.B. DILLON

Charles Little, superintendent of Frontier Central Schools in suburban Buffalo, N.Y., will be interviewed at 4 p.m. today by the Plymouth Canton Board of Education, followed by Gary Hughes, superintendent of Durand public schools near Flint at 7 p.m.

Open to the public, the interviews will be in the board meeting room, 454 S. Harvey in Plymouth. The last two interviews will be Saturday. Ronald Jandura of Minnesota's St. Cloud public schools will meet with the board at 9:30 a.m. Robert Monson of the Boston area Westwood school district will be interviewed at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Six candidates are vying for the post of Plymouth Canton superintendent. The job will be vacated June 30 by John Hoben, who is retiring.

■ Little administers a district of 5,050 students and earns $92,500. He earned his doctorate of education degree in 1978 at Indiana University. He's been Frontier superintendent since 1990.

Little is skilled in developing budgets and generally is well liked, say news sources in New York. Of late, Little has been involved in a controversial sale of a vacant elementary school located on 10 acres. Little supported the $250,000 sale to a Muslim group. It was opposed by taxpayers who succeeded in placing the proposal on the ballot and killing the sale. Residents approved of a second proposed sale to a business that agreed to preserve acreage for a playground.

■ Hughes has served as superintendent of Durand Area Schools since 1991. The district has an enrollment of 2,600 and is southwest of Flint. Hughes, who earns $81,000, joined the district as assistant superintendent in charge of finance in 1986. He came from the Troy School District, where he was assistant to the superintendent from 1985-86.

Hughes is regarded as "a pretty bright guy who became superintendent after the board forced out the former superintendent." Things seemed to calm down after he became superintendent," ac-ording to the Flint Journal. Hughes, along with fellow administrators and the Durand board, is campaigning for voter approval for a $15 million new high school. How construction would be financed hasn't been revealed, the paper said. Hughes has a doctorate in education.

■ Jandura is superintendent of St. Cloud public schools, a 250-square-mile school district with an enrollment of 12,000. He earns $90,050 and holds a doctorate in education from the University of Alabama.

Jandura said the St. Cloud board is forcing him out in a story recently published by the St. Cloud Times. His contract, if not renewed, would expire June 30.

"The contract (expiration) and Jandura's possible departure come at a time when the district faces serious cuts to balance the budget. The district is expected to need an additional $4.6 million to pay for employee contracts," the paper said.

St. Cloud board member Jerry Koshol told the St. Cloud Times Jandura's being made a scapegoat in bad times. "He knows his business. People don't like to hear what he's got to tell them," Koshol said. "If a board, elected by the community, doesn't want my services, so be it," Jandura told the Times. "When you fight, you fight for something worth winning."

■ Robert Monson oversees the Westwood Public Schools, located in a Boston suburb with an enrollment of 2,000. He holds a Ph.D. in educational administration and earns $95,600.

"He wouldn't be leaving under pressure," according to news sources close to Westwood schools. "He is in his seventh year right now and was brought in to make some changes in the school system."

Monson came from Ohio's Beachwood City School District. He announced last August that he wouldn't seek a new contract.

A proponent of whole language, critical thinking and other curriculum innovations, Monson has met with opposition from a minority of parents who favor traditional approaches to education.

Monson is regarded as a take-charge, cooperative administrator good at implementing change who some say could use stronger communication skills, sources said.

The Westwood school district, 10 miles from Boston proper, is regarded as one of the top districts in Massachusetts.

expected to make a decision. "You have to reach out," he said. He has written columns for the local newspaper as a way to do that.

The remaining 90-minute interviews, open to the public, are set for 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. Thursday, April 7, and for 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Saturday, April 9.

Charles Little, superintendent of Frontier Public Schools in Hamburg, N.Y., will be interviewed at 4 p.m. Thursday. Gary Hughes, superintendent of the Durand school district near Flint, will be interviewed at 7 p.m. Thursday.

Interviewed Saturday at 9:30 a.m. will be Ronald Jandura, superintendent of Minnesota's St. Cloud Public Schools, followed by Robert Monson, superintendent of Westwood schools in suburban Boston at 1:30 p.m.

Members of the public and the superintendent search committees may attend the interviews, but won't be allowed to question the candidates.

Three finalists will be interviewed a second time the week of April 18. Preceding the 7:10 p.m. dinners set for Monday, April 18, Wednesday, April 20, and Monday, April 25, will be public receptions in the board office meeting room.

"The public receptions will be held on each of the days prior to the dinner interview from 4:50 p.m.," said Richard Egl, community relations director for the Plymouth-Canton district. Punch and cookies will be served.

"The search produced 67 applicants, of which 52 completed the process," said Roderick Bickert and Ronald Barnes of Bickert, Prophet & Associates. Of the 52, 43 were male and nine female. Thirty-three were superintendents. Nine assistant superintendents applied, including Plymouth Canton's Tom Tattan, as did three principals.

The applicants hailed from 17 states.

Aside from the finalists, the board has not revealed the names of applicants for the post, which currently pays $116,325.

The board plans to name the new superintendent by May 16.

Food program needs help

By JILL BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Plymouth Canton clergy are counting on residents being generous in contributing to the Food to Share program.

"Obviously, the success of the program is going to hinge on the response," said the Rev. Bryan Smith, pastor of Geneva Presbyterian Church in Canton.

More than 20 churches in Canton and Plymouth are participating in the program, which had an April 1 kickoff date. Local clergy got the idea from a similar program by the Livonia Education Association in cooperation with Kroger stores in Livonia.

Both local Kroger stores — on Ann Arbor Road at Sheldon in Plymouth Township and on Sheldon at Ford in Canton — are participating. Donations will be gladly accepted, with Kroger doing the bookkeeping and providing funds for low income residents to purchase food.

Churches are distributing coupons to contribute in worship bulletins, said Lt. Jeffrey Beauchamp, corps commander for the Plymouth Salvation Army, which serves Plymouth, Canton and Northville. Donations will be accepted in any amount.

"The 50 cent certificate is probably the lowest denomination we have, so they could do that," Beauchamp said of children who wish to contribute allowance money.

Coupons to contribute will also be available at cash registers of both stores. Local churches and community groups are contributing $1,000 to get the program up and running.

Some contributions from churches and groups have been sitting dormant in a clearing house fund at the Salvation Army for several years, Beauchamp said. Expense money is being taken from that fund.

He anticipates contributions will be significant in the first month or two. "After that, it'll be a challenge to keep it in front of the people," Beauchamp said.

The Livonia program took in some $400,700 in its first month when only one store was involved, Smith said. He and other organizers are hoping the Canton Plymouth effort does as well.

"We have two stores and they're both in benevolent communities, so that will help," Beauchamp said. Contributions are tax deductible, with grocery bill receipts to be used for tax purposes.

Kroger, on a monthly basis, will add up donations and send vouchers to the Plymouth Canton clergy in care of the Salvation Army. Several members of the clergy will assist in distributing the vouchers to churches, typically those that operate food pantries.

Beauchamp anticipates contributions being available to low income residents sometime in May, following some time for bookkeeping. The program will allow residents to buy meat, dairy products and other perishable items not usually available at church food pantries.

Excavation under way

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI

Excavation of hazardous waste from a former 3M dump site on Michigan Avenue has resumed after work was stopped during severe winter weather in January and February.

"We are in the waste removal business again," said Bob Paschke, 3M environmental engineering manager.

After the work is completed, the focus will shift to the second phase of the cleanup, which is designed to determine what effect the waste burial has had on the soils, floodplain, ground and surface waters and sediments, said Ralph Dollholph, federal Environmental Protection Agency on-scene coordinator.

Approximately 9,000 cubic yards or 500 truckloads of waste have been excavated from the 3.5-acre site, which was a former paint and adhesives dump behind Keller-Stein Florist along the south bank of the Lower Rouge, north of Michigan Avenue, east of Lilley. The waste has been transported to a hazardous waste landfill in Model City, New York.

Work at the site was stopped in January because crews of Roy Weston Inc., which was hired to clean up the site, encountered not only cold weather, but a deep frost line, slippery conditions and an awful lot of snow.

"We were concerned about two things: safety and productivity," Paschke said.

But EPA officials expected the cleanup project to be further along. "We believe more progress could have been made by now. It is our feeling that not all the time they took off was needed," Dollholph said, adding there could be a consequence to the delay.

During the shutdown, soil borings were conducted to determine more precisely the location of the remaining waste areas. With the work starting, Weston restarted air monitoring devices at the site. "There was no concern with the air quality during the shutdown," Paschke said. Despite the delay, Paschke said it's hoped the cleanup will be complete by June.

In the second phase it will be determined if any additional cleanup is necessary. "There will be some restoration activity (of the site) after Phase I or during the Phase II study," Dollholph said. "I doubt there will be any final restoration until it is clear what long term remediation will be necessary, if any."

As far as any step beyond Phase II, Dollholph said it is likely any work would be completed under another administrative order.

The EPA and 3M negotiated a consent agreement for the cleanup of the site. Some 25-30 years ago, 3M employees dumped the company's paint and adhesive wastes in an old channel of the Rouge River. The EPA also found concrete and asphalt chunks, piping, rods and other construction debris at the site.

Anyone who is interested in reviewing information about the cleanup, may do so at the Canton Public Library.

Another construction season is rolling around. It will be mean more improved roads for Canton residents and motorists.

"Most of the projects are by the township, county and developers," said Tom Casari, Canton Township engineer.

The coming season will see installation of passing lanes, resurfacing and paving and fixing bridges. "The only time we will shut down a road is when there is a bridge replacement," Casari said.

In other words, there may be some inconvenience to motorists during the road construction season but roads should remain open.

This spring, the paving project started last year on Beck Ford to Warren, is expected to be completed. The addition of left turn lanes off Ford Road at the Beck Ford intersection is planned for 1996 by the Michigan Department of Transportation, which has jurisdiction over Ford Road.

Other projects include:
■ A passing lane on Canton Center at Hanford into the Sunflower

Village subdivisions. It's expected to be built in spring or summer. Wayne County is now reviewing plans.

■ Wayne County will do some minor widening and resurfacing on Cherry Hill, east to I 275, and Joy, from Sheldon east.

■ Palmer, Lotz to Hannon, is expected to be paved and a new bridge installed this summer. The project will be financed with a special assessment of property owners.

■ Haggerty, Michigan to Palmer, is expected to be paved. Currently, a property owner is protesting a proposed special assessment district to pay for the project.

■ Construction on Summit Boulevard, off Canton Center, to serve the proposed community center and Pheasant Run Golf Course, will be done in phases, beginning this year. A construction bid opening is scheduled for April 13.

■ Hannon, to just south of Palmer, is scheduled for paving.

■ Sheldon, south of Warren to Arlington, is scheduled for a resurfacing. The township and Wayne County are paying for this project.

■ The Ford Canton Center intersection will be restriped this year.

■ A portion of Lotz, south of Ford, will be paved as part of the Home Depot construction project.

The proposed widening of Canton Center, Ford to Cherry Hill, has been postponed until 1997. "We have to get many pieces of right of way. It's a federal project but they won't buy the right of way," Casari said. The township is hoping to create a special assessment district to buy the necessary land.

The township board will be asked to hire a consultant to design plans to realign Beck, Cherry Hill to Geddes, and Canton Center, Geddes to Michigan Avenue. If approved, construction could begin next year.

Casari said there is a possibility of resurfacing Ford Road, Marlowe to the western boundary. "MDOT has indicated this will be done this year," Casari said.

Ex Ford aide runs for Congress

Making families more secure by concentrating on four key issues — jobs, education, health care and crime — is the message David W. Geiss will deliver throughout the 13th District in his bid for a seat in Congress.

The 13th district includes Westland, Garden City, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Canton Township and part of Livonia.

Geiss, a Democrat and former chief of staff to U.S. Rep. William D. Ford, opened his campaign Tuesday morning at the William D. Ford Vocational/Technical Center in Westland.

"I want to help the many families in Michigan and the 13th District who worry about how they will get by in the next few years."

"Our world is changing so quickly — the constant struggle to keep our families safe, healthy, educated and employed becomes harder and harder every year," said Geiss.

Geiss, who grew up in Dearborn and graduated from Fordson High School, worked as a tool machinist for many years while raising his family. He attended Henry Ford Community and served on the Taylor City Council for six years — two of those as chairman. He also was elected to the Wayne County Charter Commission in November 1980.

David W. Geiss

In 1968 he became active with UAW Local 189 and in 1969 was elected bargaining committee chairman. He was served as financial secretary-treasurer of Local 189 from 1975-1983.

Geiss managed Ford's 1982 campaign and after the election he served as chief of staff in Washington, D.C. until Friday.

He described Ford as "my friend, my mentor and my supporter. "One of my top priorities in Congress will be job training and retraining, with the main focus being on education," said Geiss.

Health care reform is a very personal issue for the Geiss family. Seven years ago, his wife, Jacqueline, was diagnosed with leukemia and underwent intensive chemotherapy.

"Fortunately, I had a great employer — Bill Ford — who allowed me to take medical leave to be with her during this time."

"I want to be sure that all workers can get coverage that will see them through the expense of an unexpected illness and that the coverage be transferable if they choose to switch jobs or find themselves without a job."

On violent crime, Geiss advocates certainty of punishment.

"I believe we need truth in sentencing, so that a 20-year sentence for a violent crime means 20 years, not three or four," said Geiss.

Geiss, who now lives in Wayne, said he knows the 13th District.

"I've lived in Dearborn and Taylor. I helped put this district together," said Geiss, referring to the redistricting that was done more than two years ago.

Geiss is the third Democrat to enter the race. An Ypsilanti attorney also is seeking the Democratic nomination Bryan Amann, a Wayne County Commissioner, had previously announced but withdrew last month citing family concerns.

John Schall, formerly of Livonia and now of Ann Arbor, has announced his bid for the Republican nomination.

The filing deadline is May 10.

Hosts of grad parties facing new liabilities

Wayne County Prosecutor John O'Hair has issued a press release warning adults who intend to host high school graduation parties, or who rent premises or a limousine to high school graduates in connection with a high school prom or graduation party.

A new criminal statute that takes effect June 1 will apply to any adult who owns or controls "premises" defined as any "place of assembly." If the adult allows those premises to be used by individuals less than 21 years of age to consume alcoholic beverages, the adult is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for up to 30 days, or by a fine up to $1,000, or both. Upon a second or subsequent conviction, the adult is guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment up to 90 days, or by a fine up to $1,000, or both.

"The obligation of parents, limousine rental companies, hotel and motel operators, and other adults not to contribute to the delinquency of minors with respect to alcohol consumption is now more clearly stated in our law than ever," said O'Hair in the press release.

"The goal of our legislators is a noble one to stop the perennial springtime story of bright and hopeful young graduates who die in car crashes. I fully expect local police agencies in Wayne County to be very vigilant this prom and graduation season to be sure that the laws of the state of Michigan on underage drinking are strictly enforced."

Race aids breast cancer screening

Organizers for Saturday's third annual Race for the Cure say 5,800 runners have registered for the event to be held at the Detroit Zoo.

Parking is expected to fill fast so Jane Hoey, race organizer, encourages participants to car pool or arrange for a ride to and from the Detroit Zoo.

Once the zoo parking areas are filled, buses will shuttle from Oakland Community College in Royal Oak and at the State Fair Grounds (use entrance No. 3 turn on State Fair which is one block south of Eight Mile), Hoey said.

Race participants can go directly to OCC or to the zoo where race guides will provide further parking instructions.

The third Detroit Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation Race for the Cure is a 5 kilometer run/walk/racewalk and one mile fun run which brings together people of all ages and athletic abilities to promote breast cancer awareness and early detection.

Runners and walkers can still

register for the race Saturday morning from 7:30-8:30 a.m. Cost is $20.

Michelle Engler, Michigan's First Lady, will start the race.

The first 1,000 finishers receive commemorative Race for the Cure lapel pins and the first 2,000 finishers will receive pink carnations. Pink is the color that symbolizes breast cancer awareness. Pink ribbons will be given to all participants (while supplies last).

The local race is dedicated to the memory of Alexa Kraft, a runner, wife and mother of five, who died of breast cancer in 1988 at the age of 39.

Nearly 7,000 Michigan women will be diagnosed with breast cancer in 1994, and 2,000 will die of the disease this year. But, according to Gwen MacKenzie, Michigan Cancer Foundation Prentiss Comprehensive Cancer Center vice president, events, such as the Race for the Cure, can help turn those numbers around.

"Right now, our best defense against breast cancer is early detection — screening, mammography, self examinations and physicians' physical breast exams," MacKenzie said. "When breast cancer is detected in its earliest, most treatable stages, chances for cure increase dramatically."

Among the thousands of walkers and racers will be hundreds of breast cancer survivors and their families. They will be wearing with honor — the pink ribbons, buttons and visors that have come to symbolize the nation's awareness of breast cancer.

Proceeds from the 1994 race will continue to support breast cancer educational and screening activities throughout southeastern Michigan, with special emphasis on reaching low-income, medically underserved women.

The Detroit race is presented locally by the MCF Prentiss Comprehensive Cancer Center. Its local sponsors are Jacobson's, ComputerWare, WDIV-TV 4, The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, WNIC-FM, William Beaumont Hospital Mammography Services, The Mortgage Authority, Preferred Medical Associates, the Detroit Edison Foundation, Plunkett & Cooney, Loomis, Sayles & Co. Inc., the Taubman Company, Dykema Gosssett, Amoena Corp. and Comerica Bank.

Participants will be admitted to the zoo free of charge after the race.

For information on cancer and services, call the Cancer Information Service of Indiana and Michigan at (800) 4-CANCER.

Contest seeks biggest trees in Michigan

Global Re-Leaf of Michigan, the Michigan Department of Natural Resources and the state Urban and Community Forestry Council are giving prizes to people who identify the biggest tree in their community.

Each winner will receive a certificate honoring her or him for finding the biggest tree in town.

In honor of Arbor Day, participants of all ages may search their communities to find the tree with the greatest circumference. A prize will be awarded to each individual who locates the largest tree entered from each city, town, village, or township.

A separate prize goes to the individual locating the largest white pine, Michigan's state tree.

Each entry will be verified. Multiple entries are fine. Entries must be postmarked on or before April 25. In the case of duplicate entries, the one with the earliest postmark will win. Submit entries in a letter or on a postcard to: Big Tree Hunt, P.O. Box 9043, Livonia, MI 48151.

Judges sought for bulging suburbs

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

One year, certain suburbs top the region in building permits. A few years later, with development and population growth, they're seeking more district court judges.

The state Senate next week will take up a House passed bill to add one judge each in the 35th District Court (Northville, Plymouth, Canton), 47th District (Farmington) and Oakland Circuit Court.

District 52-1 (Novi, South Lyon, Milford and Walled Lake) is eligible to add one judge, but local officials declined.

"It (Senate action) has got to be real soon," said Graham Crabtree, counsel to Senate Judiciary Committee chairman William Van Regenmortel. R-Jenison. "The chairman wants a hearing right after spring break (due to end April 12)."

Candidate filing deadline is May 10.

The average annual operating cost per new judge to the state is $170,000. The costs include salaries, Social Security payments and $6,000 in recording equipment.

Meanwhile, voters will be adding four Court of Appeals judges in the Nov. 8 election—all in a new southwestern Michigan's 3rd District District 1 (Wayne, Monroe and Lenawee counties) will actually lose a judge in the reapportionment scheme. Appeals Judge Thomas J. Brennan, who is over 70, is retiring and will not be replaced.

Adding a judge is a three-step process.

First, the State Court Administrator's office analyzes caseloads and issues a recommendation. That office makes recommendations freely. For example, the court administrator asked for 12 new Court of Appeals judges (currently there are 12) and got four.

Second, the local funding unit must ask for the increase, agreeing to bear its share of the cost. In the 35th District, the two Northville, the two Plymouths and Canton Township agreed to add a third judge. In the 47th, the cities of Farmington and Farmington Hills agreed.

But there was a problem in Oakland County, the funding unit for District 52-1 and circuit court. The court administrator recommended a third judge in the district court and two more in circuit court. The county board agreed only to one circuit judge.

Third, the Legislature must pass a law expanding the court, agreeing to bear the state's share of the cost. That's the issue before the Senate Judiciary Committee next week.

"Average annual operating cost per new judge (to the state) was $170,000," said the court administrator. The costs include salaries, Social Security, and $6,000 in recording equipment.

Here is what the State Court Administrator said in support of its recommendations for new trial judges.

■ 35th District (Plymouth, etc.)

In 1992 the court had 20,186 new filings per judge compared to 11,396 statewide per district judge. (The higher than average drunk driving caseload is particularly significant.) Three freeways have expanded the economic and population bases.

■ 47th District (Farmington area) "Cases that require significantly greater judicial time than a typical case are especially high in this court. The court is located in an area of increasing population growth and commercial activity."

■ 52-1 District Court (Walled Lake, etc.) "From 1991 to 1992 reported new filings increased by 12 percent. (The judges of this division average over 1,500 more non-traffic cases than the statewide average. The division is located in an area of rapid economic and population growth."

Refer to House Bill 5328 when writing to your state senator, State Capitol, Lansing 48913.

Area residents to attend youth violence seminar

Representatives from Westland, Plymouth, Farmington and Farmington Hills will join about 150 other professionals from the metropolitan area at a seminar on "Youth Violence: Who's In Charge?" Thursday, April 14, at the Plaza Hotel in Southfield.

Beverly Coleman Miller, a physician and an authority on the prevention of youth violence in communities, will be the featured speaker.

The seminar includes a cross-section of professionals and community representatives, including elementary, middle and high school educators and administrators, social workers and counselors, law enforcement officers, judges, attorneys, probation officers and youth care specialists, according to Jeanne Knopf DeRoche, president of The Knopf Co. Inc. of Plymouth.

The seminar will address the severity of community violence, trends and differences in urban and rural communities and a prevention model from public health through law enforcement. The afternoon session will present what works and what doesn't in community prevention of violence, steps that need to be taken to ensure a clear purpose and effective plan.

When we see images of discrimination or death in Bosnia, Somalia or elsewhere in the world, the U.S. rushes in to help, sending peacekeepers, warriors and mediators. Yet there's a chronic undeclared war taking place in our own cities, a war which needs the same level of attention and amount of resources that is, of necessity, offered across the world," said Coleman Miller, an internal medicine specialist who has been treating the victims of inner city violence for years.

"Violence is bred in the environment, it's a learned behavior," said Coleman Miller, "and our streets and homes are the classroom. It's time we, as responsible adults, begin to unteach it."

Coleman Miller is a consultant to several U.S. departments, including Health and Human Services, Education, and Justice. She holds a medical degree from Temple University School of Medicine.

Registration is limited. Cost is $95 for the one-day seminar which includes lunch and materials. There is a discount for two or more from the same organization. For reservations, call The Knopf Co. in Plymouth at 1-800-420-4343.

Folks interested in commenting on the board's intention may attend the public hearing in the board room of the Administration Building, 18600 Haggerty Road, between Six and Seven Mile roads.

Also, the board will have another public hearing 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 25, to take public comment on the proposed 1994-95 general operating budget.

Law would make adoption easier

STAFF WRITER

Finding good families for homeless kids was the chief goal of Lt. Gov. Connie Binsfeld's Commission on Adoption.

Bills by Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, and Rep. Maxine Berman, D-Southfield, are among the 21 bills passed by the state Senate prior to its spring break.

The Geake-Berman package will require health insurers to cover children the day they enter their new homes rather than a year later, when the adoption becomes final.

"A child is a child," philosophized Berman, who has worked three years on the project, often with opposition from insurers.

Currently, adoptive parents frequently take their birth children to one doctor and their adopted children to another, sometimes in another town, who accepts Medicaid payments.

Meanwhile, Gov. John Engler's administration used a recommendation from the Binsfeld Commission to speed up the process of placing abused and neglected children who are wards of the state.

The Department of Social Services effort to speed the process is being hailed as good news by those who want to see children reunited with their "forever families," in Binsfeld's words.

Oakland Probate Judge Joan E.

Young praised the work of Richard Hoekstra, director of the division of adoption services for the state DSS.

"In 1991 we did 1,320 adoptions. In 1993 we did 1,959," an increase of 48 percent, said Hoekstra.

"First, we made changes in 1992 in our contracts with private agencies that we rely on to place half of our children. We give them (agencies) a financial incentive to place them within the first eight months of wardship — don't let them linger.

"Second, we made a diligent effort to get kids listed on the exchange," a state directory of available children.

Of the 5,000 adoptions done in Michigan each year, about 20 percent were state wards, the Binsfeld Commission reported.

In 1991 some 1,600 children a year were becoming state wards, but only 1,200 a year were being adopted. So the pool of state wards was growing at 400 children a year. At that rate, the pool would have grown to 5,000 by the year 2000.

But the administration was criticized by one member of the Binsfeld Commission, Don Marengere of Bloomfield Township. Former president of Adoption Option, Marengere said the state is cutting back its services to birth mothers, often unmarried teen-agers.

AROUND PLYMOUTH

Quoted

Ross M. Wordhouse, 25, who graduated from Plymouth Salem High School and received his art director's degree from the Center for Creative Studies, Detroit, was interviewed and quoted in the April issue of "Snowboarding" magazine.

Six of his illustrations are included in the article. The April issue also displays two of Wordhouse's ads. One is for the Gordo Snowboards about a Michigan snowboarder, Rob Benson. The second is an environmental ad about snowboarders and skiers, seen sharing a chair lift seat.

Wordhouse moved to Bend, Ore., after graduating from the Center for Creative Studies, when he realized he needed to be where the snowboard Mecca was in order to stay in touch with the industry. He snowboards daily and lives with three other snowboarders. He is the son of Jerry and Phyllis Wordhouse of Plymouth Township.

Fund-raiser

It's off to the races for district court judge candidate Ron Lowe. He is holding a fund-raiser on Saturday, May 7, to celebrate the Kentucky Derby, which will be held that day. The event will be held at the Plymouth Masonic Temple.

Local concert

The Jews for Jesus Liberated Wailing Wall will hold a music presentation 7:30 p.m. Friday at Trinity Presbyterian Church of Plymouth. The group has created a music style called Jewish gospel, with a sound that is different from the sacred, sanctified melodies of the church, and their lyrics are unlike the liturgy of the synagogue.

New manager chosen for Mettetal

Kitzie Aviation Inc. has been chosen as new manager of the Canton-Plymouth Mettetal Airport. Kitzie's proposal was among eight submitted to the aeronautics commission.

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Canton-Plymouth Mettetal Airport has a new manager.

"We're in the process of tying up a contract now," said Bill Gehman, Michigan Aeronautics Commission director.

Kitzie Aviation Inc., which now operates at Oakland Pontiac Airport, was chosen as the facility's new manager and fixed base operator, which can provide services at the airport.

Owner Douglas Kitzie is expected to begin operations at Mettetal on May 1. He will replace longtime fixed base operator Dan Malone of Emerald Aviation. Malone and Kitzie, neither of whom could be reached for comment, were among eight who submitted proposals for the position to the aeronautics commission.

Kitzie has more than 30 years of experience in the aviation industry, including aircraft maintenance, airport operations, air freight and personnel management.

As airport manager, Kitzie will be responsible for Mettetal operations, including airport and hangar maintenance, snow removal, mowing, public accommodations and general airport business activities.

As fixed base operator, Kitzie will offer a full maintenance facility, an aviation flight and ground school, and aircraft fuel sales.

Kitzie was chosen in the second round of requests for proposals. In late 1993, the state requested proposals, which accentuated a creative approach to the manager FBO position. When state officials had difficulty evaluating the seven bids, they started over with a request for new bids by Feb. 11.

The eight bids that were received in the second round were reviewed by a selection committee that included John Vergonna, a member of the Canton-Plymouth Mettetal Advisory Board.

Students, teachers shine at conference

Four students and 14 educators from the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools were presenters in the 18th annual MACUL conference on March 10-11 at the Amway Grand Plaza in Grand Rapids.

Sponsored by the Michigan Association for Computer-Related Technology Users in Learning, the two-day conference was attended by more than 3,000 educators from across the state.

Under the direction of Mac Lab directors Kathy Thompson and Jerry Thompson, student presenters included Salem junior Katie Christensen, Canton senior Ryan King, and Salem seniors Melissa McBee and Scott Spears. The Mac Labs serve as the computer writing labs at Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem high schools.

These Mac Lab student assistants have helped design, troubleshoot and manage the Mac Labs at the high schools. They volunteer their time before school and during the school day to assist students and staff in the Mac Lab.

Plymouth-Canton students presented as a part of the "Human Impact" topic, one of 12 topics offered at the conference. Presenters in this category focused on the physical or social impact of technology use, as well as the design of the technology lab.

Presenting under the topic "Cutting Edge," Donna Aveck and Karen Gearn demonstrated how the Dynacom Information System allows teachers to access and control a "World of Information" from a single remote control. Linda Haerberle and Marguerite Vollrath, media specialists from Pioneer and Central middle schools, demonstrated how they schedule media, integrate media into the curriculum and augment teaching with media. They showed how multimedia and technology is changing the role of the media specialist.

Presenting under the topic "Models for Classroom Success" were teachers Fred Crissey, "Tune-Out MTV - Tune-In to Literature"; Andrea Dubrinsky, Richard Johnson, and Nancy Malecki, "Multimedia Math and Science - Interactive Problem Solving"; and Barbara Greanya and Shelly Rybarysk, "Today's Technology Talks to Kids." These teachers aimed to show their peers how to engage students by integrating leading-edge technology into the curriculum.

Presenting under the topic "Special Needs" were Roby Jarczewski and Diane Sproull. They shared their new "bag of tricks" using the Xapshot camera, laser disc, CD-I, cable, and videotape to show how instruction is being enhanced across the curriculum for all students.

Conference participants learned about innovative programs offered throughout Michigan and the United States. Exhibits featured hardware, software, computer-related materials and other educational technology.

The only thing as pleasant as buying a Saturn is leasing one.

We hope you've heard how unstressful we try to make it for you when you visit a Saturn showroom. (Because who needs more stress, right?) Anyway, we take the same approach to leasing as we do to everything else. So if leasing a Saturn is better for you than buying one (and we can help you figure that out), then great. The only important thing is to find out how pleasant driving a Saturn can be.

Three Saturn car models with leasing details: The Saturn SL, The Saturn SL, and The Saturn SW1. Each includes a price per month, a $1,000 down payment, and a 36-month term. Small print details lease terms and conditions.

Another Reason To Buy A Pella Window

Pella Slimshade blinds. The best thing to happen to the window since the invention of glass.

You'll never have to clean blinds again!

They also help to keep a room warm in the winter and cool in the summer, saving you on energy costs. And they're fully adjustable, they can be raised or lowered, opened or closed - within the window!

If you own Pella Casement Windows that were manufactured in 1963 or later, they can be fitted with Raise and Lower Slimshade blinds.

Students to learn about photography

The Plymouth Kmart store at 40855 Ann Arbor Road has joined with Our Lady of Good Counsel Catholic School in a program that teaches second graders about photography and the environment using a program developed by Kmart and Kodak.

The second grade received an "It's a Snap! Using Cameras in the Curriculum" package courtesy of Kmart and Kodak. The package contains instructional manuals, a Kodak Fun Time Single Use camera for every student in the class, a photo display unit, and a supplemental educational videotape. The instructional manual highlights environmental and photographic lessons that encourage students to look at the world around them and think about the impact they can have on it. Lessons like "Identifying My Beautiful World," "Reuse and Recycle" and "How Nature Recycles." "Adopt a Tree" promote creativity and teach children to be more aware of environmental issues like recycling.

The educational videotape emphasizes environmental awareness and features nationally known celebrity photojournalist Linda Solomon, who offers her advice about cameras and their use. A lesson called "Photographing My Beautiful World" covers information about how a camera works and professional photographic techniques.

The students' first photo assignment will be to photograph six elements of their world and six aspects that need improvement. Upon completion of the project, every camera will be returned to Kmart for free development courtesy of Kmart's photo processors.

Students will enter their favorite photo into a contest to be judged by local officials and Kmart personnel. The classrooms also will assemble and decorate a special photo the week of May 15.

Grand prize, second and third place winners will be selected and entered into a contest of local Kmart partner school winners nationwide to be judged by Linda Solomon. The grand prize winner will receive a Kodak Photo FX camera kit, and every student will receive a Certificate of Achievement.

"This educational program exercises young people's creativity and stimulates their ability to communicate," said Charlie Fischer, manager of educational programs, Kodak's Consumer Imaging. "Through this program, kids are encouraged to learn more about their world through photography."

Milestone marked

The PLUS preschool program offered by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools is celebrating 20 years of serving children and families in the community.

PLUS, which stands for Pupils Learning Useful Skills, is a free program offered to 4-year-old children and their parents who live in the attendance areas of Eriksson, Farrand, Field, Gallimore, Hoben or Smith elementary schools. The program is operated by the school district in conjunction with a grant from the federal government.

"This unique program gives parents an opportunity to be involved in their child's education by attending parent classes once a week during the time their child is in school," said Mary Fritz, program director.

More than 120 students participate in the program each year, along with their parents. Children and parents attend joint classes, as well as individual classes. Some families participate in the home program, which features teachers visiting homes to instruct children and parents.

Topics covered in the parent classes include nutrition, child management, child development, health, safety and other areas of interest in family life. Activities for home use also are discussed in the parent classes. Many joint trips and activities for parents and children are planned throughout the year. Classes for children and parents are held at Central Middle School, 650 Church in Plymouth.

"The PLUS program serves as a support service for parents," Fritz said. "Parents are able to get together to talk about similar problems."

The children's program emphasizes child development principles and a variety of activities geared to promote creative thinking and problem-solving skills. Hands-on computer science activities also are a part of the program. The classes are taught by Mary Lou Boyd, Cynthia Gresens and Mary Hoffman, teachers who specialize in early childhood education.

Interested parents may apply now for the 1994-95 school year. To register or for more information on the program, call 416-6195.

Gallimore School School board loses credibility

The Plymouth-Canton school board decision this week to keep Gallimore Elementary School in Canton open smacks of political manipulation.

Earlier this year, in an effort to save money Superintendent John Hoben suggested that the school be closed and the students transferred to others. He recommended that Gallimore be used to house special programs now located at Tanger, Starkweather and Central Middle School. He suggested selling Tanger and Starkweather.

The proposal appeared to be set in stone, even though it angered Canton parents.

It also raised speculation that the schools were trying to manipulate the public prior to the statewide vote on Proposal A.

The technique was similar to that used by schools prior to past millage elections. Announce that sports and activities will be cut if voters don't opt for the millage. In other words, cut something that people care about, like neighborhood schools or sports and activities.

And now that the school board is making an about-face decision on Gallimore, that seems likely. Even if political manipulation wasn't the goal, the reversal hurts the credibility of the schools.

The message Gallimore sent was that the schools will have to close it, if voters approved Proposal A. The school board took no formal stance on the property tax cutting measure, but board members privately said they didn't like either plan.

Whether Gallimore was just another cheap trick to influence the outcome of Proposal A or if it was a valid way to look at cost containment matters not. What matters is that the schools have lost more credibility with the public.

And it's something the district can't afford.

Board candidates needed

The passage of Proposal A, the increased pressure on schools to produce workers with better skills and social problems are all challenges facing education.

The list seems daunting, but Plymouth residents can do something, they can run for Plymouth Canton School Board. Monday, April 11, is the filing deadline for the June 13 school board election. There are three open seats, two four-year terms and one one-year term.

When it comes to a school board election, the more candidates there are, the better it is for the public, the schools and the tax payers.

When there was a vacancy on the school board created by the resignation of Dean Swartzwelder in November, 15 people applied for that seat. The board selected Susan Feiten of Plymouth to fill it.

But now that the election is coming, we challenge those same people to run for office.

Petitions to run for the board are available at the E.J. McClendon Educational Center, 454 S. Harvey, Plymouth. Each petition must contain 45 valid signatures and must be filed by 5 p.m. on Monday.

Last minute candidates have enough time to obtain enough signatures on petitions this weekend.

It's time for more school board candidates to run.

Parks need untouchable fund

Michigan has a chance to rescue one of its greatest treasures — its parks system — from a future of continual neglect that might never be reversed.

The 75-year-old parks system, which has provided recreation opportunities to millions of residents and tourists, has been the victim of declining money. That has translated into higher fees but fewer park workers and less money to maintain the grounds.

Legislators have been working on a ballot proposal to change the state constitution that would create an endowment fund for the parks and prevent diversion of money from the Natural Resources Trust Fund for other uses.

The trust, started in 1982, is funded by revenue from oil and gas found on state land. But that money in the past has been raided for other projects, including balancing the state budget.

The constitutional amendment would end that practice, creating an endowment fund of $20 million a year specifically for the 100 park system. In a few years interest from the fund could be used to improve parks, better staff them and buy other land to further enhance and protect the existing parks.

The fund would ease the budget burden while adequately providing money for a resource that can't be replaced once it is lost.

State appropriations for the parks shrank from 70 percent to 30 percent of the system's budget, and user fees made up some of the difference. But the parks have had to run on ever leaner budgets at the same time many parks are overused or in disrepair.

Private interests wouldn't be expected to hire wildlife biologists, naturalists and the other professionals needed to maintain a top flight park system. It is the state's responsibility to protect this resource, especially because tourism is our second biggest industry.

Some critics in the Legislature have said their constituents don't use the parks and derive little benefit. But whether you use them or not, they attract tourism, which brings a lot of money to the state, and the parks ensure that generations to come will be able to enjoy the out-of-doors.

The constitutional amendment would simply use money from natural resources taken from state land to protect and preserve that very land. It is not an added tax. Interest from the fund would eventually provide operating money for the parks system.

The endowment fund has support from the Michigan United Conservation Club and many recreation professionals statewide.

Local units of government can provide many recreational activities, but for the most part, they do not have the means to provide the kind of recreation the state parks service can.

Although Wayne and Oakland County communities provide active recreation parks, residents have to rely on metro parks and nearby state parks that are heavily used and understaffed if they want to go to beaches, wooded trails or winter recreation areas.

The endowment fund would relieve that pressure on parks and protect the future of this great resource from the whims of state legislators looking for money for other projects.

Marriage class

I wish to thank the Observer and M.B. Dillon specifically for the positive article on the mock marriage ceremony that took place in the Human Relations classes at Plymouth Canton High School. The students and I were pleased to read about the class and our activities.

One of the photos that accompanied the story featured a student "bride" and "groom" exchanging a kiss. Some people have expressed concern that this is part of the curriculum in Human Relations, and I wish to clarify that it is not. It was a brief response by a boyfriend and girlfriend in the class which was captured by the Observer photographer.

My thanks again for spreading the word about an important class.

Kind world

On Tuesday, March 29, I was unfortunate enough to witness a dog hit by a car on Cherry Hill Road at Sheldon.

I again believe this world does have some kindness left in it, and I would like to thank those that came to my aid to save this animal.

The lady in the black truck that called for help on her car phone.

The man in the white car who stopped and came out into the road to see what he could do to help.

The lady in the green van that calmed me and reaffirmed my trust in others when she went across the street to shut off my car, and brought me my keys and purse.

And most of all the wonderful Canton fire-fighters who pulled over and took the time to help move the dog off the roadway and attempted to evaluate its condition. Someone even bandaged the dog's leg, and it was covered and handled gently. These men were very comforting to me and the animal. It did not matter if their "patient" was not a human. I can tell these men care about helping others.

Thank you to the man from Critter Control for transport to the humane society.

Last but certainly not least, thank you to the people at the Westland shelter for your kindness and understanding toward a very upset animal lover. And your kindness toward this poor, frightened animal.

Thanks to everyone that gave this dog another chance at life. God bless you all.

Enforcement of building regulations essential in our community

The Plymouth Planning Commission recently approved the rezoning of a lot in Old Village from RT 1 (two family residential) to P 1 (single family residential). The reasons: The property was not maintained by the renter, and it was in the best interest of the area to demolish the home.

First, it is my understanding that the owner of the property, not the renter, is responsible for the upkeep and maintenance of the building, since the owner is the one who will gain from any appreciation that the property will experience.

Perhaps the property owner did not wish to upgrade the property to successfully argue for a lower tax rate because of the condition of the building. Regardless of the building's condition and for whatever reason it was not maintained, the owner, and not the renter, is responsible for the building. If the renter could afford to improve the property, he would have probably purchased his own home.

Secondly, why was the condition of the building allowed to deteriorate? The city has zoning and building regulations to prevent buildings from reaching unsafe or improper maintenance conditions. The solution to rid the city of poorly maintained buildings should not be to let buildings decay and property values decline, but rather to enforce the existing building codes.

For quite some time, Plymouth has had a reputation for allowing spot zoning. Apartment complexes, rental properties, multi dwelling structures and office buildings taint our residential neighborhoods. According to the city zoning map, there is not one piece of property in Old Village zoned single family residential. Every single family residential lot in Old Village has been rezoned to either multi dwelling, office, business, light industrial or parking.

This type of planning was made by a city that prides itself on historical preservation and a neighborly atmosphere. Unfortunately, the slogan "City of Homes" has become a shallow expression and does not represent the image Plymouth once had when Main Street was lined with beautiful trees and homes. The preservation of single family housing in a community is just as important as the livelihood of the business district.

The city spends resources, both manpower and time, on enforcing parking meter time limits, while spending no resources on the education and enforcement of building and zoning regulation.

Regulations, when neglected have a detrimental effect on city property values. I am not aware of property values ever being affected by an automobile remaining parked after the meter time had expired.

To prevent any property from deteriorating to the point where the only solution is to demolish the structure, the city should make a serious effort to enact one or all of the following suggestions. Enforce the existing building regulations. Hire an administrator to monitor and enforce building codes and zoning ordinances. Revert small lots back to single family residential if that was their original intended purpose. And require the posting of a sign on any property that is being considered for rezoning.

I am encouraged by the news that the streetscape plan has been resurrected. Improving the surroundings of the downtown area is a positive catalyst to help generate interest for investing and living in Plymouth. However, in addition to the streetscape plan, enforcing building regulations is equally important to the revitalization of Plymouth.

Memoirs of a sister who lost Race for the Cure

Carol Silverman and her friends will be walking the Race for the Cure at 9 a.m. Saturday at the Detroit Zoo for the first time.

Silverman, of Bloomfield Hills, had planned to participate in the annual fund-raiser for breast cancer research last year.

She changed those plans to be in Tennessee, where her sister was undergoing last-ditch experimental treatment for a cancer that had first invaded her breast tissue 12 years before.

Sad, isn't it, that the breast is regarded as a symbol of womanhood has become for all too many women a vehicle for anguish or death.

Silverman's sister, former Wayne County resident Fanny Hill Gaynes, knew that full well.

The first chapter in her book, "How Am I Gonna Find A Man If I'm Dead," is called "Soothing the savage breast."

The book, scheduled for publication later this month, chronicles her 12-year battle against cancer with candor and a heavy dose of humor. She died last October.

For those who are afraid to do or have a breast exam, for those who have had even a small brush with the terror that pulses through you after discovering a lump in the breast and the exquisite relief of finding that it is benign, and for those who have actually been diagnosed with breast cancer, it's a hard read.

But a worthwhile one. Her up and down battle, trying to keep up with the latest research, trying to keep down the ever-creeping cancer, is a tribute to her spirit, her friends and family and to the medical profession.

"Had she been here, she would have gone in a wheelchair," said Silverman of Saturday's race, which already has nearly 6,000 people registered, including 300 cancer survivors. She bases that on her sister's determination to live, her belief in medical research and her dedication to helping others who are still fighting the battle she lost.

"Many cancer survivors are incredible people. My sister impacted so many lives—as sick as she was she was so willing to help people."

In the preface to her book, Gaynes makes it clear she doesn't advocate any particular kind of therapy for a person with cancer.

"What I do recommend is that you ask a lot of questions, do a lot of reading and find out what your options are," she writes. "Research continues, more results come in and expert opinions change. Again, do that research."

And never lose hope. Unfortunately, a lot of us may well need both the document of determination by Gaynes and the medical research, support and education money that the race provides, part of which stays in southeastern Michigan.

That's because nearly 7,000 Michigan women will be diagnosed with breast cancer and 2,000 will die of the disease—just this year.

But I don't have to tell you that. All of us know more people than we care to count who have been affected by breast cancer—as well as their children, husbands and parents.

Walk, race, walk, run or make a donation Saturday on their behalf—and on your own.

State has the right to set standards for our schools

You didn't ask, but 11 public hearings are coming up in May on public school accreditation standards in Michigan.

We all got bogged down during the Proposal A debate—sales tax, income tax, homestead exemption deadlines, cigarette tax, assessment cap, money, money, money. I expected somebody would ask what, if anything, Lansing was doing about education reform. Now things are moving fast.

The day after the March 15 Proposal A election, the State Board of Education approved new standards to accredit public schools. They include MEAP assessment tests, attendance, dropout rates, graduation rates and other criteria.

Oh, it's not final approval. A committee gave it to the State Board, the State Board is sending it to local and intermediate school districts, colleges, universities, chambers of commerce and the like, and then come the hearings.

■ Wayne Intermediate School District 9:30-11:30 a.m. Monday, May 9, 6:30-8:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 10.

■ Oakland Intermediate School District 1:4 p.m. and 6:30-8:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 10.

■ Detroit Public Schools 6:30-8:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 11, and 9:11-30 a.m. Thursday, May 12.

Since the summer day when the Legislature abolished local school operating property taxes, I hardly covered the State Board of Education. A letter from board member Dorothy Beardmore, R-Rochester, jostled me.

It seems the now-famous PA 25 of 1990, the law setting up school improvement plans, was updated in the laundry list of laws passed by the Legislature on Christmas Eve day. The new law is PA 335 of 1993.

"Every school building in Michigan is expected to meet state accreditation standards," Beardmore told an educators conference March 17. "Failure to become accredited will result in financial penalties to the school district."

The state can accredit schools for three years. Accreditation can be at one of three levels: full, interim, non-accredited.

Other changes are coming down the pike. ■ "Core curriculum outcomes"—The State Board has a Sept. 1 deadline for developing a model core curriculum in "math, science, reading, history, geography, economics, American government and writing," but not "attitudes, beliefs or value systems." Note the word "outcomes." A student may "test out" of some courses.

Commented Beardmore: "No more can a teacher say, as some are reputed to have done, 'We covered the material' or 'I taught it, they just didn't learn it.' Learning is the essential thing, not the names or numbers of courses."

■ School year—PA 335 sets the usual 180 days of instruction this year but shifts to a 900-hour standard for 1994, 990 hours in 1995, 1,035 in 1997 and 1,080 in 1999-2000. Goal is 210 instructional days by 2009.

■ Endorsed diploma—A pupil scheduled to graduate in 1994, 1995 or 1996 must pass state or local proficiency tests to get a state endorsement on his or her diploma.

Some complain this is a state takeover of local control. Wrong. Since 1837 Michigan has had state supervision of public schools in its constitution. "Local control" never has been in the Michigan Constitution.

Finally, the state is doing what Lewis Cass, Stevens T. Mason and John D. Pierce wanted it to do.

Finding birth parents

By TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Adults who were adopted as children will have a new tool to find their birth parents in a package of bills winding through the Michigan Legislature.

They can get a court appointed "confidential intermediary" to locate birth parents and ask them if they wish contact with the children they gave up for adoption years ago.

"Some of us do that already," said Oakland Probate Judge Joan E. Young. "We may authorize a staff member or someone from an agency."

"It has been successful. The times I've used it, it has worked well. The birth parent is asked, 'Do you want to be found?' The majority say yes. Sometimes they say, 'Not right now,'" Young said.

A Bloomfield Township resident, Young was a member of the Lt. Gov. Connie Binsfeld's Commission on Adoption that worked in 1991-2 to suggest administrative changes and new laws.

It's confidential

The "confidential intermediary" (CI) bill was sponsored by Sen. Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham. It codifies into the probate code the kinds of efforts Young and other judges tried.

The bill also would ease the problem adult adoptees face in obtaining non-identifying information about their parents. Many testified in House hearings held by Rep. David Gubow, D-Huntington Woods, that the inability to learn their own genetic histories prevented them from getting treatment.

Other key elements of the Bouchard bill:

- After receiving a petition from an adult adoptee, a probate judge could appoint a CI who would take an oath not to report "identifying information in sealed records without written consent" of the birth parent. A CI who released confidential information could be held in contempt of court.

'The birth parent is asked, 'Do you want to be found?' The majority say yes. Sometimes they say, 'Not right now.'

Joan Young
Probate judge

- The CI would be allowed access to confidential adoption records and would approach the birth parent through "a discreet and confidential inquiry." The birth parent could say "yes," "no" or "not now." A "yes" would have to be in writing.

- The CI's compensation would be limited to reimbursement for actual expenses from the petitioner.

Bouchard's bill has passed the Senate and will be taken up by the House Judiciary Committee after the spring break.

Speed it up

One goal of the Binsfeld Commission was to find adoptive families faster for abused and neglected children who are wards of the state.

That already has occurred through administrative changes that required no change in the law, Young said, praising the work of Richard Hoekstra, director of the division of adoption services for the state Department of Social Services.

"In 1991 we did 1,320 adoptions. In 1993 we did 1,959," an increase of 48 percent, said Hoekstra.

"First, we made changes in 1992 in our contracts with private agencies that we rely on to place half of our children. We give them (agencies) a financial incentive to place them within the first eight months of wardship — don't let them linger."

"Second, we made a diligent effort to get kids listed on the exchange," a state directory of available children.

Of the 5,000 adoptions done in Michigan each year, about 20 percent were of state wards, the Binsfeld Commission reported.

In 1991 some 1,600 children a year were becoming state wards, but only 1,200 a year were being adopted. So the pool of state wards was growing at 400 children a year. At that rate, the pool would have grown to 5,000 by the year 2000.

So the DSS effort to speed the process is being hailed as good news by those who want to see children "united with their forever families," in Binsfeld's words.

PLYMOUTH SPORTS SCENE

Title time

With the glut of sports at this time of year — prep spring sports just getting started while winter athletes are into their final weeks — it's not surprising to discover something gets lost in the shuffle.

And even though this is for a national championship, it escapes almost everyone's attention. But it is here: The National Women's Hockey Championships, to be played at the Ice Box in Brownstown Township starting today.

The defending champion in the Midget (16-19) Division is Michigan's Little Caesars team. Little Caesars will begin its quest for a second straight title at 6 p.m. today.

One player the team will be depending on is its goalie: Stacey Chuhran, a senior at Plymouth Salem from Canton.

The sport is nothing new to Chuhran. She's been playing for nine years, but until her freshman year at Salem she competed with boys' teams.

"I just like playing it," was her very simple explanation for choosing hockey. And goalie was always her position.

Streaking Green Streak

The under-10 champions in the second session of indoor soccer at the Canton Soccer dome were the Green Streak of the Plymouth Soccer Club. The Streak collected the championship in impressive style — going 7-0-1, scoring 42 goals while allowing just six.

Team search

The Plymouth Canton Babe Ruth League is looking for a team to join either their 13-year-old prep league or their 14-15-year-old major league. Interested managers should call Robert Woods at 416-2546.

Can Salem repeat '93's success?

By C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

Derailing a non-stop express bound for a third straight championship won't be easy.

Which is the way Plymouth Salem girls track coach Mark Gregor likes it. Now entering his seventh season as the Rocks' coach, Gregor will have his team pointing for another Western Lakes Activities Association title.

If they can come close to matching last year's campaign, more than an other league banner will be reaped.

"A conference title is No. 1, then a regional title," outlined Gregor. "Anything after that will be a bonus."

Bet on the bonus.

Salem not only won the WLAA and its Class A regional last year, but went on to finish second at the state meet. The Rocks have some notable losses, among them Tonya Wheeler, state champ in the 400 meters; Stacy Witthoff, eighth at state in the 800; Dana Driscoll, a sprinter and long jumper who ranks second on Salem's career scoring list, and Kathryn Ryan, second in the discus at the WLAA meet.

All, Gregor notes, were "big contributors." But so are the returnees, as Salem's second-place tie with Detroit Martin Luther King at Saturday's Spartan Relays (out of 43 teams) indicates.

His formula for success is as basic as it gets: "Part of our philosophy is to get kids who have experience, to help train newcomers. The freshmen and sophomores who come along can attribute their success to that philosophy."

Thirteen girls qualified for last year's state meet in what Gregor called the "deepest (team) in school history." The Rocks scored in eight events. Saturday's Spartan Relays performance was similar — Salem scored in 10 of 13 events, totaling 46 points. Only Ann Arbor Pioneer, with 61, outscored the Rocks.

In fact, they are so deep it was difficult selecting captains. That's why there are five of them: seniors Sarah Makins, Lynda Sebestyen and Donna Bernhardt, and juniors Sarah Hamilton and Marcia Parker.

Makins was the WLAA champ in the 100 meters and took second in the long jump, she was also a state finalist in the long jump. Sebestyen was third in the WLAA in the 800, while Hamilton and Parker led the sprint corps. Hamilton won the WLAA's 200 title and was fifth in the 400 at state; Parker was second in the WLAA's 200 final. Bernhardt leads the Rocks' shot put and discus group.

Salem finished in the top four at state in three of four relays, and Sebestyen, Hamilton and Parker each had a role. The 3,200 team, with Sebestyen, Hamilton, Courtney Sheldon and Kelly Stankov could outdo last season's third place at state, and the 1,600 relay, with returnees Hamilton and Sheldon joined by Parker and sophomore Kim Sheldon might challenge last year's foursome, which was second at state.

All of Salem's relays — the Rocks won three of them at last year's WLAA meet and was second in the other — are top-notch. Indeed, there are few weaknesses on this team.

Junior Melissa Hopson is solid in the high jump (third WLAA), the 100 hurdles and 300 hurdles (second WLAA); senior Alysia Sofios handles the long jump and 100; senior Emily Farrell (3,200), junior Karen Aiming for more: Alysia Sofios is one of several promising returnees who hope to guide the Rocks to another conference championship and a return trip to the state meet.

Targeting the top

Chiefs plan to block Rocks' title hopes

By C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

It's not fun being second best, especially when you've become accustomed to the top spot.

But Plymouth Canton's girls track team has found itself in just such a position. And to make matters worse, the team that's relegated the Chiefs to that spot is located just across the creek and parking lot.

That's right. Plymouth Salem will be gunning for its third straight Western Lakes Activities Association title this season, and if early season indicators are worth anything, the Rocks stand a very good chance of achieving it.

The biggest obstacle in Salem's path will be Canton, if the Chiefs and their coach, George Przygodski, have anything to say about it.

"I'd like to think they're pretty good," said Przygodski in rating his team. "We have a tremendous nucleus back. There's a lot of talent returning. This team definitely has ability."

"I have a good feeling about this team. I think we'll be competitive with anyone in our area. I'll tell you one thing: We won't back down from anyone."

No reason to think they would. Canton will be pursuing its 10th straight Western Division title; the Chiefs won the WLAA twice in Przygodski's eight previous years at the helm, in '88 and '91. They were 6-1 in dual meets last season.

They were also second in the WLAA and second at the state regional meet. Unfortunately, the team that handed them their only dual meet defeat, the team that finished ahead of them in both the WLAA and at the regional, was Salem.

There's more than a chance the order could change this year. Canton's biggest losses are Selena Bastine and Stephanie Gray, the team's top two throwers in '93.

(Bastine holds school records in the shot put and discus, she was second in the region and third in the WLAA in the shot, and hurdler Karina Kilpelainen (second in the 100 meter hurdles, fourth in the 300 hurdles at the WLAA, third at region in the 100 hurdles.)

But the returnees are impressive. Seniors Ndu Okwumabua and Lana Boroditsch and junior Olive Ikeh top the list. Okwumabua was third at state in the high jump, one of two events she won at the WLAA (the 100 was the other); Boroditsch won the 1,600 at both the WLAA and region, and Ikeh developed into a valuable do everything.

"She's a phenomenal athlete. She will be doing a lot of things for us," said Przygodski of Ikeh, rattling off the events she could compete in: the 100, 200, 100 hurdles, shot put, high jump and almost any relay.

Obstacle ahead: There have been precious few barriers that have stopped Canton's Ndu Okwumabua. But the Chiefs still must overcome a considerable challenge — defending league champ Plymouth Salem.

Look for the Loon

People are scrambling to get their returns in the mail as the April 15th tax deadline draws near, but don't overlook a golden opportunity to help restore the state's endangered plants and animals and support nongame wildlife.

Look for the loon (line 26) on your Michigan tax return and check the appropriate box to donate a small portion of your tax return to Michigan's Nongame Wildlife Fund.

"The people of this state have consistently shown their support for protecting and enhancing Michigan's natural heritage, and I encourage everyone to continue their support through the income tax checkoff," said Michigan Department of Natural Resources director Roland Harmes. "The fledging of the first peregrine falcon in 35 years on a building in downtown Detroit and the birth of a trumpeter swan, gone from the state for nearly 100 years, shows that individuals can have a visible, positive impact through these donations."

Since its inception in 1983, the Nongame Wildlife Fund has received over $5.5 million from Michigan taxpayers to benefit endangered and threatened animals and plants as well as a number of other natural heritage species.

This support has allowed research and surveys of bald eagles, loons and gray wolves in Michigan. In addition, last year the Nongame Wildlife Fund supported construction of a cage to protect one of North America's largest bat hibernating areas, an abandoned mine in the Upper Peninsula.

A small donation from your tax return will hardly be noticed and the money goes a long way in supporting Michigan's nongame wildlife.

Anglers and hunters are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to Outdoors, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI 48009. Fax information to 644-1314 or call Bill Parker Monday evenings at 901-2573.

Madonna wins 4 to open district

The wins continue to mount for Madonna University's baseball team.

After getting pounded 15-0 in the opener of Saturday's non-district doubleheader at Grand Valley State, the Fighting Crusaders have rattled off five consecutive wins — four of those in NAA District 23 play.

"I'd like to keep it rolling," said Madonna coach Mike George. "But we're still not playing as well as we're capable of playing."

The most recent victories were a pair of 10-run mercy wins over district foe Grand Rapids Baptist Tuesday at Madonna University Park. The Crusaders won the opener 12-2 in six innings and the nightcap 11-1 in five.

Ryan Grabetz improved to 3-0 by winning the first. He went all six innings, allowing two unearned runs on eight hits and no walks, striking out eight. Brent Sturtevant took the loss.

George Leung, who leads the team with a .373 batting average, had three hits and two runs batted in. Chris Gajewski posted the same totals. Jeff Pendell and Scott Anderson each had two hits, with Pendell scoring twice and knocking in a pair and Anderson scoring three times, with one RBI and two steals.

Craig Benedict, a freshman from Plymouth Canton, made his second mound appearance of the season in the second game and tossed a one-hitter through five innings. He gave up a first-inning single (that led to an unearned run) and two walks, fanning three. Lance Roark was the loser.

T.C. Raptis had three hits, two RBI, two runs scored and two stolen bases to lead Madonna's attack. Jim Solak, Shawn Penzak and Pendell each had two hits, Solak driving in a pair and Penzak and Pendell getting one RBI each.

The wins improved the Crusaders' record to 20-7 overall, 4-0 in the district. Baptist is 1-14 over all, 0-4 in the district.

On Monday, Madonna swept district rival Tri State 3-1 and 7-0. Solak's five-hitter (with four walks and four strikeouts) upped his record to 4-0 in the first game. Louie McKaig got his first win (he's 1-4) in the second, allowing two hits and three walks, striking out six.

Craig Peterson, who tied the game with a sacrifice fly in the fourth inning, brought in an insurance run with a solo homer in the sixth. Penzak's run scoring double in the fifth put the Crusaders ahead.

In the second game, Solak and Craig Overaitis each had a homer and two RBI. Solak slugged a two-run homer in the fifth, one of his two hits, and Overaitis added a solo shot in the fifth. Anderson also had two hits, two runs scored and an RBI.

Last Saturday, the Lakers struck for five runs in the fourth and 10 more in the fifth in dismantling Madonna. Anderson and Jeff Miller each had two hits for the Crusaders, but Grand Valley got a pair of grand slam homers — by Deandre Jamison in the fourth and Mike Berr in the fifth. Joe Jentzer (1-1) took the loss.

The second game was more to Madonna's liking, a 4-2 win. Mike Grahl (2-0) gave up two runs in six innings on six hits and three walks, fanning seven. Sean Henkel earned the save, his fifth.

The Crusaders got three runs in the first, two on Aaron Jones' double. Mike Syud added a solo homer in the fifth. Penzak and Kurt Wilczynski each had two hits.

Tournament of Champions: The first ever Madonna University Tournament of Champions, featuring four top prep baseball teams, will be Friday at Madonna University Park.

Redford Catholic Central will go against Birmingham Brother Rice in the first game at 10 a.m., with Warren DeLaSalle and Dearborn Divine Child following at noon. The consolation contest will be at 2 p.m., with the championship at 4 p.m.

Of course, Okwumabua has even more impressive credentials. "She's a state-caliber athlete," said Przygodski. And Boroditsch can run anything 400 meters and longer, she holds the school record in both the 1,600 and 3,200.

But best of all, they are not alone.

There's junior Becky Bockstandtz, who will fill several relays and the 200 and 400; junior Laura McWilliams, a distance runner who finished seventh in the 3,200 at the WLA in '93 and has already bettered her best time; junior distance threat Kathleen Landelius, coming off a season-ending injury; junior Tracy Cavin, who can run the 200, 400 (sixth at both WLAAs, region) and 800; junior middle distance runner Meghan Barresi, and senior hurdler Shawn Champlin.

And among the newcomers there's freshman Mary Anderson, who Przygodski predicted to be "a phenomenal hurdler."

There are holes to fill. The throwing events were a team strength last season; they could be just the opposite this year. The hurdles could be a bit thin, too. And, according to Przygodski, in the relays "there's still a lot of question marks. We have three real fine legs in the speed relays, but we're looking for that fourth leg."

How soon they fill those holes could make the difference between a championship or another runner-up season.

Spartan Relays: There were several key members of Plymouth Canton's team missing for the season opening Spartan Relays, hosted by Michigan State Saturday. Which explains why the Chiefs finished 10th out of 43 teams, scoring 15½ points.

They did, however, get several strong performances in individual events. Laura McWilliams set a school record in the 3,200-meter run, placing third in 12:20.4.

Lady Crusaders still rolling

An abbreviated double-header — eight innings total — enabled Madonna University's softball team to open NAA District 23 play with a couple of wins.

The Lady Crusaders swept Grand Rapids Baptist 10-2 in an eight-run mercy in five innings and 10-5 in a game stopped after three. Dawn Terrasi improved to 8-4 by winning both games; she allowed two runs on four hits and a walk, striking out six, in the opener, and gave up one earned run on four hits and two walks (four strikeouts) in the nightcap.

"We're playing very good team softball at this point," said Madonna coach Jerry Abraham. "I'm very happy with the way things are going. We're having a lot of fun right now."

Jennifer Pinter led the assault in the first game, driving in four runs with a two-run homer in the second and a two-run double. Lynda Weichel added three hits and two runs batted in; Jill Burt and Michelle Birchmeier each had two hits and a pair of RBI, and Mandy Armstrong and Mo Paulin had two hits and an RBI apiece.

In the second game, Holly Jondro and Birchmeier each contributed two hits and two RBI to the attack. Jeanie Baxter had two hits and an RBI, and Ronnie Ronco and Armstrong added a hit and a run batted in each.

Poor weather halted the second game after three, but the Baptist coach agreed to let the result stand as a complete game.

The wins improved the Crusaders' record to 13-5 overall, 2-0 in the district.

On Monday, Madonna split a pair with non-district foe Grand Valley State, winning the first 8-7 in eight innings and losing the second 5-3 in Allendale. Terrasi was the winner in the opening game, going all eight innings and surrendering three earned runs on 12 hits and two walks, fanning six.

Birchmeier had three hits and two RBI, but it was Burt and Armstrong who got key run-scoring singles in a three-run eighth-inning rally. Burt had two hits and Armstrong had two RBI. Pinter also had a hit and two RBI. A three-run Laker rally in the bottom of the seventh tied the game at 5-5.

The Crusaders managed just six hits in losing the second game.

Observerland boasts best gymnasts in state

By C.J. RISAK
AND DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITERS

Plymouth Salem finished third at this year's state gymnastics final. Plymouth Canton tied for fifth.

So is it any wonder these two teams dominate the Observer's all-area team, filling seven of the 10 first-team spots?

The talent isn't limited to those two schools, not by any means. But when one school boasts the top all-around gymnast in the state, and the other has five of the top six all-arounders at the state regional meet — well, the evidence is obvious.

It makes it difficult to compete against such ability. Salem had more Division I all-arounders (five) than the rest of the area's teams combined.

Still, possessing the talent is one thing; doing something with it is another. The Rocks had a young squad (two seniors among its top five) that improved enough to come within 1/2 points of repeating as state champ.

But perhaps the true test of an all-area team is this: If you took away Canton's all-around champ and the four first-team Salem picks, you'd still have a pretty impressive team.

Here it is.

ALL-AREA TEAM

Katey Gilles, freshman, Canton: Gilles won the Division I all-around state championship and also placed first on vault, second on beam, fourth on bars and fifth on floor exercise.

She was the WLAA vault and all-around champion as well, placing second on bars, third on beam and seventh on floor at that meet. She was undefeated in all-around competition, which included 12 dual meets and five invitationals.

Gilles set school records on vault (9.65), bars (9.6), floor (9.65) and all-around (37.8). Her best score on beam was 9.4. She is the second Elite All-American at Canton but the first to win that honor on every event.

Her accomplishment stands by itself, coach John Cunningham said, "but the neat thing about Katey is she's a wonderful individual. She's the best gymnast Canton has ever had to compete at the high school level, but I think it's a higher accomplishment when people make comments like that."

Melissa Hopson, junior, Salem: Hop-

son came into the season burdened by the pressure of expectation. Kim Miller and Courtney Gonyea were gone; Hopson was the Rocks' top returnee.

She handled the situation extremely well, according to coach Johanna Anderson. "A lot was expected of her," Anderson said, "and she really came through."

Her best event? The all-around, actually. "She's strong in all events," Anderson said. "It's hard to pick one, but if I had to I'd say the balance beam."

Indeed, Hopson had the area's best score on the beam, 9.5. Canton's Gilles had the top scores in every other event.

Hopson performed well at both the regional (second in the all-around, 36.80) and at state meet (tied for fifth in the all-around, 36.85). She had the area's second-best score in the all-around (36.85) and floor exercise (9.50).

Sarah Makins, senior, Salem: "She improved every meet," Anderson said of the gymnast who supplied a lot of surprises this season.

Like at the state finals: "I didn't expect her to get to the (individual) finals on beam and she did," Anderson said (she finished 10th). And then there was the Western Lakes Activities Association meet: "She won the conference on bars, which was really surprising."

But the event which seemed to illustrate Makins' attitude best was the beam. "She improved the most on the balance beam," said Anderson. "She's very aggressive, doesn't let fear get to her. She's fallen very hard during warm-up right before she has to compete, but she doesn't drop a thing from her routine."

Makins finished 17th at state (35.45) and fourth at the regional (35.30) in the all-around. She had the area's third best score in the bars (9.3) and was fourth in the floor (9.35).

Kristen Kosik, freshman, Salem: Kosik will find herself stepping into a situation like Hopson's in the near future. She has the ability to rank among the state's premier gymnasts.

"It's amazing how we got more and more out of her as the season wore on," said Anderson. "At our first dual meet she was shaking like a leaf, but by our last meet she was controlling her nerves much, much better."

"She really improved throughout the season. She was one of our top four girls all year, which is hard for a freshman. I think she handled it very well. She has very tight form; she's a very clean gymnast. I'd compare her to Melissa (Hopson). They have a lot of similarities in form."

Kosik's best event, the vault. She posted the second-best score in the area (9.30). She was also 19th in the state (35.15) and sixth in the regional (34.65) in the all-around. Kosik placed eighth in the vault at the individual state finals (17.45).

Zoe Yockey, sophomore, Salem: Night and day — that's how Anderson described Yockey's emergence.

"She's a completely different gymnast from last year," the Salem coach said. "She went from very sloppy, with terrible form, to a very controlled performer."

"I think it's maturity." Yockey didn't just refine her routines, but added more difficult tricks, too. "Floor is her strongest event," said Anderson. "Her tumbling has gotten so much better. She has a lot of original dance in her routine that others don't do."

Yockey was 22nd in the state's all-around (34.50) after placing fifth at the regional (34.90). Her 9.25 was the area's seventh-best score in the floor exercise.

If she matches this year's improvement next year, Salem will again find itself among the state's elite teams.

Michelle Tsai, senior, N. Farmington: Tsai was seventh in the state among Division II all-arounders. She also placed sixth on bars, 11th on vault and floor and 18th on beam at state.

Tsai was a regional champion on vault, placed sixth on bars and beam and finished third in the all-around. Competing against Division I girls at the WLAA meet, she was second on vault and fourth on bars and floor.

Her best scores ranked her among the top 10 in the area in each event: 9.05 on vault, 9.4 on bars, 8.65 on beam, 9.25 on floor and 35.95 in the all-around.

"I'm glad her career ended the way it did, because she worked all year round and it was a nice way to go out," North coach Jeff Dwyer said. "The all-around is indicative of true gymnastics ability."

Elyse Turner, senior, N. Farmington: Turner also was a four-year member of the North Farmington team and a steady, consistent performer for the Raiders. She was one of the top all-around gymnasts in Observerland with a season best of 34.65. Coming out of a difficult regional, she qualified for state on beam. Her scores: 8.85 on vault and 8.9 on beam placed her among the best in the area.

Brie Wall, junior, Canton: Wall qualified for state as an all-arounder and placed 22nd in Division II. She was fifth on bars and beam at the WLAA meet while competing against some of the best Division I gymnasts in the state. Wall had season bests of 8.7 on bars, 8.65 on beam and 34.25 as an all-arounder.

If the season had been a month longer, Brie would have had some wonderful accomplishments, Cunningham said, adding Wall hadn't done gymnastics in three years and missed the first month of practice because she was a diver on the Canton swim team.

"It took her awhile to build up her skills and get her confidence back. If she had another month, I have the feeling Brie would have been a (state finals) qualifier in two or three events, easily. We're going to see some fantastic things from Brie next year."

Kim Nowak, sophomore, Canton: Nowak competed as a team member at the state meet in three events and qualified into finals on floor, finishing 12th. She scored a season best 9.4 and placed third on floor at the WLAA meet. She also was seventh on bars in the league, also against Division I competition, and had a high score of 8.5.

"Kim and Brie are like gymnastics times bombs," Cunningham said. "They were excited about getting into the finals and realized what they have to do to get better."

"Kim has the ability to be one of the best floor exercise people in the state. I was pleased with what she accomplished this year, but I'm looking forward to what she can accomplish next year."

Shelley Underwood, sophomore, Glenn: Underwood qualified for state as an all-arounder, finishing 16th in Division Handling the pressure: With Salem coming off a state championship season, Melissa Hopson found herself in an unenviable position: being the team's top returning gymnast. She shouldered the burden well.

II. She made the finals on floor and placed sixth. She was a regional champion on floor and beam, and she was second in the all-around.

At the WLAA meet, Underwood placed eighth on beam and floor, competing against some of the best Division I gymnasts in the state. She had season bests of 8.5 on vault, 9.2 on bars, 9.15 on beam, 9.3 on floor and 34.75 all-around.

"I really enjoyed working with Shelley," Glenn coach Debbie Tomasko said. "She's very dedicated and talented, and I think she'll go far."

She had to find her place this year, being a sophomore and coming from the junior high. She had a hard time at the beginning and was testing things out. But she came out on top at the end of the season, and I'm really proud of her."

Shining star: Canton's Katey Gilles (right and below) made her mark in her first season competing at the high school level. She was unbeaten in all-around competition, winning the state championship, and she set school records in every event. Not bad for a freshman.

How To Train A Husband.

For many husbands, the art of cooking can turn your spotless tile into a rather colorful canvas.

In a moment of culinary passion, a countertop becomes a hot pad or cutting board. Things that can readily tarnish the look of your kitchen surfaces.

Well, not to worry.

Mannington tile is extra tough. It has a special glaze that's tested and trusted under the strictest standards in the industry.

Which means your colors will be brighter, and your husband a little easier to control.

Boudreau (1,600) and freshman Kathy Joist (3,200) lead a very deep distance crew, and senior Jessica Moyer returns after a year layoff to strengthen the middle-distance group.

There are dozens of others — Gregor has 54 on the team — and many possess enough ability to contribute in more than one event. That's one reason Gregor figures his team can construct another impressive season: "It's a matter of our girls being versatile and being able to score in more than one event."

"If the coaches are smart enough to move people into the right spots, if we don't screw them up too bad, they know what they have to do."

There have been very few problems the last couple of years, and unless there's a major one this season, the Rocks could very well roll to another pair of championships.

Spartan Relays: At Saturday's season-opening event, hosted by Michigan State, Salem got strong performances from established stars and newcomers alike.

In individual events, Hopson was second in the high jump (5-2), Makins was fourth in the 55-meter hurdles (8.49), Boudreau was third in the 1,600 (5:36.7), and Joist was fourth in the 3,200 (12:30.3).

Kim Sheldon, Courtney Sheldon, Parker and Hamilton were second in the 1,600 relay (4:20.3); Hamilton, Courtney Sheldon, Stankoff and Sebestyen were third in the 3,200 (10:30.1); Kim Sheldon, Courtney Sheldon, Makins and Jolene Brown were third in the shuttle hurdle (37.5).

SPORTS ROUNDUP

County sheriff's department aims to check on gun dealers

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

The Wayne County Sheriff's Department has begun a new program to check the records of county gun dealers.

Sheriff Robert Ficano hopes to catch licensed dealers who have sold guns to people not legally qualified to buy them.

The method is to compare the record of guns sold to the dealer and the record of guns the dealer sells. Licenses will be revoked and charges filed where appropriate.

Although this job has previously been performed solely by agents from the federal government's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Ficano cites a 1930 state law that says "local law enforcement officers" may get in on the action.

"I think (Ficano) is onto something worth doing," said Wayne County chief assistant prosecutor George Ward.

In a March 30 press release, Ficano says the ATF has agreed to train sheriff's deputies to inspect gun dealers. But ATF special inspector Carol Jordan said April 1 that the deal "has not been approved."

Nancy Mouradian, Ficano's chief of staff, said that "if the ATF doesn't agree to provide the training, we will proceed regardless."

Gun dealers are licensed by the federal government and pay $66 for their licenses. There are 13,632 licensed dealers in Michigan and 15 ATF inspectors to check on them. Almost three-fourths of the licensed gun dealers do their selling outside of stores. Ficano said these people are selling guns out of car trunks and over their kitchen tables. In Wayne County there are 1,800 licensed gun dealers.

Ficano says 10 deputies will be trained to perform these inspections, and fewer than 10 will be assigned to the job. No overtime will result, and no other duties will be cut back or eliminated, Ficano said.

Ward agrees that the legal oversight of gun dealers leaves something to be desired. "When there's nobody checking up on you, you get sloppy," he said. "You get careless, and the law is forgotten."

PSO to present 'Grandiose' concert

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

An art filled evening awaits Plymouth Symphony Orchestra concert 8 p.m. Friday, April 15, at Plymouth First Methodist Church, 45201 North Territorial, Plymouth. Tickets are $12 adults, $10 senior citizens and $5 students K-12. Call (313) 451-2112.

The concert will feature guest artists soprano Glenda Kirkland and alto saxophonist Shizuo Kuwahara of Novi, winner of the symphony's Youth Artist Competition winner.

"There will be an art display — Women of Artistry featuring the works of five local artists — Susan Argioff, Sharon Lee Dillenbeck, Julie DiGiordano, Carol Lynn McCreedy and Norma McQueen," said Linda Alvarado, president of the Plymouth Symphony Society. "Combining art forms is wonderful experience for concert goers. All arts can contribute to an audience's enjoyment."

Russell Reed will conduct the symphony in a concert titled "Grandiose" which includes "The Marriage of Figaro Overture," by Mozart and Mahler's "Symphony No. 4."

"Mahler's symphony is a wonderful introduction to one of the more impressive 20th century composers," said Alvarado.

Kirkland, who will join the symphony for Mahler's symphony, has won the Regional Artist Award from the National Association of Teachers of Singing, the Society for Musical Arts "Young Artist Award," and was finalist in the local Metropolitan Opera Competition.

She received her education at the Juilliard School and is currently a professor of voice at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti. Her opera credits include the Michigan Opera Theatre's productions of two of Bizet's most popular operas "Carmen," and "The Pearl Fishers." She has also been a favorite in Ger-shwin's "Porgy and Bess," Mozart's "Don Giovanni," and Puccini's "Madame Butterfly."

Kuwahara, 17, a senior at Novi High School, proved that "if at first you don't succeed, try, try again," by winning the symphony's Youth Artist Competition in December. He placed second in last year's competition.

Kuwahara has played alto saxophone for six years, and was drum major for eight weeks last summer at Interlochen Arts Academy. He also performed with the World Sax Unlikely trio makes passionate 'Threesome'

When they said the dorms were good, they didn't mean guys and girls would be assigned to the same rooms. But Alex has a name that puts her in the male column, as far as the university computer is concerned, so she finds herself squeezed into the most intimate of living arrangements with two guys she has never met before.

As different as they are from each other, Eddy and Stuart have become best buddies in the short time they've roomed together, and they aren't quite sure how to react to this beautiful but prickly intruder. It doesn't take long, however, for all three to become friends, then much more as their relationship evolves into a triangle of love, passion and mixed signals.

Lara Flynn Boyle, Stephen Baldwin and Josh Charles star in "Threesome," a comedic yet bitting look at college life. The TriStar Pictures presentation of a Motion Picture Corporation of America Production is written and directed by Andrew Fleming and produced by Brad Krevoy and Steve Stabler. The executive producer is Cary Woods, and co-producer is Brad Jenkel.

Wanting to explain the boundaries of friendship further, Fleming decided to see what would happen when he put members of both sexes, and of differing sexual orientations, together in close quarters. The result: "Threesome."

Alex, played by Boyle, is a drama student who finds Eddy intellectually and emotionally stimulating, but who reluctantly must look elsewhere to satisfy her physical needs. Baldwin, in the role of Stuart, is a party hearty business student with an unflagging interest in booze and sex. Eddy, played by Charles, is a young man whose studious, serious side doesn't prevent him from kicking back and having an inhibitedly good time with best friends Stuart and Alex.

Boyle has appeared in movies such as "Mobsters," "Wayne's World" and "Where the Day Takes You." She also played the role of Donna Hayward in the provocative series "Twin Peaks."

Baldwin is perhaps best known for his television role in "The Young Riders," but has also appeared on the big screen in hits such as "Born on the Fourth of July," "Crossing the Bridge" and "The Beast."

Charles starred in "Dead Poets Society," and on television in "Murder in Mississippi" and "Cooperstown."

"Threesome" features a mix of rock music from General Public, Tears for Fears and U2.

The film is set to be released in local theaters this week.

It is rated R (Restricted, under 18 requires an accompanying parent or guardian).

Complicated trio: Alex (Lara Flynn Boyle), Stuart (Stephen Baldwin) and Eddy (Josh Charles) are college roommates whose friendship evolves into a triangle of passion and mixed signals in the contemporary comedy "Threesome."

Producers take the easy road in 'Major League' sequel

AP — When a movie scores a home run — or even a three-bagger — the options for a sequel are threefold:

1. The producers can follow the "Star Wars" formula and take the same characters into a new and original adventure. This requires talent and imagination.

2. They can go along with the "Predator" method and pile on stunts, special effects and production values. This is very, very expensive.

3. They can go the way of "Home Alone" and repeat the same plot with tiny variations.

This is easy. The producers of "Major League II" took the easy way.

There is little to distinguish the first "Major League" (itself a moderate hit) from the 1994 model. The same characters, mostly. The same plot, almost. The same ending, entirely. That doesn't mean "Major League II" is not enjoyable. In many ways it is a hoot, a pleasant way to spend 105 minutes in the theater, especially if you are a devotee of what used to be called America's Favorite Pastime.

REVIEW

with the Cleveland Indians, older but no wiser. Pitcher Rick Vaughn (Charlie Sheen), the one-time hog riding Wild Thing, turns up with tailored suits and a curvy agent. Catcher Jake Taylor (Tom Berenger) returns with aching knees and an inkling that his playing days are over.

Third baseman Roger Dorn (Corbin Bernsen) has somehow bought ownership from the predatory general manager (Margaret Whitton) and desperately watches his hapless team from the clubhouse.

The returning Indians include Pedro Cerrano (Dennis Haysbert), who has traded voodoo for Buddhism, and Willie Mays Hays (Omar Epps), who became a movie action hero in the off-season.

Among the new players: Tanaka (Japanese comedian Taakaishi), a kamakazi outfielder from the Tokyo Giants, Rube Baker (Eric Bruskotter), the hayseed catcher who has a block about throwing back to the pitcher, and Jack Parkman (David Keith), the meanest player in the majors. All these plus the great Bob Eucker as the team's radio announcer, and the unbilled Randy Quaid as an obnoxious fan.

This motley group supplies enough mirth to carry the team along the familiar path of falling apart and regrouping to challenge the league championship. David Ward repeats as director, and he displays a clever hand with comedy and the diamond action. He wrote the serviceable script with R.J. Stewart.

The Warner Bros. release of a Morgan Creek film was produced by James G. Robin. The rating is PG, mostly for language.

At Providence Hospital, we've recognized women long before they won the vote. Since 1844 when Providence opened its first hospital and began caring for single and widowed mothers and their infants, we've been listening to what women need and want from health care professionals.

And we've learned a lot. We've learned that women want not only the best medical staff and equipment in a program is one of the largest in Michigan with nearly 4,500 babies born each year.

Providence is popular among expectant mothers for many reasons, one of which is our extensive range of birthing options including comfortable LDR (labor, delivery, recovery) rooms and a freestanding family birthing center.

EARTHA DEYAMPERT

No awards for violence

Next to peer pressure, the media has proven to have great influence over children, especially adolescents. Television and radio pump out the latest tunes in rap music and popular video entertainment. Much of today's rap music has seductive, controversial lyrics, lyrics that suggest violence and have sexual themes.

Not only are children chanting controversial lyrics as early as 3 years old, they're imitating seductive dance moves watched on television and video. And if that's not enough, more and more violence is portrayed on movie screens and headlines in our newspapers. But violence displayed on television is perhaps the most influential on younger children because they're home most of the time.

Television is the window to the outside world for children. It supposedly depicts what it's like outside the secure walls of home. It's no wonder children, especially those under 8, associate violence as natural with a weird twist of glamour and heroism.

Take for example one case where a child was watching a popular cable TV cartoon, "Beavis and Butt-head," where the characters were jokingly playing with matches and setting fire to property. In this real reported case, a young child, after watching this controversial, but popular, show, imitated what he saw and set fire to his home.

I recently observed a child who appeared to be around the same age at the doctor's office. He repetitively sang, "Bad boy, bad boy, watcha gonna do, bad boy, bad boy." He proudly sang this familiar tune for the television show "Cops" as he challenged his mother while climbing outside the rail of the stairs. Another television show with explicit violent scenes had made an impression on a young sponge-like mind.

When violence is depicted as cool, no big deal, and scenes show partial nudity, in some cases fully exposing unclothed bodies, they send a direct but confusing message to young people. Youngsters, not having the advantage and much-needed communication from parents or other caring adults to help interpret and sort out worthwhile television from worthless TV hype, are prime beneficiaries of negative media presentation. Children use television as a barometer to measure social and moral expectations.

Fiction becomes real

Because television is so accessible and immediate, children can spend hours in front of the screen, tuning into a variety of stations, including special cable programs and adult entertainment, adopting the language and behaviors of real and fictional characters.

Unfortunately, it's the negative behaviors and questionable character presentation that frequently catch the attention and watchful eyes of children. Without enough positive media to counteract the bad and active parent intervention, children learn to accept violence as "the way it is," as part of a social norm.

When violence becomes a way of life outside-viewing videos and television as it is true in the lives of many young children and teens, aggressive behavior becomes more acceptable, not solely due to witnessing acts of violence, but also having to be subjected to situations where they have no control. Feelings of helplessness and vulnerability become prevalent. Children often take on the blame for why bad things happen to and around them, which is especially true as it relates to domestic violence or an environment where children are victimized sexually or subjected to other abuse.

Aggressive behavior played out after being exposed to frequent TV violence, quarreling, destroying property and degrading others, are kinds of behavior that can manifest themselves when a child barges into an area, leaving a trail of smashed items, purposely ravaging a tidy room, or deliberately seeking to injure other children by destroying what they are doing.

Viewing repeated violence and listening to questionable music can encourage them to try things they aren't emotionally nor physically mature enough to handle or to deal with the consequences. Violence can be accelerated, because of a consistent stimulus. The violent messages children receive through television or in their own home or school environments can easily be internalized. The result is children becoming resistant or openly defiant.

Playing referee

In a world where children aren't as naive about sex and violence as maybe children were 25-30 years ago, it is unavoidable for parents and educators to be involved in addressing

Did you know the money you put in the candy box at that restaurant is furthering research for a cure for mental retardation and developmental disabilities? That's just one of the projects being undertaken by Civitans.

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

At the urging of club members, Jim Happ prepares to turn on the fine light. But there's a small problem. He can't find his gavel. It looks a bit bleak for the president of the Westland Civitan Club, especially since a missing gavel is "a fineable offense."

Club members aren't helping the search, nor are they responding to his "I know one of you took it" comments. He's right on the money, as member Linda Quinn pulls it out of her bag.

"That fine light is like an eternal flame," Happ says, reaching for his wallet.

Club members, on the other hand, say he's "the fastest and smoothest at paying fines." By the end of the evening he had shelled out $3.60 for such offenses as forgetting the governor's banner at the recent mid-year convention, misspelling a few names in the dinner meeting program, and, of course, for the missing gavel. Quinn and company chuckle, but not too loud. They, too, get hit with a few good-natured fines.

"Paybacks are the fines," says Marlene Dean-Doran, the oldest club member and quite possibly its best recruiter. By and large the female members will tell you they joined Civitans because they "went swimming with Marlene." Swimming is an aquatic class Doran participates in at the Wayne-Westland Community Schools' Dyer Pool.

"I was in the pool and she wouldn't let me out," said Karen Gregory, director of youth development. "Marlene dragged me around to all kinds of things. It was like we were connected at the hip. I've only been in six years. After six months, I was secretary and a year later I was president-elect."

The Civitans group was founded in 1917 in Birmingham, Ala., when a group of business and professional men started meeting for weekly luncheons to discuss ways they could improve the community. With a motto of "building good citizenship," the organization has grown to 55,000 members in 1,800 clubs worldwide.

A recognizable sign of the Civitans at work is the candy boxes found beside cash registers in participating businesses. Served by volunteers, 100 percent of the net proceeds goes to the Civitan International Research Center, which is working on a cure for mental retardation and developmental disabilities.

Plenty to do

But the clubs do even more. Time is one thing the Civitans give to the community. The Westland club's imprint can be seen in a lot of different areas - the recent Bunny Breakfast and Great Marshmallow Drop, Civitan Park, and "the glue that holds them together," the Special Olympics.

It was the efforts of seven Civitan clubs - including those in Wayne, Plymouth, Canton, Livonia and Dearborn - that organized the first Special Olympics in Wayne County in 1976.

"One of my major emphases for joining was the Special Olympics. I was interested in working with the Wayne club and six others to put together the Wayne County Special Olympics," Doran said. "Now we have Mint Day and Tag for Special Olympics. It's the glue that holds us together."

The Westland club was chartered in June 1978 after the Wayne Civitan Club declined to admit the wives of members. The Civitans were the first service organization to open its door to women in 1974, and the Wayne club did accept women, just not wives of members, Doran said.

Since then, it has gone on to make a name for itself in the city and the state. It is the first club to score a "three-peat" for district governor. Doran is the past governor. Ron Falkner is the current governor and Gregory is the governor-elect.

Falkner and his wife, Gerri, lived in Redford at the time they joined the Westland Club. Ron was involved with a "blended" baseball team at Michigan Bell, and a Civitan member was the driver. He asked Ron if he'd like to join. He gave it a shot and after seeing a presentation on the Special Olympics was hooked.

The club was the closest one at the time for the Falkners, and even though they now live in Howell, they've kept their ties with the Westland Civitans, driving some 60 miles to be at the monthly dinner meetings.

"When we moved to Howell, we started a club there, but this is still home," said Gerri. "I couldn't quit this club. I'm the recording secretary here and president of the Livingston Civitans."

If being district governor and belonging to two clubs isn't enough, the Falkners are also the Westland

Conference focuses on women's health

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

It's not unusual to hear talk about the skeletons in people's closets. For some, it's a reference to deep, dark secrets or scandals waiting to be uncovered.

But for Dr. Natalie Rice, that skeleton represents the person each of us should be.

"In each person, there's an extraordinary person trying to be free," said Rice, a psychologist with Humanistic Resources in Farmington Hills. "In the course of growing up and based on the feedback from people, we learn to become whom other people think we should be rather than being who we are."

Rice will talk about that person inside in her keynote address - "Just Who Do You Think You Are?" - at the third annual Women's Health Agenda for the '90s.

Sponsored by the Womencenter of Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge Campus and Schoolcraft College's Women's Resource Center and Health Service, the conference will be 9 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. Saturday, April 30, on the OCC campus at 27055 Orchard Lake Road, Farmington Hills.

The speech will be from the woman's point of view of self-esteem. According to Rice, self-esteem can take a tumble when a person becomes alienated from her true self. That alienation can leave a person "with a constant sense of having a skeleton in the closet."

"In order to be desirable, you may believe you should look like Cheryl Tiegs, and because you don't look like Cheryl Tiegs, you feel you're not desirable," Rice said. "So you end up spending an inordinate amount of time with self-loathing, when you could be developing other talents that are rewarding."

It also boils down to a perception of value and can be found in school and at home. The perception is that going to work is more viable and valuable than a woman staying home to care for her family. Likewise, getting good grades is what it takes to succeed.

"Words like 'supposed to be' or 'should be' are dead giveaways," Rice said. "You don't need a professional title to be viable and the role in the home is extremely valuable. If you have a child with a learning disability, you will find he feels bad about himself because he doesn't fit."

A person Rice points to as being true to his true self is Oscar-winning director Steven Spielberg, described as a "terrible student."

Spielberg was "more interested in wandering in the desert" with his movie camera and his mother, who supported and encouraged him. By today's standards, his mother would be considered inadequate and a contributor to his delinquent behavior, enough to get Protective Services involved.

The conference will begin with registration at 8:30 a.m. in the OCC's Tirrell Hall (J Building), with activities moving to Smith Theater for the welcome at 9 a.m. and Rice's speech at 9:15 a.m.

Following a 15-minute break at 10:30 a.m., there will be three different workshop sessions. The workshops will cover such topics as the myths of menopause, sexual abuse, the politics of women's health and breast cancer, female genital mutilation, developing a positive body image and lifestyles after 50.

The cost of the conference, which also is supported by Sinai Hospital and Zonta of Northwest Wayne County, is $20 in advance and $25 at the door. The fee includes lunch. Due to limited seating, pre-registration is recommended by April 15.

Registration can be completed by sending a check, payable to Oakland Community College, to the Womencenter, OCC-Orchard Ridge Campus, 27055 Orchard Lake Road, Farmington Hills 48334-4579.

Only our soul can negotiate life with depth, meaning

REV. DAVID STRONG

MORAL PERSPECTIVES
 Spring is a good time to have something new pop into our awareness. After a long winter, we are ready for change. Consider picking up either of the most recent books by Thomas Moore, "Care of the Soul" and "Soul Mates." I find them exciting reading.

His books have been at the top of the New York Times best selling list for the past two months. A long article about him appeared in a daily paper last week. Raised a Catholic on Detroit's east side, Moore has something to tell us about the soul. His books are about the individual soul, how we feed the soul, how our society ignores the soul. Yet his books also provide us insights into social values and social problems.

Our congregation is hosting homeless people this week. The women, children and men whom I have talked with might be considered different from you and me. Yet Moore helps us see a connection between these people and our own condition. The homelessness we see on our city streets is a reflection of a deeper homelessness we feel in our hearts.

"The trash on our streets, the abandoning of old buildings and the construction of cheap housing reflect our souls which dismiss the values of the past and may also reflect our anger at the world. Our trash," says Moore, "is a reminder — not yet healed by imagination — of the past we have neglected."

These are meanings for us to ponder, Moore believes that our soul is connected with everything that we encounter. Places and things have soul when they are part of our memory. Things of the past may have meaning and beauty even though they have lost their practical function. Our mania with antiques has the quality of a search for roots in the past. For Moore, everything, including everything thought to be negative, is food for the soul.

What is the soul? We would like to have a neat definition. Yet, this desire for definitions is itself a symptom of our lack of soul. Soul is impossible to define. It is close to imagination, to music, beauty, to the meaning of a special tree or hillside. Soul is an attachment of the heart. Soul is not so much about change as about depth. Soul grows through deep observation and acceptance.

"Fulfilling work, rewarding relationships, personal power and relief from symptoms are all gifts of the soul. They are particularly elusive in our time because we don't believe in the soul." (from the introduction to "Care of the Soul")

Moore's most recent book is "Soul Mates." Have you ever felt a particularly strong attraction to another person? We need to honor the mystery of such experiences and sort out what they mean to the soul. Psychology and morality may well fail to lead us through such important encounters in our lives. Only our soul can negotiate life with depth and ultimate meaning so that we honor the depth of our personhood and the personhood of others.

The writings of Moore face us with the question: Can we have religion or morality without soul? Is America looking for the "quick fix"? Have we depersonalized and objectified faith to such an extent that, for example, there is no deep learning from negative experience? Is confessing your sins enough to do the job? Moore thinks not.

For Moore, even depression and body illness may contribute to a person if they are examined by the soul. He is very critical of religions that seek to rid us of our encounter with trouble or pain. Such a religion keeps us from discovering meaning in the dark night of the soul. I have discovered that his observations are true.

Ponder the question: What is sacred in everyday life? The question challenges our unexamined assumption that everything is secular, without the aura of God's creative love. For example, ecology is not an earth science. It is a question concerning our home, our soul's response to the home in which we live.

A friend of mine went into the hospital for a very serious illness.

In the process he lost about 100 pounds. He told me that as he went through these life-threatening troubles he felt that he was surrounded by an aura of prayer. This is a tough, down to earth man. I am heartened by his witness of soul. He has grown from his trying experience.

Finally, I like the insight of Thomas Moore that soul is nurtured by the simple decision to pay attention. Soul grows through small things, such as flowers, birds and quiet walks that feed us tidbits of meaning. Soul cultivating is a great adventure. Moore's writings are good guides in this adventure.

young people's concerns — sometimes playing referee. Teachers and counselors witness acts of violence much too often in school. Teens tote the weapons. Some say they need them to protect themselves against gangs or other poses, just like what they see on TV, at the movies or right in their own neighborhood.

Media violence may not be totally to blame, true enough, but it sure can hold its hand up high and stand up and be counted for helping to promote it in an indirect way.

Parents must strive to make home a place where violence is null and void. Limit television to one hour of good time TV watching. Work on building better unity and self-esteem in the family. Put the family influence back on the top of the list where it should be. Listen carefully to the lyrics of the music your kids listen to. Are messages being sent that are compatible with your family's philosophy?

Again, there are no easy answers. We may not be able to answer why someone chooses to act violently, to be associated with violent acts, or promote it in any way. It's unrealistic to consider not reporting violence in the newspaper because people must be informed.

On the other hand, flaunting violence as a means of entertaining does have a significant negative impact on our children — our society. We can't, in one breath, ask why the violence, then in the next breath do the minimum about getting our own homes in order. Everyone should start from where they are.

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Ms. Green, I enjoy reading your column, but after I'm finished I often wonder why this woman is replying just to one person who is analyzing. If I may, your column would be much more interesting if you explained why you make the determinations that you did about the person based on the handwriting. For example, "The writer is direct in her approach to just about everything." If you gave an explanation, your reading audience might try to look for things in their handwriting.

I hope this idea is received in a positive way and since you have read this far, would you consider studying my handwriting and giving me a response. Thank you. D.B., Plymouth

Thank you for your suggestion. Column space is always a necessary consideration, but I will try to give more detailed explanations in the future.

The reason I ask that letters be written on a full sheet of unlined paper is because spacing is a very important consideration when analyzing handwriting. Since yours was written on a note card and the lines are a little too crowded, I am not able to ascertain if the entangled lines are the way you usually write or are caused by limited space on the card. Entangled lines usually suggest one who is involved in too many activities and may be having difficulty prioritizing. I'll have to let you be the judge.

Today's writer is thoughtful, sympathetic, compassionate and friendly. Her feelings can be read in her eyes, facial expression and body language. Others are attracted to her warmth and cannot help but like her.

Making a good impression is important to her and she has a desire to be esteemed by others. To merit this, she can be counted on to put forth her best effort.

In her work, she is efficient, and it reveals the strong sense of pride she feels about it. Her pride is often fed by the appreciation that comes from other people. She sets high goals for herself and is not afraid to work hard to accomplish them.

Self-consciousness weaves through this handwriting, making her too aware of any limitations she perceives. Unfamiliar situations may cause her to feel ill at ease. Close supervision with someone looking over her shoulder can also do the same. Seemingly, she tenses up when she feels she is being judged. Perhaps she feels restricted by past experiences which she keeps bottled up.

Perhaps she has been hurt in the past. To prevent this from recurring, she has her guard up often.

Basically, this is a modest person who does not promote herself. She tends to wait for the breaks rather than make opportunities to let other people know of her capabilities.

Because she does not do things with great showmanship, she tends to think there is something exaggerated about such a procedure. She may be more comfortable when she is in the background, although I do think she may be willing to assume more responsibility to promote herself.

This writer is inclined to be somewhat opinionated. Once her mind is made up, she can be rather firmly based.

This is usually an upbeat woman who views life with optimism. However, something in her life is not the way she might like it to be and is causing her to feel a little down at this particular time.

The humor I see in her handwriting tells me she can laugh and enjoy the lighter side of life. I love humor and feel it helps us keep things in perspective.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and full signature are helpful. And objective feedback is always welcome.

Since then, he's gone on to sell $16 worth of flag pins, more apples and even dog biscuits.

Happ and his fellow members are always looking for new members. Recruitment has been a "least or famine" proposition, but with next week designated as Civitan Awareness Week, members believe it's an excellent time to take a closer look at the organization.

The club has evening meetings the second and fourth Thursdays of the month at a local restaurant or at the Rowe House on Marquette between Wayne and Newburgh roads. And a lot of its projects happen on weekends or in the evening, so people who work can participate, Happ said.

If things like being huggers at the upcoming Special Olympics aren't enough of an enticement, Happ points to the members themselves.

"When I joined it wasn't for the volunteer work at the time, it was the members," Happ said. "My reason for joining was the people. It's turned out to be best fun I've had in a long time... even with all the fines."

For more information about the Westland Civitan Club, call Elaine Cockrum, vice president for membership, at 595-0296, or write the club at P.O. Box 45, Westland 48185.

ANNIVERSARIES

Jackson

An afternoon dinner party is planned to honor Clayton and Grace Jackson of Livonia for their 50th wedding anniversary.

The couple was married on April 5, 1944, in their hometown of Bad Axe, Mich. She is the former Grace Tucker.

Residents of Livonia since 1946, they have four children — Susan and Alden Degayner of Ionia, Bette and Raymond Niman of Westland, Dan Jackson and his fiancée Linda Stephans of Livonia and Lisa and Mark Lynett of Westland. They also have nine grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

He retired 14 years ago from the Burroughs Corp., where he had worked for 38 years. He also was a longtime member of the Ridgevale Rod and Gun Club near Alpena. She has been a member of the First Baptist Church of Livonia for 45 years.

Juranek

Golden wedding anniversary bells rang for Eugene and Betty Juranek March 24.

The Livonia couple renewed their vows on March 20 at a party given in their honor by their children — Bob, Larry, Sandy Canfield and Mary Ann Bame. Along with friends and relatives at the party at the Botsford Inn were their six grandchildren — Monica, Corrine, Brandon, Steven and Ryan.

The couple originally exchanged vows on March 24, 1944, in Detroit. They have lived in Livonia for 45 years.

Hospital to offer life support class

A preparatory course in Advanced Cardiac Life Support will be offered in April and May in Conference Room A of the Marian Pavilion at St. Mary Hospital, Five Mile at Levan.

The six-day course will be 1-3 p.m. or 4:15-6:15 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, April 19, 21, 26, 28, and May 3 and 5. Registration is required and may be done by calling 591-2922.

The class is designed to prepare nurses for completion of the ACLS certification course. The class will provide a review of the management of a patient in a cardiac emergency.

St. Mary sets open house

In recognition of National Occupational Therapy Month in April, the occupational therapy staff at St. Mary Hospital will hold an open house 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday, April 13.

The open house will be in the physical therapy and rehabilitation department on the lower level of the hospital.

During the open house, staff members will simulate various aspects of occupational therapy treatments and provide opportunities for visitors to experiment with treatment and assessment procedures. Occupational therapy displays also will be in the main lobby of the hospital and the Marian Pavilion lobby from April 11-15. For information about occupational therapy call 591-2955.

club's Special Olympics representatives. Ron has been to the international, state and local games in his more than 16 years with the Special Olympics program.

"The best part for me, I guess, is because it helps the less fortunate and it gives you a personal satisfaction of working with Special Olympics," Ron said. "That's the two biggest things for me."

Good advertising

Quinn has belonged to the organization for five years and "is already a past president." She points a finger at Marie Johnson when asked how she discovered the club. Johnson had posted an announcement on the Post Office door that caught Quinn's eye. The

■ 'My reason for joining was the people. It's turned out to be best fun I've had in a long time... even with all the fines.'

sign "was illegal" but enough to make her want to know more.

A year later Quinn's husband, Patrick, joined, in part because he was working as hard as his wife. Besides, she decided to pay his dues, so he "had to join."

"I think every project we do is enjoyable, especially when the project turns out well," Quinn said. "We do more than Special Olympics. We do things for the senior citizens and for the kids. There's a lot of variety. If we do something you don't like, there's other things you can do... even be president."

It's got personality

Each club has its own personality, according to Happ. The Westland club has a hands on personality. It's very active, doing a lot with the city and its annual festival.

Some of the projects include selling mints and tags for Special Olympics, and delivering valentines to the residents at the Hope Nursing Center. The club also helped raised money to provide Civitan service dogs for the hearing impaired. Training such dogs cost $4,000 each and so Michigan Civitans have raised enough for four dogs. They also raised another $7,000 for a service dog for a physically challenged person.

"We do so much that we don't get credit for, but it's fun and a great service to the city," Happ said. "When I joined I thought I couldn't sell anything to save my life, but within two weeks of joining I was in front of Kmart selling apples."

The Scriptures teach us that God is ABSOLUTELY SOVEREIGN. This King David recognized when he blessed the Lord with the words: "Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty, for ALL that is in the heaven and in the earth IS THINE." 1 Chron. 28:11. We invite you to worship this God with us!

'Rhapsody in Red' benefits American Red Cross chapter

The finishing touches are being applied to "Rhapsody in Red," a gala spring benefit for the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The dinner dance will be Friday, April 29, at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Dearborn, and will have the president of the American Red Cross, Elizabeth H. Dole, the former U.S. deputy secretary of state, Dr. Clifton Wharton, and his wife, Dolores, as special guests.

The goal is to raise $100,000 for American Red Cross disaster services for residents of Wayne, Oak land and Macomb counties as well as increase community awareness of the services provided by the Southeastern Michigan Chapter and expand the base of friends and volunteers for the Red Cross.

The evening will begin with a VIP cocktail reception at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner and dancing at 7 p.m. in the hotel's Grand Ballroom. Music will be by Grammy Award winning singer Jack Jones and the Big Band sounds of the Johnny Trudell Orchestra. The attire is formal with black tie dress and red or white gowns preferred.

Attendance is limited to 400, and ticket prices are set at four levels: ruby at $500, platinum at $350, gold at $225 and silver at $175. Each has its own benefits, all of which include dinner and dancing. Platinum and ruby ticket holders are invited to a pre-gala reception with Dole.

There also will be an auction with Leslie Hindman of Chicago's Hindman Galleries as the celebrity auctioneer. On the auction block will be a 1994 Ford Mustang convertible, a gift from the Ford Motor Co., a piece of fine jewelry donated by Harry Winston Jewelers, and a travel package that includes hotel accommodations at the Hotel Arts Barcelona in Barcelona, Spain, provided by the Ritz Carlton.

American Heart Association

When you have a baby it should be a wonderfully close time for you and your family. That's why the Miracle of Life Maternity Center at St. Mary Hospital has you at the center of its visiting policy.

WHY A LOT OF BABIES SEEM LIKE DISTANT RELATIVES

Instead of asking you to conform to limited visiting times or placing barriers between family members, at St. Mary you decide who can visit and when.

All private rooms

We believe you know best when you want visitors and when you need time alone with your baby. That's why all the maternity rooms at St. Mary are private. So a family member can even stay overnight if that's what you want.

Real family care

Your baby can stay in your room even when family members are visiting. We accept your definition of family. Grandparents, Children, Aunts and uncles,

Your best friend. If you call them family, so do we. It's that simple.

Our physicians even examine babies at your bedside so you and your family can watch and ask questions. So if you want real family-centered care, call St. Mary Hospital.

VICTORIA DIAZ

New Livonia romance novelist strikes it big

It seems to me there's an unusually high number of literary talents throughout Michigan. "Maybe it's something in the water?"

Just when I'm feeling really pleased with myself, and thinking I have a fix on every one of the writers in this area, a new author - or two, or three, or half-a-dozen - pops up, and there goes all my self-satisfied smugness.

Meet Marian DeLabbio Jastrzembki, a.k.a. Marian Edwards.

Her first romance novel, "A Year and a Day," comes out this spring from Zebra.

The 40-ish Livonia writer has not studied writing in any formal way and has never been published before. But even as she worked on the love-and-adventure story, the former airline stewardess felt it definitely "had something."

A lot of writers feel that way, of course, but in this case, a number of other people agreed, including several contest judges and an acquiring editor at Zebra. "A Year and a Day" reached the final rounds of the 1992 Romance Writers of America Golden Heart Competition. Editor Ann LaFarge, on reading the manuscript, urged Jastrzembki to give Zebra a chance to buy the book when she was ready to sell.

When that time came, LaFarge bought "A Year and a Day" exactly as submitted, with no request to alter even a single word in the hefty, 400-page manuscript. And Jastrzembki avoided the agonizing marketing difficulties usually experienced by first-time writers.

That may have been because she isn't a first-time novelist. Though "A Year and a Day" will be her first published novel, Jastrzembki already had penned one book and almost all of a second by the time she got down to writing the historical romance set in 12th-century Scotland.

By writing the first novels, she taught herself a great deal about "the mechanics of writing," she says. And, through her unsuccessful attempts at trying to sell the first, she learned something about the highly competitive writing market and her own talents.

"I think when you're a new writer, you don't really realize what the market is like," she says. "I'd read some contemporary Harlequin romances and decided I was going to write one. It looked so easy. But then, when I started working on it, I found out how difficult it was. And 450 pages later, I realized I wasn't a contemporary (Harlequin) writer."

Jastrzembki, who writes from an at-home, computer-equipped office, remembers sending that manuscript out to Harlequin and various other romance publishers and subsequently receiving what she calls "wonderful rejections."

"I was really fortunate," she says. "I encountered people who would tell me, 'It's not right for our line. But I do think you have talent and I wish you would pursue this. Please send us anything else.'"

The trouble was, though she was working on a second novel (a western), she didn't have anything else completed. And then, in its quirky little way, fate intervened.

One of her four sons underwent major surgery and by the time he had recovered, her interest in the western novel had quietly slipped away.

In its place was "A Year and a Day," which seemed to have almost fully formed itself while Jastrzembki's conscious thoughts were focused on the crisis at hand.

She sat down, she remembers, and simply started "pounding out" a story about medieval Scottish clans and a politically arranged union between a man and a woman who find themselves in the middle of murderous clan rivalries.

"I think the idea had been rattling around in my head for a long, long time," she says. "Years ago, when I was researching for another book, I happened to come across, just in a footnote, a (medieval) Scottish law that said a Scotsman could marry and, just one day after his first wedding anniversary, could divorce his wife for any reason. That fascinated me and I really think that's where I first got the idea for the book."

"By the time I started writing it, although I don't work from outlines, I had in my head key scenes at the beginning, plus the middle, and the end."

"As to researching the book, almost all historical and geographical research was conducted among the shelves at the main Detroit Public Library and Livonia libraries and through area

Livonia artists turn focus on their work

BY JANICE TIGAR-KRAMER
SPECIAL WRITER

Visitors to the Livonia Artists Club Spring Show will see watercolor demonstrations and a range of fine art representing the work of nearly every club member.

The show runs 1-5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, April 9-10, in the atrium of the Livonia Civic Center Library, on Five Mile, just east of Farmington Road. Admission to the show is free.

The spring show and sale is the club's biggest yearly event and one that usually draws plenty of browsers.

Visitors will see about 150 paintings, priced from around $40 to $600. A selection of unframed art starts at $5 to $10.

"The show is a way for the community to see what we're doing and a way for us to interest new members. Our work gets better every year and I think people enjoy seeing it," said club publicist Terri Willard, a Livonia watercolor artist.

Club president Jack Hemphill of Livonia likes the atrium location because it's a bright, beautiful background for fine art and a busy spot on weekends.

"I think the show will get some extra attention from people just visiting the library. It's a good show with some fine artists. We're happy to have browsers," said Hemphill, a retired commercial painter, who does realistic oil painting.

The juried show includes the works of about 30 artists, who work in watercolor, acrylic, oil, pastel, pen and ink and mixed media.

Audrey DiMarco, a West Bloomfield artist, will award cash prizes for first, second and third place, and a ribbon for honorable mention. Showgoers will vote for the People's Choice award.

Livonia watercolorists Al Weber and Eileen Bibby will demonstrate their painting styles during show hours and be on hand for questions.

"Demonstrating is fun because it's not something people generally get to see. Kids especially love to watch. The crowd of children around me at one show was so large, I could hardly paint," said Bibby, whose watercolor, "Snow Storm," won first place at this month's Milford Fine Art Show.

The retired industrial designer took up oil and acrylic painting in 1984 and started working in watercolor a few years later. Her monoprints and watercolors, done in an interpretative style, sell for $100 to $500.

"My work's taking a nice direction that excites me. I start with an idea and, somewhere along the line, the paint tells me what do. 'Snow Storm' started out as a snow scene and turned into a storm scene," Bibby said.

Weber, a retired Ford Motor Co. clay modeler, will show transparent watercolors priced from $75 to $600. His representational work ranges from flowers and landscapes to vintage cars.

Weber had a one-man show in 1991 at the Scarab Club, Detroit, and he shows with the Dearborn Arts & Crafts Club.

"The Livonia club is small, but we always put on a good show. We've got some strong artists who are dedicated to their work," he said.

Livonia Artists Club meets at 7:30 p.m. the third Monday of every month in Room C at the Livonia Civic Center Library, September through May. Annual dues is $15. Membership information, open to artists of all abilities, will be available at the show.

Eskimo Art gallery plans final show, sale

STAFF WRITER

For more than 40 years, Eskimo Art Inc. has bridged miles and centuries.

The non-profit corporation, with its gallery in Ann Arbor, presents art work by the Inuit people of the Canadian Arctic. The Inuits have been making art since about 600 B.C. Today, the works are a popular contemporary art form. The Inuits have developed a major source of income through the marketing of their art.

Since Eskimo Art Inc. was founded in 1953, $1 million has been raised for the Inuit people. This month, the gallery will have a final show and sale of its entire inventory of carvings, prints and other Inuit materials. The gallery and retail sales will be terminated and the permanent collection will be donated to a museum for public display and research.

"This is doing something so that people can help themselves and simultaneously broaden the understanding of the American art market for a remarkable kind of art," Philip Power said of the corporation's original purpose.

Power, chairman of the Suburban Communications Corp., which owns the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, his father, Eugene Power, and James Houston founded Eskimo Art Inc.

The gallery is in a beautiful setting at Domino's Farms in Ann Arbor. Deer, raccoon and other wildlife sometimes appear on the gently sloping grounds outside the building.

Inside the gallery is another form of nature. Animal, human and spiritual figures in lithographs, carvings and other art forms are keys to a special culture.

every one," said Irma Thompson, sales manager.

Viewing the work brings a remote place and time right at hand, with touches of mystery, whimsy, drama and history. The Inuit population of about 25,000 is distributed across northern Canada. Each of the 30 art-producing communities has its favorite subjects and distinctive style.

"Inuit" has replaced "eskimo" as the preferred term. "Inuit" means "the people" in Inuktitut.

ART ON DISPLAY

Visual Arts Association of Livonia will host a spring art exhibit May 1-27 in the Livonia City Hall lobby, Farmington Road and Five Mile. A public artists' reception will be held 2-4 p.m. Sunday, May 1.

Exhibit co-sponsors are the Livonia Cultural League, city of Livonia and Livonia Arts Commission.

GLASS ART

Royal Oak artist Marsha Filipiak will display her stained glass in contemporary and art deco style April 4-29 in the Livonia Civic Center Library second-floor showcases.

She got hooked on stained glass in 1979 when she and her husband moved to an old house and she noticed several areas where stained glass would look good. A class in stained glass followed.

"I enjoyed working with glass and continued doing so as a hobby," she said. "I had friends interested in purchasing stained glass from me so I started doing a few home shows and found it to be successful. So in 1984, I started my own business (Marsha's Stained Glass)."

carvings are in soapstone or serpentine. Many of the carvings have a marblelike appearance, in black, white and such soft colors as green and aqua. Stone has replaced ivory as the most popular material in contemporary Inuit art.

Stonecut works are prints made from etchings in stone. About 50 prints are made from a stone, which is then destroyed.

The artists travel great distances to quarry quality stone. Most of the sculpture is made with hand tools (more artists use small power tools too). Saws, axes, adzes, hammers, chisels rough out a carving's shape, then files, rasps, steel wool and sandpaper do fine work and finishing. Pen knives or nails make detailed incising.

Pieces in the gallery have their own personalities. A goose has a gentle expression. A seal reclines on its side with its head raised, reminding the viewer of a person lounging with his or her head propped on an elbow. An owl is shown not in its usual sedate pose, but with its wings majestically spread. One bear is a rollicking dancer, another is a proud hunter. Eagles, falcons, rabbits, muskox and fish are here too.

The spirit world is represented in masks, and in pieces that are groups of heads or faces.

Examples of the detail of the work may be seen in the claws and teeth of animal subjects, or in the edging on a figure's coat and the expression on his or her face. The wings of a bird taper to translucent tips that cradle the light. A lithograph called "Raven Takes the Catch" features an intricate, feathery design in the bird's body and subtle shading in the boots of the fisherman.

The idea for the organization came when Houston returned from Baffin Island, where he was posted with the Canadian Air Force.

"It was a kind of folk art, no doubt about it," said Houston, who now lives in Connecticut. "A wonderful kind of folk art, made in hard materials — stone, ivory, whalebone."

Houston showed samples of the art to the Powers. The idea was born to form the corporation to bring the art to the American market, stabilizing the economic life of the Inuits and helping with the public's appreciation of the art.

"We decided that Eskimo Art has fulfilled its original purpose," Power said.

The final show and sale will take place April 9-29 at 44 Frank Lloyd Wright Drive in Ann Arbor. Hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday and by appointment. The gallery will be open 1-5 p.m. Saturday, April 9. Call (313) 665-9663 for information.

Gallery service volunteers are needed to greet and assist visitors in the Detroit Institute of Arts museum galleries.

ADVERTISEMENT BY REAL ESTATE INSTITUTE FOR HOMEOWNERS

Real Estate Commissions Are Coming Down

It's happening in Manhattan, New York; Beverly Hills, California and in many other parts of the nation, as well as in countries such as England, Japan, Australia and France. Homeowners are selling their homes without locking themselves into paying 6% commission.

Large numbers of Michigan homeowners, too, with homes valued from $75,000 to $2,000,000 are enjoying major savings by selling their homes through HOMEMARK (formerly HMS). Homeowners are calling HOMEMARK, Michigan's largest Adjustable Rate Commission™ (ARC) REALTORS® where they can choose the amount of commission they want to pay for professional services.

Homeowners can choose HOMEMARK's $298 and 2% Commission Plan or HOMEMARK's $298 and 2% + 2% Commission Plan or HOMEMARK's 3% + 3% Commission Plan. With every HOMEMARK home selling Plan, homeowners are guaranteed BUILT-IN savings.

HOMEMARK is America's One and Only Adjustable Rate Commission™ (ARC) Real Estate Network. HOMEMARK has an experienced team of full-time brokers, agents and attorneys who often work 12 to 14 hours a day to provide Michigan homeowners with complete professional and technical services that on average result in savings of $6,900 for homeowners.

The HOMEMARK full-service system includes an extensive buyer network that finds well-qualified homebuyers. The HOMEMARK staff sets all showing appointments and handles all offers and negotiations with the buyers. The HOMEMARK financial and mortgage specialists pre-qualify the buyers. HOMEMARK brokers and agents prepare the Offer to Purchase, assist the buyer in securing a mortgage loan, check out the buyer's credit history, coordinate all paper work with the lender, search title and prepare the complete closing package for both buyer and seller. They also represent the sellers at the closing table.

HOMEMARK also provides complete advertising for its clients' homes. This is done on a consistent basis in both local and national marketplaces. For homes priced over $500,000 HOMEMARK includes ongoing international advertising through its network of international real estate brokers.

All these services are among the reasons why many HOMEMARK homes sell in less than 30 days. In 1991, a major Real Estate Board found that HOMEMARK (formerly HMS) homes sold 50% faster than homes listed with other companies.

Michigan is turning to HOMEMARK because home buyers, who want more value for their money, often seek out and settle for nothing less than homes listed with HOMEMARK. Many doctors, attorneys, CPA's, nurses, professors, presidents, young executives, TV and radio personalities, firemen, policemen, first time buyers, senior citizens, engineers and others rely on HOMEMARK to sell and close their homes.

This explains why homeowners are attracted to HOMEMARK's centrally located offices from as far away as Traverse City. "To save $5,000 to $20,000 in commissions, it's more than worth the drive to HOMEMARK", said Dan Newman who listed his beautiful home with HOMEMARK, sold it in less than 30 days and saved $12,000 in real estate commissions.

No wonder HOMEMARK is making history as the Corporation that is converting America to the Adjustable Rate Commission™ System. With the cost of everything else going up, the cost of selling and buying homes is going down, thanks to HOMEMARK.

HOMEMARK's national office is located at 26222 Telegraph Road, Suite 300 in Southfield. It is open 7-days-a-week. Their number is (810) 383-7170.

Museum conference scheduled

The Metropolitan Detroit Museum Education Roundtable presents a one day conference 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, April 9 at the Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village, 20900 Oakwood Drive, Dearborn.

"The Museum as an Educational Resource for the Community" is being hosted by the Detroit-area nonprofit organization founded in 1992.

Its participating members represent 17 area museums, institutions and community groups including: Detroit Institute of Arts, Cranbrook Institute of Science, Troy Museum and Historic Village, Kelsey Museum/University of Michigan, Michigan State University Museum, Pewabic Pottery, Detroit Historical Museum, Detroit Science Center, Children's Museum & African Heritage Cultural Center/Detroit Public Schools, Your Heritage House, Graystone International Jazz Museum, Kalamazoo Public Museum, Aisha Shule/W.E.B. DuBois Prep School, Sault Ste. Marie Foundation for Culture and History, Flint's A.P. Sloan Museum, and Henry Ford Museum and Greenfield Village.

The conference is open to interested museum professionals, teachers, community groups, families and students. "We're a new chapter in town. We hope to keep in touch with other museums to promote educational programming," said Sarah Towne Hufford of the DIA's department of education.

Keynote speakers are John H. Falk and Lynn D. Dierking, president and associate director of Science Learning Inc./Museum Experience Associates, Annapolis, Md. Internationally known for research and writings on family learning, they will discuss "Ways That Learning Takes Place in Museums."

The afternoon session features national authority and activist for African-American history and cultural heritage, Rowena Stewart, executive director of the Motown Historical Museum. Stewart will share her vision in "A Museum Collaborative: A Must for the 21st Century."

Concluding the conference will be a panel discussion, "Identifying Common Denominators Among Cultures," moderated by museum consultant Marvin Chatman.

Museums have long been repositories of artistic, historic and scientific artifacts and experiences.

As society has become more diverse and complex, the role of the museum as a cultural bridge has expanded. In such a society, museums become a nucleus playing a vital role. Its function through many offerings is twofold: to celebrate the rich cultural differences existing in society and to show people of all cultures their oneness.

The program will address ways the museum can become a unifying resource in its community.

Pre-registration is required. Cost is $15 for non-members, $12, members, $10, students. To register, call Sarah Hufford at the DIA (313) 833-9758 or Leslie Williams, Children's Museum/Detroit Public Schools at (313) 494-1218.

Come on in: Gary R. Leigh, developer of Walnut Brook Estates, said he spent more than $1 million on landscaping improvements before building the first house in the subdivision.

Walnut Brook condos: unique but in harmony

Most new residential subdivisions stand out for one reason or another. Once in a great while, however, several factors blend together to make a sizzling impression. Then a project really stands out from the crowd.

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Walnut Brook Estates, a detached condominium complex in Rochester Hills, is different in several respects.

First off, the developer, Gary R. Leigh, spent upwards of $1.3 million landscaping the 45¹/₂-acre site before allowing construction to begin on the first unit.

Then, Leigh established a 30-point quality assurance program that addresses everything from architectural design to daily cleanup at the site.

Mexico taking part in suburban expo

STAFF WRITER

The largest group of Mexican subcontractors ever to attend an exposition in the Detroit area to showcase what kind of work they can do will be here April 19-21, organizers and promoters of an event in Novi said.

"I have 15 Mexican companies coming," said Katie Noonan, director of international trade and development for the Contract Manufacturers Association headquartered in Troy. "They're coming to personally meet Detroit players."

The North American Free Trade Agreement and an improved local economy have sparked interest from south of the border, Noonan said.

"Mexican companies find their markets along the Mexico-U.S. border absolutely flooded," she said. "Now they're looking to expand their area of exposure. It makes sense now that the automotive capital is back on its feet. This is a most viable area to come to."

The 10th annual Contract Manufacturers Expo will feature upwards of 200 exhibitors, Noonan said.

"Essentially, we're talking job shops here—tool and die, stampings, precision moldings, electronics," she said.

"Attendees at the show are buyers. Those are original equipment manufacturers, first-tier buyers and maybe second-tier suppliers. There's a veritable outsource placement going on in Detroit now. No one is doing their own jobs now," Noonan said.

"Local manufacturers are scrambling for sources. It's unbelievable how much work is available now. People with exhibits are people with capabilities to pick up contracts."

"The expo is essentially a three-day sales call," she said. "You get everybody under one roof and duke it out."

"The dollar value of business generated is impossible to forecast because every company is different," Noonan said. "For exhibitors, their yardstick would be how many sales reps would it take to generate calls they get at the expo."

Several thousand buyers have attended previous shows, Noonan said.

Mexican exhibitors could conceivably win out over local exhibitors, she said.

"This is competition at its greatest," Noonan said. "It's incentive. This is capitalism. This is free enterprise. I haven't heard anything except enthusiasm and excitement about the show."

Several companies with area connections have high hopes going into the expo.

"We figure it will net us probably 20 new accounts and 10 major sales. We're looking at doing $100,000 in business from leads from this show," said Paul Silver, sales manager for RMS Inc. of Troy, which markets and installs technical equipment for designers and engineers.

"This is also an image building and marketing awareness opportunity," Silver added. "There's an untold amount of PR and advertising benefits you get just from being seen at this show."

The two, nominated from 19 statewide chapters, were recognized for contributions to MSPE and to the public.

Leigh sells lots only to buyers not builders to better maintain quality control. Buyers pay $110,000 to $165,000 for a lot. Bove Construction of Bloomfield Hills does the building.

Buyers can select from hundreds of designs provided by Leigh or bring in their own plans as long as they meet quality standards.

And if that weren't enough, buyers at Walnut Brook will know that their little corner of the world probably will remain in a fairly natural state since it's bounded by a golf course, park and nature preserve.

"The number-one thing we hear (from visitors) is that it will be private forever," Leigh said. "Number two is the quality approach we take. People like that. Third is the beauty of the place."

You can start with the landscaping.

Leigh said he planted 600 trees including white spruce and red pine, 21 rock outcroppings, thousands of perennials, 1,000 flats of annuals and 110 low voltage lights.

Electrical and cable utility lines are underground.

Then there's the quality assurance and architectural control measures.

For instance, ranches must be at least 2,400 square feet, two stories, 3,200 square feet. All garages must be side entry. Each homesite must install and maintain an outdoor lamp.

Driveways shall be constructed of asphalt, brick pavers or aggregate, not concrete. Only in-ground pools are allowed. Fences marking boundaries aren't permitted.

The majority of exterior walls must be brick or stone. High-quality shingles are required, as are non-obtrusive ridge-type roof vents wherever possible.

Also, builders and landscapers ance and architectural control measures.

Also, builders and landscapers must clean up their job sites every day.

The subdivision, north of South Boulevard between Crooks and Coolidge, is just a couple miles from two freeways. Yet right next door deer, fox and heron play in a wildlife sanctuary.

Leigh figures that houses in Walnut Brook will start at $350,000 to $400,000 and top out at about $800,000, including lot.

"Most of the people in here are professionals — doctors, lawyers, CPAs, engineers or business owners or people who have real responsible positions in a company," Leigh said.

About 23 of the 74 lots have sold.

The subdivision is serviced by city water and sewers. Annual maintenance fee is projected at $700 to $800.

Leigh said he could make more money by selling lots directly to builders to sell to buyers, but he believes that selling to buyers and then limiting builders makes for better quality and control.

"The word in development is get in and get out," he said. "What happens sometimes when a builder owns the land is they do what they've got to do."

"I would be better off financially selling to builders, but personally I'm not happy with that," Leigh said. "I would make more money, but I'm making enough money — good money."

"I really want to be proud of the work I do. The real key is you can't make it just words. It's got to be a commitment in time and money," Leigh said.

Several people with houses under construction in the subdivision are looking forward to moving in.

"I just liked the location and how it gave an up north feeling," said Barbara Mabilia, an associate real estate broker who is buying with husband, Joseph, a doctor.

"We enjoy the fact we're buffered by a golf course on one side, a nature preserve on the other and wetlands behind," she added.

Mel Golusin, a business owner, said he came upon the development while playing golf at Pine Trace.

"What attracted me was the way Gary Leigh was developing the fantastic landscaping and entrance," Golusin said. "It's in a very good location. You're right off I-75 and Adams, right off M-59 and Crooks, only two or three miles from the Somerset Mall area."

"Gary is pressing the integrity of building going on," Golusin continued. "Nobody is going to put in a schlock house. He's preserving everyone's interest. I like that."

"I thought they did a great job making it attractive," said William A. Beluzo, a lawyer, who is buying with his wife, Evelyn.

Walnut Brook is in the Avondale School District. The tax rate for city, county and school services in the wake of the March 15 statewide election is $36.33 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value.

That means the owner of a $400,000 house in the subdivision would pay about $7,250 annually in property taxes.

Silver said he isn't worried that Mexican exhibitors, which he suspects are involved mainly with tooling and parts, will compete for business with him.

"Usually there is business we get as a result of attending, otherwise we wouldn't go," said Sheryl Harmon, vice president of NC Servo Technology and Master Tek in Westland.

Her companies are involved in hydraulic, electronic and instrumentation repairs.

"It can be very lucrative meeting with potential customers," Harmon said. "You're there, your reps are there, you have your booth. You can show them a lot more. Sometimes, you can make very good connections."

Midwest Business Systems in Southfield, an information technology company, participates in trade shows to cultivate relationships, not necessarily sales, said Brian Cartwright, marketing director.

"We're hoping to make contact with companies serious about being in compliance with Ford and Chrysler specifications," he said. "We're looking for a long-term relationship. Sales relationships are secondary."

Sales generally follow from good relationships, Cartwright conceded.

Alan R. Peterson, sales manager for 3-Dimensional Services in Rochester Hills, a provider of design, engineering and graphic prototype services, looks upon expos as a necessary evil.

"All our competition is there so we have to be there," he said. "It's just one of those things you have to do. If you get one good person (sale) out of every three or four shows, that's what you need."

Automotive Appliance Co. of Livonia, a parts stamping operation, will participate in its first expo, said Larry Cripps, vice president and general manager.

"We're hoping to pick up some sales leads," he said. "Having never done one before, we don't know what audience will be there. It's a new experience. We'll give it a try to see how it works out."

"Our biggest customer now is Ford and it's short-term," Cripps added.

■ BUYS MAJORITY INTEREST

Matthew Virzi, president and CEO of Connoisseur Galleries, Troy, has acquired a majority interest in Troy-based G&D Communications, a full-service marketing and advertising firm. The Troy resident will become company president.

Virzi

Virzi, who has 14 years of marketing/advertising experience, said the businesses will operate separately, except at top management.

■ RECRUITING AGENTS

Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance said two agencies in metro Detroit will recruit 35 new agents this year.

The Baker Financial Group, based in Southfield, will hire 20 agents. Baker has district offices in Birmingham, Clarkston, Ann Arbor and Grosse Pointe. The Larry L. Herb Agency, based in Farmington Hills, will recruit 15 agents. It has district offices in Rochester, Dearborn and Linden.

MassMutual said it is among the 100 largest businesses in the U.S. and has more than $53 billion in assets under management.

■ JOB OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Management Recruiters, Birmingham Farms, said job prospects for the first half of 1994 have "brightened considerably" for middle managers and professionals in the north central region (Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio). Projections were gleaned from a nationwide survey of more than 3,000 executives in charge of hiring.

Thirty-five percent of those polled in the north central region said they will increase middle management and professional staffs in the next six months. Another 52.3 percent said they will maintain current staffs and 12.8 percent expect staff reductions.

By comparison, 34 percent of those polled nationally said they plan to increase staff size, 50 percent will maintain current staff size and 15.9 percent expect reductions.

A summary of the survey is available at no charge from Management Recruiters International, 1127 Euclid Ave., Suite 1400, Cleveland, OH 44115, Attn: Karen Bloomfield. The phone number is (800) 875-4000.

■ NAME CHANGE

Lynn St. Pierre Graphic Design, Trenton, has changed its name to El Design. Lynn St. Pierre still heads the visual communications firm, which has clients throughout southeast Michigan, including Southfield and Farmington.

The firm uses computer-based design and production to create logos, brochures, advertising, posters, newsletters and annual reports.

St. Pierre opened the firm in 1990, after 14 years of graphic design experience. She was a partner and art director for Phoenix Communications, Ypsilanti, and art director for Sandy Corp., Troy.

■ HOTEL AWARDED

The Residence Inn by Marriott, Southfield, picked up a Silver Award, based on guest satisfaction ratings and high quality assurance marks from Marriott. It was one of 48 Residence Inns nationwide to receive the extended stay hotel chain's quality award.

Julie Jacoboni, Marriott's Southfield general manager, received the award at the annual general manager/franchisee conference in New Orleans.

■ AGENCY JOINS GROUP

Dreifus Insurance Agency, Farmington Hills, has joined the Michigan Association of Insurance Agents, a statewide trade association that represents 10,000 independent agents and industry employees.

■ NEW ACCOUNTS

Detroit Medical Center (DMC) has awarded its advertising account to W.B. Doner, Southfield.

DMC includes Children's Hospital of Michigan, Detroit Receiving Hospital and University Health Center, Grace Hospital, Harper Hospital, Huron Valley Hospital, Hutzel Hospital and the Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan.

The system has 2,800 affiliated physicians and serves as the teaching and clinical research site for Wayne State University.

Benefits Plus, a firm specializing in 401(k) plans and cafeteria programs, has awarded its public relations account to Eisbrenner Public Relations, Troy.

■ CABLE JOINT VENTURE

Video Suite Midwest Studio, an Oak Park production company, said it has negotiated for air time on UHF Channel 44 in exchange for TV programming. Programs will be produced and distributed through Video Suite Midwest's television distribution subsidiary, the Community Positive Image Network (CPIN).

Video Suite Midwest and Channel 44 will develop and produce positive image, family-oriented programs for and about the Detroit area.

The new local programming will celebrate the diversity of metro Detroit, said Southfield's James Abston, Video Suite Midwest president.

Detroit City Council president Maryann Mahaffey aired her first weekly half-hour talk program March 30. Other programs include CPIN News Magazine, Life Talk with Lyn Lewis, Kids Travel Near and Far, and Lights, Kids & Music. Some programs also will air on selected cable outlets.

CPIN is looking for independent producers with programs or program ideas to consider airing on Channel 44.

■ TRADE-IN FOR CHARITY

Metro Detroiters can bring used chairs and sofas to any La-Z-Boy Showcase Shoppe in exchange for a tax deductible donation to Purple Heart and a $60 to $310 discount on new La-Z-Boy furniture.

La-Z-Boy Trade-In Sale runs through May 3 at La-Z-Boy stores in Novi, Warren, Taylor and Sterling Heights.

The retailer said furniture trade-ins will be donated to Purple Heart in the consumer's name. Sales people will be on-hand to help consumers unload trade-ins, provide a tax receipt and discuss discounts on new furniture. Pick-up of used furniture is available for a charge.

Besides offering customers a way to discard old furniture and save on new purchases, the promotion provides "a direct benefit to one of the best known charitable organizations in the area," said Bill Robinson, La-Z-Boy's Detroit general manager.

Purple Heart provides a range of services to combat wounded veterans through the sale of donated clothing and furniture. The agency said it employs more than 500 people in Michigan.

ACCI headquarters will move to 2900 W. Maple Road, Troy, and Parkhill will become president and CEO. The software firm will maintain a Houston office

Parkhill said ACCI will hire up to 10 employees in the next year and develop a worldwide dealer network.

■ HAPPY 75TH

Ohio-based Continental Secret Service Bureau, whose local office is at 2309 N. Woodward, Berkley, marks 75 years of service to business and industry in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana.

The company started servicing Detroit area clients in 1985. The firm has more than 200 clients in the three-state area.

■ QUALITY AWARD WINNERS

Hoechst Celanese, Auburn Hills, and NTH Consultants, Farmington Hills, received an environmental quality award from the Michigan Chamber of Commerce.

Hoechst Celanese, an automotive development center, was honored for its energy-efficient and environmentally friendly recycling system. The firm was honored in the small company category.

NTH Consultants, an engineering and environmental services firm, was recognized for its remediation design solutions at Porterfield's Marina Village on the Detroit River. NTH was honored in the large company category.

■ DEVELOP ARTWORK SYSTEM

Southfield-based Goldfarb & Company, the national advertising agency for AT&T Consumer Products, said it has developed a high-definition artwork program that will allow AT&T retailers to create print ads and flyers featuring specific AT&T products. AT&T has more than 200 retailers nationwide.

Goldfarb vice president and production manager Douglas Mooradian, who developed the program, said with the new software, even the non-sophisticated user can create custom artwork for a variety of uses. The agency said it will make similar programs available to other clients.

Yo Gurt!: Che Chang Yuan (left) and San C. Yuan met superhero hero Gurt Gunther on the marketing midway at TCBY's franchise forum.

TCBY introducing cartoon super hero

San C. Yuan and Che Chang Yuan, who run TCBY shops in Livonia and Farmington Hills, are introducing a new cartoon super hero for youthful frozen yogurt lovers.

They just returned from TCBY's international franchise convention in Nashville, where 700 delegates met Gurt Gunther, the super hero exclusively championing TCBY.

The colorful cartoon character, his sidekick Sprinkles and the lovable Yogurt Ogre are set to arrive here May 1, just in time to help introduce TCBY's new kids menu.

"The lower price menu features kids-size cups of frozen yogurt, Shiver Treats, shakes, sundaes and waffle cones," said Che Chang Yuan.

Meanwhile, the store has unveiled four new frozen yogurt flavors: key lime (90 percent fat free) and three non-fat varieties, lemon cheesecake, tropical citrus sorbet and coconut cream pie (no sugar added).

In addition to learning about the new products, scheduled to be introduced throughout the year, TCBY convention delegates were exposed to fresh marketing strategies and advertising plan, new financing opportunities, workshops on customer service, business and profit management, and human resource management.

Learn why and how to prune

The importance of pruning—and what, when and where to prune, are explained in easy-to-follow, well-illustrated language in "Pruning Made Simple" a step-by-step visual gardening guide from NK Lawn & Garden Co.

The 80-page book takes the mystery out of pruning techniques and shows gardeners how to prune to encourage strong, vigorous plant growth.

The guide is one in a series of 15 NK books that feature step-by-step, full color photos and illustrations that enable busy green thumbs to quickly find the information they need.

PRESENTING HOME & GARDEN I

Like many of you, I've spent the winter planning the changes I'd like to add to my garden. Last year I had a lot of fun making plans and going wild to see what her tendencies are. This year I have a plan—and I've even begun starting some of my chosen plants from seed. Those of you who have never done this probably think of me as brave! But I know that many of you who have played with those tiny little seeds, are chuckling to yourselves right now! And you're right. I sometimes wonder myself if it is worth the effort!

While the lupine and shasta daisies are well on their way, I was a little overzealous in watering the cosmos! Apparently, too little water on the other needed elements, and your seeds won't germinate. Too much, and they'll grow too fast. I've since started all over again with my cosmos from seed!

I've learned that while nature likes to go it's own way, there's still a delicate balance that must be met. Likewise, we each have our sense of balance—in our lives, in our homes, and in our gardens.

Hopefully, this first issue of Home & Garden, which appears today, April 7, 1994 in all Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, provides you with some ideas and helpful hints for bringing some balance, color, and ornamentation into your spring!

Made in the Shade

There's more to shade gardening than just green

by Joan Boram
special writer

Shade gardeners of the world, unite! You have nothing to lose but your hostas! Not that there's anything wrong with hostas—especially since modern hybridizers have given us such a variety of greens, blue greens, and variegated hostas to choose from, as well as a selection of leaf shapes and plant sizes.

But in gardening, as in all things, people like choices. Well, even in shade gardening, there is more to choose from than hostas.

"Shade gardening is of particular delight to me," says Julie Lopez, who has offered seminars on shade gardening for garden clubs. "It provides an opportunity for creativity. Many people are intimidated by shade gardening—they've been indoctrinated into thinking that 'garden' means 'sun', and so they settle for impatiens and hostas."

But, Lopez says, shade offers the chance to mix textures, shapes of leaves, and plants, and combinations of green on green.

It's best to take the time to discover what kind of shade you're coping with. Unless you live in a forest, chances are you have more than one kind of shade.

A lightly shaded area will receive full shade only a couple of hours each day. Dappled sunlight, such as under a tree with lacy leaves, is considered light shade.

Medium shade receives about five hours of full shade on an average summer day.

Full shade occurs under a mature oak, evergreen, or other large-canopied tree.

Winding pathways combined with some added color from shrubs and planted annuals, such as the landscaping shown above, can turn a plain, dark area into a focal point of your yard.

Spring Clean Up

Glen Haege's Top 5 spring home improvement projects

by Glenn Haege
America's Master Handyman

Here in Detroit, we've had a rough, tough winter. That means that the number one item on this list is especially important this year. This is not something you can put off. It is important to complete it right now, before the spring rains come.

Here are some other tips as well, to bring you, and your home, into spring with ease.

#1 Manage by walking around outside

Walk around your home three times. The first time, step back from the house and check out the roof for shingles and eaves. Damaged shingles can cause water damage.

The second time around the house, look at the windows and walls.

The third time, look at the ground. The bitter freezes we had this year cause things to fall into the roadways, it probably did the same thing to the ground around your house. The driveway on many homes have heaved and will send rents of water washing to the street. Fill in and patch immediately and drive way on walk and to get to they will drive water toward the house.

If you discover other home problems, take action immediately.

#2 Wash Your Windows

The outside windows have a winter on grime on them. Make them sparkle doesn't have to be a hassle. For outside windows use this simple procedure: Mix 4 oz. ammonia and 1 teaspoon TSP (Trisodium Phosphate) to one gallon of water. Sponge on the water, then squeeze off. Wipe up water drops with a cotton towel.

The inside of your house has different dirt, so you need a different cleaning solution. Mix 4 oz. ammonia and 1 teaspoon TSP to one gallon of water. Lay a blue Turkish towel on the window sill before you clean. Sponge on the water, then squeeze off. You will now not only be able to see through them, your windows will sparkle like diamonds.

#3 Clean the Deck

Here's an easy way to deep clean the deck. Mix an ounce cleaner, like Simple Green or Clear Magic, 50:50 with water. Pour the solution into a garden pump type sprayer. Then deep clean your deck 5 to 10 square feet at a time.

The procedure is simple. Soak down an 8 to 10 square foot section with the solution. Sprinkle on a little water. Scrub with a stiff push broom until suds appear, then hose off. This often makes the deck look so good you may not have to re-stain or stain.

Ah Spring!

To stop problems before they start, walk around your house

by Glenn Haege
America's Master Handyman

How you begin your spring home maintenance project will make one of your best walks three times around the house.

A thorough early spring inspection is one of the most important things you can do for your house. It has been under tremendous strain, fighting the elements all winter. Water, ice, wind, freeze and thaw have all been tearing away at your roof, the paint or siding on your house, the putty on your windows, the deck, the electrical outlets.

Now that the snow has melted, grab a pencil and a piece of paper and tramp around the house three times. The first time look at the roof. The second time, look at the exterior of your home. The third time, look at the ground.

You don't have to climb on top of your roof to give it a good inspection. Go across the street and look at the roof. Are the shingles curling? Have a couple gotten loose or blown away? Are they old? Has the weight of the ice and snow loosened the gutters?

If you need a roof repair, now is the time to get it fixed, before spring rains create water damage. When you see loose shingles, or cracks in the gutters, it's always a good idea to go up into the attic and see if a roof leak has started, but is not yet visible on the ceiling or walls. You might be able to stop the leak before it causes major damage. If you need to re-shingle, start getting bids now. It's not yet visible on the ceiling or walls. You might be able to stop the leak before it causes major damage. If you need to re-shingle, start getting bids now. It's not yet visible on the ceiling or walls. You might be able to stop the leak before it causes major damage.

Next, check the home's looking in the walls and windows, look for mortar cracks and places where the work has pulled away. How is the paint holding out? Will you have to repaint soon?

Remember, if these aluminum gutters should be spray cleaned at least once every two years if you want to keep the paint looking great. If you have not cleaned your aluminum gutters, they are now pitted and will look like the problem. Your aluminum gutters are pitted with holes and will leak. Complete step by step instructions are in my book, "Take the Pain Out of Painting Exteriors."

If you need to repaint, and are using a contractor, start getting bids now. If you're going to do the painting yourself, do your measurement, then buy the right paint you'll need and be on the lookout for sales.

You want the best quality exterior paint you can afford. When dry quality exterior latex paint is almost twice as much as the other product, and you still look better than the other paint. A quality exterior paint can outlast a cheap paint by 300%. Paint is the best protection the wood on your house has. Make sure that protection is the best that money can buy.

If you start peeling out paint now, you'll be able to take your time, deciding what you want and will be able to tell when you're done. Be the way the Paint Quality Institute studies prove that a dollar for dollar, the longer the quality of premium exterior paint lasts, you'll save and make it better buy than low quality paint.

Check your thermal windows and sliding glass doors. Are they in good condition? What about caulking? If they have begun to cloud inside, the glass means the thermal seal is broken. The entire window does not have to be replaced, just the pane. If you have the problem, be aware and start budgeting for repair before next winter.

Finally, look down. What have the freeze thaw cycles of Michigan winters done to your landscaping? Is the ground eroding from around the foundation of your house? Do you see puddles forming? That scalded bird bathing? Do what you can to fill those holes. Before the spring rains. Improper drainage is the biggest single cause of leaking basements. A little preventative maintenance now, can save a lot of hard work later.

Make certain that the five French drains have not become plugged or man a drain in the winter. Plugged drains can cause big problems.

Now, look about the deck. Does it look good or all you see are nail pops, splinters or rot? Nail pops should be nailed back in immediately. Grading in an area that will probably freeze to be possible, so get it done in the winter.

After you've looked at your house and grounds, go inside and study your list. Spring is the best time to start the To Do list.

You'll learn hints to most of the jobs on your "To Do" list by joining the more than 170,000 Detroiters who listen to Glenn Haege's "Ask the Handyman Show" on WXYT - AM 1270 from 8 a.m. until 12 p.m. every Saturday and Sunday. Haege's show, which celebrates its eleventh anniversary April 23, is the longest running, long format "How To" show in the nation.

Coming Up Roses

Shrub roses need little upkeep, just as beautiful

by Joan Boram
special writer

Fossils found in Europe, Asia and North America indicate that roses existed approximately 30 million years ago. The earliest representations of roses have been found on jewelry and ornaments from Minoan civilization, which flourished on the island of Crete from about 2800 to 2100 B.C. Roses have figured prominently in literature and art ever since, the rose windows of the great cathedrals of Europe are the most famous examples.

Roses are one of the oldest cultivated ornamental plants in our gardens. A good reason for this is that members of the species rosa grow in almost every climate, from the equator to the Arctic Circle. Closer to home, there is scarcely a flower gardener who doesn't have a rose bush or two, and many gardeners have dozens of roses and very little else.

Hybrid teas have been a rose lovers' favorite ever since they were introduced in 1867, and their popularity is as strong as ever today. However, many gardeners are learning to appreciate the qualities of shrub roses.

While these hardy bushes will probably never overtake the teas, sales are increasing every year.

"They're low maintenance plants," says Loren Blum, who orders at least 300 varieties of roses for the English Gardens stores from his base in West Bloomfield. "They don't have to be pruned, except for a little shaping here and there. And you don't have to cover them in the winter, although it's wise to mulch them after the first hard frost."

Another quality grower appreciates, he says, is the striking mass of bloom. While some plants offer a lavish display of blooms all at one time, some flowers continue to bloom the rest of the season.

Rather than planting one bush here and one bush there, Blum says some people are planting them as flowering hedges. He also surmises that home owners are compensating for smaller gardening areas by cramming in more plants, and shrub roses are easily combined with other shrubs or flowering perennials. Floribundas are ideal roses to mix with other plants—the flowers grow in clusters and are born continuously and in profusion.

Delphiniums, hiatris, phlox, foxglove, coral bells, baby's breath, heather and lavender are all delicate flowers that complement roses. Old-fashioned flowers with mutated colors are not only ideal rose companions, but together they make up a cottage garden, which Blum says is making a comeback in many modern gardens.

However, he adds, make sure that these, or any plants, must be planted far enough apart so they do not block, crowd, or distract attention from the roses.

"Annuals such as bachelor's button, alyssum and annual chrysanthemums in pastel colors go well with roses," he says, "but avoid flashier annuals such as zinnias, which will overwhelm roses."

British hybridizer David Austin has developed a series of extremely popular modern "Old English" shrub type roses. Blum has doubled 1993 quantities of the fragrant plants.

"Fragrance is being bred back into roses," Blum says. "It's been missing for a long time. One rose in a catalog is described as 'smelling like cheap perfume.' I don't know if that's an asset or not."

Old garden roses, which have been in cultivation since before the development of the modern hybrid rose, are regaining some of the popularity they enjoyed in earlier times. In general, old roses are hearty and fragrant.

"The only problem with the antique roses is that people want to spray them," Blum says. "And they have a negative reaction to chemical sprays. Most old roses are naturally disease resistant, but people feel they have to spray them."

Shrub roses, such as these offered by Jackson and Perkins, are easy to care for, and just as pretty as tea roses. While some offer such a lavish display like this all at once, you can find bushes that will bloom all season.

Green Cleaning Tips

Nobody likes cleaning. And usually the products we use have that extra strength capability that help bust dirt away. But as it turns out, that extra strength may be extra deadly.

As we move to a more earth-conscious way of thinking, the way we clean our house comes under question. It is no longer safe to use the extra strength, extra toxic cleansers that ro down the drain through the pipes (leaking, who knows where) and out into treatment plants or oceans.

But there is a way around poisoning the water and still beating the grime.

In her book, Clean & Green (Caris Press), Anne Berthold Bond dishes out the dirt on cleaning ecologically. There are plenty of commercially made products available in most health food stores that are ecologically and environmentally safe. But if you want to go all natural, you'll be surprised what can be used.

Some of the safe cleaning products that can be found around your home include:

- Baking soda. For its ability to absorb and mild abrasives.
- Borax. Disinfects, deodorizes, inhibits mold growth.
- Cream of tartar. Clean porcelain drains and metal.

• Salt. An effective non-scratching abrasion cleaner with bacteria-inhibiting qualities.

• Showerheads. Replaceable substitutes for caustic products.

WINDOW CLEANER

• Mix 1/4 cup of 3-in-1 vegetable oil-based liquid soap, 3 drops vinegar and 1 cup of water. Put in a spray bottle, shake and spray.

• Mix 1/8 cup vinegar and 1/4 cup of water. Put in spray bottle and shake.

SCOURING POWDER

• Mix 1/4 cup of Borax with enough vegetable oil-based soap to make a paste. Rub surface with sponge and wipe clean.

DISINFECTANTS

• Mix some lavender oil in with Borax and clean as directed.

• Add a few drops of pine oil to the cleaning formula of your choice.

• Sprinkle baking soda on counter tops, in cupboards and behind covers in the kitchen.

• Mix equal parts of vinegar with water, spray on vegetable oil.

FURNITURE POLISH

Lawn & Garden Hoses

Learn what to look for ...before you buy

Although they're often standard in size, color, and color, garden hoses are as varied as the colors in a flower garden when it comes to strength, convenience, and durability.

If you are going to buy a garden hose soon, the experts at Apex Garden Products suggest you consider these factors before putting your money on the counter.

FREQUENCY OF USE

Generally, the more active you are in your yard and garden, the higher quality hose you will need. A weekend gardener spends time virtually every day on our door yard work, while a seasonal gardener handles lawn and garden tasks on Saturdays and Sundays. The seasonal gardener is the least active user who can likely do with the most basic garden hose.

But even if you aren't an avid gardener, remember there are many other activities and chores that require a garden hose, such as washing the car, spraying hard to reach exterior of the house, hose down the family dog or just letting the kids cool off under the sprinkler!

QUALITY OF MATERIAL

Today, even the casual user is willing to spend a few dollars more for a garden hose that lasts several years longer, does not kink and is more resistant to extreme heat or cold.

Most garden hoses are available in a choice of materials: vinyl, rubber and rubber vinyl — each with different advantages. In general, vinyl hoses are lighter than rubber, and more resilient and resistant to kinks that can halt the steady flow of water. Rubber is considered stronger and less susceptible to cuts and abrasions.

With today's emphasis on improved quality, the composite rubber vinyl material has replaced vinyl as the most common material. That's because a rubber vinyl hose often combines the best features of vinyl and rubber, and can offer greater flexibility and durability.

SIZE AND DESIGN

Garden hoses are subjected to high

Once you've put all this thought into buying your new garden hose, don't forget to care for it properly using a portable hose reel, like the one above, or other storage unit.

water pressure, as well as extreme heat and cold when left outdoors, so it is best to have some kind of reinforcement if you expect your hose to last.

Take a tires, most hoses are constructed with a reinforcing "ply" layer sandwiched between the inner and outer sections. Some hoses also feature radial-keloid construction for added strength.

Again, the strength you need will depend in part on your anticipated use.

Hoses with a single layer of reinforcement with the same quality material are more likely to burst and rupture than hoses with two or more layers.

The interior design and diameter are an important in delivering a steady and sufficient flow of water.

The vast majority of garden hoses sold today have a 5/8" inside diameter, which is particularly suitable for yards of one third to one half acre in size, when reaching distances of up to 150 feet.

A 50 foot length of 5/8" hose will deliver about 959 gallons of water per hour, compared to 523 gallons per hour for 1/2" hose. A 3/4" diameter hose, which will deliver 1,570 gallons per hour, can finish many watering chores in one third of the time.

It's also recommended if you need to reach more than 150 feet, or require lot of water.

EASY-TO-USE

In general, every gardener wants a hose that rolls easily and naturally, but is strong enough to resist kinking. Most vinyl hoses are stiffer than rubber, but the combination of both is good in colder weather.

But the soft spots of tires and door springs are a good example in the United States, where the weather can last the longest.

COST AND DURABILITY

It's easy to get a quality hose for a low price, but you should expect to pay a little more for a hose that is made of a higher quality material.

A 50 foot length of hose can cost from $10 to $15 or more, depending on the type and brand you buy.

Some hoses are made with warranty ranging from two years to a lifetime guarantee.

SPECIALTY HOSES

There are certain types of hoses you can use for specific types of watering. For instance, soaker hoses feature a drip pump system, which allows for a slow and steady distribution of water.

The soaker hose also helps ensure that water is distributed evenly throughout the area being watered.

Another specialty hose is the soaker hose, which is designed to be used in a similar manner to the soaker hose, but with a different type of pump system.

Deep shade is found under dense evergreens or in areas covered by decking. Moss and ferns are probably the only plants that will survive there.

If you're not sure what kind of shade you have, why not pick a cloudless summer's day, keep track of the amount of sunlight your "shady" spot receives? You might be surprised — maybe it's not as dense as you think. The brighter the area, the wider the palette of plants you have to choose from.

"The simplest way to approach shade gardening is to imitate the pattern in which nature layers plants in the woods," says Fred Steinkopf, manager of Steinkopf's Nursery and Garden Center in Farmington Hills.

"In a hardwood forest, there's an understory of smaller trees, like dogwood, redbud, or serviceberry. These trees flower in the spring, before the hardwoods leaf out.

"Below them are plants like ferns or hostas that thrive in the shade.

Hydrangeas are showy summer and autumn flowering shrubs that are highly tolerant of shade. For the lowest layer of growth, Steinkopf recommends ground covers such as pachysandra, yucca, dwarf hemlock, or ivy since grass doesn't do well in a heavily shaded area.

Some varieties of holly will thrive in the shade. Holly is an evergreen which,

Day lilies, like these below, are just one type of flower that can bring color to your shade garden.

For areas with good light, but no direct sun, two old favorite perennials, columbine and bleeding heart, are ideal. And don't forget that before the trees leaf out, some sun will reach the yard.

A glorious effect can be achieved by planting a large number of small early-flowering bulbs, such as crocus, miniature narcissus, grape hyacinth and scilla. Many of these bulbs will multiply, so your initial investment will gather interest.

The plants that thrive at the edge of a woodland receive more light than those in the shadier area, and a variety of blooming plants will thrive in the dappled shade.

"Both azaleas and rhododendrons will do well here," Lopez says, "although these broadleaf evergreens require an acid soil."

Lopez recommends using a test kit to determine your soil's Ph in the area where you want to grow holly, azaleas or rhododendrons. If a test finds your soil lacking, she says, you can increase acidity by digging in a handful of soil sulfur each spring, and using an acid fertilizer, such as Miracid®, available at most plant centers.

Lopez also stresses the importance of conditioning the soil in a shady area using compost materials, because the plants aren't getting much sun. And it's equally important to remember that mature trees act as umbrellas, shielding understory growth from moisture. So even in rainy weather, supplementary water may be necessary.

Other flowering perennials that do well in dappled shade are day lilies, astilbe, coral bells, bellflower and baby's breath. Astilbe will thrive either in full or partial shade.

"There are mixes of wildflower seeds suitable for shady areas," Steinkopf adds.

"You just shake the seeds over the area to be planted, cover them with a thin layer of soil, and water lightly."

These mixes do not tend to be very expensive, so even if they don't all germinate, he says, you've gotten your money's worth.

For those of you who want to plant annuals in a shady area, there's old reliable — impatiens, which comes in a greater variety of colors every spring.

ROSES, from p. 6

Despite their venerable association with mankind, there are still many people who are afraid of roses. But Glen Haag, author of Green House, says that most of the people who claim to be afraid of roses and rose bushes are afraid it would be too many.

"It makes my day when people tell me about any problems they may be having, because then I can help them," he says.

"If people have a problem growing roses, it's generally because they've made one or two basic mistakes."

The first, he says, is placement of the rose bush. Roses need at least six hours of sunlight a day. If you have the choice of morning or afternoon sunlight, morning is better. This will dry the morning dew, which can cause black spot if moisture remains too long. The afternoon shade will protect the bush from summer heat, and retard drying soil.

The second common mistake, he says, is how the plant is watered.

"People just can't help watering a rose bush's leaves. They seem to enjoy doing it, and it promotes black spot."

Roses should be watered at the base. If you see a leaf with black spot, take it off right away so the fungus can't spread to the rest of the plant. Pick up and discard any leaves that fall to the ground. Do not put them on the compost pile.

Often, gardeners are impatient when their roses don't leaf out in the early spring. Blum adds, "They think their plants have died and they pull them out. I tell people not to mess with their roses until the fourth of July, then they might be cold."

#4 Prepare for "mowin' & growin'"

Check all electrical cords for cracks, frays or brittleness. Replace all suspect wire. Replace the spark plugs on small engines, check the muffler.

If it is badly corroded, replace it. Make certain that all safety equipment is in good shape. If you didn't do it last fall, the lawn mower needs to have the gas drained, oil changed and blade sharpened.

#5 Put your furnace on vacation

It had a heck of a workout this year. The filter has to be cleaned or changed. Turn off the water supply to the humidifier and empty the water from the unit. Remove all sediment and make everything squeaky clean. Replace pads if necessary. Now that all the most important work is done, go outside and enjoy the weather.
